

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE IS SARCASTIC

Says the Sunday Visitors From Cities
Spoil Sabbath In Many Village And Rural Homes.

A recent issue of the Michigan Christian Advocate contained a significant page advertisement as a commentary on the prevailing custom, for which the automobile is said to be largely responsible, of a household of "company" interfering with the Sunday rest and church attendance of many farm and village families. The page advertisement in the Advocate reads:

More Sunday Company Wanted!

(Signed)

The Amalgamated Association of Farmers' Wives.

The only conditions being—

They are to meet us at church time at our church.

They are to bring their dinner, fried chicken preferred.

They are to help fill our home with Sabbath spirit.

In commenting on its stand, the Advocate declares that pastors in country districts have complained that during the summer months their congregations are greatly reduced because the members are at home entertaining company. The Advocate says further:

"It seems that when the farmer goes to town he eats at a cafeteria, but when the city folks visit the farm they expect a chicken dinner with cherry pie.

"Our Sunday guests are powerful influences in the lives of our children, and we have the right to choose the color of the influence, on one day at least. Yet how often our Sunday guests ruin our Sabbath in the home."

The Advocate calls upon "all Christian homes in the rural districts of the state to join in a state-wide strike against the Sunday visitor." The Advocate asks further that all those interested in the proposed "strike" to hang a copy of the "advertisement" in a window of their home as a notice to Sunday company.

An Initiation Ceremony In Papua

CANDIDATES ARE ROUGHLY HANDLED BY GROUPS OF "DEVILS"

PAPUA, or New Guinea, as we have usually been accustomed to call it, though known to the Western world for centuries and settled by Europeans along its sea edges, remains one of the last great fields for the daring explorer. Australia has been considered a continent, its interior is still to a considerable extent a region of mystery. Extreme physical hardships hamper the adventurous traveler there, and many of the natives are still head-hunters and cannibals.

The British, who since the World war possess the entire eastern half of the island, have been the most persistent explorers of Papua and some of them have had remarkable and thrilling experiences there. One of those intrepid Englishmen, E. W. Pearson Channery, is the only white man who ever witnessed the ceremony with which the Manna tribesmen initiate their youths into manhood. And not only that—he was himself initiated into the tribe. Here is the way he tells it:

It was at Kokoda, 2,500 feet above sea level, on the slopes of Mount Victoria, that I first heard the "bullroarer," called "the Voice of the Jungle Spirit" by natives of Papua. I had just returned from a long, arduous expedition in the mountains. Tired and weary by the excessive strain, I was resting on the veranda of the home-made bungalow which served as the residence, when there came suddenly to my ears a succession of ghostly shrieks followed by long-drawn sobs, strangely human yet obviously not human. Then came a series of indescribable blood-curdling sounds which culminated in a pitiful moan. The sounds came from the direction of the Manna villages to which my small camp lay belated. "Manna," I cried to him, "whatever is the?" But he fled from me in terror with his hands over his ears.

For a long time I obtained no information from the other natives on the station. It is the "voice of the demon which dwells in the bush," they said, but beyond that I could learn nothing.

Invited to the ceremony. The villages were only a few moments' walk, so I went for enlightenment. It is good that an officer should know what is happening in his district. I was met on the track by three of the chiefs who, strangely enough, were about to call on me to discuss the very matter I had come to investigate.

"Master," the spokesman began, "many years have passed since the government came to our district, and during all that time our tribe has not been able to prepare its young men for manhood, for the needs of the government have required them to be ever at hand. Since you have been here our people have served you loyally and with confidence. Now we come to ask your permission to hold our sacred ceremonies that our young men may formally enter manhood. In three 'moons' they will be 'men.' May they be free from service for that period?"

"You have permission to do anything that is for the welfare of the tribe so long as it does not conflict with the laws of the government," I replied.

"No white man has ever witnessed our sacred ceremonies, but it would please us to have our master one who knows our customs. Would you be initiated?" they asked.

THE AFTERNOON GOWN—THINGS MADE AT HOME

THE afternoon gown compels more attention from the average woman than almost any other item in her wardrobe, and is therefore the most diversified in its development. Designers present each season several styles, having more or less uniformity; women make their choice of these and proceed to develop this choice along individual lines. They determine the silhouette, the position of the waist line, length of skirt, materials and trimmings to be used and undertake to assemble these essentials of the mode in one garment.

no need for the usual last and rush of shopping.

Between now and the holidays the making of gowns at home is a matter of interest to every member of the family. In the illustration above there are shown several lovely dress accessories that women can make. With the exception of the evening headress they employ ribbons and silks which can be bought everywhere.

