MINISTER DISCUSSES HIS WIFE'S TROUBLES

Rev. A. H. Sykes, former pastor of the Watkins Park Presbyterian church, Nashville, Tenn., says:

"After seeing what Tangle has accomplished in his wife's case, I am convinced that it is a medicine of great power and extraordinary merit. I do not think I have ever seen anything give such prompt results. Mrs. Sykes had been in delicate health for ten months, suffering from stomach trouble and nervous breakdown. I frequently sought medical advice but Tangle is the only thing that gave her any relief. After taking the medicine only a short time, she was able to sit up and help with the household duties. I think it only a short time until her health will be fully restored."

Tangle is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Advertisement.

In and Out of Matrimony.

"Is this the place you go to see about divorces?" demanded a unknown individual recently of Leonard Gradano, the proprietor of the boot-shining stand on the west side of the county courthouse.

"Sure," replied Gradano, looking rather intently at the man. "You better take a lawyer in with you or pick one up in the hallway. There's always a lot of 'em hanging around."

"Say," he called after the sad one, "didn't you come to this here door two years ago with a skirt and didn't you ask a guy where the marriage license bureau was?"

"No," replied Leonard, "only I'm that guy. You come to the right joint this time."—New York Times.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be deep-seated; it makes you one so.

Not hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kimer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Whites Outnumbered.

Taking the broadest possible view of the racial maps of the globe as it existed before the war, it will be found that out of a total number of human beings amounting to 1,799,000,000, 520,000,000 were white, 1,150,000,000 were colored. Thus the colored races outnumbered the whites more than two to one.

The American Legion

IS LEGION LEADER IN PARIS

Famous New Orleans Ace Heads American Volunteers of French Foreign Organization.

Edgar John Boulligny of New Orleans, famous Ace of the Lafayette Escadrille and scion of an old French family has been chosen to head an association of veterans organized at Paris and called "American Volunteers of the French Foreign Legion." When Germany announced its intention of meeting "all comers," Boulligny was one of the first Americans to volunteer his services for France and was decorated four times for bravery with the escadrille. He is a member of Alvin Cullender post, American Legion.

Boulligny first served with the Second regiment of the French Foreign Legion. When transferred to the Lafayette flyers, his intrepid maneuvering over the enemy lines, eagerness to engage any plane bearing the multi-colored cross, contributed many of the thrilling chapters which comprise the history of that heroic group. He was transferred to the American air forces when this country entered the fight and became an ace. He also secured numerous remarkable photographs, among them being one of enemy shells bursting over the Rheims cathedral during the first bombardment of this historic structure.

The organization of which Boulligny is president, includes American volunteers who enlisted in the early days of the war, while their country was still neutral, and is intended to include "the bonafide American citizens who served honorably at the front with the Legion, for the purpose of keeping fresh the memory of fallen comrades and furthering friendship among those surviving."

BUSY FOR THE LEGION CAUSE

Head of Washington Woman's Auxiliary Says Workers Will Not Be Found Wanting.

Mrs. John R. Neely has been chosen head of the Washington State Women's Auxiliary of the American Legion, form in Washington, D. C. Mrs. Neely later moved to the state of Washington where she has been active in club work of Spokane and the entire state. She is, in addition to being president of the state Legion auxiliary, head of the strong National Guard auxiliary, the mother organization and president of St. John's guild. She is the mother of five children, four sons and a daughter. One son fought with the Ninety-first division, A. E. F. Another was with the Twenty-third engineers, A. E. F. A third was an aviation instructor at Kelly Field, Texas, and Isadorin, France. The youngest fought with the embattled Second division A. E. F.

