GIVE RURAL CHILD

FAIR CHANCE—PLEA

"Give the rural child the same chance as the child of the ghetto." This is one of the pleas Dr. R. M. Olin, Michigan commissioner of health, will make before the convening legislature in an endeavor to have a bill passed providing full-time, qualified health officers for every county in the state, thus replacing the 1,600 township health officers now in existence.

"We can prove," asserts Dr. Olin, "that counties having full-time, efficient health officers have much less sickness than counties functioning under the part-time, township health officer system. In many cases the money paid the part-time officers would provide for a full-time medical officer."

"The country child at present is not receiving the same protection against disease as is the child of the city. This factor, together with the rural child's higher susceptibility to disease of all kinds—since he does not have the constant contact with diseases that enables his urban cousin to build up immunity—accounts for the high sickness rate now found in rural communities."

"Through a survey of the state's infant death rate conducted last summer it was learned that many Michigan counties have a higher number of infant deaths per thousand births than do the larger cities of the state. Cities have cut down their former high death rates by supervision of the public health, instruction in prenatal care, ordinances requiring pasteurization of milk, and by furnishing safe drinking water."

"Installation of full-time county health officers will do much to make the year 1921, and those following, healthier for the entire population of Michigan, since statistics prove that wherever sickness is cut down in one locality—as it would be in rural districts—surrounding communities also benefit from the work."

PET STOCK AND POULTRY

SHOW JANUARY 10-12

Rules governing the Pet Stock and Poultry show to be held in Ann Arbor January 10-12 will be read with interest by the many preparing their fowls and pets for exhibition. The Premium List prepared for the show is out with full instructions and with a tempting list of special premiums offered by merchants and other business men of the county.

One of the rules to be borne in mind by would-be exhibitors is that entries close at 9 p. m. January 8. Letters bearing postmark of date will be accepted.

The school of instruction for poultry raisers given by E. C. Foreman, poultry specialist of Guelph, Ontario, formerly with the Michigan Agricultural college, will be in the same building as the show and will be held on the afternoon and evening of Thursday and Friday, January 13-14.

BUSINESS MEN URGED

TO ADVERTISE MORE

New York.—Advertising should be maintained and not cut at this time, when many manufacturers are seriously overstocked, Stanley L. Cunnison, director, Brooklyn chamber of commerce, writes in the current issue of the Chamber bulletin.

"We have come to a very critical period in the growth and even existence of many business houses," he says. "Decisions made today will be determining factors in the success or failure of the years to come."

"The greatest and most successful concerns have always been the most consistent advertisers. Mindful of the lessons of the past, they safeguard the present and anticipate the future."

SLEIGH MUST TRACK AS WHEEL

VEHICLES SAYS LAW OF STATE

Under a law which went into effect in August, 1919, and which will be of interest to practically every farmer and many city people, anyone using a sleigh must see that it "tracks" the same as a wheel vehicle. The law is designed to help keep the highways of the state open to all kinds of traffic. Heretofore sleigh runners have made a track of their own which wheeled vehicles could not follow. However, all sleighs owned in the state prior to the time the act went into effect are exempted from its provisions.

MRS. FRANK SHAMP

Hannah, one of a family of nine children born to William and Christine Faber, was born in Manchester in 1882 and died in Mt. Clemens Sunday, January 2, aged 43 years. Her early life was spent in Manchester, Jackson and Detroit. She was united in marriage to Frank Shamp, of Detroit, in 1908, in which city they resided until about four years ago when they removed to Mt. Clemens, in which city she passed away.

She leaves to mourn their loss, her husband, father, one brother, John Faber of Chelsea, three step-brothers and many other relatives and friends.

The funeral was held from the home of her brother John, on North Main street, Wednesday afternoon at 1:50 o'clock, conducted by Rev. H. R. Beatty, with interment in Oak Grove cemetery.

OVERLAND TRIP

TO CALIFORNIA

Memories, Observations and Deductions of a Modern Juggernaut.

To go from Chelsea to Trinidad, Colorado, is just like pie but to go from Trinidad to Needles, California, is like going to —. Use your own best judgment and imagination in filling out this blank. It is approximately 1500 miles and this distance, although a considerable part of it is dirt road, can be covered without any difficulty aside from the vagaries of the weather. If it rains it is best to lay up somewhere and get acquainted with the rich widows and heiresses until the mud dries up as you will get along just as fast by waiting until the roads are dry as to try to plow through and you will be less liable to ruin your disposition which is something you want to conserve on an overland trip.

The road over the Raton Pass is a part of the Old Santa Fe Trail. From thence onward until you reach the California line the roads are trails over the desert and through canyons. The most of these can best be described by the onomatopoeic word "Rotten Road Canyon." From here your trials and tribulations increase and you begin to get thrills and lots of first hand experience.

A steady climb of eighteen miles brings you to the summit of the Raton Pass. The altitude at this point according to a U. S. survey marker on a large rock beside the road is 8,000 feet. The descent into the village of Kanton is quite abrupt by a series of loops and reverse curves.

On the 27th of October we arrived in the ancient city of Santa Fe and the end of the famous Santa Fe trail. Aside from being the oldest town in the United States, it is also the quaintest. In fact, it was old when it was first new.

The streets are so narrow that if two machines meet and both drivers are blind in one eye, it is not possible for them to pass unless both are blind in the right eye. Santa Fe was first put on the map by Coronado. From the way he treated the Indians his name should have been Tornado.

Coronado made his debut in Santa Fe society about 1540. He intended to go considerably further but his carburetor was not adjusted for the high altitudes and he non-skids were so badly worn he could not make it.

The chief places of interest center around the Plaza. Here is the Governor's palace over three hundred years old, built of adobe, behind whose barred windows the dark eyed Senoritas used to flirt with their broad brimmed and high crowned gentlemen and make dates to go picking lemons, while the jazz band on the Plaza played Orpheus in der under veil. Post look pleasant and William went with a Dago accent. In the palace are many relics of the Santa Fe trail and of pioneer days.

Low Wallace, as governor of New Mexico, wrote part of his great book Ben Hur in this building. Then there is the church of San Miguel, the pre-fax "San" means holy, built in the time of Coronado and much the same today as when it was built. Inside is a bell that was cast in Spain one hundred years before Columbus landed on the Bovey in New York. It has a rich silvery tone and you can go in and ring it twice, but you don't get anything!

The canyons and cliffs about Santa Fe are the site of numerous communities and cliff dwellings. What became of the stone age aborigines is not known but we do know that like the Peat factory they petered out. Today in the museum of the governor's palace you can look upon the desiccated physiognomy of these original Americans who first originated the cave man stuff. There is so much of the ancient here that after you have brushed against the cobweb and the grime in these old adobe houses and contemplated the mummies you begin to feel ancient yourself and capable of pulling some of the cave man stuff.

We sailed from the port of Santa Fe on the 29th of October, going across the plateau towards Albuquerque. Suddenly we came to the jumping off place as it were, a sheer drop of 800 feet or better. This hill is called the La Bajada hill so you can see it is some declivity. The descent by a narrow road is accomplished by 32 hairpin loops. Some of these loops are so sharp that long wheel base cars have to back up to make the turns.

In the vicinity of Gallup, New Mexico, we encountered a slight rain and snow storm that soon converted a fairly passable dirt road into a road as slippery as soap grease. Sometimes you get a stretch of ten or twelve miles of adobe and then will come a lot of sand. A slight rain makes the adobe very slippery. On the contrary, rain makes the sand stretches quite passable. Anyhow if it rains you get stuck in the adobe and if it don't rain you get stuck in the sand. The thing to remember is that you get stuck right.

In traveling across New Mexico and Arizona it is the better part of discretion to refrain from imbibing of the water freely. The drug stores in these regions very seldom have any sale for Red Raven Spills, Epsom Salts, etc. Yes, the alkali water is great stuff! "Nuf Sed."

Dr. Faye Palmer.

