

TOWER AND AIR GATES

Michigan Central is installing new safety devices on N. Main St.

The Michigan Central railroad is having new crossing gates, which will be operated by air pressure, installed at the North Main street crossing, replacing the old gates which are operated by a system of cables and pulleys. A new house for the crossing tender is being erected also.

Watchman's "Shanty" Elevated.

The new house will be elevated on an eighteen foot tower which will give the gate-tender an uninterrupted view of trains approaching from the west. Heretofore, the gate-tenders were frequently obliged to stand out on the main-line tracks in order to see trains pulling into the west yards, the view from the "shanty" being cut off by trains or cars standing on sidings, just west of Main street.

The new gates will be operated by air pressure from a pump located in the elevated "shanty." In past years the crossing gates were frequently out of order during the season of repeated thaws and freezes as the conductors through which the cables operated would fill with water and then freeze up.

With favorable weather to facilitate the construction work, the new gates and tower will be in use in about two weeks.

- Folk Songs: Low Backed Car, Irish; Annie Laurie, Scotch; America For Me.

Earl B. Ritchie, organist, will play several numbers, also. An offering will be taken.

HYPO-COD PUT HIM BACK ON HIS FEET

Coughed So Much Nights He Couldn't Rest—His Health Failing Fast.

TOOK HYPO-COD AND TROUBLES STOPPED

"I had bronchial trouble for a long time. It kept getting worse and I coughed and coughed until my whole system was a wreck in sympathy with it. I coughed most all night and it would keep me awake and restless and I honestly was feeling so bad I took medicine and more medicine. Seemed like nothing helped me though, and I kept getting worse until along came Earle's Hypo-Cod and ended all my troubles like magic.

"I had even lost my appetite when I got hold of Hypo-Cod, but right away I began to improve. Pretty soon that old cough that had stuck to me for ages began to get better. Then I began wanting to eat my head off at meal times, and now since taking two bottles I am not troubled at all with my throat and the old cough has gone. I feel as good as I ever did and I can say Earle's Hypo-Cod is certainly wonderful medicine and am glad to recommend such a tonic to all my friends."

Declared Mr. I. S. McEluff, of Detroit, Mich., living at 1304 Zimish St.

Thousands suffer as Mr. Duffy did. Cough, catarrhal troubles, clogged up head, throat and nose. Bad breath possibly, and as a rule people so troubled have indigestion or other stomach troubles.

Thousands have used Earle's Hypo-Cod and found it an ideal tonic. Drug gists, chemists and experts assert it is the most powerful tonic of its kind made.

Earle's Hypo-Cod is sold here by all druggists and the leading druggists in all nearby towns. Adv.

Definition of a Friend.

Some one defined a friend as "one who is truer to me than I am to myself." We are not always true to ourselves, and one of the highest offices of friendship is to hold the life true to its best. The love that does not make us long to be better and stronger for its sake, and in gratitude for its possession, is not the highest type of love.

50 Years Ago

A young man who practiced medicine in a rural district became famous and was called in consultation in many towns and cities because of his success in the treatment of disease. This was Dr. Pierce who afterward moved to Buffalo, N. Y. He made up his mind to place some of his medicines before the public, and he put up what he called his "Favorite Prescription," and placed it with the druggists in every state in the Union. For fifty years Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has sold more largely throughout the United States than any other medicine of like character. It's the testimony of thousands of women that it has benefited or entirely eradicated such distressing ailments as women are prone to. It is now sold by druggists in tablet form as well as liquid.

WATERBURY, Wis.—"About eighteen years ago I was ill, doctor's medicine did not seem to give me the relief I thought I should have. I began taking Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it cured me in a short space of time. I have never had any return of my ailment."—Miss MINNIE WESSLOFF, 720 Pleasant Street.

PASSES ON LEGAL MATTERS

Robert A. Adams, Judge Advocate, Rose From Rank of Private to That of Major.

Robert A. Adams, recently appointed national judge advocate of the American Legion by the national executive committee, rose from the rank of a private in the Eighty-fourth division at Camp Taylor during his army career.