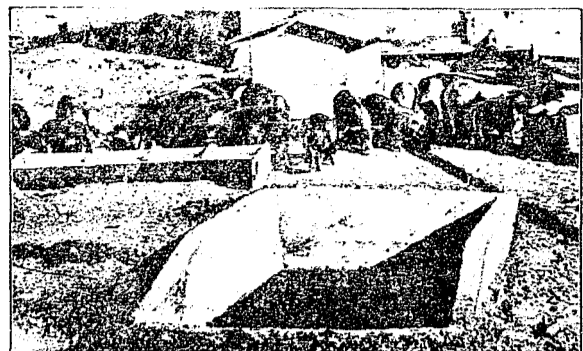

"My work in the auxiliary will be a legacy from our beloved sons, who, sleeping in the sacred soil of France, have passed it on to the women of the American Legion," said Mrs. Neely. "It belongs to us by ties of blood. It means a pledge of service to the service men in the name of those they left behind. In the holding of that legacy, God helping, we will not be found wanting."

SUMMER IS EXCELLENT TIME TO EXTERMINATE MANY HOG PESTS

Medicated Hog Wallows Are Much Liked by Animals.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Thousands of dollars' worth of good hog feed goes every year to the feeding of munge mites and lice. It is shown by reports to the United States Department of Agriculture. That is to say, after the hogs have fed on the corn and other forage and put it in the way of becoming hams, bacon or side pork, the parasites swarming over the animals' bodies take their toll and reduce the victims' flesh through discomfort and disease. These parasites are more numerous and active in cold weather, when the hair is thick, but summer is an excellent time to exterminate the pests that remain over the season.

Hogs Like to Wallow.

The instinctive habit of the hog to wallow in water when the weather is warm may be taken advantage of in applying treatment for external parasites, department experts say. By medicating the water in properly constructed wallows, remedies for lice and mange may be applied in a satisfactory manner with a minimum expenditure of money, time and labor. If the results from the use of medicated wallows are to be satisfactory, however, it is necessary to consider the nature and habits of the animals to be treated and plan accordingly.

If conditions are such that hogs may exercise choice in the matter, they invariably select shallow water in which to wallow. If the nostrils can be kept above the surface easily, the hog will lie down on its side and roll, then get up and repeat the operation on the other side until the entire body is wet.

The proper depth of liquid in the wallow depends upon the size and number of hogs using the wallow. For pigs weighing from 40 to 80 pounds, the wallow should be charged with liquid to the depth of about 3 inches. For hogs from 80 to 150 pounds, 4 inches is sufficient. The medicated liquid should never be so deep that the hogs are afraid to lie in it. For a number of hogs of varied sizes, a depth of from 3 to 4 inches is most practicable. No medicine should be added until the hogs have had three or four days to get accustomed to the wallow. It should not be kept medicated for more than about 48 hours at a time, as the hogs can get well soaked in that time, and constant application is liable to irritate the skin. After that, medicaments may be added at intervals of a week or two days.

Simple Remedy as Effective.

Crude petroleum is one of the simplest remedies that can be obtained for the purpose, and is the only one that will eradicate both lice and mange with one treatment. No heating equipment is necessary and any kind of reasonable good water can be used. The oil apparently does not injure the animals if the freshly oiled hogs receive proper care and attention. Unprocessed crude oil, as it comes from the wells, is probably the most effective crude oil dip. However, processed crude petroleum, known to the trade as fuel oil, which is the residue from manufacturing gasoline and other light hydrocarbons, is commonly used and is effective in eradicating lice and mange. As a rule, the thinner the processed crude oil, the better it is for a dip or wallow.

In using oil in wallows, about one pint for each pig or one quart for each grown hog is recommended. This can best be determined by observing whether the pigs use the wallow and whether their bodies become well coated with oil. If all are not well coated, add more oil to the wallow. The oil will make the water distasteful enough so the hogs will not try to drink it.

Hog wallows are comparatively easy of construction. For best results, they should be of concrete, sufficiently large to accommodate the number of pigs in the inclosure, and with one side sloping to give easy access.

The oil floating on the surface of the water limits or prevents evaporation, and the water if exposed to the sun during the day soon becomes so warm that hogs will not lie in it. If the wallow is exposed to the direct rays of the sun during summer months so that the hogs will not lie in it, it is advisable to construct a shade over it and the oil should be added in the evening. Oil added after sundown is usually carried out on the bodies of the hogs before noon the next day.

