

BOARD OF COMMERCE IS ORGANIZED

Constitution and By-Laws Signed By
Sixty-Five Members Last Evening
And Officers Elected.

Chelsea's new Board of Commerce was organized last evening at the American Legion club rooms, and started out with an initial membership of 65 who signed the constitution and by-laws. The initial dues were placed at one dollar, and all who joined paid on the spot.

The constitution and by-laws adopted were those of the old Chelsea Businessmen's association with necessary changes, the idea being to make the new organization a community affair. The following directors were elected:

Elect Board of Directors.

To serve until the first annual meeting on the second Tuesday in April, H. H. Fenn, H. J. Dancer, R. D. Walker, G. P. Staffan; to serve until the second annual meeting, Ford Axtell, Howard Holmes, Conrad Lehman, J. W. Scheek; to serve until the third annual meeting, Ellsworth Hoppe, P. G. Schaible, Herbert Snyder, Jacob Hummel.

Then followed a general discussion resulting in motions, which were supported and carried, as follows:

That committees of three each be appointed on drains and sewerage, good roads, and manufacturing industries. It was decided that regular meetings will be held the first Thursday evening of each month, but the meeting last evening was adjourned to meet next Thursday evening at the American Legion rooms.

Following the meeting the board of directors organized as follows: President, Herman J. Dancer; vice president, Conrad Lehman; treasurer, P. G. Schaible; temporary secretary, Ford Axtell.

H. H. Fenn was appointed chairman of a committee on membership and several additional members were added this morning. It is thought that the membership will exceed one hundred before the meeting next week.

A committee on playgrounds and an athletic field will be appointed also as a result of a discussion by the board of directors.

SIMPLE CURE RHEUMATISM.

Theodore Reimenschneider of West Sylvan believes he has found a simple cure for rheumatism, with which he had been afflicted for months, and from which he has found relief during the past week.

A friend in Manchester advised him to drink hot lemonade, at least three times a day, and he started to do so last Saturday. He says the results have been surprising, and that he has done more work during the past few days than he has been able to do in weeks previously.

Mr. Reimenschneider thinks the hot lemonade has done wonders for him and is anxious to pass the remedy along to other victims of rheumatism.

HOLMES & WALKER

THOR-25 ELECTRIC WASHER

The Thor-25 Washer will be welcomed with grateful enthusiasm by the woman who still prefers to do her own washing; also by the woman who has a reliable laundress or maid. A laundress can do more than twice as much in a day with a Thor—with less than half the effort, and but a fraction of the expense of the washboard method.

The Thor not only washes clothes but also wrings them by electricity. There's nothing left to do but feed the clothes through.

The cylinder is perfectly smooth on the inside. The finest lingerie, or heavy blankets may be washed without the slightest injury. Each cylinder is fashioned from specially selected white maple and the longer the cylinder is used the smoother it wears. It develops no sharp edges—it cannot be dented and is therefore durable and lasting. Nor is it necessary to remove the cylinder to clean it. When through washing, simply let the cylinder run in clean water for a few revolutions and it will clean itself without scouring.

The Thor Washer has no troublesome belts or pulleys to get out of order, having what is known as direct shaft drive, with all moving parts enclosed to insure absolute safety.

DARLING BABY BRIGHTENS HOME

Children's Laughter a Pleasing Sound

Altoona, Pa.—"I am writing to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. We had six children die almost at birth. From one hour to nineteen days in all they have lived. Before my next one was born I took a dozen bottles of your Vegetable Compound, and I can say that it is the greatest medicine on earth, for this baby is now four months old, and a healthier baby you would not want. I am sending you a picture of her. Everybody says 'That is a very healthy looking baby.' You have my consent to show these few lines to anybody."—Mrs. C. W. Benz, 131 3rd Avenue, Altoona, Pa.

Mrs. Janssen's experience of interest to childless wives. Milston, Wis.—"I want to give you a word of praise for your wonderful medicine. We are fond of children, and for a considerable time after we were married I feared I would not have any. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it strengthened me so I now have a nice, strong, healthy baby girl. I suffered very little at childbirth and I give all the credit to your medicine, and shall always recommend it highly."—Mrs. H. H. JANSSEN, Milston, Wis.

