The Wall Paper Situation For the Spring of 1921

As Forecast By One of the Largest Wall Paper Houses in the Country

Paper Houses in the Country

The reduction in prices of nearly all kinds of merchandise has raised this question—Why is it that WALL PAPER is not cheaper?"

It is our desire to inform you on this subject so that you can explain why the price of WALL PAPER has not been reduced and why the price WILL NOT BE LESS this season.

The one biggest item entering into the cost of WALL PAPER is the WHITE PAPER apon which WALL PAPER is printed.

The white paper or raw stock makers sell their product to WALL PAPER manufacturers by the pound, and the price is made for THE YEAR beginning July 1, 1920 and ending June 30, 1921.

You have undoubtedly observed the constantly increasing cost of Newspapers and from this very fact will recognize the obvious necessity for existing prices on WALL PAPER.

Furthermore the American available supply of SPRUCE WOOD for making paper is nearly exhausted and white Ganada has plenty the exportation to the United States is largely prohibited.

Labor is the next BIG ITEM which must be considered before the price on WALL PAPER can be definitely determined.

A wage FOR THE WALL PAPER, YEAR is discussed and BLOCK CUTTERS and contracts are signed that are equally binding upon the men and the manufacturers.

Thus you see that in NO WAY can prices be less on WALL PAPER this season because it is absolutely impossible for the mills to buy white paper cheaper or to secure capable men at a less wage. Our Spring Stock of Wall Paper has expected and will be supplyed and contracts are signed that are equally binding upon the men and the manufacturers.

Our Spring Stock of Wall Paper has arrived and will be on display next week. Make your selection early.

WELL-KNOWN CHELSEA

DIES SUDDENLY

BOY DIES SUDDENLY
The residents of Chelsea were greatly shocked this morning to learn of the sudden death of william F. Mayer, at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mayer, of South Main street, about 1
1 o'clock Wednesday evening.
Mr. Mayer, accompanied by A. H.
Schumacher, left the Masonic club room at 10:15; and when they parted at the Schumacher residence the young man scenned to be as well as usual. In fact, he had attended to his work all day in the Holmes & Walker store, where he had been employed for nearly two years, and had not complained of feeling ill.
After his arrival at home he took a bath and as he was going up the stairs to his room he was heard to stumble and at the top landing fell to the floor. His father and brothers assisted him to his room and he died almost immediately after he was placed on the bed.
He was born in Sharon, March 10,
1893, and Chelsea has been his home for the past few years. He served from May to December, 1918, in the navy at Great Lakes, Illinois, was a member of Olive Lodge F. & A. M., Olive Chapter R. A. M., Zal Zas
Grotto, of Ann Arbor, Herbert J.
McKune Post The American Legion,
and St. Paul's church.
He is survived by his parents and several brothers and sisters.

BETTER BUTTER GRADE

Alm OF GREAMERY MEN

Uniform grading for all Michigan, and a better quality of butter as a result, are aims of state creamery men who will gather at the Michigan Agricultural College from January 18 to 21 for a short course on "Cream Improvement." Difficulty in disposing of cheaper quality butter, and general uncerainty of market conditions led to the establishment of the school or conference, which is planned especially for creamery field agents and managers.

OVERLAND TRIP TO CALIFORNIA

tions of a Modern Juggernant.

Arriving at the summit of the Cajon Pass your troubles are all over so far as the roads are concerned. At this point you leave behind you the no man's land of old rotten New Mexico and Arid Zona, with their ancient pueblos and petrified forests and once more you are back in the United States. After having buffeted about in the sand, adobe and rocks of the desert country the average chauffer drives along on the pavement in a dazed sort of way as though it could not quite be true. It takes almost one hour to make the descent to the bottom of the Cajon Pass and it is paved all the way. You can go almost anywhere in California on paved roads. Reason—because the tourist pays. From the cactus sage brush aspect of the desert in a short space of time the senery, even the climate undergoes a complete metamorphosts and suddenly you find yourself in the midst of the orange groves, roses, palms and other semi-tropical verdure of southern California.

So many beautiful word pictures and descriptions have been written and the scenery and the cities of southern California by the improvement clubs and chambers of commerce that when you get there you have great difficulty recognizing the places written about. Los Angeles is the big town of southern California. There are more tourists per square inch in Los Angeles than any other place on the globe. Out of every ten or fifteen people that you meet on the streets you might find one who was a mative and able to direct you about the city. In spite of all this, living conditions are cheaper than in Detroit. The best things in Los Angeles are the ocean beaches ten or twelve miles away. Long Beach is a resort town of about ten thousand and almost a second Coney Island. Here one can see sights that would make a blind man wink. When we were there the concessions and various amusements were running full blast. Hundreds were in bathing costume and some were in the ocean but the big majority never went near the water, especially the tres petite madammoselle did all their bathing stants in the sand under the shade of a large umrbella. Wandering elong the waters edge between the mermaids in the ocean and the merry maids on the sand it was with much reluctance that we guided our halting footsteps toward the interurban for it was time to depart for other climes. After visiting one of these places one can appreciate the dilemma of Ulysses and his Satellites when the voices of the Sireas made sweet music in their cars.

From two to four hundred students fail yearly in at least one subject. This is a loss to both the student and the school. Professor Whipple hopes by these tests to weed out the mentally deficient from those who fail hecause of lack of application, or time of study. The mentally deficient will be advised to take work for which they are best fitted, and definite recommendations will be made to the other delinquents, for the purpose of minimizing the loss, in both time and money, to the college and the student.

POOR BOB WHITE

Why do we so ruthlessly destroy the quail? asks an exchange.

The next time you kill one, take him in your hand a minute and think of the appealing little eulogy a friend of the quail once wrote:

"Here lies the pitiful remains of the farmers' ally and friend—poor Bob White! In life he devoured 145 different kinds of bad insects and the seeds of 129 noxious weeds daily. For the smaller pests of the farm he was the most marvelous engine of destruction God ever put together of flesh and blood. He was good, beautiful, game and true; and his small life was blameless. And here he lies dead, snatched away from his field of labor and destroyed that I may have a little sport!" And then go and try to wipe out the rest of the covey.

A Shy Lover

By Percival Dallas

(Copyrich), 1929, Wastern Navigaper Union.)

He was a remarkably bushful young man, and some of the smart set delighted in playing upon bis susceptibilities, but somehow from the first Jessie Derr liked him. She told her sister so one day.

