"PYREX"

Transparent Oven Dishes are for Every-Day Service

SAVES FUEL FOOD LABOR

PYREX saves about one-half the fuel usually required, because it absorbs nearly all the oven heat and bakes food quickly.

PYREX saves food in many ways. Meats, vegetables, etc., when cooked in Pyrex, retain their natural color and flavor to such a degree that economy may be practiced in buying the less expensive kinds and yet have delicious food. Most foods usually cooked on the top of the stove can be better prepared in the oven.

PYREX saves labor, it is always free from grease and odors, for nothing can penetrate the hard smooth surface. You can wash it as easily as your china and silver.

PYREX is made in every practical shape and size for baking. It is ready for immediate use and never discolors, rusts, crazes, dents or chips.

We will replace any dish that breaks in use in the oven

We Have the complete line.

Bernard Oker.

Bernard Oker was born in Wurttemberg, Germany, August 22, 1846, and died at his home on North street, Wednesday, November 30, 1921, after a lingering illness.

Mr. Oker was married to Barbara Grau, October 5, 1868, and to this union 3 children were born, Mrs. John Schanz of Lima, Mrs. Ferdinand Faulkner of Clinton, and John B. Oker of this place. In 1874 he and his family came to America, and settled in Freedom township, where he lived until 1883 when he moved to Sharon. In 1889 he left his farm and moved to Chelsea, and worked at the shoemaker trade until about a year ago. On account of poor health, he was obliged to give up his work.

He is survived by his widow, one son and two daughters, 10 grandchildren.

The funeral will be held Saturday morning from St. Mary church at 9 o'clock Standard time. Rev. Father Vanduyke celebrating mass. Interment in Mt. Olivet cemetery. Friends please omit flowers.

Epworth League Cabinet Meets.

A meeting of the cabinet officers of the Ann Arbor district Epworth League was held at the home of the president, T. O. Huckle, of Ypsilanti, a few days ago, when plans were laid for an active winter's work. Owing to removals from the district some changes were made in the officers, the following now being in charge:

First Vice—Miss Mabel Chapman, Ann Arbor.

Second Vice—Miss Josephine Warner, Ypsilanti.

Third Vice—Evert Benton, Chelsea.

Secretary—Treasurer—J. C. Springman, Pontiac.

Junior League Superintendent—Miss Dorothy Bailey, South Lyon.

It was voted to hold two sub-district conventions in January, one at Adrian and the other at Plymouth. The annual spring convention will be held at Northville next April.

The first week in January will be observed as "Win-My-Chum" week in the Ann Arbor district and the first vice president will send out a special program for that week. The second vice president will also have a special program for Epworthians, the first class to start immediately after the holidays.

Big Rural Congress.

Farmers' Week at the Michigan Agricultural College will be held from January 30 until February 3 this year, according to announcement just made at the college. An annual event for years, Farmers' Week has grown to be by far the biggest winter gathering of rural workers held in Michigan. More than 5,000 people registered during the week last year.

Agricultural and economic leaders of international fame are listed among the speakers already named on the tentative program for the general meetings. In addition to President M. L. Burton of the University of Michigan, and President-elect Leola Friday of M. A. C., Sir Auckland Geddes, British Ambassador to the United States; Henry Wallace, U. S. Secretary of Agriculture; Senator Arthur Cooper, of Kansas; and Congressman Patrick Kelly and J. C. Ketchum, of Michigan, are included among those who have been invited to speak and are expected to be present.

A dozen of the leading agricultural organizations of the state will hold their annual meetings at the College during Farmers' Week, adding to the crowd and the importance of the congress. The State Farm Bureau, the Michigan Crop Improvement Association, the Michigan Potato Producers Association, the Michigan Horticultural Society, and the Michigan Black Producers Association are among those that have already sent their meetings during Farmers' Week.

Teaching Children To Save.

What better incentive can be given a child to learn the advantages of Thrift than for the father or mother to start an account for the youngster in the Postal Savings? When the deposits to the child's credit have reached the sum of $20, the money can be made to earn more interest by investing this amount, with a few extra nickels added, in one of the new 25c Treasury Savings Certificates bearing the portrait of Theodore Roosevelt, which will be issued by the Treasury Department toward the end of the year.

America will no longer be considered a Nation of spendthrifts if parents of today use the necessary precaution to see that their children—the citizens of tomorrow—are not allowed to grow wasteful and extravagant. Teach them the many advantages of thrift in their young and tender years. It will grow to be the best habit they have when life's responsibilities come.

Thrift will teach them the value of every penny; the wonderful growing power of money. It will teach your child self-reliance and bring self-respect. If you start a Postal Savings account today or invest in a 25c or 100c Treasury Savings Certificate, which yield interest at 4 per cent quarterly, if held until maturity, you will teach the child to assume his responsibility of citizenship by helping to finance his Government.

That small start may be the first rung in the ladder of success in your boy's business life. It will bring your daughter an understanding of money values that will make her an economical housewife some day, a blessing and help to her husband and family.

ILLINOIS FAMILIES HOLD THANKSGIVING REUNION

The annual potluck Thanksgiving dinner of the Illinois families in this vicinity was held at the pleasant country home of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Kimball in Lima township, November 24, places being arranged for thirty-two.

The following families were present: Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Grubill and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Jones and son, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Jones and family, Mr. and Mrs. Bert White and family, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Pritchard and daughters and Mr. and Mrs. Carl D. Schlosser, all of near Chelsea, and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. O. Wolfe, of Jackson.

Following the feast music and a social time was enjoyed by all. All those in attendance were former residents of Saunemin, Illinois, who have moved to Michigan within the last few years.

This gathering was only one of many such delightful affairs which have been held by these families during the past season.

State Represented at Show.

Michigan is represented well at the big International Livestock Show in Chicago this week. In addition to individual entries from all parts of the state, judging teams picked from students at the Michigan Agricultural College and from the Boys' and Girls' Clubs of the state are competing in their different classes to bring honors to Michigan.

For the first time in several years, the Agricultural College is also sending cattle and sheep to the Chicago Show. These animals are being exhibited in the different open classes, where they will compete against the best of the country can enter from various individuals and agricultural colleges.

Cahoon county has the honor of furnishing the Boys' Club judging team which is representing Michigan. William Peters, of Homer, and Ovid Martin and Leo Kellogg, of Athens, are the members of the team, which is being sent to the Show by the Michigan State Fair management. C. E. Ackley, county club leader, and R. A. Turner, state leader of club work at M. A. C., groomed the team for the contest.

About forty other county club champions are also at the Show, being sent by various county fair associations and other agricultural organizations.

Six students in the agricultural division at M. A. C. compose the student judging team, which is competing against teams from a dozen other leading agricultural colleges of the country. Cattle, horses, swine and sheep are to be judged. Prof. G. A. Brown, of M. A. C., coached the team and is with them at Chicago.

Will Use Michigan Wheat.

All bread baked in state institutions hereafter will be made from Michigan grown and milled wheat, the state administrative board has decided. The following tests made by the state millers' association in baking bread with Michigan wheat and spring wheat. The report of the association presented to the board by Otto Dreese, secretary, showed that 17 more pounds of bread can be made from one barrel of Michigan wheat flour. The cost would be about 75 cents less per barrel. The board also accepted the offer of the millers to pay the salary of a baker who will instruct the various institutions in using the Michigan flour to the best advantage.

Mrs. Christian Visel.

Miss Mary Heinemann was born in Waterloo township, January 1, 1847, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Chris Schneider, of Sylvan, Friday, November 25, 1921.

Mrs. Visel had been a life long resident of this vicinity. She was a member of St. Paul's church. She was united in marriage with Christian Visel, December 8, 1870. Mr. Visel died June 30, 1916.

She is survived by four sons, Robert Visel of Jackson, Chris, Oscar and Albert Visel of Sylvan, two daughters, Mrs. Chris Schneider and Mrs. Gottlieb Sager of Sylvan, five grandchildren, two brothers and one sister.

The funeral was held in St. Paul's church at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon, Rev. G. W. Krause conducting the services. Interment in Oak Grove cemetery.

Parent-Teachers' Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Parent-Teachers' Club of the McLaren School, District No. 7, Lima, was held at the schoolhouse, Tuesday evening, November 22, a large crowd being in attendance.

After the opening song and the business part of the meeting was concluded the following program was rendered:

Recitation—Harold Guenther.

Reading—Bertha Honeck.

Recitation—Lorena Seitz.