Mrs. Held of Marinette, Wis., adds her testimonial for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She says:

Marinette, Wis.—"I was in a nervous condition and very irregular. My doctor advised an operation. My husband brought me one of your booklets and asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It overcame my weakness so that I now have a healthy baby girl after having been married nine years. I am glad to recommend your medicine, and you may use my letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. H. H. HELD, 330 Jefferson St., Marinette, Wis.

There are many, many such homes that were once childless, and are now blessed with healthy, happy children because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored the mother to a strong and healthy condition, as it acts as a natural restorative for ailments as indicated by backache, irregularities, displacements, weakness and nervousness.

Women everywhere should remember that most of the commoner ailments of women are not the surgical ones—they are not caused by serious displacements or growths, although the symptoms may be the same, and that is why so many apparently serious ailments readily yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it acts as a natural restorative. It can be taken with perfect safety and often prevents serious troubles.

Therefore if you know of any woman who is suffering and has been unable to secure relief and is regretfully looking forward to a childless old age, ask her to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it has brought health and happiness into so many homes once darkened by illness and despair.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent to you free upon request. Write to The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

An attendant at a certain institute for the deaf and dumb was undergoing a post-mortem examination of the hands of a female visitor. "But how do you sign these penicillines to church?" she asked finally with what was meant to be a playing glance at the inmates bearing by.

"By ringing the dumb-bells, madam," retorted the exasperated attendant.

I stood irresolute, undecided as to my next move. I felt convinced I was at last on the right trail but how could I verify my suspicion? There seemed to be but one sure method. Whoever had actually committed the murder and robbery, I still clung to the theory that Ivan Waldron knew him, and would demand his share as the price of a silent tongue. Nor would he, under present circumstances, be content to wait very long for such a division. He needed the money more than ever to escape from the observation of the police. If Wine had possession of the value he would certainly be called upon to deliver a portion of its contents very shortly. My best course, then, was to keep an eye open for Waldron; if he came, there would be no doubt as to the exact nature of his errand.

The stairway gave me no advantage; it was open and doubtless frequently used. To be seen loitering there for any length of time would attract attention. I ventured to try the private door, but, as expected, found it securely locked, nor did I dare exert any force, not knowing who might be inside. The office remained quiet, no one either leaving or entering, nor did I observe any shadow on the frosted glass indicative of movement within. Baffled and uncertain, I had barely returned to my point of concealment, when an elevator stopped at this floor level, and three men stepped out into the corridor. Two of them attracted no attention, but the third was in his shirt-sleeves and wore a cup with some insignia upon it. He advanced briskly, and flung open the door leading into what had once been the "Railway Exchange," and motioned the others to enter. As the three vanished, I heard him explain that this was the only vacant suite on this floor, and then another voice said, dissatisfied, that it was altogether too small for their purpose. When they came out the agent closed the door carelessly and pressed the elevator button, saying he would show them something on the second floor.

Even as they shot up out of sight I was across the corridor with hand on the knob. I feared a springlock, but was pleasantly disappointed, the door opening instantly, permitting me to slip inside. There were two rooms, both small, and littered with the fragments left by the late occupants. What struck me forcibly was that there was no connection between those rooms and the next suite; they were separated by a thick wall. I could hide here securely enough, and by slightly lifting the glass, gain good view of the corridor, but it would be impossible to overhear anything taking place in Wine's office. At that, the position was better for my purpose than the open stairway, and I unfastened the window sash, propping it open a crack so as to afford me a fair view. If Waldron appeared I would endeavor to discover some means of learning the object of his visit. Meanwhile I was safe enough, and able to observe every movement on the floor.

