Old Timer Viewed By Many.

Hundreds of Chelsea and vicinity residents last Thursday afternoon gathered at the Chelsea passenger station of the M. C. to view the "DeWitt Clinton" train which was drawn by the famous "999" of the Empire State Express, holder of the world's record of 112.5 miles per hour.

The historic "DeWitt Clinton" was the first train to make regular runs in the United States. It consists of an old-fashioned stationary engine on four wheels with 56-inch drivers, without brakes, whistle, bell or cow catcher and with no reverse. Attached to the engine are three coaches which resemble the old time omnibuses, each with a capacity of only 15 passengers—nine below and six above.

The DeWitt Clinton, named for one of New York's governors who tried to persuade the New York legislature to make an appropriation for railroad construction instead of the Erie canal, was the New York Central's first train and was operated over the 17 miles of track between Albany and Schenectady on the Mohawk and Hudson railroad in 1831—the original unit of the New York Central lines which now have a total trackage of 30,000 miles and carry annually 100,000,000 passengers—equivalent to the total population of the United States. The fare charged on the Mohawk & Hudson railroad in 1831 was $9.75 for the 17 miles run.

At Ypsilanti one of the most interested spectators to view the train was the aged John Matthews, a nephew of Dave Matthews, who built the DeWitt Clinton and was its first engineer, and at Ann Arbor Mr. and Mrs. William Doty brought to the train the first conductor's lantern used on the train and now an heirloom in the Doty family. Mr. Doty's grandfather was an engineer on the Mohawk & Hudson.

At Marshall the DeWitt Clinton train experienced the shock of its 90-year existence Friday when it received a visit from John L. Verner, 95 years old, who as a boy of six years made the first trip with the train in 1831. Mr. Verner was wheeled to the train.

"My father, John T. Verner, was the first conductor on this historical train and I was one of the first passengers when it made its initial trip in 1831. I was only six years old then, but I can still recall the trip. In later years, I gave the conductor a steamboat ticket and he threatened to put me off if I did not pay cash, so I had to dig down."

Notten Family Reunion.

The annual Notten reunion was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Miller, near Cavanaugh Lake, Saturday, August 27. In spite of the threatening weather, a large crowd gathered for a day of visiting and entertainment.

At noon a bountiful picnic dinner was served, three large tables being filled twice. Immediately after dinner, the Notten band of eleven pieces gave a concert which was enjoyed by all.

The program which followed consisted of an address by Rev. Ertel, readings and recitations, songs by the male quartet, and vocal duets. Resolutions were adopted extending the heartfelt sympathy of all present to the family of Mrs. Mary Vette, who passed away during the past year.

There were 205 present at the gathering. Six babies have joined the family circle since last year.

The next reunion will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Walz, near Roots Station, Jackson county. Mr. Walz was elected president and Miss Edna Walz secretary of the reunion for the coming year.

Schlicht-Feldkamp Reunion.

More than 150 members of the Schlicht-Feldkamp family gathered at the Pleasant Lake Grove, Freedom, Thursday afternoon, August 25 for their fourth annual reunion. During the afternoon the younger members enjoyed races and contests, while the older members enjoyed themselves in a social way. At 5:30 an appetizing pot luck dinner was served. At the close of the dinner hour, Rev. John Ernst, of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, gave a splendid talk.

The following officers were re-elected for another year: Edwin Koebbe, Chelsea, president; William Schlicht, Bridgewater, vice president; Irvin Weiss, Chelsea, secretary; Lewis Haas, Ann Arbor, treasurer. It was decided to hold the 1922 reunion at the same place the last Thursday in August.

Members were present from Pittsburg, New York City, Ann Arbor, Jackson, Chelsea, Saline, Bridgewater, Manchester, and Freedom.

The county road commissioners have men at work laying the railroad track on the cement foundation of the trunk line west from the Dancer gravel pit.

SYLVAN BOY FATALLY

HURT TUESDAY AFTERNOON
Leon D. Phelps, 23 years old, died at the W. A. Foote Memorial hospital in Jackson, at 10:15 Tuesday night from injuries received when a narrow gauge railroad engine tipped over on him near Grass Lake shortly after 5 o'clock.

Mr. Phelps, of Sylvan, was employed by the construction company on the road work being done by the company. He was piloting the narrow gauge engine which is used in the road work when it left the rails and toppled over. Phelps was caught under the engine and was badly crushed.

He was extricated as soon as possible by fellow employees and carried to the residence of Dr. McColgan of Grass Lake. The Gildersleeve ambulance of Jackson was called and the injured man taken to the hospital where he passed away a few hours later.

It is believed that a heavy rain storm which passed over Grass Lake just before the accident washed out a portion of narrow gauge track, causing the fatality.

Mr. Phelps is survived by his mother, Mrs. Lewis Lambert, who resides in Sylvan, on the Jackson Washtenaw county line. The young man was in the United States army during the World War and was a member of Herbert J. McKune Post, The American Legion.

Coroner Harry Mills, of Jackson, was called on the case and announced that an inquest will be held at a date to be announced later.

Played Good Base Ball.

The Chelsea Independents played an excellent game of ball last Sunday at Wilkinson field, when they crossed bats with Howlett's Detroit Clowns (which by the way would be better named if they were called "Sobbers") and were defeated by a score of 9 to 6 by the visiting team. The game was witnessed by between four and five hundred people. Up to the eighth inning the score stood about even. In the ninth the visitors won their victory, but to many of the audience it was thought that an unfavorable decision on a foul ball robbed the home team of several scores. The line-up and score follows:

Former Lyndon Boy Promoted.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the National Liberty Insurance Company of America held recently, Charles H. Coates, western department manager, was elected a vice-president of the company and will leave Chicago to take up his new duties at the home office of the company in New York.

To succeed Mr. Coates in Chicago the National Liberty announces the appointment of First Assistant Manager Herbert A. Clark to be manager of the western department.

Mr. Clark was born in Lyndon, and is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Clark. He began his insurance career in the western department of the National Liberty seventeen years ago and was appointed general manager in 1913 and assistant manager in 1917. Mr. Clark is a former president of the Fire Insurance Club of Chicago and has always been active in insurance educational work.

Below Average.

All important crops except corn, are below the 10-year average in Michigan, according to Verne H. Church of the federal bureau of crop statistics. Heat and drought are blamed by the report for this unprecedented condition. The extreme heat that prevailed during part of June and throughout July seriously injured most of the grains and many of the minor crops. The only consolation offered by the report is the fact that comparison shows that Michigan has not suffered more severely than other states.

Conlson-Kent Reunion.

The second annual reunion of the Conlson-Kent family was held at Island Park, Ann Arbor, Sunday, August 14. Fifty members of the two families were present. After a bountiful dinner a short history of the family was read and a fine program of music and recitations was given by the children, after which the two oldest members, George and Susannah Conlson, were presented with a basket full of gifts by their children and grandchildren.

At the close of the day, officers for the ensuing year were elected, and the date, August 9, 1922, set for the next reunion.

Following is the history of the Conlson-Kent families, by Mrs. Hazel Carpenter, of Ann Arbor:

History, the dictionary tells us, is a knowledge of facts, so we will endeavor to set forth here a few known facts concerning the Conlson-Kent families.

It would be difficult, perhaps impossible, to trace family back to its source, so we will liken it to an old oak tree and begin where the two main limbs branch out from the trunk. We will call one limb the Conlsons, the other, the Kents. It will be interesting to learn how this old tree grew and spread out new branches in all directions.

We will begin by tracing the branches of the Conlson limb, and to do that will have to go back nearly a century to a little town in Lincolnshire, England. There, Thomas and Drusilla Conlson lived and reared a family of eleven children, namely: Thomas, Charles, George, Matthew, Abram, John, William, Drusilla, James, Amos and Eliza.

In the year 1847 this family migrated to America. The children gradually scattered to all parts of the country. The parents, with one son, George, settled in Brooklyn, Michigan. At that time George was a young man eighteen years old, and being filled with the spirit of adventure and a desire to see more of this wonderful country, soon left home and traveled north to Canada. After wandering for six years, he finally settled in Coldwater, Canada, where he met and married Isabella Durnford. They lived together twenty-one long happy years and were blessed with five children: Isabella, Harriet, Horatio, Rose and Percy. At the birth of Percy, the mother passed beyond, leaving the husband and his little flock to mourn their loss. Three of their five children are living, Horatio, Rose and Percy. Isabella died, unmarried, at the age of fifty. Harriet married and had three children. She and two of the children are dead, leaving one daughter to bear her name.

