

DERIVATION OF THE WORD "WASHTENAW"

Name Our County Of Indian Origin; And Means "The Place of Washington."

Attempts to learn the derivation of the word "Washtenaw" has aroused much speculation and discussion in years past and it is not definitely known to this day just how the name originated. Back in the "70's" considerable interest developed regarding the matter and after extensive investigation it was generally agreed that the county was named after an old Indian called Washington who lived in this region years before the advent of the white man and that the word Washtenaw came from the Indian word Washtenong, which means "the place or residence of Washington."

Rev. S. G. Wright, who was a noted Indian linguist, was interested in the matter and in 1877 wrote the following opinion:

"I have no doubt now but I have the full sense of the word Washtenaw. The name came, no doubt, in this way: An Indian of the Pottawatomie tribe, who may have resided in early times as far east as Pittsburg, had a son whom he named 'Washington,' from the great general whom he may have seen or heard of. As the white settlements advanced that tribe was pushed westward and set-led in Michigan and the west of that State. This boy, now a man, settled on this river and called it after his name, or which may be more likely, it was so called by others, as that is common in the Indian country. Now the terminations, 'ong,' 'aug,' etc., always signify the place of a thing, etc., and so the place of living, or residence of this man, was called Washtenaw, Washtenong, etc. The river Washtenaw sebecy and the place would come to have the same name that Washington now has among these Indians, namely Washtenong, or the place of Washington.

Thus was perpetuated the name of a member of a vanishing race which once claimed this county and perhaps several adjoining counties as its own hunting ground.

He was united in marriage with Miss Mabel Casey at Alma, Kan., in 1893. The widow and four sons; Harold of Detroit, Gaylord, Raymond and Dean at home, are left to mourn their loss. Two brothers and two sisters; Charlie of Detroit; Bert, Mrs. Edward Hines and Mrs. John Hickman, of Ypsilanti, survive him also.

OUT INTO THE NIGHT.

Synopsis—Disappointed because of the seemingly barren outlook of his position as a school teacher in a Canadian town, John Harris determines to leave it, take up land in Manitoba and become a "homesteader." Mary, the girl whom he loves, declares she will accompany him. They are married and set out for the unknown country. They select a homestead, build a home and put in a crop. Returning from selling his first crop, Harris finds his wife almost insane from loneliness and with immediate expectation of becoming a mother. A son is born and they name him Allan. The story now jumps forward 25 years. Harris is prosperous and all for getting rich. Mary is ill-worn and saddened over the change in her husband. Allan works on the farm. Beulah, the pretty daughter, is rebellious at the school in farm life. Jim Travers is an unusual hired man and he is secretly in love with Beulah. Harris and Allan clash with Jim and he leaves.

Harris was accustomed to his daughter's frankness, and as a rule paid little regard to it. He was willing enough to be dazed, in moderation, by her keen tongue; in fact, he took a secret delight in her unrestrained sallies, but that was different from defiance.

"We'll talk about that some other time, too," he said. "And you'll milk the cows tonight as usual."

Beulah opened her lips as though to answer, but closed them again, arose, and walked out of the kitchen. For her the controversy was over; the die was cast. Her nature gnawed at any amount of dissipation up to a certain point, but when the irresistible force crashed into the immovable object she wanted no wind on words. With her war was won.

Harris finished his meal with little relish. His daughter was very, very much to him, and an open rupture with her was among the last things to be imagined. Still, she must learn that the liberty of speech he allowed her did not imply equal liberty of action.

His wife, too, had behaved most incredibly. After all, perhaps he had been hasty with Jim. No doubt he would meet the boy in Pithville or somewhere in the district before long, and he would then have a frank little talk with him. And he would say nothing more of the incident to his wife. He was beginning to feel almost amiable again when recollection of Beulah, and the regard which she was evidently cultivating toward Travers, engulfed his returning spirits like a cold douche. It must not come to that, whatever happened.

"You better go over to Grant's, Allan, if you're going," he said as he left the table. "I've some shears in charge that'll keep me busy until you get back."

An hour later Allan returned, accompanied by George Grant, and operations in the field were resumed. Father and son were both anxious to know there is such a question. He takes it for granted we're here to graft money. And then, there's the Grant. They know there is such a question, and I'm sure that to some extent they've answered it. You know, I like them, but I never go into their house that I don't feel out of place. I feel like they have something that I haven't—something that makes them very rich and shows me how very poor I am. And it's embarrassing to feel poor among rich folks. Why, tonight George Grant stopped on his way home to say a word to me, and what do you suppose he said? Nothing about the weather, or the neighbors, or the crops. He asked me what I thought of the Venezuelan treaty. Of course I'd never heard of such a thing, but I said I hoped it would be for the best, or something like that, but I was ashamed—so ashamed he might have seen it in the dusk. You see, they're living—and we're existing."

