

DISTRICT CONVENTION PYTHIAN SISTERS

Over One Hundred Attended Meeting Here Yesterday: Features Two Interesting Sessions.

Over one hundred members of the Pythian Sisters of Monroe, Dundee, Milan, Ypsilanti, Ann Arbor and Chelsea temples attended the district convention here yesterday, the two sessions being held at Macedonia hall.

Dinner was served at the American cafe, which was appropriately decorated for the occasion with the colors of the Pythian Sisters, white, red, yellow and blue. Ninety-two were served.

The morning session was public, the program including an interesting history of Chelsea temple by Mrs. J. N. Dancer, a vocal solo by Mrs. M. J. Baxter, and a duet by Catherine Fletcher and Dean Rogers. Ten of the grand officers were present.

The afternoon session was called to order by District Deputy Grand Chief Addie Kemp of Adrian. The memorial service was beautifully exemplified by Lucile DeRyke of Milan, assisted by members of Milan temple; song, Lerah Dent of Milan; paper on "How To Improve Our District Convention," Sister Wright of Dundee; toast, Julia Burrell of Ypsilanti.

The initiatory work was exemplified by Ann Arbor temple, Mrs. Ralph Freeman, formerly of Chelsea, being Most Excellent Chief of that temple. Chelsea temple opened and closed the session.

The next district convention will be held in Ypsilanti, in May, 1922.

OLD HAMBURG FARMS SOLD.

An important real estate deal in the vicinity of Hamburg has been completed through the purchase, by the Charles W. Burton & Co. of Detroit, of 640 acres of land in Hamburg township, Livingston county, in which is included Pleasant lake. It is estimated that this transfer of property involves about $150,000. The Detroit real estate firm will plot the land around the lake for summer homes, construct a drive and make other improvements preparatory to the founding of a summer colony.

The property includes the George A. Winans estate of 560 acres and the Hull farm of 80 acres. The beautiful residence and homestead of 80 acres of former Gov. Edwin B. Winans is included in the purchase. The widow of Mr. Winans and her sister, Miss Julia Galloway, now reside on the estate. Other residences are also included.

Pleasant lake covers about 200 acres. It is excellent for fishing, having been protected for a long time under private ownership. The Hull farm is at the northeast part of the lake and includes 20 acres of water. The balance of the lake was owned by Mr. Winans.

ANGLERS' LICENSE DEAD.

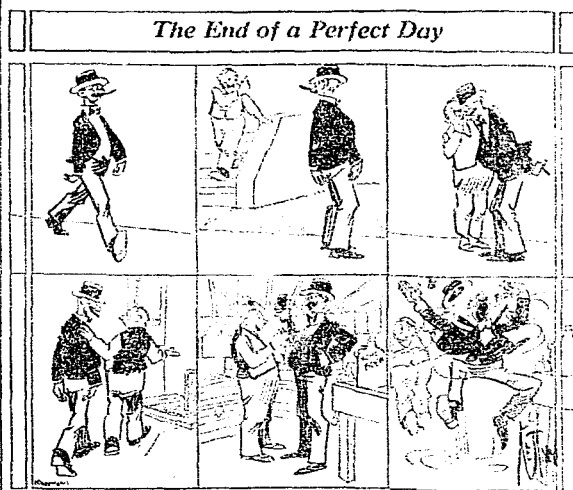

There seems to be a misunderstanding regarding the anglers' license bill several neighboring papers having published items saying that it had become a law.

The proposed license law was killed when the house decided to postpone indefinitely its consideration, and those who desire to fish may do so without a license.

"ALL DRESSED UP," ETC.

Pat had died, and Mike, while seated with the rest of the mourners, burst into laughter. When he returned home, his wife said to him: "What was the idea of laughing at Pat's funeral?"

"Well," said Mike, "about two weeks ago, Pat told me he did not believe in heaven or hell, and while I looked at him lying there so peacefully it just came to me that he was 'all dressed up and no place to go.'"

OUR NEIGHBORS' DOINGS

What's Happening in Neighboring Towns and Localities.

BRIGHTON—Dr. C. W. Hill, Brighton dentist, is now engaged in playing simultaneous games of chess with four men in as many states. One player is located in Northern Michigan, another in Pennsylvania, one is the champion of Georgia, and the other champion of West Virginia.

HOWELL—Some time during Sunday night Kieckheff's jewelry store was entered and a quantity of jewelry was taken, but the takers left no pay. A window glass in the back of the store was broken and the burglar entered through the window.

