PHONOGRAPHS AND RECORDS

What music lovers discovered in the Brunswick Method of Reproduction

WHEN all is said and done, when every comparison is made, final judgment of any phonograph rests in the tone. All else is secondary.

And it is in this important particular that the Brunswick Phonograph won its fame.

Its cabinet work was taken for granted as of the finest, for the House of Brunswick has been noted for its craftsmanship in wood-working for 76 years.

A surprise for all

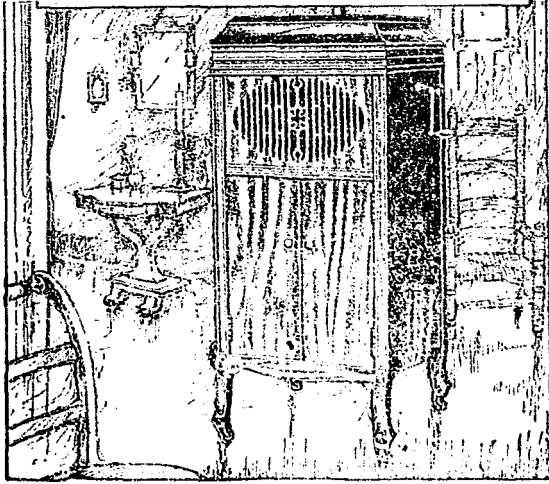

What a revelation, however, came when music lovers became acquainted with The Brunswick! Old happiness is gone.

Much of the improvement is due to the Brunswick Tone Amplifier, built entirely of selected, seasoned wood.

Another great advancement, and exclusively Brunswick today, is the Ultona, an all-record reproducer.

These and other advancements have been combined and related in an instrument made entirely by the House of Brunswick.

Proof of the superiority of Brunswick Phonographs is coming in, hearing them and making comparisons.

LEGION HELD SOCIAL MEETING

Prof. Ruthven Gave an Excellent Address Monday Evening to Large Audience.

A large number of the men of Chelsea and vicinity attended the meeting in the Legion club rooms Monday night. As announced beforehand, the meeting was an open one, and the men took advantage of the opportunity to hear one of the best lectures that has been given in Chelsea for some time.

The meeting was in charge of Herbert J. McKune Post No. 31, The American Legion, and was opened by the singing of America. Ernest Wagner read the preamble of The American Legion, as adopted at the national convention at Minneapolis, November 11, 1919. R. D. Chesebrough delivered the address of welcome after which he introduced the speaker of the evening, Mr. Ruthven, Prof. of Zoology at the University of Michigan.

Prof. Ruthven has been sent on scientific expeditions to several different parts of the world by the University. His talk Monday evening dealt with his last expedition to South America last summer. Not a tale of thrilling, blood-curdling, hair-raising encounters and miraculous escapes from the Cannibals, Indians and wild animals, but a story based on facts. Although Prof. Ruthven has been in touch with the different tribes of Indians, he says all that is required to get along with them is common sense and sound judgment.

If anyone was in doubt as to the reality of the story, all doubts were dispersed when the questions began coming at Prof. Ruthven at the close of the lecture. They came like shots from a rapid fire machine gun and Prof. Ruthven handled them like one who had been at the business all his life. Not a question was asked but what was very satisfactorily answered.

The Legion is to be complimented for procuring such an able speaker. It shows that they are trying to do something for the upbuilding of the community and creating a greater community spirit. They are planning for a meeting of this nature once a month and more should arrange to attend and help boost the community.

Joseph Eisele.

Joseph Eisele was born in Hatten, Alsace, January 18, 1841, and died at the home of his niece, Mrs. George Hoffman, of Chelsea, Saturday, January 29, 1921.

Mr. Eisele had been a resident of Chelsea for about 43 years, and since June of last year had made his home with Mr. and Mrs. George Hoffman. He was married twice, the first time in his native country to Miss Barbara Hindelang, who died here about 40 years ago. His second marriage was about 37 years ago, with Miss Elizabeth Eder, sister of Geo. Eder, of this place. Mrs. Eisele died ten years ago.

He is survived by one son, Joseph Eisele, of Jackson, one daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Thierly, of Fostoria, Ohio, five grandsons, two granddaughters, and a number of nephews and nieces.

The funeral was held in St. Mary church, Tuesday morning, Rev. Fr. VanDyke officiating. Interment at Mt. Olivet cemetery.

Surprise Party.

A pleasant event took place Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Barth of Lima, when the S. P. L. club of St. Paul's church surprised Mrs. Barth, the occasion being her 64th birthday. The program consisted of songs, address of welcome by Rev. Krause, recitation by Mrs. Eppler and an original poem by Little Wackenhut and at the close each member presented her with a birthday card. At 10 o'clock 14 sat down to a well filled table which was greatly enjoyed by all. After wishing Mrs. Barth many more happy birthdays all joined in singing, "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

Delegates to County Convention.

The Republicans of Sylvan held their caucus Saturday. Jacob Hummel was chairman, Geo. S. Davis, secretary, J. Bacon and H. D. Hewes, tellers. The following delegates were chosen to attend the Republican county convention which will be held in Ann Arbor on February 7: Jacob Hummel, J. Bacon, O. C. Barkhart, O. D. Luick, John Kalmbach, J. S. Cummings, Theo. Bahnmiller, Michael Mrekel, Geo. W. Gage, Philip Schweinfurth, Miss Elizabeth Depew, Mrs. J. N. Dancer, Mrs. J. S. Cummings, Jacob Kern, R. D. Walker, H. W. Schmidt.

Card of Thanks.

The children of the late Mrs. Mary Anna Eisele wish to thank their neighbors and friends for many acts of kindness and sympathy during their recent bereavement. Also Rev. Thieme for his kind and comforting words.

FORMER FRANCISCO PASTOR WRITES GRANGE

The following letter was received by the Cavanaugh Lake Grange from Rev. George C. Nuthurst, former pastor of Salem German M. E. church, Bristol, Wisconsin.

Dear friends: I noticed in the Chelsea paper that you have the installation of officers next Tuesday, and I want to take this opportunity of making a speech to you.

We shall never forget the pleasant times we had with you people, or the kind invitations extended to us at every installation and many of the regular meetings. As we think back to those moments and days spent with you, there arises a certain feeling of regret that we cannot be with you at this meeting.

We would certainly enjoy attending the installation but as circumstances are, that will be impossible. However, we want you to know that we think of you very often.

How many times we have wished to spend a few days in your community and see all these friendly faces once more! Again, there comes a feeling of sadness when we think if we were to be back we would miss some faces that were always present on such occasions.

