Flag Day Proclamation.

The observance of Flag Day is of comparatively recent origin and seems to have been begun in the State of New York. The custom, however, has spread until practically every state in the Union has adopted it.

Honoring the flag means to honor the principles for which the flag stands, liberty, justice and equality. These are the foundation stones of the Republic. So long as these great principles are really respected and honored in the hearts of the people our government is safe. Our free institutions will weather any storm that may beat upon them.

Therefore, by virtue of the authority vested in me as Governor of the State of Michigan, I hereby proclaim Tuesday, June 11, 1921, Flag Day. Let flags be displayed on both public and private buildings; and I request that community exercises appropriate to the day be held wherever practicable.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State this Second Day of June, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-one, and of the Commonwealth the eighty-fifth.

ALEX. J. GROESBECK, Governor.

Young Lady Honored.

Mrs. Nelson Peterson gave a pretty miscellaneous shower, Thursday evening, June 2, at her home in Waterloo township, in compliment of Miss Hilda Riemschneider.

After the presents were unwrapped and duly commented upon, a bountiful luncheon of ice cream, cake and wafers was served to the large assemblage of friends present.

Honoring Miss Hilda Riemschneider, the Misses Elsie Heydlauff and Ora Miller entertained the Standard Bearers of the Salem German M. E. church, at the home of Miss Heydlauff, in Sylvan, Saturday afternoon.

Roses centered the table where luncheon was served, while name cards, crepe paper, ice cream, and cake, cleverly developed the pink and white color scheme used.

Making kitchen holders for the prospective bride, and hunting hearts which were hidden throughout the house, formed the amusement of the afternoon.

Miss Riemschneider was the recipient of a beautiful casserole.

Klink-Ryan.

The marriage of Miss Gertrude Klink, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Klink, of Inkster, and Mr. Wm. H. Ryan, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Ryan, of Wayne, took place at Wayne, Saturday morning, June 4, Rev. Fr. Connors officiating. They were attended by Miss Agnes Klink, sister of the bride, and Mr. Leo Antican, of Wayne. The bride was charming in a gown of white satin. Her long tulle veil was held in place by a wreath of orange blossoms. The bridesmaid wore light blue satin and organza hat to match. A wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents. After a short eastern trip they will reside in Dearborn, where the groom is employed.

Mr. Ryan was a former Chelsea boy and is a brother of Mrs. Delbert Denton, of this place.

Pomona Grange Meeting.

The next meeting of the Wash-ton Pomona Grange will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Orbring, of Freedom township, Tuesday, June 14. Program follows: Business session at 10:30 a. m. Dinner at noon. Manchester and Pleasant Lake Granges will furnish the dinner.

In the afternoon, Dr. McCool, of Lansing, will speak on "Soils." Mr. Osler will speak on "Dangerous Weeds," and Flora Ruell will speak on "Juvenile Granges."

Pleasant Lake Grange will furnish the music. All granges are requested to be present.

Chelsea Again Victorious.
Excellent pitching, combined with good support, allowed the Chelsea Independents to defeat the Jackson Orioles, Sunday, by a score of 7 to 2. Haynes struck out 13 men. E. Collins' hitting and L. McKune's fielding was a feature of the game, but the whole Chelsea team deserves a bit of praise for their good showing.

Rare Case Found in County.

An interesting case in which two cows died from botulinus poisoning, was disclosed in a recent report made by H. S. Osier, county agent, to the executive board of the Farm Bureau.
Two cows on the Ben Foster farm, near Delhi, became sick and Mr. Osier was summoned by the farmer. The symptoms of the disease being rare, a veterinary of the department of animal husbandry was called to take care of the case. He found that the cows had been poisoned by eating ensilage, pockets of the poison forming near the sides of the silo, the ensilage having not been properly packed.

It is said by officials of the Farm Bureau that the disease is very rare among animals, and that the prevention of the disease is proper packing of the ensilage.

Interesting Exhibit.

The following clipping was taken from the Daily Chronicle, of Ingersoll, Ontario, Canada:
A very interesting exhibit is on view in the office window of The Chronicle. This is a specimen of foundation wall used in bee culture, and it is of special significance inasmuch as this is the first work turned out by the Canadian branch of the A. I. Root Company which is located here. Mr. Walter Spaulding, who is manager of the Ingersoll plant, has had many unexpected difficulties to contend with in getting this branch started, but the worst is over now and they expect to be running to capacity before very long. Ingersoll is proud to have this industry and proud of its energetic, public spirited manager, Mr. Spaulding.
Mr. Spaulding is a son of E. S. Spaulding and well known here.

Stiff? Sore?

A lame back, a sore muscle or a stiff joint often is considered too lightly by the sufferer. It should be remembered that backache, rheumatic pains, stiffness, soreness, a swollen skin and puffiness under the eyes are symptoms of kidney and bladder trouble—and these certainly should not be neglected.

Foley Kidney Pills

help the kidneys eliminate from the system the poisonous waste and acids that cause these aches and pains. They act promptly and effectively to restore weak, overworked or diseased kidneys and bladder to healthy, normal condition.

J. E. Simmons, 401 E. 5th St., Portland, Ore., writes: "I was troubled with backache and urinary trouble. I tried Foley Kidney Pills and will say that I highly recommend them to any one troubled in that way, as they are excellent."

Aerial Warfare On Bootleggers.
Col. Roy C. Vandercreek, of Lansing, commissioner of public safety of the state, Friday closed a contract with the Aero-Service Corporation, of Lansing, for the use of airplanes and hydroplanes to be used in his program for policing the state.

The machines will be used principally in the liquor enforcement work along the Michigan-Canadian boundary line and at least two hydroplanes will be detailed to the Detroit district.

If the present plans of the commissioner are carried out, the machines will be in service both day and night, large searchlights being placed on the planes, used in night flying to detect the rum runners.

The aero company furnishing the machines has landing fields in Detroit, Jackson, Battle Creek, Muskegon and many other sections of the state.

MICHIGAN SCHOOL LAWS

The last legislature distinguished itself by the passage of an exceptional educational program.

The school laws of Michigan have always been a piecemeal arrangement because of the fact that legislation has been passed from time to time affecting various types of schools and as a result no uniformity existed. A number of these irregularities were cleared up.

The bonding laws were changed so as to bring all districts under the general school act and bonds are now permitted to be levied for 15 per cent of value and for over thirty years of time.

Other irregularities were those relating to school officers. These were changed so as to make the officers uniform.

All special act township districts were brought under the general law.

The township unit law was changed very decidedly so as to clarify all points concerning it and make it much simpler of operation.

The law permitting the consolidation of rural schools was changed in line with the experience of other states and today we have probably the best consolidated school law in the United States. The machinery is simplified and all matters of feetion may be carried by appeals to the State Department of Public Instruction. The state gives aid to these districts on a basis of $1,000 per school and $400 per vehicle used in transportation.

School districts are now being permitted to build and furnish teachers' homes. This answers a real demand in the northern country and also in the consolidated school districts.

Non-high school districts must now pay the tuition of pupils ready for high school to some neighboring high school to cover the full per capita cost of the school up to $50 per year.

School officers are given the right to raise money by taxation to place schoolhouses in safe and sanitary condition.

Practically every child in Michigan will now have a nine months school, this being the minimum term under the new law.

By 1925 all persons entering the teaching profession in Michigan must have at least one year of professional training above the four year high school course. This act also provides for the improvement of teachers now in service. In other words it is now recognized that it is as important to have special training for teaching as in any other specialized field. This is, of course, an act of the greatest importance.

An act was passed taking advantage of the federal appropriation for rehabilitation of persons injured in industry.

Teachers may now be certified who are graduates of normal schools in other states. This enables us to take the best teachers of every state. In other words, people may be brought in from any state in the Union if they have had adequate training.

