ARREST LYNDON MAN FOR MAKING BOOZE

Ed. Joslyn and Two Jackson Men Were Making "White Mule."

Sheriff Pack accompanied by one of his deputies from Ann Arbor and Deputy Sheriff Grant Kimel of Lyndon, made a raid at the home of Ed. Joslyn in Lyndon township Wednesday, where they captured a booze making outfit, a bottle of "white mule," molasses and other ingredients that entered into the compound that produced the headaches.

Ed. Joslyn, "Snake" Bill Waterfohl, and another Jackson man were then taken to Ann Arbor with the whisky making outfit.

Tuesday, Deputy Sheriff Kimel went to the Joslyn farm to arrest Lewis Scripser on a charge of assault and battery and upon his arrival there, after serving the warrant, discovered that the men were more or less under the influence of liquor. Mr. Joslyn questioned the right of the officer to arrest his friend, and after being warned several times was finally thrown into the automobile and taken to Ann Arbor, where he was kept over night. He was let go Wednesday morning when he furnished a bond for $100 for his appearance before Justice Thomas Saturday for examination.

After Deputy Kimel had informed Sheriff Pack of what he thought could be found at the Joslyn farm, he swore out a search warrant, and a quick trip was made to the Joslyn home, where Joslyn soon appeared.

A search of the house disclosed a copper boiler, one bottle of "white mule" with lots of kick, a jug of molasses, a gasoline stove and other material, but the worm of the still was missing. After the arrest of "Snake" Waterfohl and his companion, they took the officers to the creek on the farm where the missing coil was found anchored in the stream.

FREDERICK J. HAWLEY DIED IN ANN ARBOR SATURDAY NIGHT

Frederick J. Hawley, 603 West Washington street, Ann Arbor, died Saturday night following a short illness. Mr. Hawley, who was 25 years of age, had but recently undergone a slight operation. He had lived in Ann Arbor for the past eight years.

Mr. Hawley was married to Miss Cora Feldkamp, of Lima, November 26, 1914. His wife and two children, a daughter, Lucile, and a son, Eldine, survive him, as do also his father Thomas Hawley of Ann Arbor, his sisters, Mrs. Elmer Klump, of Manchester, and Mrs. Louis Dingman, of Detroit, and two brothers, William, of Lake Orion, and George, of Sharon.

Funeral services were held at the residence at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, the Rev. Lloyd Wallick officiating. Interment in Mt. Hope cemetery, Freedom.

Mr. Hawley was a nephew of Miss Elizabeth Monks of Chelsea.

BURT WHITE'S BARN WAS BURNED SATURDAY NIGHT

The large barn on the farm of Bert White in the northwestern part of the village was discovered to be on fire about 9 o'clock Saturday night, and with all of its contents was burned to the ground.

Mr. White was at the barn at 8 o'clock and turned his horses into the pasture, and everything was apparent in good condition at that time. The fire is supposed to have started from spontaneous combustion.

The fire department and many citizens were soon on the scene of the fire, and as the water mains do not reach to that distance it was necessary to form a bucket brigade and wet down the nearby small buildings.

The building was insured in the Washtenaw Mutual Insurance Co. for $900, which is but a fraction of the amount that it will cost to replace it. There was an insurance of $1,500 on the personal property.

Mr. White purchased the property of John Frymuth last year.

REUBEN E. FENNER DIED IN GRAND RAPIDS ON JULY 7.

Reuben E. Fenner, only son of R. C. and Irene Everett Fenner, died in Grand Rapids, Wednesday, July 7, 1920, at the age of 24 years. While in Camp Lewis Washington, in 1918, he contracted diabetes, and ever since has put up a brave fight to regain his health. Although knowing he never would be able to be a well man and fulfill his life's desires, he did not give up the hope of owning and managing a Western ranch. His sunny, cheery disposition made him a general favorite with old and young alike. He became a Christian when a boy and lived an earnest, devoted life.

The funeral service was held Saturday afternoon in Chelsea, at the home of his grandfather, Jay Everett. Burial at the Vermont cemetery.

SUBSCRIPTION RATE TO BE INCREASED AUGUST 1

Beginning August 1, 1920, the subscription price of The Chelsea Standard will be increased to $2.00 the year.

The announcement is made at this time so that subscribers who wish to do so may pay ahead for another year at the present price of $1.50.

The publisher of The Standard has been reluctant to make this raise, but is compelled to do so by the constantly rising cost of everything used in the getting out of the paper.

COUNTY ROAD COMMISSIONERS GET QUANTITY OF EQUIPMENT

The county road commission has received a large supply of equipment that is to be used in the construction of the trunk line on the Territorial road.

There are four oil burning locomotives and twenty-eight flat cars which were unloaded at the sidetrack at the plant of the Michigan Portland Cement Co. from where they will be taken to the gravel pit on the Baries farm in Lima, which the commissioners recently purchased.

The track from the pit to the highway will run south across the Dancer farm, and comes in sections so that it is easily put down and taken up.

The cars are equipped with boxes which hold the proper quantity of gravel and these boxes are lifted from the trucks and dumped into the giant mixer by the use of a traveling crane. The cars are loaded at the pit with a steam shovel.

The equipment is furnished by the United States government.

Road Commissioner O. D. Luick and Chief Engineer J. J. Cox were in Flint Monday, where they went to secure additional track.

MAN WAS WASHED FROM MICHIGAN CENTRAL TRAIN

Charles L. May, of 83 Harrison street, Detroit, was washed off the water tank on the locomotive on an east bound passenger train on the Michigan Central railroad early Saturday morning at the track pan at Four Mile lake. He is demented and was "heating" his way to his home in Detroit. He was taken to the office of Dr. J. T. Woods, where his head, which was badly cut and bruised, was dressed. Dr. Woods placed him on D. J. & C. car bound for Detroit, and he taken to a hospital by members of his family. He has a wife and four children and they did not know his whereabouts until notified by Dr. Woods.

FORMER CHELSEA WOMAN DIES IN NEW YORK ON FRIDAY

The body of Mrs. Mary A. Harrington Allyn was brought to Chelsea Sunday afternoon for interment in the family burial plot in Oak Grove cemetery.

Mrs. Allyn was born in Ann Arbor, June 17, 1838, and died at the home of her son Edward at Remsaler, N. Y., Friday, July 9, 1920.

At the age of 13 she came to Chelsea with her parents, and it was her home for nearly forty years. She was united in marriage to Oliver Allyn June, 1857, Mr. Allyn dying many years ago.

She was the mother of five children three of whom survive her, John K. of Buffalo, N. Y., Lewis W. of Grandview, Washington, and Edward of Remsaler, N. Y., with whom she has made her home for the past twenty-five years.

BEAKES WILL STICK TO JOB WITH FEDERAL BOARD.

Work has been started on the pre-C. that the Democrats of the second congressional district of Michigan will have to seek a new man as their standard bearer in the fall election.