Suddenly, when I least expected it, the door of the investment office opened, and a young woman came out. She had her hat on, and I took note of a pencil stuck into her hair, and felt no doubt she was Wine's stenographer, who had finished her day's work and was departing for home. Then the man was probably still there—alone. The girl disappeared down the elevator, and could scarcely have reached the lower floor, when a cage traveling in the opposite direction stopped and discharged a passenger. It was a woman who stepped out, glancing quickly about as she recognized uncertain where to go, and I recognized Marie Gessler.

She started down the corridor, looking for the numbers on the doors, and then, discovering herself wrong, retraced her steps and approached Wine's door. Even then she appeared to doubt her next move, glancing around as though anxious to remain unobserved before venturing farther. Then, opening the door quickly, she disappeared within. In that moment, before the door closed, I caught the sound of a man's voice, startled, uttering a single surprised exclamation.

"You here? What does this mean?" Then a low spoken answer, the words inaudible, and ended by a click of the latch. That closed door seemed to urge me to learn what was transpiring beyond; I could not fight back the temptation. But would it open? had it been left unlocked? The only way in which I could ascertain was to try. There was no one to witness my attempt, and, even if some office door suddenly opened, I could quickly find concealment in the nearby stairway. I crept out through a narrow crack, and approached on tip-toe the entrance to Wine's office. No sound reached me from within, and my fingers silently pressed the knob, which turned without resistance; the latch was off. A half inch at a time I opened the door, listening for any noise behind, my eyes peering through the narrow crack at what was revealed within. They perceived little, merely a small, unoccupied room, evidently an outer office, containing a cheap desk, two chairs and a typewriter stand, the machine covered. Two maps hung upon the walls; in one corner was a glass water-holder, and in the other a diminutive closet, the door ajar. That was all, except that indistinguishable voices were conversing somewhere beyond the partition and well out of view.

Encouraged to believe this I thrust my head far enough forward to make sure. A step to the left would doubtless have revealed Wine, but from where I stood the end of the partition interfered, by slipping to the right it would be quite possible for me to enter without being seen, and three cautious steps would bring me to the security of the closet. From there, with the door into the corridor closed, I might overhear all that passed beyond the two. I had ventured too far now to retreat, and, without a second of hesitation, I pressed through the narrow opening, and silently closed the door behind me. Confident that I had not been detected, I crouched into the narrow closet, scarcely knowing whether to be ashamed or proud of my success.

I could clearly distinguish the words of conversation. At first these were hardly understandable, seemingly having no connection with any matter with which I felt concerned. The two were evidently discussing money, to be sure, but in terms involving the payment of interest, and the impossibility of extending a loan. I overheard her say, quietly but firmly:

"I came to you, Mr. Wine, because of our connection in other matters. I overheard this discussion, and felt you ought to be forewarned."

"I appreciate your kindness," he answered, evidently surprised, "but simply cannot raise the amount today—it is too late."

"It does not have to be raised today, but before the closing of banking hours tomorrow."

"I can have it by then," desperately.

"I was sure you could, if I only explained the necessity."

She arose as though her purpose had been accomplished, but apparently the man was uneasy, and desired to know more.

"But I fail to understand your interest; why should you take the trouble to come here and tell me this?"

She laughed lightly.

"Why? really it is easily enough understood. We are together, are we not? Now that Captain Alva is dead, it is generally believed you will be selected to lead in this work. Oh, yes it is; I have already been so informed. And in that case it is absolutely necessary that your bank connections be excellent. There are other funds already in this country."

"Other funds? I supposed this last payment was to be all."

"Assuredly not; the cause cannot stop for an instant merely because of this loss. Moreover, that will doubtless be recovered."

"Do you think so? Have the police found any clues?"

"The police! Hardly, but there are others searching, not so easily turned aside. We believe we know already who got the money."

"You—you think you—know?" he could not keep the tremble out of his voice. "Was—it one of us?"

"It could scarcely be an outsider, for the secret was guarded well. Only those of that circle knew the money was here even, while not more than two or three were aware of its having been passed over to Alva. I can't say any more at present, Mr. Wine. You knew Captain Alva very well, did you not?"

"Yes; that is, we were good friends. We had much in common."

"Are you German?"