"Where's Beulah?" he demanded.

"I guess she's in her room."

Harris laid up his boot. Then he started upstairs.

"Don't be too hard on her, John," urged his wife, with a little catch in her voice.

"I won't be too hard on anybody," he replied curtly. "It's a strange thing you wouldn't see that she did as she was told. I suppose I have to plug away in the field until dark and then come in and do another half-day's work because my women folk are too lazy or stubborn to do it themselves."

If this outburst was intended to crush Mary Harris it had a very different effect. She seemed to straighten up under the attack; the color came back to her cheeks, and her eyes were bright and defiant.

"John Harris," she said. "You know better than to say that your women folk are either lazy or stubborn, but there's a point where imposition, even the imposition of a husband, has to stop, and you've reached that point. You didn't have to stay in the field until dark. There's another day coming and the plowing'll keep. It isn't like the harvest. It was just your own contrariness that kept you there. You fired the best man you ever had today, in a fit of temper, and now you're trying to take it out on us."

Harris looked at her for a moment; then, without speaking, he continued up the stairs. He felt that he was being very unfairly used, but he had no intention of shrinking from his duty as a husband and father, even if his discharge should bring pain to all of them.

He found Beulah in her room, astensively reading.

"Why are the cows not milked?" he demanded.

"I thought I made it clear to you at noon that they wouldn't be milked by me," she answered, "and there didn't seem to be anybody else bunkering for the job."

"Beulah," he said, trying to speak calmly, "don't you think this nonsense has gone far enough?"

"Too far," she agreed. "But you started it—let's see you stop it."

"Beulah," he said, with rising anger, "I won't allow you to talk to me like that. Remember I'm your father, and you've a right to do as you're told. Haven't I given you everything—given you a home, and all that, and are you going to defy me in my own house?"

"I don't want to defy you," she answered, "but if you're going to let your temper run away with you, you can put on the brakes yourself. And as for all you've done for me—maybe I'm ungrateful, but it doesn't look half so big from my side of the fence."

"Well, what more do you want?" he demanded.

"For one thing, I wouldn't mind having a father."

"What do you mean? Ain't I your father?"

"No," she cried. "Not Not! There's no father here. You're just the boss—the foreman on the farm. You board with mother and me. We see you at meal-times. We wouldn't see you then if you didn't have to make use of us in that way. If you have a spare hour you go to town. You're always so busy, busy, with your little things, that you have no time for big things. I'd like to see you think about living instead of working. And we're not living—not really living, you know—we're just existing. Don't you see what I mean? We're living all in the flesh, like an animal. When you feed the horses and put them under shelter you can't do anything more for them. But when you feed and shelter your daughter you have only half provided for her, and it's the other half, the starving half, that refuses to starve any longer."

"I'm not kickin' on religion, if that's what you mean, Beulah," he said. "You get going to church as often as you like, and—"

"Oh, it's not religion," she protested. "At least, it's not just going to church, and things like that, although I guess it is a more real religion. If we just understood. What are we here for, anyway? What's the answer?"

"Well, I'm here just now to tell you those cows are to be milked before—"

"Yes, dodge it! You've dodged that question so long you dare't face it. But there must be an answer somewhere, or there wouldn't be the question. There's Rites, now; he doesn't pointment. "You're talking a good deal of nonsense, Beulah," he said. "When you get older these questions won't worry you. In the meantime, your duty is to do as you're told. Right now that means milk the cows. I'll give you five minutes to get started."

Harris went to his room. A little later Beulah, with a light glook about her shoulders and a suitcase in her hand, slipped quietly down the front stairs and out into the night.

CHAPTER VII.

Crumbling Castles. At the foot of the garden Beulah paused irresolute, the suitcase swinging gently in her hand. She had made no plans for the decisive step events of the day had forced upon her, but the step itself she felt to be inevitable. She was not in love with Jim Travers; she had turned the whole question over in her mind that afternoon, weighing it with judicial impartiality, supposing all manner of situations to try out her own emotions, and she had come to the conclusion that Travers was merely an incident in her life, a somewhat inspiring incident, perhaps, but an incident none the less. The real thing—the vital matter which demanded some exceptional protest—was the narrow and ever narrowing horizon of her father, a horizon bounded only by material gain. Against this narrowing band of outlook her vigorous spirit, with its dumb, insistent stretchings for the infinite, rebelled. It was not a matter of ill will; it was not a matter of love; to her it was a matter of existence. She saw her ideal dimly enough at best, and she would burst every cord of affection and convention rather than allow them to be submerged in the gray, surrounding murk of materialism.

