

IMPROVE CAVANAUGH LAKE DRIVEWAY

Sylvan Township Board Makes Survey of Beautiful Lakeside Drive.

As the result of a survey of the driveway along the east side of Cavanaugh lake, Tuesday evening, the Sylvan township board has ordered a number of improvements made to that road, also to the road from Chelsea to the lake.

At present the road along the east lake shore is so narrow that it is impossible for two automobiles to pass each other, excepting at two widely separated points, a high wooded bluff extending along one side and the lake on the other side of the roadway. As a result motorists are frequently obliged to back their cars for long distances in order to pass one another. To widen the roadway along its entire length would put the township to considerable expense and would also destroy a part of the natural beauty of the drive, so it has been decided to construct five turn-outs or passing points at convenient points along the lake shore drive.

Fences Infringe On Highway. The board found that fences erected along the road in front of both the John J. Cox and the Harry Douglas properties infringe upon the township highway and these cottagers will be asked to remove the obstructions to traffic.

Other improvements include the grading of the Chelsea-Cavanaugh lake road in front of the Haffey farm, which work has been under way for some time past, and the cutting of the dense brush along the roadway at the foot of Laird's hill.

CUSTER REUNION SOON.

The twentieth annual reunion of Custer's Michigan Cavalry Brigade association will be held in Lansing, September 14 and 15. Use of Legislative hall in the Capitol for the meetings has been tendered by the state.

The association is made up of members of the First Michigan cavalry, Fifth Michigan cavalry, Sixth Michigan cavalry, and the Seventh Michigan cavalry units. The several units will hold their separate reunions on the first day. A business meeting will precede the brigade's reunion on the second day. Governor Groesbeck and other prominent state officials have been invited to speak.

William O. Lee, state representative from Port Huron and a member of the house committee on military affairs, is president of the association. R. S. Whalihan of North Lake is a Custer veteran and will attend.

MISS MARY McINTEE.

The funeral of Miss Mary Elizabeth McIntee was held from St. Mary church, Wednesday morning, August 11, 1921. Rev. J. J. Mullen of Collegeville, Indiana, celebrating the Requiem High Mass. Interment was at Mt. Olivet cemetery.

Miss McIntee was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene McIntee, and was born in Lyndon township, October 27, 1879, and died Sunday, July 31, 1921, at 5337 Linwood avenue, Detroit, after an illness of two weeks.

She graduated from St. Mary School of Nurses, Detroit, class of 1908, and was a member of the Army Nurse Corps, serving at Camp Custer and at East View, New York, during the late war. She was a member of Ragan-Lide Post No. 13, American Legion, and six members of Herbert J. McKune Post of Chelsea acted as pall bearers at her funeral.

Surviving is her mother, Mrs. Mary McIntee, two brothers and three sisters; Rose and Herbert of Lyndon, Mrs. Howard Collings of Stockbridge, Owen of Sylvan and Frances of Detroit.

Until obliged to give up her studies she attended the Chelsea high school and was a popular member of the class of 1921.

Her parents, two brothers, seven sisters, grandmother, and three nephews are left to mourn their loss.

The funeral will be held tomorrow morning at ten o'clock from St. Mary church, Rev. Fr. VanDyke conducting the service. Interment at Mt. Olivet cemetery.

FISH HARD OF HEARING

But University Professor Says They Have Sense of Smell; Suggests A Perfumed Bait.

Fishermen of Michigan have found a champion. No longer will friend husband be able to explain that the noise made by his wife frightened the fish away and spoiled his catch, for no less an authority than Prof. Reighard of the University of Michigan contends that fish are not susceptible to air noises. Even the exhaust of a motorboat will not affect the fish, for they cannot hear, Prof. Reighard declares. Tapping or pounding on the boat might develop sound waves that the fish could hear, the professor told his classes in a recent lecture, but the greater density of water practically precludes the possibility of surface sounds being conveyed to underwater life.

Fish Have Sense of Smell. Fish have the sense of smell far more highly developed than the sense of hearing, Prof. Reighard maintains, and he recommends bait that takes full advantage of this condition. Even in the dark, fish will be attracted to the proper kind of bait by the sense of smell, it is declared.

OUR NEIGHBORS' DOINGS

What's Happening in Neighboring Towns and Localities.

FWLERVILLE—Fire early Wednesday morning destroyed the frame school building here in which were located the kindergarten and sixth grade. The brick building was not damaged.