After roaming for three years seeking comfort in his sorrow, George Conlson met Susannah Kent, a winsome young widow with four little children. And that brings us to the Kent branch of the family tree. Hiram and Betty Hewes were born and raised in Sharon, Michigan. They were married and brought up a family of six children in the same locality. Four of these children are living, Susannah, Martha, Denton and Andrew. One son, Edalbert, was killed in the civil war. Vinton, the third son died twenty years ago. Martha married Fred Bates and has two sons, Fred and Elmer. Denton married Alice Wales. They had four children, Nellie, Amy, Minnie and Clarence. Andrew is now married, now living in Pasadena. Susannah married John Kent and to this union was born four children, Martha, Bessie, Nina and John. The father died July 14, 1873. One year later Susannah Hewes-Kent met and married George Conlson, and to them have been born three children, Wilhelmina, Harriet and Maud.

And so, we find the two families united—the Conlsons and the Kents. The children form one large family and have learned to call one another brother and sister.

As there are so many of us we will mention each in the order of birth. First comes George and Drusilla Conlson's children, Harriet and Isabella, have both been dead several years. Isabella died unmarried. Harriet married, has one daughter living. Horatio is living in Milbrook, Michigan. He has two sons, Howard and Horace.

Rose Conlson married Mr. Jones and is at present living in Jackson, Michigan. They have a fine family of boys, Claud, Arthur Herman, and the twins, Bert and Eliza.

Percy, George Conlson's youngest son, married May Hulbert. They have two children, Isabella and Durnford. Isabella is grown up and married now.

Thus, we see the tree sending out new shoots year by year and gazing upon it we remark, "What a tree it is growing to be." It is the same with this big family. We spread and grow each year and we are proud to be the Conlson-Kent branches.

And now we will trace the Kent branch. The oldest child, Martha,

Saline—The American Legion is making arrangements for a Sports Day to be held on September 5.

Dexter—August Lesser has moved from Dexter township into the residence owned by Mrs. Sarah Alley on Fifth street.—Leader.

Stockbridge—A library of 50 volumes has been secured from the State Library at Lansing for the use of the Junior department of the Methodist Sunday school.—Brief-Sun.

Grass Lake—At the 4th quarterly meeting of the Grass Lake M. E. church on Monday of last week, Rev. Dudgeon, the present pastor, was unanimously invited to return for another year.

Grass Lake—Thieves broke into Maurer's garage, Saturday night, and stole three tires, a battery, some inner tubes, and also broke into the Haelesehwerdt garage and stole two dollars in cash. No trace of them has been found.—News.

Saline—Fruit in this section has been almost a minus quantity this season and those who happen to have a little have profited by high prices. Early apples find quick sale at $2 per bushel and melons are bringing almost war prices.—Observer.

Adrian—The fifty-fourth reunion of the Eighteenth Michigan Infantry was held here Friday at the Methodist Episcopal church. Thirty-five members were in attendance. The regiment was recruited in 1862 from Lenawee, Hillsdale and Monroe counties.

Ann Arbor—Rev. J. M. Wells, for the past five and one half years pastor of the First Baptist church, has resigned to take the presidency of Grand Island college, Grand Island, Nebraska, a Baptist school. Mr. Wells will leave Ann Arbor in time for the opening of college next month.

Ypsilanti—The trunk mystery is solved. Alderman George Moorman told Chief John P. Connors that he threw the trunk into the river several weeks ago. Grover McDougall had reported to Chief Connors Friday that he saw two men throw a trunk into the river Thursday night at 9 o'clock. What the men threw into the river, it has been learned, was not the trunk, but an old mattress.—Record.

Ypsilanti—Cyrus Gray, 20 years old, of 1925 Manchester street, Gary, Indiana, was killed here Saturday at the East Cross street crossing by a Michigan Central train. No one saw the accident, Gay being found about 3 p. m., lying beside the tracks, still alive. He was taken to the University hospital, Ann Arbor, where he died soon after. Gay was unknown here but had been seen in Ypsilanti Friday morning.

Jackson—Fifteen cattle which had reacted to the tuberculin test were killed Friday at the Binning slaughter house, this day being observed as "killing day". Ten of this number were from one herd. Upon examination, three were found to be unfit for food purposes, and were condemned. Dr. Hansen of the state department of animal industry and Dr. H. F. Roberts, city food and milk inspector, were in charge.—News.

Manchester—Some time Friday night dogs visited Henry Heimerdinger's flock of sheep, doing some damage. They were also recently in Fred Spafard's and Will Buss' flocks. One of the dogs was shot Monday. Enforcement of the dog license law anticipated ultimately keeping by farmers of a better breed of dogs and eliminating of mongrels, but there seem yet to be some who answer the "call of the wild."—Enterprise.

Ypsilanti—Austin Lucas has signed a complaint against William Maxwell charging him with perjury in swearing falsely to an affidavit for a marriage license. Maxwell swore that Agatha Lucas, daughter of the complainant, was 18 years of age. The father in his complaint stated the girl was only 14 years of age. The marriage license was issued at Ann Arbor on August 22 last. The couple were married here by Rev. Mr. McIntire.

Ann Arbor—The largest and most successful summer session in the history of the University of Michigan will come to a close here Friday when approximately 2,500 students will complete their examinations and start for their homes. September 15, when the preliminary football training begins, the first of the returning students will wander back eager to watch the early work of the eleven. Within a week hundreds of students will be in town and by September 27, when the university's fall session opens, approximately 11,000 are expected to be here.

Addison—Many new cases of hog cholera are being reported and County Agent Ralph J. Carr declares the situation is worse than at any time in the last four years, and that heavy losses will be experienced by pig breeders throughout the county unless extra precautions are taken. Further, he adds, if a farmer hears his neighbor has a sick hog he should not go to see it. He should keep his dog home. He should keep birds, especially pigeons out of the hog lot as they are carriers of cholera germs. And he should use plenty of lime and other disinfectants and employ a general cleaning up agency throughout the farm plant.

Conlson-Kent Reunion.

is married to William Hatfield and has three grown sons, Fred, Hector and Earl. They also adopted the baby daughter of Martha's sister Harriet. This baby is now a young lady whom we all call "Sue." And right here we will stop to pay a just tribute to Martha and William Hatfield. Is there one among us, who at one time or another, has not "Gone home to Matties?" The young or the old, in trouble or sorrow or joy, we have always found the welcome there, whole hearted and sincere. Mattie's and Will's will be home to us always.

Of their three sons, Fred is married, living in Seattle, Washington. Last year he and his family were with us for a few short weeks, and the reunion of the Conlsons and Kents was their farewell meeting with us. This year we miss their faces and the busy patter of Baby Bernice. We may relate history but we cannot prophecy when history may repeat itself. We hope it will be soon.

Hector, the second son of Martha and William, is married to Lillian Baumgardner. They have two fine boys. Sorrow has laid her hand on their hearts. Though we all know "Gods will be done." A little boy left their home for a better home above.

Earl is the youngest son of this family. He married Mary Sawyer of Chelsea. They have no children.

Bessie Kent Sharpe was the second daughter of John and Susannah Kent. She was married to James Sharpe in 1889. There followed six brief years of happiness not unmingled with grief, at the end of which Bessie was released from her earthly cares to find a peaceful refuge in Heaven. Three little girls, Eva, Hazel and Nina were left motherless.

The baby, Nina, was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Maltby, an old fashioned couple who hold their children as their dearest possessions. Little Nina lived as close to their hearts as their own children. She is now happily married to Harry Dunn and they have four clever children. Eva is married and has five little Hammonds. Their first born, a beautiful little boy, Harrison, Jr., fitted through their lives and into the arms of God before he had tasted any of this world's joys or sorrows. Hazel is married to Harry Carpenter and is busy raising two little Carpenters.

Mother Conlson's third child was a daughter, Nina, who married Guy Tift. They are living in Detroit, have no children, but in spite of this handicap are happy and prosperous.

John Kent was the last child born of the Kent-Hewes union. He came into this world the day his father died. He married Bertha Mattais. They had one little golden haired girl who brightened their lives for five happy years. "Another little lamb gathered to the fold. Another sweet, sad story told." The home was broken, John Kent gathered around him the memories of those brief happy years and tried to create a semblance of home again. 'Twas a miserable failure. However he is now married and living contentedly with May Howdyshell Kent. She has one little girl, Emma, and six months ago the stark visited their home and left a beautiful baby girl. So John Kent has found the silver lining to the cloud.

Of George and Susannah Conlson's children we will now discourse. Wilhelm, their first born, is married to Adolph Trepanier. They have no children of their own but a regular little fellow, Robert Trepanier, by adoption.

Harriet Conlson Poland is the second daughter. She has for children, George, Susannah, whom we previously stated belonged to the family of Hatfield, Virgil, Iona and little Hector. The mother of this family has found many thorns among the roses in her pathway but has carried her burden patiently and cheerfully.