Under the Dacey-Danz-Hann Act, private and parochial schools were brought under the supervision of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction. This means that the courses of study are to be the same as the public school courses of study, that their buildings are to be in safe and sanitary condition, and plans of their buildings approved by the State Department, and that their teachers are to have the same qualifications as public school teachers and are to be certificated in the same manner.

An act was passed requiring children placed in boarding homes to be placed on the school census list in the district where the boarding home is established and these children are thus entitled to attend school in that district. This does away entirely with the difficulty regarding the right of these children to attend school and relieves the state of a very vexatious problem.

These are the main features, but a number of minor acts of a technical nature were also passed.

U. S. TUBES
The same standard of quality built into U. S. Tires is put into U. S. Tubes.

Why some men seem to have all the tire luck —

YOU probably know a man whose car is a hobby with him. He knows just why it's the best little old car there is of its class.

And he'll stand up for that car against the world in any kind of an argument.

Year by year an increasing number of men feel the same way about U. S. Tires.

For a while they may try "job lot" stuff,
"bargains," "big discounts" and "rebates."

But usually it doesn't take long for a man to sense the economy of the standard quality tire.

For years U. S. Tire makers have been building quality tires for sane tire users—for the car of medium or light weight no less than for the heavy car.

The tire buyers of the land have responded with a mighty U. S. Tire following.

"Find the U. S. Tire dealer with the full, completely sized line of fresh, live U. S. Tires."

The U. S. Tire makers meet the responsibility for supplying this nation-

Thirty Killed in Race War in Tulsa, Okla.—Whites Burn
All Black Belt.

SENATE FIRM FOR BIG NAVY

Passes Appropriation Bill Carrying $494,000,000 — President Harding's Memorial Day Utterance—Railway Wage Reduction Announced
—More Fighting in Silesia.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.

Another of those sudden and terrible race conflicts which make all decent Americans blush with shame occurred last week, this time in Tulsa, Okla. Before the state troops that were called to assist the police had restored order at least thirty persons had been killed, hundreds had been wounded and the negro quarter of the city was in ashes. More than 5,000 negroes were rendered homeless and the property damage was estimated to be in excess of a million and a half dollars.

As so often is the case, the riots were due to an attack on a white girl by a negro. The offender was arrested and then someone started the rumor that he was to be lynched. Several hundred armed blacks gathered about the courthouse and jail, and one of them was killed by a police officer. That started the fighting, and within a few hours the city had become an armed camp. Both whites and blacks looted the stores for guns, and the negroes entrenched themselves in their quarter. An army of whites soon began the invasion of that region and, driving back the blacks, set fire to the buildings as they advanced. Men, women and children were shot down mercilessly as they fled from their burning homes. Three local units of the Oklahoma National Guard were ordered out by the governor, and they, with the help of the police and members of the American Legion, at last succeeded in controlling the situation. They were able to protect the business and railroad districts from further destruction, but the "black belt" was a smoking ruin.

The same old cries of "Shame!" will be heard, and Tulsa will be thoroughly scolded for this shocking affair; but the same causes will bring about the same results ever and again, almost anywhere in the United States, and the wisest social economists do not know where the remedy lies.

If the house can be brought around to the senate's way of thinking, we will have the greatest navy in the world. But the difference of view of the two chambers is represented just now by some $88,000,000, and it may be a long time before an agreement is reached. By a vote of 54 to 17 the senate passed the naval appropriation bill carrying a total of $494,000,000. For several weeks the small navy men had fought hard, but they secured a reduction of only $2,500,000 from the total recommended by the naval committee. Their leader, Senator Borah, voted for the bill because, as he explained, he had high hopes of results from his amendment requesting the President to invite Great Britain and Japan to join with the United States in curtailing naval construction. That Mr. Harding takes the Borah plan seriously is indicated by the report that our representatives in London and Tokyo already are "feeling out" the sentiment in the governments to which they are accredited.

The bill as passed by the senate carries $105,000,000 for construction of ships, including an item of $15,000,000 for the beginning of work on two airplane carriers at a limit cost of $52,000,000; $18,000,000 for aviation, and funds for 120,000 men. Several millions of dollars are allowed for strengthening the Pacific Coast defenses, and money is provided for further work on the Charleston navy yard, the majority having relented in that matter.

Memorial day not only was celebrated fittingly all over the United States, but in England and France as well, where many of our dead warriors still lie. In this country, of course, the most notable observance of the day was in the national cemetery at Arlington, where the President delivered the address. Mr. Harding took advantage of the occasion to declare that America must and will do her full part in helping to stabilize the world, to restrain ambition for empire and to prevent the disaster to civilization that would come from a denial of the equality of sovereign states or persons. The United States, he asserted, will neither pursue a policy of isolation nor surrender any of its independence of action, but will stand ready to accept leadership in the restoration of normalcy in the world.

In a Memorial day address in a Chicago suburb, former Senator James Hamilton Lewis predicted a war with Japan in which America will stand alone. "Not one country in Europe is truly the friend of the United States," he said. "The time is coming when we shall have to protect ourselves against an invasion of the Asiatics." England, France, and Italy, he said, will be appealed to by Japan to force the United States to grant the Japanese the same privileges as they enjoy in Europe.

The federal railway labor board has announced the wage reduction that goes into effect on July 1, when the national agreements are abrogated. The average wage cut is to be 12 per cent and this eventually will reduce the pay rolls of the 104 roads affected by $400,000,000 a year. The board in its decision sets up new uniform wage scales for all groups of employees, and these will later apply to every road in the country. The abrogation of the national agreements, it is believed, may save the roads an additional $500,000,000 yearly. In labor circles it had been feared a greater wage reduction would be ordered by the board; hence it is predicted the action may arouse little open opposition. The chiefs of the railway unions reserved comment.

The day after the board's ruling was made public President Harding surprised the interstate commerce commission by calling at its office for a conference on freight rate reduction, which he deems of vital importance in the restoration of business. He made clear his desire in this line, but it was evident that he would have to overcome strong opposition. The cabinet agrees with the President that prohibitive transportation rates largely account for the stagnation of business and the continued high price of the necessities of life.

Chairman Clark of the interstate commerce commission and Senator Cummins, chairman of the senate committee on interstate commerce, agree, however, with the railroad executives, who contend that rates cannot be reduced generally until it has been proved that railroad expenses can be cut to a point assuring an adequate return on the investment.

Aviation in America is hard hit by disaster and economics. The country was shocked by the accident near Washington in which an army plane, caught in a fierce electrical storm, was destroyed and all its seven occupants killed. The victims included several aviation officers and former Congressman Maurice Connolly. Blame for the accident, if there is any, is hard to place though it is felt that the establishment of altitude observation stations would do much to avert similar disasters.

At the government proving ground at Aberdeen, Md., where rehearsals for the army and navy maneuvers in Chesapeake bay were taking place, a 50-pound bomb filled with TNT fell from a plane and the explosion killed five men and injured twelve. Apparently the mechanism of the bomb-carrying rack was defective.

All the air mail routes established with so much flourish, except the transcontinental line from New York to San Francisco have been abandoned. Postmaster General Hays saying this is due to lack of money and to difficulties of operation. The St. Paul-Chicago and St. Louis-Chicago routes were the last to be discontinued. This action may be linked with the charges of inefficiency, carelessness and misconduct made against certain of the operating force of the air mail in the Middle West. Investigation has resulted in the temporary suspension of E. W. Majors, superintendent of the Omaha-Cleveland division, and of four of his subordinates and one mechanic. Mr. Majors and the pilots in his division deny the charge made by a discharged pilot, that the deaths of several air mail carriers were due to criminal carelessness of the executive and mechanical forces. The investigation is not yet completed.