When Legion officials at National headquarters at Indianapolis decided early in January that it was necessary to enlist the services of a legal advisor to thrash out the knotty problems of eligibility, interpretation of statutes affecting the Legion and other legal matters, Mr. Adams was appointed to fill the position.

Mr. Adams has practiced law since 1916 and is associated with a prominent Indianapolis law firm. He is a graduate of Washington and Jefferson colleges, and also attended Harvard law school. He is twenty-nine years old. The duties of the office consist in the supervision of the legal department of the Legion, the employment of counsel in law suits in which the Legion is involved, interpretation of legal questions, and the adjustment of questions of eligibility.

TO BUILD WOMEN'S AUXILIARY

Legion Administrative Machinery to Be Used in Safely Launching the Branch Organization.

Assurance that the administrative machinery of the American Legion will be used without stint in an effort to build up the Women's auxiliary, has been given by National Commander F. W. Galbraith, Jr. It is expected that the auxiliary will take charge of its own destinies next spring, with the holding of the first national convention of the women's units.

"All doubts and misgivings in regard to the future of the Women's auxiliary of the American Legion were removed, and a system of orderly expansion in state departments and a national organization was provided for by the Cleveland convention," announced Mr. Galbraith.

"We propose to offer the aid of our organization in building up the auxiliary, but we are not going to meddle with its policies so long as our recognized ideals and purposes are carried out. The Cleveland convention voted to let the women swim without water wings. It authorized state executive committees of the Legion to call state conventions and to establish department organizations of the auxiliary, killing the rule which made necessary the establishment of a total of units equivalent to 50 per cent of the number of posts in the department."

AIDED IN GROWTH OF LEGION

Rev. John W. Inzer, National Chaplain, Long Identified With Activities of Veterans' Organization.

As national chaplain for the American Legion he has in Rev. John W. Inzer, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Chattanooga, Tenn., a man identified with the activities of the veterans' organization since its inception.

He volunteered his services as chaplain in the army after the war broke out and served with the Kentucky infantry in the Northwest and at Camp Dodge, Iowa, where he was senior chaplain for three months. After the armistice he served in Camp Grant, Ill., where he moved with March, 1919. He married Miss Marie Smith of Alabama in December, 1918.

IS NEW ASSISTANT ADJUTANT

Russell G. Crevelton, Who Has Seen Much Active Service, Is Appointed to Important Position.

Russell G. Crevelton, who has been appointed assistant national adjutant of the American Legion by F. W. Galbraith, Jr., national commander, was director of organization at national headquarters from November, 1918, to October, 1920.

A booster by birth, Mr. Crevelton enlisted in May, 1917, in company E of the Fourth Indiana infantry. He served as a private in this company for three months when he was selected as a candidate for his company to the second officers' training camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana.

After his graduation from the camp he was given complete charge of the administration co-ordination section of the general staff of the eighty-fourth division.

Mr. Crevelton assisted in the organization of a vocational training system, and in this connection was transferred to the inspector's division and given charge of the states of Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, North and South Dakota, where he established various student army training corps.

After the completion of the S. A. T. C. movement, Mr. Crevelton was transferred to the general staff and put in charge of the ninth district commission on training camp activities. With the rank of captain he covered nine states of the Middle West in the interest of bettering camp and non-camp cities during the demobilization period. He was discharged June 7, 1919, and accepted a position in the Community Service, Inc. of New York, which loans his services to the American Legion.

POST WITH ALTITUDE RECORD

"Top of the World" Organization of Peru at Height of More Than 14,500 Feet.

The "Top of the World" post, claiming to be the highest in the American Legion, and the first and only unit thus far established in Peru, has been founded by 16 ex-service men in a copper mining camp at Cerro de Pasco, and the altitude record it has set up for other posts to shoot at is 14,500 feet.