"There is more in Morton Bristol turn you think, Della," she declared. "In a crowded parlor he is aucoanfortable and sensitive. A common blunder at croquet or teards is so mugnified in his over-conscious nature that he is ready to sink into the ground; but musty' to sink into the ground but musty' the have a gentle, refined mind to deprecute self-importance and shrink from offending others? He does not take encouragement for fundinarity and talk one to death on some pet hobby, or try to show off. He is sensible, sympathetic, with a love for truth and simplicity that is quite winsome."

"You always were queer-in your notions, Jessic," said Della hearthessly.

"If queerness consists of despising shan and frivolity, maybe I am." acknowledged Jessie. "It is refreshing, though, to find a young man who be not so full of himself that he is most knowledged Jessie. "It is refreshing, though, to find a young man who is not so full of himself that he is most of the thue a bore. I shall cuitivate Morton Bristol," "For his own sake?" propounded Deln skepticulty. "Solely," replied Jessie with definiteness, but there was present an almost impalpable accent of defiance which told her worldly wise sister that there was an undercurrent of more than friendly interest in her champlonship of Bristol.

than friendly interest in her champlouship of Bristol.

Brought up in a strictly home life, the junior of four sisters, Morton Bristol was in no wise effectionable, but a certain repression was the result of his home environment.

When he set whout seeking to win this sterling jewel of womankind Bristol did not know how to begin. He was all humility as to his opinion of his own merits, and analyzed his untural backwardness critically. He was measy and undecided for a week after he had resolved to approach her on the subject. He thought of trasting to a preliminary epistolary attack, but the letter he wrote seemed crude, weak and presumptuous. Then a projitions moment seemed to have a projitions moment seemed to have a projitions inductive secular, when he and Jessie, had been strolling about the jitious moment seemed to have arrived at dusk one evening, when he and Jessie had been strolling about the heautiful Dorr gardens.

"What a lovely evening," Jessie said. "Shall we rest here for a few minutes?" and set the example of occupying a hammock. Her gentle graciousness, the mellow moonlight, the flower-perfuned air seemed to surround an ideal situation where love might speak and favorable influences encourage its reception.

They talked casual nothings, but all the time Morton's heart was in his mouth; suspense, engerness, uncertainty controlled him in turns. Then he took courage, as his hand touched a dainty little hox in his pocket. It contained an engagement ring. Its presence gave a purpose to the occapresence gave a purpose to the occasjon which would raise him above the clouds.

"I—I wanted to show you something," he mustered up self-confidence enough to say. Had not Jessle's eyes met his own just at that critical moment, he alight have blundered through lits ordeal somehow. He fluttered at meeting their full glance, trembled, hecame confused, and drew out his goldhandled pocket kulfe, stammering faintly: "A gift from my sister; pretly, isn't it?" Then both nrose as a hevy of girts appeared, drauging them boisteroughy to the house to give them
some music for a dance.

Morton Pristol went home that night

some music for a dance.

Morton Bristol went home that night very much depressed. Jessie had been so gracious to him and the conditions had been favorable for telling his tame, hesitating but heart-reasured story; and he had been an arrant coward! It was the next morning that, in changing his attire, he found the box containing the ring missing from his mocket. He became anxious and excited as he concluded that it must have been somewhere about the Dorr place that he had lost it.

Jessie had been puzzled, and disap-that he had lest it.

Jessie had been puzzled, and disap-pointed, too. She took a book the next morning and went out into the garden selecting the hummock to rest in, to read, to dream. There, lying coxity in is to on her finger, "just to see how it looked."

I beg your pardon," an unexpected voice aroused her, and there stood Morion. "I lost something here, I think, last evening," he blundered on confuscelly, and thought I would stop on my way to the office and see frething the see that it, Le-"

"Is that it, Mr. Bristol?' inquired Jessie archly, and guessing all, guessing right, she daringly extended her daluty, bejeweled finger.

"Oh!" voiced Bristol, with dazzled eyes and ecstatic soul, "you—you of found it, and—and—"
"Can I keep it?" questioned Jessie rentily.

"Shell will you—will you, indeed!" rambled Bristol incoherently. "I love you so that if you will I shall float, the state of the sensible and sit down and the sensibly in the hammock and tell me all about it."

American industries and American business generally are beginning to "speed up" and the more optimistic, like Elbert II. Gary, chairman of the board of the United States Steel corporation, declares there is nothing unfavorable to prosperity on the horizon.
Prices of many commodities, including some lines of building materials, are coming down steadily, and in many plants wages are being reduced, in some instances the reduction being made by the employers and accepted by the men and in others being suggested by the workers themselves in gested by the workers themselves in order that the plants may be enabled to continue in operation.

All this is quite satisfactory to the ordinary citizen, but there is one dark cloud, despite the assertions of the optimists. This is the coming fight between organized labor and capital over the open shop. There are many signs that the issue will be joined soon. Lust Wednesday the representatives of wenty-two state manufacturers associations, in conference in Chicago, adopted resolutions pleedging support for the open shop movement. In the discussion unany speakers declared they would not employ union labor in their factories and mills, but when the cote was taken it was made clear that the resolution did not propose any discrimination against the holder of a union card. In substance the resolution was:

"It is recognized as fundamental in union card. In substance the resolu-tion was:

"It is recognized as fundamental in this country that all law-abiding cit-zens or residents have the right to work when they please, for whom they please, and on whatever terms are mu-tually agreed upon between employee and employer and without interference or discrimination upon the part of others.

or discrimination upon the pair others.

"We hereby express our purpose to support these fundamental principles of Arberlean plan of employment by the maintenance of the open shop.

"We ure upon our members to secure by discussion and education the active support of workers, merchants, hankors and professional men and all other elements of their prospective communities in favor of American ideals and the open shop."

ideals and the open shop."

Only a few days previously an attorney for the International Association of Machinists presented to the interstate commerce commission as petition charging that the larger railroad companies have united in an open shop movement designed to disrupt unionism, and that they are this year "milking the United States treasury to the tune of $750,000,000 through their repair shops and giving the work to couside concerns which charge exorbitant rates, and in this way more than $9,000 workers have been thrown out of employment. According to the machinists, this drive on railroad shop workers is only one phase of a capitalistic "open shop" movement developing throughout the country, which has for "its real object" disruption of "all legitimate labor organizations and trade union agreements."

Closely connected with the question of labor is that of immigration and its restriction. The forces of organized labor have been in favor of the Johnson bill, which would stop all immigration for one year, and so have many other elements of the ropulation, but late dispatches from Washington indicate that the bill is to be sidetracked by the senate committee and nothing done until the senators can formulate a permanent policy on immigration. In this they are yielding to the opinion of representatives of certain classes of employers, including the railroad, steel and coat people, who told the committee that the threatened "flood if immigrants from Europe" is a myth, and that there is no emergency warranting the passage of the Johnson measure.

myth, and time there is no emergency warranting the passage of the Johnson measure.

