

ROAD CONCRETING FINISHED SATURDAY

Cement-Asphalt Surfaced Highway
Now Extends Detroit to Jackson.
Race With Weather.

Concrete work on the federal aid road, known locally as the Territorial road, was completed Saturday when the gap near the Spencer farm, five miles west of Chelsea, was closed. A cement surfaced highway now extends from Detroit to Jackson, excepting a few miles of gravel between Ypsilanti and Ann Arbor. Between Ann Arbor and Jackson the cement will be surfaced with asphalt, and the asphalt gang is now working this side of Lima Center.

Grading work on the Washenaw and Jackson portion of the road was started about two years ago near the Rank farm on the county line. The grading was all done by the fall of 1920, and a start was made on the concrete work, but only a comparatively small amount was laid last fall. This year the concreting work has gone forward rapidly, practically the entire mileage being laid this summer.

The snow of two weeks ago halted the work for about a week, leaving a gap of about 1300 feet to be completed, and this was finished Saturday.

A Race With Weather.
Work was resumed last Wednesday but frequent rains hindered and the laying of that last 1300 feet was really a race with the weather. The rains softened the ground so that it was both difficult and dangerous to operate the small industrial railroad which moved the gravel and cement to the paving machines. The boiler on the west-end paving machine gave out and another had to be installed. Then a clutch on the same machine gave out Friday night and the east-end machine had to lay the last of the cement on Saturday. In the final struggle on Saturday, one of the gasoline locomotives jumped the track and nearly toppled into the creek at the Spencer farm. But in spite of all such hindrances, the job is done and in a few weeks the road will be open for through traffic.

MRS. CHRISTINE BUEHLER.

Mrs. Christine (Mohrlock) Buehler, widow of the late Jacob Buehler, died Friday, November 18, 1921, at the home of her son, Theodore Buehler of Lyndon, and on the farm where she had resided for the past 60 years. She was 84 years, three months and seven days of age.

Mrs. Buehler is survived by six children, as follows: John of Chelsea, Charles of Ann Arbor, Samuel of Saline, Mrs. George Sattorhwaite of Lima, Theodore of Lyndon, and Mrs. John Forner of Chelsea; also by one brother, Michael Mohrlock of Sylvan, 19 grandchildren and one great grandchild.

The funeral was held Monday morning at 9:30 from the house and at 10 o'clock from St. Paul's church, Rev. Krause conducting the service.

FARM BUREAU OFFICERS.

At the closing session of the Farm Bureau in Ann Arbor, Thursday, Geo. W. McCalla of Ypsilanti township and Henry Brodermütz of Saline township were re-elected president and vice president, respectively.

Three vacancies on the executive committee were filled by the election of F. W. McLane, W. W. Hamilton and R. J. Bird.

George Gage of Sylvan was re-elected a delegate to the State Farm Bureau convention to be held in Lansing in January. Other delegates elected were: William Avery and William E. Hoover, D. E. Beach of Lima was re-elected a member of the board of auditors.

WHERE TO MAKE DATES

Clearing House Should Be Arranged
To Avoid Conflicts Between Various Entertainments.

During the past week much inconvenience to Chelseians has resulted from the fact that several social functions and entertainments have occurred on the same evenings. For instance, Monday evening the Fellowship club of the Methodist church and the Knights of Pythias each had banquets, on Thursday evening the American Legion entertained at the M. E. church, an Eastern Star party and a Masonic meeting conflicted, and Saturday there were two bake sales and one candy sale scheduled. Last evening the talk by Tom May before the American Legion and the Catholic fair conflicted. Such conflicts are annoying to all persons interested in community affairs, and also interfere with the full success of the several entertainments and social functions.

We suggest that a date clearing house be arranged where a list of coming events may be kept and such conflicts as mentioned above may be avoided.

Supervisor H. J. Dancer, who has charge of the renting of the town hall, already has a system for listing dates for that auditorium and he seems to be the logical person to list up all the entertainment dates in the community and so avoid having two or more social functions occurring on the same evening.

Some such arrangements will undoubtedly come up for discussion at the next meeting of the Board of Commerce, and meanwhile we suggest that those in charge of public entertainments, banquets, etc., be sure they have an open date before making arrangements for their particular functions.

HIS TROUBLES WERE BUNCHED.

