

LOCOMOTIVE TIPS;
CRUSHES DRIVER

Leon Phelps of West Sylvan Caught Beneath Small Narrow Gauge Good Roads Engine.

Leon Phelps of West Sylvan, 23 years of age, died about 10:15 Tuesday night at the Foote Memorial hospital, Jackson, as the result of injuries received about four hours earlier, when a narrow gauge railroad locomotive tipped over and he was crushed beneath it.

Mr. Phelps resided near Grass Lake on rural route number four, and was employed in the construction of the federal aid road in that vicinity. He was the driver of the narrow gauge locomotive used on the job when it left the rails and toppled over. Phelps was caught under the locomotive and badly crushed.

He was extricated as soon as possible by fellow workmen and carried to the residence of Dr. McColgan of Grass Lake. An ambulance was called and he was removed to the Foote hospital in Jackson, where he died a few hours later.

It is said that the heavy rain which passed over Grass Lake just before the accident washed out a portion of the grade for the narrow gauge track, causing the track to settle at one side and so resulting in the fatal accident.

Mr. Phelps is survived by his mother, Mrs. Lambert of West Sylvan, near the Jackson-Washtenaw county line. He was an ex-serviceman and a member of The American Legion Post of this place.

SULLIVAN - GREINER

Miss Cecelia Irene Sullivan, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Sullivan of Lyndon township, and Mr. George Greiner of Pinckney were united in marriage Thursday morning, September 1, 1921, at nine o'clock at St. Mary church, Rev. Father Van Dyke officiating.

Miss Julia Greiner, sister of the groom, and Mr. Edward Sullivan, brother of the bride, were the attendants.

Following the ceremony an elaborate wedding dinner was served to about 70 guests at the Sullivan home in Lyndon.

Mr. and Mrs. Greiner will reside on a farm near Anderson.

ENDS LONG MOTORCYCLE TOUR.

Hubert Maze, son of Dr. A. A. Maze of Pontiac and formerly of Chelsea, accompanied by his friend John Jackson of Rochester, rode into Chelsea, Wednesday morning on Indian motorcycles on the last lap of a 16-months trip through the west.

The boys left Pontiac a year ago last May on their machines, and have since covered many miles a wheel. They paid their expenses by taking odd jobs along the road as the opportunity offered, and have had many experiences.

Hubert graduated from the Pontiac high school in June 1918. In speaking of his experiences, he remarked that they encountered many "crooked" and "get-rich-quick" schemers, but that they had always played the game square and they found that it paid. The "crooked" type of traveler invariably met with trouble or disaster.

M. A. C. FOOT BALL TEAM AT CLEAR LAKE

Candidates For Michigan Aggie Team Will Have Preliminary Training at Nearby Resort.

Instructions have been mailed to candidates for the Michigan Agricultural College football team to assemble at Clear Lake, near Waterloo, on September 13th, for early training camp. That social activities would be strictly taboo while the party is in camp at Clear Lake was apparent from the tone of the "dope sheet" mailed to all Aggie football men. "Old clothes are all you need—we'll be strictly by ourselves. Prepare to rough it for ten days," said the official communication.

Early replies to the invitations show that more than a dozen former letter men will be in the fold when work starts. In addition several promising candidates from last year's freshmen squad will be on hand. Bos. captain; Parks, Swanson, Radewald, Morrison, Gingrich, Thorpe and Matson are line veterans counted on to report, while Wilcox, Noblet, Brady and Harry Graves, star fullback on the S. A. T. C. team in 1918, are included among the seasoned backfield men.

Barron, head football coach, will not reach East Lansing until just before the squad leaves for camp. He is to spend the first two weeks of September working with Hugo Bezdek at Penn State.

At present the Cleveland Central high school team and the Fostoria high school teams are in training at the lake, and will remain for a week or ten days more.