YPSILANTI—Execution was issued Tuesday evening in the case of Nick Gotos vs. George Katsiforas for $246.95 and handed to Constable Ernest Maddux for collection. Gotos secured a judgement against Katsiforas for that amount for money loaned him to pay a fine.

DENTER—A small rattlesnake wearing two rattles and a button was killed on Main street in front of Jas. Doyle's billiard room Wednesday night of last week. During the day the sluiceways under the crosswalks had been cleaned out and it is thought this drove his snake ship into the open.—Leader.

ANN ARBOR—Because the children of the University hospital are in great need of kindergarten materials and toys, the annual picnic of the University circle of King's Daughters given for the children, will have a new feature this year. Each member of the organization will give a package in which will be some of the things the children need and an appeal is made to all others who are interested, to help. Parcels and other donations may be left at or sent to the City Y. M. C. A. before Monday.

MASONIC PICNIC AUGUST 18.

Plans for the Masonic picnic to be held at Eisenbeiser grove, North Lake on Thursday, August 18th, have been made and a good time for all is assured. All Masons, members of the O. E. S., and their families are invited to go out and make this the event of the year.

The program will include a concert by the Chelsea band, address by Prof. J. B. High of the U. of M., music by the Novelty Male Quartet, athletic sports and races, base ball game between the officers and members of Olive Lodge No. 156 F. and A. M., etc.

Transportation will be furnished for all who have no way of getting out to the lake, and the first group of machines will leave the Masonic club room at 9:30 a. m. and the second group at 10:30 a. m. Extra trips will be made if necessary. The stores will close at noon for the balance of the day.

In a Quandary.
 "Have you finished with those letters yet, Miss Dumbell?" asked the busy man of affairs.
 "All but the one you told me to compose to your wife, saying you were well and there was nothing to write about."
 "Yes?"
 "Do you—er—want me to make it affectionate or formal?"

Literary Invention.
 "Yes, sir," said the author. "I figure I've got the one best seller of all history."
 "What's the plot?" inquired the publisher, doubtfully.
 "Never mind the plot," said the author. "You know everybody skims and jumps about in a book. Well, I've just picked out the places they jump to, and put 'em all in the first two chapters."
 With a cry of joy the publisher embraced the author and threw him out the window delightedly.

MARIE GESSLER.

Synopsis.—In a New York jewelry store Harry Severn, United States consular agent, notices a small box which attracts him. He purchases it. Later he discovers in a secret compartment a writing giving a clue to a revolutionary movement in this country seeking to overthrow the Chilean government. The writing mentions a rendezvous, and Severn decides to investigate. Finding the place mentioned in the writing apparently deserted, Severn visits a subject in the vicinity. A woman in the place is not a man, seemingly by appointment, and Severn, his suspicions aroused, follows them. They go to the designated meeting place, an abandoned iron foundry. At the rendezvous Severn is accepted as one of the conspirators and admitted. He meets a stranger who addresses him as Harry Daly. The incident plays into Severn's hands and he accepts it. His new acquaintance is a notorious thief, "Gentleman George," Harris. Harris informs him of a scheme he has to secure a sum amounting to $100,000, the revolutionary fund, and offers to "split" with him. Severn accepts the proposition. Severn learns it was his new friend and a "Captain Alva" who had lost the box which started him on the trail.

"And then, of course, you hunted up Alva?"

"The next morning, before any bank opened, I thought over it all night and got up a peach of a story. I needed it, too, for this Alva was a smooth guy. It took some nerve to get him, but I knew, through Horner's memorandum, some things about him he never supposed was known up in this country; so when I sprung them, natural-like, he quit being offish, and gave me the glad hand."

"Who is he? A crank?"
 "Not by a d-d sight. He's a captain in the Chilean army, military attaché to the embassy at Washington, intrusted with certain work. But he's really working to overthrow the present Chilean government—getting up a revolution down there. I lied until I was black in the face, but I must have kept within bounds, for he got to liking me real well. He was a high-roller, and I put him onto some things in New York he had never been steered against before. That made a bit with him. There wasn't nothing said about cashing up all day long, and early the next morning we breezed into a downtown hotel, and went to bed."

"What hotel?"
 "Search me. We'd been tanking up on champagne and were drunker in the morning than when we turned in. That's the honest truth. All either of us wanted for breakfast was a cup of coffee. We got that at a little dump on some side street, so as to brace up a little." He paused to laugh at the recollection, helping himself to a third cigar.