Often times we have wished that we had a live grange here like the Cavanaugh Lake Grange, an organization that stands for something and does things.

You have no idea what a good grange means to a community until you get into a locality where there is none. Since leaving Francisco I have made a special study of community work and organization. I have specialized along this line, studying communities where there are no granges and others such as ours where there is a good live organization. In every instance I find there is more progress, more co-operation and community spirit where there is a good live grange than where there is none.

It may seem sometimes as though it is not worth while. The question may come up, "What is it all for anyway?" I want to assure you that it is not all for naught. There is a certain benefit in it for the community that cannot be measured by the yard or foot or by bushels and pecks, and not always even by the dollars and cents.

A certain good comes through a good organization, though it may be invisible, yet not without influence and results for the future. We are building the foundation for this future and the next generation. Thrift is the community that is laying a good foundation.

We have taken with us many things we saw and heard in your grange during the lecture hour, that will be of permanent value to us in our work.

How we did enjoy those lecture hours and the live discussions. I could tell indefinitely of experiences in community work as I have seen them in the past two years. I do not wish to tire you with this letter so in closing I will say I am a firm believer in any organization that has for its purpose the uplift of the community.

Keep up the good work and we feel confident that in time the reward will be evident.

Very sincerely your friends,

Rev. G. C. Nuthurst and family.

Mrs. Godfrey Eisele.

Miss Mary Hinderer was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, December 25, 1835, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Chas. Haas, of Freedom, Sunday morning, January 30, 1921.

She came to this country in 1854 and located in Freedom. She was the last one of a party of 34 that left Germany together, 28 of whom settled in Michigan. She was united in marriage with Godfrey Eisele in March 1863. Mr. Eisele died February 14, 1912. They resided in Lima on the farm owned by M. L. Barkhart, and after residing there two years moved to the farm in Freedom, where she died.

She is survived by five daughters, Mrs. Chas. Haas, Mrs. M. Schiller, Mrs. Wm. Kauffman, Mrs. Wm. H. Eisele, of Freedom and Mrs. Chris Horning, of Sharon, three sons, Fred Eisele, of Freedom, Godfrey Eisele, of Bridgewater, and Emanuel Eisele, of Lima. 34 grandchildren and 5 great grandchildren.

The funeral was held Tuesday morning at 10:30 in Zion church, Rogers Corners, Rev. E. Thieme officiating.

June 21, 22 and 23 have been selected by a committee as dates for the entertainment of the Grand Army of the Republic to be held in Flint. These dates have been submitted to state officers. Preparations are being made to care for 3,000 visitors. Instead of the usual central meetings it is planned to have "camp fires" in church and school buildings, with 200 prominent speakers.

YOUNG-BOY CAUGHT ON REVOLVING SHAFT

Melvin Lesser Had His Right Arm Broken in Three Places Last Saturday Morning.

Melvin, the six year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Lesser, of Sylvan, and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Ward, of this place, had his right arm broken in three places, twice between the elbow and wrist and once above the elbow, last Saturday forenoon.

The boy had been out some days before watching his grandfather cut willow brush and had been given a hatchet that he might assist with the work. Saturday morning when he learned that Mr. Ward was coming to the farm to resume his labor, the lad informed his mother that he would have to grind his hatchet. Mrs. Lesser stopped him at the time, but later, he went to the milk house, where the accident happened.

In the milk house is a gasoline engine that is used for pumping water and operating small machinery on the farm. The first that Mrs. Lesser knew of his being in the milk house was when she heard him screaming. Rushing into the building, she shut off the engine, which was running, and found that the boy had his arm wound around the shaft and had made several revolutions with his body before the power was shut off.

It is thought that the boy had put the belt on the grindstone and had stepped on the frame of the stone to put the belt on the shaft, getting his clothing caught while doing so.

The boy was taken to the hospital in Ann Arbor Monday, where an x-ray was taken and the physicians there pronounced the arm properly set considering the mangled condition in which it was found by the local physicians who did the work. The boy was fortunate to escape with his life. The last reports from the home were that the lad was getting along as well as could be expected.

Thrift Meters in the Schools.

Thrift meters are being introduced into all the schools of the Seventh Federal Reserve District, comprising the states of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan and Wisconsin, by the Savings Division of the U. S. treasury department. According to reports received by the Chicago office at 165 West Monroe street, the schools that have already received them show a marked increase in saving.

Under the new treasury plan each teacher divides the class or room into two teams, the girls taking the name of Miss Columbia's team, the boys that of Uncle Sam's team. Their progress is recorded weekly on the thrift meter, which registers up to $30 for each team. The goal for each pupil usually is one or more Thrift Stamps a week.

Superintendents and principals have instructed teachers to enter into the spirit of thrift instruction and push it in a manner that will produce results. They want this year to show marked advancement in establishing among school children habits of thrift in time, money and materials. The helpful rivalry stimulated by the thrift meters is expected to contribute largely to the success of the movement.

Among the first reports of "actual results" is that of a Chicago high school for the first fifteen days of January. The pupils saved and invested in Thrift and Government Savings Stamps a total of $1,794.25 as against $1,013 for all of last year. A measure of this success is attributed to the new method of thrift instruction adopted by the treasury department this year. It is contained in a booklet entitled "Teaching Children How to Save." Superintendent of schools, Mortenson, in distributing the booklets to the teaching force of Chicago said:

"It deals with the subject in a manner that indicates it is sound financially and correct pedagogically."

In schools where the treasury's plan was introduced alongside of existing savings plans, all savings activities benefited by the additional impetus. The treasury department has thrown the weight of its influence into the movement for teaching thrift in the schools and is giving this educational activity its constant support on a nation-wide scale.

The treasury department is endeavoring to approach the savings question from the child's point of view. During the war patriotism provided a vital incentive to save; that ideal is now replaced by the child's desire to save for a "success fund" which he may accumulate by the time he wants to go to college, go into business, etc.

The Macabee team who will take part in The American Legion euchre tournament tonight, are M. A. Shaver, R. D. Walker, A. B. Shutes and E. H. Chandler.

Manchester—Russell Middlemiss has been accepted by Chief Hudson of Jackson as a patrolman and went on duty Wednesday night. He will not move there before spring.—Enterprise.

Pinckney Pinckney will hold a special election February 8 on the question of granting the Detroit Edison Company a franchise to erect poles and equip a lighting plant in the village.