MERCHANT TELLS OF A REMARKABLE CASE

Writing from Maxey's, Gen. A. J. Githen, proprietor of a large department store at that place, says:

"I have a customer here who was in bed for three years and did not go to a meeting in that place. She had five physicians and they gave her out. One bottle of Talcum got her up, on the second bottle she commenced keeping house and on the third she did all the cooking and housework for a family of eight."

This sounds really incredible, but it comes uncontradicted from a highly creditable source and is copied verbatim from the letter.

She—Oh, my dear Mr. Githen, I will accept you—

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmor's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease.

Dr. Kilmor's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmor & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

CATTARHAL DEAFNESS

Is greatly relieved by constitutional treatment. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced, your hearing may be destroyed forever. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the lining of the mucous surface of the system, thus reducing the inflammation and assisting Nature in restoring normal conditions.

CHAPTER VII—Continued.

"That's what's got my goat," Costigan admitted grudgingly. "He said he'd be back in an hour, but he ain't showed up since, nor sent any word. I don't want to shove my nose into your affairs, but I'm getting a little nervous about George, that's a fact."

Somewhere the fellow gave me the impression of being square—honest according to his lights—and intensely loyal to his friends. Of course, I could not inform him as to the whole story, but it might be of benefit to give him some inkling of the situation.

"There's no harm, so far as I can see, in telling you a part of the plan, Mr. Costigan," I replied slowly, endeavoring to guard my words carefully.

"I know Harris has every confidence in you, so I'll take a chance. We're both on to a million-dollar pot—easy money, it looks like."

"The hell! That's some hoodlum!" exclaimed I, leaning forward.

"It don't come every day. I'll not explain details, or how the two of us run together on the trail, and agreed to split the pot. That's our business, you'll admit."

"Sure; what was it? A bank job?"

"Better than that—South American revolution fund; coin sent over here from London to pay for arms, and maybe a murder or so. It is all in one bundle, and what we need to do is get our hands on it. We know where the stuff is, but we're still scouting around for a chance to grab it; it's locked up yet."

"I see. Ain't been handed over to the sink who's got to pay it out. That's what George is a-travelin' out now, I suppose?"

"No doubt that is what he started after this morning—shadowing the fellows to whom it was to be paid. What gets me is, why he doesn't return—the guy is dead."

"Judas Priest! How do you know that? What's happened?"

"Why, it's in all the papers; he was murdered last night over in Jersey City—stabbed through the back in an automobile. You saw it, didn't you?"

"I—I—that guy? He was a Chilean captain, or something. Yer don't think that maybe George bumped him off, do yer?"

"No; I know he didn't; Harris was with me all last evening."

"And you haven't any notion who did?"

I shook my head negatively. Costigan sat for some moments, his chin cupped in his huge fist, his pipe extinguished and his forehead creased in thought. Then he looked up suddenly, a strange light in his eyes.

"Say, Dady," he asked in a hoarse whisper, "do you know if there was a Russian Jew mixed up in this affair anywhere?"

CHAPTER VIII.

A Friend at the McAlpin—The Dagger Hatpin.

His unexpected question startled me. In a way it was an old echo of the vague suspicion which had been pursuing me ever since the early afternoon. Somewhere there was a mysterious hand operating—but whose hand?

"A Russian Jew?" I questioned.

"Why should you ask that?"

"Well, I'll tell you. Maybe it don't amount to nothin' an' then again it might give us the right steer. A fellow they call 'Sly Levy'—he's a cheap thief, a dip mostly—blew in yere last night with a note for Harris. He left it with one of the night barkeeps, an' seemed ter be in a hurry ter have it delivered. The d—d thing was sealed, but not stamped, an' there wasn't no address on it either. So I didn't think it was no penitentiary sentence to pry it open, usin' a bit of steam to loosen up the flap. But I didn't find much, only two lines spelled out in print letters. 'Where you met K. eight tomorrow. Don't fail; important. I. W.' That was every d—n word. Do you make anything of that?"

"Yes, I do," I said heartily. "It's part of this job. I'll explain after a bit. What did you do then?"

"Seated it up, an' give it back to Joe. I didn't see no harm in it. Do you happen to know who this 'I. W.' stands for?"