A shady, well-ventilated place should be provided for freshly oiled hogs. All wallows should be drained and cleaned as often as necessary to keep them and the surroundings in good sanitary condition. It is very important that the wallow be properly constructed and cared for; otherwise it will soon get into a filthy and insalubrious condition.

Hog lice do not live long when separated from the animal, but as a precautionary measure all small inclosures which have contained lousy hogs should be cleaned and disinfected before being used for a new lot of hogs. The litter and manure should be removed and the floors cleaned, after which the woodwork and floors should be sprayed with a good disinfectant.

Farmers' Bulletin 1855, "Hog Lice and Mange," gives much useful information about the pests and methods of eradication. It will be sent on request to the division of publications, Department of Agriculture, Washington.

SOWING TURNIPS TO FOLLOW VEGETABLES

No Better Crop to Utilize Vacant Spaces in Gardens.

They Are Useful for the Table, and to a Limited Extent Will Supply Place of Potatoes—Reasonably Rich Soil Needed.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

As a crop to utilize garden space after early vegetables have been harvested, nothing is better than turnips. Turnips should be planted in most parts of the country about July 25, but in the extreme South as late as the last of August and can be left in the ground until after several light frosts or all winter in the South. They are useful as a table vegetable, and to a limited extent, will supply the place of potatoes. It is the general opinion of specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture that the American public could consume many more turnips than it does, a fact of particular interest this year when there seems every indication of a curtailed potato crop.

For field sowing, turnips are usually broadcasted. The particular requirement is a reasonably rich soil finely raked and leveled off to avoid water collecting in pools. The seed should be sowed sparingly. One homely rule is to take the quantity which seems sufficient and divide it in half. After the seeds have been scattered on the surface of the ground, they should be raked in. This may be done by dragging a piece of brush over the ground. The surface should be well smoothed. It is a good plan to sow turnips just after a rain, giving them opportunity to sprout before a crust forms. After sowing, they will need little attention until harvest.

CANDLE AND GRADE ALL EGGS

Department of Agriculture Endeavoring to Teach Women Best Ways of Marketing.

Farm women frequently have entire charge of the marketing of eggs, butter and poultry. In some states they form what are called "egg circles" for marketing their eggs in large quantities. The eggs are collected regularly by one of the members or by some one hired by the circle. Egg-forts are being made by marketing agents of the United States Department of Agriculture to teach these farm women the value of properly candling and grading the eggs so that only the best are marketed.

GOOD AND POOR PRODUCERS

Owner of Small Flock Can Determine by Observation Which of His Hens Are Layers.

In any flock some hens will be found to be much better producers than others. Often there are a few hens that are such poor layers that it doesn't pay to keep them. Where the flock is small the owner can determine by observation which hens are merely brooders; and these are the ones to eat.

IDEAL CONDITIONS FOR HENS

Egg Production Is Encouraged by Sunshine, Fresh Air, Green Feed and Comfort.

Hens lay best in the spring of the year. It would be reasonable to suppose that the nearer to spring conditions the henhouse and its occupants can be kept the better will be the egg production. Sunshine, fresh air, green feed and comfortable temperature are the ideal conditions.

ORCHARD CLEANINGS

PRUNING SAVES OLD ORCHARD
County Agent in South Carolina Community Revives Trees and Destroys Insects.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Many an old orchard would produce fruit for a number of years if it were properly pruned. The county agents are endeavoring to see that the orchards in their counties that are in need of pruning are receiving this attention. One such orchard in Bamberg county, South Carolina, has been used for a demonstration in pruning for the past year and a half, and the results have been beyond expectations.

A Rejuvenated Orchard.

Aze, neglect and scale had reduced nearly all the trees to one or two living branches, and no returns were being received by the owner from the orchard.