FORMER CHELSEA MAN

FISHING THE GULF

Miss Mildred Chadwick, daughter of Dr. Chadwick, of Jackson, Mich., who, with his wife and family, are the guests of Mr. A. M. Barber, on the Dixie Highway, sends us an interesting account of a deep sea fishing excursion in the open waters of the Gulf of Mexico. She writes: "On the 32nd anniversary of their married life Dr. and Mrs. C. S. Chadwick proposed to take a trip which they would never forget. The doctor chartered a boat with Captain Parker of Tarpon Springs, as pilot. At 6:30 on the morning of the 14, the party went aboard and started on the trip which took them 24 miles out west on the gulf—away past the islands (14 miles distant) between which and New Port Richey a ferry will one day be established, away out of sight of land to the guiper and snapper beds. Here we took soundings, and finding a coral bottom, anchored in eight fathoms of water. Then the sport began. Mrs. Chadwick received the first strike, and, after fighting for full ten minutes, landed a 14 pound black guiper (Michigan black bass) which proved to be the largest fish of the day's catch. Excitement was at its height when every line out had a 'bite' and we were all hauling in at the same time. There was no lull in the sport, and the fun was kept up until we had a large barrel holding 300 pounds full of red snappers and black and red guipers, which are declared to be the finest eating out of the Gulf of Mexico. The honor of the largest catch in the five hours fell to Mr. Barber. After eating a sumptuous fish dinner aboard, which our captain prepared, we started back, and landed at the dock about sundown. It was a glorious trip."

Dr. Chadwick is some fisherman—he spends much of the summer across the border line, right north among the Indian reservations (the country your editor knows) between The Pass and Fort Churchill, where the outposts of the Hudson Bay Company are located—fishing the glassy lakes for the "big fellows." Great sport; yes!—New Port Richey Press, Florida.

STRIKE OF BRIDES CALLED

TO BRING PEACE ON EARTH
A dispatch from Washington D. C. says: Do your marrying now.

This warning to bachelors yearning to be led to the altar came Friday from Mrs. Jessie Hardy Mackaye, a member of the executive committee of the Women's Peace league.

A "bride" strike is imminent, Mrs. Mackaye says.

It will break out shortly in New York, she predicted here Friday, and spread rapidly through the east, gradually extending to other sections of the country.

"Boycott the stork to entrench the dove of peace," is the slogan of a movement proposed by Mrs. Mackaye recently at a peace meeting in Milwaukee. She called on the women to refuse to marry and bear children until nations are disarmed and universal peace is assured.

She has received intimation, she says, that a number of young and beautiful women in New York are preparing to call a "bride" strike, as she describes it, volunteering to renounce even love, that they may take a pledge never to become brides until the world is safe for the gentle dove of peace. Once begun, the strike will spread to other cities, Mrs. Mackaye believes.

AUTO THIEVES' LOOT

EXCEEDS MILLION MARK

Within three years 3,020 automobiles have been stolen in Toledo, Secretary M. J. McCormick of the Toledo Automobile club says the records show.

Of these 695 have not been recovered. Each of these machines easily would have an average value of $1,500 McCormick estimates, because few low priced cars are stolen. This would mean a total loss to auto owners of $1,042,500 on unrecovered cars. This does not include the thousands of dollars damage to machines which have been recovered after they were smashed, McCormick adds. At the same average value the total value for stolen cars here including both those recovered and those which the owners did not get back would be $4,650,000.

McCormick has compiled this record for stolen cars in Toledo: 1917, 200 cars; 1918, 776 cars; 1919, 1,006 cars; 1920, so far, 1,038 cars.

We wish to thank the friends and neighbors for their kindness and help during our recent bereavement. Also for the floral pieces. And Rev. Harris for his kind words. Robert Kline and Mr. and Mrs. Vergin.

BREVITIES

Jackson—Leslie Fashbaugh was relieved of $48 in bills by two negro holdup men on South Water street about 7:15 o'clock Monday evening. Mr. Fashbaugh was on his way to visit a brother, living on Mitchell street when the holdup occurred.

Ann Arbor—The University of Michigan will not give a course in hotel management. President Burton said such a course would pre-suppose a department of home economics, and such training essentially should be given at M. A. C. rather than at the U. of M.

Lansing—Mrs. Eliza Collins died at the age of 105 at the home of her grandson, Frank Everett, near this city early Monday morning. She has been a resident of Michigan for 85 years, and is thought to have been the oldest citizen of the state. Mr. Collins died at the age of 36.

Brooklyn—The road from Brooklyn to the Woodstock town line has been taken over by the Board of County Road Commissioners as a county road. It is known as the Brooklyn-Cement City road and is 3.83 miles long. The survey was made several months ago and it is expected that it will be let for building soon.—Exponent.

Ann Arbor—Traffic was resumed Sunday night on the Ann Arbor railroad here following the wreck of a freight train Saturday evening in which seven cars plunged down an embankment from a viaduct. No one was injured. The dropping of a brake beam is the supposed cause of the wreck.

Jackson—Sheep and swine men will meet with Jackson county agricultural society premium committee Friday, January 14, at 1 p. m. to revise the premiums. Fruit, grain and vegetable men will meet in the court house Saturday, January 15, at 1 p. m., and poultry men will meet there Monday, January 17.

Jackson—The night of December 29, a mail sack at the Michigan Central depot mailed from the station was robbed. The same night the American Express company's office, near the depot was also burglarized. Tuesday Henry Meissner was arrested charged with both robberies and is in jail. The officers allege that in Meissner's room they found articles stolen from the express office.

Brighton—The Brighton Milk Producers' Association held its annual meeting Monday afternoon and elected officers for the new year. John Weimer was re-elected president and Charles Newman takes the vice-presidency again. Ed Whalen was elected secretary and Bert Appleton, treasurer. Dues of twenty-five cents a member were voted for.—Argus. Mr. Weimer was a former Chelsea resident.

Brooklyn—Fishing coops are being made ready to start the new year when the law on spearing pike is removed for an interim. Just to get a line on where the little ones get biggest in Clark Lake fishermen have been setting lines through the four inch ice. Leon Ladd and Billy Cruise took out some fine samples the other day, the best one weighing nine lbs. The boys say the fish bit Bill, but what he really got was a bad wound in the thumb from the hook that snared the pike.—Exponent.

Jackson—Clayton C. Robinson, alias Clayton Otis, who walked away from the north prison farm October 6 last, was captured in St. Louis, Mo., and brought back to the prison Saturday night by Fred McKee, parole officer. Robinson was 43 years old and by trade a carpenter. His home formerly was in Grand Rapids and he had served when he left, over a year of the five to 15 year sentence for burglary. When found in St. Louis, he had taken another alias and was going under the name of C. J. Martin.

Jackson—A lone handit entered the office of the Peninsular Building and Loan Association, of Jackson, about five o'clock Monday afternoon and holding a gun on Clarence E. Markham, secretary of the Association, who was alone in the office. The hold-up man thrust the contents of the cash draw into a black bag and calmly walked out with $7,000 in currency and checks, the cash portion of which was estimated to be about $2,500, all of which is covered by insurance. The hold-up man opened an account with the Association last Friday, under the name of J. S. West.

Ann Arbor—Claude Way, 22, Harry Wood, 21, and Leroy Corwin, 16, are reposing in the county jail after leading the police of this city and Ypsilanti a merry chase for over six weeks. All of the loot which has been stolen from houses in this city during that length of time has been recovered with the exception of the money. Way was arrested early Friday morning between Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti by Chief of Police John Connors and after being cross examined gave information which led to the arrest of Harry Wood at the Kappeler farm on the Pontiac road Friday afternoon. Leroy Corwin was picked up at Lansing on Saturday.

Because of the bumper beet crop the Owosso Sugar company's Lansing plant is compelled to care for much of the Saginaw county crop which the Owosso plant is not able to handle. Regardless of the "combine" of growers last season, the company will grind one of the biggest crops in the history of the Owosso company.

Failure of Senate to Ratify Peace
Treaty Leaves United States Technically at War—Presidential Election Holds Interest.

By DONALD F. BIGGS.
The world throughout the year 1920 was passing through the troublesome period of readjustment and reaction that began with the close of the World war. Of all the great powers that had been involved in the conflict, the United States alone remained technically in a state of war with Germany through the failure of the senate to ratify the peace treaty. For all practical purposes, however, the United States was at peace and conditions in this country were more nearly normal than in most of the nations of Europe which had accepted the settlements agreed upon by the peace conference at Paris.