Ypsilanti—Deputy Sheriff Stanton A. Ferguson and wife celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on Thursday. The officer is still active and ready to tackle anything of any person in his line of duty.

Ann Arbor A report of the activities of the University Homeopathic hospital for the year 1920 has just been completed by Supl. D. W. Springer. It shows that the total of 5,256 cases, as against 4,647 cases during the year 1919.

Dexter—Deputy Sheriff Alfred Drew of Dexter has succeeded in recovering a motor car which was stolen from a man by the name of Goldstein, in Detroit, January 12. Mr. Drew found the machine abandoned in a barn in Dexter.

Manchester The county road commission did not accept the contract on the road west of town thinking that they could save some money to the state and county by building it themselves. However, they may make another effort to let the contract and failing may proceed to carry out the plan to build the road this season.—Enterprise.

Jackson—Frank E. Duart, brought back from Dexter, Michigan, by Under-sheriff Kutt to answer to a charge of non-support, demanded a trial when arraigned before Police Judge Simpson Thursday. Duart was ordered held under $100 bail to await a hearing.—News. Mr. and Mrs. Duart formerly resided on the farm of G. W. Coe in Lima, but left there about two years ago.

Tecumseh—Pastors of five Tecumseh churches are heading a movement to revive the "blue law" ordinance of 1871 which prohibits public amusements on Sunday. The city commission it was announced last Wednesday, will be asked to rigidly enforce the measures. Petitions have already been circulated and it is said, if the commission fails to act on them, an appeal to the electorate in April is planned.

Ann Arbor—Don Stockdale, who was arraigned January 6 last before Justice Stadtmiller in Ypsilanti on a charge of assaulting his one-year-old child, waived examination Thursday afternoon and was bound over to the March term of circuit court. His bail was fixed at $10,000. He was unable to furnish bail and was sent back to jail. The child was fully recovered. It was thought at first the child might die.—Times News.

Jackson—John Redmon, alias Edmund Ryan, arrested here January 18 on a charge of stealing a diamond ring at a local jewelry store, was Friday held to the circuit court, and in default of $10,000 bail, in jail. Redmon, the officers say, has been identified by Pinkerton detectives as Joseph Nugent, who is wanted in Chicago for a $32,000 diamond robbery. Officers also say he served eight years in Sing Sing prison for a diamond robbery in New York city.

Dexter—Much local interest has been manifested in a machine which has been in process of construction in the shop of Chas. Baughman, for Ray Baylis of Webster. The machine is the invention of Mr. Baylis and is designed to treat seed grain for smut and other fungus diseases. The machine is now completed and has been demonstrated before manufacturers. The Faculty at M. A. C. State Farm Bureau officials and farmers, all of whom pronounce it a great success.—Lender.

Brooklyn The cardinal birds that brought joy to bird lovers the past year by taking up residence in Brooklyn are said to be still with us only retired to the thickets along Goose creek for winter quarters. W. E. Randall reports seeing these bright songsters quite frequently and of hearing their cheerful whistle often. These birds are not supposed to be found north of the Ohio line, but have come up here and seem to like the place. It is against the law to kill these songsters and all bird lovers will protect them to what extent they can. The male birds are all red, cardinal red, and in this way they differ from the scarlet tanager which is red with black wings. The cardinal is not migratory and once established in a locality, not only puts color in the landscape, but helps the general morale by its whistling song no matter what the weather. Exponent.

AMERICAN GOOD ROADS CONGRESS IN CHICAGO

The safety of motor cars, trucks and other vehicles on the highways of the country and especially the dangers to their occupants at railroad grade crossings and on the bridges and culverts, is one of the subjects that will receive a great deal of attention at the American Good Roads Congress and National Good Roads Show to be held at the Coliseum in Chicago, February 9 to 12 next.

The congress and show will be held under the auspices of the American Road Builders' Association, which includes in its membership, the highway officials of the national government and those of the states, counties, cities and townships in the United States and Canada, together with highway engineers, users of roads, contractors and manufacturers of road building machinery, road materials and highway transportation equipment.

It is estimated that there are about 400,000 bridges of more than five-foot span in the United States. According to Willis Whited, bridge engineer of the Pennsylvania State Highway Department, it is probable that more than 80 per cent of these are unable to carry a thoroughly modern truck with an ample margin of safety. A majority of the bridges consist of a single span of wooden stringers with plank floors. Better construction and inspection of these bridges is one of the advances which members of the American Road Builders' Association are advocating and it is likely that a vigorous campaign will be inaugurated at the Chicago good roads meeting with these ends in view. Engineers, like Mr. Whited, believe that the smaller bridges of the country will, for the most part, have to be rebuilt and the floors of the larger ones will have to be strengthened. Truck traffic, they say, is growing constantly heavier, and the limit is not in sight.

The constantly increasing number of grade crossing accidents, too, is a subject that is expected to cause considerable discussion at Chicago in connection with the growing demand for the elimination of grade crossings. Automobile accidents of one kind or another on the public highways killed 7,969 persons in 1919 according to the census figures for 1920 covering the Census Bureau's registration area, which embraces 80 per cent of the country's population. A total of 3,598 deaths occurred on the streets of the sixty-six largest cities of the country.

The deaths in 1919 from automobile accidents in the registration area showed an increase of 444 over those of 1918.

The enormous amount of automobile traffic on American roads and the consequent increase in liability to accident will be realized when it is considered that there are now 8,000,000 automobiles registered in the United States. In 1906 the number was only 48,000, an average of 1,000 to a state. In 1914, the number grew to 1,700,000. Twenty-five million Americans are now using Motor Cars. The actual vehicle-mile use of the roads, it is estimated has increased more than 500 per cent in the rural districts and 1,000 per cent in those near the large centers of population. There are 2,500,000 miles of rural highways in the United States and 40,000,000 automobile tires are now an annual necessity.

Jackson The Lincoln club of Jackson is making arrangements for 600 guests at their annual banquet, which will be held in the Masonic Temple on February 10.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

Germany, Austria and Turkey were on the anxious seat last week; and various other nations were only less concerned. For the supreme council of the allies was in session in Paris discussing reparations, disarmament, the salvation of Austria and the revision of the treaty of Sevres. Between sessions Premier Lloyd George lunched and dined and talked in private with Premier Briand, and gradually won him over to a policy of greater conciliation. It is probable that this was quite agreeable to M. Briand, but he had to put up some argument to satisfy the French people, who are doomed to disappointment.