Perhaps it was custom and the subtle pullings of association that drew her feet down the path across the bench to the edge of the stream that gurgled gently in the still night. The stars blinked a strange challenge from the sky, as though to say, "Here is the tree of knowledge, if you dare to drink thereof."

At length she turned her back on the stream and took the path past the house and down to the corral, where she paused, her ear arrested by the steady drone of talking. A lantern sitting on the black earth cast a little circle of light and threw a deathly glow in dreadful silhouette against the barn. And by that dim light Beulah discerned the bent form of her mother milking.

Millions for a New Stomach

One of the greatest American millionaires said to his physician, "A million dollars, Doctor, spot cash and no grumbling, for a new stomach," and then the sick man groaned and turned away. All his wealth could not make him happy or contented, for happiness largely depends upon digestion. Without health where does happiness come in? After all the stomach plays a great part in everyday life. Without a healthy stomach and good digestion our blood is thin, watery and poor, our heart action is weak, our liver does not do its duty, and man is miserable and unhappy. Prevent disease by putting the house in order and strengthening the system against the germs of disease.

Dr. Pierce of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., years ago understood diseases and their prevention, and he discovered certain roots and herbs which were nature's remedies, and succeeded in putting them up in a form that could be easily procured at the drug store (liquid or tablets). This he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This Discovery gives no false stimulation because it contains no alcohol or any narcotic. It helps digestion and the assimilation of such elements in the food as are required for the blood. It gives to the blood the food elements the tissue require. For over fifty years it has enjoyed the confidence of the American public. Try it now!

Probably the worst mistake a man can make is to correct the mistakes of his friends.

Always Irritation, Soothes and Heals Throat and Lung Inflammation.

The constant irritation of a cough keeps the delicate membrane of the throat and lungs in a congested condition. Boschee's Syrup has been a favorite household remedy for colds, coughs, bronchitis and especially for lung troubles, in thousands of homes all over the world, for the last fifty-four years, giving the patient a good night's rest, free from coughing, with easy expectoration in the morning. What Really Happened

"Some of my children had a little trouble with the schoolmaster yesterday," related Gus Johnson of Rumpus Ridge.

"Did he whip 'em?" asked a neighbor.

"Nope, I reckon not. I didn't pay no particular attention to their chatter about it when they got home, but as nigh as I made out him and them had some words about something or another, and five or eight of 'em ganged him and pounded him considerable. 'Pears like they said they had more trouble with him than they generally do with a teacher."—Kansas City Star.

"I'm going to the dentist," said Maggie.

"Well, rather," said Maggie. "You won't find me sitting in the dark with no strange man."—Houston Post.

TREE HAS "CANDY" FLOWERS

Indian Product That Awaits the "Gingerbread House" of the Remembrance Fairy Tales.

We have all read the story of the "gingerbread house" in the fairy tales. Well, there is a family of trees in India that have "candy" flowers, or the next thing to it. These trees are known as the "Bassia" trees, and of the three important kinds, two have sugary flowers and the third is called the "Indian butter tree." The petals of the flowers are rich in sugar and drop from the tree in the early morning. They are picked up by the women and children and are spread out on mats to dry in the sun. A single tree will furnish 300 pounds of flowers in a year. When fresh, the flowers are very sweet and taste much like figs. They are eaten fresh or cooked with rice, shredded coconut, or flour. The seeds of the butter tree are full of oil, and this oil is used to make a kind of butter, and also for soap and candles.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

"How could men get better pay

New York reporter. "By asking for it, do you think?"

"I once knew a young bookkeeper who went to his boss and asked for a dollar raise. The boss flew into a terrible passion.

"But," faltered the bookkeeper, "there is nothing unreasonable, sir, in my request. Don't you remember promising me a raise after I'd been with you a year?"

"Yes," nodded the boss, "but don't you remember that I made this raise conditional on your giving me every satisfaction?"

"Oh, dear! Haven't I satisfied you, sir?" said the young bookkeeper, pitifully.

"Satisfied me?" yelled the boss, "do

But There Are Reasons Why British Monarch Does Not Exercise His Royal Prerogative.