On the advice of the county agent nearly all the branches were pruned off and cultivation was started and kept up through the summer. This year instructions on pruning the new growth of wood were given and a good crop of fruit has set. The orchard is now practically free from scale and is a good example of what may be expected from an old orchard that is given a little care.

NEXT SEASON'S BERRY CROP

Greatest Influence Is Exerted During Summer Growing Months After Fruiting.

The one time when the greatest influence on the next year's berry crop is exerted is during the summer growing months, just after the fruiting season has passed. It is then that the young canes are making a vigorous growth in order to be sufficiently matured for fruiting the following season.

Nature, in her efforts to accomplish something, is always profuse with her bounty. She will send up a dozen canes from one root in an effort to produce only one additional seedling.

Just what takes place during the summer in the berry patch will have everything to do with the success of the crop the following season. It is after the fruiting season is passed that the greatest neglect is apt to fall upon the small fruit on the average farm.

VEGETABLE PROTEIN NEEDED

Ground Soy Bean Meal and Cottonseed Meal Will Take Place of Tankage and Scrap.

Practical and experimental work with both chicks and old hens brings out the fact that vegetable proteins like those of ground soybean meal and cottonseed meal can take the place of animal proteins such as tankage and meat-scrap in poultry feeding. Animal proteins, however, cannot be replaced unless the vegetable protein is supplemented by essential mineral elements. Supplying the fowls with granulated bone has been found to be a good way of supplying these elements when a vegetable protein is being fed.

POULTRY MANURE FOR FRUIT

Most Valuable Animal Fertilizer Produced and Much of It Is Thrown Away or Wasted.

Poultry manure is, by far, the most valuable animal fertilizer commonly produced and has been comparatively little understood. In fact, much of it has been thrown away or carelessly wasted. It contains more than twice as much ammonia and phosphate as sheep manure, and more than four times as much as horse manure. It can be kept in good condition more easily than any other manure with very little labor or attention.

FERTILIZER FOR FRUIT TREES

Nitrate of Soda and Acid Phosphate Applied in Circle Will Produce Best Results.

The fruit tree fertilizer most generally in use and producing the best results during recent tests by leading orchardists, consists of five pounds of nitrate of soda (or four pounds of sulphate of ammonia) and five pounds of acid phosphate, applied in a circle under the outer ends of the branches of the trees and worked into the soil about four inches deep.

BOX TURTLES.

"I love to eat berries," said Mr. Box Turtle.

"No better than I do," said Mr. Box Turtle's brother. "Or rather, I should say, that you don't love to eat berries any more than I love to eat them."

"I adore berries. And I love vegetables, too. Of course, I'll take a nibble at an insect once in awhile, too."

"Just as I will do," said Mr. Box Turtle.

"Of course," said Mr. Box Turtle's brother, "we are famous for the way we can protect ourselves by our box-like shells which we can close up. We can draw ourselves into our shells so that creatures cannot get at us."

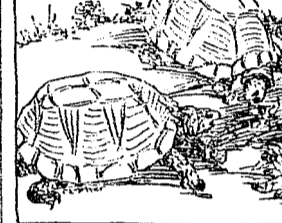

"Some other turtles can do this too, but not so well as we can. They may be pulled at and tugged at and hurt quite badly."

"But when we withdraw ourselves into our shells, no one can get at us at all, no one at all."

"We're safe then."

"But if I go on eating so many berries, I may be so fat that I can't get into my shell. That would be a great pity. But then, eating is such a joy. And berries are so delicious."

"It doesn't matter how much we eat, for we are strong, and we live a long time."

"Let's Begin Right Away."

a long time. If eating made us ill we wouldn't eat so much, for we are sensible."

"But eating a lot seems to agree with us. And though sometimes our eating manners aren't of the best, we don't care. Sometimes we get berry stains over ourselves."

"I can't say that our table manners aren't of the best, as we never eat at tables."

"So I simply say that our eating manners aren't of the best. That is what I say."