Although the great war had ended, the world was not at peace in 1920. Territorial disputes and jealousies growing out of the war resulted in a large number of minor conflicts. The Irish problem remained unsolved and the situation in the Emerald Isle grew more serious as the year progressed. In the United States, despite minor radical activities and the uncertainties accompanying the readjustment of business and industrial conditions, there was continued prosperity and optimism.

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

The World war was formally ended January 10 when Germany and fourteen of the powers allied against her in the war exchanged ratifications of the Treaty of Versailles at Paris. The United States, however, was not among the nations participating in this ceremony, as the treaty had not been ratified by the senate.

The League of Nations came into actual being at Paris January 16 when the executive council held its first meeting with representatives from Belgium, Brazil, England, Italy, France, Japan, Greece and Spain participating.

The Russian government made a step toward securing peace with its warring neighbors by concluding treaties with Ukraine and Estonia.

The Turkish peace terms were completed on March 3, and a week later the Allies decided to use force to impose the terms upon Turkey, sending troops to occupy Constantinople. The allied forces occupied the Turkish capital without opposition.

Polish troops began a spring offensive against the Russian Bolsheviks in the Baltic region on March 23. Warsaw reported heavy fighting at many points on the 400-mile front. Three days later Poland offered peace terms to Russia, providing for restoration of the kingdom of 1772, return of art and other treasures, and an indemnity for invasions since 1914. Polish troops administered a severe defeat to the Bolsheviks at Podolia April 13.

The Poles and Ukrainians negotiated a treaty on April 27, recognizing Ukrainian independence from Russia. A combined army of Poles and Ukrainians then launched an offensive against the Russian "Red" forces, capturing Kiev on May 8 and the great port of Odessa on May 11.

Bolshevik troops invaded Persia at Astara May 13, forcing the withdrawal of British troops. Bolshevik troops on the Polish front were re-enforced, and launched an attack on a ninety-mile front, seeking to open communication with East Prussia. On June 3 they succeeded in flanking and driving back General Pilsudski's Polish troops.

The supreme council continued its efforts to complete the peace settlements. The treaty with Hungary was signed June 4 at Versailles. Ambassador Wallace signing for the United States. Turkey was granted fifteen days additional time to present its views regarding the treaty with that country.

While these peace negotiations were in progress, fighting continued at many points. Over 800 Italian prisoners were killed by Albanians at Tirana on June 18 in retaliation for the assassination of Essad Pasha in Paris on June 13.

Supported by British troops and battleships at Malta and Constantinople, the Greeks began a campaign to oust the Turkish Nationalists from parts of Asia Minor.

On July 7 the Bolshevik troops captured Rovno, throwing the Poles into retreat on the entire front. Poland opened negotiations for an armistice and these continued for a week when it was reported that Russia had ordered the postponement of the negotiations and the capture of Warsaw. Bolshevik troops captured Lomza and Brest-Litovsk, and began a drive on Lemberg August 1. During the next two weeks they continued to advance and on August 17 were within twelve miles of Warsaw. The Polish capital seemed doomed, but on the 17th the Poles launched a great counter-offensive and drove the Bolsheviks back in disorder. Heartened by the crushing blow given the Russian forces, the Poles rejected the Bolshevik peace terms.

In the meantime, on August 11, the French foreign office surprised the other powers by giving recognition to General Wrangel's de facto government in South Russia.

The Turkish peace treaty was signed on August 10 by all nations concerned except Serbia and the Hedjaz. Soviet Russia continued its effort to make peace with its neighbors by signing a treaty with Latvia and agreeing to armistice terms with Finland.

On October 12 the Poles signed an armistice and preliminary peace treaty with Russia to become effective October 18.

The cessation of hostilities on the Polish fronts enabled the Bolsheviks to strengthen their other fronts. Directed by Trotsky, the war minister, the Bolsheviks launched a violent offensive on October 31 against the South Russian armies commanded by General Wrangel. They succeeded in smashing General Wrangel's forces and drove on through Crimea.

The Bolshevik forces captured Sebastopol November 14. General Wrangel and the remnants of his army were on board American, French and British warships which steamed out of the harbor as the Bolsheviks entered the city.

An agreement on the Adriatic question was reached November 10 at a conference between the Jugo-Slavs and the Italians and a treaty embodying the agreement was signed at Rapallo two days later.

The Assembly of the League of Nations opened its first session at Geneva November 15. Paul Hymans of Belgium being elected president.

On November 29 President Wilson accepted an invitation extended by the Council of the League of Nations to act as mediator between Armenia and Turkey. Two days later the Russian Bolsheviks took Erivan and announced the establishment of a soviet Armenian republic. On December 3 Armenia and the Turkish Nationalists signed a treaty of peace.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

Several attempts to secure action on amendments to the covenant of the League of Nations were voted down by the league assembly. Because of this action the Argentine delegates to the assembly withdrew on December 3. On December 1 Austria was admitted to the league, the first of the allies of Germany to be granted membership.

With continued strife, amounting virtually to civil war, in Ireland, with spasmodic revolutionary outbreaks in Germany, with counter-revolutionary movements developing at intervals in Russia, with civil war in China and with political upheavals in France, Italy, Greece and other countries, the unrest and changing conditions growing out of the World war were reflected in the disturbed internal conditions of many countries of the old world in 1920.

One of the unexpected political developments of the early days of the year was the failure of Premier Clemenceau to obtain election as president of France upon the expiration of the term of President Poincare. Paul Deschanel was elected on January 17 and the following day Clemenceau's cabinet resigned. Alexandre Millerand formed a new cabinet at the request of President Poincare.

The All-Russian government in Siberia, headed by Admiral Alexander B. Kolchak, was finally destroyed with the killing of Admiral Kolchak by Social Revolutionists at Irkutsk on February 7.

In Great Britain the government took its first definite step toward a settlement of the Irish question on February 25, by presenting to the House of Commons its Irish home rule bill, providing for autonomous rule under a dual parliament, representing both the north and the south. On March 10 Ulster voted to accept the bill.

A new counter-revolution, directed by militarists, broke out in Berlin March 13. The revolutionists gained control of Berlin and Dr. Wolfgang Kapp proclaimed himself chancellor. The revolution was short-lived, however, ending in failure on the 16th when Dr. Kapp resigned.

The Irish situation continued to attract the attention of the world. On March 19 the mayor of Cork was killed by assassins. In the House of Commons the Irish Home Rule bill passed its second reading on March 31, 245 to 94. On April 4 Irish tax offices and records were burned at many points and wire communication from Belfast was cut.

In Mexico the presidential campaign developed a revolution which resulted eventually in the overthrow of the Carranza government. On April 10 the state of Sonora withdrew from the republic and fighting between the Sonora troops and federal forces began. By April 21 nine Mexican states had joined the secession movement.

The revolutionary movement gained rapidly and on May 7 President Carranza fled from Mexico City toward the eastern coast. On May 22 Carranza, the fugitive president, was shot and killed by troops in his escort while asleep.

A cabinet crisis in Italy on June 9 resulted in the resignation of Premier Nitti and his cabinet. Signor Orlando also resigned as president of the chamber. A new cabinet was formed June 17 under former Premier Giovanni Giolitti. On June 27 Italian troops mutinied at Ancona and "Red" uprisings broke out all over Italy in what appeared to be a concerted anarchist plot.

On August 13 Mayor Terence MacSwiney of Cork was arrested by British troops for sedition in holding a Sinn Fein court at the City Hall. He was convicted by a court martial on the 17th and taken to an English prison where he immediately entered upon a hunger strike. Riots and incendiarism continued to assume more serious proportions at many points.

In the constitutional election held in Mexico September 5 General Alvarado Obregon was elected president. President Deschanel of France resigned September 21 because of ill health and on the 23rd Premier Alexandre Millerand was elected to succeed him. Georges Leygues, minister of marine under Clemenceau, became premier.

Further disturbances were reported in Italy during October. On the 13th leaders of the Socialist party and the General Confederation of Labor ordered demonstrations in every town in Italy in an effort to force the Italian government to recognize soviet Russia, and on the following day many persons were killed and wounded in the course of a two-hour strike called as a protest against the arrest of political offenders opposing the allied policy toward Russia. The government began a drive on the 17th to round up all advocates of violence in the country.

After a longer strike of 74 days, which had drawn the attention of the world, Terence MacSwiney, lord mayor of Cork, died in Brixton prison, London, October 25. Great pressure had been brought to bear to secure Mayor MacSwiney's release, but the government stood firm in its stand against the hunger strikers.