The Poles and Germans in Upper Silesia did not observe their truce for many hours. The Germans renewed the attacks and the fighting has been continuous ever since, despite the efforts of the allied plebiscite forces, which have been reinforced by a body of British troops. In general the Poles seem to be getting the worst of the fighting, for the Germans were well organized secretly and are fully armed. There was a serious outbreak in Benen, where the German inhabitants attacked the French garrison. The latter used tanks with deadly effect and routed the Germans, killing many. With the arrival of the British forces it appeared likely that Kortanty's insurgent Poles would be driven out of much of the disputed territory which they had seized.

Chancellor Wirth apparently is determined to force Germany to fulfill her obligations to the allies. In a speech before the Reichstag he set forth the economic rules and policies through which, he believes, the German nation can pay its debts and yet maintain economic stability and independence. He intends not only to keep up with the payments as they fall due, but to keep ahead of them.

"The sums to be paid in reparations," he declared, "can be extracted only by creating an economic balance. We must increase our production and reduce our expenses to the utmost in our manufactures. We must limit all imports, especially luxuries, as far as possible through customs tax measure. To this end we should have sovereignty over our customs borders."

"Agriculture must be brought to its highest capacity, systematically. Animals must be replaced by motors, saving fodder. Acreage must be increased, and the cultivation of swamps and deserts must be undertaken at the earliest moment, thus providing work for those out of employment. The sword has been broken. We must work."

The chancellor foreshadowed a higher corporation tax, a house tax, an inheritance tax, a landed property tax and a tax on certain securities, in addition to an increase in direct taxes.

Before the congress of the Communist party in Moscow Premier Lenin laid his economic program, which was supported by Minister of Agriculture Miliutin and approved by the gathering. The policy as outlined includes:

1. Collection from the peasants of a fixed amount of grain by a system of tax in kind, estimated by Miliutin to amount to about one-third of the crop. The other two-thirds of the crop is to remain at the disposal of the peasant for trading through the newly restored co-operatives, whose power is to be extended.

2. Retention in the hands of the state of the largest industries and means of transportation, particularly the leather, salt and textile industries. These latter are turning out manufactured goods now most needed by the peasants. They are to be speeded up in order to satisfy the peasants' needs, and the workmen are to be encouraged by a bonus system and other inducements which will increase production. Supervision is to be under the trade unions, who will fix the rates of pay instead of the government as heretofore.

3. Encouragement of small and medium co-operatives and private industries. Factories will be leased to these smaller industries, and even financial assistance will be given. The trades unions will fix wages.

IT'S CRIME TO BE DRUNK, SAYS COURT

STATE COURT UPHOLDS CONVIC-TION OF KALAMAZOO MAN ON MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE

JUDGE REFERS TO ANCIENT LAW

"Drunkness Was Declared Wrong In and Of Itself By the Israelites," Reads Court's Decision.

Lansing.—A new theory regarding drunkenness—new at least to Michigan court decisions, is embodied in a decision written by Justice West and handed down as the decision of the court in the case of Gleen Townsend, of Kalamazoo. Townsend was driving an automobile while drunk on the night of November 8, 1919. He missed a man and his machine collided with a tree, seriously injuring Agnes Thorne, who was with him. She died later of blood poisoning.

Townsend was convicted in the Kalamazoo circuit court on a charge of manslaughter. He appealed to the supreme court contending that the indictment had been improperly drawn and the case improperly conducted, because they had followed the theory that drunkenness is malum instead of malum prohibitum.

"Voluntary intoxication," says the court, in reply to this contention, "is an offense not only malum prohibitum, but malum in se, condemned as wrong in and of itself, by every sense of common decency and good morals from the time that Noah, in his drunkenness brought shame to his sons, so that they backed in to cover his nakedness, and Lot's daughters employed it for incestuous purposes."

"Drunkenness was declared wrong in and of itself, by every sense of right by the Israelites, by the ancient Chinese in the year 1120 B. C., in ancient India by the ordinances of Manu, in Rome, the censors turned drunken members out of the senate and branded them with infamy."

"In England 300 years ago, drunkenness was pilloried as the root and foundation of many sins, such as bloodshed, stabbing, murder, swearing and such like offenses. Bacon in his abridgement of the common law, lists drunkenness as one of the sins of heresy."

"In the Massachusetts Bay colony in 1633, one Robert Coles was disfranchised and sentenced to wear a red letter 'D' upon a white back ground for one year. One of the acts passed by the first session of the general assembly of the Northwest territory and approved December 2, 1799 provided a penalty for being drunk upon a public highway."

He urged the development of public sentiment as the best means of securing adequate and full enforcement of the Volstead act. Commendation for the work accomplished by the W. C. T. U. was expressed by Mr. Kramer.

RAPID RISE FOR LEGION MAN

Colonel Shaughnessy's Career Has Been on the Upgrade Since He Was a Boy.

When he was in the army, Colonel Edward H. Shaughnessy's career was on the upgrade. Now that he has returned to civil life and joined Fidelity post of the American Legion in New York city, he has voluntarily demoted himself from a $25,000 job to one which pays $5,000 a year.

Colonel Shaughnessy was induced by Postmaster General Will Hays to sacrifice his position as assistant director of the American Petroleum Institute, New York city, to become second assistant postmaster general.

"I understand you've taken a $5,000 a year job," said a correspondent who interviewed him.

"Does it pay that?" he asked. "I'd forgotten to ask about the salary."

The salary is a minor consideration now, but it would have been different in the days when Colonel Shaughnessy worked as a messenger boy in Chicago. When he was 15 years old he became ticket agent and a year later telegraph operator for the Chicago & Northwestern railroad. Successfully he was chief operator, assistant train dispatcher, assistant trainmaster and trainmaster. When the superintendent of the road was ill he took charge.

Colonel Shaughnessy joined the thirteenth engineers as first lieutenant when the war broke out. He studied French until he spoke it fluently, and worked up a book of rules adapting American methods to French practice. He was promoted fast. Praise came to him from Brig. Gen. George Van Horn Moseley, assistant chief of staff, for his work as superintendent of the transportation corps in the Chateau-Thierry region, and as general superintendent at Is-sur-Tille during the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives, and as general manager in the zone of advance.

General Pershing gave him the Distinguished Service medal "for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services."

MADE LEGION DRIVE SUCCESS

Dare Devil Louisiana Man Put Real Thrills Into Campaign for New Members.

When Anthony Kelley was discharged from the navy in New Orleans, La., he found the life of a land-lubber terribly devoid of thrill and peril. He had been going to sea since the age of fifteen and he missed the excitement of stormy nights in the dizzy heights of the crow's nest and hair-raising trips on the ropes far above the deck.

With the start of a membership campaign of Rollin post of the American Legion in New Orleans, Kelley blossomed out as a professional daredevil to assist his fellow Legionnaires in attracting attention. He climbed a flag pole atop the city hall, several hundred feet above the pavement and rocked back and forth trying to break the pole. A net stretched below was all that was between the daring Legionnaire and some exceedingly hard terrain.

Kelley was unable to break the flag pole, however. So he scaled an eight-story building and hung from the coping by his toes. Film companies rushed camera men to take motion pictures of the feat and the Legion membership drive was a success.

"None of it was as thrilling as the four years and four months I was in the war zone," Kelley declares. He was plying between American and European ports when war was declared. He entered the navy as an ensign and was discharged in April, 1919. He continued in service as an officer of the Merchant Marine until December, 1920.

Do Not Have to Pay Poll Tax.

Backed by the American Legion, a law providing for the registration of all ex-service men of all wars in the state of Montana was passed by the legislature. The new act exempts all ex-service men from payment of the poll tax and requires each county assessor to keep a record of the names and organizations of all veterans within his county. It is expected that other states will take similar action soon.

Narrow Escape.