"We're so strong that we can get well of injuries and accidents which are quite bad ones. We're wonderfully strong. And we can breathe in our shells without getting the air for quite awhile, too."

"That is a great help, for when we are in our shells we want to be able to stand it comfortably. Of course, we're always in our shells, in a way, and quite a good-sized way at that."

"But when I speak of being in our shells, I mean when we get into our shells so that there is nothing of us such as a head or foot sticking out!"

"That is what I mean."

"To be sure, I understand," said Mr. Box Turtle.

"The berry season is my favorite season of the year," said Mr. Box Turtle's brother.

"And mine, too," said Mr. Box Turtle.

"There is no other season like it," said Mr. Box Turtle's brother.

"No other season like it at all," said Mr. Box Turtle.

"And I don't really mind if I get so fat that I cannot close my box shell for awhile," said Mr. Box Turtle's brother. "I will take a chance that there will be no danger and will eat and eat and eat."

"I believe I will do the same," said Mr. Box Turtle. "And too, perhaps we won't grow so fat after all. We may grow fat, but not fat enough so that it would be hard to withdraw in to our safety boxes."

"That's a pleasant thought," said Mr. Box Turtle's brother.

"But at any rate I must eat I mustn't miss any of the berries that I can possibly manage to eat. If I did, I'd feel very badly about it."

"And the berries wouldn't care if I left them. What would be the use of leaving them? None at all that I can see."

"Surely I would be able to see if there was any use in leaving them. But I shall eat and eat and eat, and shall enjoy it, oh, so much."

"Let's begin right away," said Mr. Box Turtle. "We've been talking quite a rest from eating for a bit now."

"A good suggestion," said Mr. Box Turtle's brother. "A most excellent suggestion, and one worthy of a Box Turtle, a bright, bright Box Turtle."

Bob and Jimmy, brothers, still in knickerbockers, have said their prayers every night since they began to talk. They play hard all day and are tired at night. At bed time they start upstairs, undressing on the way, and at the same time saying their prayers. When they reach the bed there is nothing to do but fall asleep. The other night on the way upstairs Bob said to Jimmy: "Guess we had better drop to our knees tonight; I heard 'em say a big storm was liable to come." And they did.

Gourd of Value in Surgery.

Loofah, a sponge gourd of tropical regions, is declared by Dr. E. Juvana, a French surgeon, to be superior to brushes for surgical cleansing. Pads about four inches square can be cut and readily sterilized, and can be so packed in a box as to be automatically supplied one at a time. These sheets of vegetable sponge are stated to bear sterilization better than brushes, to cleanse better and to act in a gentler and more even manner.

Facilitated Melting of Snow. Automobile highways which cross the Sierra Nevada mountains of California are usually closed to traffic as late as June on account of the slow melting of the deep snow which covers the higher levels. In order to accelerate the melting of the snow and thus to expedite the opening of the highways, the experiment was made this spring of scattering black soil and ashes on snow which covered the highways. As a result of the increased absorption of solar heat the snow melted rapidly, and the roads were opened several weeks earlier than would otherwise have obtained.

MYSTERY.

Synopsis.—In a New York jewelry store Philip Severn, United States consular agent, notices a small box which attracts him. He purchases it later he discovers in a secret compartment a writing giving a clue to a revolutionary movement in this country seeking to overthrow the Chilean government. The writing mentions a rendezvous, and Severn decides to investigate. Finding the place mentioned in the writing apparently deserted, Severn visits a saloon in the vicinity. A woman in the place is met by a man, seemingly by appointment, and Severn, his suspicions aroused, follows them. They go to the designated meeting place, an abandoned iron foundry. At the rendezvous Severn is accepted as one of the conspirators and admitted. He meets a stranger who addresses him as Harry Day. The incident places into Severn's hands and he accepts it. His new acquaintance is a notorious thief, "Gentleman George" Harris, concealed. Severn hears the girl he had followed address the conspirators. She urges them to hasten the work of the revolution. The girl discovers Severn listening. She accepts his explanation of his presence and makes an appointment to meet him next day. He tells her his name is Harry Harris. She informs him of a scheme he has to secure a sum amounting to $100,000, the revolutionary fund, and offers to "split" with him. Severn accepts the proposition. Severn learns it was his new friend and a "Captain Alva" who had lost the box which started him on the trail. Harris tells him the woman is Marie Gessler. He arranges to meet Severn next day at Tom Cordigan's saloon. Leaving the building, Severn finds the body of Captain Alva, stabbed to death with a hatpin dagger. He remembers having seen it, or one like it, in Marie Gessler's hat. Severn is forced to believe she is the slayer.