When the matter of German reparations came up, Doumer, the French minister of finance, made a long address in which he insisted that France must be paid 400,000,000,000 gold marks. He stated, as the policy of France, that Germany must be presented with an itemized bill for war damages caused by her, and that the supreme council should then fix the amount that Germany must pay within the next five years. Lloyd George and his colleagues wished to concentrate on what Germany is able to pay, and said there were three ways in which she could make payment—in silver, in gold and in goods. The discussion developed that Great Britain has objections to the two last named. It is held that if Germany is compelled to pay over any considerable amount of the hundred million gold marks she is supposed to be holding as a reserve, the mark would become practically worthless and the economic situation in Europe would be worse than ever. The British also point out that if Germany pays in goods the markets would be glutted and English industries ruined. One other method of partial payment to France has been proposed—the sending of German laborers to reconstruct the devastated regions. But this is opposed by France on the ground that the people of those regions are without employment and need the payment for doing the reconstruction work.

It was on the question of disarmament that the French yielded most. General Nollet's report said that the Germans were not faithfully carrying out the treaty terms in that respect, but this was contradicted by the report of the British General Bingham. The council's military experts, with Marshal Foch as chairman, then got together and agreed to abandon the original French demand that the civil military organizations of Bavaria and East Prussia be disbanded at once. A delay until July 1 was granted, but Foch insisted on guarantees by military occupation of the Ruhr district if the terms were not executed by that date. In view of the stubborn attitude maintained by the governments of Bavaria and East Prussia and the leaders of the organizations in question, it is not easy to see how the central government at Berlin can bring about the disarmament by July 1 if, as it says, it cannot do so now.

The plea for immediate relief for starving Austria, made to the supreme council by Sir William Goode, British representative in Vienna, and other representatives of the allied nations, was made in vain. The plan proposed by Goode was that Great Britain and France should lend Austria $50,000,000 in ten annual installments, and he suggested the United States might participate in the loan. But Lloyd George said this was out of the question, calling attention to the difficulty in obtaining $10,000,000 to build houses in London. The council, feeling that the case of Austria is so closely bound up in the general central European situation, referred the whole matter to a special committee, made up of the commerce ministers of the allied nations, for investigation.

Admitting that the treaty of Sevres, with Turkey, must be revised, the council decided that representatives of the allies shall hold a conference with Turkish and Greek representatives in London in the latter part of February. If the governments of Constantinople and Ankara can get together for the purpose, they will be allowed to send a joint delegation. To this extent the council recognizes the Turkish Nationalist government, and it probably is the least it can do in view of the strong position of Mustafa Kemal Pasha and his recent military successes against the Greeks in Asia Minor.

Disagreeing with the views of President Wilson as set forth in Secretary Colby's note to the Italian ambassador last November, the council decided that Estonia and Latvia, two of the states carved out of the old Russian empire, should be recognized as sovereign states. Action on Georgia and Lithuania was deferred.

From the other side of the fence—Berlin—comes the information that the German government will not recognize the right of the supreme council to settle the subject of reparations. Berlin holds that there must be first a discussion by industrial experts regarding deliveries, and then the conference of the governments at Geneva as promised at the Spa meeting.

"Pertinax," a usually well-informed Paris Journalist, says Great Britain is going to propose that payment of the British war debt to the United States be postponed until 1936 and 1947. This debt now amounts to something over four billion dollars. It is said Lord Chalmers, permanent secretary of the British treasury, will come over here with the plan for postponement.

President Wilson's note, asking that, before he undertake mediation for Armenia, the great powers promise Russia that her territorial integrity shall not be invaded, seems to have met with little response from the capitals of Europe, though it may be the statesmen are merely digesting it. Armenia herself appears to have ceased to interest any except the philanthropists who know that her people still are suffering and oppressed. As for Russia, the main development of recent days is the progress of the negotiations for resumption of trade between her and Great Britain. The Soviet envoy has received the terms demanded by the British, and it is likely they will be accepted. The movement toward the same end in the United States has received a setback in the senate committee, where a majority seems opposed to an arrangement which they think involves the recognition of the Soviet government.

The same Wilson note was interpreted in this country as aiming chiefly at Japan's continued occupation of Vladivostok and the surrounding portion of Siberia, and in this light might have been generally approved if the Republican press had not jumped on it as a presumptuous attempt to establish a policy by a repudiated administration. Anyhow, the Japanese so far have not given it official attention; neither have they made any move toward getting out of Vladivostok. The murder of an American naval lieutenant by one of their sailors, and other unwarranted acts, however, have forced Tokyo to disavow all such actions.

Ambassadors Morris and Shidehara have concluded their negotiations for the settlement of the California alien land law question and the definition of the rights of Japanese in the United States, and their recommendations are embodied in a report which Mr. Morris has submitted to Secretary of State Colby. The principal features of this report are as follows:

1. An amendment to the existing commercial treaty which will grant to Japanese subjects lawfully in this country equal civil rights with the nationals of any other foreign nation.

2. A revision of the existing "gentlemen's agreement," so as to make it conform to present-day requirements, and to that end would absolutely prohibit Japanese immigration to America and the Hawaiian Islands, while admitting it to the Philippines.

At home the Japanese government was violently attacked by the opposition leaders for its alleged failure in diplomatic negotiations with the United States, Great Britain, China and Siberia, and for keeping troops in Siberia. In reply to the latter charge Premier Hara said he would like to withdraw those troops, but he believed their maintenance in Siberia was necessary for the national defense. He admitted that the bolshevizing of Siberia could not be checked.

Hundreds of thousands of workers in the United States are without employment, but the situation is growing better daily. In the North the textile mills and many of the automobile plants are reopening, and in the South the cotton mills are resuming operations. To be sure, the worker is often compelled to accept either a shorter week or reduced wages. The downward trend in pay has now reached the railways, and last week the labor committee of the American Association of Railway Executives met in Chicago to lay plans for a request that the United States railway labor board authorize a reduction of wages. One minor road in the Southeast already has asked for such authority.

The railway executives say that at the present rates the properties are not earning the 6 per cent return guaranteed by the transportation act; that the rates now are as high as the business can be expected to bear; that forces have been cut to the minimum consistent with safe operation, and that the only remaining place for a reduction in expenses is the wage scale. They also will show the federal board that wage increases of more than 120 per cent since the President signed the Adamson eight-hour law have accounted for almost two-thirds of the increase in operating expenses from $3,100,000,000 to nearly $6,000,000,000 a year and that the national industrial conference board's estimates show that the cost of living has decreased.