George and Susannah Conlson had one more daughter, Maud. She was married to Michael Sheid. They made their home in Flint, Michigan. There were three children. Two of them died, bringing sorrow into a once happy home. Grief and worry wrought a terrible change and after a lingering illness this poor lonely soul was glad to be called to her heavenly home. The husband and one son, Rayland, sorely miss the love and companionship of one who had been a faithful wife and mother. So, like the tree, this family will go on growing and spreading.

We might say this history is now finished, but is it finished? No, we will go on making history to the end of time. For our children and their children and the children of them will be writing histories of this family long after they have forgotten where our tombstones stood.

Brighton—While tearing out an old stairway in the old Mark Burch place E. E. Crawford uncovered a real curiosity in the shape of an old pair of shoes. These shoes, according to Milton Norton, a cobbler who remembers "Uncle Billie Burch," were made by that cobbler probably 80 years ago. They are made of good calf skin and are lined throughout with leather. The soles are "nailed" on, with old-fashioned wooden pegs, and the laces are strung through open holes—eyelets not having come into use at that time.—Argus.

Money Shortage Delays Building.

Owing to the shortage of funds to carry on the state's business, O. B. Fuller, auditor general, is informing all state institutions that no money will be available for building purposes this year. This means that none of the $4,385,000 authorized by the legislature to be spent this year for new buildings at institutions can be used until after taxes are received by the state in January, 1922.

The University of Michigan has been allowed $100,000 to take options on certain lands needed for buildings covered by the appropriations, and has had small amounts for work on the new university hospital, but this is the only institution that has been permitted to draw on building appropriations. Several new buildings that were to have been built this year at the Normal schools and hospitals have not started and will not be until next spring.

The money for a number of the buildings was not to be made available until after the new corporation tax is collected. It is now evident that the tax money will all be required, if it is paid at all, to carry on the ordinary business of the state, and that building must wait.

Don't worry and complain about a bad back. Get rid of it! For weak kidneys, lame and aching backs, your neighbors recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Ask your neighbor. Read this statement:

Mrs. W. D. Arnold, E. Middle St., Chelsea, says: "I am pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills from the great benefit I received from their use. I suffered greatly from dull, nagging backaches and a distressing pain through my kidneys. My kidneys gave me a great deal of trouble, too. I used Doan's Kidney Pills from Fenn's Drug Store and they helped me wonderfully. They banished the backaches and pains and corrected the action of my kidneys. I am ever so much better in every way since I used Doan's."

The above statement was given July 7, 1909 and on April 27, 1920, Mrs. Arnold added: "I have just the same good opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills as when I recommended them in 1909. They cured me and it has lasted. I am always telling my friends about the merits of this remedy."

When you come right down to reason, what is there to "discount" tires—

THE next time a friend comes to you all excited about some wonderful tire bargain—ask him how much value he ought to get for each dollar of tire money.

It's astonishing that any car owner today should not know all the tire service he is entitled to.

Nor how to check up between the economy of par quality on one hand—and big discounts, surplus stocks, discontinued lines and retreads on the other.

For two years U. S. Tire makers have been telling the American people all about tires.

They have laid open the tire business from every angle.

They have always led the fight for better tires.

They have consistently maintained quality first standards with certain economy for the tire buyer.

They have established 92 Factory Branches all over the country. Perfecting U. S. distribution so that you get a fresh, live tire every time you buy a U. S. Tire.

So when a man once decides on U. S. Tires he knows what he is getting in quality—service—economy.

Buy Where Reputation Counts

When you buy merchandise there is great satisfaction in knowing that you have received good value for your money. But the satisfaction is greater when you know in advance that the value is going to be good.

That's what happens when you trade at local stores, where the dealers have good reputations to maintain and where they do maintain them by selling only good goods at fair prices.

When you buy from strangers you are very apt to receive mediocre value at price of better. For your own protection buy where reputation counts—at home.

"The hull structure is, in general principles, of standard type such as used in Zeppelin airships and in earlier British types, but a very considerable saving of structural weight has been effected by a large number of improvements in details."

This excerpt from the official British description of the ZR-2 seems to explain the disaster which befell the giant dirigible while on its trial trip last Wednesday. The saving of structural weight was effected at the expense of the entire airship and the lives of 46 of the men who manned her. According to survivors, an abrupt change of direction when the vessel was above Hull strained the framework beyond its strength. It broke in two in the middle and fell into the Humber river with terrific explosions. Included in the dead were Commander Louis H. Maxfield and 15 more of the American crew which was to bring the airship to the United States, and British Air Commodore I. M. Maitland and 29 of the English crew. Only one American, a fitter, was among the survivors.

ZR-2 was the largest airship ever constructed and was built by the British government for the United States navy. The price was to be $2,000,000.

Of course, as she had not yet been turned over to the Americans the financial loss does not fall on the American government. The catastrophe was not a great surprise to those in England who had watched the building and tests of the airship. On several preliminary trials defects and weaknesses were uncovered, and the final flight which ended so disastrously had been postponed repeatedly though the weather seemed entirely favorable. It is said that enlisted men of the British air service stationed at Howden had offered to bet ten to one that the dirigible never would get across the Atlantic; that they declared it was structurally weak, and impossible large with unreliable engines and a framework incapable of standing the strain of its own 33 tons of dead weight while in the air.

News of the disaster reached Washington while a congressional committee was listening to arguments in favor of an appropriation for the completion of ZR-1, an American-built companion ship of the ZR-2, on which more than a million dollars already has been expended. Officers of the naval bureau of aeronautics are confident that the navy will be permitted to continue its rigid airship building program notwithstanding the loss of ZR-2.

Plans for the ZR-1 call for an airship of slightly smaller size than the ZR-2, a length of 670 feet, diameter about 80 feet, and gas capacity of approximately 2,200,000 cubic feet. The total cost is estimated at $2,500,000. Her designers have adhered more closely to the British to the structural plans of the Germans, who were the original builders of rigid airships. The naval gas extracting plant at Fort Worth already has stored enough hydrogen gas to fill the envelope of ZR-1. Helium is far less dangerous than hydrogen gas, being noninflammable.

Late Wednesday night congress adjourned for a 30-day recess, or until September 21. The senate finance committee remains on the job to continue its work on the permanent tariff and the tax revision measures which the house has passed. Among the bills passed at the closing session were the agricultural credits measure, the shipping board deficiency bill of $18,500,000, with its amendment carrying $200,000 for expenses of the disarmament conference, and the measure extending the dye embargo until January 1.

Chief interest in the senate centered about the anti-beer bill, which was attacked at length by Senators Reed and Stanley. The dry leaders found by test votes that the measure could not be carried, so they allowed it to be thrown into the discard. They failed even in their effort to have it made the unfinished business when the senate reconvenes. The more fanatical of the prohibition leaders are to be blamed for the failure of this bill, for they rejected all compromise and by their stubbornness led the wets to form a temporary coalition with the agricultural bloc. The members of the latter helped kill the anti-beer measure in return for the support of the wets for the farm export credits bill which was in danger of being caught in the jam and held up indefinitely.

This credits bill empowers the War Finance corporation to issue $1,500,000,000 of its own bonds and to lend $1,000,000,000 for financing agricultural exports. The house refused to agree to senate provisions which would allow the corporation to lend directly to European purchasers of the commodities, but the compromise will allow the Finance corporation to lend to anybody, provided satisfactory collateral is furnished to it for the sums advanced.

Japan has formally accepted the invitation to the Washington conference and its embassy is obtaining accommodations for a delegation of about eighty persons. A large residence, an office building and a section of one of the hotels have been rented. Since the meeting of the Japanese diet probably will keep Premier Hara at home, the Japanese delegation is likely to be headed by either Foreign Secretary Uchida or Viscount Chinda. In its note of acceptance the Japanese government expressed the hope that the agenda of the conference on Far Eastern affairs would be arranged prior to the meeting in accordance with its suggestion that matters concerning only a few nations, or which are accomplished facts, be not brought into the discussion. So far nobody has shown any intention of supporting this proposition of the Japanese, which, of course, is put forward solely in behalf of their own selfish interests. They do not wish to be asked about Shantung, or Yap, or Manchuria.

Great Britain also accepted the invitation to the conference last week in a graceful note that contained no restrictions or qualifications. The representatives of the republic of South China are still asking recognition in Washington and a big to the meeting. They assert that the people of South China have set up a government of their own that owes no allegiance to the Peking government, and that they constitute a full half of the population of China.