"By blood—yes, but born in Poland; Captain Alva's mother was also a Pole; this brought us closer together."

"And you have no suspicion of any one who could have known, and been guilty of this murder and robbery?"

"Why should I? Why you ask me that?" excitedly. "There were many there; perhaps all knew except me. You not suppose I know—he die?"

"Oh, no; I merely thought you might have some suspicion, that was all. It was a strange weapon he was killed with."

"A strange weapon? What you mean, a strange weapon? Do they know what it was that killed him?"

"Certainly! It was picked up in the bottom of the auto—a dagger hidden, such as women wear. See, it was just like this of mine."

She must have picked the ornament from out her own hat and laid it on the desk, for I heard the faint click of its fall. There was a moment of intense silence, and I could vision the intense horror with which he was staring at the instrument, unable to command words.

"That thing!" he burst forth finally. "Killed with that?"

"No, not that; but one exactly like it."

"Who says so—the police? Gott! It could not kill a man. Why you tell me this—why?"

"Oh, only because I thought you might be interested. However, let's not talk about it any more. You will settle that account before the close of banking hours tomorrow?"

"? Yes, I will settle."

There was the sound of a foot on the cement floor of the corridor without, and almost at the same instant the electric light, which had been turned on, revealed a man's shadow on the glass of the closed door. He seemed to stand there hesitatingly; then he rapped with his knuckles on the glass.

I flattened myself out against the inner wall of the closet, aware that the two in the second office were coming forward together, Wine giving vent to a startled oath in his excitement. He strode straight to the door, and opened it with a jerk.

"You here? What the devil do you want here?"

"A word with you, and a—quick!"

It was Waldron's voice, but his speech ended abruptly, as his eyes caught sight of the woman. She waited no time.

"I was just going," she said calmly, ignoring him, but speaking directly to Wine. "I will see you tomorrow then."

She passed between the two, without so much as favoring the Russian with a glance, and he stared after her with open mouth, then stepped back to watch her progress down the corridor. Wine drew him hastily aside, closing the door tightly and shooting the night-latch.

"The d—n girl never locks this door when she goes out," he muttered angrily, wheeling about to face the other. "Now, speak up, will you! what sends you butting in here?"

"Well, first you tell me," thundered Waldron, gripping the other angrily with one hand, "what business that female has with you? By God, Wine, if you are trying to double-cross, you'll find me no easy mark. Answer, you cur—what was she here for?"

"Nothing, only private business."

"You promised to see her tomorrow?"

"Yes, it was to pay a note. Come in here, and I'll explain all. There's nothing to frighten you, Waldron."

The two disappeared into the inner room, Waldron's voice still rumbling, with Wine interjecting a word now and then. I ventured to stand erect again in the confines of the closet, and press my ear to the crack of the inner door. Both men were confident of being alone, and so deeply immersed in their own affair as to speak with little restraint. Waldron, really frightened at this discovery of Alva's tresser, adopted the method of a bully to carry his point, more eager than ever to escape the city.

"Well," he began, thumping the desk with a fist, "now you begin to spill. Don't try to work any game on me. What do you mean by paying a note? You owe her something?"

"No; now listen, and don't get mad. I tell you just how it was," and Wine endeavored to be smooth and plausible, his voice pitched so low I had difficulty in hearing the words. "She said I was to succeed Alva, and be the revolutionary agent; partly she came to tell me this, but some way she learning of my indebtedness, that I have an overdue note at the bank."

"How the d—n did she know that?"

"I could not tell," apparently surprised himself. "I never asked, but maybe Krantz told her. When they talked over my being given charge of the fund—yes, that must be the way, for she insisted I must straighten that matter up quick, he fore other money was given me."

MOTHER, QUICK! GIVE CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP FOR CHILD'S BOWELS

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, a teaspoonful will never fail to open the bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste from the tender, little bowels and gives you a well, playful child again.

PUT MUCH FAITH IN ACORN

In England It Is Looked Upon as Protector Against Lightning, and as Love Charm.