King Alexander of Greece died on October 25 as a result of a bite by a pet monkey, and it was announced that the throne would be offered to Prince Paul, third son of former King Constantine.

Peace in China seemed to be finally assured by a proclamation issued by the government November 1, declaring that there had been a reunion of North and South China and calling for the election of a new parliament.

Fierce fighting between Unionists and Sinn Feiners broke out in North Belfast, Ireland, November 7. Serious disorders were reported also at Londonderry, where five policemen were shot and many ships burned or wrecked. The Irish home rule bill passed the house of commons on its third reading November 11. At Dublin on November 21, following the murder of 14 British officers, a force of troops raided a football game and fired upon the crowd, killing and wounding a large number of persons.

A political upheaval came in Greece with the defeat in the general election on November 14 of the party headed by Premier Venizelos. Premier Venizelos resigned on November 17 and George Walulis, former premier and leader among the followers of ex-King Constantine, formed a new cabinet.

On December 4 the Greek people, in a plebiscite voted for the return of King Constantine. On December 29 Constantine returned to Athens in triumph.

The Irish situation neared a crisis during the closing weeks of the year. Wholesale arrests were made by the British authorities during the last weeks of November, among those taken being Arthur Griffith, acting president of the "Irish republic" and many other Irish leaders. On November 28 Irish plotters set fire to several large warehouses on the Liverpool water front and killed two men. Martial law was proclaimed in south Ireland on December 10 and two days later a large part of the business district of Cork was burned in reprisal. It was claimed, for Sinn Fein raids.

DOMESTIC

The year 1920 being a presidential election year, politics held the attention of the people of the United States during the greater part of the year. Senator Warren G. Harding of Ohio was nominated for President by the Republicans at Chicago June 12. The Democratic national convention at San Francisco nominated Governor James M. Cox of Ohio on July 5 on the forty-fourth ballot.

In the election on November 2, the Republican national ticket was elected by an overwhelming majority, receiving 41 electoral votes while the Democratic candidates received 117. The Republicans also won an overwhelming majority in congress.

By winning their long fight for equal suffrage, the women of the country gained the right to vote for all offices in the November election.

The United States Supreme court on January 5 upheld the constitutionality of wartime prohibition and the Volstead enforcement act. On January 16 nationwide prohibition, under the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution, went into effect.

On January 10 the New York assembly, with but two dissenting voices, voted to exclude the five Socialist members of that body, pending trial on charges that the platform of their party is revolutionary.

The anti-radical campaign resulted in the indictment of 38 leaders of the Communist Labor party in Chicago on January 21.

The railroads of the country were returned to private operation on March 1, under the terms of the Cummins-Esch railroad reorganization act. Senator Truman H. Newberry of Michigan was convicted in the federal court at Grand Rapids on March 20 on charges involving the use of excessive campaign funds. He and 16 co-defendants were given prison sentences, but remained at liberty pending an appeal to the higher courts.

The trial of the five Socialist members of the New York assembly ended with their expulsion from the legislature April 1.

Several suits had been instituted during the early months of the year attacking the validity of the eighteenth (prohibition) amendment. All these cases were taken to the United States Supreme court and on June 7 that tribunal decided that the amendment and the Volstead enforcement act were constitutional.

Big increases in rates were granted the railroads of the country by the interstate commerce commission July 31 to enable the roads to meet increased wages. Passenger rates were increased 20 per cent, with a Pullman surcharge of 50 per cent for the railroads. Freight rates were increased from 25 to 40 per cent in different sections of the country.

The trial of the Communist Labor party leaders in Chicago, in progress for several months, ended August 2 with the conviction of 20, who were given jail sentences.

The five Socialist assemblymen expelled from the New York legislature in the spring, having been re-elected, were again unseated when the legislature met in special session September 21.

Sharp drops in the prices of cotton, wheat and other farm products brought appeals for assistance from the farmers of the country during the latter part of the year. Night riders appeared in southern states in an effort to force the growers to hold their cotton for a higher price and a movement was started to secure the holding of wheat from the market.

NATIONAL LEGISLATION

The continued fight over the ratification of the treaty of Versailles, with the League of Nations covenant, resulting in rejection of the treaty for the second time, occupied the attention of the United States senate during the early months of 1920 and monopolized the attention of the public, so far as congressional action was concerned. The Cummins-Esch bill, under which the railroads of the country operated after their return to private control, and the army reorganization bill were the principal pieces of legislation enacted before the first regular session of the Sixty-sixth congress ended June 5.

On January 10, the house, by a vote of 325 to 6, for the second time refused to seat Victor Berger, Socialist, who had been re-elected to congress from a Milwaukee district after he had been once barred by the house because of his alleged disloyalty during the war.

The Water Power Development bill, which had long been pending in congress, was passed by the senate January 15. A similar bill had been adopted by the house in July, 1919.

Another long congressional fight, for the adoption of the Oil Land Leasing bill, was ended when the conference report was adopted by the house on February 10 and the senate two days later.

The senate then turned its attention to the peace treaty. The original Lodge reservations were again adopted, with some amendments. The treaty, with the reservations, came to a vote on March 19, and for the second time failed to secure the requisite two-thirds majority, the vote being 49 to 35. The following day the rejected treaty was sent back to the President.

With no prospect of the early adoption of the treaty, resolutions declaring the war at an end were introduced in both the house and the senate. Both houses adopted the Knox senate resolution. President Wilson vetoed this resolution, however, on May 27.

A few days earlier, on May 24, President Wilson asked the senate for authority to accept the mandate for Armenia that had been offered by the supreme council. On June 1 the senate "respectfully declined" to give the President the authority requested.

On June 3, the house voted, 343 to 3, the repeal of all war laws except the Lever act and the enemy trading act. The measure already having passed the senate, but President Wilson withheld his signature from the act and it died, with several other important measures, with the adjournment of congress. On the day before adjournment, President Wilson vetoed the budget bill which had been passed by both houses.

Congress reconvened on December 6 for the short session. President Wilson in his message, which was read the following day, recommended that the Philippines be given their independence.

LABOR AND INDUSTRIAL

Industrial unrest which manifested itself during the period of reaction immediately following the war, became even more marked during the year 1920. Radical activities were involved in some of the labor disputes in this country, but this was true to a much larger extent in the labor troubles that beset most of the countries of Europe during the greater part of the year.

The first month of the year was marked, in the United States, by the abandonment of the steel workers' strike which had been begun on September 22.

Railroad traffic was tied up in France, February 27, by a general strike of rail workers. The premier called all the strikers into the army, and two days later the strike was settled by a compromise.

Peace was declared between the bituminous coal operators and miners March 31, when they signed a two-year agreement based on an award made by the coal commission named by President Wilson.

An "outlaw" strike of railroad switchmen began in Chicago April 15, and spread rapidly to other parts of the country. Federal officers arrested 30 leaders of the strike in Chicago, April 15, on charges of interfering with the mails and violation of the Lever act. On April 19 the joint railroad wage board created by the Cummins-Esch bill, announced that it would not hear cases of men who were on strike.

A new coal strike was inaugurated in Illinois and Kansas April 6, five thousand men going out because of dissatisfaction with the wage awards made by the coal commission.

The first of a long series of strikes involving Bolshevik activities took place in Italy March 25, when workmen and peasants in Naples and the provinces of Novra, Alexandria, Brescia and Treviso, attempted to establish soviets. Troops restored order and the strike ended within two days.

On May 1 there were riots in Paris, and railway workers struck for nationalization of the railroads. French dock workers and coal miners joined the strike on May 3. The French government took vigorous steps to end the strike, moving to dissolve the General Federation of Labor and characterizing the strike leaders as Bolsheviks. The strikes were called off by the General Federation of Labor on May 21.

The Railway Labor board announced its decision on wage increases on July 20, awarding increases of from 20 to 27 per cent to nearly 2,000,000 employees, the total increase amounting to about $600,000,000 a year, about half the rate that employees had asked. The award was accepted by the railroad unions.

During the latter part of July coal miners again struck in Illinois, Indiana and Kansas, but on July 31 they were ordered back to work, after an appeal had been made by President Wilson.

Serious riots occurred at Denver August 5 in connection with a street car strike, many being killed and injured. Federal troops were ordered to Denver to stop the disorders.