ANN ARBOR—E. V. Chilson after May 15 will become deputy secretary of state, according to announcement by Secretary of State Charles Deland, Tuesday. Albert Dunham, the present deputy, will be chief clerk of the state department after that date. Mr. Chilson has been a well known figure in Michigan politics. He served several terms as secretary of the state senate and during the last presidential campaign was assistant secretary of the Republican national committee in Chicago. He also was managing editor of the old Lansing Republican at one time.

STOCKBRIDGE—A fine school house, three miles northeast of this place, was entered by two small boys, Saturday and Sunday, and considerable mischief was done. Twenty-eight windows were broken, the glass of all the pictures and in the bookcase was smashed, and library books were splattered with ink where the bottles had been broken. Books were ransacked and their contents scattered or destroyed, and fires were started in two places, but failed to burn. The mischief has been confessed. It is said by two small boys, aged seven and eight years. They could give no reason to Sheriff Sisby, excepting that they "were having a good time." The kids live about a mile from the school.

RED CROSS AGAIN BUSY.

Once again the women of Washtenaw county are asked to mobilize for the Red Cross. Information collected by the Red Cross in Europe shows that there is instant need of 20,000 layettes and 2,000,000 garments for children.

Washtenaw's quota is 2,000 garments, including layettes. Chelsea's quota is five layettes and 135 garments for children. We are asked to make these garments as soon as possible. Patterns and materials will be sent to any who desire them, by Mrs. A. L. Steger.

GROVER TERRY AGAIN

Still Sticks To Story About Chelsea Men Who Are Furnishing "Booze" To Dextertites.

Grover Terry, recently sentenced to Jackson prison by Judge Sample for having been implicated in stealing chickens from Mrs. Mary Becker of Lyndon township on the night of April 12th, still sticks to the story that places responsibility for his wrong-doing upon liquor which he alleges came originally from parties in Chelsea.

Terry was convicted on a chicken stealing charge in the Livingston county court in March, the alleged offense having been committed in Hamburg. At that time he fooled the Livingston county officials with his now near-famous "booze" story and they are said to have scored the Washtenaw county officials for slackness in enforcing the liquor laws.

Washtenaw county officials re-nounced the unjust criticism and had the matter under investigation when Terry was arrested for the Lyndon chicken stealing job, and his sentence to Jackson followed in short order.

But Terry evidently sticks to his "booze" story, as evidenced by the following item published Wednesday in the Jackson News:

"Grover Terry of Dexter, who pleaded guilty last March in the circuit court in Howell to the theft of some chickens and was placed on two years' probation, will arrive in Jackson this week to serve a term of one to five years in prison. He recently stole some chickens in Washtenaw county, was found guilty and sentenced. He said he was drunk when he robbed the roost and asserted that men in Chelsea are sending booze regularly to Dexter."

SUFFERING OF A LIFETIME ENDED

"Words Can't Express Gratitude I Feel Toward Taulac," Says Mrs. Burrington.

"From childhood until I got Taulac I suffered from indigestion and stomach troubles," said Mrs. J. A. Burrington, 540 Stanford Ave., Los Angeles.

MRS. J. A. BURRINGTON
Los Angeles, Calif.

Calif., "and that's been a long time, for I'm now in my sixty-eighth year."

"I remember when I was a child I was kept on a strict diet of lime water and milk for weeks and I have been in constant distress all these years. I suffered terribly from bloating and had to be very careful of what I ate. I became so weak and nervous I could hardly go about my household and was in a miserable condition."

"About two years ago my husband got such splendid results from Taulac he insisted on my taking it and the medicine wasn't but a little while in ridding me of my troubles. It gave me a splendid appetite, and I could enjoy a good hearty meal, even things I hadn't dare touch before, without any fear of it troubling me."

"Then I had the influenza and became dreadfully sick and weak, but my stomach kept in good order and it only took four bottles of Taulac to build me up again to where I'm now feeling better than at any time I can remember. I have gained eleven pounds in weight, too, and words can't express the gratitude I feel toward Taulac. I keep Taulac in the house all the time now, for I know it is a medicine that can be depended upon."

Taulac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Adv.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root stands the highest for the reason that it has proven to be just the remedy needed in thousands upon thousands of distressing cases. Swamp-Root makes friends quickly because its mild and immediate effect is soon realized in most cases. It is a gentle, healing vegetable compound.

ADVICE WANTED.

"I'm in a fix with my girl!" said young Lubb, disconsolately.

"Why," replied his sympathetic friend, "what's the matter, my boy? Have a row?"