"And you actually retain no knowledge of where you spent the night?"
 "Not the faintest glimmer. Can you beat it? Alva lost part of a letter somewhere, and a curious sort of box he had picked up in Chinatown. He put them both in his pocket, so he says, but that was the last he ever saw of either. Queer looking box that was; nothing I cared about, but it cost the guy a hundred bucks, and he was duffy over it. Anyhow, that night put me solid with Alva."

"But the money? He's never drawn it?"

"Not a dink red. He claims the time hasn't come yet, and that it's safer with Krantz. But I've stuck to him like a brother and he's took me in with his gang, so now I know every move that's going on. I'm on the inside, all right, and now it's beginning to get hot."

"They are ready to act?"

"Sure; that's what the meeting was about tonight."

"What are they after—ships?"

"Well, they've got to have some, but mostly arms; then there is a guy down there who's got to be croaked. I don't care what it is; when the time comes they won't find a handful of change to act with. I'm some patriot, I am, and I'll put a bigger crimp in their spits than the whole United States government secret service."

"But see here, Harris," soberly, "how do you know you are going to get this? Of course, I see the game the way you've mapped it out, but suppose Krantz puts in check, or draft. That spikes your gun."

"Hi—! yes; but he won't. I've sized up this man Krantz. He's in the game for money. He don't care who wins the d-d revolution, for he gets his share out of the pot right away. He's playing the game secretly on his own account. Got that? He expects it may be a year, or perhaps two, before he can cash in on the deal, but when it does come his share of profit will be likely a hundred thousand. That beats bank interest, and the old bird is willing to take the chance."

"Quite likely that's true; no bank could finance such a project."
 "Of course not—the directors would throw a fit. Well, now, that kind of a guy, in a raw deal like this, is going to play safe, isn't he? He isn't going to leave any evidence lying around to hang himself with—any drafts, or checks to pass through the clearing house? Not on your life; he is too wily a fox for that. Krantz knew this was coming, and he's been cashing in for six months or more to be ready for it. And now he's got the currency stored away, nobody knows where but himself. When Alva comes for it, it will be handed out secretly, and that old bird will crumple up the receipt in his pocket and wait till he can cash in through those guys in London. So now it's up to us to locate the dough; we've got to separate it from either Krantz, or Alva—I'm for Alva."

"Why?"
 "Because the job looks easier. He's human and no money grubber. He's just as liable as not to carry the whole deal around with him; d-d-n it. I think that's just what he will do, for he won't dare deposit such a sum anywhere. That's why I have laid strike—I'm banking on the army captain to offer me a soft thing. What do you say?"

I had the whole story now in a nutshell and it was one to think over. That Harris had played his cards well was sufficiently evident. Now I must be fully as cautious in playing mine. I felt the fellow had given me his full confidence; actually believing me to be Daly, and on the same trail with him, desiring to use me in what was probably the biggest job of his life, he had been led into the indiscretion of confiding to me the full truth of his scheme. If I kept my head and nerve, I had it in my power to block everything and thus bring the whole danger of such an attempt to accomplish this alone, yet at the moment perceived no other way. I must remain Daly and appear eager to obtain my share of the spoils.

"A slick piece of work, Harris," I admitted admiringly, "and so far as I can judge you have figured out the chances about right. They look good. I'm with you, old man—shake!"
 Our hands clasped. "That is what I thought you would say, Harry," more familiarly. "Come on now and drink with me."

I put the stuff down, rather feeling the need of it, and desiring to establish our intimacy more closely.

"Then that's settled, George—yes. I'll have another cigar. By the way," as I lit up, "there was another thing I wanted to ask you about. You said there was a woman here from Washington. What's the idea?"

"D-d-n if I know, but I guess it's all right. Still I don't quite cotton to the dame. This is how I got it from Alva. Those Junta fellows—the big ones, you know—think this New York bunch is pretty slow; they want some action for their money. So Senator Mendoza, who seems to be engineering the deal, decides to send somebody over here to stir up the criminals. But he's watched every minute; secret service men are as thick as flies, and if one of his underlings was to leave for New York, he'd never get ten feet without being spotted. Mendoza is wise to this, so he gathers in privately a skirt he believes is all right, and sends her. It's not a decent job for a woman, and that's what makes it safe. He hands a good guess, too; that female is as smart as a steel trap. She gave me the cold shivers."

"You don't think she suspects you?"
 "No, I don't; there isn't no reason why she should; but she gave me the once over, all right, and I am perfectly willing to know she is on her way back to Washington. I never did play in any luck with a woman in the game—perhaps that's what makes me afraid of 'em."