CHAPTER VII.—Continued

There was no outward sign of any surveillance as I turned into the block; indeed except for a grocery truck before one of the houses, and an organ-grinder at the farther corner, entertaining a group of children, the street was entirely deserted. Mustering my courage, and with a feeling of deep excitement, I advanced up the steps of the house numbered 247, and, finding refuge in the outer vestibule, rang the bell. I heard no distinct rattle, but within a moment or two the door opened a crack, held in that position by a chain, and the face of a middle-aged woman peered out at me.

"Well, what is it?" she snapped, in no encouraging tone. "I should like to see Miss Conrad," I began apologetically. "I have an appointment with her."

"Not here yet ain't, young man, for there ain't nobody by that name in this house."

"Are you sure? This is 247, is it not? That was the number given me. She was to be here at two o'clock."

"This yer is 247 all right. I ain't denyin' that," the voice more acid than ever, "but there ain't no Miss Conrad yer; so that's all there is about it."

"But there must be."

"Must be nuthin'! I guess I know. I've been yer seventeen years, and I've never seen nobody of that name

"Well, What Is It?" She Snapped. ever in this house. Besides, I'm house-cleaning and can't stand yer talkin' all day."

"Do you know a man named Krantz?" I flung at her desperately, in a last effort to arouse some response. "Adolph Krantz."

"No, I don't; ther ain't none of those people yer, I tell yer."

The door slammed shut in my face, and I heard a bolt shot into place. The interview was ended.

I stared a moment at the blank door in bewilderment; then turned away, and slowly retraced my steps to the street. So the young woman had deliberately lied to me; had merely been amusing herself at my expense; had sent me on this wild goose chase so that she might laugh over my simplicity. But was this true? If so, how was I to account for the strange coincidence that both she and Harris had named the same number, and street? It could not have occurred merely through chance. Something must have happened in the meanwhile to overthrow all her plans, and to cause this rabid housekeeper to even deny her very existence. And I held the key of explanation—the murder of Alva.

Beyond all doubt here was both cause and effect. The girl had intended to either see me herself, or by proxy in the form of this mysterious Miss Conrad. But what had since occurred had compelled a sudden change in plans, a necessity for concealing her escape. There was no way in which she could notify me, but she might very easily have telephoned to her landlady. And, if the place was what I suspected it to be, she might have every confidence that her secret would be guarded.

I glanced up at the front of the house, searching the windows, but without results. The curtains were closely drawn to keep out the sun, and the place appeared forlorn and deserted. At the delicatessen shop on the corner I gained a gleam of light, but merely enough to strengthen my former judgment. The keeper, a flax-haired Swede, was loquacious enough, but had only been in business there a few weeks.

"247 Le Comte, you say. Yes, she takes roomers; some are men, and some are women. They come in here and buy, but I never ask the names; it was all cash, so why should I care? Sometimes I hear them call names—sure; but never Conrad. The woman what keeps the house? Wait and I tell you; it is on the books; all I read as she wrote it for me—Mrs. Augusta Waldron; maybe a widow? You think? Bah, she never like anything I have to sell. I care nothing for trade with her—a cat this Mrs. Augusta Waldron."