Union laborers who believe Samuel Gompers and his associates have proved incompetent leaders and "have directed the toilers' industrial ship into the whirlpool of failure and corrupt politics" have just started the organization of a new national labor movement called the American League of Union Workmen. Its organizers declare they are for America and American ideals and conceptions and that they hope to establish cordial relations between their leaders and the Harding administration.

The senate has passed the bill for government regulation of the meat packing industry, which, according to its proponents, will protect both the stock raisers and the consumers from alleged price control by the packers. Eighteen Republicans, mostly Progressives, joined forces with 28 Democrats to carry the bill through, the vote being 46 to 33. Washington correspondents predicted that it would not get through the house, at least during this session.

Charles M. Schwab, the steel magnate, who was accused of having taken from the government $289,543 for his personal expenses while he was director general of the Emergency Fleet corporation, was fully exonerated by the house committee investigating the shipping board, after a somewhat sensational session during which Mr. Schwab wept over the false charges that impugned his patriotism. Attorney General Palmer and Samuel Untermyer continued their wordy battle, the former accusing the latter of having served the German embassy as "unpaid judicial and local political adviser" during the early years of the war, and of "still serving his old clients." Untermyer countered with flat denials and with charges that Palmer is a grossly incompetent official who has misused his patronage.

RAILWAY HEAD SAYS ROADS

16 Brotherhoods Strongly Opposed to Abrogation of Rights Now
Enjoyed by Trainmen.

Chicago. — American railroads through Brigadier General W. W. Atterbury, vice-president of the Pennsylvania lines, urged before the railroad labor board immediate abrogation of national agreements between roads and their employees and brought to a focus what railroad executives declared was a critical situation, threatening many roads with bankruptcy. No wage reductions would be asked at present if the agreements were annulled, General Atterbury said.

The course recommended by General Atterbury was interjected into the board's hearing on rules and working conditions which has been in progress for more than three weeks. Vigorous protest, charging the railroads with violation of the transportation act, was made by J. G. Luhrsens, president of the American Train Dispatchers' association, in reply to General Atterbury's statement.

Notice that a reply soon would be forthcoming from the 16 brotherhoods was given by B. M. Jewell, president of the railway employees' department of the American Federation of Labor. Jewell sent a long telegram to President Wilson protesting against interruption of the board's proceedings.

MICHIGAN ROADS CAN'T AID EAST

Pere Marquette Head Objects to Split or Line's Earnings.

Washington. — Michigan railroads cannot afford to give up any part of their revenue to aid New England carriers, F. H. Alfred, president of the Pere Marquette lines, told the interstate commerce commission at the hearings on the division of freight rates between carriers east and west of the Hudson river. He held increased coal costs largely responsible for the plight of New England carriers, adding that the Pere Marquette was in the same position.

Mr. Alfred attacked the railway wage policy under federal control, which left the carriers with contracts with 16 classes of labor which he said made scales on branch lines as high as on congested main track.

BERGER IS GRANTED NEW TRIAL

U. S. Court Overrules Judge Landis' Decision On Espionage Charge.

Washington.—Victor L. Berger, socialist editor of Milwaukee, and four co-defendants who were convicted and sentenced to terms ranging from 10 to 20 years for violation of the war time espionage act, will receive new trials under a decision by the United States supreme court.

Dividing six to three, the court held that Federal District Judge Keneaw M. Landis, of Chicago, was ineligible to conduct the trial and should have retired upon the filing of an affidavit by the defendants charging him with "personal bias and prejudice," because of the nativity of certain of them.

$500 IS OFFERED FOR CAPTURE

Saginaw Police Search For Hatchet
Slayer of Woman.

Saginaw.—Saginaw county officials offered a $500 reward for the arrest and conviction of the slayers of Mrs. Barbara Zuzula, who was found murdered in her home with five wounds in her head inflicted by a hatchet, found on the floor beside her. Michael Zuzula, her husband, who was held in connection with the case, together with Andrew Molad, who was a boarder in the Zuzula home, and John Kohed, a former boarder, were released. Reports of Detroit fingerprint experts, together with further investigation by the police failed to implicate them.

WANT DRY LAW MORE DRASTIC

Prohibitionists Would Provide Jail
Sentences For Buyer and Seller.

Washington.—Prohibition leaders in congress are hoping to tighten up the Volstead law. They are planning new legislation to provide a flat jail sentence for the first offense of selling liquor, without giving the courts the optional right of imposing a fine.

Other changes discussed among the prohibition leaders relate to the search and seizure clause, so as to reach the home brew and to make more sweeping the present law under which a person buying liquor may be punished equally with person selling it.

THE CORN BORER IS NEARING THIS STATE

Warning of the near encroachment of the European corn borer is issued to Michigan farmers in a statement by the state farm bureau.

The pest started in Europe, spread to New York, Pennsylvania and the New England states in 1919, and during last year reached London, Ontario, about 50 miles from the Michigan state line, the statement says.

The corn borer caused heavy loss of crops near Boston last year. It is an extreme danger because it attacks not only corn but beans, peas and beets, and even finds a home in the weeds of the swamps, where it cannot be eradicated. It is natural to expect that the corn borer will jump into Michigan sooner or later, the bureau says. Michigan Agricultural college is watching for it.

Michigan stands as a bulwark to the corn belt against this devastating worm. The state orchard inspection department is seeking a means to cope with it by asking for appropriations for the prevention of the introduction of dangerous insects and diseases. Money now in hands is insufficient to fight the corn borer should it appear in Michigan.

The plan of the state orchard inspection department is to hire a specialist who would travel through the counties on the eastern border of the state and examine corn fields next summer. If the worm was found fields could be condemned and destroyed under existing laws and the rest of the state and corn belt saved. Michigan and other corn states already have a quarantine against all seed corn coming from certain sections of Pennsylvania, New York and the New England states. The corn borer attacks first the tassels, then the stock and finally the kernels in the ear.

LOOKED LIKE SURE TROUBLE

Little Wonder Courtroom Was in Panic Over Colored Woman's Spectacular Appearance.

During a trial of a colored man in the criminal court recently on a charge of murder, there was considerable nervous tension in the courtroom, the result of remarks that had been made that some one was "going to start something," regardless of the outcome of the case. The courtroom was crowded to capacity, and several police officers were stationed about the room.

At an impressive moment, while the defendant was on the witness stand, a commotion was heard at one of the courtroom doors. Into the midst of the nervous spectators walked a large colored woman who carried in one hand a formidable-looking rifle. Policemen and detectives seized her and rushed her into an outside room, where they began examining the weapon. It was not loaded. She explained that she had been in juvenile court in a case in which the rifle had been used as evidence.