A Chelsea man had a harrowing experience one day last week, and says it must have been his unlucky day. Business took him out of town and he made the trip in his car, and stripped the rear axle gears. That was enough trouble for one day, he thought, but consoled himself with the prospect of a good supper when he reached home. But his troubles were only begun, for he found friend wife in bed and so ill that he summoned a doctor. All thoughts of a good, warm dinner had gone aglimmering, but he felt himself fortunate to find a bottle of milk in the kitchen. He set the bottle down on a table while he prepared to regale himself with a bread and milk supper, but again trouble made its appearance as his elbow hit the bottle and it crashed to the floor, spilling its contents broadcast. After sponging up the milk, this Chelsea man continued his bread and milk supper—minus the milk. Nor was that the climax of his run of bad luck, for the next morning while he was preparing to light a gas burner the head of the match flew and ignited a full box of matches and caused him a lively scramble to quench the fire.

But that ended the bunch of troubles, and he's been enjoying life on an even keel for several days past.

UNADILLA ITEMS.

Rev. Harris and family of Byron spent Friday and Saturday with friends here.

G. R. May spent the week-end at A. J. May's.

The Presbyterian fair will be held at Gleaner hall, Friday, December 2. A chicken pie dinner and supper will be served.

A reception was given Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Cranua, Wednesday evening. They received a number of presents and $10 in money.

Loney Lane had a slight stroke of paralysis, Friday, but is some better at this writing.

Rev. Ellis returned home last Monday from an Ann Arbor hospital, where he spent the past few weeks.

Mrs. Will Durkee of Jackson spent Friday and Saturday at Nancy May's.

MOTHER HUBBARD ADDRESS.

Tom May, former cartoonist on the Detroit Journal who won international fame as the father of the cartoon, "Forgotten," which was reproduced in Friday's issue of the Tribune, was in Chelsea last evening and addressed the American Legion boys and their friends.

Failing eyesight forced Mr. May to retire from his newspaper work, and he is now engaged in the insurance business. He is an inspiring speaker and his talk last evening was greatly enjoyed by those who heard him. He said he called his talk a "motherhubbed address" because it covered everything, and touched nothing. But the talk was full of interest, and at its close the meeting resolved into a sort of roundtable discussion of the points Mr. May had brought out.

While in Chelsea, Mr. May was the guest of Donald Bacon, who is a salesman with Mr. May's company.

OUR NEIGHBORS' DOINGS

What's Happening in Nearby Towns
And Communities.

While carrying a pail of water on Thursday of last week, H. C. Chappell of Stockbridge, fell, striking on the pail in such a manner that the cartilage on several ribs was torn and causing a very painful injury.

Fred Seitz of Jackson, while hunting along a creek three miles south of that city, found a large alligator, which he captured and took into the city. It is presumed that the animal escaped from some aquarium.

Ella Cathoun of Milan, 35 years of age, shot herself in the right temple and died soon afterwards Thursday. She lived four miles from Milan on a farm. Despondency over illness was given as the cause. She leaves her mother, one brother and one sister.

The Ypsilanti Board of Commerce is back of a movement to erect a modern hotel there. Negotiations are pending for a site. One of the places talked about is the Hatch property on Washington street. Those back of the project are planning a sanitarium in connection, with a plant for bottling mineral water.

Harry Utehenik of near Anderson, who was buried alive in his well last winter and after remaining there 36 hours was rescued, visited the Pinkney Dispatch office recently. He says he has not entirely recovered from the effects of his experience. His back is lame and he is troubled with headaches and insomnia, but considers himself fortunate to be alive.

A serious accident occurred Sunday morning near Saline when Fred Neithammer and family were driving into church. Mr. Neithammer lost control of his machine and the car was overturned just east of Michael Sage's home. Mr. Neithammer's leg was broken and the son who sat on the seat with him had both legs badly cut when he was thrown through the windshield. Mrs. Neithammer was thrown through the windshield also and sustained some injuries. The two small boys who were seated with the mother on the back seat escaped with hardly a scratch. The car, a Studebaker, was badly damaged.

BURIED A SEDAN.

A seven passenger Willys-Knight sedan was found buried in a gully on the Charles Palmer farm near Milford last week by a trapper. Evidently, the car had been driven about sixty rods from the highway to the gully, stripped of motor, tires, plate-glass, speedometer, clock, lamps, and other accessories, and then tipped over into the "grave." The roof had been crushed in to make the car fit down into the gully and the whole then covered over with brush, corn-stalks and earth.