Former Congressman Samuel W. Beakes who was defeated in the 1918 election by Earl C. Michener of Adrian, now holds a position with the Federal Board of Vocational Education at Baltimore, Md. He declares he will not relinquish his position for the uncertainties of a congressional nomination and election in district which is normally Republican by a good majority. Mr. Beakes served the district for three terms in the lower house. He was first elected over the late W. W. Wedemeyer because of the split in the Republican party in 1912. He was re-elected twice, owing largely to the assiduous manner in which he cultivated constituents via the mail order route. In 1916 he gained his seat only after the house of representatives ousted Mark R. Bacon, who had been given the certificate of election by the state board of canvassers. Previous to his election to congress he had been mayor, postmaster, and assessor of the city of Ann Arbor.

short time.

Ann Arbor—Unless boys living in the city cease the practice of shooting birds, drastic measures are likely to be taken within a short time according to the chief of police. Two boys were caught shooting at birds Sunday and brought to the city hall where their guns were taken away from them.

Cement City—An unusual stack of hay is seen on the Flint land close by the mill. A whole field of thirty acres was piled into one mass. If sold at present fancy figures the little bunch of alfalfa would draw about twelve hundred dollars worth of federal reserve notes.—Cement City

Grass Lake—L. W. Price of Grass Lake was arrested Saturday by Undersheriff Harry Worden on a warrant from Detroit charging fraud in con-be involved. He was taken to Detroit later in the day in custody of an official from the Detroit police department.

Brighton—Four robbers reckoned without Miss Bernice Bitten, 22 years old, night telephone operator, when they attempted to rob the Brighton State Bank here early Sunday morning. Miss Bitten, in the exchange above the bank, heard falling glass about 2 o'clock. She immediately sounded the bank's alarm. In an instant the robbers were in flight in a limousine and the entire village was awake. The robbers abandoned an acetylene tank and a number of tools.

started in June. Cherries, peas and gooseberries are also being canned.

Manchester—It will be remembered that Henry Ford, the great auto manufacturer of Detroit, recently purchased the White mill and power site at Adrian. At first it was supposed that he did so to acquire power sites on the Raisin river, but it was after-

You Control The Michigan State Telephone Company

Your telephone is operated by a company, organized and controlled under the laws of the State of Michigan.

So far as its rates are concerned, it is directly subject to the decisions and direction of the Michigan Public Utilities Commission.

You, through this commission, actually control the telephone service which is so intimately a part of your every day life. Its future success or failure is directly in your hands, because the commission must have your moral backing if it is to deal fairly with the telephone company in the matter of revenues. Sufficient and adequate revenues are absolutely vital to the very existence and the development of the utility.
Without them the telephone cannot properly function in the industrial and social advancement of the State.

The close association of your telephone company with the Bell system of America gives you the advantages of a service which is world-wide in its scope. By means of this service, you can, at your will, talk to any one of 13,000,000 telephones in use throughout the United States today.

It gives your telephone company, too, the advantages of the scientific research of the greatest telephone engineers in the world. This research has developed the telephone art in the United States until today it is by far the most efficient in the world. It is daily developing new improvements which will do much to make your service better.

The officers of your telephone company, who are directing its affairs, are Michigan business men, keenly alive to the many problems incident to the development of the State.

And so it is throughout the entire personnel of our company.
It is made up of men and women, actuated by no other desire than to do their jobs well and to deserve this great responsibility of giving to the people of Michigan the kind of telephone service they desire.

VIEWED AS GOOD EXPERIMENT

An Apathetic Campaign Likely to Warm Up—Doings of Republican Leaders—Trade Restrictions With Russia Lifted—Mexico More Tranquil—Spa Conference and Foreign Affairs.

By E. F. CLIPSON.

America, ever resourceful and willing to try anything once, has shown the spirit of true democracy by going to various professions for its presidents. The first one was a civil engineer, and since his time the White House has been occupied by lawyers, diplomats, professional politicians, a planter, soldiers, a tailor, two college presidents, one of whom also preached a little, and the other of whom practiced law a little, and several others who at various times in their careers were identified with trail blazing, farming, legislating and the law. Now the supreme experiment is to be tried, for Ohio, mother of presidents, has produced twice, and singularly enough, both are newspaper men. The claim has long come from various sources that the newspapers run the country, so nothing is more logical than an editor as chief executive.

Barring accidents or the totally unexpected, either Editor Harding or Editor Cox will sit in the presidential chair March 4, 1921. The consensus of opinion gathered from public expressions and the news of the day, is that it is an experiment worth trying. No very pronounced evidences of worship for either candidate seem manifest as yet in the great body of the electorate, but that is a condition in keeping with the editorial personality and may easily change as the campaign warms up. Until the day of signed news articles and editorials changed the condition slightly, the newspaper man has always been a somewhat submerged—voluntarily submerged—personality. He has been a most potent leader and director in his quiet way, but seldom for him the heroic role. He has created many heroes, but little hero worship has come to him. His ideals would not admit of it. Cincinnati patently plowing is more ideal in the general newspaper creed than Cincinnati leading armies.

Now the editor gets in front of instead of behind the calcium's bright glare. The public will, metaphorically, see two editors at least, stripped to their very souls; but as each has had some stripping in state politics the ordeal will be less severe. Also, the professional halo makers, in this case the political managers of the two candidates, will soon be enlarging upon the nobility of the editorial calling and the self-sacrificing qualities which it entails. Already the halos are in the molds and before November it is safe to assert, both candidates will be heroes to their respective followers, although at present they are just level-headed representative citizens, with considerable edge in ability over the average. The exaltation will extend, in some degree, to the whole newspaper profession, and some there are who think this will not be a good thing. Anyway, after next March the people will have an opportunity to see how an editor, who never fails to tell how the country should be run, will run it himself.

The aftermath of the Democratic convention has not been grotesque dissimilar to that of the Republican convocation. The bulk of party sentiment, with the exception of the naturally disgruntled, seems inclined to abide by Governor Cox, just as the bulk of Republican sentiment abides by Senator Harding. Bean spillers have been active in both parties and Nicholas Murray Butler, in his attacks on the forces of corruption, did not say any more, indeed not as much, as William Jennings Bryan. In post-convention utterances has said about the same straits

If, with these two notable exceptions, the start of the campaign seems apathetic, there is plenty of time for it to warm up.

Republican leaders meeting in Chicago the day after the Democratic national convention, decided to make the Illinois city the principal headquarters of the party and to wage the campaign largely west of the Alleghenies. The nomination of Cox came as a surprise to the leaders as they had planned a campaign against McAdoo. They announced, however, that the issues would not be materially affected, the chief fight being centered on the League of Nations, with Democratic conduct of the war and reconstruction a secondary issue. It was also decided to frown upon any attempt to introduce the wet and dry question into the national campaign or to make the personality of the candidates a prominent factor. Independence of action, but at the same time the fullest co-operation between the national committee and the senatorial and congressional committees is planned, with the national committee keeping out of all state races such as those in Illinois and Missouri. The well-known ability of Governor Cox as a campaigner may cause Senator Harding to depart from his announced intention to stick principally to front-yard receptions, if the former goes on the stump.