From Druidical times the acorn has been held to be a sure protection against lightning, as the tops of many flagstaffs, the end of coracle poles, umbrella tassels and blindcords still attest. Even to this day, in English rural districts, when a thunderstorm threatens, farm-laborers and others will tie them to the nearest oak tree, gather an acorn and carry it about with them till the sky clears. In many parts of Great Britain a girl filled by her lover will seek by the light of the moon for a dried acorn beneath an oak tree. This she will burn at midnight in a candle flame, reciting meanwhile the following doggerel: "Tis not this acorn I would burn, but my true love's heart that I would turn. May he no joy nor profit see, till he comes back again to me." Welsh peasants hold that to plant an acorn brings lifelong good luck; a simple way, one would imagine, to insure one's future success. The resultant sapling, however, must on no account be transplanted. If this is done, most terrible things are bound to happen.

Why should you follow a crooked path?

Often a cowpath has been allowed to become a village street, and as the village expanded, tradition has made the winding way an expression of a cow's will.

Habit is always forging chains to enslave us, so that what has been found bearable by the fathers is accepted by the sons.

Who cannot recall the coffee-pot Mother put on the stove early in the morning, warning us not to let it boil over?

As children, we were not permitted to drink tea or coffee, because it would stunt our growth or make us nervous and irritable. When older, however, we craved a hot drink with meals, and custom gave us our tea or coffee.

Finally upon the instructions of the doctor, Mother gave up her tea and coffee. But that meant nothing in our young lives. Our vitality was then strong enough to throw off any ill effects.

But our time came, and we learned by experience that we could not drink tea or coffee. When we had it for breakfast it put our nerves on edge. When we drank it at the evening meal, we tossed about in wakefulness most of the night.

And then we found Postum, a pure cereal beverage, free from the harmful drug, caffeine, in tea and coffee. We liked the rich, satisfying flavor of Postum—and also the better health which resulted. And, too, we were surprised to find how many of our neighbors had made the same discovery—had learned the value of "health first."

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in the made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes. Sold by all grocers.

According to University Authority, the Next Generation Need Not Worry About Its Food.

Miss Lillian Herman of the University of Michigan is an authority on chemical analysis. Addressing the Hyerson library class at Grand Rapids recently she said the time is coming when a man, becoming hungry, will simply take a shovel and go into his yard and get a shovelful of dirt, take it into his private laboratory, put it into the family "hopper," pour in concentrated essence of sunshine, turn a crank, and then go around to the other side and wait by the spout to catch his eggs, tomatoes, cucumbers or radishes, whatever he desires.

This food, she said, will come out in the form of small lozenges, concentrated and convenient. A chemical analysis of them will show they contain all the ingredients of our vegetables, and will also have the same taste.

Miss Herman believes that the next generation will see the start of it and that the following generation will use it habitually.

MAKING SPACE IN KITCHEN

Ingenious Arrangement of Requisite Furnishings Does Away With Necessity for Large Room.

In these days when rents are so high people are commonly obliged to economize space as much as possible, the family kitchen may be no more than a closet ingeniously fitted with a gas range and other essentials. Couches convertible into beds and other clever contrivances useful for more than one purpose are at a premium. The newest invention in this line, patented by a resident of South Chicago is an arrangement whereby chairs, when not in use, may be folded and stowed beneath a table. Each chair, attached by a bracket to the inner side of a table may be slid out on a rod to a comfortable sitting distance, a slot in the rod enabling this to be done, whereupon a thumb-screw makes it fast. When it is desired to get the chair out of the way, its back is folded down, the screw is loosened and the chair, after being slid inward along the slot, is turned flatly over the rod being pivoted at the bracket. This accomplished (it takes but a moment), the chair rests on its feet beneath the table facing the opposite way. A reversal of the process brings the chair into view again.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Simple Explanation.

Mary and her cousin Susan were placed in a room by themselves to play with their dolls and picture books. For half an hour all went well, then there was a sound of lamentation. Mary's mother opened the door to learn what the trouble was and found Susan seated on the floor loudly proclaiming her grief to the ceiling while Mary, leaning on her elbows, chin resting on her hands, was gazing nonchalantly into the back yard.