"I can make a mighty good guess, Costigan—a Russian Jew, all right; Ivan Waldron."

The scowl on his face remained fixed; evidently the name was unknown.

"Don't know the fellow? Likely enough not; he doesn't operate in your line, but he is a crook just the same. I never saw him myself, but have heard about him for a long while—never anything good. He's an agitator, an anarchist, a revolutionary orator; one of those bugs who fight society and government, and hate everybody but themselves, a loud-mouthed nuisance."

"Costigan's mouth was open.

"Say," he interrupted, "what's that kind of guy got to do with George Harris?"

"Jeez, got this to do with him—he's not after the coin. He saw some easy money, and naturally reached out for it. He was the first one to get onto this particular game. They were using him, this Chilean gang, to pull their chestnuts out of the fire, and that's how he tumbled to this bunch of money floating about, begging somebody to pick it up. He had worried himself inside, and knew it was coming. But he didn't have nerve enough to tackle the game alone. He wanted somebody else to run all the risk, and then turn over his share. Do you get it now?"

"Sure; he blew the thing to Harris."

"In a way—yes. He sent for him to come back from England, but without explaining just what his graft was. On the way over Harris picked up another end of the same net, and went after it himself. He wasn't under any obligation to Waldron, and preferred to play his hand alone."

"And the Russian has found that out, and now he butts in."

"That's the way I'd read the cards, Costigan."

He sat silent a long while, and I lit a cigar and watched him, his great hands closing and unclosing, as he slowly reviewed the situation.

"Say, this guy what was bumped off—did, whoever did it, get anything?"

"His pockets were rifled, the papers say—all but a little change."

"Are you sure this fellow Alva didn't have that bunch of money along with him?"

"Not I'm not sure, of course, but Harris had been shadowing him for a month. Still, come to think, Alva was with Krantz the same night. He might have touched him."

"With who?"

"Krantz—Adolph Krantz—the banker. Krutz, Krantz and Company, over in Wall street," I explained.

"Is he the same guy that 'K' stands for in the letter?"

"No doubt. He and Harris had an interview at 247 Le Comptre street."

"Le Comptre, hey! I wonder who lives there?"

"Well, I can tell you—it's Ivan Waldron."

His fist came crashing down onto the arm of his chair.

"H—! That's all clear enough then. He and George are up to some deal together. Say, I believe this Russian guy is the buck who got Alva."

I Stood Motionless, Looking at Her Intently.

"Do you think so? Well, I am not so sure of that. But, anyway, what shall we do?"

"Wait until George comes back. There ain't any cause for us to butt in yet. This is his game, as I see it. If it was you, Mr. Dady," he added grimly, "you wouldn't thank nobody to shove in uninvited—would yer now?"

I was unconvinced by his argument, yet knew of no way of answering it. He must have read my predicament in the expression of my face.

"You come out all right, Dady," he volunteered. "I know George, an' he ain't the kind to be outwitted by no Russian Jew. Let's have a drink an' we'll call it off for tonight. You leave me your telephone number an' if anything happens I'll let you know."

I took a taxi back to the hotel, feeling restless and dissatisfied, yet unable to decide on any definite action.

As I asked for my key, the clerk handed it over, together with a card in the box, which I read in bewilderment. "Mr. Philip Severn, C-145. Call Hotel McAlpin." Could this be Harris, endeavoring to reach me privately with some message? Or was it merely an acquaintance who had learned of my presence in the city? I found the McAlpin exchange number in the telephone book and gained connection, my pulses throbbing with excitement.

A woman's voice answered.

"The McAlpin."

"This is Philip Severn. You left a call here at the hotel for me."

"Oh, yes, Mr. Severn. I'm requested to ask you to come at once to the prior of the McAlpin, on the mezzanine floor—a friend wishes to see you."

"But really, I do not recognize your voice."

"Which is not altogether strange, as I am only the clerk on this floor. I am making this request in behalf of a guest."