Before going home, she said, she decided to hear some of the evidence in the murder case. She and her rifle were sent out of the building, and the murder trial was resumed.—Indianapolis News.

OUR BIRTH RATE NORMAL.

The census bureau, on the strength of registered returns, gives figures to show that the birth rate in the United States exceeds the death rate by one-third, which is a gratifying fact. We are not one of the nations that need be anxious on this vital point as far as the present conditions are concerned. One of the most serious troubles in France is the warning in its censuses that in some years more of its inhabitants die than are born. Some of its neighbors grow much faster in population. This disparity was somewhat noticed in the past, yet without fully realizing the terrible menace involved. The desolate towns and farms of France are a monument to the old census admonitions and the awful sacrifice of young French manhood is far more dreadful than the devastation, says St. Louis Globe Democrat. Often have the public men of France sounded an alarm on the defective birth rate. It is much discussed now by thoughtful French legislators and writers. A census always demands intelligent study. The United States grows by immigration as well as births, and our school system tends to Americanize the whole body of citizenship. Our schools are a great melting pot for Americans of the future and to increase their proportionate number. The welfare of children is a great national issue. The birth rate and death rate need continued attention.

The National Clockmakers' association has decreed that in 1920 skirts must go higher until they are 10 inches from the floor. Whatever satisfaction some wearers and some gazers may extract from this announcement, it is a cruel blow to some women and means sorrow for onlookers who have a heart.

THE PICTURE.

Synopsis—Vaguely conscious of a double personality, but without any idea of its meaning, the girl, Leonora, makes her accustomed way into the Street of Strange Faces in the underworld of New York. Mario joins her. Greatly in love and seeing the fine qualities which the girl really possesses, Mario seeks to turn her from the path of inevitable destruction. She promises to marry him. At Mario's cafe, gathering place of criminals, Leonora meets her partner, "Red" Carnahan, and his associates, and is accused of betraying a fellow criminal to the police. She savagely defends herself. Police crash into the room and two are killed by Carnahan, and the rest escape. In her studio, Priscilla Maine, wealthy artist, awakes from troubled sleep with a distinct feeling of having her life linked with Leonora's. Priscilla has painted a picture of herself in fancy dress—a gipsy—which has a strange effect on her. Unnerved and fearful that her mind is affected, Priscilla calls to her aid a dear friend, Dr. Philip Fosdick, who is in love with her. He is stunned to find that her story of the police fight is confirmed by the newspapers.

CHAPTER THREE

The Haunted Woman.

I. CATECHISM.

There was an interlude of which she retained no memory more than a confused impression of a time of stress and conflict, of struggling with all her might to hold fast to reason, sustained throughout, it may be saved, by a sense of Philip's sympathy and strength.

A crisis was reached and passed. Growing more calm—or rather more numb than calm—Priscilla found herself in a roomy armchair with a serious-faced Philip Fosdick seated squarely in front of her, holding her two hands in a grasp so compelling that it narrowly escaped being painful, and talking steadily in even, persuasive accents, infinitely soothing and heartening.

"There!" He was alert to the first indication of returning self-control. "You're better already."

"Have I been silly, Philip?" She essayed an apologetic smile, disengaging her hand to make instinctive dashes at her hair. "Hysterical?"

"Not a bit. You're not that sort. You had a shock, enough to stagger anybody, but you've reacted famously, and now all you need do is sit tight and consider this thing coolly and sensibly."

"But how can I?" Look and gesture were once more distracted. "Why, I don't even know whether I'm myself or where I am—"

"You do, you know you're right here, in your own studio."

"How can I be sure? I thought I was, last night, but it seems I wasn't—I was, heaven knows how far away. In that dreadful place, when that happened—not here at all!"

"Rubbish: you were here asleep, here where you woke up. You merely dreamed you were elsewhere—with what psychic provocation remains to be seen. There's an explanation, a perfectly simple and natural one, for everything, and it can be got at if only we go after it in the right way. Which is precisely what we're going to do, you and I."

Words and manner carried a measure of conviction. "Thank you, Philip," she said. "I'm trying to believe, but you don't know how hard it is."

"That's where you're wrong: I do know: I understand perfectly. On the other hand, I know there's nothing unnatural in nature, there can't be; and therefore we can't fail to solve this problem except through your luck of faith in me. If you'll trust me, help me all you can, be absolutely frank—"

"I'll do my best . . . Of course, I've got to: I'll never have a minute's peace till I know the truth. Ask me anything you like, and I'll tell you the truth if I know it."

"I'm sure you will—"

"But, Philip, tell me one thing first . . ."

"She faltered and looked uneasily aside. "You don't . . ."

"You don't think I'm—wrong any way—mentally, I mean?"

Fosdick laughed with calculation, a laugh that scouted the suggestion and at the same time was indulgent.

"Absolutely not. You've got the rightest mind I know. But you're anything but obvious. 'Gila,' you're as complex a personality as any I've ever known. You're strongly intuitive—or more or less what we term psychic—sympathetic, impressionable, susceptible to influences that work on you without your knowledge. Whatever it is, the truth is known to your subconscious self, and that is bound to tell us, soon or late."

"But how, Philip?"

For the first time since he had shown her the newspaper Priscilla's tone and manner were unaffected by mental strain. Fosdick suppressed a glimmer of satisfaction, seeing he had succeeded in so interesting her that she was less sensible of what rightly or wrongly she considered a menace to her reason, than of the fascinating problem it presented.

"If we fail to get at the trouble by straight analysis—collecting, dissecting and comparing known facts—we'll catch the subconscious betraying itself. It always does. 'Gila.' No matter how jealously it may try to hoard its secret, it can't help flitting with the temptation to discuss it indirectly, and so in the end it always lets the cat out of the bag. That's what makes my job so interesting: one never knows what word or phrase, gesture or nuance of expression, will give the clue one needs. So if we fail to make visible progress in direct examination, be sure that some time, when we're least expecting it, the subconscious will prompt you to drop the hint that will lead us straight to the heart of the mystery."

She nodded eagerly, already well persuaded and only too anxious to believe.

"How shall we begin?"

"Feel strong enough to have a go at it now? Good! Then let's get our facts in order, first the things we know beyond dispute."

Philip produced a pocketbook, found a fair page, and at its top penned the notation: "Priscilla Maine—age, twenty-one."

"Where were you born?"

"Here—in New York. At least I presume I was. Does it matter?"