Story of the First Thanksgiving—Irma Seitz.

Duet—Mrs. Mary Koeh and Mrs. Elizabeth Bullinger.

Recitation—Esther Guenther.

General Quiz and Flag Salute—School Children.

Reading—Mrs. Anna Barth.

Closing song.

A very fine 2-course luncheon was then served.

Working On Race Track.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Washtenaw County Fair Society held on Tuesday of last week, Earl Martin was made general manager, and C. J. Sweet was elected secretary.

The other officers of the society are the following: President, C. J. Hutzel; treasurer, Roy Hiseock. The fair society has decided to rush work on the fair grounds, west of the city, and Engineer H. H. Atwell has been engaged to lay out the race track and prepare for the drainage. Actual work on the construction of the track will be started at once, and it is expected that the necessary plowing and grading will be completed in two weeks. It is the intention of the fair society to hold a fair next fall, and plans for the construction of necessary buildings next summer have already been worked out.

Christmas Presents for Schools.

Four schools in Michigan are each going to have a photograph all their own for a Christmas present this year. Which schools will be the lucky ones is still problematical, but so much is certain that they will be rural schools.

The Michigan Tuberculosis association has divided Michigan into four districts for the purpose of this award. The districts are of more than 2,500 population, 1920 census. The counties have been grouped according to valuation and population, and in this way a fair opportunity is given to all. One of the reasons for eliminating the cities of more than 2,500 is that in most cities local tuberculosis societies offer local prizes in the Christmas seal sale, and it was desired to have the rural sections of the state have a series of prizes of their own. In each of the four districts one portable photograph will be given away. The school in each district selling the most Christmas seals per capita, which means per enrolled pupils in that school, will get the photograph as a Christmas present from the state association.

Strong rivalry is expected in this contest and the state association is daily receiving inquiries from all over Michigan asking about the terms of the contest.

Announcements.

Troubles Beset Tourist Abroad

Lack of Hotel Accommodations in European Cities Stumbling Block to Traveler.

MANY SLEEP IN BATHROOMS

Fortune Awaits Ambitious American Who Will Go Into Hotel Business in Europe—Hotel Portier Powerful Potentate.

Vienna.—A fortune is awaiting any ambitious American who will come to Europe and go into the hotel business. There are, of course, complications in the way. Building materials are high, though when the exchange rate is considered not so high as at home. Labor demands high wages, according to the German and Austrian standard—but that standard leaves the skilled workman earning, according to American values, considerably less than $1 a day.

Again, there are inevitable stumbling blocks in the way of government tax when a piece of land changes hands. Also the international money conditions which have caused Germany and Austria to become beloved of English, American, Dutch, French, Italian and Scandinavian tourists may change before new hotels can be built, though it doesn't look as though they would.

At any rate, eliminating unexpected complications, the hotel business to the eye of the layman now looks as if it must pay better than any other in the world.

Sleeping in the Bathroom.

It is more or less difficult to get a bath in any German or Austrian or Hungarian hotel nowadays, because all of the bathrooms are being used for bedrooms. Not that the guests sleep in the tubs, no, they merely sleep in beds or cots that have been added to the usual bathroom furniture, and they count themselves rather fortunate than otherwise because, while they are enjoying the use of the bathroom as a sleeping apartment they likewise pre-empt the use of the tub. I slept in the bathroom myself in Munich, and it was very comfortable.

Building additions, redecorating and renovating in general, is now too expensive for the average German or Austrian. Private dwellings and public institutions alike show rather distressing wear and tear. Hospitals in particular are shabby to a point where their executives bemoan that they are unsanitary.

Private apartment houses are spotty as to paint and dangerously raveled as to stair coverings. Hotels are universally, however, in a state of newly painted smartness and are being bravely remodeled and redecorated.

Hotel Portier is All Powerful.

The hotel portier always in Europe has been a dignitary of considerable prominence. In his adroit's coat, his linguistic ability, his infallible knowledge of train schedules and theaters and that competence of his in playing chess with vacant rooms as his squares and guests as his pawns—in all of this he is mighty, and he is a power to be feared by many an up-to-date potentate.

The portier at the Adlon in Berlin is said to own one of the smartest villas in Wahnsee, one of the smartest suburbs of that city.

But the importance of the portier has increased many fold since after-the-war conditions have made a room in a hotel a thing to be desired beyond riches. His nod and his frown are Jovian in their might. His nod comes only when the would-be guest can show proof that he wired the hotel for rooms and that the wire was answered favorably. Otherwise, there is the frown. It is a frown which may, on occasions, be deflected by the proper means, delicately introduced, or, rather, tendered. It is a frown which may, on the other hand remain consistently and honestly discouraging.

Wanted.—A Room.

There was, for instance, that experience in Budapest. I had wired for rooms in the Hotel Ritz, from Vienna. No answer had come, but the portier in the hotel at Vienna had been an optimistic soul and had advised risking it. I risked it and arrived at Budapest shortly after 9 p. m.

It turned out that the advice of the portier was not good advice. There was no room to be had at the Ritz. People, the portier was pleased to inform me, were sleeping in all of the bathrooms. He recommended another hotel; the hotel was courteous, but it also was full; it recommended another. The affair resembled the clarinet race from "Ten Hurs," though slightly more thrilling. Every one else in the city seemed to be trying to find rooms in a hotel, too. If there are traffic laws in Budapest they are made like New Year's resolutions, only to be broken. The drachke drivers are ancient and ragged daredevils, who delight in zig-zagging across the paths of automobiles and trains and other drachkes. They whiz just one another on the blues, they chatter out from side streets, they risk, a thousand times, a wheel caught in a trolley track and utter disaster.

Other horses dashing drawing off drachkes prance up behind one and one feels their hot breath on the neck and they seem about to make their suppers off of one's back hair. Then they pass, the wheels of their drachkes alarmingly near. And another hotel is reached and one races madly

One Lone Trout Stops Coal Mine

London.—Close to 600 men lost a day's work this week at a colliery in Lancashire through a trout choking the water supply for the boilers. The cage could not be lifted to the pithead, as the boilers were not working. After a great deal of trouble the cause of the breakdown was discovered. The trout weighed one pound and six ounces. Work was resumed next day.

through the lobby, enlivened by other racing and wild-eyed travelers, only to be told that there, too, people are sleeping in the bathrooms.

Ah, a Boarding House.

At last one Jovian gentleman in the haughty regalia of a portier took pity on a lady traveling alone—this was the fifth hotel—and telephoned to the keeper of a pension or boarding house that he knew. Yes, she had a vacant room, the portier was pleased to inform me and accepted a slight gratuity for his condescension.

We dashed again and this time the driver carried the luggage up three flights of dark, draughty and onlony stairs. The pension keeper met us at the door, sweet but sorry. No, the room was taken. A gentleman had come just after she had answered the telephone.

"But you promised," I wailed.

"Promised, madame?" she repeated. "I do not promise. I merely said that at that moment there was a room vacant. There is none vacant now."

The luggage was carried down the dark and onlony stairs again, and another hotel was tried. Here there was another portier who knew a pension, and in this pension, at last, there was heaven—of a sort. It was of the sort that is frequently disturbed during the night by things with six legs.

The experience, however, is not unique. And because many hotels were appropriated for other uses during the war and have never been restored to their original utilitarian field, and because no building has been done for seven years and tourists from all over the world find it pleasant and profitable to sojourn in these lands where money is cheap—the hotel business would seem to be a pleasant and profitable one.—Miriam Telechner in Chicago News.

Peru is planning to spend several million dollars to give Lima and several other towns fresh water, sewers and other sanitary improvements.

Centrifugal Gun Is a Wonder

Lieutenant Colonel Olmstead demonstrating to a party of government officials a new centrifugal gun at Sengert, N. J. Firing 1,200 shots a minute, the gun viddled a steel target. The barrel of the gun is six inches in length, suitably machined for minimum air resistance, with a bore of 50-100 of an inch from the muzzle to the center. In actual firing this barrel may be revolved and firing take place at from 4,000 to 16,000 revolutions per minute. This wide range of speed results in an equally wide range of penetrating power at any given distance.

Wit and Humor

A SHORT STORY.

Ponsonby Jazbo was a poor man. As our story opens he approached his house with lagging steps.

"Did you place the order for that limousine?" she demanded.

He hesitated.

"No, I took out life insurance instead."

Either she commended him or she didn't.

You end it. I can't.