The Railway Labor board made another award August 10, granting an increase amounting to $30,000,000 a year to 75,000 railway express workers.

On August 30 President Wilson approved the majority report of the anthracite wage commission, awarding wage increases of from 17 to 20 per cent. On September 1 anthracite operators and miners signed a two-year contract based on the award, but thousands of men remained on what they termed "vacation" in protest against the award.

Industrial conditions grew more serious in Italy during the late summer and fall. An obstructionist campaign was started by 500,000 workmen on August 22. On August 31, in Lombardy, 300 metal-working plants were seized by employees and workmen's councils took charge of the plants. On September 14 the workmen's council voted for co-operative management and profit-sharing by the workmen. At the same time the workmen took over 200 chemical works and several textile mills. Premier Giolitti intervened, and on September 19 the employers agreed to his terms of settlement, granting increases of pay retroactive to July 15. The workmen accepted the settlement and ordered the factories returned to the owners.

An industrial crisis was precipitated in England on October 16 by a strike of 1,000,000 coal miners. On the 28th an agreement was reached for an increase in wages in consideration of a pledge on the part of the miners to help increase production. The strike was called off November 3.

A severe business depression was felt throughout the United States during the closing weeks of the year. The trend toward lower wages was marked by the announcement of the textile mills of New England in December of a reduction in wages amounting to 22 1/2 per cent.

SPORTS

The revival of interest in sporting events of all kinds which was apparent in 1919, following almost a complete suspension of athletic activities during the war, was even more marked in 1920.

The first of five races between Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock IV, challenger for the America's cup, and the defender, Resolute, was held off New York July 15. The Shamrock won the first and second races, but the Resolute took the next three, winning the cup on July 27.

Charles Evans, Jr. of Chicago, won the western amateur golf championship July 17, and Jack Hutchinson won the western open golf championship August 8. Edward Ray of England won the American open golf championship, August 13. Charles Evans, Jr., won the national amateur golf championship, September 11.

The United States, for the seventh consecutive time, made the biggest score in the Olympic games at Antwerp, Belgium, with 212 points. Finland was second with 105 and Sweden third with 95.

Jack Dempsey retained the heavyweight championship of the world by knocking out Bill Mike in the third round at Benton Harbor, Mich., September 6. Georges Carpentier of France, knocked out Battling Levinsky, October 12, and became light heavyweight champion of the world.

A sensation was caused in the baseball world just before the close of the season by the exposure of a conspiracy by which the world's series of 1919 was "thrown" by the Chicago American league team to the Cincinnati National league team. Seven members of the Chicago team, including several stars, and one former member were accused of accepting bribes, and they later were indicted by a Chicago grand jury. Cleveland won the American league pennant on October 2 and met the Brooklyn club, National league pennant winner, in the world series on October 5. Cleveland won the series by taking the seventh game from Brooklyn, October 12.

A baseball war was threatened by a conflict between clubs of the American league over plans for a reorganization of the game. Peace was declared, however, on November 13, and a new board of control was established with Judge Kenesaw M. Landis of Chicago as chairman with an annual salary of $42,500 a year.

Hoscoe Sarles won the 250-mile automobile race at Los Angeles November 25. In this race Gaston Chevrolet was killed in a collision.

DISASTERS

The world was comparatively free from disasters causing great loss of life during 1920. Tornadoes in the United States and earthquakes in Italy and Mexico, caused the greatest destruction.

Several thousand people were reported killed by a violent earth shock in central Mexico January 3, the damage being particularly heavy in the western part of Vera Cruz.

More than 100 persons were killed, many were injured and heavy property damage was caused by tornadoes which swept Georgia, Alabama, Indiana, Ohio and Illinois, March 23.

Three hundred persons were killed by an explosion of a munitions dump at Rothenstein, East Prussia, April 31. Another tornado caused heavy damage in Alabama, Tennessee and Mississippi, April 20. More than 150 persons were killed and property valued at $2,000,000 was destroyed.

Fifty-nine persons were killed by a tornado in Cherokee county, Okla., May 2.

Great floods were reported in Japan August 10, with heavy loss of life.

A severe earthquake in the district north of Florence, in Italy, on September 7, destroyed 100 towns and killed about 400 persons.

Disastrous earthquakes occurred in Chile and Central America December 9, and later in the month.

Genuine Ford Service---and Parts

Insist on genuine Ford parts for your Ford car. Mail order houses, stores and many garages sell imitation—counterfeit parts which have not the quality of the genuine Ford parts, but the Authorized Ford Dealers as well as the Authorized Sales and Service Dealers sell only the genuine Ford-made parts. You are safe with them, while your car is mighty unsafe if repaired with imitation parts. The real Ford parts are made from the same properly heat-treated steel as their counter-parts in the Ford car. Every part is heat-treated according to its use. Depending upon the service they perform, Ford parts are tempered to insure the longest life. Tested after almost every operation while being manufactured, these parts present a vast difference from those not manufactured under Ford supervision. Counterfeit parts range from thirty to seventy-five per cent below the quality of the Ford standard. Don't take chances; demand Ford parts, they're safer. Bring your Ford to us and thus make "assurance doubly sure." If you want a Ford car, truck or Fordson tractor, leave your order without delay, as now we can make fairly prompt delivery—Touring Cars, Coupes, Sedans, Runabouts, Trucks and Fordson Tractors. Why not drop in and talk over your wants?

CHURCH CIRCLES.

WISE MEN

Rev. H. R. Beatty.

The sudden appearance of three strange men in the city and their searching question caused great agitation among people of both royal and common circles until the whole city was stirred and began to ask one another the same question, "where is He who is born king of the Jews?"

In after days when the historian sought to preserve the memory of these men he spoke of them as "wise men." Why were they so spoke of? They were men who were believers in God and were in intimate fellowship with Him else they would not have known of the recent birth of the Christ.

They were men seeking the latest truths regarding God's up-to-date effort to lift up and better humanity else they would not have been in the very lead after up-to-date truths.

They were men who so appreciated what was being done that they brought their valuable possessions and joyously gave them to the Christ for they brought gold, frank incense and myrrh.

They were men who were unafraid to publicly make known their allegiance to God and His Christ for they even went on the streets and proclaimed this. Hence they were called wise men.

If this attitude and conduct gave them the right to be called wise men then it lays within the range of possibility for each of us to gain the same title for each can be a believing, truth seeking, gift giving, unafraid confessor of the Christ of Bethlehem and of God.

MENNONITE MIGRATION

OPPOSED BY LEGION

Protest against proposed migration of 40,000 Mennonites from Manitoba province, Canada, to southern Mississippi, was telegraphed to the state department and Mississippi members in congress Thursday by the Mississippi division, American Legion. The message quoted a resolution opposing the proposed movement on the ground that the Mennonites are "undesirables."

"The Mennonites were conscientious objectors during the war," the resolution said; adding that they stayed at home "while Canada was being bled white in the trenches" and that they taught "only the German language in their schools and in many other respects are unfit to live on American soil."

COUNTY ADMINISTRATION

TOOK OFFICE SATURDAY

No ceremonies marked inauguration of new officials at the county building last week. The oath of office was administered by the new county clerk, Jay G. Pray, to A. C. Pack, sheriff; E. E. Leland, probate judge; Mrs. Mabel Blum, county treasurer; Perry Townsend, register of deeds; and Jacob Fahrner, prosecuting attorney. All of these, except the clerk and treasurer, were re-elected.

Jay G. Pray succeeds Edwin Smith as county clerk, while Mrs. Blum succeeds Leo Gruner as county treasurer.

Heretofore there has been no great haste in securing auto licenses as county and village officers were not particular about these being on the cars the first of January or for two or three weeks after. But this system we understand will be changed and people may not use their cars unless a new license plate is attached. Some have already made applications for them.

Niehaus, formerly of Lima township, who is at present studying music with Prof. James Hamilton, of the Lyceum Arts school, Chicago, Ill., gave a musical program at the Congregational church last Sunday evening to an audience that filled the auditorium to its utmost capacity. ONE WORSHIPER.