A sash of wide satin ribbon is shown at the upper left of the group in which the ribbon is folded for the inal, ingenious and interesting ways. As to the silhouette for this winter, it is not debatable—it is slender, and the waist line is low. Skirts are longer than they were, and one may introduce panels, draperies and tucks, so long as they do not interfere with the straight and narrow path of the silhouette.

The most novel features for this season are to be found in sleeves and collars, but there are several others that must be reckoned with. In the handsome afternoon frock pictured, which might be made of either crepe or charmeuse, the skirt is of the material of the dress and the sleeves are conspicuous, but the most has been made of the new half-hat trimming which outlines the neck and sleeves, forms pointed panels on the skirt and furnishes an embellishment for the front of the bodice. It is one of comparatively few short-sleeved models, giraffe portion and knotted at each side with hanging ends and a loop. Small ribbon flowers are set across the front of the skirt. In order to determine the length required, measure the waist a little below the normal waist line, allow six to eight inches (according to the width of the ribbon) for each foot, and determine the length of the hanging ends—this will depend upon the height of the person who is to wear the sash. A wide giraffe made of narrow pleated ribbon is shown, with ribbon roses and hanging ends as a finish and the skirt made by joining strips of the ribbon in two colors—with herring bone stitch of crepe silk. The handsome shirred dress are made of heavy satin ribbon lined with charmeuse and mounted on colored mountings. They have handles of narrow satin ribbon. The upper part of a doll supports the clever bag reprebut there is a considerable number of afternoon frocks in which shorter sleeves than these are made long by the addition of chiffon sleeves matching the gown in color. Any amount of decoration may be lavished on sleeves, and they reach the apex of their importance in afternoon gowns.

Most women enjoy making pretty, decorative things for their homes, for themselves and for others, and the provide themselves with "pick-up" work which is really a recreation. Some forgetful women arrive at the holiday season well provided with gifts, which they have made during the course of the year, and complacently face Christmas with senting a giraffe lady in silk coat and wide skirt. She is suspended on ribbons fastened under a little bow at her waist in the back. The handsome head dress is merely a band of rhinestone galloon set on a narrow velvet ribbon and supporting a feather which may or may not be ostrich. It could be finished with flowers or a pompon.

GOOD HIGHWAYS

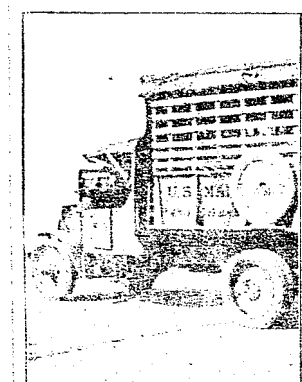

PNEUMATIC TIRES ARE BEST

Cause Least Damage to Road Surface, According to Tests by Bureau of Roads.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Many roads not originally intended to carry heavy traffic were seriously damaged during the period of the war by the impact of heavy motor-trucks. The natural result of this was to warn highway engineers of the importance of planning all future roads with reference to the kind of traffic that is likely to use them. The engineers responded immediately by building thicker roads and roads of more durable material; but in the absence of definite knowledge of the probable strength of the impact they have not known exactly how thick or how strong the roads must be made.

Recent tests of the impact of motor-trucks made by the bureau of public roads, United States Department of Agriculture, develop the facts that when a solid-tired truck strikes a one-inch obstruction, the impact may be as high as seven times the load, an average being about four times.

The tests show, however, that the impact depends largely upon the kind and condition of the tire. Pneumatic tires cause the least damage to the road surface, the cushion of air reducing the impact so that it is seldom greater than 1½ times the static load on the wheels. Although the impact increases with the speed of the truck, and it is therefore highly desirable to limit speed by strict regulation, the use of pneumatic tires would make higher speed permissible.

The tests of the bureau of public roads have pointed the way to more scientific designing of roads for motor-truck traffic, and there is every assurance that engineers will now be able to build roads with practical certainty that they will withstand the blows of heavy vehicles.

Further reassurance in this respect lies in the information that motor-trucks are not building as many roads as formerly. The number of industries in which very large trucks can be kept continuously working is extremely limited, so that the likelihood of forthcoming motor-truck damage to public highways is considerably reduced.

GOOD HIGHWAYS ARE COMING

Federal, State and Local Authorities Join Hands for Great Good Roads Campaign.

The federal government, the state governments, and the local authorities have joined hands for the greatest good-roads campaign that has ever been undertaken anywhere in the world.

We are told that during the next five years there will be at the disposal of the state highway departments a grand total of not less than $3,000,000,000. No fewer than 22 great national highways are under construction or planned for early development.