A Sense of Duty.

"Do you think the public fully understands your speeches on this rather abstruse subject?"

"I didn't make 'em," confided Senator Sorghum, "with the expectation that they'd be understood. I merely wanted to show that I wasn't neglecting the duties of my office which compel me to face every kind of intellectual responsibility without flinching."

A ROUGH LIFE

Wooden Soldier: Life in the trenches may be hard, but it has nothing on six months in the nursery!

Way to Succeed.

If you'd be happy, Take this advice And put it on ice: "Make your work snappy."

Real Trouble.

"It's come at last," sobbed the lovely bride of a month—"the first quarrel."

"What—with your husband?" inquired her pitying friend.

"Worse," she faltered, raising her tear-stained face, "much worse—with the cook."

No Wonder.

Strict Parent.—From my observation of him last night I should say that that young man of yours was rather wild.

Daughter.—Of course. It was your watching him that made him wild. He wanted you to go upstairs and leave us alone.

Though Not Always Visible.

"Come, come, don't be too hard on Wilkins. He has his faults, but there's one good thing about him."

"Indeed! What is it?"

"Why—or I can't say but there is about everything, you know."

Social Cander.

He.—You are very lovely tonight. She.—You'd say that if you did not think so.

He.—Yes, and you'd think so if I didn't say it.—Boston Transcript.

Money Particularly.

Black.—She said on her wedding day that she would go through everything for him.

White.—Well, I guess she has. I loaned him a ten-spot this morning.

THE FINISH

How did the campaign in your town finish. With the usual finish; one side talking about virtue triumphant and the other making dark hints about fraud.

Of Course.

At office girls some fellows sneer And at their mention bristle. There is no use in being queer; A girl can learn to whistle.

Self Control.

"Do you never lose your temper in a debate?"

"Never," replied Senator Sorghum. "Occasionally I assume an air of passionate indignation for rhetorical effect. But I always rehearse that part of the speech even more carefully than the rest."

Bluntly Stated.

"How did you come to decide on a political career?"

"I needed a job," replied Senator Sorghum. "I couldn't induce any individual to give me one, so I had to apply to the general public."

Where There's a Will.

"Mother, can I go out and have my picture taken?"

"No, I guess it isn't worth while."

"Well, then, you might let me go and have a tooth pulled out. I never get to go anywhere."

THE TROTTEUR SUIT; LACE TRIMMING VEILS

ONCE more we pay homage to our faithful ally, the tailored suit. It has been rehabilitated, with all the honors of its former prestige restored, for the tailored suit is an absolute essential to good dressing.

There are many new points of interest in the up-to-date winter tailor suit. First of all, the fashion powers that be refer to it as the trotteur, a favorite word in the modern style vocabulary. Again, the general consensus of opinion is that it is perfectly proper for the trotteur to answer the requirements of winter with one of the new "cushion" fur collars, and that the semi-tailored suits be heavily bordered and collared with fur.

The all-black tailored suit, with trimmings of glossy black fur, is the last word in fashionable attire. Dealers of the world. The Spanish influence, perhaps, is reflected most of all, for style creators have selected sunny Spain this season for the well-spring of ideas. The Egyptian vogue which features over-the-ear ornamentation is reflected in the lace drape as is also the Oriental half veiling of the eyes.

Just now, the black lace, heavily patterned, is very popular. Brown and taupe colored laces are exceedingly smart on black hats. Milliners rely on the transforming power of a drape of lace, for under its transparent mesh the simplest hat is converted into a "creation" of highest achievement.

The illustrations present three very distinct fashions. Egyptian headress is suggested in the drape of the exquisite black lace veil covering a silver cloth turban, as shown in the circle.

Conservative Tailored Suits.

ers declare they are having difficulty in meeting the widespread demand for black current, Persian lamb and American broadtail. Monkey remains a trimming favorite, and suits of cloth or velvet are heavily garnished with this novelty.

Very effective black cloth suits for young girls have collar and cuffs of gray squirrel or trimmer, with which is worn a silver or steel link grille. Not all fur-trimmed suits are black, however, for the season abounds in lovely models in glowing rich rust tones, Oriental reds, taupe or beige, contrasted with handsome fur trimmings.

For her morning constitutional or shopping tour lady of fashion feels the assurance of correct apparel when she wears a conservative tailored suit of African brown wool velours, collared with Hudson seal, the tie ends finished with fur balls, such as our illustration shows. Her companion indulges in a becoming semi-tailored effect (see illustration) of Pompeian red duvetyn with scroll of matched

The center veil is a novelty, which, as you see, is not intended to cover the face at all but is frankly decorative, imparting a certain attractiveness to the entire costume. The charmingly draped in the oval is of exquisite texture and demonstrates the alluring charm of the eyebrow curtain drape. The scarf ends are weighted with huge hollow jet rings.

The black lace veiled hat is the leading vogue for dress occasions. At all times these drapes are adjusted for esthetic effect rather than for utility purposes.

Fur hats have eyebrow curtains of gold or silver lure. In these the brims are of the upturned cuff shape. Sometimes gold flowers are bordered at the top rim of the hat, apparently holding the tactual lace in place.

The newest black and white interpretation, is for a brim of ermine, over which is thrown a black lace veil, caught with jet pins.

The dinner hat, with transparent metal lace, wide brim, has a cob-web mesh of gold thread, half veiling it.

Three Distinct Fashions in Veils.

braids. Mole-skin borders coat and bell sleeve to match the adjustable collar of same.

Mingle lurks in the "laces and grooves" of the new trimming veils. Even the most demure pair of eyes sparkles in flirtations mood, when veiled in silken mesh of alluring pattern.

"With every hat a veil" seems to be the spirit of the day. By no means, however, is it an ordinary veil. The vogue is for elaborate lace trimming veils and they are draped and arranged with fascinating grace.

Inspiration for veil arrangement has been drawn from the picturesque people the same falling over the edge, weighted with metal bangles. Brown lace veils, or brown felt hats, are a popular vogue. Very effective are the black lace veils, bordered with chemille dots.

Home Just Erected. Burned to the Ground

Stephen A. Long, a carpenter of Marquette City, N. J., camped in a tent all summer with his family that they might save enough to build a small bungalow. Long built the home before and after his day's work, recently completing the bungalow.

The "moving" was quite an event and the family went to the theater at night as a little celebration. When they returned they found blackened ruins. The bungalow at the end of the cozy dining room had thrown off a spark that fired the building, which was not insured.

ANOTHER WOMAN ESCAPES

Mrs. McCumber Avoided a Serious Operation by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in Time

Georgetown, Ill.—"After my first baby was born I suffered so with my left side that I could not walk across the floor unless I was all humped over, holding to my side. I doctored with several doctors but found no relief and they said I would have to have an operation. My mother insisted on my taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I soon found relief. Now I can do all my own work and it is the Vegetable Compound that has saved me from an operation. I cannot praise my medicine too highly and I tell all of my friends and neighbors what the Compound did for me."—Mrs. MARGARET MCCUMBER, 27 S. Frazier St., Georgetown, Illinois.

Mrs. McCumber is one of the unnumbered thousands of housewives who struggle to keep about their daily tasks, while suffering from ailments peculiar to women with backache, dizziness, headaches, bearing-down pains and nervousness, and if every such woman should profit by her experience and give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial they would get well.

Farmer's Wife Finally Freed From Torturing Backache.

Torturing backaches so intense that sharp knives could not have hurt more, Mrs. A. J. Robbins, of Quebeck, Tenn., regained health and happiness through Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Weakened kidneys made her case seem hopeless. Her back ached so much so that she could not rise from a chair. Doctors, treatments, medicines—nothing gave relief.

Desponding, Mrs. Robbins was finally induced to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. In a remarkably short time she regained her former good health. She is now free from all kidney ills. Mrs. Robbins writes: "I had not been taking Dodd's Kidney Pills long before this trouble left me. I cannot say too much in praise of Dodd's Kidney Pills. Sufferers from backache, backache, dizziness, rheumatic pains or swollen joints can get this same glorious, permanent relief. ## "SHALL I SPRING?"