Announcement by the state department of the United States of the lifting of trade restrictions with Russia came unexpectedly. Since Secretary of State Cully had stated just before his departure for San Francisco that no action was of immediate prospect, it is regarded as a recently adopted policy. The announcement expressly states that no recognition of the soviet government is implied and that individuals and corporations trading with Russia must do so at their own risk and are not to expect assistance or protection from consular authorities; also that the post office department will be unable to accept mail to soviet Russia and that goods cannot be forwarded by parcel post. Materials for war purposes continue under the ban and the state department will continue to refuse passports for Russia. The announcement means in effect that persons or corporations desiring to trade with soviet agents in the United States or in other countries, the state department warns American citizens against the risks incident to the acceptance of commodities or other values which may later be brought into question. It is explained that the United States does not recognize the validity of industrial or commercial concessions granted by an existing Russian authority.

As a winding up of one of the problems growing out of the war, over $150,000,000 of property seized as enemy owned during the conflict, is now ready to be returned under qualifications provided for in the amendment to the trading with the enemy act, passed during the closing days of the last congress. Among those who may obtain the release of their property are American women who married alien enemies, enemy diplomats, aliens who were interned, citizens of new nations created from enemy territory by the treaty of peace, women of allied or neutral countries who married enemy subjects, and Americans who were forced to remain in Germany during the war. Property mistakenly seized will also be returned and American creditors are permitted to bring claims against enemy debtors whose property was seized.

Reports of banditry, but on a somewhat reduced scale, continue to filter in from Mexico. On the other hand come reports that Francisco Villa has entered into an armistice with the new government and agreed to cease attacks on trains, garisons and towns. This is in direct contravention of a manifesto issued a short time ago by ten of Villa's generals, including his chief of staff, and a number of civilians, that war on the new regime would be continued. The burden of the manifesto was that the Obregon and De La Huerta government is the product of a military coup and, attempting to establish itself with the same passions, jealousies, ambitions and mistakes as of old, will be impotent to restore peace in the country.

As pointing to an assurance, or one which the authorities are attempting to create, is the recent statement from Mexico City that the government is ready to protect the interests of business men in the republic, whether they are Mexicans or foreigners. Mexico presents an appearance of improved tranquility, but the question whether it will continue is an open one. As an intimation of the degree of faith attaching to the promises of Villa and others of his kind, comes the government announcement that there will be no relaxing of vigilance against rebels.

The Spa conference, which has been endeavoring to fix the amount Germany shall pay in reparations, settle the disarmament question and other problems of the peace treaty, developed into a session of much difficulty. From the outset the allies showed an outwardly united front, with little apparent inclination toward leniency. Lloyd George especially showed a firm exterior and even a very peremptory attitude in dealing with the German delegates. Indications, however, were not lacking of internal dissension and indecision among the allies. The Germans sought to mitigate the provision of the treaty calling for disarmament and the reduction of their forces. Their claim was that internal conditions prevented their carrying out the terms of the clause in the treaty specified; also that in view of recent troubles and the danger of recurrence, and the Russian menace, it was unwise to do so. One stumbling block was over the question of rifles and small arms which the German soldiers carried to their homes after the conclusion of the war, an action abetted by the government and which, it has been charged, has been utilized by the German authorities as the basis for a big citizen military organization still very dangerous to the peace of Europe.

Internal friction among the allies, which it was sought to keep hidden, was due to disagreement over a division of reparations and the spoils of war. Italy, Serbia and Belgium have each claimed priorities, while the allotments to be made France and England have for some time constituted a delicate phase in the relations of those two countries and has affected the attitude toward them of the other allies. The allies delivered an ultimatum to the effect that Germany must disarm by Oct. 1, or suffer an occupation of her territory.

The Russian bolshevik menace looms more strongly over western Europe, with Poland reported not only weakening but in a state of near collapse under the red offensive and seeking an armistice. Germany thus becomes the barrier and is more strongly insisted on an amelioration of the peace treaty which will permit her, instead of an army of 100,000 men, one of 200,000, or even considerably larger. The view has considerable support in England and France that the reds are at present more dangerous than an armed Germany and that it might be a good move to permit the Germans to keep larger military forces if in return they will demilitarize the soviet. If Poland's condition is really so desperate as reported, it leaves General Wrangel, who is battling the bolshevik from the Crimean peninsula northward, the reds' only opponent of importance. He recently has had some great successes, including the wiping out or capture of two Russian cavalry corps; but with Poland out of commission, the military machine which crumpled that country and also swept away Kolchak, Denikine and Semenov, may be expected to make rather short work of Wrangel.

The advance of the Greek forces against the Turkish nationalists has been so rapid that resistance is said to have been largely overcome. A junction of the Greeks operating in the Smyrna area with others operating from Panderma on the sea of Marmora, estimated to require 15 days, has been effected in 11 days. Mustafa Kemal, the Turk leader, is said to have been reduced to the necessity of conducting a guerrilla warfare. Americans throughout the war area are now said to be safe. A Fourth of July celebration was held by Americans in Constantinople to the accompaniment of British warships bombarding the nationalists at various points in the Bosporus and Sea of Marmora.

ALLIES MAY FORCE ARMISTICE

Poles Told to Withdraw Forces From Red Territory—Foch Holds Army in Readiness.

Spa, Belgium—Premier Grabowski, of Poland, who is attending the Council of Premiers here, Monday telegraphed President Pilsudski at Warsaw to open negotiations immediately for an armistice with the bolsheviks.

Marshal Foch has been instructed to mobilize available allied forces for possible intervention between the Poles and the bolsheviks in event the Moscow government refuses to accept the proposal of the conference here for an armistice. It was learned on good authority, should the red forces continue their advance into Poland the allies will give every aid to the Polish troops behind the armistice line fixed by the Peace Treaty.

The allies have sent a proposal to the Russian soviet government for an armistice on condition that the Poles retire within their natural Polish frontier. It is set forth that the armistice will be followed by a conference of representatives of all the countries on the Russian border. The Polish delegation here is understood to be much dissatisfied with the terms of the allied note to the soviet government. They feel, however, that they will be obliged to accept the armistice under the terms proposed.

TRIP OVER NIAGARA IS FATAL

Englishman Smashed in Attempt to Ride Falls in Barrel.

Niagara Falls, N. Y.—The right arm of a man was taken from the Niagara river near the Canadian Maid of the Mist landing late Monday. It is believed to be part of the body of George C. Stephens, of Bristol, England, who was killed Sunday in an attempt to go over the Horseshoe Falls in a barrel.

The cask in which Stephens made the trip, although built of stout Russian oak staves and bound with steel hoops, was smashed like an egg-shell on the jagged rocks at the base of the cataract.

Stephens was 58 years old and has a wife and 11 children in Bristol, where he was a barber. He served three years in France with the British army. He had planned to make a lecture tour of England if his trip was successful.

Bobby Leach, who went over the Horseshoe Falls, in 1911, told Stephens his trip would be a failure. Leach predicted that the barrel would not withstand the drop of 155 feet, but Stephens refused to be dissuaded.