Officers are investigating the matter.

ORGAN RECITALS POPULAR

No Charge Is Made: New York Artist Will Appear Thanksgiving Day.

The series of weekly organ recitals which are given in Hill auditorium every Thursday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock are proving to be one of the most attractive features of Ann Arbor's musical life. These programs are given without charge to the general public, the only request being that patrons be seated promptly at the hour of beginning since the doors are closed during the performance of numbers, and that they refrain for obvious reasons from bringing small children.

For the most part the programs are provided by Mr. Earl V. Moore and his associate, Mr. Harry Russell Evans. However, from time to time as the season advances out of town guest artists will appear also.

The first guest artist to be heard will be Mr. Edward Reehlin, organist of the Immanuel Lutheran church of New York city, who has won wide recognition as America's foremost interpreter of the works of Bach. The University School of Music was able to secure the services of Mr. Reehlin for a recital on the afternoon of Thanksgiving day by reason of the fact that he is to be in the city on that day to participate in the Thanksgiving services which are being provided by the Lutheran Student association of the University. His organ program will be given at 4:15 o'clock.

This distinguished musician has appeared in practically all of the great music centers where organs of note exist and has always won the favorable appreciation of his audiences. He received his early training at the Lutheran Normal School at Addison, Illinois. His love for music was such that he gave up his ambition to be a teacher and devoted himself entirely to music, particularly in the field of concert organist. Since 1906 he has filled the church position he now holds in New York, his duties there being interrupted by extended study abroad under such masters as Guilmant, Widor and San Sulpicio.

FOR JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN. ALL with its garnered harvests, reminds us of Thanksgiving day—both the feast that has become a national fixture and the thanks that should form no small part of the observance of the holiday. And Thanksgiving reminds us of the Pilgrims of the Mayflower and the centenary observances that have lapped over into 1921.

To listen to the proud descendants of the Pilgrims and to see the relics and furniture that "came over in the Mayflower" is to smile. As a matter of fact records and relics of the Pilgrims are much like angels' visits. For instance, Governor William Bradford's "History of the Plymouth Plantation" and "Mourt's Relation," supposed to have been written by Bradford and Edward Winslow to friends in England, contain the only accounts of the Mayflower's voyage. It was not until 1855 that Americans discovered that the complete manuscript of Governor Bradford's history was reposing in a London library. It was published in 1856 for the first time. How it came back to Massachusetts is told later.

Again there is a difference of opinion as to the identity of the Mayflower's captain—"Master Jones." Some historians say that he was one Christopher Jones and a trustworthy man; others hold that he was Capt. Thomas Jones, a sort of retired pirate. There is no authentic record of the accommodations of the Mayflower and an exact description of the vessel. Some believe she was at one time a slaver. To start the historians get the first authoritative evidence that the name of the vessel of the Pilgrims was "Mayflower" from the "Allotment of Lands," an official document drawn up at Plymouth in March, 1621.

It is thought that the group of autographs at the upper left, includes all the known signatures of those who came in the Mayflower, except that of Dorothy May, who was then the wife of William Bradford. Resolved White was then but a child and Peregrine White was not born until the Mayflower had reached Cape Cod harbor.

The portrait of Governor Edward Winslow is the only authentic likeness of any of the Mayflower Pilgrims. It was painted in England in 1651, when Winslow was 56. It has been several times engraved. The original, once the property of Isaac Winslow, is now deposited in the gallery of the Pilgrim Society at Plymouth.

Contrary to the popular belief the actual relics of the Mayflower Pilgrims are few.

It is believed that the celebrations of the tercentenary in America, England and Holland have brought to light some new records and relics, the authenticity of which will stand the closest investigation.

An undoubted autograph of John Robinson, pastor of the Pilgrims in Leyden, is one of the relics that has been unearthed. It was found in Leyden by Dr. Eckhoff among the notarial papers in the city's archives.

John Robinson, as every American should know, was the pastor of the little group of religious radicals who first gathered at Scrooby, England, about 1606 and later became known to history as the Pilgrims. From Scrooby they went to Amsterdam, and then to Leyden. When they decided to go to America the question was: How many would go and who? It was decided that Robinson should lead them. If the majority voted to go, William Brewster was to lead those who went. The majority voted not to go. Robinson never saw the New World. He died March 1, 1633, and was buried in Leyden.