Synopsis.—Jane Harding, respectable and conservative old maid, since— with more money than brains, is inveigled by a strong-minded spatter, Higley Brewster, into financing an expedition to hunt for buried treasure on Leeward Island. Her niece, Virginia Harding, undertaking to stop her, gets on the vessel and is unwillingly carried along. By no means concealing her distaste for the expedition and her contempt for its members, Virginia makes the acquaintance of the Honorable Cuthbert Vane, Taiting with Dugald Shaw, leader of the expedition, Virginia very frankly expresses her views, practically accusing Shaw and the other members of the party, including a somewhat uncertain personage, Captain Magnus, and a shabby "dancer," Hamilton H. Tubbs, of being in a conspiracy to defraud Jane Harding. Landing on the island is a matter of some difficulty, Virginia being carried ashore in the arms of Cuthbert Vane. The party gets settled. Miss Browne tells about the treasure. Virginia declares herself out of it. The dead sailor's map is produced. Virginia finds a mysterious dog, Crusoe.

With the midday reunion my hour of distinction arrived. The tale of the ghost-pig was told from the beginning by Cookie, with high tributes to my courage in sallying forth in pursuit of the phantom. Even those holding other views of the genesis of the white dog were amazed at his presence on the island. In spite of Cookie's aspersions, the creature was no mongrel, but a thoroughbred of points. Not by any means a dog which some little South American coaster might have abandoned here when it put in for water. The most reasonable hypothesis seemed to be that he had belonged to the copra gatherer, and was for some reason left behind on his master's departure. But who that had loved a dog enough to make it the companion of his solitude would go away and leave it? The thing seemed to me incredible. Yet here, otherwise unaccounted for, was the corporeal presence of the dog.

I had named the terrier in the first ten minutes of our acquaintance. Crusoe was the designation by which he was presented to his new associates. Violet tolerated him, Aunt Jane called him a dear weeny pettiness love. Captain Magnus kicked him when he thought I was not looking. Cuthbert Vane chuckled with him in frankest comradeship, and Mr. Shaw softened toward him to an extent which made me hily murmur. "Love me, love my dog," not reversed. Not that I in the least wanted to be loved, only you feel it an superfluency in a person who so selfishly does not love you to endeavor to engage the affections of your bull-terrier.

As to Cookie, he magnanimously consented to overlook Crusoe's dubious past as a ghost-pig, and fed him so liberally that the terrier's lean and graceful form threatened to assume the contours of a beer-keg.

CHAPTER VII.

An Excursion and an Alarm.

As the only person who had discovered anything on the island, I was now invested with a certain importance. Also, I had a playfellow and companion for future walks, in lieu of Cuthbert Vane, held down tight to the thankless toil of treasure-hunting by his stern taskmaster. But at the same time I was provided with an annoying, because unanswerable question which had lodged at the back of my mind like a crumb in the throat:

By what strange chance had the copra gatherer gone away and left Crusoe on the island?

One morning, instead of starting directly after breakfast for the cave, Mr. Shaw hustled himself in front of the supply tent with certain explosives which were to be used in the digging operations later.

Having inquired of the Honorable Cuthbert and found that for an hour or two the boat would not be in requisition, I permitted the beautiful youth to understand that I would not decline an invitation to be rowed about the cove. Mr. Shaw had left his marine glasses lying about, and I had been doing some exploring with them. Under the great cliffs on the north shore of the bay I had seen an object that excited my curiosity. It seemed to be the hull of a small vessel, lying on the narrow strip of rocks and sand under the cliff. Now, wreckage anywhere fills me with sad and romantic thoughts, but on the shore of a desolate island even a barrel-hoop seems to suffer a sea-change into something rich and strange. I therefore commanded the b. y. to row me over to the spot where the derelict lay.

I lay back idly in the stern as the boat skimmed over the smooth water beneath the strokes of my splendid varman. More than ever he looked like the island god. Every day he grew more brown and brawny, more superb in his physical vigor.

The cliffs on the north shore of the cove were considerably higher than on the other side. The wreck lay close in, driven high upon the narrow shelf of rocks and sand at the base of the sheer ascent. Sand had heaped up around her hull and flung itself across her deck like a white winding-sheet. Surprisingly, the vessel was a very small one, a little sloop, indeed, much like the fragile pleasure-boats that cluster under the Sausalito shore at home. The single mast had been broken off short, and the stump of the bowsprit was visible, like a finger beckoning for rescue from the crawling sand.

"Poor forlorn little boat!" I said. "What in the world do you suppose brought such a raft of a thing to this uncharted spot?"

"Perhaps she belonged to the copra chapp. One man could handle her." "What would he want with her? A small boat like this is better for fishing and rowing about the cove."

"Perhaps she brought him here from Panama, though he couldn't have counted on taking back a very bulky cargo."

"Then why leave her strawn about on the rocks? And besides"—here the puzzle of Crusoe recurred to me and seemed to link itself with this—"then how did he get away himself?"

We rowed in close under the port bow of the sloop, and on the rail I made out a string of faded letters. I began excitedly to spell them out.

"—S—L—oh, Island Queen! You see she did belong here. Probably she brought the original porcine Adam and Eve to the island."

"Luckily forgot the snake, though!" remarked the Honorable Bertie with unlooked-for vivacity. For so far Aunt Jane's trembling anticipations had been unfulfilled by the sight of a single snake, a fact laid by me to the credit of St. Patrick and by Cookie to that of the pigs.

"Snakes 'd jes' be oysters on de half shell to dem pigs," declared Cookie.

As we rowed away from the melancholy little derelict I saw that nearly by narrow gully gave access to the top of the cliff, and I resolved that I would avail myself of this path to visit the Island Queen again. My mind continued to dwell upon the unknown figure of the copra gatherer. Perhaps the loss of his sloop had condemned him to weary months or years of solitude upon the island, before the rare glimmer of a sail or the trail of a steamer's smoke upon the horizon gladdened his longing eyes.

Suddenly I turned to Cuthbert Vane. "How do you know, really, that he ever did leave the island?" I demanded.

"Who—the copra chap? Well, why else was the cabin cleared out so carefully—no clothes left about or anything?"

"That's true," I acknowledged. The last occupant of the boat had evidently made a very deliberate and orderly business of packing up to go.

We drifted about the cove for a while, then steered into the dim murmuring shadow of the treasure-cavern. Mr. Vane indicated the point at which they had arrived in their exploration among the fissures opening from the ledge.

The place held me with its fascination, but we dared not linger long, for as the tide turned one man would have much ado to manage the boat. So we slid through the archway into the bright sunshine of the cove, and headed for the camp.

As we neared the beach we saw a figure pacing it. It was Dugald Shaw. And quite unexpectedly my heart began to beat with staccato quickness. Dugald Shaw, who didn't like me and who never looked at me—except just sometimes, when he was perfectly sure I didn't know it—there he was, waiting for us, and splashing into the foam to help Cuthbert beach the boat—he for whom a thousand years ago the skalds would have made a saga—

The b. y. hailed him cheerfully as we sprang out upon the sand. But the Scotchman was unsmiling.

"Make haste after your tools, lad," he ordered. "We'll have fine work now to get inside the cave before the turn."

Those were his words; his tone and his grim look meant, "So in spite of all my care you are being beguiled by a minx—"

It was his tone that I answered. "Oh, don't scold Mr. Vane!" I implored. "Every paradise has its serpent, and as there are no others here I suppose I am it. Of course all lady serpents who know their business have red hair. Don't blame Mr. Vane for what was naturally all my fault."

Not a line of his face changed. Indeed, before my most vicious stabs it never did change.

"To be sure it seems unreasonable to blame the lad," he agreed soberly. "but then he happens to be under my authority."

"Meaning, I suppose, that you would much prefer to blame me," I choked.

"There's logic, no doubt, in striking at the root of the trouble," he admitted with an air of calm detachment.

"Then strike," I said furiously; "strike, why don't you, and not beat about the bush so!" Because then he would be quite hopelessly in the wrong, and I could adopt any of several roles—the coldly haughty, the wounded but forgiving, etc., with great enjoyment.

But without a change in his glacial manner he quite casually remarked: "It would seem I had struck home."

I walked away. Fortunately nobody undertook to exercise any guardianship over Crusoe, and the little white dog bore me faithfully company in my rambles. Mostly these were confined to the neighborhood of the cove. I never ventured beyond Lookout ridge, but there I went often with Crusoe, and we would sit upon a rock and talk to each other about our first encounter there, and the fright he had given me. Everybody else had gone, gazed and admired. But the only constant pilgrim, besides myself, was, of all people, Captain Magnus. The captain's unexpected ardor for scenery carried him thither whenever he had half an hour to spare from the work in the cave. Needless to say, Crusoe and I timed our visits so as not to conflict with his.