"So far as we can determine," writes Clyde A. Warrin, the post adjutant, "this is the only post in Peru, and certainly in this district of Peru, known as the Junin Pampa. By location and transportation facilities, Cerro de Pasco is the logical meeting place for ex-service men in other camps in the central Peru mountain district. It is the largest camp and town in the district including Araya, Morochuca, La Piedad and Casapalca.

The name "Top of the World," was unanimously selected as an excellent name for the post, due to the fact that we are at an altitude of a little more than 14,500 feet and we believe we are the highest post in the Legion."

The post is planning to conduct a membership drive in the surrounding territory.

Stand of Colors Presented. A stand of colors has been presented to Aaron Whitkamp, Camp Post of the American Legion, Fort Lee, N. J., by the people of the town ship. Although it has but a tentative ship of 28, the post is full of activity, and is about to make a drive for a $2,000 bond.

Help That Bad Back!

Why be miserable with a "bad back"? It's time you found out what is wrong! Kidney weakness often causes such suffering from backache, lameness, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness and kidney irregularities. Neglected, it may lead to dropsy, gravel or Bright's disease, but if taken in time it is usually easily corrected by using Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's have helped thousands.

GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER

The Remedy With a Record of Fifty-four Years of Surpassing Excellence.

Those who suffer from nervous dyspepsia, constipation, indigestion, torpid liver, dizziness, headache, coming up of food, wind on stomach, palpitation and other indications of fermentation and indigestion will find Green's August Flower a most effective and efficient assistant in the restoration of nature's functions and a return to health and happiness. There could be no better testimony of the value of this remedy for these troubles than the fact that its use for the last fifty-four years has extended into many thousands of households all over the civilized world and no indication of any failure has been obtained in all that time where medicine could effect relief. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

In the Crowd. "What are you making such a fuss about? I thought you were a good loser."

"I am, as far as an election is concerned," answered the excited citizen. "What I am concerned about is the loss of a perfectly good two-dollar watch."

Extremes. "Run downstairs, sis, and get me some sweets." "I will as soon as I have taken my bitters."

A New Log Saw

Cuts Faster, Costs Less, Makes More Money for Users and Works While You Rest.

A new improved power log saw, now being offered, outdoes all other log saws in cutting wood quickly and at little cost. A new 4-cylinder, high power motor equipped with Oscillating Magneto—no batteries to fail you—makes the saw bite through logs faster than other log saws. It finishes its cut and is ready for another before the ordinary saw is well started. This log saw—the Ottawa—has a specially designed friction clutch, controlled by a lever, which starts and stops the saw without stopping the engine. Others have imitated, but no other power log saw has this improvement just like the Ottawa. The Ottawa Log Saw sells for less money than any power saw of anything like its size.

The Improved Model, 4-1/2 P. Ottawa Log Saw. One man whisks this outfit from cut to cut and log to log like a barrow. Separate attachments cut down trees and cut up branches. Extra power lets the engine do heavy work of all kinds. Owners of the Ottawa Log Saw laugh at coal shortages and are making big money with ease. The machine doing the work, 35 to 50 cords cut any day, rainy or dry, by one man, are normal figures. And wood is approaching $20 a cord! The Ottawa is compact, simple and durable. It sells for cash or easy payments and is guaranteed. If you have wood to cut the Ottawa Log Saw will be the most satisfactory machine you've ever owned. We suggest that you write the Ottawa Mfg. Co., 2724 Wood St., Ottawa, Kan., for their complete new illustrated book and prices, sent free to all readers of this paper.

Advertisement for Christmas Journey. Text: "A True Story for Grown-Ups by Mary Graham Bonner". Includes illustration of a woman.

HE had no children. At Christmas time she especially seemed to feel the need of them. It seemed as though every time she turned around she should see a daughter or a son or a small chubby child of her own—one of those she had dreamed of and who had never stepped outside of her dreams.

Yes! She, Gertrude Harding, was a "born mother" to whom no children had been born.

But this year she had forgotten something most important to be done. And it was only several days before Christmas.

She went down town, made her purchase after quite a delay and left the shop.

Outside were three small children, their faces close against the window pane, their eyes gleaming, their small blood bodies tense and quivering with emotion.