"A man or a woman, may I ask?"

She laughed good-naturedly.

"Really, I am not at liberty to say. You will come?"

"Yes, of course."

Before I had really finished my sentence the connection had been severed. However, there was no doubt now in my mind but that it was Harris. I took the subway and was at the entrance within twenty minutes, eager to learn what had actually transpired during the past twelve hours. Without using the elevator I passed up the marble stairs to the mezzanine floor, pausing in uncertainty at the top to look about in search of some familiar face. A number of people were congregated about the railed opening looking down into the lobby, while others were gathered around on convenient divans, or at small writing desks. From the recesses of the ladies' room at the left came the strains of piano music, and the sound of a soprano voice singing. The song ceased to be a clapping of hands. The faces I was able to distinguish were all strange and I moved forward in search.

I had attained the opposite side of the room before I came to a halt, suddenly arrested by a vision as startling as unexpected. Leaning over the rail, gazing intently down the jostling crowd to the lobby below, apparently unconscious of all else, was Marie Gessler. There could be no doubt; I stood motionless, looking at her intently, satisfying myself that I could not be deceived. No, it was certainly the same girl I had talked with the evening before, dressed more elaborately, changed somewhat in appearance by a more careful toilet, yet assuredly the same. She must have felt the intensity of my stare and thus sensed my presence, for she suddenly looked about with a little start, saw me in the crowd and arose to her feet. There was a second of hesitation, barely perceptible, before she ventured a step forward, her lips smiling, her gloved hand held out.

"You were very nice to come," she exclaimed quietly. "Especially in response to so ungracious a message of invitation."

"It was you then who sent for me?"

"Of course. Did you imagine some one else?"

"I came rather blindly," I admitted, unwilling to mention Harris. "Your messenger refused to satisfy my curiosity even to the extent of telling the sex of the one calling."

She laughed, quite at her ease now, and seemingly amused.

"She was duly warned. I confess I feared you might hesitate to respond if you once knew what awaited you."

"No fear of that."

"But I didn't know," her voice more earnest, her eyes on my face questioningly. "You have not thought very well of me, have you? Let us go over there in the corner, where we can talk without being overheard—there are two vacant chairs."

We reached there and seated ourselves in silence. I felt the necessity of restraint, the desire to permit her to lead the conversation in whatever direction she thought best. She appeared younger in the bright light, her face even more attractive than in my memory.

"You are thoroughly puzzled, are you not?" she asked gayly. "Well, so was I, last night. It is only right I should pay you back in your own coin; that is perfectly fair, I am sure. Now I know who you are, but I am still an enigma. You accepted me on blind faith before; I wonder if you are willing to do it again?"

"I can hardly refuse."

"Answered like a gentleman. But suppose I tell you nothing and yet ask of you a dangerous service? Would you risk your life for me, not even asking who I am or why I make the request?"

There was a grave earnestness to the voice, an intensity in the eyes not to be ignored. This was no idle question to be thrust aside with a smile. "I believe I can make the pledge—to you," I replied soberly. "It is very unusual, but—"

"But you are Philip Severn," she interrupted, with an expressive gesture. "Had you not been I would have never asked."

"It is very nice of you to put it in that way, I am sure, but how do you chance to know that I am Philip Severn?"

"Suppose I insist that also is my secret? Yet surely you could not believe I would be here with you, unless I knew? You must have faith in me, in spite of all."

"Undoubtedly I do. I hardly hold it a reasonable faith, however. More, a certain amount of curiosity should be gratified, especially when a young lady asks unquestioning devotion to an unknown cause. You admit that?"

NEW DECORATIVE TOUCHES SEEN IN SEPARATE SKIRTS

WE SHALL probably have the platted separate skirt with us many seasons. So long as manufacturers turn out goods in plaid, striped and cross-bar patterns, they will challenge the ingenuity of designers to show what can be done with these patterns by the skillful management of plaits. In separate skirts for fall there are both plain and platted models but the platted ones far outnumber other styles.