William II, leaving the estate of Count von Reutheek, presents to his host of whose hospitality he had been a long and embarrassing recipient, a bust of himself. A bust of William II for the heirs of Auerogen to hide or to apologize for! Is it possible that the world was allowed to fall nearly into chaos because this Hohenzollern lacked a sense of humor? It seems too likely. At least it is clear that much of the sympathy expressed for the once royal exile has been wasted. The former kaiser cannot imagine that he is not still a heroic figure, says Milwaukee Journal. Have not the French built a beautiful temple to guard the tomb of Napoleon, exiled at St. Helena? Perhaps he even thinks of the Apostle John on Patmos. Would not a single real memento of his stay be one of the world's greatest shrines? William II cannot see with the world's eyes the gloomy of a night when the "all-highest" fled from the people his ambition had brought to destruction. He still sees an eagle where mankind sees a scarecrow. Yet his token is sincere, the highest mark of gracious condescension. The fallen idol has still one worshiper.

Several American Legion posts in Michigan are said to favor changing the date of Thanksgiving day to Nov. 11, when Armistice day could also be celebrated. The boys argue that Thanksgiving day comes too near Christmas and could well be held earlier in the month.

The above mentioned acreage is based on a ten hour day, which has been done successfully, and can be done again by any fair operator.

From these figures it can readily be seen why one man can farm more land with the Moline system of power farming.

MYSTERY!

Now she was in his arms, and glad. His lips closed on hers. For a long breath she was a mere thing of feeling senses.

"You love me?"
"I don't know," she murmured. "May be..."
"Tomorrow you will marry me, and we will go away—"
"I don't know—perhaps—yes, I will. But not tomorrow—not right away."

A rattle of shots sounded and, looking back, she saw the plain-clothes man pitch forward on his knees, then fall prone. The policeman, scrambling up pistol in hand, received the balance of the clip in Red's automatic and sank slowly down upon his side. Screaming with horror, the girl fell back from the window. Red dragged her after him, still screaming like a mad woman.

Rousing on an elbow, Priscilla Maine found herself awake, with a racing heart, a throat swollen with a strangled cry of horror and a mind through whose painted mask the reflections of a woman's screams ran like a thread of purple light. It was true, then; she was safely restored to her own intimate environment, where nothing reminded even remotely that frosty room where murders had been done.

From which it would appear that Priscilla Maine, the fashionable young heiress, had had a particularly vivid dream, in which she had promised to be the wife of one man and had been rescued from the police by another—a red-handed gunman. But that doesn't entirely explain things, because the encounter with the police in the slums was described in detail in the evening newspapers. And of course Priscilla hadn't been there, though a girl just like her had been in the fight. In short, in "The Dark Mirror," Louis Vance, whose fame as a writer of mystery stories is international, has told a most fascinating tale of something that resembles dual personality—but isn't. You will not be able to solve the mystery until the very end, for it almost baffled a young physician-psychologist, who was doing his best since he was in love with Priscilla and naturally didn't want to give her up to her dream lover. And you will enjoy this exceedingly lively and quite unique story.

CHAPTER ONE

The Street of Strange Faces.

I. THE DARK CORNER.

The way of the thing was ever the same: It befell without warning; or rather, the girl had never learned to take heed of signs which seemed plain enough in retrospect, when she sat alone and puzzled, her pretty head with the dark middle of this shadow life which set her so widely apart from every girl she knew and, indeed, from all the rest of humankind.

She had a day of restlessness, whose every hour brewed its new peculiar mood, whose every mood was purposeless, with times of almost feverish gaiety, causeless, fitful, fugitive, and other times when for no reason in her knowledge she caught herself sighing long, fluttering sighs that shook her strangely. So unlight one's spirit sigh in weariness, faint with the burden of incessant strife with some great antagonist of unguessable identity.

Toward nightfall all these were smoothed away into a feeling of serene peace and self-possession; and at sunrise with consciousness of the rich, strong wine of vitality that quickened her, she thought of life in the likeness of a wide, placid river, wherein she drifted like a fearless swimmer—a stream whose waters were warm, sweet and calm with a penetrating quality of delicious calm she never dreamed could be disturbed, so imperturbable it seemed, so permanent, so imperturbable.

Only the alpha percolated oddly, as if her spirit knew moments of melancholy of which her mind knew nothing.

And insidiously the tranquil surface of that contentment was flawed by apprehensions of nameless danger, of peril latent, stealthy and implacable; as though the swimmer surmised some monstrous shape of evil stalking unseen in those opaque depths—or felt herself subtly ensnared by a current whose irresistible set was altogether toward destruction.

Now at length perceiving what was to come, panic paralyzed in her the instinct of self-preservation: though horror brimmed the cup of being, she made no effort to fight free but, as one who knows that struggling must prove vain, resigned herself and let the baneful current work its will with her. Fascination, too, was at work, deep within her a mad desire to go again that wild way she had so often gone, and once more be, and do, and see.

So it is, so it must be, with those to whom a drug has made itself a thing of life and death.

On ahead, like a head in the river, waited that turning in her psychic life which she knew as the Dark Corner: while she lay passive in the grasp of that power which so obscurely had its rise in her yet was repugnant to her, being at once her Will and her Necessity. And as the Dark Corner drew momentarily more near, the transference which she termed the Change was effected by what may only be described as a convulsion of her very soul, after which came lassitude, a vast exorcism in which all lingering traces of reluctance were obliterated.

Now she was no longer herself, but another woman than the one she knew, a strange woman clothed in her own flesh but in no other way akin to her. Self, everyday, having no thought, impulse, or emotion with which that Self could sympathize, save such as may be considered common to all her sex. Yet, incomprehensibly, consciousness of the old self-identity survived; and though (as she conceived it) dispossessed from its tenement, her Self continued by her body's side, observant, critical, intrigued, something amused.

In this wise rounding the Dark Corner, she passed into that place which she had named the Street of Strange Faces; and the enigma of this confusion of Self with non-Self was forgotten in the rush of exotic sensation and emotion, excitement and lawless joy, which invariably accompanied definite and final commitment to renewed pursuit of these transcendental adventures.

II. LEONORA.

Together with the Faces, its windows made the Street, being of many sorts, to each its own significant illumination: hard plate glass masks of saloons beaming false fellowship, mean shop fronts of ingratiating shine, windows of homely golden glow, others through whose latticed shutters filtered sinister gleams bespeaking the unspeakable, others again that gave only dull reflections in begrimed panes of naphtha flames flaring luridly above pushcarts arrayed in unbroken lines along the curbs.

Through this welter of light and shadow, in the sidewalk channels, the Faces passed and repressed, lurking darkly in forbidding doorways, seeking brazenly the brightest glare, coming and going without rest, in uncouth carnival: kind and brutal, cunning and naive, wicked and innocent, swartly, fair, unique, commonplace; faces that disgusted, faces that allured, faces that meant nothing, that were more empty mouthing masks; faces of oriental cast, yellow and red and brown; negro faces in every shade of quartering.

She knew them all: they all knew her. The sense of strangeness ebbed; with every step, with every look around, with every breath she drew, she was losing touch with her other Self which had so singularly repudiated its authority and faded into impotence at the Dark Corner, but which still kept step with her, clung to her more closely than her shadow, and like a wrath of the living, watched, noted and compared while taking part in notions wholly foreign to its nature and experiencing reactions obscure to it and unintelligible.

Now the girl moved swiftly, with ease and boldness, even with a hint of arrogance; giving the Faces look for look, smile for smile, frown for frown; laughing laughily up at a tall policeman who knitted black brows over indolent blue eyes; flinging racy retorts to the bunter of a knot of men emerging from a gin-mill; chilling with glance and word the advances of those who should have known better; chatting buxomly who bowed in her ears the tawdry virtues of their wares; passing now and again to exorcise more kindly personage with folk who held title to her liking; cutting an impudent figure, as confident and unboasted as a cat turned loose in home pastures.

Her sharp perceptions took in everything; not one considerable detail escaped her remark. And she liked it, she liked it all, she was curiously permented to her very narrow with delight in sounds and sights and smells familiar to her senses since time beyond their earliest record.