Whether or wholly authenticated signature of John Robinson has been known. The two reproduced have been half-heartedly accepted by historians. The upper signature is given by Dr. H. M. Dexter in "Congregationalism as Seen in Its Literature" (1880) as from a book in the British museum, believed by the experts of that institution to have belonged to him. This book is a pamphlet, "A Peravasion to the English Recusants," by John Dore, D. D., printed in 1602. It is presumably by the same hand as the lower signature, which is upon the title page of Sir Edwin Sandys' "Relation of the State of Religion" (London, 1605), which belonged to the late Charles Deane of Cambridge. It was supposed that John Robinson once owned the treatise. Of the new authentic signature the London Graphic says:

"The Leyden deed signed by John Robinson, of whose autograph Dr. Eckhoff is assured, refers to a debt acknowledged by Robinson, Thomas Brewer, and William Jepson—the latter being also well-known members of the Pilgrim community. Brewer possessed money and position, and, jointly with another, set up a printing press in Leyden. Jepson is described as a carpenter and merchant. They were banded to pay seven hundred and forty-four guineas by a certain date. A later entry contains the fact that the debt was discharged before the period mentioned. In the second document, dated a week before the Pilgrim fathers left Holland in the Speedwell, William Bradford authorized two of his friends who remained behind to collect one hundred carolus guineas, which were owing to him as a mortgage by a Leyden citizen.

"Dr. Eckhoff's discovery also disclosed the will of John Robinson's widow. This was drawn up eighteen years after the Pilgrim fathers' pastor had passed away. She remained in the city, and at the time of her death had four children, to whom she devised her belongings. To each and all she bestowed something of value. Her son Isaac had gone out to New England with the Pilgrims, had married and settled there. To his wife his mother bequeathed the long cloak and skirt of black cloth of appearance. To the son, who was a doctor in England, was given his father's Flemish Testament.

"Dr. Flood, of Leyden, and Dr. Houdel Harris, Ryhuud's library, Manchester, have also collaborated in other researches. They have issued a facsimile edition of those portions of the official Bethrothal Book at Leyden which relate to the Pilgrim fathers. These are of real historic value, because they supply legal particulars respecting the betrothals and marriages. First there is the date of the betrothal and inter of the marriage itself and the names of the officiating magistrates.

A document relating to William Bradford was also found by the Leyden professor, and these three created a sensation among those who had gathered at Leyden this summer to pay their tributes to the founders. In the Boston Transcript, George R. Sargent presents translations of these documents made by A. J. F. Van Lier, state archivist of New York, and authoritatively on Dutch notarial documents. The task of translation was not easy, as it is said:

"The document which bears the Robinson signature is an acknowledgment of indebtedness, given by Brewer, Robinson, and Jepson in behalf of Seigneur Jehan de Lalating for the sum of seven hundred and forty-four guineas, thirteen shillings, and three pence on account of several years' accumulated interest, the last due on May day, 1621. The three subscribers promise to pay this on May day, 1621, without further delay, this agreement being drawn up by the notary and signed on January 2, 1621, at his office on the Breestraat, in the presence of the notary's clerk, Jan Jacobsz, van Tothrade and Willem Cornelisz, Ket, a farm- or 'burman' of the manor of Rijnsburck.

The late George Frisbie Hoar, United States Senator from Massachusetts and a descendant of Roger Sherman, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, tells in his "Autobiography of Seventy Years" (1903) how he recovered the history by William Bradford, the second governor, containing the Mayflower Compact. Just how it got to England nobody knows, but for more than a century it had reposed in the library of the bishop of London at Fulham palace. Senator Hoar armed himself with letters of introduction in 1896 and made a respectful demand on Dr. Temple, then bishop of London.

Dr. Temple agreed that the precious manuscript ought to be restored to American custody, but suggested that the request should be referred to the Archbishop of Canterbury and Queen Victoria. So Senator Hoar returned to America and inspired the drafting of a formal request for the return of the manuscript in the name of the antiquarian and historical societies. Dr. Temple had in the meantime become Archbishop of Canterbury and gave his assistance, with the result that the precious manuscript now reposes in the library of the state house of Massachusetts.