The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Heller, of South street, was nearly drowned about 4:30 o'clock Monday afternoon, when she fell into the cistern at their home. The little girl, with a number of other children, were playing about the yard and in some way during their play the cover of the cistern was removed. The child had gone down the second time before she was rescued by Mrs. Jay Tuttle. The opening was so small that Mrs. Tuttle lowered her son by holding his heels and he grasped the unconscious child. The child had evidently been so badly frightened that she held her breath and escaped filling her lungs with water, but when rescued she was thoroughly chilled.

For Rural Teachers.

A model one-room school, illustrating all the best practices of modern teaching in the consolidated and rural schools of the country, will be conducted as a "laboratory" for special courses for rural teachers which are listed among the work of the summer session at the Michigan Agricultural College this year, June 20 to July 31.

A wide range of subjects will be covered in the special rural school teacher courses, according to announcement of Prof. E. H. Ryder, director of the M. A. C. summer session. Work in agriculture, household science, household art, community organization, nature study, and pedagogy is included in the curriculum.

Courses from all divisions of the regular work of the college are also scheduled for the summer school this year, covering work in agriculture, engineering, veterinary medicine, forestry, applied science, and home economics. Students from the regular four year courses at M. A. C. as well as many teachers from high schools and normal schools of Michigan, will make up the majority of the enrollment at the summer session, according to Director Ryder.

Special conferences on Economics and Agriculture (June 22-23); Ministers and Laymen (June 20 to July 1); Rural School Consolidation (June 23 and 24); Michigan Teachers of Agriculture (July 18 to 20); and State Boys' and Girls' Club Leaders, will feature the early days of the Summer School, and will be addressed by the leading authorities of the country on the different lines of work.

The village authorities are having the East street sewer tile through the property of the Lewis Spring & Axle Co. taken up. The tile has become filled up and Saturday the men who are doing the work, among other articles, found a six quart stew-pan in one of the tile. The workmen started at the catch basin on North Main street and are working east. A survey will be made and new level established before the tile are relaid.

Garden Notes.

Seeds of many biennial and perennial flowering plants such as Foxglove and Canterbury Bells may be sown now for flowers next summer.

The striped beetle may be kept in check by keeping melon and cucumber plants well dusted with tobacco dust or air slaked lime. This makes the plants distasteful to the insects and they disappear.

Sow rutabaga seed about the middle of June. They require 4 to 6 weeks longer to complete their growth than the common turnips.

Be sure to pinch out the tips of all new black raspberry canes. This should be done when the shoots are 18 to 24 inches high to insure low, stocky, well-branched plants.

Keep all blossoms picked from newly set strawberry plants. They should not be allowed to bear fruit the first season, except the ever-bearing varieties which are usually allowed to bear a crop of fruit during the fall months.

Only 2 or 3 plants should be left in each hill of melons, cucumbers, and squashes. Wait until the work of the striped beetle is over, then thin the plants, leaving only the best to produce a crop.

Lawn Soils Need Special Care.

Proper care of lawns and lawn soils is needed, even after the lawns are established, if good results are to be obtained, according to Dr. M. M. McCool, head of the Soils Department at the Michigan Agricultural College. Time of clipping, and such matters as firming the soil and adding water in the approved manner must be observed by the modern lawn care-taker who would have his grounds in good condition.

"Long grass should never be permitted to go to seed," says Dr. McCool, in discussing the care of lawns. "It is also a mistake to clip too close in the late autumn, for lawn grasses, especially on new lawns, should pass into the winter with a considerable growth. Many of the most successful lawns are rolled or compacted in some manner. This causes the grass roots to take firm hold and assists in the establishment of a good turf."

"Many mistakes are also made in the application of water to lawn soils. It is usually better to soak the soil thoroughly by laying the hose on the ground and permitting the water to flow freely on one part for an hour or so before moving to another place. The sprinkling method is satisfactory if continued long enough but frequently this is not done and the grasses suffer in consequence. Fertilizers may be used to advantage on lawn soils, if proper selection is made to meet conditions."

Livestock Is Growing Healthier.

Further reduction in livestock losses due to disease and exposure during the past year was shown in a report issued Friday by the department of agriculture. The index number on May 1 as to healthfulness of horses was 96.2 as compared with 93 a year ago and a ten year average of 95.7. The loss from disease was estimated at 14.7 per thousand.

With cattle, the index number was 95.5 as against 91.9 last year and the loss was estimated to have been 17 per thousand; the index number of swine was given at 94.4 and the loss 44.2 per thousand and sheep 95.4, with a fatality rate from disease of 22.9 per thousand.

The village authorities suggest that the residents on the streets where gravel has been placed, sprinkle the streets in front of their property for a week or so, in order to have the gravel thoroughly packed, as they believe it would be useless to cover these streets with calcium chloride, in the present condition.

At the corners of East Middle and McKinley streets, and Railroad and McKinley streets, signs have been placed showing the route to be taken for Ann Arbor and Detroit. Several times during the past week the signs have been tore down and some of them destroyed. Someone is liable to be arrested for the act and a stiff fine imposed.

Strange Inconsistencies.

Here is one of life's inconsistencies: A mouse is afraid of a man, a man is afraid of a woman, and a woman is afraid of a mouse.—Exchange.

Bernie Boland, recently released from the pitching staff of the Detroit Americans, has been signed by the St. Louis Americans.

Dick Kerr's brother George, who tired of his Western league berth and quit, going to his home in St. Louis, was coaxed into joining the Terre Haute team.

Joplin's rookie outfielder, Gabby Strain, has been going so good that at least one big league scout has made a trip to the Western league to give him a looking over.

Some deep delve into statistics has figured that Eddie Roush this year will draw 25 cents for every step he takes in playing the season out for the Cincinnati club. That means 50,000 steps in 140 or so games.

Jimmy Austin of the Browns served all eight with which he was connected honestly and faithfully, and it is tough to have an arm broken at the twilight of his career, perhaps retiring him permanently.

About Colors.

Is your room smudgy? Then avoid yellow and red in its furnishing. They are warm colors and make a room look small. Use grays and violets to give a "roomy" effect.

YOU CAN WALK IN COMFORT

If you shake into your shoes some ALLEN'S FOOT-POWDER, the Antiseptic, Healing powder for shoes that pinch or feet that ache, it takes the friction from the shoe and gives relief to corns and bunions, hot, tired, sweating, swollen feet. MORE THAN HE COULD STAND

Mr. Cityman Changed His Mind When Business Partner Began to Brag About His Garden.

What He Said to His Wife—If you want a garden this year you had better hire somebody to make it. I'm not going to try it again. I've figured it out; and if I would spend on my business the time I put in on that garden I would make enough money to keep us in vegetables for fifty years. I am off it for life.

What He Said to His Neighbor—I don't think I'll bother with a garden this year. It doesn't pay; I may do a little; but the digging and the labor—I'm off that for life.

What He Said to His Partner—Well, how's the garden coming along? I'm not doing much with mine this year. What? How high did you say? All ready? What seed did you use?

What He Said to His Wife When He Got Home An Hour Early That Day—Call me when dinner's ready. I've got to get the garden started today or I'll never raise a thing.—Life.

If We Only Had Their Names.

A coin which had lodged in a Pennsylvania girl's throat for two years was removed by surgeons without the aid of instruments. Somehow or other we can't help wishing these self-same surgeons could be hired to make some folks we know cough up some of our coin which has been lodged with them for more than two years.

As One Raised From Dead

Stomach Pains Gone

After suffering ten long months with stomach pains, I have taken Estonite and am now without any pain whatever. Am as one raised from the dead." writes A. Percifield.

"Thousands of stomach sufferers report wonderful relief. Their trouble is too much acidity and gas which Estonite quickly takes up and carries out, restoring the stomach to a healthy, active condition. Always carry a few Estonites, take one after eating, food will digest well—you will feel fine. Big box costs only a trifle with your druggist's guarantee.