If the king did all he might do without exceeding his royal prerogative the nation would be startled. He can veto a bill passed in both houses; he can dissolve and summon parliament; he can select or dismiss his ministers; he can declare war; he can make treaties and create peers; he can appoint bishops, governors and judges—and all "on his own." He could cede the duchy of Cornwall to a foreign power, disband the army and navy, and sell the dreadnaughts and naval stores. He could give every government official, from the highest to the lowest, the "push," could pardon all criminals, and could stop the whole machinery of government. But there is an unwritten law of common sense, fortified by long usage, which makes it unthinkable that the king should do these things; and in the last resort, which is never likely to occur, the king, being a constitutional monarch, reigns by the will of the people, and could be deposed by act of parliament.

THE WHITE MAN'S BURDEN

Wheat—Take Him Off and I Can Carry the Rest.

(By DR. F. E. KEMPTON, in charge of Barberry Eradication, United States Department of Agriculture.)

The white man has been referred to in speech and in verse as having one of the heavy burdens of life to bear. This burden, real or fancied, may be heavy, but to the world, it is no way compares with the accumulated burdens borne by the farmer in the production of the wheat crop upon which the world depends for its staff of life.

If the crop escapes bad weather—cold, ice, flood, hail, frost, drought, or hot winds—various insects may be lurking about to feed upon what remains. Plant diseases in the form of smuts, rusts, and scabs have taken varying toll during past years, but, as a rule, they have been less fully understood than the troubles from weather or insects. Among these diseases are the loose smut, stinking smut or bunt, the black-stem rust, the leaf rust, and the scab or blight. Of all these the black-stem rust has taken the heaviest toll in the northern states, from year to year, and in years of rust epidemics it has caused appalling losses.
Hope is now held out to the wheat growers of the northern part of the United States that the control of black-stem rust is possible by the eradication of common barberry.

It is important that everyone should understand that the harmful barberry is the tall green common European barberry and its purple variety, and may be distinguished by the following characteristics. Usually it is four to six feet tall, though it may reach ten or even fifteen feet if the bushes are old. The edges of the rather large leaves are toothed, the teeth ending in small spiny points. On the stems, at the base of each cluster of leaves, are three or more stout, sharp spines.
The light yellow flowers and red berries are borne in long clusters like currants. This bush, or any that resembles it closely, is harmful and should be destroyed.

Japanese Variety Harmless.
In contrast to this tall bush there is a low spreading barberry, known as Japanese barberry, which in some localities is more widely planted than the tall or common barberry. The Japanese barberry is seldom over three feet tall and has small leaves with entire edges. The spines on the stems

A twig of Japanese barberry, showing its smaller leaves with no teeth place, and the red berries singly or gooseberries. (Compare with the common barberry.)

are only one in a place. The flowers are borne singly or in twos. The berries are a dark red in color, borne singly or in twos, like gooseberries, and have a thicker skin than those of the common barberry. This barberry is harmless as it does not carry the stem rust and should not be destroyed.

If every property owner in the northwestern half-growing states of Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, South Dakota, Wisconsin and Wyoming co-operate, it will be possible to take this "Old Man of the Sea," black-stem rust, off the shoulders of the wheat grower. Every property should be carefully examined for the harmful barberry and all bushes found should be eradicated so that no seedlings should be allowed to grow near it or under trees or bushes, along fences or streams, in brushy pastures, or in any places where birds might carry the seeds. In this way you help to increase the prosperity of your community by increasing the production of wheat and other grains and threes, and the red berries in long pare with the Japanese barberry.) also help to supply more food for the whole world.

Further information may be obtained from the United States Department of Agriculture or your state agricultural college.

Wide Interest Shown in Work.
The wide interest taken in the work of eradication has been evidenced by the numerous requests received by the department during the past fiscal year for information material for use in the infested areas. Lack of funds has hampered somewhat the department's campaign against barberry. It was able, however, to supply a large number of posters, bulletins, circulars, and other matter for distribution.

A survey to locate barberries was begun in the larger cities because of the better means for spreading information. It was extended then to the towns, so that now nearly all cities and towns having a population of over 300 have been surveyed. An intensive survey of the entire rural area out side of the cities and towns has been begun. Already about 50 counties have been covered, the survey reaching every farmstead and brushy pastures and woodlands in the entire area. This means traveling every section line, many half section lines and scouting the woodlands for by road.

A very important part of this survey is finding the escaped barberries which have started from seeds dropped by birds in thickets and pastures. Over 1,674,000 escaped bushes were found during the past year. A total of almost 1,900,000 bushes was found in rural districts last year. Records to date show that 3,865,428 bushes have been located and 3,703,142 bushes removed.

BEST-GRADED PRODUCTS WIN

Standardization Establishes Common Language Between Buyer and Seller.