One day, as Crusoe and I came down from the ridge, we met Captain Magnus ascending. I had in my hand a small metal-backed mirror, which I had found, surprisingly, lying in a mossy cleft between the rocks. It was a thing such as a man might carry in his pocket, though on the island it seemed unlikely that anyone would do so. I at once attributed the mirror to Captain Magnus, for I knew that no one else had been on the ridge for days. I was wondering as I walked along whether by some sublime law of compensation the captain really thought himself beautiful, and sought this retired spot to admire not the view but his own physiognomy.

When the captain saw me he stopped full in the path. There was a growth of fern on either side. I approached slowly, and, as he did not move, paused, and held out the mirror.

"I think you must have dropped this, Captain Magnus. I found it on the rocks."

For an instant his face changed. His evasive eyes were turned to me searchingly and sharply. He took the glass from my hand and slipped it into his pocket. I made a movement to pass on, then stopped, with a faint dawning of discomfort. For the heavy figure of the captain still blocked the path.

A dark flush had come into the man's face. His yellow teeth showed between his parted lips. His eyes had a swimming brightness.

"What's your hurry?" he remarked, with a certain insinuating emphasis. I began to tremble.

"I am on my way back to camp, Captain Magnus. Please let me pass."

"If you don't do you no harm if you're a little late. There shan't be no always keepin' tabs. Ain't you always a strayin' off with the Honorable? I ain't so pretty, but—"

"You are impertinent. Let me pass."

"Oh, I'm impertinent, am I? That means fresh, maybe. I'm a plain man and don't use frills on my language. Well, when I meets a little skirt that takes my eyes there ain't no harm in lettin' her know it, is there? Maybe the Honorable could say it neer—"

With a forward stride he laid a hand upon my arm. I shook him off and stepped back. Fear clutched my throat. I had left my revolver in my quarters. Oh, the dreadful denseness of these woods, the certainty that no wildest cry of mine could pierce them!

And then Crusoe, who had been waiting quietly behind me in the path, slipped in between us. Every hair on his neck was bristling. The lifted upper lip snarled unmistakably. He gave me a swift glance which said, "Shall I spring?"

Quite suddenly the gorilla bandishments of Captain Magnus came to an end.

"Say," he said harshly, "hold back that dog, will you? I don't want to kill the cur."

"You had better not," I returned coldly. "I should have to explain how your purpose very satisfactorily."

Fruit Bread.—Stir together one cupful of flour, one and one-fourth cupfuls of graham flour, one tablespoonful of sugar, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt. Add five tablespoonfuls of shortening, beat two eggs until light; add one cupful of milk and one-fourth of a cupful of molasses. Stir into the dry mixture and add three-fourths of a cupful of chopped figs, one-fourth of a cupful of chopped dates and six prunes chopped fine. Pour into a well-greased bread pan, and let stand 30 minutes. Bake in a moderate oven 40 minutes. Let stand 24 hours before using. One-fourth of a cupful of nuts may be added if desired.

Prune Stuffing for Goose.—Mix two cupfuls of stale bread crumbs with two-thirds of a cupful of melted shortening, one teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper and one and one-half teaspoonfuls of sage. Add one apple peeled and chopped and one cupful of stewed, drained, stoned and chopped prunes. Moisten with prune juice and use for filling the goose.

Jellied Prune Whip.—Wash and cover with cold water one-half pound of prunes, and simmer slowly until tender. Add one-half cupful of sugar and simmer five minutes longer. Drain, saving the juice; remove the stones and cut the prunes into very small pieces. Soak two tablespoonfuls of gelatine in one-fourth of a cupful of cold water for five minutes, and stir into the hot prune juice. Add the juice of one large lemon, and cool until beginning to thicken, then whip until light and foamy. Fold in the prunes and the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Pour into a mold or serving dish and serve very cold.

DISHES FROM GOLDEN FRUIT.

A glass of orange juice once or twice a day is a healthful drink for very young or the aged. Oranges contain sugar, mineral matters and flavonoids that are especially good for the blood. A tablespoonful of orange juice given to the baby will correct constipation. It is a medicine that no one will refuse to take, and that is the whole problem with children.

Orange and Nut Pie.—Cream two tablespoonfuls of butter with one cupful of sugar and one-half cupful of boiled rice pressed through a sieve while hot. When well blended add one cupful of boiling water and cook slowly until thickened, stirring constantly. Mix the grated rind and juice of one large orange, one tablespoonful of lemon juice and two egg yolks. Add this to the hot mixture and cook for two to three minutes. Remove from the fire and add slightly. Pour into a baked pastry shell; sprinkle with one-half cupful of finely-chopped nut meats and one cupful of orange pulp. Cover with a meringue, using the two egg whites and when stiffly beaten, stir in four tablespoonfuls of sugar. Heap on top roughly and bake until a delicate brown.

In all orange puddings avoid cooking at a high temperature any orange; as it becomes bitter and unpalatable. The juice separated from the pulp is palatable cooked.

Orange Whip.—Soak two tablespoonfuls of gelatin in one-half cupful of water for five minutes; add one cupful of boiling water and one-half cupful of sugar and stir until the sugar and gelatin are dissolved. Add one and three-fourths cupfuls of orange juice, strain and cook until it begins to thicken. Beat until foamy; fold in the stiffly-beaten whites of two eggs and heap lightly in orange shells placed in sherbet glasses. Garnish with a section of orange with all the membrane removed.

To add to the resources of one's life—think how much that means! To add to those things that make us more at home in the world; that help guard us against ennui and stagnation; that invest the country with new interest and excitement; that make every walk in the fields or woods an excursion into a land of exhausted treasures; that make the returning seasons fill us with expectation and delight; that make every rod of ground like a page of a book, in which new and strange things may be read; in short, those things that keep us fresh and sane and young and make us immune to the strife and fever of the world.—John Burroughs.

Important to all Women Readers of this Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be dependent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine, will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Birmingham, N. Y., you may receive a sample size bottle by Parcel Post. You may purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

Headline for This?

Foley's Honey and Tar is the best known and most successful family cough medicine on the market and the following letter is positively true and genuine

Says "It Acts Like Magic"

Gilbert Fleming, 2111 Bedford Ave., Los Angeles, Cal., writes: "I have much pleasure in testifying to the very great benefit my family and I have derived from the use of Foley's Honey and Tar. It positively acts like magic, and to my mind there is nothing on the market that can compare with it. Whether there are any of our household suffering from heavy colds or bad coughs or hoarseness, we at once get a bottle from our local drug store, and after one or two doses obtain instant relief. Your company deserves great credit for such a valuable production and from our own experience we cannot do otherwise but recommend it to our friends and this we willingly do and will continue to do so."

Foley's Honey and Tar

COMPOUND

CLEAR THE THROAT of phlegm and mucus, stops that tickling, opens the air passages for easier breathing and cures the raw, inflamed surfaces with a healing, soothing medicine

Coughs that "hang on" after the grip or "flu" are relieved by Foley's Honey and Tar

For Your Afternoon Teas

Brednut spread on crackers, rolls, or thin slices of bread is always tempting and delicious for afternoon teas.

Brednut is the finest spread for bread that can be made from any materials and by any process. It is made of the purest vegetable ingredients. It is churned daily in a snow-white, sanitary plant and delivered direct to your grocer. It never gets brittle from the cold, or runs from room heat. You can always rely on Brednut to stay fresh long enough for even a small family to use a pound.

BREVITIES

Dexter—By a resolution of the common council this village changed to Eastern Standard time last Sunday.

Ann Arbor—The Michigan Boosters a new organization that will aim to serve the U. of M. along lines not covered by existing societies, is being formed here.

Jackson—The American Gear & Manufacturing Co., of this city, started up Monday with a force of 350 men. The plant had been shut down for the last six weeks.

Ann Arbor—From present indications an auto show will be held in this city some time next March, if a suitable building can be secured according to W. P. Staebler, president of the Washtenaw county dealers' association.

Manchester—A telegram was received Saturday morning by F. G. Leeson that his brother, Charles Leeson, living in Oroville, Calif., was shot by four men Friday evening within a block of his home. He died instantly. No particulars have as yet been learned.

Pluckney—Milo Kettler, oldest son of Mrs. Floyd Reason nearly lost his thumb this week. While trying to hold a stick of wood and split it at the same time the axe nearly severed the thumb. Dr. C. L. Sigler was called, and from latest reports the unfortunate young man will not lose the thumb.—Dispatch.