"Can't say as yet." Philip's words followed his fountain pen: "Your father was Henry Hobart Maine, of this city; a portrait painter; made a great deal of money, inherited more; was forty-eight when he died, five years ago, leaving you, his sole heir, a handful of millions. Your mother died when you were born, if my memory serves."

"Yes."

"Her name?"

"I . . . don't know."

Philip's brows lifted. "Didn't your father tell you?"

"Never." The girl's eyes clouded. "He always seemed so distressed when my mother was mentioned, I learned not to ask questions."

"Odd. Must have been something uncommon to make him avoid the subject with his own child. Ever strike you that way?"

"Sometimes," Priscilla hesitated, looking down at a forefinger which traced a pattern on the arm of the chair. "I'm afraid I never bothered about my mother much."

"That's human enough. Still, somebody must know . . . Your Aunt Esther?"

"I'm afraid not. She isn't really my aunt, you know."

"Distant cousin, I believe? Did she ever mention your mother?"

"Only once, and then only to say she understood father's married life wasn't a happy one."

"Didn't she say why?"

"She didn't know."

"Somebody must," Fosdick repeated testily. "Well, there's our first big question mark. Now—"

"Philip—you don't think—possibly—the reason the marriage was unhappy was because of—anything—like mental trouble on my mother's side?"

"No!" Fosdick declared with just the right degree of pained forbearance. "Do try to cure yourself of that notion, 'Gila.' It's ridiculous; there's nothing wrong with your mind any more than with mine. Let's see—"

He paused, looking at her with a keen, steady gaze.

"There!" she laughed—"Did you know Priscilla Maine could be like that?"

Impressed by his first glance, Philip merely uttered a thoughtful "Hm!" and in silence studied the portrait with an intelligent appreciation not unmixed with wonder.

Priscilla released his arm and stepped back, pleased by this more tribute, pleased as well to have her own overnight impression confirmed, experiencing that rare, warm glow of gratification which only an artist knows when he looks upon his handiwork and finds it good.

Well drawn and modeled, daringly yet sensitively painted with an unerring sense of color and values, the girl in gipsy dress was amazingly spirited and convincing. There was arresting challenge in that impudently tossed head with its laughing mouth of scarlet and dark eye agleam with charming insolence under lowered lashes.

"Well done," said Philip simply.

"I'm so glad you like it, Philip. Harkness—she named a dealer known to both—wants to show it in his galleries."

"I like it immensely, only . . . I can't get over an odd notion that it isn't you. The likeness is extraordinary—I remember well the night you wore that costume—and yet, somehow . . ."

"You see it, too?" Philip turned to her with a sharp glance. She laughed consciously. "I didn't myself till last night, after I'd waked up. Then with the dream fresh and real in my thoughts, I saw I'd painted not myself but that other Self. The girl you see there isn't Priscilla Maine, not the Priscilla you and I know; she's Leonora."

"Good Lord!" Philip looked grave. "Were you thinking of her while painting?"

"No—not consciously, not that I remember."

"And yet, without your knowledge, you must have been . . ."

He moved nearer the picture to examine it more closely.

"It brings everything back so clearly," the girl mused; "it gives me the strangest feeling of unreality, makes me wonder which is which; which the living woman, which the shadow . . ."

The voice behind him trailed off into a pensive murmur. He made a movement of exasperation and, simultaneously becoming conscious of the stillness, looked round to see the girl posed in a stare, gaze steadfast at the portrait, her look dull and remote; head thrown back a trifle, hands hanging with palms exposed in a gesture

"I've Been Afraid of Love, Philip, Because of These Dreams."

his pen hung poised—"you had the happiest of childhoods—that I know—and the usual education; and thus far you've lived an average life, the sort of life our sort of girls do live nowadays. You like fun and friends and pretty frocks, books, music, the theater, admiration; you've never once known hunger or hard work or, barring what you may have read, anything curiously appealing, her respiration abnormally slow and deep.

Fosdick took a quick step to her, crying: "'Gila.'" She seemed not to hear. He said in sharp insistence: "Do you hear, 'Gila? Come out of it!'" That broke the spell. Sighing softly, she drew a hand across her eyes, then with an uncertain smile extended it to him. Philip clasped it between his own.

"Now what?" he demanded with brusque good humor.

"I've had the funniest sensation . . . I was thinking about the painting, wondering if, perhaps, I'd done something extraordinary and weird, painted my own soul into the figure on the canvas—you know—so that it really lived and was me while I was merely a shell of flesh and blood . . . and suddenly it seemed to me my fancy had come true, that I was really there on the canvas looking into the room here, seeing myself, I mean seeing Priscilla Maine, and wondering about her and about you, as if I'd never known either of us, as if I were a stranger in my own studio . . . Do you understand, Philip? It must sound so wild and silly . . . What was it, Philip? What made me feel that way?"

"Auto-hypnosis—a mild phase—superinduced by excitement and fretting. Nothing to worry about. And still . . ."

Frankly, I don't like it. I wouldn't care to have it happen too frequently. It's no good encouraging that sort of thing; each time it happened it breaks down resistance, makes you only the more susceptible to the next suggestion. If I were you, I'd drop that portrait, put it out of sight and mind till we've settled this question—opened it up and let light into its darkness, and so relieved your doubts and fears."

"Perhaps you're right," Priscilla murmured. "But—I don't know. It makes me unhappy to have unfinished work on hand. Don't you think I might better finish it up, and get it out of the studio altogether?" But Philip's disapproval was manifest. "Please!" she begged her prettiest. "It only means another day or two; then I can let darkness have it and forget all about it."

"I can't say yes, 'Gila. I shouldn't be at all surprised if it turned out that the portrait was wholly to blame for last night's experience. I mean for the peculiar content and trend of your dream."

She was frankly puzzled and said so.

"The power of suggestion it has exerted on your thoughts," he explained. "The yesterday you never expressed it even to yourself; but subconsciously, I haven't any doubt, the thought has always been at work, that it wasn't yourself you were painting but the heroine of your dream story, another woman of a different life with an independent spirit and mentality. And then—of course, all this is sheer guesswork—there are associations inherent in the concept of gipsy girl and a gipsyish existence, romantic, adventurous, full of dangers, twists and turns and thrills; such thoughts may well have dictated the character and course of the dream, though you were never actively aware of thinking them."

"It is serious; it's life or death!"

Virtues of Bare Feet.

Eve was reputedly barefoot, and Nausicaa played ball all the better because she went unshod.