Audience, Like Readers of Novels, Wanted What They Had Been Used to Getting.

Dr. William Lyon Phelps of Yale said at a dinner in Philadelphia: "The average popular novelist and his audience are very, very—well, it reminds me of a story.

"An old-time music hall artist turned up, after some years of absence, in a certain provincial town where he had once been a great favorite. He went on in his usual make-up—bulbous red nose and so forth—expecting a grand reception, but all his efforts were received in gloomy silence.

"What's the matter with 'em?' he said afterward to the stage manager, and he dashed a tear from his eye. 'Have they forgotten old Bill?'

"No, Bill, they ain't forgotten you," said the manager in a kindly voice. "No, it ain't that, but you've changed your jokes about. You're tellin' the one about the star boarder ahead of the one about the limburger, and it upsets 'em."

Enriching the Language.

"No doubt," says the Larney Herald, referring to the French brought back by our soldier boys, "our language will keep such expressions as bean tote, bone jar, billy do, llogery, nutria noo, fox paws, Jenny's pa, silver plate, three beans and foot sweet."—Boston Transcript.

GET GOOD HATCH FROM INCUBATOR

Moisture and Ventilation Are Most Important Factors in Securing Normal Chick.

SEVERAL METHODS ARE USED

Less Danger of Getting Too Much Moisture Into Machine by Sprinkling or Soaking Floor of the Incubator Room.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Moisture and ventilation are closely related factors in incubation, the amount of each depending upon the other. The former is one of the uncertain factors, for as yet no very satisfactory rules have been evolved which cover all conditions. Good hatches are secured both with and without using moisture, under apparently similar conditions, while each operator generally works out by experience the best amount of moisture to use under his conditions. The moisture and ventilation should, with correct heat, produce a normal chick at the end of the incubation period. Too much moisture may prevent the normal evaporation necessary to allow enough space for the chick to turn in the egg and break the shell, while too little moisture may cause the chick to become dried and stick to the shell. Moisture is used extensively in hatching in the South, in high altitudes, and in places where the incubator is run in a dry room, say poultry specialists of United States Department of Agriculture.

Many Methods Used.

Many methods are used to supply moisture in incubators, such as sprinkling eggs with warm water at about 100 degrees Fahrenheit, or placing a pan of water, a receptacle containing moist sand, or a wet sponge below the egg tray. Another common method of supplying moisture is to sprinkle or soak the floor of the incubator room or to place a pail of water under the lamp. There is less danger of getting too much moisture in the incubator by this method than by putting moisture directly into the egg chamber.

Exceptionally Good Hatch.

If a moisture tray or sponge has been added to a non-moisture machine, it should generally be taken out before the chicks pip.

The question of moisture depends largely on the place where the incubator is located. If run in a room in a dwelling house, it is frequently necessary to add moisture even to non-moisture machines, while such machines run in an ordinary cellar in the same building might not need extra moisture. When a large number of machines is operated in one room, extra moisture is more necessary than if only a few are kept together. More moisture must be supplied in a very dry than in a humid climate.

Correct Conditions.

Water on the glass door of the incubator during hatching time is the best indication of correct moisture conditions during incubation. A good way to learn the proper amount of evaporation during incubation is to set one or two hens when starting the incubator, and compare the size of the air cell in the eggs under these two conditions when testing on the seventh and fourteenth days. As the weather becomes warmer more moisture is generally used than earlier in the season. Many operators add moisture only during the latter part of the hatch, generally on the sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth days.

GROWING SOY BEANS FOR HAY

Meeting With Much Favor by Those Who Are Farming on Light or Sandy Soils.

Soy beans for emergency hay purposes have grown rapidly in favor during the last ten years, especially among those who are farming the sandier soils where clover and alfalfa are not likely to do so well. Unlike millets and Sudan grass, both relatively low in protein, soy bean hay is very high in digestible protein, being about equal to alfalfa hay. Although it is a little difficult to cure, the palatability and high feeding value of this hay make it a very desirable forage.

POTATOES ASSUMING THEIR FORMER RANK

Have Receded From Temporary State as Delicacy.

Crop of 1920 Was Largest in History of Country, Amounting to 430,458,000 Bushels—Steady Drop in Noted in Prices.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

With the continuing drop in price, potatoes have receded from their temporary status of delicacy, and are assuming their old rank as a great American staple food. This is to be assumed from figures lately compiled by the bureau of crop estimates, United States Department of Agriculture, which shows that between harvest time and January 1, this year, 285,172,

Good Potatoes of Uniform Size.

000 bushels of tubers were moved off from the farms on their way to the table. This is 58,799,000 bushels more than left the farms in the corresponding period a year ago, or a half bushel additional for every man, woman and child in the United States.

The potato crop of 1920 was the largest in the history of the country, amounting to 430,458,000 bushels, and of these only 145,280,000 bushels were estimated as remaining in the hands of growers and dealers January 1. In 1919 the crop was 255,773,000 bushels, and the amount in the hands of growers and dealers January 1, 1920, was estimated at 127,400,000 bushels.

When the potato crop has been large, under normal conditions, the stocks of January 1 usually have been large, and in years of unusual production, before 1918, the stocks of January 1 commonly were about one-half of the crop in the total of the principal northern potato-producing states. In the case of the 1920 crop, on the contrary, the stocks on the farm January 1 amounted to only one-third of the crop, and were smaller than the average of the three preceding years, when the production was much less.

Statistics of the department believe the greater consumption of potatoes has been encouraged by the drop in prices. For the entire country the average price received by growers was $9.09 a bushel August 1; $1.85, September 1; $1.55, October 1; $1.18, November 1; $1.15 December 1, and $1.06 January 1.

FINDING GRADE OF POTATOES

Too Much Dependence Should Not Be Placed on Size Alone—Knobs Deduct From Value.

In grading potatoes too much dependence should not be put on size alone, say specialists of the bureau of markets, United States Department of Agriculture. A potato, for example, may be so covered with second growth knobs that it will not pass through the meshes of the grader, but it does not rightly belong in the first grade. The knobs mean much waste and require extra time in preparing the tubers for the table. Or, a potato may measure up satisfactorily to the standards of size and yet be so diseased as to be worthless.

A potato may even present a fine prize-winning appearance on the surface, and be far below grade because of injuries or disease of which there is no evidence without cutting it. Freezing injury, or hollow heart, illustrates cases of this kind. The grower should not be blamed for losses which result from these causes, but to a great extent field conditions are the primary cause of the troubles which appear when the potatoes are marketed.

POOR POTATOES CUT PROFITS

Waste of Time and Labor Results From Every Bad Specimen in Storage or Transit.

Every rotten, frozen, or undergrade potato that is loaded and every potato spoiled while in transit or in storage reduces the grower's profits and means a waste of time and labor, says the United States Department of Agriculture. It also means a waste of time and labor for every person handling it, a waste of car space, and consequently it amounts to an appreciable loss to the community as a whole. Through its markets inspection service the department is trying to eliminate this waste.

SUITABLE ANY DAY AND EVERYWHERE

SOMETHING new for the summer outing, that may be worn any day and everywhere and fit in with all the usual vacation backgrounds—that is what the prospective tourist is looking for. Something practical it must be and a little novel and interesting at least. There is a great demand for these out-dooring clothes, informal, but smart and full of style. The shops are presenting many separate skirts, to be worn with suitable blouses, and providing handsome light-weight sweaters with hats and parasols to match them, in fine materials, to answer the demand.

Separate skirts for midsummer have taken to stripes and cross-bars, or large checks, in which white and a color appear together. White and black, white and brown, white and orange, white and beige and so on, are made up in neatly fitted plaited models. The sweater-coats approved for wear with them, repeat the color in the skirt usually, but are sometimes of white, or a vivid color may be chosen for wear with black and white skirts, as emerald green, or rose color. White and orange is a favorite in skirts with white sweater-coat and hat, with sometimes a white parasol. Light rose or pink sets—coat, hat and parasol—to be worn with white skirts, are very generally becoming.