The republic of Panama is officially in mourning. President Porras has ordered the flag displayed at half-mast on all public buildings for one month because Costa Rica gets the disputed territory of Coto. Panama will not seek by force to prevent its neighbor from occupying the district, because the United States last week told her that the terms of the White award must be accepted and that warfare between Panama and Costa Rica would not be permitted. Porras then had no other course than to yield, though his political foes probably will take advantage of his plight and attempt to oust him from office. It is said they are trying to organize a revolution, and this may give some occupation to the battalion of American marines that was sent down to the Isthmus ostensibly to protect American property and lives if the Panamanians did not give in.

When bids for the "wooden fleet" were opened by the United States shipping board there was but one bidder for the entire fleet—the Ship Construction and Trading company of New York. This concern offered to take the 205 vessels "as is" at $2,100 each or a total of $430,000. Although this was less than the estimated average cost of one of the ships, the board agreed to accept the offer. Most of the vessels have been lying idle in the James river and it has been costing the board almost $50,000 a month to care for them. Twenty ships were reserved to be sold at highest prices and fifty others may be kept for use as pontoons for the building of the proposed bridge across the Hudson river.

The peace treaty with Germany has been completed and last week was shown to the members of the senate committee on foreign relations, and also to other senators. All who saw it expressed their approval of the pact, and it was to be signed in Berlin. It must now be ratified by the senate and the reichstag. The treaty provides for the resumption of diplomatic and commercial relations between the two countries, awards the United States the fruits of victory specified in the Versailles treaty, and provides for the payment by Germany of American war damage claims. A similar treaty has been negotiated with Austria and signed at Vienna.

Unless the Dublin correspondents are wrong, another impasse in the Irish peace negotiations has been reached. De Valera, Dall Eitremann and the Irish republican council, after long debate, have drawn up their reply to Lloyd George's offer and dispatched it to London. Presumably his contents will be made public before this reaches the reader. It is asserted now that the British offer has been rejected and no counter-proposition made by the Irish, but that the way is left open for further negotiation. The Sinn Fein leaders believe the premier is not sincere when he says Great Britain has made its ultimate offer; they think the truce will not be broken by their rejection and that Mr. Lloyd George will make further concessions.

The Roman Catholic church intervened in the Irish controversy last week with a message to De Valera "from the highest authority," delivered by the lord bishop of Down. The source of the message and its purport were not made public.

Federal officials have punctured a $50,000,000 financial bubble, they assert, in the arrest of Charles W. French, partner of John W. Worthington, already in custody, and a number of his associates in various parts of the country. These men, it is charged, were selling stock in 20 companies, all organized by French, and having a total capitalization of more than $21,000,000. The federal agents have seized about $27,000,000 in suspicious "paper" and are getting confessions from several of the gang. Developments in the case are coming daily.

Of concrete interest in the South and at least academic interest in the rest of the country is the decision of Federal Judge Boyd in Greensboro, N. C., holding unconstitutional the federal law imposing a tax of 10 per cent on the profits derived from products on which child labor is employed. Regulation of labor, Judge Boyd ruled, is one of the powers retained by the states and not delegated to the federal government. State child labor laws are adequate to care for the situation and provide a penalty, not a tax, as is proposed by the act of congress, the decision said. The attempt of the federal government to regulate labor within the state is a usurpation of authority and a violation of the sovereign rights of the state, the judge decided.

The Pennsylvania Railroad company has again challenged the right of the federal railway labor board to dictate the road's policy in dealing with its employees, and has renewed the fight for the open shop. The Pennsylvania, in an application filed by Samuel Rea, president, denied the legality of the board's refusal to recognize a recent election of representatives of the railroad's employees. The ballots which selected them made no provision for unions as such, and the board ordered a new election, prescribing the form of the ballots. Agreements entered into subsequent to the first election were declared void.

RIDERS PROTEST NEW D. U. R. RATE

GLASPIE LAW ABROGATES THE SPECIAL FARES FOR GREEN-FIELD TOWNSHIP.

RIDERS MUST NOW PAY MORE

New Law Lowers Fares Except for Points Within Five Miles From Detroit.

Detroit.—Changes of rates on inter-urban lines put into effect by the D. U. R. under the terms of the order issued by Judge Carr, of the Ingham county circuit court, were the subject of protests Aug. 29 from patrons living within five miles of the city limits. The provisions of the Glaspie act, passed by the 1921 session of the legislature, under which the D. U. R. now is operating, are responsible for the objections.

Before the rate of 1 1/2 cents per mile was ordered into effect by the court, the residents of Greenfield township, through which the Orchard Lake division of the D. U. R. is operated, paid a 5-cent fare with the privilege of six tickets for 25 cents for a ride from the Redford town line to West Grand boulevard. This was under the terms of an old franchise granted the company by Greenfield township.

The Smith railway rate law provided that franchises and rates of fare existing within cities or within districts extending not more than five miles from the city limits were not to be changed under the terms of that act, so the old franchise fare was continued.

The Glaspie law, however, makes no such provision, therefore while its effect is to lower rates of fare on the greater part of the D. U. R. system, it abrogates the special rates enjoyed by certain communities adjacent to cities.

Under its provisions riders on the Orchard Lake division of the D. U. R. now pay the city fare to Turner road and the straight 1 1/2 cent per mile rate from there on, except that the law permits the company to charge a minimum fare of 5 cents for short rides up to five miles.

Thus the patrons of this line are obliged to pay 10 cents straight fare to any point beyond Turner road as far as the town line road.

While the residents of Greenfield township are paying more for their ride, patrons of this division who go beyond the town road are benefiting by the changed rate.

The new rate to the Twelve Mile road is 6 cents, while the old rate was 10 cents. The old fare to Redford was 13 cents and has been reduced to 10. Farmington Junction was 34 cents and has been reduced to 13, while the former fare to Farmington was 27, it is now 20. The fare to Northville has been cut from 41 to 31 cents. Orchard Lake station, which was 42, is now 32, and Pontiac, which was 65, is now 41 cents.

SUITS FILED AGAINST RESORTS

State Takes First Step to Close "Wet"
Roadhouses Near Detroit.

Lansing.—If suits in equity filed Aug. 24 against three roadhouses in Wayne county and one in Macomb county are successful, this weapon will be used in a campaign to close a score of roadhouses in the neighborhood of Detroit, where it is alleged liquor is being sold, according to the attorney general's department.

Hearings on the four suits have been set in the Wayne county courts for September 5. If a finding favorable to the state is found, the places may be closed as "public nuisances" and kept untenanted for a year. The suits were started at the request of Roy C. Vandercook, state commissioner of public safety.

TAX BILL GETS RIGHT OF WAY

Tariff Will Be Sidetracked When Senate Reconvenes Sept. 21.

Washington.—Definite assurance that the tax bill will be reported to the senate on the day it reconvenes, September 21, was given by Senator Penrose, chairman of the finance committee following a conference of Republican members of the committee at which a program was agreed upon. The committee will begin consideration of the bill in executive session September 1, a rearrangement of tariff hearings making it possible to sidetrack the tariff at that time.

Judge Reeve set the case for Tuesday, November 1, and ordered that the question of separate trial be argued in court by the attorneys before that date.

U. S. AIRSHIP ZR-2 WRECKED BY BLAST; FORTY-THREE DEAD

Dirigible Plunges into River at Hull, England.

COMMANDER MAXFIELD DIES

Of Forty-Nine Officers and Enlisted Men in Air Craft's Crew All but Six Perished When Machine
Burst into Flames—Four Leap in Parachutes.

London, Aug. 28.—America's $2,000,000 airship, the ZR-2, Titanic of the air, is a wreck in the River Humber near Hull. Eighteen of the twenty-one Americans who were to pilot her across the Atlantic to the United States are believed to have perished.

Of the forty-nine officers and enlisted men in the huge dirigible's crew, twenty-eight of whom were British, all but six lost their lives when the ship exploded over the city of Hull at six o'clock in the evening.

Twelve bodies have been recovered, among them that of Commander Louis H. Maxfield of Washington, D. C., who was in command of the ZR-2.

Air Commander Maitland of the British air forces, who piloted the dirigible and was Britain's foremost pilot, also was killed.

Cause of Disaster Unknown. None of the six survivors has been able to advance a theory of the cause of the disaster. The ZR-2 had been in the air 35 hours on her trial flight. She got out from Howden early in the day and was prevented by a storm from landing that night.

The next day she had been cruising about in further tests, her commander planning to moor the giant craft at Fulham, in Norfolk. The dirigible was floating easily over Hull in plain sight of thousands of people on the streets, when suddenly the crowds saw a flash and heard a tremendous explosion.

The concussion shook buildings and broke windows in Hull. The airship burst into flames and appeared to break in two. While the panic-stricken populace rushed to and fro to escape the debris, the 700-foot bag, laden with heavy engines, great gasoline tanks and cabin equipment, plunged, burning into the river.