The Street, never wide, was the narrower for its double rank of pushcarts. Between these an occasional automobile or horse-drawn vehicle went gingerly to spare the multitude of urethras, half dressed and less than half washed, of every age and almost every nationality, that swarmed upon the asphaltum. Tenement houses—their fire escapes converted into balconies lavishly draped with caudal bedding and still more caudal women—drew confidential heads together on high, leaving visible only a slender ribbon of cobalt sky. In between the air was sluggish, thick with unnatural haze, and rank with many odors: an unholy alliance of garlic, fried fish, boiled cabbage and stale beer maintaining debatable ascendancy over the native aroma of a stratum of society which holds soap less necessity than luxury. And the night was tumultuous with screams of children at crude play, howls of babies wallowing in neglect, bawling of street vendors, each striving to outgild his nearest competitor, chatter of tiny pianos, blare and whine of jaded phonographs; all relieved against a wholly normal undertone of incessant gossip and bickering.

The girl huzzed to herself the joy of living: this was to her the breath of life; even more, it was enterprise, adventure, the very stuff of Romance. She went her way smiling, with a conscious smile bred of knowledge that she was dressed in her best, in her very newest best at that, garments of a cut and cast and quality such as the Street seldom saw.

Nevertheless, her show of nonchalance cloaked circumspection: if her looks were free and roving, they were likewise keen and watchful. Though the width of the Street was between them, she was well aware of two plain-clothes men who turned to stare when she had gone by and conferred together concerning her curiously, after the absurd manner of their kind, out of the corners of their mouths.

"You know... I Love You— I Make No Secret of That."

But that was a minor circumstance, more fun than reason for worry. They couldn't tug a girl for wearing good clothes, even if they didn't know where she had got them or how.

The stress of her attention was due to considerations far more weighty; and when, of a sudden, at a crossing, she deserted its cause, she checked in unfeigned dismay, with startled pulses.

III. THE MAN MARIO.

On the far corner a tall man, simply dressed, composed of habit, stood stiffly, hands clasped lightly before him in a gesture with which the girl was well acquainted, head and shoulders lifting above the crowd. Against the tawny flames of naphtha torches his profile was sharp and black, the silhouette of an ascetic, gravely fine; but none better than she knew how its austerity was belied by haunted eyes whose sincerity could wring truth from lips that moved to frame a lie.

And he was looking for her; she knew that, too.

In a flurry so real that it touched her anger, she swung aside into the by-street, a grim street that led away where but the way she wished to go. Yet she welcomed its sullen gloom and went swiftly, heedless of everything but the necessity of escaping, knowing in her heart she could not escape.

Her name was called in a voice of resonant timbre: "Leonora! I beg of you... It is I, Mario!"

She stopped and swung round with a specious show of surprise, subsiding into indifference. Tone and manner were discouraging; but her heart was faint.

"Oh! hello! It's you..." The man paused, but in hand, his attitude one of pleading and reproach, yet informed with an ineffaceable dignity.

"You saw me, Leonora. Why did you run—from me?"

She tossed her head. "What makes you think I did?"

"I do not think; I know. You turned up this street to avoid me. Leonora, why?"

"If you thought that—that I wanted to be left alone—why'd you follow me?"

The man lifted his hands palms up, peremptory, and let them fall.

"You know... I love you. I make no secret of that. I have told you—how many times?—a hundred? Yes—his enunciation grew more rapid—"

"and you are not indifferent to me. You never said so, but... I know."

"Oh, I like you all right—"

"No; more than that; too much to wish to hurt me. Is it not so?"

"Why, I don't want to hurt you, of course. But—if you've got to know—I was in a hurry. I've got a date—and I'm late."

"And I am detaining you! Forgive me—but let me go with you a little way."

The girl shot hunted glances right and left; then, since nothing in sight promised diversion, said ungraciously: "Nobody can stop your walking with me."

"Nobody but you, Leonora. One word—"

"One word from me and you'll do exactly as you please." With a nervous laugh—"Oh, come along!"—she turned back, walking hastily, the man Mario falling in at her side. "I'd just as leave you didn't come all the way, though."

"You do not wish me to know where you go?" He nodded sober confirmation of an unuttered guess. "I see."

"You see a terrible lot!" The girl had a spasm of irritation. "You're always seeing things. Well, what do you see now?"

"You go to meet those others"—his tone was sly—"those whom I have so often begged you—"

"Guess it's my business who my friends are."

"Certainly you give me no right to make it mine. That cannot affect the truth that such associations are unwise."

"Leonora; why pretend to me? Deceive yourself if you must and can—but not me, not one who loves you as I do. Do not attempt it, even. It is so useless."

With a courtesy the more gratifying because it was so novel, Mario put his hand under her arm, lightly piloting her through the human mazes of the braving Street, which they crossed squarely and quickly left behind.

After a little while, being in the wrong, she said sulkily: "I don't see why you're always making out I'm trying to put something over on you. I never put anything over on you."

"True, but you know what these friends of yours are, and their ways whether they lead, their inevitable end. You know, if you persist, your fate must be as theirs."

"I guess what's good enough for my friends is good enough for me—"

"No, Leonora; you are too good for that—or I could not love you."

The man paused, and his hold on her arm drew the girl to an unwilling pause with him, leading down a dark, dead block of industrial buildings with a windowless wall beside them and not a soul nearby to hear. The girl was distressed, more than a little humbled in her own esteem by the revelation of an affection more enduring and generous and frank than any she had ever known.

"I am not a common man," Mario was stating simple fact, innocent of conceit. "I know the world outside the one you know, and the men and women who live in it. When I go, I look about me, and reflect on what I see. I am seldom mistaken in those who interest me. And you whom I love—I tell you, you are no more of this life than I, and you do a wrong thing, a wicked and cruel thing, when you trample down that which is good in you and might bring you to a splendid destiny."

Impressed in spite of herself, touched, and flattered, too, she looked uneasily away, twisting her hands together, her tongue faltering.

"I suppose you know what you mean..."

"Tomorrow you will marry me, and we will go away—"

DAIRY FACTS

HIGH COST OF PRODUCTION

Illinois Experiment Station Secured Reliable Figures From 680 Dairy Farms.

There are various estimates on milk production costs and they are likely to be different under different circumstances. Moreover, there is considerable variation in milk quality, also, as it ranges from barely three per cent butterfat test to nearly five per cent. However, none of the figures available show that the producer of milk is "profiteering."

In Illinois the state experiment station secured accurate figures on milk production costs from 680 dairy farms with a total of 18,902 cows. Those figures showed the cost of all items entering into the production of 100 pounds of milk as follows:

Grain, 44 pounds at $55 per ton...	$1.21
Stilage, 188 pounds at $6 per ton...	.56
Hay, 50 pounds at $30 per ton...	.75
Other roughage, 39 pounds at $10 per ton...	.19
Labor, 2 1/2 hours at 80 cents per hour...	.75

Total cost per 100 pounds... $3.46
The cost is 3.46 cents per pound, or, taking 2 1/2 pounds per quart, 7.44 cents per quart.

EYE TEST FOR TUBERCULOSIS

Used as Check Upon Older Methods, as It Happens Occasionally Reactors Escape.

The eye test for detecting tuberculosis in cattle has the approval of the scientists of the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture. The ophthalmic or eye test is used as a check upon the older methods, as it happens occasionally that an animal that will not react to the subcutaneous injection or intradermal test will react to the eye test.

Two tuberculin tablets are placed in the conjunctival sac beneath the lower lid of the left eye and observations are taken at approximately the third hour following and at frequent intervals up to 24 hours. Reaction to the test is indicated by discharge and swelling.

The bureau of animal industry is not prepared to accept the evidence of the eye test alone where cattle are intended for interstate shipment. The test, however, furnishes an additional safeguard when used with the older method.

The eye test is not well adapted for use upon range cattle or cattle in transit, because of the possibility for dust settling up an irritation not related to tuberculosis. It has its best use on the dairy farm, where conditions are such as to give sure results.

The experts have observed that in herds which are frequently tested by the subcutaneous method it is advisable to apply the intradermal and the eye test. The combined test sometimes detects reactors which have escaped detection by other means.

CRUSHED GRAIN IS FAVORED

Any Aid Given Cow in Digestion of Food Will Show in Increased Flow of Milk.

There is no actual harder work than the dairy cow giving a large flow of milk, and any aid given her in digestion will show decided increase in milk and in her condition. Some grains are easy of mastication and digestion, but the usual ration of the corn belt is comprised mainly of wheat, corn, oats, rye and barley. All of these grains will show up in the feces if fed whole and unless the cattle are followed by hoes it is entirely lost.