Secretary Frank Morrison of the American Federation of Labor told the committee that the federation's demand was for straight-our protection from allen labor for a period of two years. He said that reports just received from labor officials in 141 cittes showed the total number of unemployed in these places to be 1,819,372, and said he would not "dare estimate what the total of all cittes would show."

Figures were submitted by Mr. Merrison showing the unemployed in Greater New York to be 300,000; Detroit, 150,000; Philadelphia, 285,000; Chicago, 200,000; Chevaland, 118,000; St. Louis, 40,000; Boston, 50,000; Mitwaukes, 40,000; San Francisco, 15,000; Scattle, 9,000, and Pittsburgh, 20,000. In contrast to this, he showed, the net immigration, at present rates, would be 7$4,000 a year.

At his request the citizens' committee called off the celebration it had planned and also the bull, and the joint congressional comulitre agreed that there shall be nothing doing except the administration of the onto the President-elect and the delivery of his address, probably from the east, porch of the capitol. This course naturally has pecved the business men and hotel keepers of Washington, but everyone else in the country heartily comments it.

Mr. Harding's conferences with prominent men are about over. Very soon he will teave Marion for Fierda, where he will write his inaugural and presumably fluish making up his mind as to his cobluct. Concerning the littler, it was interesting if not pleasant to read last week that the hyphenated German-Americans, newly organized into a league, were virtually to ask Mr. Harding to give a piace in the cabinet to a German-American. A committee was selected to earry to Marion a list of men from which the President-elect might make a choice. The avowed desire of the new league to create an era of good feeling at home and abroad would meet with greater sympathy if it did not insist on the "German," and if it were not on the fact that one of its leaders is George Sylvester Vicreck, editor of a magazine that was formerly, the Patherland and notorlous for his pro-German activities during the war.

Then he will undertake to arrange the island's money troubles. The Culaus senate aircady has passed a measure for the extension of the moratorium for four months on a modified hasts, a plan approved by President Menocal and probably by General Crowder. The Cubaus are strongly opposed to the plan of the American bankers for taking over their financial institutions, which were collapsing. They said the bankers asked too high a rate of interest and too long a period for the loan offered. It is said the situation is unpleasantly complicated by the activity of our acting secretary of state, Normain II. Davis, who is reputed to have made a fortune in Havana under the regime of Gomez, one of the claimants to the presidency.

Discord between the British and French over the question of German reparations is further revealed by the downfail of the Leygues ministry in Patis. A large majority of the cham-ber of deputies fell in with the pop-by the senate committee and nothing tular belief that Premier Leyeues and ular belief that Premier Leygues and his collengues were too much under the influence of the British rabinet, which wishes that a reparations total be mined far below what the French people have been led to expect. Because Leygues refused to outline his foreign policy before the meeting with Lloyd George, which was set for this week, the chamber declined to give him a vote of confidence and he and his follows resigned. It was said in Paris the adverse vote was due partly to the action of the American government in withdrawing from the council of ambassadors, many deputies resarding this as showing America's tack of confidence in the French government.

Mustapha Kemal Pasha has administered a severe blow to the Greeks is Asia Mmor. Concentrating heavy forces secretly, he made a surprise attack on the Smyrna front, breaking through the Greek lines in three place and so threatening an encirclement that the Greeks were forced to retire to ward the coast. The Turks captured several towns as well as many prisoners, and it looks as if they might bottle the Greeks up in Smyrna.

King Constantine thinks the French are carrying on a campaign to force the revision of the treaty of Sevree and to compet the Greeks to get out of the Smyrna region—and it is like by he is correct in his bellef. He sincunced last week that he would not abdicate even if the allied nations should refuse to recognize him as the ruler of Greeve.

ruler of Greece.

Austrin's distressful condition is growing worse dully, if that is possible. A few days ago it was reported that the government had notified the allied nations that it was ready to quit and turn over the country to the League of Nations to manage. The economic and political situation there seems hopeless. Nearly everyone has quit work, and a general strike has been ordered to begin Thursday of this week. Workmen declare they will remain title until profiteering ceases, and demand that the deduction of the income tax from their pay inw is put in force. The government has made drastic regulations against profiteering, but these often are disregarded and extortionate prices are asked for all commodilies not under government control. The commanists of course, are ready to take advantage of the situation and start more trouble.

Detroit.—The management and control of the Michigan State Fair will go over to the state of Michigan as soon as the proper arrangements can be made with the Legislature, now in seasion at Lansing, it was decided at a meeting of the board of directors of the Michigan State Agricultural Society held Monday.

In attendance at the meeting, which was held at the state fair offices in the Bowles Building, were 20 of the 24 directors, including John S. Haggerty, president of the board. The vote to turn the fair management over the testale was unauthous.

At the same time, the $10,000 bonus that was voted George W. Dickinson, executive secretary of the fair, was rescinded. This was done on mution of W. S. Wixon, of Caro.

It was decided that a committee of five of the directors should open negotiations with the Legislature. Air. Haggerty will be the chairman of this committee and he will name the other four members. Gov. Groesbeck in his funuagural message recommended that the state take over the Michigan Fair property.

Fordson

More and more every day the demand for the Fordson Tractor increases because the Fordson has demonstrated so much usefulness, so much economy, so much labor saving, so much money saving, along so many lines of activity. The farmer has discovered that not only for plowing, harrowing, discing, seeding, mowing, reaping and threshing, but a multitude of other uses; entting wood. feed, grinding feed, churning, washing, furnishing water in the house, making electric light possible in the house and around the barns; so that, as a matter of fact, there is hardly an hour in the day when the Tractor cannot be made a profitable servant. There is ditching to do; there are roads to fix; and so on all down along the line of the numerous calls that constantly face the farmer the Fordson steps in and does the work, shoulders the complete burden of the toil and the hard work, one might almost say "drudgery."

This is the Age of Machinery, the day when man plans the day's work, or the year's work, and then turns it over to the Tractor to execute. Get the book, "The Fordson at Work," because it is free. If you cannot call for it, write and we will mail it to you. The Tractor is not only a necessity to every farmer but is an established utility along a great many commercial lines. Our allotment is limited to so many each month. Let's have your order now.