"Aw, gee, look at it stop at the stations! There, she's off the track now! No, she ain't. She's back on again."

The second child was reading a sign. "They says that in this here shop 'trot it's the land where the dreams of children come true. D'ye suppose they's kiddin'?"

The third child, a little girl, who was clutching what once had been a doll was looking at one in the shop's window.

"If I could jes' touch her hair," she sighed.

"Would you like to go inside the shop?" Gertrude Harding asked the children.

They looked at her abruptly. "D'yn mean it?"

And through the shop, straight to the children's department she took them.

It was a revelation to her to realize the joy that was derived by these children from the intimate contact with toys they knew they could never own.

They had gone inside one of the big shops and had been treated as well as anybody; they had not been afraid. They had looked to their heart's content.

"It's true—what they's said," the children agreed afterward, "in there it is the land all right, where children's dreams come true." For the reality of Fairyland had been expressed by the marvelous and magical toys and games and gay decorations of the Christmas shop.

If Gertrude Harding told herself afterward, these children had so loved a trip into the gayety of a children's shop, were there not others who would like to journey forth into the world of toys, too?

She thought it over. And did not stop there. She ran up a certain number and asked for the matron.

"You're the matron of the Children's hospital, aren't you? Well, I wondered if any of your children would care to go with me tomorrow and take a trip through the children's toy shops? They're most attractively fixed up this year and some of them have special attractions, a Santa Claus and many other wondrous features!"

So Gertrude Harding called for the children. There were 15 who were able to go and of that 15 the majority were motherless.

Such an afternoon as Gertrude Harding had. And such an afternoon as the children had.

Those in the shops seemed especially anxious to do what they could for the children who were so obviously from a home or hospital. The mechanical toys even seemed to put more spirit into their performances Gertrude Harding thought.

As they were coming home several little hands found their way into both of Gertrude Harding's hands. One clutched a little finger, another had hold of her thumb; so it went.

"Mrs., one of them ventured, 'let's pretend we're all children from a kindergarten and that you're our teacher. Don't let's pretend we're from a hospital, eh?'"

"Yes, let's pretend that," she answered them. "Or how would it do to pretend that I was your mother and that you were all my children?"

"Would you—honest—would you pretend that?" one asked and the others looked at her eagerly, hoping, hoping, hoping she would not refuse.

"That would be the best 'pretend' of all," she smiled at them. So they "pretended" and so they went back very happily from their Christmas shopping trip.

nothing of. They must just let us go along and share our secret together, eh?"

And then the clown beat upon his drum and the children all marched stately behind.

When a magnificent Santa Claus asked the children to sing with him and the voices of the hospital children sang out with the rest Gertrude Harding felt herself swelling with pride.

Later when Santa Claus perceived that one of the hospital children had an unusually lovely voice he asked him to sing alone.

And there in the shop he sang, sang with the thrill of happiness that a child sings with when first he feels the warmth and sweet fragrance of the spring.

He had never been asked to sing before like this—in a big shop where people were and where people listened to him, not because he was being visited in a hospital and must do his part to entertain the visitors, but because somehow or other they liked his voice.

It rang out true and strong. He shifted the crutch which he had never been without to the end of his days, and then he was asked to sing an encore.

His face was flushed with the pleasure of doing something which was liked in this big outside world.

He looked at Santa Claus and beamed.

He had already sung a popular song which he had learned from the squeaking talking machine which someone had given the hospital when it was no longer fit for the home, and now he thought he would sing something better. Somehow he felt it would be proper, and vaguely perhaps he felt it would show a gratitude for Christmas that went deeper. Dimly he thought these things.

Someone had taught them a hymn in the hospital, a hymn which he had always loved. It made one feel better, stronger, happier somehow. It was a very glorious hymn he had always thought.

And he sang:

"It came upon the midnight clear, That glorious song of old From angels bending near the earth To touch their harps of gold. Peace on the earth, good will to men, From heaven's all-gracious king: The world in solemn stillness lay To hear the angels sing."