I left him with the familiar sound of the name ringing in my ears—the whole thing was traveling in a circle, and the circle was growing continually more compact. Bludily, I was stumbling up against it here and there most unexpectedly. Augusta Waldron, beyond doubt, was Ivan Waldron's wife. No wonder her house was designated the meeting place for those people.

I returned to the hotel. Only as I stood before the door did I realize that the newsboys were calling out, "Extra! All about the murder!" I felt that my face was white, and that by hand shook, yet I hastily bought copies of half a dozen sheets, shoving them into my pockets.

The reports were mostly alike, exceedingly brief and unsatisfactory, except that they conveyed the impression that thus far the police possessed no real clue as to the perpetrator of the crime. No one connected with the meeting the night before was mentioned in any article, nor was any suspicion of such a meeting mentioned. I read the last line with a distinct feeling of relief, dropping the paper on the floor.

They had discovered no clue, nothing whatever to work upon. The interior of the car had yielded no evidence of its former occupant, the only reference being to mud on the floor. Outside all footprints had been obliterated by the falling rain. No one in the neighborhood had heard a sound, or witnessed any movement. The whole affair was shrouded in mystery.

What, under these conditions, was my duty? What could I either do, or say, to clarify this tragedy, and bring the guilty to justice? I sat there for an hour thinking and smoking, endeavoring to answer these queries. I could study out no clear way to any confession, which would not directly involve myself in the coils of the police, or else implicate Marie Gessler, so as to make any defense on her part almost impossible. No doubt she was guilty, yet I could not drive myself to openly charge her with the crime. There must be some extenuating circumstances, some unknown cause, which had led to the act. I could not forget her face, her manner, the clear, womanly look of her eyes—she was no murderess, and it was not in my heart to denounce her as such. Besides, if I took this responsibility it would only serve to shield other crimes of more importance than the violent death of this Chilean revolutionary—the murder perhaps of many innocent victims, and the destruction of much valuable property. For Alva's death would hardly stop the plotting already on foot. The money was still here in New York ready to be used; the propagandists at Washington would never permit it to long lie idle. They would find somewhere another leader, and I alone seemed to be in a position to balk their hellish purpose. Perhaps it was even by their orders that Alva had been put out of the way. He had acted too slowly, and his action might have been aroused as to his real purpose. On every side I was assailed with doubts.

Yet, even if I held silent, I knew not in which direction to turn. I had apparently lost all touch with the girl. She had failed me completely—either by accident, or design. Her appointment with me had served to reveal only one fact which might prove of importance—247 Le Comte street was undoubtedly a link in the chain of the conspiracy; it was the home of Ivan Waldron. Once I told this discovery to Harris the way might be opened to closer investigation. But what had become of Harris? It was already approaching six o'clock, and the man had not telephoned me. Surely he must be aware by this time of the murder of Alva; the uselessness of seeking longer to find him alive. Was he also endeavoring to avoid me? Was his purpose deceit? or had some suspicion arisen in his mind as to my really being Harry Day?

Aroused by this possibility, and unable to remain quiet longer, I slipped a revolver from the depths of my bag into a coat pocket, and departed again.

"They Tell Me You're Hunting Parker."

for Costigan's, determined to learn the truth. I approached the same bartender with whom I had spoken in the morning, and he must have recalled me at once, for, without answering any question, he turned and called out to a heavily set, red-faced fellow at the lower end of the bar.

"Dan, here is that guy who was asking for Parker. He ain't heard nuthin' from him."

The other came forward, allowing his way roughly through the crowd, and looked me searchingly in the face. "I'm Costigan," he said shortly. "They tell me you're hunting Parker. Did you have an appointment with him?"

"Yes; he was to meet me here this morning. Then I left a telephone number, but he hasn't called me."

"He ain't been back; that's the reason. Come along with me; I want a private word with you."

I followed him rather doubtfully, although his words and actions appeared friendly enough in a gruff way. He led the way to a closed door at the end of the bar, which, when opened, disclosed a small business office, containing merely a desk and two chairs. To his rather gruff invitation to sit down, I accepted one of these, chewing at the cigar between my teeth, and endeavoring to appear quite at ease.