Two practical dresses for the summer outing, as shown in the picture, are novel and pretty. One of the heavy crepe weaves in silk was chosen for the model at the left of the two, in white with a cross-bar pattern applied in outline stitches to the skirt.

The coat to match is slashed about the bottom and belted. It has a short rippling cape across the back and elbow sleeves. A wide, plaited ruffle on the blouse makes a frothy cascade of net down the front.

A light-weight, smooth wool fabric in a dark color makes the attractive dress at the right with plaited skirt and cotton jacket. It has short sleeves and is worn with a hand-made blouse of fine voile and narrow lace. The sleeves of the jacket are finished with a pretty bit of needlework.

In casting about for something new, the innovation of knitted dresses must not be neglected; they are pretty, in the light tones especially so, and are just dawning over the horizon of the fashion world. They look as if they had much to commend them—it must be conceded that they have novelty.

Dancing Party Frock.

Dancing parties recently have shown some interesting little frocks with pronounced Oriental and Spanish touches. One costume of henna crepe, with Persian embroidery forming a large part of the straight, slim bodice, had the skirt opened in front to show a drop of sand-colored velvet. Oriental hair decorations heightened the effect of the East.

Lines in Vails.

There are several new "lines" in vails. One of the latest of these achieves a plaid effect by clever manipulation of the weaving. In another, you find the dots graduated—large at the chin and smaller toward the eyes.

The Enchantment of Blouses

BLouses are called upon to play many roles in the summer costume and they are most obliging and convenient. Each type of blouse is made in many ways so that there is always a new story to tell of them—a thousand and one enchantments to be recorded. There are bits of splendor among them that lend a grand air to a pretty skirt; there are those that carry a flavor of quaintness and summer color with them and bestow these allurements on tailored suits, and there are those elegances in hand-made wash blouses that tone up sport or street suits with the refinement of sheer fabrics and hand-wrought needlework.

Two new aspirants for favor, among others in the waist shops, have been chosen for illustration here. One is a kimono blouse of georgette, with short puffed, it is a slip-on model with kimono sleeves outlined and edged with button-hole stitches in silk. Lovely little chiffon roses and rose foliage are applied to it, the foliage embroidered on. A wreath decorates the front, with small clusters at each side that make the starting point for a narrow belt, which ends in similar clusters at the back. Such a blouse may be made in any of the fashionable colors, and worn with a silk or organza skirt. It is quite equal to high occasions.

The pretty tailored blouse at the right refuses to take life seriously and bears a tailored suit cheerful company. It is made of figured silk in the most approved and simple of tailored styles, so as to leave no doubt as to its mission in a workaday world. It buttons at the front and the cuffs with small pearl buttons and relies upon a ribbon tie at the throat for a finish.

FELT LIKE AN IRON BAND AROUND HEAD

Mrs. Osborne Says She Shudders When She Thinks How She Suffered.

"For years," said Mrs. V. H. Osborne, of 718 Lancaster Ave., Lexington, Ky., "I have been in a run-down condition; nervous, weak and dizzy. I was actually so nervous that any sudden noise or excitement would produce a palpitation of my heart that frightened me. I absolutely could not climb stairs, for to attempt such would thoroughly exhaust me.

"I had nervous headaches and when they came on it seemed that an iron band was drawn tight around my head. I now shudder when I think of those headaches. My stomach was weak and I could not digest the lightest liquid food. Any food of a solid nature caused nausea and the sickening sensation remained for hours.

"My misery was almost unbearable. My sleep was never sound and I was worn out all the time. My condition was indeed a very deplorable one. I finally sought treatment in Cincinnati, but nothing helped me one particle. I was on the verge of giving up in despair when a neighbor pleaded with me to try Tanlac. I obtained a bottle of the medicine and began its use.

"I began improving at once and soon felt my nervousness and dizziness disappearing. Then my headaches left me and I realized my strength had returned. My appetite and digestion improved and I am now so much better in every way. This Tanlac is a wonderful medicine and the only one that ever really helped me. I hope every poor woman who is suffering as I did will try it."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Adv.

Bull-Dog Drummond

The Adventures of a Demobilized Officer Who Found Peace Dull

"THOSE DEVILS."

Synopsis.—In December, 1918, four men gather in a hotel in Bern and hear one of the quartet outline a plan to paralyze Great Britain and at the same time seize world power. The other three, Hocking, American, and Steinman and Von Gratz, Germans, all millionaires, agree to the scheme, providing another man, Hiram Totts, an American, is taken in. The instigator of the plot gives his name as Comte de Guy, but when he leaves for England with his daughter he decides to use the name Carl Peterson. Capt. Hugh (Bull-Dog) Drummond, a retired officer, advertises for work that will give him excitement, signing "X." As a result he meets Phyllis Benton, a young woman who answered his ad. She tells him of strange murders and robberies of which she suspects a band headed by Peterson.

"Admiring my treasures?" he remarked. "Pretty things, aren't they? I couldn't speak a word: I just put them back on the table."

"Wonderful copies," he went on, "of the duke of Melbourne's lost miniatures. I think they would deceive most people."

"They deceived me, I managed to get out."

"All the time he was staring at me, a cold, merciless stare that seemed to freeze my brain. Then he went over to one of the safes and unlocked it. 'Come here, Miss Benton,' he said. 'There are a lot more copies.'

"I only looked inside for a moment, but I have never seen or thought of such a sight. Beautifully arranged on black velvet shelves were ropes of pearls, a gorgeous diamond tiara, and a whole heap of loose, uncut stones. And in one corner I caught a glimpse of the most wonderful gold chaliced cup—just like the one for which Samuel Levy, the Jew moneylender, was still offering a reward. Then he shut the door and locked it, and again stared at me in silence."

"All copies," he said quietly, "wonderful copies. And should you ever be tempted to think otherwise—ask your father, Miss Benton. He warned by me: don't do anything foolish. Ask your father first."

"And did you?" asked Drummond. She shuddered. "That very evening," she answered, "and daddy flew into a frightful passion, and told me never to dare to meddle in things that didn't concern me again. Then gradually, as time went on, I realized that Lakington had some hold over daddy—that he'd got my father in his power." Her hands were clenched, and her breast rose and fell stormily.

Drummond waited for her to compose herself before he spoke again. "You mentioned murder, too," he remarked.

She nodded. "I've got no proof," she said, "less even than over the burglaries. But there was a man called George Dringer, and one evening, when Lakington was dining with us, I heard him discussing this man with daddy."

"He's got to go," said Lakington. "Be dangerous!"

"And then my father got up and closed the door; but I heard them arguing for half an hour. Three weeks later a coroner's jury found that George Dringer had committed suicide while temporarily insane. The same evening daddy, for the first time in his life, went to bed the worse for drink."

The girl fell silent, and Drummond stared at the orchestra with troubled eyes. Things seemed to be rather queer than he had anticipated.

"There was another case," she was speaking again. "Do you remember that man who was found dead in a railway carriage at Oxhey station. He was an Italian—Giuseppe by name; and the jury brought in a verdict of death from natural causes. A month before, he had no interview with Lakington, which took place at our house: because the Italian, being a stranger, came to the wrong place, and Lakington happened to be with us at the time. The interview finished with a fearful quarrel." She turned to Drummond with a slight smile. "Not much evidence, is there? Only I know Lakington murdered him. I know it. You may think I'm fanciful—imagining things; you may think I'm exaggerating. I don't mind if you do—because you won't for long."

Drummond did not answer immediately. Against his sauer judgment he was beginning to be profoundly impressed, and, at the moment, he did not quite know what to say.