CHURCH CIRCLES.

A SERMONETTE.

By Rev. G. W. Krause.

God has put us into an unfinished world and commissioned us to finish it. Not a floral gem nor culinary treasure in your garden but is better for man's manipulation. By artificial selection and judicious hybridism surprising results have been obtained. Compare the crysanthemums of the day with the weedy old things that used to stock our borders; our luscious fruits with the repellent crabs. This consummation was reached by an intelligent, persistent use of the hints which nature has herself supplied, quietly discriminating between qualities to be retained or discarded.

Whether man in all his co-operation with evolution is working his way back to a lost perfection, or toward a future one, there can be little doubt that we have a hand in the making of our moral and spiritual selves. "Our bodies are our gardens, to the which our wills are the gardeners." A rare wilderness does these uncultured will too prepotently make of ourselves—some too evidently "selfmade," where men do not know themselves, and fail to employ the methods which make for ennoblement. On the other hand, we meet every day with those who have contributed to the formation of character in themselves and others by giving judicious preference in thought, deed and word to that which is Godlike and morally beautiful. Have you a hand in the making and finishing of things?

ALFALFA SUCCESS IS ON INCREASE IN THE STATE

That a firm packing of the seed bed before summer plantings of alfalfa often makes the difference between success and failure with the crop, is the statement of Prof. J. F. Cox, head of the farm crops department at M. A. C. Many Michigan farmers will seed alfalfa during July, and in the lower peninsula during early August. These men cannot afford to overlook the importance of a carefully prepared seed bed.

"Alfalfa is being planted in Michigan at the present time with more success than ever before," says Prof. Cox. "This is due to the fact that farmers of the state have learned the necessity of using northern grown seed, of using lime, of inoculating seed, and finally of preparing a firm, clean seed bed."

"Seed beds can usually be fitted in excellent shape for midsummer seedings. Were it not for the fact that midsummer droughts are quite frequent, late July seedings would be recommended above spring plantings. As it is, which is foul with grass or weeds, opportunity is given to eradicate these pests before alfalfa is planted."

"Seed beds prepared during midsummer are likely to be dry and ashy, however, and since few packing rains, as compared with spring, can be counted on at that time, special care must be counted on at that time, special care must be taken to pack the seed beds firmly with roller or with the cultipacker. A thorough firming of the seed bed often makes the difference between success and failure with the crop."

Detailed information in regard to securing a stand of alfalfa in Michigan may be had by writing to Direct-Experiment Station, Michigan Agricultural College, East Lansing, and asking for circular No. 97.

F. O. Wood and daughter, Miss Jean, of Johnston, Pa., were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Vogel the last of the week. Mr. Wood returned home Sunday, and Miss Wood will remain here for some time.

CHAPTER XIV.

The dictograph which Shirley had asked Bryce to obtain for her in San Francisco arrived on the regular passenger steamer on Thursday morning and Bryce called her up to ask when she desired it sent over.

"Good morning, Mr. Cardigan," she greeted him cheerily. "How do you feel this morning? Any the worse for having permitted yourself to be a human being last night?"

"Why, I feel pretty fine, Shirley. I think it did me a lot of good to crawl out of my shell last night."

"You feel encouraged to go on living, eh?"

"Yes."

"And fighting?"

"By all means."

"Then something has occurred of late to give you new courage?"

"Oh, many things. By the way, Shirley, you may inform your uncle at breakfast Friday morning about my connection with the N. C. O. In fact, I think it would be far better for you if you made it a point to do so."

"Why?"

"Because both Ogilvy and myself have a very strong suspicion that your uncle has a detective or two on our trails. I judge your uncle will learn today that you dined with Ogilvy, Mola and me last night."

"Oh, dear! That's terrible!" He could sense her distress.

"Ashamed of having been seen in my company, eh?"

"Please don't. Are you quite serious in this matter?"

"Quite."

"Uncle Seth will think it so—so strange."

"He'll probably tell you about it. Better beat him to the issue by fessing up, Shirley. Doubtless his suspicions are already aroused, and if you inform him that you know I am the real builder of the N. C. O., he'll think you're a smart woman and that you've been doing a little private gun-shoe work of your own on behalf of the Laguna Grande Lumber company."

"Which is exactly what I have been doing," she reminded him.

"I know. But then, I'm not afraid of you, Shirley—that is, any more. And after Friday morning I'll not be afraid of your uncle."

"I feel as if I were a conspirator."

"I believe you are one. Your dictograph has arrived. Shall I send George Sea Otter over with it? And have you somebody to install it?"

"Oh, bother! Does it have to be installed?"

"It does. You place the contraption—hide it, rather—in the room where the conspirators conspire; then you run wires from it into another room where the detectives listen in on the receivers."

"Could George Sea Otter install it?"

"I think he could. There is a printed card of instructions, and I dare say George would find the job no more baffling than the lighting system on the Supler."

"Will he tell anybody?"

"Not if you ask him not to."

"Very well, then. Please send him over. Thank you so much, Bryce Cardigan. You're an awful good old sort, after all. Really, it hurts me to have to oppose you. It would be so much nicer if we didn't have all those redwood trees to protest, wouldn't it?"

"Let us not argue the question, Shirley. I think I have my redwood trees protested. Good by."

He had scarcely finished telephoning his home to instruct George Sea Otter to report with the express package to Shirley when Buck Ogilvy strolled into the office and tossed a document on his desk. "There's your little old temporary franchise, old thing," he announced; and with many a hearty laugh he related to Bryce the ingenious means by which he had obtained it. "And now if you will phone up to your logging camp and instruct the woodchoppers to lay off about fifty men to rest for the day, pending a hard night's work, and arrange to send them down on the last log train today, I'll drop around after dinner and we'll try that jump-crossing."

"The telephone Colonel Pennington's manager and ask him to kick a switch-engine in on the Laurel creek spur and make those flat cars with my rails aboard out to the junction with the main line," Bryce replied. And he called up the Laguna Grande Lumber company—only to be informed by no less a person than Colonel Pennington himself that it would be impossible to send the switch-engine in until the following afternoon. The Colonel was sorry, but the switch-engine was in the shop having the brick in her firebox renewed, while the mogul that hauled the log trains would not have time to attend to the matter, since the flats would have to be spotted on the sub-track at Cardigan's log landing in the woods, and this could not be done until the last loaded log train for the day had been hauled out to make room.

"Why not switch back with the mogul after the log train has been hauled out on the main line?" Bryce demanded pointedly.

Pennington, however, was not trapped. "My dear fellow," he replied patronizingly, "quite impossible. I assure you. That old trestle across the creek, my boy—it hasn't been looked at for years. While I'd send the light switch-engine over it and have no fears."

"I happen to know, Colonel, that the big mogul kicked those flats in to load the rails."

"I know it. And what happened? Why, that old trestle squeaked and shook and gave every evidence of being about to buckle in the center. My engineer threatened to quit if I sent him in again."