World's Greatest Tunnel

In the Simplon tunnel under the Alps, which is by far the greatest tunnel in the world, the quantity of water flowing out of the southern end, from the many veins encountered in the heart of the mountain, amounted to 15,000 gallons a minute, and furnished sufficient power to compress the air by which the drills were worked, and to refrigerate the tunnel. The necessity for refrigeration may be judged from the fact that the heat in the deeper parts of the tunnel rose as high as 130 degrees Fahrenheit when not artificially reduced.—Christian Science Monitor.

Semiramis' "Fleet"
We learn that Semiramis, Assyria's imperious queen, 2625 B. C., had a fleet of 3,000 ships, with which she conquered the fleet of Staurabates, 4,000 strong, at the mouth of the Indus. But our wonder is abated when we learn that the fleet of Semiramis was carried on the backs of camels from the shores of Syria to the Indus' banks. These "ships" must have been smaller craft than now compete at Henley regatta, and the fleets of both monarchs could have been comfortably stored in the hold of one of Great Britain's present-day levantine cargo boats. But the little rule ships of those far-off ages must not be despised. They were the seeds of an industry destined to be one of the greatest factors in the progress of civilization.—Whitehall Gazette.

Pretty Things that are made at Home

IF ONE may judge from appearance at evening social affairs, the collar is not complete without a fancy handkerchief or handkerchiefs.

The idea of pretty ornaments for the hair suggests Christmas gifts one can make which will be "different" from the usual pin cushions, tea aprons, vanity cases and powder puffs.

Take for instance the charming floral comb in the group above. It is suggested by the huge Spanish comb, now so popular among American women for evening wear. However, through substituting flowers for tortoise shell or jet a dainty youthful effect is secured, and yet the conventions of style are preserved.

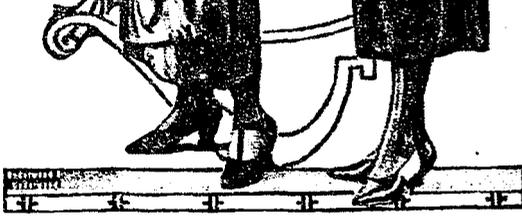

This clever affair can easily be made as follows: Take an ordinary side comb, with coarse teeth, or if obtainable, a back comb with long prongs. Cut a big fan or comb shape of rice net, wire it across the top and ends. Cover top and ends with a bit of silk. Then sew on this artificial flowers; these may be hand made from trifles of silk with chiffon. Sew this fanlike flower-covered shape across the top of comb by bringing stitches down to youth, for it is impartial in its favor. Since to age it imparts flattering dignity and to youth winsome naivete, everybody is wearing velvet.

Paris sponsors black velvet for street wear. Her style creators heighten its regal beauty with a master touch of gay embroidery or, perchance, a gold or silver grille most often with the presence of handsome fur. Long straight coats of black velvet with accented low-waist effect, have abundant collars of black Persian lamb, with broad fur outlining the huge flowing sleeve.

The velvet three-piece suit is the goal of style ambition this season. It is an economical investment. It serves as a comely street costume, and with coat removed, is converted into a one-piece frock de luxe attuned to the most elegant occasions. Our illustration shows a youthful three-piece suit of deepest rosewood velvet. The bodice part is of matched gorette embroidered all over with beads and metal threads.

Chiffon velvet, supple and full of grace at every move, is chosen for the afternoon and reception gown. The latest fancy is for fur-colored chiffon between the teeth. When secure, line the back (the part next the hair) with silk.

Golden grapes and cherries, as shown in the illustration, are made of bits of metal cloth stuffed with cotton, the leaves hand bronzed. Odd beads strung into handbags also answer to the call for fancy handkerchiefs.

The little bed lamp shown is of shaded silk, the tiny canopy covering the bulb.

The Winter way of Fashion trends through a veritable labyrinth of velvet. Wraps, street three-piece frocks, evening gowns and hats are of velvet, velvet, velvet!