Right to the end of the hymn he sang and the people thanked him and Santa Claus told him it had been lovely and gave him a man-like clap on the back.

Gertrude Harding had felt a lump in her throat and had smiled with eyes that were misty.

So the angels did bend near the earth—even in these days—and even over hospitals where crippled and ill children were. It was the humans, not the angels, who forgot and who went through life not thinking!

Back to the hospital she took the children late, late that afternoon. The hospital was in semi-darkness. Children who had been too recently operated upon or who could not leave their beds sat up as best they could to hear of the news of the outside world.

Little white-clad figures listened to the glowing accounts brought to them of the great life which went on beyond the ward.

And for every little child who had to stay in the hospital, Gertrude Harding had brought a small present, only a trifling one, but a remembrance from the great world.

Then the hospital rules which had been lifted for a few minutes after the ones who had been out so late had come back, were in order again, and there was stience in the ward, and soon there would come sleep.

When she got home that evening, tired but very, very happy, she said to herself:

"There are born mothers, yes! And there are born children, too! Children who need to be loved as much as women who need children to love. And though there is a difference between those of one's very own, and those who are not, it seems as though no one who is a 'born mother' should go through life, walking blindly by the many motherless children.

"For every childless mother there is a motherless child to whom one can give some of the love and interest and the pride which would otherwise go to waste."

In her sleep she seemed to hear the Christmas carol which the hospital had heard sung and she knew what had been recalled to her—

She had traveled into the land of children at Christmas time and had smiled the smile that can be sufficed when one gets a look at the heart of a child!

"We know what fun all this is, don't we? We're in the secret of the fun that children can have at Christmas time that the grown-ups know

A LETTER FOR WOMEN

From a Woman Whose Serious Illness Was Overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Garnett, Kas.—"I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a complete nervous breakdown following the birth of my oldest child. I got up too soon which caused serious female trouble. I was so weak that I was not able to be on my feet but very little and could not do my housework at all. I had a bad pain in my left side and it would pain terribly if I stepped off a curb-stone. One day one of your booklets was thrown in the grate and I read every word in it. There were so many who had been helped by your medicine that I wanted to try it and my husband went to town and got me a bottle. It seemed as though I felt relief after the second dose, so I kept on until I had taken five bottles and by that time I was as well as I could wish. About a year later I gave birth to a ten pound boy, and have had two more children since and my health has been fine. If I ever have trouble of any kind I am going to take your medicine for my good health. I always recommend your medicine whenever I can."—Mrs. EVA E. SHAY, Garnett, Kansas.

"I'LL STOP HIM!"

Synopsis.—Disillusioned because of the seemingly barren outlook of his position as a school teacher in a Canadian town, John Harris determines to leave it, take up land in Manitoba and become a "homesteader." Mary, the girl whom he loves, declares she will accompany him. They are married and set out for the unknown country. They select a homestead, build a home and begin their life work of making the prairie fertile farm land. Returning from selling his first crop, Harris finds his wife despondent almost to insanity from loneliness and with the immediate expectation of becoming a mother. A son is born to them, to whom they give the name of Allan. The story now jumps forward twenty-five years. Harris is prosperous and all for getting rich. Mary is still worn and saddened over the change in her husband. Allan works with his father, Beulah, the pretty daughter, is rebellious at the school in farm life. Jim Traverser is an unusual hired man. And he is secretly in love with Beulah. Harris and his son clash with Jim and he leaves. Beulah quarrels with her father and prepares to leave home secretly.

"Mother, this is too much!" the girl exclaimed. Her mother started and looked up. "You're leaving us, Beulah?" she asked. There was no reproach in her voice, nor even surprise, but a kind of quiet sorrow. "I couldn't let the poor brutes suffer," she explained. "Yes, I'm leaving," said Beulah. "I can't stand it any longer." The mother sighed. "I've seen it coming for some time," she said, at length. "I suppose it can't be helped." "You're so passive," returned the girl, with a touch of impatience. "You make me want to fight. Of course it can be helped, but it can't be helped by always giving in."