As it touched the water, another explosion occurred. Many of the victims were burned to death after the hulloos fell. Firefighters saw at least four men leap in parachutes. The six rescued were all delirious.

Eye-Witness Account. A description of the ZR-2 disaster was given by James Phipson of Birmingham, an eye-witness.

"I was just opposite Victoria pier when it happened," said Phipson. "I saw the beautiful silver ship sweep majestically toward the city of Hull. It was about 1,000 feet high and was sailing along on an even keel."

"I could see the propellers turning slowly as the ship disappeared into a cloud bank. After two or three moments she emerged again and I was almost struck dumb to see the shining coat glistening in the sun suddenly break in two pieces. A second or two later, when the sound of the terrific explosion was heard, the flames were shooting upward and the black smoke was already settling below the ship."

Plunges into River. "The airship seemed to stand still for a second or two as the two pieces gradually broke apart, descending slowly, the nose portion at first seemingly under control."

"Then I saw portions of the gondolas falling away. The nose portion fell on a mud bank in the Humber, which was at low tide. After burying its nose in the sand, that portion of the ship continued to burn fiercely. "There was no sign of anyone on that part of the ship."

"The tail end fell in the middle of the river half a mile away and was also blazing."

Three Drop in Parachutes. "When the nose landed there were two further explosions. The gasoline tanks burst with the impact."

"I saw three parachutes leave the front part of the ship as it broke. It looked to me as if three men were hanging to one of the parachutes, but I could not see where they landed."

"As far as I know only two men survived. They were Mechanic Bateson and Lieut. A. H. Wynn, who commanded the ship. I saw Lieutenant Esterly's body taken away. It was all burned and charred. Wynn was terribly injured, but Bateson was able to walk. Both Wynn and Bateson were rescued from the wreckage in the Humber."

Was Ready for U. S. Trip. The ZR-2 was to have left Pulham for the United States within ten or twelve days.

The dirigible cost $2,000,000. In addition the United States government expended $4,000,000 in the construction of a huge hangar near Lakehurst, N. J., and in sending a crew to England to bring the dirigible home.

More than a month ago a girder of the ZR-2 buckled on a trial trip, and the ship was laid up for repairs. Frequent delays since then have interfered with intended flights.

Probably before the end of the present week the new rates of fare will become effective on the D. J. & C. Railway. These new and temporary fares are a result of the order issued by the Ingham circuit court last week to bring about enforcement of the Gaspipe bill.

While generally speaking the new fares show a material reduction there are a few cases for short haul riding, where there will be increases due to the special regulation covering fares within cities and for five miles outside being abolished.

The new rates will be: Chelsea to Detroit, 72 cents; to Jackson, 36 cents; to Grass Lake, 18 cents; to Ann Arbor, 22 cents; to Ypsilanti, 35 cents. Between Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti the rate will be 13 cents and between Ypsilanti and Saline it will be 16 cents.

MERCHANT TELLS OF A REMARKABLE CASE

Writing from Murey's, Cal., A. J. Gillen, proprietor of a large department store at that place, says: "I have a customer here who was to be for three years and did not go to a meal at any time. She had five physicians and they gave her out. One bottle of Tangle got her up, on the second bottle she commenced keeping house and on the third she did all the cooking and housework for a family of eight."

This sounds really incredible, but it comes unobscured from a highly creditable source and is copied verbatim from the letter.

Tangle is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Advertisement.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect ItApplicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large. However, if you wish first to test the great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS

is greatly relieved by constitutional treatment. HALL'S CATARRHAL MEDICINE is a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced, your hearing may be destroyed forever. HALL'S CATARRHAL MEDICINE acts through the blood on the mucous surface of the system, thus reducing the inflammation and assisting Nature in restoring normal conditions.

"Stop it, Lakington." His voice was stern as he caught the other's upraised arm. "That's enough for the time."

For a moment it seemed as if Lakington would have struck Peterson himself; then he controlled himself, and, with an ugly laugh, flung the whip into a corner.

"I forgot," he said slowly. "It's the leading dog we want—not the puppies that run after him yapping." He spun round on his heel. "Have you finished?"

The rope-artist bestowed a final touch to the last knot, and surveyed his handiwork with justifiable pride. "Cold mutton," he remarked tersely, "would be lively compared to him when he wakes up."

"Good! Then we'll bring him to." Lakington took some crystals from a jar on one of the shelves, and placed them in a tumbler. Then he added a few drops of liquid and held the glass directly under the unconscious man's nose. Almost at once the liquid began to effervesce, and in less than a minute Drummond opened his eyes and stared dazedly round the room. He blinked foolishly as he saw Longworth and Sinclair; then he looked down and found he was similarly bound himself. Finally he glanced up at the man standing over him, and full realization returned.

"Feeling better, my friend?" With a mocking smile, Lakington laid the tumbler on a table close by.

"Much, thank you, Henry," murmured Hugh. "Ah! and there's Carl!"

He grinned cheerfully, and Lakington struck him on the mouth.

"You can stop that style of conversation, Captain Drummond," he remarked. "I dislike it."

Hugh stared at the striker in silence.

"Accept my congratulations," he said at length, in a low voice which, despite himself, shook a little. "You are the first man who has ever done this, and I shall treasure the memory of it all my life."

"I'd hate it to be a lonely memory," remarked Lakington. "So here's another, to keep it company." Again he struck him, then with a laugh he turned on his heel. "My compliments to Miss Benton."

He said to a man standing near the door, "and ask her to be good enough to come down for a few minutes."

The veins stood out on Drummond's forehead at the mention of the girl, but otherwise he gave no sign; and, in silence, they waited for her arrival.

She came almost at once, a villainous-looking blackguard with her, and as she saw Hugh she gave a pitiful little moan and held out her hand to him.

"Why did you come, boy?" she cried. "Didn't you know it was only a forgery—that note?"

"Ah! was it?" said Hugh softly. "Was it, indeed?"

"An interesting point," murmured Lakington. "Surely if a charming girl is unable—or unwilling—to write herself for her fiancé, her father is a very able person to supply the deficiency. Especially if he has been kindly endowed by Nature with a special aptitude for—er—imitating writing."

"But time presses. And I don't want to go without telling you a little about the program, Captain Drummond. Unfortunately both Mr. Peterson and I have to leave you for tonight; but we shall be returning tomorrow morning—or, at any rate, I shall. You will be left in charge of Lakington; you remember the filthy scoundrel—with whom you had words last night. As you may expect, he entertains feelings of great friendship and affection for you, so you should not back for any bodily comforts, such as may be possible in your present somewhat cramped position.

Then tomorrow, when I return, I propose to try a few experiments on you, and, though I fear you will find them painful, it's a great thing to suffer in the cause of science. . . . You will always have the satisfaction of knowing that dear little Phyllis will be well cared for." With a sudden, quick movement, he seized the girl and kissed her before she realized his intention. The rope round Drummond creaked as he struggled impotently, and Lakington's sneering face seemed to swim in a red glow.

"That is quite in keeping, is it not," he snarled, "to kiss the lady, and to strike the man like this—and this—and this?" A rain of blows came down on Drummond's face, till, with a gasping sigh, the girl slipped fainting to the floor.

"That'll do, Lakington," said Peterson, intervening once again. "Have the girl carried upstairs, and send for Heinrich. It's time we were off."

With an effort Lakington let his hand fall to his side, and stood back from his victim.

"Perhaps for the present, it will," he said slowly. "But tomorrow—tomorrow, Captain Drummond, you shall scream to heaven for mercy, until I take out your tongue and you can scream no more." He turned as the German came into the room. "I leave them to you, Heinrich," he remarked shortly. "Use the dog-whip if they shout, and gag them."

The German's eyes were fixed on Hugh gloatingly.

"They will not shout twice," he said in his guttural voice. "The dirty Boche to it himself will see."

TWO

"We appear," remarked Hugh quietly, a few minutes later, "to be in for a cheery night."

For a moment the German had left the room, and three motionless, bound figures, sitting grotesquely in their chairs, were alone.

"How did they get you, Toby?" "Half a dozen of 'em suddenly appeared," answered Sinclair shortly. "knocked me on the head, and the next thing I knew I was here in this d—d chair."

"Is that when you got your face?" asked Hugh.

"No," said Toby, and his voice was grim. "We share in the matter of faces, old man."

"Lakington again, was it?" said Hugh softly. "Dear Heaven! if I could get one hand on that . . . He broke off and laughed. "What about you, Algy?"

"I went blundering in over the way, old bean," returned that worthy, "and some dam' fellow knocked my eye-glass off. So, as I couldn't see to kill him, I had to join the picnic here."