"What's her name?"
 "Gessler, so Alva said—Marie Gessler; South American, I suppose; anyhow, she talked that language like a native. I stored clear of her most of the time. Somehow she got my goat. However, that's nothing to worry over." He glanced at his watch. "The dame's safely off by this time. What do you say, let's go home."

I signified my willingness.

As we passed out together through the narrow passage, extinguishing the lights behind us the one overpowering desire in my mind was to be once more alone, so as to think over, and piece together as best I might this fabric of villainy with which I was confronted. The situation was fairly clear, yet there were strange lights and shadows in it I found hard to reconcile. Moreover, what should I do? How could I serve best—by immediately telling my story to the officers of the law, and thus washing my hands clean? or by continuing to enact the role of Harry Daly, and to this way entrapping these fellows red-handed? I had had fully enough of Harris for the present. His boastfulness and pride of crime disgusted me. I had no desire to be associated with the fellow, or pretend, even for a worthy purpose, to be his companion. Yet all this had happened so suddenly and unexpectedly I could not determine the best course to pursue. I remained dumb and confused, the only clear decision being an eagerness to bring him, and these others also, to justice.

We were the last to leave the place and emerged from the building into the deserted yard, leaving all in silence and darkness behind us. The door closed tightly, secured by a night latch, and we stood motionless in the drizzle. By that time I was ready with a suggestion, but by good fortune he took the initiative.

"We better slip out of here alone, I reckon," he whispered. "I'll go up this way, and then you take a sneak through the lumber yard. Likely we'll catch the same car going down. If we don't, look me up at Costigan's place—you know where that is?"

"Sixth avenue, isn't it?"
 "Sure. Ask for Parker, and it will be all right. If I ain't in, leave a note where I can hunt you up. I got to keep my eye on Alva tomorrow, so he don't get away with the stuff."

"You expect him to draw?"
 "Not before night; but, just the same, I want to know for sure. You wait here five minutes, for I've got the longest trip to make. You'll show up all right?"

"You can't lose me; it looks too good."
 He chuckled and patted me on the shoulder in an excess of friendliness, evidently feeling to some extent the whisky he had been imbibing so freely.

"That's the talk, Daly. Well, so long."

He slipped out through the gate into the dark of the alley, leaving it slightly ajar for me to follow. I sheltered myself behind the high board fence and listened to the soft slush of his feet in the mud. The sound vanished and all about was silence and darkness. I waited only long enough to be sure he was safely out of the way, and then followed, eager to be off. One thing was certain, I would make no effort to join him on the car; I would use the remainder of the night to decide the future, working out the problem alone.

To make certain that I avoided any possibility of encountering the fellow again, I passed directly through the deserted lumber yard before emerging upon Gans street. This thoroughfare was at this hour desolate enough, not a light showing in the houses, or a moving figure visible as far as I could see in the darkness of the street lamps. The rain was steady, the pavement shimmering with moisture, the only sound the pattering of the drops as they fell. If any policeman were about I saw no signs, and, with color turned up to my ears, I chose to walk rather than seek the block to the east and the possibility of a street car.

The factory district ended in a row of houses, dark and silent at this hour, but the walking was good, and I pushed forward briskly, so buried in thought as to become practically insensible to the unpleasant surroundings. The night had been a full one, far exceeding my expectations, yet left me more puzzled than ever as to my own duty. So far I knew of no act of crime with which these men could be connected; they were merely proposing a future attack on a neutral government. If, however, I consented to play my part with Harris, I would not only be in ample time to circumvent any danger Alva and his gang might contemplate, but also gain ample evidence for their conviction and expulsion from this country. In addition to this I would be in position to block the daring plans of this international thief. Altogether it seemed to me that the wiser course for me to pursue was to wait, and watch, ready to act at any moment, but keeping my own counsel until certain that the specific moment had arrived.

Nor was I oblivious to the strange impression left upon me by my encounter with Marie Gessler. She had interested me oddly, and I could not drive her memory from my thoughts. Our moment of conversation had been peculiar, and her words and actions remained as a constraint. Why had she stood there, her hand on the door, and talked to me in that mocking way? Had she a purpose, an aim? Did she believe my explanation? or was her suspicion aroused into a determination to verify it in some way? Although I could not decide, yet doubtless the latter theory was the most probable. That was why I had been pledged to call at "247 Le Compté street," and ask for "Miss Conrad." This was the same place where Harris had secretly met Krantz. Evidently it was another headquarters for these precious villains. Once there, and safely in their power, the truth of my identity could easily be established. Was that her idea?