"Very well. I suppose I'll have to wait until the switch-engine comes out of the shop," Bryce replied resignedly, and hung up. He turned a troubled face to Ogilvy. "Check-mated!" he announced. "Whipped in a frazzle. The Colonel is lying, Buck, and I've caught him at it. As a matter of fact, the mogul didn't kick those flats in at all. The switch-engine did—and I know it. Now I'm going to send a man over to snoop around Pennington's roundhouse and verify his report about the switch-engine being in the shop."

He did so. Half an hour later the messenger returned with the information that not only was the switch-engine not in the shop but her firebox had been overhauled the week before and was reported to be in excellent condition.

"That settles it," Buck Ogilvy mourned. "The Colonel is as suspicious as a rhino. He doesn't know anything, but he smells danger just the same."

"Exactly, Buck. So he is delaying the game until he can learn something definite." He drummed idly on his desk for several minutes. Then:

"Buck, can you run a locomotive?"

"With one hand, old man."

"Fine business! Well, I guess we'll put in that crossing tomorrow night. The switch-engine will be in the roundhouse at Pennington's mill tomorrow night, so we can't steal that; but we can steal the mogul. I'll just send word up to my woods boss not to have his train loaded when the mogul comes up late tomorrow afternoon to haul it down to our log landing. Of course, the engine crew won't bother to run down to Sequola for the night—that is, they won't run the mogul down. They'll just leave her at our log landing all night and put up for the night at our camp."

"But how do you know they will put up at our camp all night, Bryce?"

"My men will make them comfortable, and it means they can be abed until seven o'clock instead of having to roll out at five o'clock, which would be the case if they spent the night at this end of the line. There is a slight grade at our log landing. I know that, because the air leaked out of the brakes on a log train I was on a short time ago, and the train ran away with me. Now, the engine crew will not let the airbrakes on the mogul and leave her with steam up to throw all night; they'll not blow her down, for that would mean work firing her in the morning. Our task, Buck, will be to throw off the airbrakes and let her glide silently out of our log landing. About a mile down the road we'll stop, get up steam, run down to the junction with the main line, back in on the Laurel creek spur, couple onto those flat cars and breeze merrily down to Sequola with them. They'll be loaded waiting for us; our men will be congregated in our dry yard just off Water street near B, waiting for us to arrive with the rails—and bingo—we go to it. After we drop the flats, we'll run the engine back to the woods, leave it where we found it, return idly. You can get back in ample time to superintend the cutting of the crossing."

"Spoken like a man!" quoth Buck Ogilvy. "You're the one man in this world for whom I'd steal a locomotive. At-a-boy!"

Had either of the conspirators known of Pennington's plans to entertain Mayor Poundstone at dinner on Thursday night, it is probable they would not have cheered until those flat cars were out of the woods.

Mayor Poundstone and his wife arrived at the Pennington home in Redwood boulevard at six forty-five Thursday evening. It was with a profound feeling of relief that his honor lifted the lady from their modest Buick "diver," for once inside the Pennington house, he felt, he would be free from a peculiarly devilish brand of persecution inaugurated by his wife about three months previously. Mrs.

Poundstone wanted a new automobile. And she had entered upon a campaign of nagging and complaint, hoping to wear Poundstone's resistance down to the point where he would be willing to barter his hope of salvation in return for a guarantee of peace on earth.

"I feel like a perfect fool, rattling upon those people in this fifty-rattle trap," Mrs. Poundstone protested.

Mayor Poundstone purred. "In my'st, my woman," he growled, "talk about something else. Give me one night of peace. Let me enjoy my dinner and this visit."

"I can't help it," Mrs. P. retorted with asperity. She pointed to Shirley Sumner's car parked under the porch-cocker. "If I had a sedan like that, I could die happy. And it only cost thirty-two hundred and fifty dollars."

"I paid six hundred and fifty for the rattletrap, and I couldn't afford that," he almost whimpered. "You were happy with it until I was elected mayor."

"You forget our social position, my dear," she purred sweetly.

He could have struck her. "Hang your social position," he gritted savagely. "Shut up, will you? Social position in a sawmill town! Damn it, you'll drive me crazy yet." Poundstone gurgled, and subsided.

The Pennington butler, a very superior person, opened the door. The Poundstones entered. At the entrance to the living room the butler announced sonorously: "Mayor Poundstone and Mrs. Poundstone."

"Glad to see you aboard the ship," Colonel Pennington boomed with his best air of hearty expansiveness. "Well, well," he continued, leading Mrs. Poundstone to a divan in front of the fire, "this is certainly delightful. My niece will be down in two shakes of a lamb's tail. Have a cigarette, Mr. Poundstone."

In the midst of the commonplace chatter incident to such occasions, Shirley entered the room; and the Colonel leaving her to entertain the guests, went to a small sideboard in one corner and brought forth the "materials," as he facetiously termed them. James appeared like magic with a tray, glasses and tiny serviettes, and the Colonel's clerk was passed to the company.

"Delicious," murmured Mrs. Poundstone. "Perfectly delicious. And not strong!"

"Have another," her hospitable host suggested, and he poured it, quite oblivious of the frightened wink which the mayor telegraphed his wife. Poundstone prayed to his rather nebulous gods that Mrs. P. would not discuss automobiles during the dinner.

Alas! The Colonel's cocktails were not unduly fortified, but for all that, the two which Mrs. Poundstone had assimilated contained just sufficient "kick" to loosen the lady's tongue without thickening it. Consequently, about the time the "piece de resistance" made its appearance, she threw caution to the winds and adverted to the subject closest to her heart.

"I was telling Henry as we came up the walk how greatly I envied you that beautiful sedan, Miss Sumner," she cooed. "How an open car does blow one around, my dear!"

"Yes, indeed," said Shirley innocently.

"Heard the McKinnon people had a man killed up in their woods yesterday, Colonel," Poundstone remarked, hoping against hope to divert the conversation.

"Yes, the fellow's own fault," Pennington replied. "He was one of those employees who held to the opinion that every man is the captain of his own soul and the sole proprietor of his own body—hence that it behooved him to look after both, in view of the high cost of safety appliances. He was warned that the logging cable was well out of the hook—and sure enough it did. The free end of the cable snapped back like a whip, and—"

"I hold to the opinion," Mrs. Poundstone interrupted, "that if one wishes for a thing hard enough and just keeps on wishing, one is bound to get it."

"My dear," said Mr. Poundstone impressively, "if you would only confine yourself to wishing, I assure you your chances for success would be infinitely brighter."

There was no mistaking this rebuke; even two cocktails were powerless to render Mrs. Poundstone oblivious to it. With the nicest tact in the world, Shirley adroitly changed the subject to some tailored shirtwaists she had observed in the window of a local dry goods emporium that day, and Mrs. Poundstone subsided.

About nine o'clock, Shirley, in response to a pleading glance from her relative, tactfully excused Mrs. Poundstone upstairs, leaving her alone with his wife. Instantly Pennington got down to business.

"Well," he queried, apropos of nothing, "what do you hear with reference to the Northern California-Oregon railroad?"

"Oh, the usual amount of wind, Colonel. Nobody knows what to make of that outfit."