"No, it isn't that. You see, I've been saying so many nice things to her that she's getting conceited. I can't stop it and I can't keep it up."

"Can't, eh? Why not?"

"Well, you see, if I keep on she'll begin to think she's too good for me, and if I stop she'll think I don't care for her any more."

An Old Favorite.

"How did Mr. Grabeon enjoy the concert?"

"He didn't know what it was all about at first, but he showed symptoms of life when the prima donna responded to her third encore."

"Yes?"

"She sang 'Anne Laurie.' He recognized that tune as he used to play on the harmonica."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

ROMPERS

By AGNES G. BROGAN.

(© 1921, by Morning News-Press Syndicate.)

Fanchon pouted as she turned the pages of her new pattern book and gazed like one bewitched. It was the picture of a chubby boy which caught her eye, and the boy was wearing a captivating suit of rompers. At least that was the name the fashion book gave to the illustrated article of apparel. Fanchon smiled, delighted. The boy's yellow hair was just the color of the pale pinstriped material, while the tone of his appealing eyes matched exactly the rompers' blinding. He was a lovely boy. A softness came to the young woman's beautiful eyes as she studied the pattern.

Softness was foreign to Fanchon's usual laughing style. She had laughed her way through many difficulties and had mocked at barriers high. So that now, in a brave yet indifferent sort of way, she had reached her present success in the business world of the great strange city. For Fanchon had come from across the wide waters, and the home that sheltered her childhood was on the far-away hills of France. But that time, too, was far away and half forgotten.

This Mademoiselle Fanchon was a charming creature, with pleasures ever coming to seek her favor. A dainty, lovely doll of a woman, in whom as yet the most persistent tailor had failed to discover a heart.

Now Fanchon bent over the picture, and all at once in a rush of impulsiveness she was bending over her cutting table, and pale soft material was in her hands. She hummed gaily as she sought out blue facings and laughed a little happy laugh as she eagerly started the stitching. A dimple popped out in her olive-cream cheek at thought of common rompers displayed in the "Fashion Shop." Then she suddenly decided that the rompers never would be displayed. They were one of her families—she could not tell just why this fancy so deeply bit her, but the rompers would be laid aside in the square mahogany box until some little boy might be found, perhaps, to suit them. For he must have yellow curls, this boy, to receive Fanchon's gift, and eyes wide and blue. She held the garment up when it was finished and triumphed over it, then whimsically folded it away.

Lucille called for her later to take her to dinner. Fanchon's merry companionship was cheering in her own discouragements. But as the two passed on through the street door a pathetic picture greeted them. A small boy very shabby as to knees and elbows, and very dirty as to face and hands, bent anxiously over a prostrate yellow dog in the street before them.

"A car hit Tige," he sobbed in answer to Fanchon's quick questioning.

"The dog is not badly hurt," a man nearby assured her.

The child looked up hopefully into the young woman's sympathetic face. "Please," he begged, "carry Tige upstairs for me."

Laughingly Fanchon waved her friend aside. "Good-by Lucille," she said. "You know me, I will have to do as Sonny says."

The elevator stopped at the ninth floor of the building. It was there that the boy told her his father lived. Fanchon in her gills and furs obediently followed into the room, the lone dog in her arms. And as the two entered the disordered apartment, a man with graying hair as yellow as the small boy's own, and blue eyes as frank and as young in their gaze, looked up, confused at the invasion.

He was sewing with a darning needle upon some article of childish apparel. But when the man arose at his young son's abrupt introduction, his manner was apologetically courteous, and his grateful smile most winning.

"How kind," he thanked Fanchon, "to come to the relief of my little boy. He is sadly neglected these days. We seem to have difficulty in holding our housekeepers. Dickie Boy's mother died when he was born."

When the yellow dog was made comfortable upon a cushion the man came back again to find the artist of the needlework shaking her head sadly over his bungled mending.

"You see," he apologetically explained, "Dickie Boy pokes his knees and elbows through the things about as fast as I can sew them up. Sometime we hope to be prosperous enough to have on hand an unlimited supply of clothing, but now—" Dickie Boy's father sighed. "Mend 'em every night when I come home," he said.

Fanchon's black eyes were dancing. "Wait a moment," she cried, and ran out through the door.

When she returned to the two in the high apartment she carried a small yellow garment in her hands, and Dickie Boy, presently bathed and dand, was even more alluring than the child of the illustration.

"I will make him other things," she promised the staring father. "And you need not thank me. I love to do it. That will be my pleasure."

And one day, not so very long after, Dickie, a privileged visitor of the Fanchon shop, looked into the proprietor's charming face.