Hugh laughed, and then suddenly grew serious.

"By the way, you didn't see a man chewing gum on the horizon, did you, when I made my entrance? Dogrobert snuff, and face like a motor-insect."

"Thank God, I was spared that!" remarked Algy.

"Good!" returned Hugh. "He's probably away with it by now, and he's no fool. For I'm thinking it's only Peter and him between us and—." He left his remark unfinished, and for a while there was silence. "Jerry is over in France still, putting stamp-paper on his machine; Ted's gone up to see that Potts is taking nourishment."

"And here we sit like three well-preserved specimens in a bally museum," broke in Algy, with a rueful laugh. "What'll they do to us, Hugh?"

But Drummond did not answer, and the speaker, seeing the look on his face, did not press the question.

Slowly the hours dragged on, until the last gleams of daylight had faded from the skylight above, and a solitary electric light, hung centrally, gave the only illumination. Periodically Heinrich had come in to see that they were still secure; but from the sounds of the hoarse laughter which came at frequent intervals through the half-open door, it was evident that the German had found other and more congenial company. At length he appeared carrying a tray with bread and water on it, which he placed on a table near Hugh.

"Food for you, you English swine," he remarked, looking gloatingly at each in turn. "Here Lakington the order gave, so that you will fit for tomorrow morning. Fit for the torture." He thrust his flushed face close to Drummond's, and then deliberately spat at him.

Algy Longworth gave a strangled grunt, but Drummond took no notice. With a quiet smile, he looked up at the German.

"How much, my friend," he remarked, "are you getting for this?"

The German leered at him.

"Enough to see that you tomorrow are here," he said.

"And I always believed that yours was a business nation," laughed Hugh. "Why, you poor fool, I've got a thousand pounds in notes in my cigarette case."

"You hof, hof you," the German grunted. "Then the dirty Boche will for you of them take care."

Hugh looked at him angrily.

"If you do," he cried, "you must let me go."

The German leered still more.

"Naturally. You shall out of the house at once walk."

He stepped up to Drummond and ran his hands over his coat, while the others stared at one another in amazement. Surely Hugh didn't imagine the swine would really let him go; he would merely take the money and probably spit in his face again. Then they heard him speaking, and a sudden gleam of comprehension dawned on their faces.

"You'll have to undo one of the ropes, my friend, before you can get at it," said Hugh quietly.

For a moment the German hesitated. He looked at the ropes carefully; the one that bound the arms and the upper part of the body was separate from the rope round the legs. Even if he did undo it the fool Englishman was still helpless, and he knew that he was unarmed. And he not himself removed his revolver, as he lay unconscious in the hall? What risk was there, after all? Besides, if he called some one else in he would have to share the money.

And, as he watched the German's indecision, Hugh's forehead grew damp with sweat. . . . Would he undo the rope? Would greed conquer caution?

At last the Boche made up his mind, and went behind the chair. Hugh felt him fumbling with the rope, and flashed an urgent look of caution at the other two.

"You'd better be careful, Heinrich," he remarked, "that none of the others see, or you might have to share."

The German ceased undoing the knot, and grunted. The English swine had moments of brightness, and he went over and closed the door. Then he resumed the operation of untying the rope; and, since it was performed behind the chair he was in no position to see the look on Drummond's face. Only the two spectators could see that, and they had almost ceased breathing in their excitement. That he had a plan they knew; what it was they could not even guess.

At last the rope fell clear and the German sprang back.

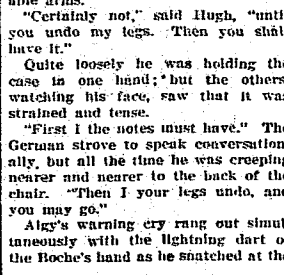

"Put the case on the table," he cried, having not the slightest intention of coming within range of those formidable arms.

"Certainly not," said Hugh, "until you undo my legs. Then you shall have it."

Quite loosely he was holding the case in one hand; but the others, watching his face, saw that it was strained and tense.

"First I the notes must have." The German strove to speak conversationally, but all the time he was creeping nearer and nearer to the back of the chair. "Then I your legs undo, and you may go."

Algy's warning cry rang out simultaneously with the lightning dart of the Boche's hand as he snatched at the cigarette-case over Drummond's shoulder. And then Drummond laughed a low, triumphant laugh. It was the move he had been hoping for, and the German's wrist was held fast in his vise-like grip. His plan had succeeded.

And Longworth and Sinclair, who had seen many things in their lives, the remembrance of which will be with them till they dying day, had never seen and are never likely to see anything within measurable distance of what they saw in the next few minutes. Slowly, inexorably, the German's arm was being twisted, while he uttered gasping cries, and beat impotently at Drummond's head with his free hand. Then at last there was a dull crack as the arm broke, and a scream of pain, as he lurched round the chair and stood helpless in front of the soldier, who still held the cigarette case in his left hand.

They saw Drummond open the cigarette case and take from it what looked like a tube of wood. Then he felt in his pocket and took out a watch-box, containing a number of long thin splinters. And, having fired one of the splinters into the tube he put the other end in his mouth.

With a quick heave they saw him jerk the German round and catch his unbroken arm with his free left hand. And the two bound watchers looked at Hugh's eyes as he stared at the moaning Boche, and saw that they were hard and merciless.

There was a sharp, whistling hiss, and the splinter flew from the tube into the German's face. It hung from his cheek, and even the ceaseless movement of his head failed to dislodge it.

"I have broken your arm, Boche," said Drummond at length, "and now I have killed you. I'm sorry about it; I wasn't particularly anxious to end your life. But it had to be done."

The German, hardly conscious of what he had said owing to the pain in his arm, was frantically kicking the Englishman's legs, still bound to the chair; but the iron grip on his wrists never slackened. And then quite suddenly came the end. With one dreadful, convulsive heave the German jerked himself free, and fell doubled up on the floor. Fascinated, they watched him writhing and twisting, until at last he lay still. . . . The Boche was dead.

"What was that blow-pipe affair?" cried Sinclair hoarsely.

"The thing they tried to finish me with in Paris last night," answered Hugh grimly, taking a knife out of his waistcoat pocket. "Let us trust that none of his pals come in to look for him."

A minute later he stood up, only to sit down again abruptly, as his legs gave way. They were numb and stiff with the hours he had spent in the same position, and for a while he could do nothing but rub them with his hands, till the blood returned and he could feel once more.

Then, slowly and painfully, he tottered across to the others and set them free as well. They were in an even worse condition than he had been; and it seemed as if Algy would never be able to stand again, so completely dead was his body from the waist downwards. But, at length, after what seemed an eternity to Drummond, who realized only too well that should the gang come in they were almost as helpless in their present condition as if they were still bound in their chairs, the other two recovered.

"All fit now? Good! We've got to think what we're going to do, for we're not out of the wood yet by two or three miles."

"Let's get the door open," remarked Algy, "and explore."

Cautionally they swung it open, and stood motionless. The house was in absolute silence; the hall was deserted.

"Switch out the light," whispered Hugh. "We'll wander round."

They crept forward stealthily in the darkness, stopping every now and then to listen. But no sound came to their ears; it might have been a house of the dead.

Suddenly Drummond, who was in front of the other two, stopped with a warning hiss. A light was streaming out from under a door at the end of a passage and, as they stood watching it, they heard a man's voice coming from the same room. Some one else answered him and then there was silence once more.

At length Hugh moved forward again, and the others followed. And it was not until they got quite close to the door that a strange, continuous noise began to be noticeable—a noise which came most distinctly from the lighted room. It rose and fell with monotonous regularity; at times it resembled a brass band—at others it died away to a gentle murmur. And occasionally it was punctuated with a strangled snort.

"Great Scott!" muttered Hugh excitedly. "The whole boiling bunch are asleep, or I'll eat my hat."

"Then who was it spoke?" said Algy. "At least two of 'em are awake right enough."

And, as if in answer to his question, there came the voice again from inside the room.

"Wal, Mr. Darrell, I guess we can pass on, and leave this bunch."

With one laugh of joyful amazement Hugh flung open the door, and found himself looking from the range of a yard into two revolvers.

"I don't know how you've done it, boys," he remarked, "but you can put those guns away. I hate looking at them from that end."

"What the devil have they done to all your dials?" said Darrell, slowly lowering his arm.

"We'll leave that for the time," returned Hugh grimly, as he shut the door. "There are other more pressing matters to be discussed."

He glanced round the room, and a slow grin spread over his face. There were some twenty of the gang, all of them fast asleep. They sprawled grotesquely over the table, they lolled in chairs; they lay on the floor, they huddled in corners. And, without exception, they snored and snorted.