SCARLET FEVER

SCARLET JEVER

There is an epidemic of scarlet fever in the village. Although it has not yet reached any alarming proportions, it needs the co-operation of the citizens to protect from the spread of this disease. This is a highly contagious disease and one especially of children although adults may contract it. This is a dangerous disease that is apt to leave many severe complications, such as Brights disease infections of the ages ages. ous disease that is apt to leave many severe complications, such as Brights disease, affections of the ears, eyes, and other organs of the body. The state law requires quarantine of all scarlet fever patients and makes it compulsatory that the parents or attending physician notify the local board of health immediately at its outbreak. The disease is characterized by sore throat, fever, and in a few days an erythematus rash. After the subsidence of the rash, desquamation or peeling of the skin beguns this occupying a period of about three weeks. This latter period is considered dangerous as the spread of the disease takes place at this time. Therefore, every case of scarlet fever should remain under quarantine until all peeling has ceased.

MAY STORE GRAVEL

MAY STORE CHAVEL

At the county highway engineer's effice in Ann Arbor an attempt is being made to devise some way of storing gravel economically. If this can be done, the gravel pits which are used in the construction of Federal Aid road No. 35, which is the trunk line highway between Ann Arbor and Jackson, will be operated during the winter. All other working now, a reserve would be created so that' a breakdown at the pits would not necessitate the atopping of all cement mixing until it could be repaired.

TALK FARM PROBLEMS

TALK FARM PROBLEMS

Speakers of national and international reputations as authorities on agricultural, economic, and governmental affairs will address the big general meetings of Farmers' Week at the Michigan Agricultural College this year, from January 31 to February 4. The most extensive program ever lined up for the annual farm congress has been announced by the committee in charge, and plans are being made at East Lansing to care for a crowd of 5,000 or more visitors during the week.

A. F. Lever, member of the Federal Farm Loan Board, ex-congressman, father of much of the country's most important agricultural legislation and internationally known economist, will be one of the leading speakers of the week. No one is better qualified than Mr. Lever to discuss intelligently the vital farm questions of the day.

be one of the leading speakers of the week. No one is better qualified than Mr. Lever to discuss intelligently the vital farm questions of the day.

S. S. McClure, founder of McClure's magazine, traveler, writer, editor, and lecturer, will talk on "World Conditions as They are Today,"; Eugene Dawenport, Dean of Agriculture at Illinois University, and one of the best known thinkers and writers on agricultural matters, will discuss "Agriculture in Reconstruction;" while Gov. W. L. Harding, of lowa; Pres. M. L. Burton, of the University of Michigan: Miss Alma Binzell, of Minnesota University, and vice-president of the International Kindergarten Union; L. L. Driver, Director Bureau of Rural Education, State of Pennsylvania; A. E. Roberts, rural life leader, New York City, and others will be among the outstanding figures on the general programs.

Nearly a dozen state agricultural associations are to hold their annual meetings at M. A. C. during Farmers' Week. The State Farm Hureau will also hold its annual meeting at the college, and a liberal representation from its more than 95,000 members are expected to be in attendance.

Special fares on all railroads, giving the round trip for only one and one-third time the regular one way fare, have been granted for all Parmers' Week visitors, and are expected to swell the attendance at the various meetings.

"Better tell 'em, kid," Red counseled measily. "You got to come clean."

"Like h—1 I have!" Once more the fames of rage leapt high. "I don't owe this gang anything, much less an account of everything I do, The shocks of the other foot. You all know me, you all know Tm on the level. Most of you'd be up the river today if it wasn't for me—and you know that, too. firmed coolly.

Their glances met and clashed, the girl's hot with challenge and resentment, the man's cold with malice. For the first time she recognized in this creature an enomy. Then her superexcited intelligence, grappling with the problem of how to confute his implicit accusation, experienced a flash of memory followed by a lightninglike stroke of intuition.

"If you want to know who squealed," she suggested deliberately, "why don't you give Harry the office? Ask him what he does with all fils time, where he gets the coln for all his swell clothes, who he talks to when he's bulging up to the bars of the big hotels. Ask him why the cops niways look the other way when they see him coming, why he ain't never pluched—"

With an outh Harry thrust back his chair, which overturned with a crash, and jumped up, guit stumped upon his, countenance of sudden pallor, glinting fearfully in his fartive little eyes. But in the same instant the door—laft negligently unlocked after the entrance of Leonorn—was hastily opened and simmed. The first to identify the man who had slipped in and now stood fundbing with the key. English Addle cried out in shrill disuncy: "Leo!" The company timed simultaneously and with confused cries and questions got to its feet.

Slight and under normal height, panting, sweating, haggard, his face livid, eyes terrified, hatless, and with colining disheveled, Leo Bielinsky, alias Leo the Blood, sank back against the door, one hand pressed to his side just pelow his laboring leart. The other holding an automatic pistol, described a gesture of supplication. Red samped over-shoulder a profune demand for silence. Leo's broken phrases became audible.

"Croaked a bull down the street coming out of Bennie's place. Corbin and Eanis tried to jump me . Corbin got it." He greaticulated heaningly with the pistol. "Fonis took after me . Looks like a frame-up . cops everywhere I turned .

Red demanded furfously: "What in he-I'd you come here for?"

"No place close to go . . . cornered, I tell you . . Listen!" T come now? For God's sake, get me out of this!"

"Fire escape." Red indicated with a jork at his head, Somebody thrust open the shutters of one window. The murderer pulled himself together, reeled across the room, and lurched out upon an iron platform grating. Immediately be disappeared.

Now the cumor was loud in the hall below, the shrill protestations of the waiters rising above yet dominated by the deeper videos of the police. After order for the police. After order but violent altercation, heavy feet came pounding up the salets. Then penic feetened upon the wits of 'I those to the private dining room and stampeded them toward the fire escape. Primitively in their fright men fought with women for first place at the window. Stiffed screams of pain and anger mingled with muttered blasphemies; but the noise of milling feet alone would have been enough to betray them. Not more than two had managed to fight out to the from platform before the police were clamoring and hammering at the door, Leonora, thrust brutally to one side, saw the fulfilly of trying to escape before the maddened men, and, resigned, stood clear of the crush, watching the panels of the door tremble under a storm of kicks and blows.

Fear was absent from her temper, but she was shaken by impotent ex-kicks and blows.

Fear was alsent from her temper, but she was shaken by impotent exasperation and sad with regrets. This meant an end to everything, not alone to these associations which barely an hour since she herself had plunned to forsake, but to all her hope of happiness with Martin. For she had not the remutest dought but that she, with at least a majority of the others, would be arrested, jailed and, on the evidence of complicity in past exploits which the police spy, Harry the Nut, would be noble to lay before the district attorney, sentenced to a term of years in one or another of the state penitentiaries.