Costigan, after securing the door, seated himself at the desk, turning his swivel chair about so as to face me, his freckled hands on his knees.

"George told me about you this morning," he began. "At least I suppose you're the lad; your name Day?" I nodded, greatly relieved, but unwilling to trust my voice. The man did not know me; had no suspicion.

"And we meet yer," and Costigan filled a pipe, and touched a match to the tobacco without removing his steady gaze from my face. "We never had no dealings together, but if yer tied up with George, it's quite likely we will have. He an' I have been pardners for a long while. He's a d—l of a good guy."

"We just ran into each other accidentally," I explained, feeling that he expected me to say something. "Got onto the trail of the same boodle. He told you, I suppose?"

"No, he didn't. Just said he'd ran onto you, and that you were liable to turn a trick together. George don't snoop over; that ain't his style."

"But he spoke about me?"

"Well, yes, in a way. But it wasn't no more than I told yer. He had to go out afore you got round, so he said you was comin', an' for me to be decent to yer whenever yer showed in."

"How long was he to be gone?"

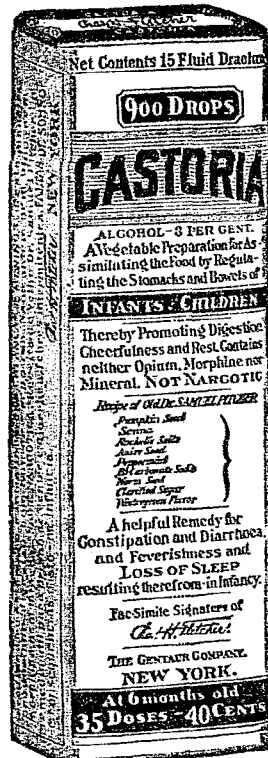

"You must have faith in me, in spite of all."

Making History.

INFANT MORTALITY in past ages has been something frightful, something almost beyond belief, and even today it occupies the time and the mind of leading physicians in all countries. The death rate among infants is being gradually reduced through new methods of hygiene, new preventatives and new remedies for infants. This reduction in the death rate has NOT been accomplished by adapting the precautions taken and remedies used by adults. Rather has it been to keep clear of the old methods, and choose after long research the precautions and remedies specifically applicable to infants.

This being so, is it necessary for us to caution mothers against trying to give her baby relief with a remedy that she would use for herself? Will she remember that Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for infants and children?

Teacher Entirely Mistaken If She Imagined Small Girl Had Never Experienced Suffering.

Emily Margaret, a six-year-old Columbus girl, has straight blond hair. This is a source of much distress to Emily Margaret, as she is not too young to appreciate the advantage of curly hair, and she particularly admires black hair. She was at Sunday school recently, and the teacher was telling of the terrible plight of the children of the war-stricken countries.

By the way of implanting a proper appreciation of their blessings in the minds of the children, the teacher called their attention to the contrast between their own condition and that of the unfortunate youngsters overseas.

"Why," she concluded, "you little ones have no idea of what sorrow means." Emily Margaret was impressed, but she could not let the statement go unchallenged. She addressed the teacher thus: "Miss Blank, I'm awfully sorry for them, but all the same I do know what sorrow means. Every time I see a little girl with dark curly hair I have to shut my eyes to keep from crying."

LINER "ADS" EFFECTIVE.

One of the most effective forms of advertising is in the "liner" or classified column where a n investment of a few cents is certain to give prompt results. Tribune liner ads are always run under the heading, "Wants, For Sale, To Rent," in the same position on the front page where they are easy to find and invariably catch the eye.
Only five cents the line for the first insertion, 2 1/2 cents the line for each subsequent insertion. Next time you want to buy something, or have something for sale or rent, try a Tribune liner.

had a mild pleasant action on my bowels. I take pleasure in recommending them," writes H. D. F. Farmer, Jr.,