"Your father has met one of his own mettle at last," said the mother, and the girl fancied she detected a note of pride, but whether of father, or daughter, or both, she could only guess. "Well, it's all very sad. Your father is a good man, Beulah. . . I should send you back to your bed, but somehow I can't. I—I don't blame you, Beulah."

"Stay till morning, Beulah. Your father may be disposed to give and take a little then, and you'll do the same, won't you? . . . Oh, my girl, don't break up our home like this!"

"You can't break up what you haven't got. Aside from you, why should I call this place home? I work here, and get my board and clothes. Well, I can work other places, and get my board and clothes. If I've got to be a cog in a money-making machine, I will at least choose the machine."

"What plans have you made? Where are you going?"

"Haven't made any plans, and don't know where I'm going. But I'm going. At present that's enough. The plans will come along as they're needed."

upstairs John Harris was awakened by the whine of the cream separator. A quiet smile stole across his strong, still handsome face. "Beulah has decided to be sensible," he whispered to himself.

In the morning the Harris household was astir early as usual. The father and his son gave their attention to the horses while Mary prepared breakfast, and it was not until they were seated at the table that Harris noticed his daughter's absence. "Where's Beulah?" he demanded. "I don't know," his wife replied. "Ain't she up yet?" "I don't know."

Harris rose from the table and went upstairs. He entered his daughter's room without knocking. The bed had not been slept in, and a strange apprehension suddenly tightened about his chest. He returned quickly to the kitchen.

"Mary, I want to know where Beulah is."

"I can't tell you where she is, John. She left here last night."

"Left here? Do you mean that she has run away?"

"Not just that, perhaps, but she has gone, and I'm not looking for her back for a while." The mother's voice was dry, and she talked in the restraint of subdued emotion.

"And you're not the man you once were, John," she answered. "Oh, can't you see that we're just reaping what has been sown—the crop we've been raising through all these years? Beulah's very life has been crying out for action, for scope, for room, for something that would give her a reason for existence, that would put a purpose into her life, and we've not tried to answer that cry. I blame myself as much as you, John, perhaps more, because I should have read her heart—I should have seen the danger signals long ago. But I was so busy. I didn't think. That's the trouble, John, we've been so busy, both of us, we haven't taken time to keep up with her. We've gathered some property together, and our cares have grown in proportion, but that which was more to us than all the property in the world we have lost—because we valued it less." The tears were slowly coursing down her cheeks, and her thin, work-worn arms were stealing about his neck. "Don't think, dear," she whispered, "that I'm indifferent, or that this hurts me less than you, or that I would shield myself from one lot of my just blame, but let us face the fact that it has been our mistake rather than Beulah's."

"Now, John," She Pleaded, "Don't Be Rash."

ent and wear, and a little money to spend from time to time, and no questions asked? What more could a man do than that? Already his heart was crying out for his daughter—the cry of broken strings which never knew their strength until they broke. And, lest gentleness should be mistaken for weakness, he clothed his real feelings in sharp words to his wife.

"Of course, you must take her part. I suppose you advised her to go. It was an awful thing for me to tell her she must do her work, but a small thing for her to run away. Well, I hope she likes it. If she thinks I'm going to hitch up a buggy and go chasing around the neighborhood, begging her to come back, she's mistaken. She's gone of her own free will, and she can come back of the same, or not at all."

"I wouldn't look for her back too soon," remarked Allan. "Looks to me as though this thing had all been figured out ahead. Jim went yesterday morning; Beulah goes last night. Just a chance if they ain't married by this time."

ing to his wrists, half for protection, half in supplication. "Now, John," she pleaded, "don't be rash. You don't know that Beulah's gone with Jim, and you haven't a word of proof of it."

"Proof! What more proof do I want? When did ever Beulah carry on like this before? Didn't she always do as she was told? And haven't they been thick as molasses this while-back? Wasn't it over wasting time with her that Jim got fired, and not a word of admission of the real facts from him? What more do you want than that? You thought I wouldn't be interested in that, either."