Ypsilanti—Charles Reed, 75 years old, and a veteran of the Civil war, was killed here Sunday by an automobile driven by Walter Park, of McGraw, avenue, Detroit. Reed and his son, Wesley, were crossing the street near the post-office when they attempted to dodge a car going east and backed in front of Park's car.

Manchester—The Chicago turnpike which is a federal aid road is now completed from Chicago to Jonesville and they are working east from the latter place. Much of the grading has been done in Hillsdale and a little in Lenawee counties. When completed through to Ypsilanti it will become a great thoroughfare and an honor to Michigan, Indiana and Illinois.—Enterprise.

Manchester—Melvin Devolder, who entered Uncle Sam's navy last spring after being at the Great Lakes training camp for some time, went on a cruise on one of the vessels, touching at France, Spain, Italy, Africa, Greece, Turkey and up into the Black Sea. He is now on the way home from Philadelphia to spend a 15 day leave of absence with home friends.—Enterprise.

Ann Arbor—The local postoffice was entered Friday night and robbed of about $12 in cash and between $50 and $100 in stamps. Entrance was gained by the breaking of a side window. The postmistress, Mrs. Emory Rowe, who lives above the office, heard the thieves at work, but believed it to be a dog. No clue has been obtained by members of the sheriff's department who were called.

Howell—A farmers' institute, under the supervision of the International Harvester Company will be held in Howell, December 9 and 10. The two days institute will be similar in nature to one put on two years ago. It is planned this year to co-operate with the farm bureau and the agricultural department of Howell high school; the board of commerce also co-operating.—Democrat.

Ann Arbor—One hundred and twenty-five dollars and sixty cents was the total amount contributed by the various schools of Washtenaw county as their quota to the fund raised by the school children of the county to present to France the replicas of the two finest high school buildings in the United States. The high schools are to be known as the Washington-Lafayette high school and the Foch-Pershing high school, and the fund being raised is called the Foch memorial fund.

Jackson—Mrs. Alice Stimson, 66 years old, 116 North Perrine street, died at the W. A. Foele Memorial hospital just before 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon, as the result of injuries received several hours before, when at the corner of Main and Perrine streets she was struck by a Studebaker automobile, whose driver failed to stop even after she had been hurled into the air, had landed on the hood of his car and had rolled off after being carried about 400 feet. Witnesses to the accident told Coroner Mills, who is conducting a rigid investigation, the circumstances were brutal and shocking.—News.

Ann Arbor—Police raided a house located at 608 Fuller street which was known as the "Oriental Gardens" and placed under arrest two negroes and a man on charges of disorderly conduct. About two gallons of whisky was also taken in the raid. Mrs. Thortine Spence, negro, who is said to be the proprietor of the house, is also charged with violating the prohibition law. The other two, Sylvia Woods, a waitress, and Horace Harris, listed at the jail as a student, are held on disorderly conduct charges. The two women were arraigned Monday morning and Miss Woods drew a fine of $10 and $5.05 costs and was asked to leave Ann Arbor. Mrs. Spence was bound over to the circuit court under bail of $1,500.—Times News.

Aluminum Abundant Metal.
Aluminum is the most abundant metallic element. It is an essential constituent of nearly all rocks except sandstones and limestones. According to the United States Geological Survey, Department of the Interior. Though it is more abundant than iron it has been of no use until the last 25 years, for it is locked up so tight with oxygen that only the electric furnace can easily separate the two elements and give us the metal for our pots and pans and the thousand other things that we now make of it, including even the bodies of some automobiles and certain parts of some airplanes.

The E. A. Strout Farm Agency Largest Business of Its Kind in the World.

Most of our readers know of the E. A. Strout Farm Agency office in this section, and many of us are acquainted with Mr. F. W. Hamlin, the Division Manager here. We feel that these readers will be interested in the following story regarding this great organization as published in "The Square," a New York City magazine issued by the Madison Square Press:

"Do you know of a farm for sale in this section?" The stranger addressed this inquiry to a young man standing beside the front yard gate of a farm in Kent's Hill, Me.

"No, Sir, I don't, but I'll find one for you," was the reply he received.

The next day the farm was found and the sale was made. This simple incident, occurring in 1900, marked the beginning of The E. A. Strout Farm Agency, one of the most unique business developments this country has ever known.

The fact that one man wanted to buy a farm suggested the possibility of locating other purchasers.

The young farmer, after turning in a full day's work on his father's place, devoted his evening hours to the writing of letters to possible buyers and to prospective sellers. He obtained a Calligraph Typewriter, and because the old fashioned writing machine succeeded in upsetting his father's household with its clatter, Mr. Strout was banished to the woodshed. There, with the typewriter on a bench and a lantern hung over it, he labored with correspondence designed to establish contact between buyer and seller. Faith and determination were his partners. The first year's efforts resulted in the sale of but four farms. While the prospects to him from these transactions were almost negligible, the sales themselves served to maintain his confidence.

Reassured that the plan was fundamentally sound, he entered the second year of its development with characteristic vigor.

Recognizing the limitations of single handed operation, he arranged with other farmers to act as his representatives. Before the end of the year he had six agents in his employ.

Today he has six hundred and forty—and it is especially interesting to record that certain principles that he decided upon in those early days are adhered to now as faithfully as they were observed twenty years ago.

One requirement was that a Strout representative must be, first of all, a farmer. Sales ability was secondary. He must be a farmer and he must know farming and farm values. Today that rule is still in full application. A representative, in accepting a farm for listing on the books of the Strout Agency must list that farm in exactly the same manner as if he planned to purchase it himself. In no instance does he consider this part of the transaction as properly handled until he knows he has secured a bottom price and the most advantageous terms.

Today the E. A. Strout Farm Agency stands as an emphatic tribute to the genius of its founder. Mr. Strout, a big, broad shouldered individual, with a magnetic personality and a ready smile, is a splendid example of the type of men whose energy, resourcefulness and foresight have given leadership to American business.

Always a student of human nature, the soundness of his judgment is reflected again in the personnel of his organization. The executives in charge of ten offices in the principal cities of the United States and Canada have advanced to their present posts by the force of their own ability.

E. C. Frost, who became General Manager of the business in 1915, is a virile illustration of the type of men who are contributing their efforts and their experience to the further up-building of the business. Mr. Frost became a part of the organization in 1907, when he assumed the management of the Boston office. Shortly thereafter, this office began to establish new sales records and ultimately headed the branches in business volume. His appointment to the general management of the business was the logical outcome of his exceptional success as a Branch Manager.

Today every Strout office is energized by the force of his personality and each year of his regime has seen previous sales records go by the board.

Mr. Frost is a farmer—and is proud of it. Like Mr. Strout, he is devoted to farm life and is regarded as one of the leading Holstein breeders of Maine, spending a portion of each year on his property at Readfield.

This New England state has made further contributions to the executive staff:

There is W. E. Quinn, newspaper and publicity man, noted in New York newspaper and business circles as a writer, an organizer, a salesman and a mighty good fellow. He hails from Hallowell, Maine, and is the National Sales Manager of the Strout organization.

E. L. Chadbourne, another Maine product, with a reputation as a newspaper man that extends beyond his native state, has achieved well-earned fame as an advertising expert in serving as the National Manager of Strout's great Advertising Department.

C. H. Jordan, Assistant General Manager, is a Harvard graduate and the owner of a thriving farm in Readfield, Maine.

I. S. Randall, now Sales Manager of the New York Division, was formerly the manager of a big Maine lumber company.

Donald Light, a college baseball star, an aviator in France and a farmer from Athens, Maine, is now in charge of newspaper advertising.

This list of "native sons" also includes W. D. Hutchins, J. H. Chamberlain and Carroll Hutchins of the New England Division as well as C. H. Blanchard of the Minneapolis office.

A side light on the value of the Strout organization, not alone to the farmer, but to the city man, is shown in a survey of last summer's business.

When the general business depression seemed to be at the lowest possible point, hundreds of inquiries were received from dwellers in the larger cities, men with but a few hundred dollars to their names, without employment and facing the prospect of doing out their next eggs to the landlord, the grocer and the butcher. The call was for small farm properties that could be purchased for a down payment of from three to six hundred dollars. Word was passed on to Strout agents that farms of this character must be found—and they were found.

A special circular on these low-priced offerings was distributed and, for the first time in the history of the Strout business, monthly sales reached a total of 600 farms. That happened last July—and the present average of monthly sales continues in excess of 500.