And long before she had served out her term Marle yould forget her; or, even if he did not, would never, never by any clance, make a woman with a criminal record his wife.

The hammering on the door stopped. The wondered why. Charife contrived to Jam his terror-racked body out through the window. Red caught Léponir by a shoulder, roughly enough if in a rare impulse of chivatry, and tried to thrust her out after Charlle. But the crosh on the platform was still too dense, She heard a duil crash nud, swinding round, saw the door, its lock shattered by the impact of a brawny shoulder, siam back against the wall. The policeman who had broken it in stumbled and sprewled full length upon the hoor. The plain-clothes man, Ennis, teaped in over his prostrate body. Her ears were deaf-

Streaming with horror, the girl fell back from the window. Red shouldered past her, climbed out, turned and caught her by the arm and dragged her after him, still sereaming like a madweinan. She tripped, her head struck heavily against the hottom of the window sash, and the lights dimmet weirdly and hurned out, leaving only darkness impenetrable, and a strange bush pierced by thin echoes of eldritch shuicks...

CHAPTER TWO

The Antagonists.

In PRISCILLA.

Rousing on an elbow, Priscilla Maine found herself awake, with a racing heart, a throat swollen with a strangled cry of horror, and a mind through whose painted murk the reflection of a woman's screams ran like a thread of purple light. Yet here was only darkness, with slience absolute

With a low gasp of relief that was balf a sol of fright as well, site sprang up from the divan, stumbled to the wall, and after a moment's groping up from the divan, stumbled to the wall, and after a moment's cropins flooded the studio with milky radiance from an inverted dome. And in a pas-sion of gratified side embraced the re-assurance inherent in the atmosphere of that richly furnished, spaclous and silent studio, her father's workshop of that richly furnished, spacious and silent studio, her father's workshop till his death and ever since her own. It was true, then: she was safely restored to her own intimate environment, where nothing resembled even memotely that frowsy room where murders had been done. She had merely dreamed a dream, one more of those amazingly real dreams which she bad learned to accept without protest as phenomena of stumber unavoldable, singularly harmless, and on the whole rather amusing.

So at least they seemed till this alght when, for the first time, stark tragedy had stalked unbidden and unheralised, rending with ruthless hands

So at least they seemed till this night when, for the first time, stark trayedy had stalked unbidden and unheraided, rending with ruthless hands the illimsy texture of illinston and rendering the dream more fact to her than this awakening, more true, and so much the more terrible.

Pressing palms to temples that throbbed and burned intolerably with their content of thoughts acrawl with fright and borror, she made her way to the bathraom and bathed her face with cold water, then with coloure till, in the sensory reaction of stimulated flosh and merves, she legan to feel measurably more calle and self-possessed, more Priscilla Maine than "Leonora".

A twittering telephone recalled her to the studio. Receiver to car, she said, "Yes? Who is it?" and heard the agitated cries of the elderly kinswoman whom she called aunt and with whom she had her home.

"Priscilla! Where have yon been all evening? I've been half frante.

Why didn't you let me-know?" I invent been anywhere, dear—only asleep, here in the studio. Please don't be cross, Aunt Esther; I didn't go to do it, honest I didn't! Mrs. Morey left in the middle of the afternoon—she had a tea on, or something,—and about half after five I stopped painting and thought Td ite down and rest a little before coming home."

"Do hurry, I'll send Arthur with the car at once."

"Please."

"Do hurry. I'll send Arthur with the car at once."

"Please."

She donned hat and cloak before a mirror in whose insusceptible depths she saw, set in her own hat and individual colifure, the face of the girl whom in her dreems she knew as Leonora; and yet it was likewise the face of Priscilla Maine. Vainly with importunate eyes she questioned that counterfelt of two countenances. How could this thing he? Was she one wonan waking and another when she slept? Was there in her a dual personally such as reading had laught her to necept as a psychological possibility? Did two natures struggle with her, one prevailing in her hours of slamber, and not always even then?

That train of speculation she was afraid to pursue too far.

I. THE PORTRAIT

II, THE PORTRAIT

II, THE PORTRAIT

Beside the mirror, a long pier glass, stood a heavy studio easel holding a full-length enovas, an unfinished portrait of herseif in the Zingara dress she had once worn at a costume dance. Begun long ago, on a day when a medical failed her, and carried out inconsecutively, "when she felt in the mood," the painting now neared completion; a little more work on drapeless and background and it would be ready for exhibition. Inspecting it critically, with fault-finding eyes, she saw that her work was good, almost as good as her father's. The figure on the enness lived; its striking pose was instinct with aimost fosolent vitality; the face was aglow with zest in life, the eyes seemed transiently arrested in an instant of gay impudence alto-the mirror's fathful presentment of a slender, modishly gowned young worldling, the finished product of a fashlonable upbringing, a little proud, reserved, thoughtful, exquisite.

But the girl on the canvus was Leonora. And in her self both lived. But which was which? Which false, which true? Was the life she knew, the life of Park neume and Fifth, in teas, dimers, theaters, dances—relieved only by these flore in the study.

If Aunt Eather only guessed how in-fluitely more dreadful that other life which Priscilla knew in dreams... But no one guessed, Instituctive reti-cence, jealousy of her privacy, reduc-tance to be thought different, and fear of having her sanity questioned as she herself too often questioned it, had guarded the girl's secret and kept it inviolate.

111. PHILIP FOSDICK.

About three in the morning, inding she could not sleep, she slipped into a dressing gown, and went to her desk, where for two hours ahe wrote steadily, setting forth in minute detail, as memory served, every item, inclient and circumstance of her dream. Thus she found temporary distraction and ease of mind. Unaware of weariness ill! she had written the test word, immediately that was penned she found herself beery with drowsiness so urgent it would hardly wait for her head to find its pillow.

Toward noon she awoke and rang for her maid. A pleasant languor tempted to indolence. She adored breakfrasing in led, and did so today with a relish semehow sharpened by a mischlerous sense of playing truant, of cheating life's inordinate demands. Recollection of the dream recurred tardily and singgishly, like the ineuges that reinctantily take shape on an zaderexposed photographic film, and when sharpest and most definite seemed pale and unlapportant in that warm flood of sunlight which bathed ner bed chamber, as little worthy of consideration as a writh of nightnare. But it served to pique her curiosity and, when she had bathed, she took hack to bed what she had written in the night and read it with care and, toward the close, sopnething like resuscitation of those emotions which she had known during the dream itself as well as after waking up. In the end she was aware of an imperative meed for enlightenment. The thing had grown too serious, was figuring too largely in her life; if its influence was not to prove attogether ill, she must have comprehension of its nature to give her heart courage.