"Did you know," he asked, "when you made the rompers that I was going to be your very own little boy?"

And Fanchon, hugging him close, laughed back her answer. "No more," she said, "than I knew that I should find my heart there in your father's keeping, way up on the ninth floor."

Bridal Gowns in New Triumphs

HAVING thought of it more or less for years—and decidedly more since her engagement—many a June bride has already determined just what her wedding gown shall be made of and how it shall be made. Tradition points unswervingly to white satin and lace for materials and to graceful lines and simple designs in the style, and within those bounds there is much room for variations. But there are all sorts of precedent for going beyond them and choosing other fabrics and less simple designing. The bride must determine for herself whether she wishes to look regal or demure, classic or quaint, very youthful and unsophisticated or very modern and up-to-date, and choose a gown accordingly; her choice must be governed by her type.

Conceding that satin will hold the allegiance of many brides, the choice of many others will fall on georgette, chiffon, crepe de chine, lace or the sheers and finest voile. Occasionally silver cloth will be called upon as a foundation to be veiled by lace or other diaphanous stuffs. Lace plays of and how it shall be made. Tradition points unswervingly to white satin and lace for materials and to graceful lines and simple designs in the style, and within those bounds there is much room for variations. But there are all sorts of precedent for going beyond them and choosing other fabrics and less simple designing. The bride must determine for herself whether she wishes to look regal or demure, classic or quaint, very youthful and unsophisticated or very modern and up-to-date, and choose a gown accordingly; her choice must be governed by her type.

The bride pictured has chosen a simple and dignified wedding gown of white satin and a tulle veil that flows from a stately Russian headpiece. This may be made of orange blossom or pearl beads—or both—on a light, fine wire foundation. It has been beautifully developed in lace, or lace and tulle and adorned with little sprays of orange blossoms.

Coats Appropriate to Youth

GIRLS of twelve to sixteen years and their little sisters, spend many of their waking hours in utility wraps made of sturdy materials that will stand any exigencies of the weather and strenuous wear. Lightweight coatings in familiar weaves are chosen to make these garments for spring and summer wear and designs for them are simple and practical, colors quiet. Tans, grays, browns and blues, shepherd's checks and tau or gray mixtures find themselves always acceptable. If one is occupied with the choice of utility coats for children, these facts are guides that it is safe to follow. The model pictured on a little girl of five or so, at the right of the picture, is a type that one finds repeated—with little variations—in coats for all children, and made of various materials.

When coats are selected for occasional wear and not with an eye to utility alone, the choice of materials and colors immediately widens. For

POOR LEAD TO OBTAIN SPLT

Attempt to Arouse Indignation Over "Horror on the Rhine" Proves Dismal Failure.

"The Germanophile attempt to arouse American indignation over 'the horror on the Rhine' and thereby to lead to a split, spiritual rather than diplomatic, between America and her recent allies has failed of its purpose in precisely the same way that German propaganda in this country failed in every one of the years between 1914 and 1918," says an editorial in the American Legion Weekly.

"The truth is merely that the Germans do not know how to go about it. 'Kultur' obviously does not include any knowledge of the fine art of getting something over, a fact amply attested by the reflex action which has accompanied the present attempt. The Von Mach style of persuasiveness is no more subtle than the efforts of a St. Bernard puppy to stand up on a hardwood floor. It is flustering the Von Mach type of 'horror from within' to call its insidious. Insidious it is, however, in its intent if not in its application."

"Dr. Von Mach has proved himself a poor servant of his country, whether it be regards his country as America or Germany. He is a poor American for having tried to win America over to the point of view of the unrepentant nation to defeat whose government 100,000 Americans gave their lives, for attempting to resurrect a hyphen that was theoretically buried just three years ago. He is a poor German because his clumsiness has served only to arouse America to the fact that she is still at war with Germany."

POST WINS ON GOLDEN CALF

Two-Headed Animal Aids in Raising Organization's Funds From $100 to $1,500.

The Golden Calf of the Twentieth century has been discovered by the American Legion post at Fredericksburg, Va., which owes an increase in its working capital from $100 to $1,500 to a two-headed juvenile cow, in full title to which the post invested its scant $100 last fall.

Having induced a Westmoreland county farmer to part with the freak animal for this sum, a special levy of various small amounts was made upon the treasury to buy nourishment for the calf. Then came the Virginia state fair in Richmond and the calf was in full bloom, cutting both his heads off and waxing fat withal.