"Now, what's the matter?" mother asked.

"Well," answered Mary, turning her face toward her mother "both of us wanted to look out at the day, and both of us couldn't."

Mental Endurance.

"Didn't some of our greatest statesmen study far into the night by fire light or a tallow candle?"

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "But that's no reason for expecting me to attend night sessions. I regard regular study as easy work compared to following with close, intelligent attention the speeches some of my colleagues are liable to make."

Lemon Juice Now Powdered.

One of the newest fruit products is powdered lemon juice. It is pure juice reduced to a perfectly soluble powder. The process is said to be an adaptation of the well-known spray method of reducing milk to powdered form.

MR. BOWSER STARTS REFORM

But It Is Worse Than the Evil He Would Cure.

By M. QUAD.

(Copyright, 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Nothing so irritates Mr. Bowser as to have the front peddlers go up and down, in front of his house, yelling their wares, and, on many occasions, he has gone out and quarreled with them, but he has found them obtaining their rights, their licenses from the city permitting them to yell.

The other night, as Mrs. Bowser sat reading, a vegetable peddler stopped at his gate and kept calling out, for five long minutes. He had a voice like a hand-saw trying to saw a spike in two, and it must have made other people nervous. Mrs. Bowser feared that there would be a riot, and she began to drum on the piano, to distract Mr. Bowser's attention. It was in vain, however. He rose up with the exclamation:

"By thunder, woman, do you think I am going to stand that?"

"He will go home, presently," answered Mrs. Bowser, drumming louder than before.

"Stop that infernal racket! Isn't it bad enough to hear that fellow yell? I am going out and kill him. He is the one of all the ones who make this trouble. Just listen to his voice! Why, it would scare a baby to death!"

"Mr. Bowser, just wait one minute and he will drive on."

"I won't wait one blasted second! Don't you come out and mix in! There will be gore flying around, and I may also tip his wagon over and kill his horse!"

Mr. Bowser rushed down the hall and out of doors. He was bare-headed and wore his dressing gown. The peddler had not moved on. He was not going to. He sat there in his seat in a comfortable position, and he was going to yell as long as he wanted to. He saw Mr. Bowser coming out, and he called and he shouted:

"I have got them! Do you want some string beans? They are on a string! I have onions and potatoes and cucumbers! I have some of the nicest celery here that a king ever chewed on! Oh—oh—oh! Come and buy!"

Mr. Bowser came! And he had ground glass in his voice, as he said: "Look here, old fellow, you want to quit this! If you don't, I am going to murder you!"

"Say, old party, what ails you?"

"I'll show you what ails me! If you holler again, there'll be bloodshed!"

"Come, now, but I got to holler, or the folks won't know I am here. You wouldn't have known I was here. I am only making my living and you shouldn't object. Is it my voice you complain of?"

"Of course I complain about it!" answered Mr. Bowser. "It is the worst voice in the United States!"

"I'll tell you what is the trouble with my voice, Mr. Bowser, for, you see, I know you. I was fool enough to let five dollars that I could put a billiard ball in my mouth, I put it there, but I could not get it out again. The doctors worked at me for two days, and they knocked out most of my teeth. They finally had to get a stick and punch the ball down my throat. It is lodged right at the base of my throat and that's what the trouble is with my tones. I know that some folks don't like to hear me, but what am I to do? I have a wife and five children to support, and you should pity me, instead of thirsting for my life."

Mr. Bowser lost a good part of his anger, and after a moment's thought, he said:

"Look here, now, I will tell you what to do. There is no need of all this yelling. You just come to the house, in a quiet and decent way, and ask if we will buy it and your stuff. If we do, we will buy it and so will other people. We must have reform in this thing, and that is the way to bring it about. Don't you see yourself that it is?"

"Why, yes, that seems a good plan," answered the peddler, and he drove off without any more yelling. Mr. Bowser reentered the house, to be met by Mrs. Bowser; and, though she smiled to herself as one who doubts, she told him that his plan would probably work.