The Strout organization has found farm homes for thousands upon thousands of families who have turned in dissatisfaction from their experience with city life. Through the guidance of Strout representatives they have been happily located in whatever section they chose. Acquiring a going farm property under payments within their reach, they have entered a new existence, enjoying a refreshing independence from the conventions which beset the city dweller. Moreover, as tillers of the soil, they have found a new life, not only provide sufficient farm products to meet their own needs but contribute a decidedly worth-while share toward the requirements of their city brothers. The Great War demonstrated the ability of the American farmer to fill any food order that came along. Today, with about an even break between city and rural population, his task is not only to feed his own fifty per cent, but also all those who prefer to be addressed at Commonwealth Avenue, Riverside Drive or Sheridan Road.

The last few years have shown a sharp "back to the farm" tendency. In this movement, the Strout Agency has been of the greatest service. This business now has 25,000 farm properties listed in the United States and Canada and its gross volume for the current year will exceed $25,000,000.

Advertising has played a leading part in this gigantic development. Its Advertising Department is maintained at a yearly cost of $60,000 and directs the expenditure of a half million dollar appropriation. Newspapers receive a liberal share of the annual disbursement. Magazines are also used whenever their respective circulations are of the required character. Direct by mail work is conducted on a tremendous scale. The yearly printing bill reaches an enormous figure. "Strout's Steering Wheel," the house organ, reaches every Strout representative weekly and now gives to him inside stories of sales made by his associates. This publication has the able editorial guidance of W. F. Fairbrother and is a splendid example of what an employees' journal ought to be.

Mr. Strout, himself, gained a keen appreciation of the value of advertising in those earlier years in Kent's Hill, and his organization now is one of the largest and most intelligent advertisers in this country.

"Faith and determination were his partners" in 1900. They are still members of the firm—and no chronicle of American business success offers a more striking exemplification of their value than is to be found in this business that E. A. Strout conceived on a Kent's Hill farm down in Maine—Advertisement.

Exhibit of Wool Grades.
For use in connection with their educational work, a number of high schools and vocational training schools have requested the United States Department of Agriculture to furnish them with exhibits showing the United States tentative grades for wool, and illustrating the process of manufacture of the raw wool into finished cloth. A sample exhibit has been prepared and the practicability of making up a number of these small exhibits for distribution to schools is now under consideration.

Ingenious Device Saves Labor.
The Sanilac county road commissioners have equipped the two county road trucks with foot spring scrapers which are attached beneath the trucks. When hauling gravel the scraper is thrown out of gear, but the trip back to the pit, it is thrown in and grades the road as it travels over it. When used for maintenance work the truck with this new device can grade 10 miles of road a day, doing the work of five teams, thus making a cut in the county's maintenance expenses.

MANY LIKE THIS IN CHELSEA
Similar Cases Being Published In Each Issue.

The following case is but one of many occurring daily in Chelsea. It is an easy matter to verify it. You cannot ask for better proof.

John Kelly, W. Middle St., Chelsea, says: My work is what started my kidney trouble. The secretions were highly colored and contained sediment. They acted irregularly and the secretions were painful in passage. I suffered from rheumatic pains in my back and would get sore and stiff. Mornings I felt all tired out and it took an hour or so to get limbered up. I was often nervous and dizzy, especially when I had to stoop over. I used different remedies but they didn't help me any. Then I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and tried some. Doan's completely relieved me of all the trouble with my kidneys and back so I am glad to recommend them.

(Statement given March 1, 1913.)
On April 27, 1920, Mr. Kelly said: "Doan's Kidney Pills are all right and I gladly confirm the statement I gave some years ago regarding the merits of this medicine."

Adial Prudden, of Vicksburg, spent several days of the past week at the home of his son, Harry Prudden and family. Mr. Prudden was a former well known resident of Chelsea.

Herman Alber, who has been confined to his home on South Main street for the past week with an attack of diphtheria, is reported as fast recovering his former health.

Emanuel Feldkamp has sold his farm in Lima to Allen Bosworth, of Redford, and will give possession of the place March 1st. Mr. Feldkamp and family expect to locate in Chelsea in the spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Steinbach entertained last Thursday, Mrs. H. E. Fletcher and family, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Steinbach and son, Charles William, of Dexter, and Miss Marian Steinbach, of Flint.

The Epworth League of the Methodist church will conduct the evening services on Sunday, December 4. The men's chorus will sing and addresses will be given by E. L. Benton, F. W. Hamlin, P. M. Broesamle, E. L. Clark, and E. P. Steiner.

A vote by mail is to be taken on the change of time from Central Standard to Eastern Standard time in Chelsea. Blank ballots have been prepared and will be mailed to the water users, about four hundred and twenty-five families. Others who desire can secure blank ballots by calling on Village President, D. H. Wurster.

About eleven o'clock last Thursday evening a truck passing through Chelsea backed into the gasoline pump in front of the Overland garage and it was badly damaged. A. G. Faust, who owns the garage, has got some trace of the owner of the outfit and expects in the course of a few days to succeed in making them pay for the damaged pump.

Dan Shell was quite badly bruised Saturday evening when he was struck by an auto truck at the entrance to the alley at the residence of M. J. Noyes. F. G. Loeffler and his son were driving the car to their home and as they turned off Main street, they saw Mr. Shell in the middle of the crossing and as the machine was moving slowly a more serious accident was averted.

People are not always careful enough in wrapping packages to be sent by parcel post. Good strong paper should be used and if tied with a cord care should be taken to tie the knots in several places so the cord cannot slip off. Sometimes a paper box is crushed in the mails and the cord being loosened slips off. One cannot be too careful. One's name and address should be placed inside the package as well as on the outside.

Miss Veronica Breitenbach, of Jackson, spent the week-end at the home of Dr. and Mrs. A. L. Steger.

The disbarment proceedings in the Washtenaw circuit court against Andrew Sawyer is being heard this week. This is the first time in the history of the Washtenaw circuit court that a member of the bar has ever been placed on trial for conduct unbecoming to an attorney-at-law.

E. G. Hoag has sold his store building on East Washington street, Ann Arbor, to the Odd Fellows Temple Association. The Odd Fellows will use the second and third floors as lodge rooms. Mr. Hoag has rented the first floor and will continue his business in that location. Mr. Hoag was a former well known resident of Chelsea.

Conference Agreeing on Naval Limitations but Apart on China Questions.

BRAND'S ELOQUENT SPEECH

France's Need of Strong Army, Due to Fear of German Aggression, Convincingly Set Forth—Tax Bill Becomes Law and Congress Adjourns.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

CONCORD and discord both were apparent in the armament conference last week. It appeared the Hughes plan for naval holiday and limitation would soon be accepted formally almost exactly as he proposed it. Great Britain endorsed the "5-5-3" ratio without reservation and made it known that she desired only to suggest some modification of the submarine and replacement features of the plan as a whole. The Japanese, though still arguing that they should have 70 per cent of the naval strength of Great Britain and the United States, evidently were prepared to yield with the expectation of some concessions in their favor relative to China. But the British, at home, already are growing impatient. As soon as the Hughes plan was given out the admiralty stopped work on battleships under construction. Yesterday it announced that unless a decision relative to naval limitation were reached by the conference within two weeks, work on the battleships would be resumed before Christmas. The admiralty may have been influenced in this by the fact that our congress adjourns without ordering cessation of work on our new ships.

As for the discord, which unfortunately exists, it arises over two subjects—land armament limitation and China. Concerning the reduction of armies the ill feeling is between France and England and is being sedulously fostered by certain British correspondents now in Washington, notably H. G. Wells, who brazenly admits that he is doing his "own small best to exacerbate it," his avowed reason being that "a brisk quarrel and some plain speaking may clear the air for a better understanding."

PREMIER BRIAND, in a wonderful address, told the conference and the world just why France dare not now reduce her land force too far. Without hesitation he set forth frankly his country's fears of Germany, first, and of Russia, more remotely. With facts and figures he made plain the possibility that Germany might again and almost within a day become a powerful and dangerous military nation, and that a considerable portion of the German people look forward to this he showed by quotations from Ludendorff, who still has a large following. Briand did not fail to give generous praise to Wirth's government and admitted there were many people in Germany, especially among the working classes, who want to work and want no more war. The Germany they represent, he said, France would do all in her power to help. But, he said, until there was a "moral disarmament" as well as a physical in Germany, and unless France was assured of the continued support of the United States and Great Britain, France could not lay herself open to attack by Germany. "We have to know," he said, "that France is not morally isolated, that she still has with her the men of good will and the hearts of all people who have fought with her on the same battlefield."