The box plait and the double box plait appear to predominate, but there is really nothing new to report of these platings. It is the materials that make the fall skirts different from those of the passing season. Their colors and surfaces are wistful—cozy and sometimes shaggy looking and these new patterns in fabrics are rich and beautiful as to colors. There is no end to the variety shown in them and designers are beginning to vary skirts by making small tailored ornaments of the fabric and applying them to the plaits, often in the company of buttons or odd ornaments. The model shown in the picture shows an embellishment of this kind. On alternate plaits, near the bottom of the skirt, appear small decorations, made of a narrow strip of the fabric used in the skirt, and having hemmed edges. These pieces are stitched flat to the skirt and below each of them two little silk-covered, button-like ornaments finish up an effective and new detail in the styles for fall.

Among the woolen skirts there are a number having a dark, plain color alternating with a stripe in two or three colors and various patterns. In these the plaits conceal the colored stripes, but they are glimpsed all the time when the skirt is being worn. Dark blue and dark brown are the colors favored for the plain stripe.

Skirts of satin and silk, usually in black are among the showings. An occasional model has an embellishment of fringe and indicates that fringes will be used on the dressy models for fall and winter.

SIMPLE SMALL FURNISHINGS FOR THE HOME CRAFTSMAN

IT IS pure joy to take commonplace, simple materials that everyone may have, and fashion out of them little decorative furnishings, that add something beautiful to the home. Women have always loved "fancy work"—it is really play for them, and they are happily busy when they are doing it. And now come the makers of such familiar things as crepe and tissue paper and colored sealing wax, showing what amazingly varied and lovely decorative things for the home can be made of these things. The list is so long to print, but it includes things that the hostess will delight in—and many ornaments that will brighten the house for everyone. The brighter the house for everyone.

Two small contributions to the home beautiful are pictured here. They are a basket of fruit and a gay cockatoo or parakeet or whatever the brilliant plumaged bird is who delights the eye with his gay colors. One may cut him from crepe paper that pictures him faithfully—and cut from thin cardboard a replica of him, padding the board with a little cotton on the body portion on both sides or on one side only. Then this cardboard foundation is covered with the picture which is pasted over its edge. A circle of wire is wound with a long strip of yellow paper and this makes a swing for the bird which is fastened on it with a bit of wire. He can hang against a wall—or wherever he will do the most good.

The basket containing grapes and apples is made of paper rope and shellac. The grapes in purple, green, red, and the small apples have centers of cotton and are covered with sealing wax. The grape leaves may be bought ready made and the tendrils are of wire wound with green paper.

WOMAN AVOIDS AN OPERATION

Hope Nearly Gone, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her

Star, N. C.—"My monthly spells gave me so much trouble, sometimes they would last two weeks. I was treated by two doctors without relief and they both said I would have to have an operation. I had my trouble four years and was unfit to do anything, and had given up all hope of ever getting any better. I read about your medicine in the 'Primitive Baptist' paper and decided to try it. I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills for about seven months and now I am able to do my work. I shall never forget your medicine and you may publish this if you want to as it is true."—Mrs. J. F. Hursey, Star, N. C.

Here is another woman who adds her testimony to the many whose letters we have already published, proving that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound often restores health to suffering women even after they have gone so far that an operation is deemed advisable. Therefore it will surely pay any woman who suffers from ailments peculiar to her sex to give this good old fashioned remedy a fair trial.

Chaulmoogra Oil: Cure for Leprosy?

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN.

ROF. J. F. ROCK has returned to Washington from Siam with specimens and seeds of the tree, Taraktogenos kurzii, which the world has hailed literally as the Tree of Life for the leper.

Is chaulmoogra oil, derived from the seeds of this Siamese jungle tree, a cure for leprosy? It is too soon to say, since there is no test on which a positive utterance in the affirmative can be given. But this much has been shown conclusively:

Chaulmoogra oil contains one or more agents which exert a marked therapeutic action in many cases of leprosy. There have been many apparent cures. Are they real and permanent? That remains to be seen. But it is evident that modern medicine now has an agent at its disposal which gives promise for the control of the dreaded disease.