Pennington studied the end of his cigar a moment.

"Have they made any move to get a franchise?" he asked bluntly. "If they have, I suppose you would be the first man to hear about it. I don't mean to be impertinent," he added with a gracious smile, "but the fact is I noticed that whirling Ogilvy entering your office in the city hall the other afternoon, and I couldn't help wondering whether his visit was social or official."

"Social—so far as I could observe," Poundstone replied truthfully, wondering just how much Pennington knew.

"Preliminary to the official visit, I dare say."

The Colonel puffed thoughtfully for a while—for which the mayor was grateful, since it provided time in which to organize himself. Suddenly, however, Pennington turned toward his guest and fixed the latter with a serious glance.

"I hadn't anticipated discussing this matter with you, Poundstone, and you must forgive me for it; but the fact is—I might as well be frank with you—I am very greatly interested in the operation of this proposed railroad. If it is built, it will have a very distinct effect on my finances."

"In just what way?"

"Disastrous."

"I am amazed, Colonel."

"You wouldn't be if you had given the subject very close consideration. Such a road as the N. C. O. contemplates will tap about one-third of the redwood belt only, while a line built from the south will tap two-thirds of it. The remaining third can be tapped by an extension of my own logging road; when my own timber is logged out, I will want other business for my road, and if the N. C. O. parallels it, I will be left with two streaks of rust on my hands."

"Ah, I perceive. So it will, so it will."

"You agree with me, then, Poundstone, that the N. C. O. is not designed to foster the best interests of the community. Of course you do. I take it, therefore, that when the N. C. O. applies for its franchise to run through Sequola, neither you nor your city council will consider the proposition at all."

"I cannot, of course, speak for the city council," Poundstone began, but Pennington's cold, amused smile froze further utterance.

"Be frank with me, Poundstone. I am not a child. What I would like to know is this: will you exert every effort to block that franchise in the firm conviction that by so doing you will accomplish a laudable public service?"

Poundstone squirmed. "When I have had time to look into the matter more thoroughly—"

"Tut-tut, my dear man! Let us not straddle the fence. Business is a game, and so is politics. Neither knows any sentiment. Suppose you should favor this N. C. O. crowd, in a mistaken idea that you were doing the right thing, and that subsequently numerous fellow-citizens developed the idea that you had not done your public duty. Would some of them not be likely to invoke a recall election and retire you and your city council in disgrace?"

"I doubt if they could defeat me, Colonel."

"I have no such doubt," Pennington replied pointedly.

Poundstone looked up at him from under lowered lids. "Is that a threat?" he demanded tremulously.

"My dear fellow! Threaten my guest?" Pennington laughed patronizingly. "I am giving you advice, Poundstone—and rather good advice. It strikes me. However, while we're on the subject, I have no hesitancy in telling you that in the event of a disastrous decision on your part, I should not feel justified in supporting you."

He might, with equal frankness, have said: "I would smash you." To his guest his meaning was not obscure. Poundstone studied the pattern of the rug, and Pennington, watching him sharply, saw that the man was distressed. He resolved on a bold stroke.

"Let's not beat about the bush, Poundstone," he said with the air of a father patiently striving to induce his child to recant a lie, tell the truth, and save himself from the parental wrath. "You've been doing business with Ogilvy; I know it for a fact, and you might as well admit it."

Poundstone looked up, red and embarrassed. "If I had known—" he began.

"Certainly, certainly! I realize you acted in perfect good faith. You're like the majority of people in Sequola. You're all so crazy for rail connection with the outside world that you jump at the first plan that seems to promise you one. Have you promised Ogilvy a franchise?"

There was no dodging that question. A doubt, under the present circumstances, would be tantamount to an admission; Poundstone could not guess just how much the Colonel really knew, and it would not do to lie to him, since eventually the lie must be discovered. He resolved to come clean.

"The city council has already granted the N. C. O. a temporary franchise," he confessed.

Pennington sprang furiously to his feet. "Damn it," he snarled, "why did you do that without consulting me?"

"Didn't know you were remotely interested," Now that the ice was broken, Poundstone felt relieved and was prepared to defend his act vigorously. "And we did not commit ourselves irrevocably," he continued. "The temporary franchise will expire in twenty-eight days—and in that time the N. C. O. cannot even get started."

"Have you any understanding as to an extension of that temporary franchise, in case the N. C. O. desires it?"

"Well, yes—not in writing, however. I gave Ogilvy to understand that if he was not ready in thirty days, an extension could readily be arranged."

"Any witnesses?"

"I am not such a fool, sir," Poundstone declared with asperity. "I had a notion—I might as well admit it—that you would have serious objection to having your tracks cut by a jump-crossing at B and Water streets. And for no reason in life except to justify himself and inculcate in Pennington an impression that the latter was dealing with a crafty and far-seeing mayor, Poundstone smiled boldly and knowingly. He leaned back nonchalantly and blew smoke at the ceiling.

"You only rascal!" Pennington soliloquized. "You're a smarter man than I thought. You're trying to play both ends against the middle." He recalled the report of his private detective and the incident of Ogilvy's visit to young Henry Poundstone's office with a small leather bag; he was more than ever convinced that this bag had contained the bribe, in gold coin, which had been productive of that temporary franchise and the verbal understanding for its possible extension.

"Ogilvy did business with you through your son Henry," he challenged. Poundstone started violently. "How much did Henry get out of it?" Pennington continued brutally.

"Two hundred and fifty dollars, re-tainer, and not a cent more," Poundstone protested virtuously—and truthfully.

"You're not so good a business man as I gave you credit for being," the Colonel retorted untruly. "Two hundred and fifty dollars! Oh, Lord! Poundstone, you're funny. Upon my word you're a scream." And the Colonel gave himself up to a sincerely hearty laugh. "You call it a retainer," he continued presently, "but a grand jury might call it something else. How ever," he went on after a slight pause, "you're not in politics for your health; so let's get down to brass tacks. How much do you want to deny the N. C. O. not only an extension of that temporary franchise but also a permanent franchise when they apply for it?"

Poundstone rose with great dignity. "Colonel Pennington, sir," he said, "you insult me."

"Sit down. You've been invited to stay here before now. Shall we say one thousand dollars per each for you three good councilmen and true, and for yourself that sedan of my niece? It's a good car, I imagine it will please Mrs. P. immensely and grant you surcease from sorrow. Of course, I will not give it to you. I'll sell it to you—five hundred down upon the signing of the agreement, and in lieu of the cash I will take over that tiny Mrs. Poundstone finds so distasteful. Then I will employ your son, Henry, as the attorney for the Laguna Grande Lumber company and give him a retainer of twenty-five hundred dollars for one year. I will leave it to you to get this twenty-five hundred dollars from Henry and pay my niece cash for the car. Doesn't that strike you as a perfectly safe and sane proposition?"

Had a vista of paradise opened up before Poundstone, he could not have been more thrilled. He had been absolutely honest in his plea to Mrs. Poundstone that he could not afford a thirty-two-hundred-and-fifty-dollar sedan, much as he longed to office her and gain a greatly-to-be-desired peace. And now the price was dangling before his eyes, so to speak. At any rate it was parked in the porte-cochere not fifty feet distant!