The Fredericksburg post put him on exhibit, charging a suitable fee. When the fair was over and the dust had settled, the post treasury contained $1,500—the accrued earnings of the calf—and all this for doing nothing but standing still and being inspected.

It was recently that the representative of a large circus made his offer of $150 for the animal and it was accepted. There is a rumor that the excitement of travel and late hours have affected the calf's health and that he is a poor insurance risk. However, as the old Romans had it, caveat emptor.

The post plans to reinvest the $1,500 as soon as some other such good security as the calf is found.

Legion Men Among the Miners.

The activity of the American Legion in the mining districts of southeast Kansas is another pertinent proof that the misunderstanding between labor bodies and the ex-service men's organization has been dissipated. At Seaman, Kan., the climax of the eight-hour day celebration of the miners in District 11, was reached in a ball at the Legion hall, under the auspices of Francis Ellison Post, Post No. 272 at Weir. From a membership of 21 ex-service men in 1920, a total of 112 has been enrolled in 1921 thus far.

BOBBY WANTED THAT AGATE

If Persistency Could Have Got It for Him, We Must Admit He Deserved It.

The older boys were playing marbles. Three-year-old Bobby wished some agates like his brother had and asked father for two cents to buy one with. The money was given to him and he immediately wished to go to the store to make the purchase. So persistent did he become that father said:

"If you don't keep still about that agate I will take those pennies away from you."

"What will you do with the pennies if you take them away?" he asked.

"Why, I'll put them back in my purse."

"Will you take them uptown when you go to the office?"

"Yes, I will."

After a few moments' reflection, Bobby came back with:

"And will you buy me an agate with them?"

REALLY FLOWERS OF SPEECH

Sayings, Witty and Wise, That Are Worth Being Preserved in an Anthology.

Prof. Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch, in the course of his lively lectures "On the Art of Reading," gives some examples of Irish peasants' sayings with the large simplicity, the cadence, the accent of Scriptural speech. The best is the benediction bestowed upon one of the two authors of the incomparable "Irish R. M." by an old woman in Skibbereen: "Sure ye're always laughing! That ye may laugh in the sight of the glory of heaven!" The writer once thought of making an anthology of such wild flowers of wayside speech. He would have included in it some far-traveled sayings, such as that of the freighter in the alkaline districts of Alberta, who said, pointing with his whip to an intensely blue lake on the horizon, "Bitter as a dying man's sweat is that same water," and the perfect definition of a ghost implied in the words of a Newfoundland fisherman, "There I sees 'em warming themselves in the moon-light."

"SURE CURE" FOR INSOMNIA

Englishman Asserts That the Watching of Revolving Disks Will Bring Quick Relief.

With the high cost of living getting higher every day the average person has been unable to indulge in such a soothing sedative as sleep and forget his troubles in untroubled slumber. But there is hope for victims of insomnia.

Along comes an ingenious Englishman, James Bray of Acton road, London, who is the inventor of a simple device which he says "will jolly well bring slumber to sleepless eyes" and is a sure cure for any case of insomnia. Mr. Bray's device for banishing sleeplessness consists of an arrangement of disks revolving in opposite directions, to be hung above the bed. The inventor says the mere watching of the moving plates brings slumber inside of five minutes.

The Moving Plates Are Said to Produce Slumber in Five Minutes.

After running 15 minutes the machine stops automatically and shuts off the light in the room. From the Indianapolis Star.

TODAY.

Sure this world is full of trouble—

I ain't said it ain't.

Lord! I've had enough, an' double, reason for complaint.

Rats and stars have come to fret me, stars were often gay.

Thorns an' brambles have beset me on the road—but, say,

Ain't it fine today?

That's the use of always weeping,

Mykin' trouble last?

What's the use of always keepin'?

Thinkin' of the past?

Thinkin' of the past?

Water with his wine.

Life it ain't no celebration,

Trouble? I've had none—

But today is fine.

It's today that I am blest,

Not a month ago,

Havein' lovin', takin', givin'.

As time wills it so,

Yesterday a cloud of sorrow

Fell across the way:

It may rain again tomorrow,

It may rain—but say,

Ain't it fine today?

How MICHELIN has overcome the commonest causes of tire trouble
STONE BRUISES
 When a tire is driven against a curb or over any serious obstruction, the layers of cords in the body of the tire are forced inward, subjecting them to a severe strain that tends to separate and break the cords. The extra thickness of the Michelin tread protects Michelin Cords against such shocks, and the extra rubber between the layers of cords still further cushions and protects the tire against injury.
 Try a Michelin Cord. You'll find it lasts longer.