On the next evening at about the same hour, there was a ring at the door bell. Mr. Bowser answered it himself, and there stood his peddler of the night before—the man with the awful voice. He was surrounded with baskets of vegetables, and in almost a whisper, he said:

"Mr. Bowser, I have come to try your way. Do you want any onions, carrots, turnips, beans, peas or cucumbers?"

"No, sir," was the prompt reply. "That is all right, Mr. Bowser. If I have disturbed you in any way, I beg your pardon. Good-night, Mr. Bowser—good-night."

"That fellow has got more sense than I thought he had," said Mr. Bowser, as he returned to his paper. "This street ought to be thankful to me for working this great reform!"

The reform began to die almost as soon as it was born. There was another ring at the bell. Mr. Bowser opened the door to find a second peddler, and when he had gruffly asked what the fellow wanted, he was answered with:

"Mr. Bowser, I am told you don't like our hollering, and so we ain't going to holler no more. I have called to see if you wanted any vegetables. I have a load of them out here, and I warrant them fresh and sweet. Being as the hour is late, and I want to get home—"

"Well, you can go right home," interrupted Mr. Bowser, as he slammed the door, and he returned to Mrs. Bowser, muttering something about infernal impudence, to which she replied:

"Don't be so impatient; your reform seems to be working."

In about 15 minutes there was a third ring and a third peddler stood at the door and softly said:

"Mr. Bowser, are you in want of some nice vegetables? I have some beauties out here, and there is a bargain in every bunch of them. I have some tomatoes here almost as big as your fist, and they taste better than oranges. If you want sugar beets—"

"I want you to beat it," shouted Mr. Bowser, "and don't you ever come here again!"

"Just as you say, old man," quietly replied the peddler. "If I have put you out any, you must pardon me."

When Mr. Bowser returned to the sitting room this time, he found Mrs. Bowser trying hard to keep a sober face, and he shouted at her:

"Oh, it's very funny, is it? Well, I'll show you whether it's funny or not! If another peddler calls, he shall die right on our door step!"

No other peddler called. After a lapse of a few minutes the telephone bell rang, and Mr. Bowser responded with a "hello" to hear a voice saying:

"Mr. Bowser, I beg your pardon for disturbing you. Do you want some string beans for your dinner tomorrow? I have other things. I have some of the best potatoes you ever put your tooth in, and I'll give you a big bargain if you want a quart or two."

"You infernal rascal!" yelled Mr. Bowser, as he hung up the receiver. Within the hour there were four more calls, and then Mr. Bowser put on his hat and left the house, hoping to find someone and wash his hands in human blood.

And when he was gone, Mrs. Bowser had the laughing hysterics.

The Graphite Industry.

In the island of Ceylon graphite is found in greater abundance than in any similar sized area in the world. The soil and rocks of Ceylon are almost everywhere impregnated with graphite, so that it may be seen covering the surface in the drains after a rain. The supply is practically inexhaustible. The peculiarity of Ceylon graphite is its remarkable purity. Another source of graphite is China. The graphite found there being classified as scaly, fibrous, foliated and earthy, the first two classifications containing over 90 per cent carbon. In China, graphite is found in several localities.—Scientific American.

Laugh at First Phone.

The telephone was born from the brain of an American but 45 years ago, the first instrument being a sort of crude harmonica, with a clock spring reel, a magnet and a wire.

The first time it "talked" was on March 10, 1876; capitalists laughed at it and refused for several years to take the "scientific toy." The period of experiment did not end until 1881 and the country's greatest wire system has really existed only since 1884.

The AMERICAN LEGION

WHISTLE BROUGHT HIM FAME

Restaurant Cook, Harry Keynton Jones, Famous as Author of "Rose of No Man's Land."

From out the bustling kitchen of a popular summer resort restaurant near St. Paul, Minn., there issued during the vacation season blaring songs and whistled ditties that sounded so familiar that American Legion service men of the World War decided to investigate. They found the musician to be one Harry Keynton Jones, a five-foot-one Cockney, also the restaurant cook.