How Many Women Are Like This?

Can anything be more wearing for women than the ceaseless round of household duties? Oh! the monotony of it all—work and drudge; no time to be sick; tired, ailing, yet cannot stop. There comes a time when something "snaps" and they find themselves "simply worn out" and to make matters worse, have contracted serious feminine disorder which almost always follows the constant overtaxing of a woman's strength.

Then they should remember that there is no remedy like Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—the experience of these two women establishes that fact:

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—"After the birth of my last child I had such painful spells that would unfit me entirely for my housework. I suffered for months and the doctor said that my trouble was organic. I would not consent to an operation and let it go for over a year, having my sister do my work for me as I was not able to walk. One day my aunt came to see me and told me about your medicine—said it cured her of the same thing. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and they have cured me. Now I do my own housework, washing and ironing and sewing for my family and also do sewing for other people. I still take a bottle of Vegetable Compound every spring for a tonic. I recommend your medicine to others who have troubles similar to mine and you can use my letter if you wish."—Mrs. PAUL PARKER, 1235 Stone St., Sandusky, Ohio.

OUTBREAK OF TRUE ARMY WORM HAS BEEN DETECTED IN SOUTHERN AREAS

The True Army Worm and Its Destructive Work.

In the long battle against insect enemies, the bureau of entomology, United States department of agriculture, serves as the farmer's "listening post" to give due warning of an impending raid from the enemy. An outbreak of the true army worm has been detected in southern Illinois, and the scientists are making every effort to give information upon the control of this pest.

Parent or Moth of True Army Worm. (Enlarged.)

It is expected that the worm will appear in the sections lying north and northeast of the area infested at present. Probably this will occur within a short time, and farmers are urged to be ready with their defense.

Control of Pest.
Just what this defense should consist of is fully described in Farmers' Bulletin 731, which the department will send free upon request, to any interested person. Briefly, the control of the pest is effected by means of poisoned baits, poisoned sprays upon crops not intended to be used for forage, and by the construction of ditches and traps where the masses of caterpillars can be caught and crushed with a log drag.

For the next three months the fields of growing grass and grain must be watched carefully and, when the worm is discovered, the attack should be pressed with utmost vigor to prevent the pest from fortifying his position. Once entrenched the army worm will claim a large slice of farm profits for his indecency—millions of dollars have passed down the greedy maw of the army worm in the past 30 years.

Markings of True Worm.
The true army worm should not be confused with the "overflow worm," or the "grass worm," say the federal entomologists. The genuine article is a nearly naked, smooth, striped caterpillar about one and one-half inches long. His greenish body is marked with three dark stripes which run, one down each side and one down the back for the length of the body. The head is greenish brown, speckled with black.

The army worm operates in masses, and from this characteristic he derives his name. When large numbers of them are at work in a field the clanking sound of their moving jaws can be plainly heard as they devour every blade in sight.

PROTECT COTTON TO PREVENT MUCH LOSS

Damage Amounting to $70,000,000 Done in Past Year.

Although One of Hardest of Farm Products, Its Strength Is Not Sufficient to Withstand Exposure to the Elements.

What would you say if you saw a man deliberately destroy $70,000,000 worth of clothing by placing it in a rainstorm? No one has done precisely that, but what has actually occurred is no less wasteful than that act would be.

Specialists of the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, conservatively estimate that during the past year cotton growers of the United States suffered a $70,000,000 cotton loss through damage to cotton by exposure to weather. They say, that after ginning, cotton is permitted to remain in the weather for months at a time instead of being properly sheltered, and that although cotton is one of the hardest of farm products, its strength is not sufficient to withstand such exposure to the elements.

The bureau of markets maintains that the amount of money lost through this cause in a single season would probably be sufficient to build the warehouses needed, and that after the first year these warehouses would become practically surplus assets in the hands of the farmers.

It is also pointed out that receipts covering cotton stored in properly operated warehouses are accepted generally as collateral for loans, the interest charges for which are more than paid for by the profits accruing to the farmer through his ability to sell his cotton as it is needed by the mills.

RAISE CHICKENS FOR MONEY

PROTECTION FROM FLIES

The following remedy is said to afford horses, dogs and cows absolute protection from flies. Pennyroyal, 1 ounce; alcohol, 2 ounces; fish oil, 1/2 pint.

Mix in a bottle and shake well before using. Apply lightly to the animal's coat each morning and for 24 hours it will be immune from flies. Be careful to apply the preparation lightly, as it will stiffen the hair. One bottle will last a summer for a horse. Any drug store can supply the ingredients.

CULLING OF POULTRY FLOCK

Intelligent Work Is Essential for Success, Say Specialists—Best Fowls to Save.

Intelligent culling of the poultry flock is of the utmost importance for success in poultry keeping, say specialists of the department of agriculture.

Cull These Hens.
Sick, weak, lacking vigor, inactive, poor eaters, early molters with small, puckered, hard, dry vents; with small, shriveled hard, scaly, dull-colored combs; with thick or coarse, stiff pelvic bones, that are close together, small spread between pelvic bones and rear end of keel, and large, small abdomen. In breeds with yellow skin and shanks the discarded hens should also show yellow or medium yellow shanks and yellow beaks and vents. Save These Hens.
Healthy, strong, vigorous, alert, and active; good eaters; not molting or just beginning to molt in September or October; with large, moist vents; with full, red combs; thin, pliable pelvic bones well spread apart, wide spread between pelvic bones and rear end of keel, and large, soft, pliable abdomen. In breeds with yellow skin and shanks, the hens saved should also show pale or white shanks, and pale or white beaks and vents.

FIX HARVESTING MACHINERY

Mighty Good Investment of Time to Spend Rainy Day in Putting Implements in Shape.

A rainy day spent in putting that moving machine, hay loader, binder and other harvesting machinery into shape is a mighty good investment of time. This is more true this year than usual for two reasons—first, labor is much scarcer, and therefore the loss of any time wasted will be greater, and, secondly, the parts may be harder to get than usual, due to a shortage of supplies in many lines. Forethought may save some after-worries.

PLACE FOR HORSES TO ROLL

Best Plan to Roll Animal Out Once Each Day—Rolling Adds to Its Health and Vigor.

Where horses are closely confined in stalls most of the time, they are more apt to roll in the filth and manure than if they had been taken out and allowed to roll once a day. Letting them roll outside of stalls saves much carrying and brushing, avoids the possibility of the animal rolling where it would get fast, and adds to its health and vigor by keeping it cleaner.

SHEER FROCKS FOR SUMMER EVENINGS

LIGHT-COLORED and white frocks for midsummer wear replace conventional evening dresses for dances and for all gayeties, when the weather is really warm. The younger women specially favor them. They are more crisp and fresh looking than silks and satins and decidedly more youthful. This last quality has made them the envy of mature women with the result that designers have put their wits to work and made up organza dresses that are dignified and handsome for older wearers. Net and lace belong to all ages like batiste and embroidery, and lately georgette has joined the ranks of those fabrics that every age may wear.