It has been demonstrated many times that in the markets of the world the seller with the best-graded products is the favorite, because graded goods are standard and the buyer knows what he will get when he buys. Standardization establishes a common language between the buyer in one country and the seller in another, which creates understanding and confidence and prevents disputes.

A national grading system usually provides for authorized national inspectors to pass upon the goods and then puts into effect a uniform standard and application of the grades established, whatever they may be, that cannot be maintained unless the system is nation wide in its scope.

100 Per Cent Better.

"My husband, seventy years old, for several years has been in very poor health. He had something like bronchial trouble, a bad cough and for the last year he just couldn't eat anything except light foods and had become so nervous he just couldn't rest at night. The last few months he had been confined to the house not able to get out," declared a lady whose name and address is given below.

"He had been treated by doctors and taken hundreds of dollars' worth of medicine and I am glad to say he found the right thing when he began taking Earle's Hypo-Cod. He had been taking Hypo-Cod for about five weeks and improved wonderfully; he goes out now, can sleep good and eats anything he wants and in every way he is 100% better. This tonic has done more for him than all the other treatments put together, including some electrical treatments he took. We can't praise Hypo-Cod too high," continued Mrs. John Gerson, 814 E. Third St., Flint, Mich.

Many people have found Earle's Hypo-Cod ideal according to their statements. It is so pleasant to taste and agrees so nicely with the weakest stomach that even children like it. There is nothing secret or magical about it. The formula is on every bottle. Read it at your druggist's to-

QUALITIES OF BRICK ROADS

Bureau of Public Roads Making Tests of Various Types of Pavements With Motor Trucks.

The bureau of public roads is making a study of the relative wearing qualities of different types of pavements and tests have been about completed on a short section of pavement containing 49 different types subjected to the wear of a special truck equipped with five large cast-iron disklike wheels. The relative wearing qualities of hard as compared with soft brick are brought out very distinctly in this test. The resistance to wear of various kinds of stone block sections is also shown up to good advantage.

Vitrified Brick Used for Paving Roads.

A chance to compare grout and asphalt fillers for both brick and stone block is furnished by this investigation. Likewise the relative wearing qualities of concrete when mixed with various kinds of coarse aggregates is indicated.

The investigation of subgrade materials, started a few months ago with the co-operation of the district engineers and state engineers, is proceeding at a very satisfactory rate.
A number of samples have been received from various parts of the country and laboratory analyses of many of these samples are partially completed. The methods being used by the division of tests will shortly be published as a paper so that any other laboratories wishing to conduct similar investigations may have some guide as to the method of procedure being followed by the bureau of public roads.

The samples analyzed have been taken from parts of the roads that have failed very badly as well as from adjacent parts of the same roads that have withstood heavy traffic successfully. It is hoped that by a comparison of the laboratory results on these samples with the reported behavior of the road in service differences in the subgrade materials will become apparent so that we will be able to say what physical characteristics soils must possess to give them high bearing value.

BENEFITS FROM ROAD DRAGS

Projections Are Scraped Off Roadway and Low Places Filled in, Thus Turning Water.

The graded road can be kept in the best condition with the least labor by using the road drag. The road drag scrapes off the projections and fills up the low places, thus leaving no places for water to stand, which is what causes the road bed to soften and be cut into ruts. A persistent use of the road drag will keep the road bed well crowned, smooth and hard, and this will also result to the least dust, as the dust comes largely from the grinding up of the ruts and rough places left by the horses' feet.— Extension Division, North Dakota Agricultural College.

PROPER LOCATION FOR ROAD

Among Other Things Consider Easy Grades, Good Drainage and Elimination of Culverts.

Some of the things to be considered in locating a road are easy grades, good drainage, exposure to sunshine, elimination of culverts and bridges by avoiding unnecessary creek crossings, directness and the number of farms to be served for a given length of road.
Whenever possible to avoid it, a good location should not be rejected merely because a certain roadway has been in use for some time. If the location of a used road is bad it should be changed if possible. In relocating roads avoid railroad crossings at grade.

Increase in Kansas Roads.

There will be a great increase in the number of hard surfaced roads in Kansas in the next three years.

Roads Must Be Rebuilt.

The roads of a few years ago, that were thought to be sufficient to meet the traffic requirements, today with our modern system of transportation are giving away and must be rebuilt.

Doctor Has Better Chance.

The doctor has a better chance to save lives if good roads shorten the distance from office to farm.

First Use of Asphalt.

Asphalt was first used in Paris as a road material 50 years ago.