Much Newspaper Imported.

Of the newspaper paper used by American newspapers only one-third is made in the United States from wood grown in this country. The rest is either imported or made from imported wood or pulp.  "No," said the millionaire, with a grim smile, "what you see is merely Chinese for 'Yours sincerely.'"—Birmingham Age-Herald.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promise of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it. A prominent druggist says: "Take for example, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, so many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

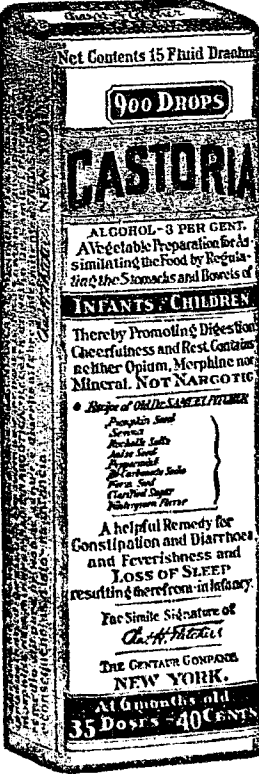

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores. Advertisement.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE LIFE

A Dangerous Period Through Which Every Woman Must Pass

Practical Suggestions Given by the Women Whose Letters Follow

to carry women safely through the Change of Life.

"It is with pleasure that I write to you thanking you for what your wonderful medicine has done for me. I was passing through the Change of Life and had a displacement and weakness so that I could not stand on my feet and other annoying symptoms. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the first bottle helped me, so I got more. It cured me and I am now doing my housework. Your medicine is certainly a woman's friend and you may use this testimonial as you choose."—Mrs. MARY LESTER, 688 Frank Street, Adrian, Mich.

It is said that middle age is the most trying period in a woman's life, and owing to modern methods of living not one woman in a thousand escapes this perfectly natural change without experiencing very annoying symptoms. Those smothering spells, the dreadful hot flashes that send the blood rushing to the head until it seems as though it would burst, and the faint feeling that follows, as if the heart were going to stop, those sinking or dizzy spells are all symptoms of a nervous condition, and indicate the need for a special medicine.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a root and herb medicine especially adapted to act upon the feminine system. It acts in such a manner as to build up the weakened nervous system and enables a woman to pass this trying period with the least possible annoying symptoms.

Women everywhere should remember that most of the commoner ailments of women are not the surgical ones—they are not caused by serious displacements or growths, although the symptoms may be the same, and that is why so many apparently serious ailments readily yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it acts as a natural restorative and often prevents serious troubles.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent to you free upon request. Write to The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

Children Cry For

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

Snake Hypnotized Hen.

An Alberta (Canada) reader says that a farmer and his wife noticed a hen in the yard standing very still but squeaking in a terrified manner. They watched it a few moments but could see no cause for her fear. They went out and found a snake looking at the hen. The hen didn't move until the snake was driven away, so they supposed the hen had been hypnotized.

Cured of Stomach Trouble and Constipation.

Rachel Crabley of Beaver Dam, O., was sick for two years with stomach trouble and constipation, taking one medicine after another with only temporary relief. "My neighbor spoke so enthusiastically of Chamberlain's Tablets," she says, "that I procured a bottle of them at our drug store to try. A few days treatment convinced me that they were just what I needed. I continued their use for several weeks and they cured me."

WILD LIFE EXPOSITION AT COMING STATE FAIR

Under the supervision of the state department of conservation, John Baird, director, a complete wild life exposition will be put on at the state fair in Detroit September 2 to 11. Ground space has been set apart for this splendid feature, which will be of interest to every nature lover, sportsman and fisherman who visits the fair.

Wild animals native to Michigan will be shown in places set aside for each variety, the specimens being brought to the fair grounds from the state game preserves. They will include deer, bear, foxes, wolves and many varieties of smaller animals. Fish native to Michigan waters also will be shown in a big aquarium and will be especially interesting to those who have never had the opportunity to see more than a few of the many varieties of fish that swim the lakes and rivers of the state.

Like the other exhibits at this year's fair the educational possibilities of this wild life exposition will be utilized and the visitors to the fair will have the chance to learn from experts how the animals of the state live when they are free to roam the woods and fields.

Tribune "liner" ads; five cents the line first insertion, 2 1/2 cents the line each subsequent insertion.