In all the world she knew but one person in whom she could conceive it possible to repose such confidences. . . . She took the telephone from the bedside stand.

Merely to hear that low-pitched, agreeable voice with its increalicable lings of humor was contorting. Her clouded countenance was lighted up by a smile of gratitude—and of affect too.

"Philip, dear! Do you know I haven't seen you for ages?"
"That's brasen blague, Priscilla, It's your own fault; you will insist on drenching the springtime of your life with turpentine and varnish, overlooking the most important things entirely."

"What do you consider the most im portant thing in life? Yourself?" "No; you. And next to you, lotting me make love to you."

Priscilla had been to school a few days for the first time in her life when she met a friend on the street one day, who inquired about how she was getting along.

"But what does your papa say about 15" inquired the friend.

"Oh, he is kind of uneasy in his mind, too," suswered Priscilla.

"Well, what are you going to give yours?" questioned Jimmy's friend, "Oh," answered the young sage wisely. "I believe in preparing for war in times of pence. I'm going to give ber a pair of stippers with soft soles."

Bark on trees and shritbs corresponds with the skin on animals. But it isn't wood, according to one sclentist, and it isn't formed as wood is formed. It covers the wood, and it is generally an easy matter to separatic the bark from the wood. Hemp and jute and flax are all bark—the outside covering of certain vegetable growths. Bark is composed of three layers of thesus. The hishic layer conducts food to the plant, and under a magnifying glass is seen to be made up of they fibers. Then there is the "green zone," as it is called, and this also is fibrous and helps feed the plant. The outside layer is cork, and is really dead. That is, these cork cells develop and the 'immediately, so one really sees only a dead tree when he tooks at the bark. The cork of commerce is the bark of a certain kind of tropical tree, but the outer layer of bark of all trees is technically known as cork, and the little cells golge to make it up are

OFFICER TELLS OF BALLOON TRIP

Naval Officers Lost to the World for Twenty-Nine Days.

ARE FOUND BY AN INDIAN

Wandered Four Days in the Dens Woods and Were on Verge of Beath When Rescued—Thrilling Story of Trip Told by an Officer.

Mattice, Ont.—The three American naval officers, Lieuts, Hinton, Furrell and Kloor, who abandoned their wreeked balloon near Moose Factory on the shore of James bay on Dec. 14, arrived safely here. The following story of the bulloon trip of the airmen was told by Lieut. Stephen Farrell:

ing story of the balloon trip of the airmen was told by Lieut. Stephen Farrell:

Lieut. Farrell's story of the flight and wanderlugs of the trio begins with the morning hours in Rockaway mayal air station on December 13 and goes on through the flight, the landing, and up to the meeting with the indian at Moose Factory who saved their lives. "It was just an ordinary balloon hop." Farrell began. "It was for training. Iffaton told me after we left that the gas in the balloon was ten days old, stale and impure.

"Hinton called me up at about twenty minutes to 12 (December 18) and told me I could come on flight if I wanted to. No special orders are needed. We just got permission from Commander Cummings of the post and Executive Officer Douglas.

"I am senior officer of the three, but Kloor was in command of the flight, as he is a balloon officer and I am a gunnery officer. I have been in avisition for three years and have down in every kind of aircraft. We

"Wo had four pigeons; we let the first one go with a message for the Brooklyn navy yard.

"Hinton and Kloor had heavy underwear and uniforms under their flying suits. I had only the underwear and the flying suit. I had a grlp with my uniform and some other things in it. We had eight sandwiches and two thermus bottles of hot coffee. None of the underwear was electrically heated.

"We expected to land next morning in upper New York state. We had no maps or charts except a railroad map of the Canadian Quebec Central line, which I bought. We had three chances to land before we did. We did stop once at Wells, N. Y.

"We made fast to a tree near a light. It was in a window of a farmhouse. A man came along and we asked him where we were. He told na, but he could not say what big town we were near.

ns, fur he could not eay want big town we were near.

Kloor Game to Go On.

"We cast loose and went up again. It rained and blew during the night. We could have landed at Ottawa at 11 p. m. We saw the lights of a big city. But Kloor is just a kid and he was enthusiastic about a long flight. We all agreed that we ought to do a decent flight. There had been rain from Wells on.

"The wind was north by west. That night it blew hard and rained. There was no sign of civilization. But we Usening. At daylight we saw only formers. The rain had calmed down. There were low clouds and fog.

The rain had calmed down. There were low clouds and fog.

"The rain stopped at 8 n. m. (December 14). We ate all our food during the night. We had two packages of cigarettes and one box of matches, but you cannot snoke in a hydrogen balloon. We realised we were in bad that morning."

balloon. We realised we were in bad that morning."

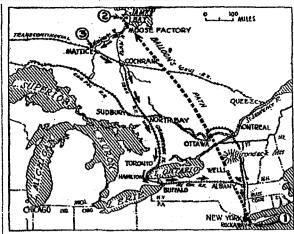

At 11 s. m. the sun came out and heated up the gas in the balloon; that makes the gas expand and souds the balloon up.

"We were fighting to keep in the sir. All we saw was trees, lakes, and snow. It was about 1:30 p. m. that we saw a shack in the woods. At least we thought it was a shack. We were in doubt about this until where in doubt about this until where in doubt hearings with the compass on the shack and the piace where the dog barked. We decided to land. We were in low clouds about 1,000 feet high. The wind was north by west, the sun had been heating up our bag and we began to go up. We reached 6,500 feet, it takes a long time to go from that height.

Make a Sad Landing.

panket was amasned against the ground,
"The balloon caught between the trees. We had taken the pigeons into the basket to protect them from the landing. Usually they ride in a cage tied outside of the basket. The weather was clear and nearly freezing.
"All three of us stepped out of the basket in our flying clothes. I took the grip. We were soaking wet. Kloor took the pigeon cage. We started off at a terrific pace to get where the dog barked. We did not stop to ingreet the ht.!!con. From the bearings I took in the balloon we figured the deg to be south by east from us.

"We did not eat that day; we carried the pigeons until the next day. There was some snow on the ground. So, we got a lot of pine brush to lie on and I picked a lot of rotten wood with my penkulie. We had no firearus—only the knife and the box of matches.

"Hinton went on a little to find a stream. While he was gone he laid off his flying suit to make better headway and he could not find it on his way back.

"That night I slept next to Hinton. He was next to the fire. I was on the outside. Kloor lay off to one side and slept. We got on fine together in the forest. Hinton and I didn't sleep. We got up at daylight.

what probably made me sick the next day. We started off, I carrying my grip.