A foremost American designer, commenting recently upon the matter of fashion, declared that this season sees a return of the dignified style of the "grande dame." Perhaps that accounts for the preeminence of velvet for present-day apparel. It bespeaks the quality of stately elegance. However, that does not preclude its adaptability

BETTER ROADS

COMMUNITY BUILDING SAVES

Farmers in Alabama County Get Together and Reconstruct Washed-Out Bridge and Road.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Because of 100 yards of flooded, swampy area, farmers in Autauga county, Ala., were obliged for several years to make a detour of four miles to reach the market, the town, the corn mill, strap mill, gin house, church, or school. There had been a road in use for many years which led across a creek at the heart of a marshy district by means of a bridge. This road was long neglected through lack of community co-operation and in the winter floods of 1910 the bridge was washed away so that the road became entirely impassable.

Building a New Road.

The county agent from the United States Department of Agriculture and the State Agricultural college felt that some action should be taken, and offered to conduct a road-building demonstration last spring if the farmers in the district would contribute materials and labor. The response was gratifying. Nineteen men and five teams were furnished, and in two and a half days the road and bridge were completed. Everything needed was on hand in the community so that no time was lost going to the mill for anything, the only expense being $1.20 invested in nails. The road was constructed with both gravel and corduroy.

The demonstration was one of the most successful ever carried out in the country. Nothing could have met with more general approval and satisfaction. One farmer who makes two trips to market a week said he would save over $10 on every trip over the new road because of the shorter haul. About 500 people will be benefited by the improvement.

SIGN-MAPS ASSIST TRAVELER

Example Set by State of Maryland Might Well Be Followed by Other Commonwealths.

Maryland has set an example that might profitably be followed by all states, says the Pittsburgh Dispatch. Instead of the curt and usually unsatisfying road sign that leaves the traveler frequently more puzzled than before, Maryland has begun to erect sign-maps that tell the traveler where he is; that indicate the general direction to other points and the distances between such points. Thus, instead of being told a road leads to some place the tourist may never have heard of, the sign-map will show him that it is either on or off the way to the place he is anxious to reach.

Such sign-maps should not be necessarily expensive to put up, nor elaborate. In fact, the simpler the better. But how many times has a lost motorist sighed for some such simple device that would show him where he was and how he could get to the place he was trying to reach? The ordinary road signs, even when legible, are seldom of much value except to local people, who do not need them.

MINNESOTA SPENDS BIG SUM

More Than $25,000,000 Paid Out for Construction and Improvement of Highways.

Minnesota is spending more than $25,000,000 on roads this season, according to announcement by the state highway department. This big fund is made up entirely of automobile and local tax revenues and federal aid, except for $5,000,000 of county bond money. Charles M. Babcock, state highway commissioner, estimates that about $13,500,000 will be expended this year for maintenance and permanent improvements on the 7,000-mile system of state trunk highways.

Roads in South

A stretch of hard-surfaced road in the southern states, 25 miles in length, was difficult to be found six years ago, whereas at present there are any number of hard-surfaced roads from 25 to 100 miles in length.

Aid for American Motorists

To enlighten them upon the usually confusing foreign traffic regulations, Americans motoring through France are supplied with a "code of the road" booklet by the minister of public works.

"Today it has rained and the autumn leaves are wet, but the sun comes out every once in awhile and the sun shines through the leaves which are still on the trees. What lovely colors they are, too!"

"Such beautiful yellow shades, and reds and scarlets and pinks and browns.

"When the sun comes out the leaves can be seen down in the clear, beautiful lake below, and when the sun goes under a cloud and some of the fair children come down to earth Lady Gray Cloud and the Gray Cloud children come out and whisper soft, sweet secrets to the Mist Grandchildren.

"Oh yes, in the autumn sunshine everything is so gray and dazzling and bright and brilliant, but when it is rainy all the colors are so soft and so pretty. Truly every day is nice."

"We agree with you," said the other GNOMES.

"So do we," said the Brownsles.

"So do we," said the Elives.

"And we love every day, too," said the Fairies. "There is always something to be done on every day, no matter what kind of a day it is, and if we don't want to play out in the open on a rainy day, think of the games we can play in the hollow trees and in the caves."

"Of course we can," said old Mr. Giant, "and I was thinking this very day it would be nice to have a party in honor of Peter GNOME and in honor of his Every-Day-Is-Nice Club.

"Instead of a meeting today," said old Mr. Giant, "how about a party in my cave?"

"Fine, fine," they all shouted.

So they all went off to Peter GNOME's cave.

On the way there they passed a sheep dog sitting in a wagon in front of a farmhouse.