Professor Rock, formerly of the University of Hawaii, made the trip to the Siamese jungles for the United States Department of Agriculture. It is supposed to provide a permanent supply of the oil for the treatment of leprosy. Professor Rock's seeds and young trees have been distributed among various experiment stations, notably in Florida, Maryland and California.

Professor Rock says that with one exception he is, so far as is known, the first white man to penetrate the region of Siam where he obtained the specimens. Of the other white man nothing seems to be known except that he is an amateur botanist named Kerr. The Siamese, however, visit the jungles where grow the taraktogenos trees once every three years to secure the seeds for chaulmoogra oil. It is a wild country, full of dangerous animals. The natives have known of the beneficial properties of the oil in leprosy for hundreds of years, but handle the oil in such a crude way that they do not get its full effect.

"Unclean" is the pitiful cry of the leper that has been heard in all parts of the world since biblical times. The dread disease gets its name from the Greek word "lepros," which means "scaly." It is caused by the bacillus Lepra. It has always been believed contagious and until recent years incurable. It has been considered a particularly dread disease because of the terrible disfigurements it causes.

Probably the origin and home of leprosy is the Far East, but at one time it was widespread in Europe. It is still found in quantity in France, Russia, Norway, Turkey and Portugal. It is estimated that there are 1,500 lepers in the United States, most of whom are undetected and therefore unsegregated. It is only the other day that the wife of a well-known officer of the United States army was found to be suffering from a mild form of leprosy and was sent for treatment to the government leprosy hospital in Louisiana. Recently the British government requisitioned the United States for chaulmoogra oil for the treatment of several hundred sufferers on the Island of Trinidad.

Portugal probably possesses the greatest number of lepers of any European country. Foreigners are struck by the sight of disfigured lepers of both sexes begging in the streets and selling toys and sweets. But Portugal seldom gets excited over her lepers. About once a generation somebody insists that something ought to be done for them—or with them.

If leprosy can be cured or controlled, the result is due to work done by the United States public health service. This work has been going on for the last fifteen years, principally in the Kalaupapa hospital, Hawaii. The Kalaupapa leper colony is situated on a promontory of the island of in the Hawaiian Islands, which has conducted intensive studies in the disease," said Dr. Schereschewsky. "In the course of this the action of chaulmoogra oil in the treatment of leprosy has been very closely studied. Chaulmoogra oil, which is an oil from the seeds of an oriental tree (Taraktogenos kurzii) has been reported for a good many years to have a beneficial action in leprosy.

"The difficulty in its use, however, lay in the fact that when given by mouth it was nauseating and offensive to the stomach and when injected intramuscularly was extremely painful and very slowly absorbed. Various modifications of chaulmoogra oil were studied by the public health service, among them a mixture suggested by Dr. Heiser of the service containing chaulmoogra oil, camphorated oil and resorcinol; later olive oil was added and gaultherin was substituted for the resorcinol. Results obtained by the latter mixture were so favorable that Professor Dean, president and professor of chemistry in the University of Hawaii, was led to the belief that chaulmoogra oil might contain certain active principles which could be isolated and might be administered with more favorable results.

"The work of Dr. Power of the Welcome research laboratory on the constitution of chaulmoogra oil and its congeners gave some hope of this, for they showed that in this oil there was a new series of fatty acids (chaulmoogric acid and hydrochaulmoogric acid) which differed from other known fatty acids by having the property of rotating a beam of polarized light.

"These acids, however, are solids and hence unsuitable for hypodermic administration. As a result of a series of experiments, Professor Dean determined that the ethyl esters of these acids are thin fluid oils which lend themselves readily to intramuscular injection and are readily absorbed. These ethyl ester derivatives of chaulmoogra oil have now been in use at the United States public health service leprosy investigation station at Kalaupapa in the Hawaiian Islands for some three years and the results have been very encouraging. During that period some 140 lepers have been treated and returned to their families, the disease apparently arrested.