The aggregate projects call for the expenditure of $200,000,000 during the present year.

The AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

LEGION IN LOAN BUSINESS

Fargo, N. D. Post Adjutant Works Out Plan for the Benefit of His Buddies.

The first instance in which the American Legion has gone into the trust, savings and loan business is reported from Fargo, N. D.

To encourage thrift and to help the needy, the post, on January 1, 1921, instituted an American Legion Loan Association. Plans worked out by Arthur F. Collins, post adjutant. Four hundred of the post's 700 members already have deposited sums from $5 to $25 on which five per cent interest is paid. A Legion man wishing to borrow assigns his state compensation claim to the Legion—it will require eight years for North Dakota to pay all service men the bonus awarded them. The borrower may obtain up to 50 per cent of the amount to be awarded him by the state. He pays interest at 8 per cent.

Business is transacted through a Fargo bank. To date more than fifty loans have been made and more than $20,000 has been paid into the savings fund. A dividend is paid semi-annually to depositors. Immediately upon being granted a loan, the person to whom it is made must open a savings account to insure proper expenditure of the money. Legion posts in many states have written the Fargo post for information upon which to base a similar system.

THINK HE WILL BE GOVERNOR

People of Washington State See Bright Future for Their Soldier Lieutenant-Governor.

"He's just naturally lucky," the people of Washington say of William Jennings Coyle, their lieutenant-governor, who they claim, is the youngest man in the world holding that office.

Coyle has been a "natural athlete" since kindergarten days. For four years he was All-Ireland's quarterback on the famous University of Washington team, he pitched and headed for the vastly baseball team and he was a star hurdler. Following graduation he was a reading clerk in three sessions of the Washington legislature.

During the war, he claims, his luck held. He was promoted from second lieutenant to captain for bravery, was wounded in the Argentine while serving with the 324th Infantry, and was awarded a Distinguished Service Cross for gallantry. He is 29 years old, the father of two girls and sells farm tractors when not occupied with his official duties as lieutenant-governor. The people of Washington declare he will be lucky enough to be the youngest governor in the United States after next election.

PROBLEMS OF THE NAVY MEN

Conference of Legion Committee to Devise Ways for Benefit of Members of Branch.

Problems of the navy men who are members of the American Legion and policies affecting naval ex-service men generally will be discussed at a conference of the naval affairs committee of the Legion in Chicago this fall. The meeting has been called by Edward E. Spafford, New York, chairman of the committee, who will announce the date of the conference later.

The fact that there were eight times as many men in the army as there were in the navy during the World war has tended to minimize the needs of the navy ex-service men. Mr. Spafford declared in announcing the conference, "Few persons know of the high percentage of tubercular cases developed by men in the submarine and submarine service, for instance."

The members of the committee, besides Mr. Spafford, are Benjamin Brisson, Michigan; Edw. H. Triscon, Maryland; Claudius G. Pendell, Wisconsin; Fred A. Tullman, California, and C. W. Neville, Jr., Louisiana. The members ranged in rank from lieutenant commander to petty officer.

Legionnaires Respond. When a post of the American Legion in Jackson, Miss., asked for volunteers to save the life of Weldon A. Crawford, overseas veteran, by blood transfusion, 12 legionnaires responded. Crawford, seriously injured in a street car accident, is recovering.

One Point Ahead.

In a local office there is a new manager—a bachelor and much sought after by all the girls who work there. But one has been more successful in winning his attentions than the others and naturally they are extremely jealous, one particularly who started to hunt the popular one the other morning. She came in, her face wearing an enigmatic smile. "I just let Mr. N— is going to get married," she began. "I had a dream about him last night which means marriage. He had some flowers and—"

"Why, he did have flowers last night," interrupted the pretty one. "He was taking them to me. They're on my desk now and—"

And there was absolute silence in that office while the other girls flew to their work. Indianapolis News.

A Big Ticker. London people like to keep their clocks and watches with "Big Ben" because it is the accurate timepiece of Great Britain. It is also the largest clock in the world. It is wound by machinery which looks powerful enough to drive a steamship, and it takes two men several hours three times a week to wind it up and keep it in order. The hour figures are two feet long on the dial of Big Ben. Its hour hand is made of gunmetal and its minute hand, which is 11 feet long, is of copper. The pendulum of Big Ben weighs 700 pounds and is 12 feet long.

Catarhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. Catarrhal Deafness requires constitutional treatment. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflammation of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you hear a ringing sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced, your hearing will never be restored. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the blood on the mucous surface of the tube, thus reducing the inflammation and restoring normal conditions.