"What are you doing?" asked Peter GNOME as he passed. "You don't look as though you were going anywhere, as there are no horses hitched to the wagon in which you are sitting."

"On They Went."

"Bow-wow," said the sheep dog. "I'm just guarding over the house. I'm sitting in this wagon, with my paws over the seat, and I'm taking a little dog-nap. That is, I'm keeping one eye open in case my services are needed."

Then they went along further and they saw a wagon filled with beautiful tomatoes.

"We're going to market," the tomatoes said, "and a lady just passing bought some of us. She said that the very last time she came along this road she saw a wagon of tomatoes, and that she was expecting to see us today. Fancy being expected! She expected to meet us in a wagon on this road as though we were some people she thought might be taking a walk this way."

On they went to old Mr. Giant's Cave, and there Witty Witch told them stories of the work of the Frost Brothers who had made the autumn so much more wonderful and brilliant because they had been out painting so much.

The Frost brothers had made the autumn a very, very red and scarlet autumn, for when the autumn is misty and not so clear and cold, the colors are never so bright, but are paler and softer.

Witty Witch told of adventures the Frost Brothers had had. And many adventures she had to relate.

Then old Mr. Giant got out the refreshments and every guest had a dish of fine winter-green berries and delicious cups of Fairy Spring water.

Then each one was given a little bunch of Johnny-Jump-Up flowers, for old Mr. Giant said:

"These are the right flowers for Mr. GNOME and his friends. Peter GNOME every day and thinks every day is nice. And these flowers like almost every day for they're about the first to come in the early spring, and the last to go in the very late autumn."

And then Mr. Giant drove all the guests home in carriages decorated with wild asters and Michaelmas daisies which were deeper and darker in color than the wild asters. The carriages were handsome with the purple and the blue flowers, and as they drove off Peter GNOME made a low bow and said:

"Every day is nice, but this day has been one of the very nicest!"

PAGELANT AT NORTH LAKE.

Go-to-Church Sunday will be observed by the congregation of the North Lake church next Sunday, November 27th, at which time the pageant, "The Coming of Truth," will be given. Over forty people have parts and the pageant promises to be very helpful. It portrays the Christian training and teaching as a key to the world's redemption. "World" is represented as seeking freedom from bondage. He calls War, Science, Education, and other forces to bring deliverance, but they fail. The "Church of Christ" appears and promises freedom through "Truth." "World" is then shown a panorama of Christian education as the "Way of Truth," beginning with the mother and babe of the cradle roll department and continuing to the oldest members of the Sunday school. A scene follows showing the "Spread of Truth" through the world by the expanding Sunday school work. "Truth" then appears to "World" and points the way to Christ. "World" seeks Christ, his hands are broken, and he stands forth free. Following the pageant, Mr. Hazle will give a message showing the beginnings of the Sunday school in Biblical times and its extensive program at present. An attendance of 100% of all families not attending church elsewhere is the aim.

CATARHAL DEAFNESS
 is greatly relieved by constitutional treatment. HALL'S CATARHAL MEDICINE is a constitutional remedy. Catarhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced, your hearing may be destroyed forever. HALL'S CATARHAL MEDICINE acts through the blood on the mucous surface of the system, thus reducing the inflammation and restoring Nature in restoring normal conditions.

How Not to Take Cold.
 Some persons are subject to frequent colds, while others, seldom if ever, have a cold. You will find that the latter take care of themselves. They take a shower or cold sponge bath every day in a warm room, avoid overheated rooms, sleep with a window open or partly open, avoid excesses, over eating, becoming over heated and then chilled by getting the feet wet. Then, when they feel the first indication of a cold, they take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy without delay and it is soon over.

SISTERS
 By Kathleen Norris
 Author of
 "Josselyn's Wife"
 "The Heart of Rachel"
 "The Story of Julia Page," Etc.
 A story for all women, and for all men who have wives and sisters.
 Depicts a typical home into which enters a triangle of love and a great problem. Shows the cheerful self-sacrifice and heroism of a devoted nature as compared with the weakness of a spoiled, unfortified character.
 Runs the gamut of types, rising from sordid to unworldly—a blend of human elements. Beautified throughout by the artist's touch; cheerful in the main, thrilling in some spots and tragic in others—a document of romance and of hearts.
 The distinguished California authoress has contributed of her best and given it a setting amid the beauties of her native state.