"The effect of this treatment has been so encouraging that now many persons afflicted with leprosy have voluntarily presented themselves for treatment to the public health service in Hawaii, whereas in past years, since the laws of the territorial board of health provided for the segregation of lepers, all persons who were suffering with the disease endeavored to hide from the authorities in order that they might not be separated from their families."

Besides the investigation station at Kalaupapa, the public health service also operates a national leprosy station at Curville, La., which at present houses some 112 lepers. The accommodations are being increased so as to provide for 75 additional beds. The treatment with chaulmoogra oil derivatives has been begun at this institution.

honor and emolument, was revoked, largely through the influence of Madame de Maintenon. This was followed by a terrible persecution, over 100,000 Huguenots being driven out, to carry their industry, wealth and skill to other countries. They went to England, Germany, Switzerland and other parts of Europe. One band emigrated from France to America, settling at Port Royal, S. C., in 1703. Others followed to New York, Massachusetts and other North American colonies.

DRUDGERY REMOVED FROM HOME BY ELECTRIC LIGHT AND POWER

The Ease With Which a House Can Be Lighted Is the Principal Reason That Most People Put Electricity Into Their Homes.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Power on the farm has proved to be one of the greatest time and labor savers the farmer knows. Power in the home is one of the greatest of boons to the busy housewife, but a recent survey made by the United States Department of Agriculture in 10,000 homes in the Northern and Western states discloses the fact that but 15 per cent of the farm homes in the country have this advantage. Power for such frequently recurring tasks as sweeping, running the washing machine and churning would not only remove drudgery but save time and money as well.

The time required to operate the churn, the separator, and the washing machine, and to do the ironing, the cleaning with the vacuum cleaner, and the pumping of water is made available for other things and not infrequently it has been possible to reduce the amount of hired help.

Helps Solve Servant Problem.
Today as never before is the need of labor-saving devices in the home being felt. The servant problem is rapidly becoming more serious. The increasing wages of household servants and washerwomen are approaching a point which the family of average means cannot meet. Through electricity, the tireless servant, is perhaps to be found the solution.

(Comparatively few of our farm homes today have electricity available. The number, however, is increasing rapidly, owing principally to the advent of the small farm lighting power plant. In addition to this means of supply, some farm homes are so situated that electricity can be obtained from high-power transmission lines that pass within a reasonable distance; others are near streams of water which may be developed as sources of energy for farm or community hydro-electric plants; while in some localities successful windmill electric generating plants have been the means of supply. Directions for conducting preliminary surveys to determine the possibilities of a particular stream have been given by the bureau of rural engineering of the United States Department of Agriculture and can be obtained for the asking.

Where farm homes are supplied with electricity from transmission lines, central stations, or farm hydro-electric plants taking current directly from the generator, it is usually supplied at 110 to 115 volts. Windmill electric plants may be of this voltage, but on account of the relatively high battery investment, they are more likely to be of the 30 to 32-volt type. The engine-driven farm lighting and power plants, which are multiplying rapidly at present, are mostly of the 22-volt type; but many of the companies supply these plants operating at 110 volts.

Uses Almost Unlimited.
The uses for electricity, or the tasks to which it can be applied about the farm home, are almost unlimited. The man who may install it primarily for lighting will soon find himself applying it to other tasks, and as he begins to see what it can do for him and the multiplicity of its usefulness becomes apparent he will realize how electricity is each day lessening his labors and making this old world a happier and better place in which to live.

The first thought of electricity is usually for lighting, but it should not be overlooked as a source of power. The utility motor adapts itself wonderfully well to a number of uses, thus saving the expense of installing a separate motor for each job. Several types are available. Sometimes a support rod is attached to the motor base to steady it when in operation. This is a desirable asset.

Then there are the many tasks of the kitchen where a little motor can do in but a fraction of the time consumed by handwork jobs that, though not particularly tiresome, are nevertheless irksome, such as grinding meat and coffee, stuffing sausage, mixing bread, or sharpening knives.