Jones began his musical career as chef of a Winnipeg grenadier regiment during the war. Later he landed the private skillet of Gen. Sir Julian Byng at Vimy Ridge, and more important than that, he wrote "Rose of No Man's Land," the war song that had a long run of popularity. A penny whistle which he bought and played for the prime purpose of amusing his kitchen police caused his rise to music fame, he declared.

In France he was transferred to the officers' mess. There Lieutenant Colonel McKee, who later wrote "In Flanders Fields," heard the penny whistling, and the two became friends. Some time afterward they together turned out the words and music of the No Man's Land song.

Jones, wounded at Cambrai, was invalided back to Canada. After his discharge from the hospital he began a sightseeing tour of the states, depending upon his cooking ability for ready employment. He now has a song with a New York publisher which he hopes to put forth soon.

HEADS WAR DISABLED SCHOOL

Dr. Arthur Davis Dean, Veteran of the World War and Educator of Wide Experience.

Dr. Arthur Davis Dean, recently chosen by the government as school superintendent of all America's war disabled, is himself a veteran of the World War as well as an educator of wide experience and a specialist in vocational training.

During the war, Dr. Dean, a major in the sanitary corps, worked on the physical and mental rehabilitation of the sick and wounded as they were returned to the United States in almost all the large government hospitals of the country. With nine years' experience in vocational education in Teachers' college, Columbia university, he directed the New York state prison system in 1919 and investigated the possibilities of industrial and agricultural education in Porto Rico for the insular government.

Dr. Dean was born Sept. 15, 1872, at Cambridge, Mass., and was educated at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is a member of Columbia university post of the American Legion.

ONE-ARMED VET ALMOST WON

Ernest Mastros, Second in Swimming Race; Wounded Buddy Winner and Third in Sprint.

The throng of spectators who watched the finish of an exciting sprint during a swimming meet in Madison Square Garden, New York, recently, vigorously applauded the efforts of Ernest Mastros, a little chap who brought up in second place. Their enthusiasm was heightened when the race had finished and they saw Mastros as he was climbing out of the big tank. He had lost his left arm, serving with the American forces in France, and he all but won the event by the sole power of his good right and his abundance of gameness.

However, the winner of the race, William McIntyre, also was wounded in France, the surprised crowd learned later, as was Harold E. Taylor, who finished a close third in the same match. The trio of wounded war veterans are members of the Metropolitan Life post of the American Legion, formed of men and women employees of the life insurance company who served during the World War.

HOME TOWN PAPER WEEK.

People of the United States will be afforded an opportunity during the week of November 5th to 12th to express in concrete form their gratitude to those men and women, who through sunshine and rain, prosperity and adversity, persistently and consistently sing the song of the home town. The time long since passed when newspapers, whether daily or weekly, can subsist on the "taking it for granted" spirit of its patrons and well wishers. Costs of producing newspapers today have not decreased in anything like the proportion experienced in other lines and figures quoted recently by daily and weekly newspapers through the country have given the public a glimpse into the expense incidental to conducting the home paper.

To the newspaper men and women of each community has fallen the task of presenting the current events of a fast-moving world in accordance with the modern ideas, more or less extravagant, and keeping a smiling countenance and a courageous heart when others are prone to talk "hard times." Their loyalty to the state and their community has undergone a severe test but they met it with optimism and only a little reflection is required to show how much worse conditions might have been before the turn in the road was reached, had they pursued a different course.

Advertisers had to keep advertising whether they could pay promptly or not and business had to keep going for the general good. The publishers and editors did their part and the several weeks in November is proclaimed a time when those who benefited by this policy express it in terms of support that will insure the future of the small town paper, the backbone of every community that has the semblance of pride in itself and its neighbors.—St. Louis City Argus-Leader.

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS
 is greatly relieved by constitutional treatment. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced, your hearing may be destroyed forever. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the blood and the mucous surfaces of the system, thus reducing the inflammation and assisting Nature in restoring normal conditions.

Clears free. All Druggists.