"A dandy bunch," remarked the American, gazing at them with satisfaction. Then he turned to Drummond. "Say now, Captain, we've got a lorry load of the boys outside; your friend here thought we'd better bring 'em along. So it's up to you to get busy."

"Mullings and his crowd," said Darrell, seeing the look of mystification on Hugh's face.

For a few moments Drummond stood, deep in thought; then once again the grin spread slowly over his face. "Get the boys in, Peter; and get these lumps of meat carried out to the lorry. And, while you do it, we'll go upstairs and mop up."

THREE.

Even in his wildest dreams Hugh had never imagined such a wonderful opportunity. To be in complete possession of the house, with strong forces at his beck and call, was a state of affairs which rendered him almost speechless.

"Keep your guns handy," whispered Hugh. "We'll draw each room in turn till we find the girl."

But they were not to be put to so much trouble. Suddenly a door opposite opened, and the man who had been guarding Phyllis Benton peered out suspiciously. His jaw fell and a look of aghast surprise spread over his face as he saw the four men in front of him.

"And Now I Have Killed You. I'm Sorry About It."

Hugh stepped past him and was smiling at the girl who, with a little cry of joyful wonder, had risen from her chair.

"Your face, boy," she whispered, as he took her in his arms, regardless of the others, "your poor old face! Oh, that brute, Lakington!"

He laughed gently, and for a moment she clung to him, unmindful of how he had got to her, glorying only in the fact that he had. It seemed to her that there was nothing which this wonderful man of hers couldn't manage; and now, bludily trusting, she waited to be told what to do. The nightmare was over; Hugh was with her. . . .

"Are there any cars outside?" Hugh turned to the American.

"Yours," answered that worthy. "And mine is hidden behind Miss Benton's greenhouse unless they've moved it," remarked Algy.

"Good," said Hugh. "Algy, take Miss Benton and her father up to Half Moon street—at once. Then come back here."

"But, Hugh—" began the girl appealingly.

"At once, dear, please." He smiled at her tenderly, but his tone was decided. "This is going to be no place for you in the near future."

With no further word of protest the girl followed Algy, and Hugh drew a breath of relief.

"Now, you ugly-looking blighter," he remarked to the cowering refugee, who was by this time shaking with fright, "we come to you. When does Lakington return?"

"Tomorrow, sir," stammered the other.

"Where is he now?"

The man hesitated for a moment, but the look in Hugh's eyes galvanized him into speech.

"He's after the old woman's pearls, sir—the duchess of Lamsheire's."

"Ah!" returned Hugh softly. "Of course he is. I forgot. When does Peterson come back?"

"Tomorrow, too, sir, as far as I know," answered the man.

"And what's he doing?" demanded Drummond.

"On the level, guv'nor, I can't tell yer. Strife, I can't."

At that moment Darrell's voice came up from the hall.

"The whole bunch are stowed away, Hugh. What's the next item?"

Wifely Requirements.

The Spaniards have a saying that a wife should resemble three things, and yet differ from these same things. First, she should be like a snail, which always guards its house, but she should not carry the house with her whenever she goes out. Second, she should be like an echo, which speaks only after the other is finished, but she should not always have the last word, and last, she should be like the town clock, which always sounds the hours with regularity, but she should not sound so loud that the whole town shall hear it.

Star, N. C.—"My monthly spells gave me so much trouble, sometimes they would last two weeks. I was treated by two doctors without relief and they both said I would have to have an operation. I had my trouble four years and was unfit to do anything, and had given up all hope of ever getting any better. I read about your medicine in the 'Primitive Baptist' paper and decided to try it. I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills for about seven months and now I am able to do my work. I shall never forget your medicine and you may publish this if you want to as it is true."—Mrs. J. F. Hursey, Star, N. C.

Here is another woman who adds her testimony to the many whose letters we have already published, proving that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound often restores health to suffering women even after they have gone so far that an operation is deemed advisable. Therefore it will surely pay any woman who suffers from ailments peculiar to her sex to give this good old fashioned remedy a fair trial.

IMPROVING SOIL BY COVER CROPS

They Add Humus, Accumulate Nitrogen, Prevent Erosion and Loss of Plant Food.

RYE LARGELY USED IN FALL

Problem Varies Largely With Locality, but It Is Best to Get Good Growth Before Freezing Weather—Methods Also Vary.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Planting cover or green manure crops is a matter which requires attention in August or September in most parts of the United States, say experts of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Clover, vetch and other legumes serve the triple purpose of adding humus to the soil, accumulating nitrogen and preventing soil erosion. With some tender berry and fruit crops they also serve to protect the roots from severe winter weather. Outside of the nitrogen-forming plants, rye is largely used as a cover crop sown in the fall and plowed under in the spring to add organic matter to the soil. The cover-crop problem varies largely with locality, but for overwinter purposes there is one rule which is universal, and that is to get the crop in the ground in time to secure good growth before frost.

A Practice of Long Standing.

The use of clover or some other legume to enrich the soil is generally considered a cardinal agricultural practice in the humid sections of the United States. It antedates by three-quarters of a century the monumental discovery that legumes store up nitrogen from the air. The belief that clover was a valuable improver rested first on experience, and later experience was substantiated by the discovery of the relation between the legumes and the nodules bacteria.

Other legumes, as the cow pea, the Japan clover and bur clover in the South and crimson clover on the Atlantic coast, have come into use in the

AMERICAN CLASS OF FOWLS IS POPULAR

Good Egg Producers and Meat Well Suited for Table.

In Size They Are Intermediate Between Small and Large Breeds and Are Fairly Good Foragers—They Make Good Mothers.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
In the American class of poultry are found the Plymouth Rock, Wyandotte, Java, D'Urbiquette, Rhode Island Red and Buckeye.

The fowls of these breeds are commonly called general-purpose fowls, because they are not only good egg producers, but their carcasses are also well suited for the table. They are therefore the best breeds for the general farm flocks of chickens, say poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Splendid Barred Plymouth Rock Pullet.

Department of Agriculture. They are in good favor, too, with the poultry packers on account of their table qualities.

All the American breeds lay brown-shelled eggs. They all have yellow skins, and shanks free from feathers, which are desirable qualities for table fowl in this country. In size they are intermediate between the smaller egg breeds, such as the Leghorns, and the larger meat breeds, such as the Brahmans.

In temperament they are also intermediate, being less active than the egg breeds, but more so than the meat breeds. They are fairly good foragers. The American-class birds mature earlier than the meat breeds, but not so quickly as the egg breeds. They are setters and make good mothers.

SAVE BEST OF GARDEN SEED

Cloth Bags Are Best Containers for Large Seeds—Correct Labeling Is Important.

Seeds which have been grown and carefully saved should be well labeled and stored or all the previous labor goes for nothing, say experts of the United States Department of Agriculture. Cloth bags are the best containers for large seeds, such as peas, beans and corn. They should be used also for larger quantities of small seeds, but for smaller lots paper envelopes, made at home or purchased, are fairly satisfactory, but usually are not gummed so as to close completely, and if handled carelessly small seeds may sift out of them.

Correct labeling is of paramount importance. Every envelope or container should show the kind and variety of seed, the date, including month and year when harvested, and the place where grown. For the cloth bags a slip of paper bearing all this information should be inserted with the seed. It is very convenient also to have a tag on the outside of the bag, but on no account should the inner label be omitted, because of the liability of loss of the outside tag.

LIGHT SOIL FOR FARMSTEAD

Ground Occupied by Farm Buildings May Be Poorest Kind—Sandy Soils Are Excellent.

The garden, lawn, orchard and wind-break, constituting a considerable portion of the farmstead, require good and preferably light soil, while the ground occupied by the farm buildings may be the poorest land on the farm. Not infrequently the two kinds of soil may be found within the farmstead area, but it is better to sacrifice a little crop-producing land for the buildings than to handicap the garden or orchard with poor soil. Sandy or gravelly soils are excellent for general farmstead purposes, as they are favorable for plant growth and drain rapidly—very desirable qualities.

SCATTER MANURE ON FIELDS

Good Plan to Permit Sun to Kill Maggot Stage of Flies—Stack Straw in Neat Piles.

Keep barnyard manure, especially if containing straw, cleaned up and scattered on the fields to permit the sun and drying to kill the maggot stage of the flies. Stack the straw; don't blow it out in an irregular loose pile. Build vertical sides. Keep middle well filled and tramp well. Clean up around base of stacks and scatter remnants. If it is certain that the straw will not be used for feed, spread it at once, to be plowed under.