Helen of Troy at the most wore sandals, and the sandals is the compromise between the shoeless and the shod. It is easier to make sandals than to make boots.

In Ireland and Scotland the children have run barefoot for many a day, and the wit of the one and the enterprise of the other show that there is nothing really demoralizing in going without shoes and stockings.—London Chron.

Prominent Western Man Praises Tanlac

G. W. Logan, Peabody, Kansas

"Tanlac has completely restored my health and I feel finer than in years," was the straightforward statement made recently by Mr. George W. Logan of Peabody, Kansas, one of the most prominent stock-dealers in the Middle West.

"It has not only made a new man of me but I have actually gained thirty-five pounds in weight and feel as well as I ever did in my life. I am telling all of my friends about Tanlac, but they can see for themselves what it has done in my case."

"When I began taking Tanlac I was in an awfully run-down condition. I was away off in weight, felt weak and nervous all of the time and couldn't take any interest in my work or anything else. My main trouble was indigestion. Nothing seemed to agree with me. At times I would have dizzy spells and at other times my back would ache so bad that I could hardly get up and down in my chair. This is just the condition I was in when I started to take this medicine. It took just six bottles to make a well man of me. I now have a fine appetite, everything tastes good and my digestion is perfect."

"My wife was also troubled with indigestion at times and it relieved her the same way. You may publish my statement wherever you like and if anyone doubts it, just tell them to see me."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Awful Sick With Gas

Eatonie Brings Relief

"I have been awful sick with gas," writes Mrs. W. H. Person, and Eatonie is all I can get to give me relief."

Acidity and gas on the stomach quickly taken up and carried off by Eatonie, then appetite and strength come back. And many other bodily miseries disappear when the stomach is right. Don't let sourness, belching, bloating, indigestion and other stomach ills go on. Take Eatonie tablets after you eat—see how much better you feel. Big box costs only a trifle with your druggist's guarantee.

Uses for Balsam Wood.

Although it has been known for more than 100 years, balsam wood is just coming into use as a substitute for cork in some of its capacities. It is the lightest commercial wood known, and a paraffine treatment makes it available for many purposes for which cork heretofore has been exclusively used. It must be disposed of quickly after being cut, for it rots rapidly when exposed to the atmosphere in the tropics, where it grows.

Under favorable conditions cowpeas after being cut for hay will sprout again from the base. Considerable pasturage or even a second crop of hay or seed is sometimes produced, especially in the Gulf coast region, if good moisture conditions follow the first cutting. Ordinarily, however, but a single cutting can be obtained.

ANOTHER CHELSEA CASE

It Proves That There's A Way Out For Many Suffering Chelsea Folks.

Just another report of a case in Chelsea. Another typical case. Kidney ailments relieved in Chelsea with Doan's Kidney Pills.

Charles Schmid, W. Middle street, Chelsea, says: "I used to have lumbago and severe backaches. When I would stoop over it was hard to straighten again. I blamed the backache and lumbago for my kidney's being out of condition. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and a few boxes gave me complete relief in every way and I am glad to recommend them to others."

The above statement was given March 1, 1913 and on April 28, 1920, Mr. Schmid added: "I am glad to say my kidneys have given me no trouble at all since using Doan's Kidney Pills several years ago. The statement I gave recommending them still holds good as my faith in this remedy remains firm."

PROPOSED CHANGE IN COUNTY HOME RULE EXPLAINED

LEGISLATURE MUST FIRST GIVE CONSENT, AFTER WHICH VOTE OF PEOPLE WOULD DECIDE ISSUE.

PRESENT SYSTEM TENDS TO PROMOTE NEEDLESS WASTE

General Demand For Reduction Of Government Expenditures Has Brought Question To The Foreground.

The Detroit and Wayne county point of view regarding proposed reorganization of county government in Michigan has been presented to the supervisors of Ottawa county in a letter from W. P. Lovett a member of the Wayne county committee. Meeting some of the objections of Mr. Lovett says that at least five steps must be taken to get results in this program. The letter follows: Detroit, Michigan.

To the Honorable, the Board of Supervisors of Ottawa County, Michigan.

Gentlemen:—As Secretary of Wayne County Committee on Reorganization of County Government, and as a member of the State Committee which has been studying this problem, I venture to address you in the hope that possibly misunderstanding of the proposal for a constitutional amendment which soon will be submitted to the Legislature, may be avoided.

As the proposal has been discussed in Detroit and Wayne County thus far, it has been a question, not of a commission plan of government alone, but of home rule for Michigan counties. Our Wayne County Committee is frankly seeking through constitutional amendment and legislative enactment to improve our system of government, but we cannot proceed without co-operation from the other counties of the state.

We understand that there is now a general demand by taxpayers for improved methods of government in the interests of economy and efficiency. Many improvements have been made in cities in recent years. In the judgment of some authorities, it will be necessary immediately to make changes in our national methods of doing business. Governor Groesbeck has recommended to the Michigan Legislature that measures be passed in the interest of co-ordinating numerous departments of our State government. The fundamental objective in this movement is the saving of vast sums of money to the taxpayers.

In this same connection, I believe the strongest argument for improvement of county government is that the present system, or lack of system, eliminates centralized responsibility, inevitably offers opportunity for financial leakages, and generally tends to promote substantial and unnecessary wastes of money in administration.

It appears now that no substantial improvement can be made without amendment of the State constitution. Both practically and legally this view is favored by lawyers and public officials in various parts of the State.

At least five steps must precede any final action in a given county, everyone of which is based on the principle of free representative government and full popular control. These steps are:

First. Asking the legislature to study the question and permit the people of the state to vote upon a simple, broad constitutional amendment which shall be prepared in final form by officials of the state at Lansing and not by any citizens' committee.

Second. Submission of this question to vote of the people of the state giving everybody an opportunity to know the facts.

Third. No such constitutional amendment can become effective without a law or laws passed by the legislature, which has full power to decide the form or forms of county government which may be made optional in Michigan. This third step absolutely assures to the people represented in the legislature that no action shall be taken except such as may be approved by the majority.

Thereafter any county which desires to improve its situation may take the fourth step and either through its supervisors or through a charter commission decide what form of county government it may want. In case these four steps are taken, nothing becomes effective until the people of a given county, knowing all the facts, go to the polls and vote in favor of the adoption of the plan submitted.

Thanking you for your consideration, I pledge myself as a member of the State Committee of citizens to do everything in my power to meet the questions or proposals which may be advanced by any members of your honorable body for the solution of this problem.

Yours very respectfully,
W. P. LOVETT.