Crushing grain is better than grinding it fine, for the digestibility may be decreased due to failure to mix properly with the saliva. Because of dairy feeds too finely ground, for they may contain fiber and cannot be properly digested.

BEETS ARE EXCELLENT FEED

Because of Labor in Harvesting and Cost of Handling Are Not as Cheap as Silage.

Sugar beets are an excellent feed for dairy cows, but because of the labor in harvesting and the expense of handling, are not as economical as corn silage. They have a large amount of nutriment than mangel or rutabagas, but it is generally held that the latter will yield somewhat more per acre and are less difficult to handle. Sugar beets are not hard on the kidneys, but if fed in too large quantities there is a tendency to scour the animals. This is due to the high sugar content of the beets.

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it. Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased. Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble.

Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation read ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

More important. A colored doughboy had just received his discharge and was making tracks at all possible speed for the station when he caught up with another one of his company, who demanded: "Hello, then, Jackson; what you goin'?" Jackson paused just long enough to shout back:

"Ain't goin' nowhere, but, oh, man, look where Ise comin' from."

Sufficiently. Walker—Have an accident? Rider—No, thanks; just had one.—Puppet.

One of earth's great vanities lies in always expecting people to be sensible.

A New Version.

Seven-year-old Joseph had been going to Sunday school for almost three months and during that time had heard several Bible stories. His mother was boasting of his ability to relate them, while his grandfather acted rather impatiently. He was ready to start on a trip downtown and Joseph was going with him.

Then all at once Joseph, too, grew impatient. He was in grandfather's car and could not discover the reason for grandfather's lingering. So he shouted, "Hurry up, grandpa, or we'll be too late to go. You're as slow as Moses was when he built the ark."

Like and Unlike.

The death of Anders Zorn, the famous etcher, brought the talk round to Whistler, and a Pittsburgh poet said: "Whistler and Walter Sickert were once printing etchings together. Sickert, stumbling, had the misfortune to drop a copper plate.

"How like you," said Whistler, kelly.

"Hardly five minutes later Whistler, using the deffest, surest of men, dropped a copper plate himself. He stooped and picked it up. Then he murmured:

"How unlike me?"

GRAVE OF FOUR DYNASTIES

Ambitions of Austria, Russia, Germany and Turkey All Lie Buried in the Balkans.

We stood on the forward deck of the Sifra as she slipped southward, through the placid waters of the Adriatic, at 20 knots an hour. Less than a league away the Balkan mountains, savage, mysterious, forbidding, rose in a rocky rampart against the eastern sky.

"Did it ever occur to you," remarked the Italian officer who stood beside me, a noted historian in his own land, "that four great empires have died as a result of their lust for domination over the restless lands which lie beyond those mountains? Austria, devoted Serbia—and the empire of the Hapsburgs is in fragments now. Russia, reeling her influence in the peninsula imperiled, hastened to the support of her fellow Slavs—but Russia has gone down in red ruin, and the Romanoffs are dead, Germany, seeking a gateway to the warm water, and a highway to the East, seized on the excuse thus offered to launch her waiting armies—and the empire reared by the Hohenzollerns is bankrupt and broken. Turkey fought to retain her hold on such European territory as still remained under the crescent banner. Today a postmortem is about to be held on the Turkish empire and the house of Osman.

"Think of it! Four great empires, four ancient dynasties, lie buried over there in the Balkans. It is something more than a range of mountains at which we are looking; it is the wall of a cemetery."—E. Alexander Powell in Scribner's Magazine.

There will be about seven million women qualified to vote in the coming presidential election, and with the well-known tendency of women to change their minds, it may be better imagined than described how this multitude of uncertain voters is going to keep the party managers in agonized guessing.

Good Luck!

By Evelyn Lee

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

Angus Joyce stood reading over the bill of fare of a cheap restaurant pasted on its street window. He calculated, fumbled the single coin in his pocket and started toward the open door.

A foot away was a young man, thin and poorly clad.

The manly impulse of helpfulness and generosity in Joyce's nature came to the surface. He linked his arm in that of the invalid and said genially: "I have just enough for two portions of that plate dinner. Will you join me?"

"You—you understand—" stammered the other.

"That we are probably in the same boat, hungry," intimated Joyce genially. "Oh, yes! It's my last half dollar, but I shall enjoy sharing it with one in somewhat harder times, and he touched the hand that leaned heavily on the cane. Let me play the penny philanthropist, it may change my luck."

"It will bring you good luck, yes," spoke the other solemnly. "Take my prophesy, and I shan't forget you in a hurry," and then, gentlemen both; they discussed the plain but simple meal as enjoyably as though it was a royal banquet.

"You are the first real man I have met in a long time. Will you give me your address? I may be able to remember your goodness in time to come," said the beneficiary.

"I have none," replied Joyce promptly. "The truth is, unless I get work today I can hardly return to my land-lady."

"I have a shelter, it is humble, poor, but paid for up to Saturday night. Let me pencil it down for you. Promise me to share it with me if a park bench is facing you."

"I agree," pledged Joyce, and they parted.

Joyce had a number of prospects. The failure of a firm where he had held a lucrative position deprived him of some money he had invested with them, and his salary for an entire month. He had sought a new position but it was in the vacation season.

At a street car intersection he found a nickel, invested it in "some cheap rolls and betook himself to a little park. It began to rain. He traveled from shelter to shelter. Chancing to note a number of a doorway he had entered he discerned that he had reached the address of "Robert Page."

Joyce through inquiry was directed to a wretched room in the attic. A candle burned, but the apartment had no tenant at the present time. Joyce sat down, glad to rest. Then his eye fell upon a table. He could not help but notice there a newspaper clipping. It read:

"Winston Page, 501 Buena terrace, will be tendered a banquet at the Metropole by his banker associates this evening. He leaves for Europe with his daughter on the seventh."

Beside this was a written sheet and an envelope. At that moment Robert Page entered the room.

"You!" he cried in accents of joy. "It seems you are always to be of service to me. Friend, more than that—brother, my whole future depends upon the delivery of a letter by nine o'clock tonight. I have no money to employ a messenger."

"Command me, as always," announced Joyce cheerily.

"There is the address," said Page, and he placed the letter in an envelope. "Miss Alvera Page, 501 Buena terrace." Wait a bit after which, for by then—a person might question you will have left this house."

It was well after nine when Joyce reached a residence on an exclusive street. Its front door stood open. He penetrated the vestibule. In the hall, lying flat upon the floor, bound and gagged, was a liveried servant. Joyce surmised something wrong. He released the man. "What's the trouble?" he asked rapidly.

"Looters. They have forced my young mistress to take them to the platform where the jewel cases are."

The released captive led Joyce into a library, tore open a wall case and provided both with weapons.

"You remain below and telephone for the police," directed Joyce and he stole up the stairs. He glanced through the open doorway of a lighted room. In a chair over which hovered a burly ruffian with a pistol crouched a girl whose beauty was dimmed with the pallor of a terrible dread. Landing into a sack the opulent contents of a brass bound chest was a second ruffian. His weapon lay upon a stand. With a quick dash Joyce possessed himself of the pistol and, doubly armed, covered both of the baffled burglars.

It was not until the police had disarmed the thieves of their booty and taken them in charge that Joyce found an opportunity to deliver the letter to Miss Page. In a flutter of wild agitation she at once insisted that he take her to her brother.

And Robert Page had called him "brother," and when a year had gone by and Angus Joyce had regained his old social position there was reason to believe that the prophecy of good fortune was to come to fulfillment complete.

Concluded next week.

The Evidence is at Your Door

Chelsea proof is what you want and the statement of this highly respected resident will banish all doubt:

C. Lehman, 420 Garfield St., Chelsea, says: "Several years ago I was bothered with weak kidneys and backache. There was a general lameness across the small of my back and my kidneys were irregular in action. Nights I was restless and felt all tired out. Finally I used Doan's Kidney Pills which I saw advertised and their use put a stop to the trouble. My kidneys became normal and the lameness left my back. I am glad to recommend Doan's because I have found them to be a splendid remedy." (Statement given March 1, 1913.)

On April 27, 1920, Mr. Lehman added: "I still use a few Doan's now and then when I find my kidneys require a tonic and they always bring the same good results as when I endorsed them in 1913."