FROCKS FOR PRACTICAL WEAR AT ANY TIME OF THE DAY

NOW that Spanish modes are flourishing in the sunshine of fashion's approval we find them exploited in unexpected places. These picturesque styles—the wide skirts, dangling ornaments, shawl draperies, brilliant embroideries, sashes and fringes—one would not expect to find in dresses for practical wear, but they are reflected in work-a-day clothes for fall as well as dressier things. They are romantic touches, artfully handled and they give a new flavor to practical dresses for all-day wear, like those which are pictured above.

As good an example as could be selected of the Spanish influence as it appears in the practical dress for fall, is shown at the left of the two pictured. This dress is of iridescent and has a full skirt gathered into a cut seam at the low waistline. The bodice is trim and almost smoothly fitting, having a long shoulder line and bound arm's eye. The nearly round neck supports a fringe-trimmed collar and the novel sleeves, set in the lining, are also finished with fringe. This fringe is of cheville and matches the dress in color; it is set in four rows on the skirt, extending around the sides and back, the last row at the bottom edge. A heavy sash cord, tacked to place, provides the giraffe. Altogether this is a very attractive dress, with its faint Spanish accent accountable for its novelty and fascination.

Another dress that will interest young wearers appears at the right. It is a tailored model which refuses to be entirely serious-minded and borrows a fringed sash and single embroidery motif on the bodice from Spanish modes. It is a little wayward at the hem line, where it breaks into points, calling particular attention to the fact with three rows of braid, that looks like embroidery, and defines the points. The sleeves are elbow length and set-in, the sash of crepe-stuff with cheville fringe and there is a staid little tailored bow of it, at the neck line, topping off a finish in which satin-covered buttons and narrow fold insist upon the practical character of the frock. It can be made of any of the usual suitings.

FOUR STYLES IN COATS FIND FAVOR FOR FALL

ANY ONE of four styles in coats may claim our allegiance this fall, for designers have departed from the dolman styles and wrappy garments of last year. Traces of them are left in some of the new arrivals, but that is all. Many of the new coats are straight-line garments, simple, with dropped shoulder and deep arm hole, and set-in sleeves which are more than likely to be flaring. Next there is the coat that has the fitted basque and full skirt. This style invites trimming and may turn out to be the most popular of all aspirants for favor. Then comes the Russian-house style, always a favorite with smart women who wear it well, and finally those coats which preserve the dolman sleeve and are capelike. Capes and cape wraps for evening wear may be added to these. All these styles count embroidery and braid among available decorations and look to far to provide collars and sometimes trimmings, if required.

The two coats shown above are among the simplest examples of the straight-line and the capelike styles. The coat at the left could not be improved upon as an exponent of this season's modes. Its sleeves are set in and slightly flaring. Braid embroidery adorns them and the skirt portion of the coat in a deep border, and the belt, made of the fabric, is inconspicuous. Beaver fur makes a collar that may be brought up about the throat.

The coat at the right is long and full with deep cape-collar of the material. Its sleeves are cut in one with the body of the garment—or have that appearance—and are extended into long tabs finished with a tassel. It is intricate in design but simply trimmed with braid.

Never before has there been such a demand for narrow leather belts for sport wear. They are used on both sport dresses and sweaters. All-white and black and white kid are the favorites, with one inch as the maximum width.

ACTIVE IN VIRGINIA LEGION

Kate Waller Barrett, an International Figure, is Chosen President of Women's Auxiliary.

Kate Waller Barrett, Alexandria, Va., one of the foremost women sociologists of this country, and an international figure in women's organizations, has been chosen president of the Women's Auxiliary of the American Legion for the department of Virginia.

She has been called four times to serve as a special representative of the government on important missions, and has been national president of the National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher associations. While serving as president of the National Florence Crittenton mission, co-operating with the United States public health service, which position she still holds, Mrs. Barrett was a leading spirit in the conference on the care of delinquent children, called by President Roosevelt. She was a delegate to the international conference of women, a special representative of the government to investigate conditions in Europe surrounding alien women, delegate to the peace conference at Zurich in 1913, and special representative of the bureau of immigration in Europe the same year.

During the war Mrs. Barrett was the only woman appointed by the governor of Virginia to the committee on training camp activities. She is state regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution, a member of the Societe Academique, Historic Internationale and an honorary member of the Argentine Council of Women of Buenos Aires. Mrs. Barrett is now devoting most of her time to the auxiliary of the American Legion.

WAS IN SERVICE ON ONE LEG
Nervy Member of Medical Corps Unit Was Not Discharged From Duty for Eleven Days.

Eleven days after being inducted into the service without claim of exemption, Logan B. Dillman was summarily discharged. The medical corps unit to which he was assigned had discovered that he had a wooden leg.

"Stumpy," as he is known by his comrades, registered at Trinidad, Colo., and when called was transferred to Fort Dodge, Ia.

Evidently there was little ceremony about his introduction to the khaki. He made no complaint because of his desire to serve, if possible. But after five days of drilling, he said that the amputated limb became so sore that he couldn't make it work any longer.

"The sergeant did excuse me from play sometimes, but I drilled right along with the rest of them," Dillman said. Even when discharged from the draft after his 11 days of service, Dillman's paper stipulated that the act "does not operate as a permanent bar to his subsequent entry into the military service" and "does not excuse the holder from obedience to the process of exemption boards." However, no subsequent call was made by the authorities.

Dillman is now a member of Harry E. Everist post No. 115, American Legion, at Mankato, Kan. The post claims to be the only one having a member "who entered the service on one 'pin'."

MANAGES TOUR TO WAR ZONE

Member of Legion Executive Committee in Charge of Party—Fooled Air Service Examiners.

When the American Legion accepted the invitation of the French government to send a party of former service men to France for a tour of the old war zone, John J. Wicker, Jr., a member of the Legion's national executive committee, was called to New York to manage the pilgrimage.

Wicker is especially qualified to conduct a tour to France or any foreign land.

Before going into the practice of law, Wicker spent some time in the organization and conduct of travel parties to Europe, Palestine, Egypt and the Orient as well as to all parts of the United States, Canada and Alaska. When the World War started he was in Rome with a travel party of 64 persons in his charge. After many thrilling experiences he succeeded in getting his party through France on military trains and finally back to the United States.

Wicker served in the aviation service in France. After being four times rejected because of defective vision, he memorized the letters on the eye-test chart and fooled the air service examiners, who were the keenest in the army.

"HEARS THE EAST A-CALLING"

Marine's Reasons for Seeking Transfer to the Orient Prove Truth of Kipling's Statement.

Who says that Kipling didn't speak the mind of the enlisted man when he wrote: "Ship me somewhere east of Suez?" A marine, who put in a long tour of duty in the Orient, recently wrote the editor of this column that he had requested to be transferred out there again. His letter was poetical, but sincere. He wrote in part: "I can see in my mind's eye that old recruiting slogan, 'See the World, and as I hear in my imagination the booming of the surf on those oriental shores and scent the odor of the Celestial heathen, methinks I should like once again to brush elbows with those stant-eyed sons of Confucius.'"—From the Leatherneck.

Important to Mothers

Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, that famous old remedy for infants and children, and see that it bears the Signature of Dr. J. C. Williams in Use for Over 30 Years. Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria.

The Medium's Friend.

Publisher George Doran of New York was laughing about Conan Doyle's rampant belief in spiritualism. "Doyle's friends poke fun at him," he said, "but he takes it all in good part. At a dinner in Golder's Green, the Greenwich village of London, Doyle's host said to him one evening:

"How will you have your roast beef, Sir Arthur? Underdone or—"
"But here the hostess interrupted: 'It takes no Sherlock Holmes,' she said, 'to tell how he'll have his beef. He'll have it medium, of course.'"

Find the Cause!

It isn't right to drag along feeling miserable—half sick. Find out what is making you feel so badly and try to correct it. Perhaps your kidneys are causing that throbbing backache or those sharp, stabbing pains. You may have morning lameness, too, headaches, dizzy spells and irregular kidney action. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They have helped thousands of ailing folks. Ask your neighbor!

A Michigan Case

Mrs. H. V. Hyde, of Homer, Mich., says: "I suffered terribly with backache and sharp, shooting pains in my side. When sleeping, I would get so dizzy I could hardly see. I felt miserable. I was suffering from one of those attacks when I first took Doan's Kidney Pills and they certainly were just what I needed, for they cured me of the attack."

Not Exactly Reassuring.

"There is no doubt about it, my friend, we'll have to operate on you," the doctor said cheerfully. "Operate?" the patient exclaimed. "Great Scott, doctor, I've no money for expensive operations." "Hum! Well—you're insured, aren't you?" "Yes, but I can't realize on that until after I'm dead—it goes to my estate." "Oh, that's all right, my dear fellow," the doctor said, again smiling cheerfully. "That's perfectly all right—don't you worry about your bill at all!"—Judge.