"We came to a creek that day (the Indians call this stream the Nesconaga). Hinton was leading and kept moving too far to the west.

"I proposed to him to go southeast. In 39, minutes we got to the creek, which was not frozen over, so we had to follow the bank. We camped again in good shape. I, for one, was not very hungry, but we were cold when we stopped walking.

"We had made a fire and rested at noon, but we did not eat in order to conserve food. We argued about where we were. I figured it somewhere in the woods in Canada, but wasn't sure.

How They Were Garbed.

"At that time I was still in my nying suit, Hinton in uniform and Kloor in uniform and Rylor suit. We all wore nying boots. My grip kept getting foul of trees, so I threw it away at ten o'clock, but took care to put it in a tree. Before that I got my good English shoes out of the grip and put them on and threw away my flying boots, which were pretty near

"I did not make more than four miles the first day nor more than seven or eight the second day. Our night camp was on the creek. We did not ent. During the day we all nibbled a bit of a kind of moss we found grow-to-mound.

ent. During the day we all nibbled a bit of a kind of moss we found growing around.

"We were not cheerful. We began to dread that this dog barking proposition was a kind of phoney. There were so many noises. I floure now it was a wolf barking. We saw a lot of wolf tracks.

"Kloor told us ho had been praying—not out loud, but just to himself. I'm not much on religion; I didn't pray. No more than I made a proposition they should dine off me.

"Hinton and I discussed our course while Kloor was praying. We had to admit we were in a pretty serious jam and feit pretty blue. But when we quit we had a hunch that the third day was going to be lucky.

"We ate the second pigeon and killed the other one the morning of the third day—December 16. Kloor put she deed pigeon in his pocket, We did this to do away with the cage.

"During the night Hinton and Kloor got their feet in the fire. Now their flying shoes were burned and they had to throw them away and walk in uniform boots. My shoes were in the best shape.

form boots. My shoes were in the best shape.

Hikers Growing Weak.

"We were all growing weak and fell a lot in holes and over trees. Hinton was very weak. I felt like vomiting. Hinton was nauseated, his stomnel; was very bad, but our heads were as clear as they are right now.

"If we had had a definite object we could have gone fifty or a hundred inlies without so much distress. We saw so much of the same sort of woods that it spicared we were not going anywhere. But we were not going in circles thecause we were steered by the compass alganging through tha wood. That counted against us.

"I began to lag behind pretty much and Hinton suggested that I take off my flying suit. I did, and walked in my underclothing the rest of the trip. "Hinton wrapped my suit around him as a sort of blanket. Just before noon I had a nasty fall over a tree trunk into a hole three feet deep. I was bruised and scratched but I got up alone.

Hunch Fails to Help Out.

"We didn't eat at noon and made fire and warmed up and started off again all together. We were pretty blue," when we camped the third night. Our hunch about the third being the lucky day flivvered.

"Hinton could hardly hold his bead

I said, 'No, we'll have plenty of time to do thut.'
"Binton could hardly hold his head up. It was very cold and it sure was our worst alght. We slept again with Hinton fiear the fire and me on the outside. I had the flying sult on, but it was too cold to lie still, and I would get up often.
"When I did Hinton did too, and we would both sit near the fire for a while. Khoor slept fine, almost in the fire. He kept getting his feet in the fire and we would have to pull them out.

"Next morning we kidded the kidthat's what we called kloor—and told him he had been hogging the fire.
Hinton had the matches, because he knows how to light a fire. We were careful with the matches. We would go stiff when it took Hinton two matches to get the fire going.

matches to get the fire going.

Trio in Bad Shape.

"Bloor had lots of pep after his night's steep and Hinton was in bad shape. I was a bit better off than Hinton, but not much. We started off without food along the bank of the creek. I had a hunch that night might have frozen up the creek and I left them to go down and try it ont."

The distance covered that afternoon was not more than three miles. Next day (Thursday) almost the same story was repeated at nightfall, their distance from the "hypothetical" villago being still as undetermined as when they made their landing.

Friday proved to be the lucky day. In the morning Tom Marks, a Cree Indian trapper, who was inspecting his traps on the cuitakirts of the settlement of Moose Factory, an Island in the bottom of James bay, noticed tracks which he judged to have been made by three white men. His curically getting the hetter of the native indian timidity in the presence of the unusual, Marks followed up the tracks until carly in the afternoon he came upon the three balloonists.

Kloor's Story of Trip.

"The first days out were the worst," said Lieutenant Kloor, describing their experiences. "We had practiced walking with snowshoes at Moose Pactory while we were there and thought we were experts with them, but after going a day on the trail changed our minds. It was quite stormy, too, and the first week we were out we encountered three severe blizzards.

"On Sunday a week ago it became so had we were."

countered three severe blizzards.
"On Sunday a week ago it became so had we were compelled to retrace our steps for more than a nile. We also found that the dugs we had with us were inndequate for the load we were enrrying and had to send back for more. The weather, however, was not very cold. We had lots of moose mean to eat and I think we are all feeling fine."

ment to eat and I think we are all feeling that."

"What scientific values to be derived from your trip?" was asked.

"The main scientific fact demonstrated," replied kloor, "is that a balloon of 35,000 cubic feet capacity can remain in the air for more than twelve hours. We swere in the air for twenty-five hours and could have remained there tonger. Further than that I think nothing ought to be said until we report to our superiors."

Doge Hail the Arrival.

Dogs Hall the Arrivat.

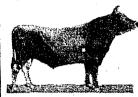

Kloor, a blue-cyed, ruddy young fellow who looked to be in the pink of condition, was the first to arrive. He came whiting around the head of the Missanaihi into the town, riding on the dog sled, with Sam Salustinry Teronda explorer, who had gone is meet him.

"I feel fine. We're all all right. A I ask is that I get to a fire." he said.

ri Organization Doubled in mbership in Two Years Be-cause of its Usefulness.

Two years ago the United States epartment of Agriculture and co-certifug agencies organized a bull sociation in Webster county. Mo, this 31 members, Now there are twice with 31 members. Now there are twice that many members, due to the success and usefulness of the association. Before the association was formed there were 18 bulls owned by the men who afterwards joined it. Upon the formation of the organization the number of hulls was reduced by two-thirds, because after the members had been arranged late blocks, it was found that six bulls were enough. These were much finer animals, however. Judging them by their money value, the new ones were three or four ever. Jugging them by their money railie, the new ones were three or fout times as good as the ones they re-placed, since the average investment per bull was $75 before organization and $276 after. Yer, owing to the smaller number of builts needed under the co-operative as bulls needed under the co-operative arrangement, the cost per farmer was but little more. The members had on the average $43.71 invested in their inferior bulls, while the superior bulls owned by the association cost rach member only $53.45. This $10 increase of cost per member meant a $200 increase of value in the luditional bulls from which they now have service—one thing which ac-counts for the doubling of the meri-hership of the association after tun-ning two years. The value of the colf-crop will probably show a very much greater increase.