"I didn't know it," she protested, "and I don't believe it. I don't believe either Beulah or Jim had any such thought in their head. But even if they did, Jim Traverser is as decent a young man as there is in Plainville district, and you've nothing to be ashamed of except your own temper, that drove them away in the way they went."

"I won't listen to that kind of talk from you any longer," said Harris sternly. "I'll chase the young reptiles to earth, if it takes all summer. And unless you can clear yourself of being mixed up in this—well, there'll be something to settle on that score, too. Hitch up the drivers, Allan, and be quick about it."

"You're not going to leave your plowing, are you?" asked his wife. The words spring to her lips without any misgiving. It was such an unusual thing for her husband, on any account, to leave the farm work unfinished. The practice on the Harris homestead was work first, all other considerations second.

"That's enough of your sarcasm," he snapped. "I would think when our name is threatened with a disgrace like this you'd be as anxious to defend it as I am. How is it you go back on me in a moment like this? You're not the woman you once were, Mary."

"And you're not the man you once were, John," she answered. "Oh, can't you see that we're just reaping what has been sown—the crop we've been raising through all these years? Beulah's very life has been crying out for action, for scope, for room, for something that would give her a reason for existence, that would put a purpose into her life, and we've not tried to answer that cry. I blame myself as much as you, John, perhaps more, because I should have read her heart—I should have seen the danger signals long ago. But I was so busy. I didn't think. That's the trouble, John, we've been so busy, both of us, we haven't taken time to keep up with her. We've gathered some property together, and our cares have grown in proportion, but that which was more to us than all the property in the world we have lost—because we valued it less." The tears were slowly coursing down her cheeks, and her thin, work-worn arms were stealing about his neck. "Don't think, dear," she whispered, "that I'm indifferent, or that this hurts me less than you, or that I would shield myself from one lot of my just blame, but let us face the fact that it has been our mistake rather than Beulah's."

"I never thought it would come to this," he said. "I thought I humored her every way I could. As for our hard work—well, work makes money, and I noticed Beulah could spend her share."

"You don't understand, John. It wasn't the work. It was the making a god of work, and giving it so much of our lives that there was none left for her. That's why she looked somewhere else—if she has looked somewhere else."

"Allan works as hard and harder than ever Beulah did," and Allan doesn't feel that way about it."

"That's true," she admitted, "but Allan's ambition is work. He works and is satisfied, but Beulah thinks, and is not satisfied. It's the difference in their nature, and we didn't take it into consideration." In every phrase she tried to link his blame with hers, that the burden might unite instead of separate them.

"If she'd thought a little more before this mad prank it would have been better for everybody," he said. "Well, she'll have plenty of time to think yet." He stepped to the kitchen door, and from the hall above took down the repeating rifle.

"You're not going to take that!" she cried. "Don't take that, John. It can't possibly do any good, and it may do a lot of harm."

"I won't do anything foolish," he answered, "but I'll take it along, just the same."

Allan, with the drivers harnessed to the top buggy, was now at the door. Without saying good-by to his wife Harris joined him, and the two set off on their search. Almost at the gate they met George Grand, who had come over to haul water for another day's plowing. He stepped in some surprise at the turnout.

"I guess we won't be plowing to-day," said Harris. He hesitated before George's questioning look, and a certain sense of family shame came upon him. But it was evident that he could hardly search for Beulah without mentioning her departure, and he might as well make a clean breast of the affair.

"My Dear Mother: Here I am in the shadow of the Rockies." (TO BE CONTINUED.) Literally. "Do you think the wrestler we saw practicing will win the contest?" "Well, to see a fighting chance."

Disapproval Resented. She was two years old, and could feed herself, but being an imperious child she preferred to have her father feed her. Her father used a soup spoon, but the child did very nicely. When she had swallowed its contents her father looked at her open mouth, plainly showing that he was amazed at her capacity. This apparently annoyed his daughter, because she pushed him away, saying, "Stop it, you crazy thing."