"What about this other man?" he asked at length.

"I can tell you very little about him," she answered. "He came to The Elms—that is the name of Lakington's house—three months ago. He is about medium height and rather thick-set; clean-shaven, with thick brown hair, flecked slightly with white. His forehead is broad, and his eyes are a sort of cold grey-blue. But it's his hands that terrify me. They're large and white and utterly ruthless." She turned to him appealingly. "Oh! don't think I'm talking wildly," she implored. "He frightens me to death—that man; far, far worse than Lakington. He would stop at nothing to gain his ends, and even Lakington himself knows that Mr. Peterson is his master."

"Peterson!" murmured Drummond. "It seems quite a sound old English name."

"The girl laughed scornfully. "Oh! the name is sound enough, if it was his real one. As it is, it's about as real as his daughter."

"There is a lady in the case, then?"

"By the name of Irma," said the girl briefly. "She lies on a sofa in the garden and yawns. She's no more English than that waiter."

A faint smile flickered over her companion's face; he had formed a fairly vivid mental picture of Irma. Then he grew serious again.

"And what is it that makes you think there's mischief ahead?" he asked abruptly.

"The girl shrugged her shoulders. "What the novelists call feminine intuition. I suppose," she answered, "that—and my father."

She said the last words very low. "He hardly ever sleeps at night now: I hear him pacing up and down his room—hour after hour, hour after hour. Oh! it makes me mad. . . . Don't you understand? I've got to get him away from those devils, before he breaks down completely."

Drummond nodded, and looked away. While she had been speaking he had made up his mind what course to take, and now, having said everything else, he decided that it was time for the interview to cease. Already as they dined was having a cocktail, while Lakington might return at any moment. And if there was anything in what she had told him, it struck him that it would be as well for that gentleman not to find them together.

"I think," he said, "we'd better go. My address is 60A Half Moon street; my telephone 1234 Mayfair. If anything happens, if ever you want me at any hour of the day or night—ring me up or write. If I'm not in, leave a message with my servant Denny. He is absolutely reliable. The only other thing is his own address."

"The Larches, near Godalming," answered the girl, as they moved toward the door. "Oh! if you only knew the glorious relief of feeling one's got some one to turn to. . . ."

She looked at him with shining eyes, and Drummond felt his pulse quicken suddenly.

"May I drop you anywhere?" he asked, as they stood on the pavement, but she shook her head.

"No, thank you. I'll go in that taxi," she gave the man an address, and stepped in, while Hugh stood bareheaded by the door.

"Don't forget," he said earnestly, "any time of the day or night. And while I think of it—we're old friends. Can that be done? In case I come and stay, you see."

She thought for a moment and then nodded her head. "All right," she answered. "We've met a lot in London during the war."

With a grinding of gear wheels the taxi drove off, leaving Hugh with a vivid picture imprinted on his mind of blue eyes, and white teeth, and a skin like the bloom of a sun-kissed peach.

For a moment or two he stood staring after it, and then he walked across to his own car. With his mind still full of the interview he drove slowly along Piccadilly, while every now and then he smiled grimly to himself. Was the whole thing an elaborate hoax? Somehow deep down in his mind, he wondered whether it was a joke—whether, by some freak of fate, he had stumbled on one of those strange mysteries which up to date he had regarded as existing only in the realms of dime novels.

He turned into his rooms, and stood in front of the mantelpiece taking off his gloves. It was as he was about to lay them down on the table that an envelope caught his eye, addressed to him in an unknown handwriting. Mechanically he picked it up and opened it. Inside was a single half-sheet of notepaper, on which a few lines had been written in a small, neat hand.

"There are more things in heaven and earth, young man, than a capability for eating steak and onions, and a desire for adventure. I imagine that you possess both; and they are useful assets in the second locally mentioned by the poet. In heaven, however, one never knows—especially with regard to the onions. Be careful."

Drummond stood motionless for a moment, with narrowed eyes. Then he leaned forward and pressed the bell.

"Who brought this note, James?" he said quietly, as his servant came into the room.

"A small boy, sir. Said I was to be sure and see you got it most particular." He unlocked a cupboard near the window and produced a tautulus.

"Whisky, sir, or cocktail?"

"Whisky, I think, James." Hugh carefully folded the sheet of paper and placed it in his pocket. And his face as he took the drink from his man would have left no doubt in an onlooker's mind as to why, in the past, he had earned the name of "Bull-Dog" Drummond.

CHAPTER II.

In Which He Journeys to Godalming and the Game Begins.

ONE.

"I almost think, James, that I could toy with another kidney," Drummond looked across the table at his servant, who was carefully arranging two or three dozen letters in groups. "I've got a journey in front of me today, and I require a large breakfast."

James Denny supplied the deficiency from a dish that was standing on an electric heater.

"Are you going for long, sir?"

"I don't know, James. It all depends on circumstances. Which, when you come to think of it, is undoubtedly one of the most fatuous phrases in the English language. Is there anything in the world that doesn't depend on circumstances?"

"Will you be motoring, sir, or going by train?" asked James prosaically. Dialectical arguments did not appeal to him.

"By car," answered Drummond. "Pajamas and a tooth-brush."

"You won't take evening clothes, sir?"

"No. I want my visit to appear unpremeditated, James, and if one goes about completely encased in bolted shirts, while pretending to be merely out for the afternoon, people have doubts as to one's intellect."

James digested this great thought in silence.

"Will you be going far, sir?" he asked at length, pouring out a second cup of coffee.

"To Godalming. A charming spot, I believe, though I've never been there. Charming inhabitants, too, James. The lady I met yesterday at the Carlton lives at Godalming."

"Indeed, sir," murmured James non-committally.

"You d-d old humbug," laughed Drummond. "You know you're itching to know all about it. I had a very long and interesting talk with her, and one of two things emerges quite clearly from our conversation. Either, James, I am a congenial idiot, and don't know enough to come in out of the rain; or we've hit the goods. That is what I propose to find out by my little excursion. Either our legs, my friend, are being pulled till they will never resume their normal shape; or that advertisement has succeeded beyond our wildest dreams."

"There are a lot more answers in this morning, sir." Denny made a movement toward the letters he had been sorting. "One from a lovely widow with two children."

"Lovely," cried Drummond. "How forward of her!" He glanced at the letter and smiled. "Care, James, and accuracy are essential in a secretary. The misguided woman calls herself lonely, not lovely. She will remain so, as far as I am concerned, until the other matter is settled."

"Will it take long, sir, do you think?"

"To get it settled?" Drummond lit a cigarette and leaned back in his chair. "Listen, James, and I will outline the case. The maiden lives at a house called The Larches, near Godalming, with her papa. Not far away is another house called The Elms, owned by a gentleman of the name of Henry Lakington—a nasty man, James, with a nasty face—who was also at the Carlton yesterday afternoon for a short time. And now we come to the point. Miss Benton—that is the lady's name—accuses Mr. Lakington of being the complete IT in the criminal line. She went even so far as to say that he was the second most dangerous man in England."

"Indeed, sir. More coffee, sir?"

"Will nothing move you, James?" remarked his master plaintively. "This man murders people and does things like that, you know."

"Personally, sir, I prefer a picture-palace. But I suppose there ain't no accounting for 'obblies. May I clear away, sir?"

"No, James, not at present. Keep quite still while I go on, or I shall get it wrong. Three months ago there arrived at The Elms, the most dangerous man in England—the IT of ITS. This gentleman goes by the name of Peterson, and he owns a daughter. From what Miss Benton said, I have doubts about that daughter, James." He rose and strolled over to the window. "Grave doubts, however, to return to the point, it appears that some unpleasing conspiracy is being launched by IT, the IT of ITS, and the doubtful daughter, into which Papa Benton has been unwillingly drawn. As far as I can make out, the suggestion is that I should unravel the tangled skein of crime and extricate papa."