Organza made up with very narrow black lace as a trimming is an innovation, the lace appearing in little frills above the hem of the skirt, and as an edge for neck and sleeves. Black tulle girdles—some times appliqued with gayly-colored artificial flowers—may tone up a simple organza frock to the degree of sophistication required by wearers who are no longer young.

Voiles and organdies in flower-like colors have been rivals to pretty frocks this season. Lavender, pink, jade, yellow, blue and orchid shades are lovely in them and these colors with the introduction of lace or net have furnished most alluring things for summer days and nights. Wide tucks, hemstitching bands in net or lace, used as inserts, have made it possible for designers to vary them in the matter of embellishments and frills have played a great part in organza dresses. Depending on none of these there is an occasional frock that achieves a success by other means like the dress of pink organza shown in the picture. It has a moderately full underskirt with a cluster of three tucks above the hem and a full long tunic finished in deep scallops at the bottom with pleat edges. The tunic and bodice are joined on the hips under a corded tuck and the neck is finished with a scalloped collar having rows of small erenchet buttons at the front. There is a modest little chemise of tucked net and novel girdle of silk cord with very short tasseled ends. The sleeves in this frock are a little longer than those made earlier—covering the elbows. If one has that rare gift—pretty elbows—they might be shortened with good effect.

THE SUMMER HOSTESS

THE hostess who is fortunate enough to live in the country, or in a small town, has it in her power to give great pleasure to city dwellers among her friends, when she entertains them—and especially in the summer time. If her home is provided with a roomy porch she will find this a great asset; even so simple a matter as breakfast served on the veranda is a delight to the shut-in dwellers of city apartment houses. Strolls on the country roads and excursions into the woods fill them with joy, so that city dwellers may be depended upon for getting much pleasure from the simple fact that they are in the open country.

The most obvious of means for entertaining are the natural beauties of scenery—the "sights" which every locality boasts. In hilly countries there are the views from high points that are always inspiring. In a lake country excursions to the lakes and fishing or bathing and in a flat country politics where one may watch the sun set to best advantage. All these make opportunity for picnic parties. Motor cars or motor busses carry the guests and refreshments and such informal entertaining gives more real pleasure than a night at the opera.

In planning one of these picnics for city guests one must keep a careful eye on the details for their comfort. It is a good idea to provide each one of them with a small pillow in case the picnic lunch is served on the grass, or the improvised seats and tables are bare boards. Paper napkins and paper dishes reduce the cares of the hostess to the minimum, including plates large enough to hold all that she intends to serve. A menu including substantial sandwiches, a salad, small cakes and coffee or iced drinks will satisfy the keen appetites that a walk or ride in the open air is likely to produce. Some hostesses arrange the portions all ready to serve by using paper ice cream cases to contain the salad so that this does not have to be dished out into plates which are passed with sandwiches on them. Each hostess will manage the serving of coffee in the manner she finds most convenient. If she uses vacuum bottles it is all taken care of at home. Most picnic crowds enjoy making it and small tin cups are the most practical things to take along unless one has collapsible cups of metal. The sunset picnic usually extends itself into the twilight and sometimes into the dark. A bonfire is as much a pleasure to the grown-up city dweller as it is to the small boy and ought to finish off the experience in the happiest way.

If the hostess can manage to light her veranda and evenings are not too cool, her guests will enjoy cards there very much. Many small colored lanterns never lose their charm and their gleaming is a song of welcome. A big porch is a dispensation of providence to the hostess who is entertaining people who love to dance. Given a porch and a victrola they will take care of the evenings for themselves. In latitudes where it is cool an open wood fire warms the heart and soul of the average city dweller who must content himself to live without any such inspiration to conversation and story telling.

Julia Bottorby

Lace Cascades Good.
A clever and practical idea is to have a sort of underblouse made of shirred net, ornamented in front with a graceful cascade of lace ruffles. By the way, the lace cascade is returning to favor and is well in evidence upon some of the smartest frocks. With the tailored suit, the once so popular jabot attached to the chic high-standing collar shows marked signs of a "comeback," and it must be admitted, the style has a peculiar jaunty and well-arranged appearance when interpreted for the slender, long-necked, tailored American girl.

Supplement Irish Collar.
The day of the Irish lace collar alone in its glory has passed. If, however, you still have one and do not wish to give it away or discard it, dress it up, disguise it by surrounding it with another lighter lace or net filling very narrow, or some other effective method of dissimulating its old-fashioned quality.

Leghorn Hats.
It ought to be a picturesque summer, for "large leghorn hats, flower laden, are quite the thing for tea and afternoon affairs.

SWAMP-ROOT FOR KIDNEY AILMENTS

Naturally. "The color rose in her face." "Of course, it did. Its price went up with everything else; and there was the war tax added."

There is only one medicine that really stands out pre-eminent as a medicine for ailments of the kidneys, liver and bladder.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root stands the highest for the reason that it has proven to be just the remedy needed in thousands upon thousands of distressing cases. Swamp-Root makes friends quickly because its mild and immediate effect is soon realized in most cases. It is a gentle, healing vegetable compound.

Start treatment at once. Sold at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

COULDN'T LEAVE DEAR DADDY

Sweet Girl's Affection Must Have Been Very Comforting to the Old Gentleman, Yes!

The blushing girl leaned over her father's chair and put her arm around his neck.

"You dear old papa!" she cooed. "You've been very good to your little girl since her engagement."

"I'm always glad to make my sun-beam happy," murmured father fondly. "I want you to think sometimes of your foolish old father and remember that he did everything he could to make home pleasant for you before you left him in his lonely old age."

"Oh, you dear, sweet man! What would you say if I didn't leave you, after all?"

"Oh!" exclaimed the startled old man.

"How can I be so selfish after you have been so good to me, and done everything for me?" said the girl tenderly. "I don't care so very very much for George. I'm going to tell him it was all a mistake, and that he can find somebody else, for I'm always going to stay at home with you. . . . And then you can always give me nice things!"

GORDON JIFFY CUSHION SLIPS for the seats of Motor Cars

$3.40 to $8.15 Per Seat

Crisp, smart style—increased comfort—and permanent cleanliness for the seats of your car. All yours at small cost—with no waiting, no bother.

Gordon Jiffy Cushion Slips are removable. And washable. And distinctively good looking.

Ready at your dealers, for immediate use. Stock sizes to fit your car. You simply button-hole these crisply-clean, one-piece slips in place on special button-heads, like any simple garment. Then the oil, dust, and hidden dirt of upholstered seats are harmless. No danger of soiling the lightest, daintiest dresses—when the car seats are covered with Gordons.

Washable—On and Off in a "Jiffy"

When they are soiled it is but the work of a moment to remove them for washing. And because they are made of durable, pre-shrunk materials, you can drop them into the "family wash" or send them to the laundry without the slightest misgiving.

Two sets are a special convenience—and an inexpensive one as the price of these slips is only $3.40 to $8.15 Per Set.