The electric range will be better appreciated as its advantages become better known, and will be used where electric plants of sufficient size to operate a range are available. Many heating units, such as table utensils, fireless cookers, water heaters, griddles and others, are already in use and are proving themselves to be desirable under different conditions. The washing machine, electric motor, vacuum cleaner, sewing-machine motor, and motor-driven pumping units are all helping to make life on the farm more enjoyable and appreciated.

may also be employed. Each tray is made of a rectangular piece of rather heavy galvanized wire netting having four or five meshes to the inch. The finished trays should have approximately the same dimensions as the stove top. The edges are turned up so as to form sides for the tray. Four pieces of wood 1 by 2 inches in thickness form a frame for the drier which may be suspended by wires from the ceiling, or it may stand directly upon the top of the stove. If the slats making up the frame are allowed to extend six inches below the bottom of the lower tray and a good-sized nail is driven half its length into the end of each slat to form nonflammable feet upon which the drier may rest.

Directions for making and using various types of home driers are given in Farmers' Bulletin 884, "Farm and Home Drying of Fruits and Vegetables."

"HEARS THE EAST A-CALLING"

Marine's Reasons for Seeking Transfer to the Orient Prove Truth of Kipling's Statement.

Who says that Kipling didn't speak the mind of the enlisted man when he wrote: "Ship me somewhere east of Suez?" A marine, who put in a long tour of duty in the Orient, recently wrote the editor of this column that he had requested to be transferred out there again. His letter was poetical, but sincere. He wrote in part: "I can see in my mind's eye that old recruiting slogan, 'See the World, and as I hear in my imagination the booming of the surf on those oriental shores and scent the odor of the Celestial heathen, methinks I should like once again to brush elbows with those slant-eyed sons of Confucius.'"—From the Leatherneck.

The Medium's Friend.
Publisher George Noyan of New York was laughing about Conan Doyle's rampant belief in spiritualism. "Toyle's friends poke fun at him," he said, "but he takes it all in good part. At a dinner in Golder's Green, the Greenwich village of London, Doyle's host told to him one evening: 'How will you have your roast beef, Sir Arthur? Underdone or—' 'But here the hostess interrupted: 'It takes no Sherlock Holmes,' she said, 'to tell how he'll have his beef. He'll have it medium, of course.'"

"There is no doubt about it, my friend, we'll have to operate on you," the doctor said cheerfully. "Operate?" the patient exclaimed. "Great Scott, doctor, I've no money for expensive operations." "Hum! Well—you're insured, aren't you?" "Yes, but I can't realize on that until after I'm dead—it goes to my estate." "Oh, that's all right, my dear fellow," the doctor said, again smiling cheerfully. "That's perfectly all right—don't you worry about your bill at all!"—Judge.

The Compass Plant.

On the prairies and plains of Utah, Texas and southern Minnesota there grows a wonderful plant which has proved useful to travelers wandering over these vast tracts of country. It is called the compass plant, or pilot plant, because of a peculiarity in the growth of the leaves, which grow alternately along the stalk, and point precisely north and south! The Indians followed the direction given by these pointing leaves, and told the white men about it. This plant belongs to the family of the Compositae, and looks very much like the sunflower. It has a strong, resinous odor, somewhat like turpentine, and sometimes goes by the name, "turpentine plant."

 worth of Chamberlain's Colic and last summer," she says, "our little boy had dysentery." At that time we were living in the country eight miles from a doctor. Our son was taken ill sud-

 I ever saw. He was in terrible pain all the time and passed from one convulsion into another. I sent my hus-and he began to improve at once. By the time the doctor arrived he was out of danger." Adv.

Hall's Catarrh Medicine

Those who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bores them much more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local disease, it is greatly influenced by constitutional conditions.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is a Tonic and Blood Purifier, and acts through the blood upon the mucous surfaces of the body, thus reducing the inflammation and restoring normal conditions.

All druggists. Circulars free.