FARMERS MIXING OWN FEEDS

Dairymen Discatisfied With Comme clai Materials Are Turning to Co-operative Buying.

"Farmers are almost universally dissatisfied with mixed commercial feels and are depending more on mixing their own rations," says Henry MeGough, chairman of the dairy committee of the illimois Agricultural association. He adds: "They are all interseted in the co-operative buying of mill feeds such as bran, cottonseed meal and gluten and at times when there is a shortage in roughages in the purchase of affalfa hay."

Commercial mixed feeds ought to give more satisfactory results because the manufacturers with their improved machinery for mixing, large capital and ability to purchase feeds and grains in large quantities should by able to supply a satisfactory feed at a reasonable price. Out hulls, weed seeds, chaff and cheap moinsees do not make a nonrishing or satisfactory feed and their extensive use by some mixers has brought these disparaging remarks from Mr. McGouch.

SUCCESS IN DAIRY FARMING

Carclesaness in Breeding and Calf-Raising is Sure to Result Dis-astrously to Herd.

Success in dairy farming depends to a great extent upon the careful rearing of the culves. Carelessness in breeding and calf raising is bound to result disastrously to a herd, or at lenst keep it at a standstill, as far as improvement is concerned. Without raising calves from which to replace discarded aniumls it is abnost impossible to raise the average production of the herd. Purchasing cows for this purpose is a very unsatisfactory method. Cows placed on the market are almost certain to be of very ordinary grade, since a good cow whose value as a milk producer is known is not offered for sale at market price. Therefore, the dairy farmer should take ievery precaution in handling the young calves which are to be placed in the herd.

PRODUCTION OF DAIRY COW

Animal May Be Considered Profitable
if She Yields 6,000 Pounds of Milk Each Year,

A cow may be considered profitable if she produces 0,000 pounds of mills or 200 pounds of butterfat per year A good dairy cow should produce 8,000 pounds or more of mills or 400 pounds or more of butterfat.

BEST TYPE OF DAIRY COW

Must Be Capable of Producing Large Quantity of Milk and Butterfat Economically.

A dairy cow is one of distinct dairy type and dairy breed capable of pro-ducing a large quantity of mits and butterfut eccionically or at a profit, and to produce calves regularly as good or better than herself.

MISTAKE IN THE LOCATION

Walter's Assertion, Travele Convinced They Were in the Wrong Room.

The late William Dean Howells was very fend of traveling in Spatia. He once said on his return from Andatuslar.

"The Spaniards, especially the sbuthern Spaniards, have enormous families. Eight children is the average, and families of 16 and 17 children are quiet common.

"But they don't know how to raise these children. They take hables of three or four months traveling with them. In every hotel and train there are sure to be as many hables as adults.

"I was ushered one evening by a Mahaga waiter into the lotty marble and bronze restaurant of a sumptions hotel. The restaurant was crowded with bables.

"This is our dining hall, senor," said the waiter complacently.

"I put my hands to my cars.

"Your dining hall? I said. 'Don't you mean your hear' room?'

Bad Stomach Sends Her to Bed for 10 Months

Extonio Gets Her Up I

"Over a year ago," says Mrs. Dora Williams, "I took to bed and for 10 months did not think I would live. Entonic helped me so much I am now up and able to work. I recommend it highly for stomach trouble." Eatonic helps people to get well by taking up and carrying out the excess acidity and gases that put the stomach out of order. If you have indigention, sourness, hearthurn, beliching, food repeating, or other stomach distress, take an Eatonic after each meal. Big fox costs only a trifle with your drug-ist's guarantee.

read with keen interest by every citizen.

Chas. Hyzer, Madison St., Chelsea, says: "Several years ago while living in Ypsilanti, I was a sufferer from kidney trouble and backache. Sharp, shooting pains through my kidneys made work a burden. If I stooped I could hardly straighten again. Finally a friend who had used Doan's Kidney Pills with good results told me to try them and after using them I soon received relief. Three boxes cured me. I am glad to say Doan's are a fine remedy."

Mr. Hyzer gave the above statement starch 1, 1913 and on April 27, 1920; the added: "I am glad to sagain recommend Doan's Kidney Pills and confirm my statement which I gave in 1913, regarding the merits of this remedy. The cure they made for me it that time has remained permisent."

SILENT WIVES WOES

SILENT WIVES WOES.
London has been the center of some remarkable legal situations, but it is safe to declare that none of these has been more picturesque or more incredible than the recent divorce snit of a couple who lived in complete conjugal silence for four years. At the end of that period the lady in question decided that she had had enough of it. Her petition was dismissed, but to date there has been no reconciliation. An attentive public can now settle down to the prolonged delight of waiting for one of them reconciliation. An attentive public can now sattle down to the protonged delight of waiting for one of them to break the silence. The popular theory that women cannot remain silent is given a hard blow, but not necessarily a futal one, by the fact that the wife was able to hold her tongoe as long as she did. When she did come out of the silence, she declared that the hick of conversation had "wrecked her life." That she kept on doing the man's cooking, making his bed, and attending to the housework shows that hope was not dead within her, says Philadelphia Press. But the shent gentleman's tennicity did not went out. It is significant that the cable dispatches carrying the story quoted the woman at considerable length, but the noiseless husband apparently made no comment.

It is, of course, true that the privilege of wearing military titles by courtesy has been abused by some and made ridiculous by others. That was the case after the Civil war, and it will happen again in the years to come, while the world war is jurning from an actuality into history. The possibility—even the certainty—of this is no reason for abandoning a practice which, honestly and legitimately followed, gives an entirely innocent satisfaction to a great number of good people and works no real harm to anybody. It, as time goes on, a few colonels blossom out into generals, and more capitains and more interesting of the generosity of It is, of course, true that the priv jora into colonels, through their own forgetfulness or the generosity of neighbors, a kindly smile is about all the inaccuracy deserves in the way of comment. A military title that was well earned and bravely borne is a thing of glory—a thing to be valued in the future as it always has been in the past by all patriotic citizens. That jewels are sometimes stolen does not decrease their value—it is only another proof of value.

Many men now in comfortable cir-imstances remember how they laid