In a spasm of uncontrollable excitement James sucked his teeth. "Lummie, it wouldn't 'arf go on the other two occupants were Mr. Peterson and the doubtful daughter, Irma. Presumably they were returning to The Elms. And incidentally there seemed no pronounced reason why they shouldn't. But, somehow, the sudden appearance of Lakington had upset him; he felt irritable and annoyed. What little he had seen of the man he had not liked; he did not want to be reminded of him, especially just as he was thinking of Phyllis."

He watched the white dust-cloud rise over the hill in front as the car topped it; he watched it settle and drift away in the faint breeze. Then he let in his clutch and followed quite slowly in the big car's wake.

There had been two men in front—the driver and another, and he wondered idly if the latter was Mr. Benton. He accelerated up the hill and swung over the top; the next moment he braked hard and pulled up just in time. The Rolls, with the chauffeur peering into the bonnet, had stopped in such a position that it was impossible for him to get by.

The girl was still seated in the back of the car, also the passenger in front, but the two other men were standing in the road apparently watching the chauffeur, and after a while the one whom Drummond had recognized as Lakington came toward him.

"I'm sorry," he began—and then paused in surprise. "Why, surely it's Captain Drummond!"

Drummond nodded pleasantly. "The occupant of a car is hardly likely to change in a mile, is he?" he remarked. "I'm afraid I forgot to wave as you went past, but I got your smile all right. Are you likely to be long, because if so, I'll stop my engine?"

The other man was now approaching casually, and Drummond regarded him calmly. "A friend of our little Phyllis, Peterson," said Lakington, as he came up.

"Any friend of Miss Benton's is, I hope, ours," said Peterson with a smile. "You've known her a long time, I expect?"

"Quite a long time," returned Hugh. "We have jizzed together on many occasions."

"Which makes it all the more unfortunate that we should have delayed you," said Peterson. "I can't help thinking, Lakington, that that new chauffeur is a bit of a fool."

"I hope he avoided the crash all right," murmured Drummond politely. Both men looked at him. "The crash," said Lakington. "There was no question of a crash. We just stopped."

"Really," remarked Drummond. "I think, sir, that you must be right in your diagnosis of your chauffeur's mentality." He turned courteously to Peterson. "When something goes wrong, for a fellow to stop his car, by braking so hard that he locks both back wheels, is no hon, as we used to say in France. I thought, judging by the trucks in the dust, that you must have been in imminent danger of ramming a traction engine. I wonder if I could help your man, he continued. "I'm a bit of an expert with a Rolls."

"How very kind of you," said Peterson. "I'll go and see." He went over to the man and spoke a few words.

"Isn't it extraordinary," remarked Hugh, "how the eye of the boss gazes at the average man into activity. As long, probably, as Mr. Peterson had remained here talking, that chauffeur would have gone on tinkering with the engine. And now—look, in a second—no serene. And yet I dare say Mr. Peterson knows nothing about it really. Just the watching eye, Mr. Lakington. Wonderful thing—the human optic."

He rambled on with a genial smile, watching with apparent interest the car in front. "Who's the quiet bird sitting beside the chauffeur? He appeals to me immensely. Wish to heaven I'd had a few more like him in France to turn into snipers."

"May I ask why you think he would have been a success in the job?" Lakington's voice expressed merely perfunctory interest, but his cold, steady eyes were fixed on Drummond.

Drummond got busy and forced the fighting.

MORE THAN HE COULD STAND

Mr. Cityman Changed His Mind When Business Partner Began to Brawl About His Garden.

What He Said to His Wife—If you want a garden this year you had better hire somebody to make it. I'm not going to try it again. I've figured it out; and if I would spend on my business the time I put in on that garden I would make enough money to keep us in vegetables for fifty years. I am off it for life.

What He Said to His Neighbor—I don't think I'll bother with a garden this year. It doesn't pay; I may do a little; but the digging and the labor—I'm off that for life.

What He Said to His Partner—Well, how's the garden coming along? I'm not doing much with mine this year. What? How high did you say? Already? What seed did you use?

What He Said to His Wife When He Got Home An Hour Early That Day—Call me when dinner's ready. I've got to get the garden started today or I'll never raise a thing.—Life.

If We Only Had Their Names. A coin which had lodged in a Pennsylvania girl's throat for two years was removed by surgeons without the aid of instruments. Somehow or other we can't help wishing these self-same surgeons could be hired to make some folks we know enough of some of our coin which has been lodging with them for more than two years.

As One Raised From Dead STOMACH PAINS GONE

Estomac Made Him Well

"After suffering ten long months with stomach pains, I have taken Estomac and am now without any pain whatever. Am as one raised from the dead," writes A. Porcfield.

"Thousands of stomach sufferers report wonderful relief. Their trouble is too much acidity and gas which Estomac quickly takes up and carries out, restoring the stomach to a healthy, active condition. Always carry a few Estomacs, take one after eating, food will digest well—you will feel fine. Big box costs only a trifle with your druggist's guarantee."

NOT WHAT THEY LOOKED FOR

Audience, Like Readers of Novels, Wanted What They Had Been Used to Getting.

Dr. William Lyon Phelps of Yale said at a dinner in Philadelphia: "The average popular novelist and his audience are very, very well. It reminds me of a story."

"An old-time music-hall artist turned up, after some years of absence, in a certain provincial town where he had once been a great favorite. He went on in his usual unmake-up—bull-dog nose and so forth—expecting a grand reception, but all his efforts were received in gloomy silence."

Let's Go

Well, what's more thrilling, exciting or more enjoyed than good auto races. The Jackson County Fair will stage on June 11 and 12 under the direction of S. G. Fielding, nationally known auto race promoter, who promises the public a two day program better than seen before in Jackson, and will consist of not less than six big events daily.

participated in by some of the best dirt track drivers in the country. All races are professional, although one or more races each day will be open to entries by local drivers. This arrangement has been made to give Jackson and neighboring town drivers a chance to show their skill at the wheel. As there are quite a number of speedy constructed racers around locally, we may expect some sensational results from local drivers.

Among the noted drivers already entered are: Chas. Coleman, driving a Mercer, Lord Ligon a Ford, S. Wolf a Matthews Special, Joe Fielding an Essex, Homer Ornsby a Hudson Super Six, Chas. Fox will pilot his Oleo 8.

A special race will be staged between Ornsby and Fielding as there has been considerable rivalry lately between these two noted drivers, and it will be finally threshed out in a long distance contest at this meeting.

E. Rhoads, another Ford enthusiast, who has seldom been beaten and has the reputation of cutting the corners at a mile a minute clip will keep the locals all guessing in the open contest.

There are many others but this will suffice to show you that you will be treated to a real auto race meet and a failure to attend both days will be regretted.—Jackson County Agricultural Society.

People Are Talking About Holstein Cows' Milk.

Why? Because this milk comes from a herd of the famous Holstein breed of cattle, the largest, healthiest, most vigorous breed on earth. They are real blooded cows, every one of them, just as Kentucky horses are blooded.

The tremendous vitality of the Holstein cow is imparted to her milk and gives new life to the bottle baby, the nursing mother, the child that is growing too fast and the invalid. And it is so well balanced in solids that it can be readily assimilated by the weakest stomach. It is just the milk for your whole family.

Insist too, that the herd from which your milk comes, is Tubercular Tested. In no other way is the dreaded disease of Tuberculosis so readily conveyed to you as through milk.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Vermont Cemetery Association will be held on the grounds, Saturday afternoon, June 11, at 2 o'clock. A good attendance is desired. Business of importance. Secretary.

Auto races under auspices Jackson County Fair, June 11 and 12, at Fair Grounds, Jackson, Michigan, at 2 p. m. Thrilling, Sensational. Six big events daily.—Adv. 46