As for the charge that Briand and the French who follow him have a hidden design to install in Europe a sort of middle supremacy, this, the premier said, "is the most painful, heart-rending and cruel thing a Frenchman can hear." It is impossible, much as one would like to do so, to quote more of Mr. Briand's eloquent speech. Suffice it to say that in an unprejudiced mind it was an ample reply to the anti-French propaganda of Wells et al., and that it did not fail of effect on his fellow conferees. Arthur Balfour was the first to respond, and Secretary Hughes followed him. Both assured Briand that their countries appreciated the position of France and virtually pledged the support for which he had pleaded, though of course both were careful not to promise an equivalent in international law for the Anglo-Franco-American defensive treaty which Lloyd George, Clemenceau and Wilson signed, but which never was even submitted to the American senate. Mr. Hughes arranged that the question of land armament should be further considered by a committee, but the impression was general that it would be permitted to die, at least so far as limitation is concerned; and this impression was strengthened by the departure of Mr. Briand and the French military section for home, the premier being secure in the belief that his country would not now be asked to reduce its army further than its present plans contemplate. One other cause of debate he had interjected into his argument. "This was the claim of France to keep an ample number of submarines for the defense of her long seacoast. 'For what can France wish submarines except to attack England?' cried the propagandists at once. To which the only adequate reply is laughter."

IT WAS foreseen that the Chinese problem would be the most troublesome for the conference, for obvious reasons. At this writing it seems to have come to a question whether the Anglo-Japanese treaty will be abrogated, and if so, whether some sort of a tripartite agreement will be substituted for it. Unless the former is done, probably the discussions will be fruitless; and unless the latter is done, it is likely Great Britain will not consent to the former. On Monday the eight powers sitting in the committee on the Far East adopted a program submitted by Elihu Root by which these points were made sure:

There will be no intervention by foreign powers in the present political struggle in China.

The territorial and administrative integrity of the Asiatic republic is assured.

Japan and all the other nations agreed to refrain from a greedy scramble for commercial rights and privileges there.

The "open door" finds a new definition.

Baron Kato won a decided victory for Japan when he persuaded the committee virtually to recognize that Manchuria, though an integral part of China, is so thoroughly in possession of the Japanese that the status quo should be maintained there. There is divergence of views among the British, French and Chinese as to how the Root principles are to be applied to specific matters. At the close of the week the Chinese proposals for lifting foreign restrictions on China's customs revenue were being considered by a subcommittee.

One concession had been won by the Oriental republic—permission to increase its tariff rate from 5 per cent to 12½ per cent. So far as is now apparent, the idea of restoring to China the various parts of her territory now held by other powers has gone into the discard. That question is complicated by the fact that Russians have control of outer Mongolia and have set up a Mongolian soviet there. Moreover Tchitcherine, Russian minister of foreign affairs, says they intend to stay there, and it is beyond thought that any of the nations represented in the Washington conference should undertake to oust them.

WITH the final adoption of two measures of importance—the tax bill and the anti-medicine beer bill—congress wound up the business of the special session and adjourned Wednesday afternoon. The senators and representatives will have about ten days' vacation before the regular session meets. Enactment of the tax bill into law means the repeal of the transportation taxes and a considerable number of other miscellaneous taxes on January 1, 1922. While the repeal of the excess profits tax and the changes in corporation income tax and individual surtax rates also become effective on that date, taxpayers will not get the benefit of the changes until they pay their taxes in the early part of 1923 on income of the calendar year 1922.

The individual taxpayer will get the benefit of increased exemptions applying to dependents and to heads of families with moderate incomes on their taxes paid in 1922 on 1921 income.

The chief features of the new law are substitution of a 12½ per cent flat corporation income tax for the excess profits tax and the present normal tax of 10 per cent, retention of present normal taxes on individual incomes, but a decrease in surtax rates, the new maximum being 50 per cent instead of 65, repeal of a number of miscellaneous taxes, and imposition of some new manufacturers' taxes.

E. MONT KELLY, governor of Porto Rico, arrived in New York the other day, and almost immediately afterward Senator Cordova-Davila, resident commissioner from the island in Washington, received cable instructions from San Juan to request President Harding to remove the governor from office for injudicious and indiscreet actions. Among the specific charges against Kelly are:

He publicly declared himself leader of the Insular Republican party and the "friend of the Socialist party."

Annulled the "moral power" of judges by announcing they would be removed if a decision was rendered considered by the governor unjust.

Pardoned criminals "to please Socialist leaders," and these criminals immediately committed new crimes.

"Directed or permitted" police to break up reception organized to greet Antonio Barcelo, president of the senate, and leader of the Unionist party, "inter promoting the police officer who broke up the demonstration."

Appointed three departmental heads "opposed to the spirit of the organic act and to the laws of Porto Rico," on recommendation of "corporations whose directors reside outside Porto Rico."

DIPLOMATIC relations between the United States and Germany were resumed last week by exchange of ambassadorial calls in Paris and by the arrival in Washington of Baron Edmund von Thiermann as charge d'affaires to prepare the embassy for the coming of an ambassador. He is sitting up the building with furnishings plain and inexpensive enough to suit the most democratic, having brought most of them from Berlin. Any extravagance would be inconsistent with the poverty pleas of the German government, which is now seeking foreign credits to enable it to pay the reparations and customs installments due the allies early next year.

The riots and strikes in Berlin, due to high prices of food and the low value of the mark, are spreading to many other parts of the country, and the government is said to be in fear of monarchist and communist uprisings. A general strike is threatened unless those arrested in the riots are released.

IN BELFAST, too, there has been serious rioting, resulting in the death of a dozen or more persons and the looting of many stores. The clashes, judging from the cable reports, seem to have been instigated by the Orangemen. Bombs were used freely and with deadly effect, and the military was unable to stop the slipping of the Sinn Fein and Ulster factions. The speaker of Dail Eireann, Eoin MacNeill, accused the British government of organizing "the most horrible of all the kinds of war in Ireland—a war as fanatical as the religious wars of the Seventeenth century."

The Irish delegates met with the British cabinet members on Wednesday, but what progress they made was not made public.

AND yet more rioting—this time in Bombay. The arrival there of the prince of Wales was the signal for the outbreak and for four days there was a wild time in the Indian city. A score of persons were killed, hundreds wounded and many fires started. In the Malabar district the British have been making some progress against the rebels; several hundred Mohajirs were killed in two engagements.

EARLY AGREEMENT ON NAVIES SOUGHT

PLENARY SESSION DEC. 1 TO HEAR REPORT ON THE NAVAL AGREEMENT.

RESULTS SATISFY DELEGATES

Success of Conference Now Seen By Officials; China Also Wins
Point.

Washington.—The American delegation, and as it appears the British and Japanese also, have begun a mighty drive to get an agreement on all questions, essential to the success of the present conference, before the holiday recess.

This does not mean that the work of the conference will be completed by that time, but there is excellent reason to believe that the fundamentals of the armament program can be agreed to and that the questions of China can all be settled in principle and the details referred to subcommittees for working out.

To Report on Naval Ratio.

There are rumors everywhere as to the state of the armament discussion, and all to the general effect that an agreement on the main proposition of capital ship ratio has been reached. Officially, however, these rumors are not confirmed. All that is known positively is that the joint committee of naval experts has completed its work with respect to the proposed 5-5-3 capital ship ratio and this question is now in the hands of the "Big Three"—Hughes, Balfour and Kato—for final determination.

A plenary session will be held Dec. 1 to hear a report on the naval agreement.

It is highly significant that, with this very crucial stage of the negotiations reached, everybody is in a highly optimistic mood. Americans, Japanese and British all are giving every sign of being most highly pleased with themselves.

Expect Japanese Agreement.

The statements that the naval ratio has been agreed to probably arises from the attitude of the Japanese newspapermen and other Japanese non-official observers here. These for several days, from the very beginning in fact, have not believed that their government was very hard set in its proposal of a 70 per cent naval ratio, to replace the 60 per cent, allowed them by Mr. Hughes. In support of this opinion, they point out that the Japanese delegation has never formally presented its claim of an increase.

"LOST BATTALION" LEADER LOST

Colonel Whittlesey, of World War
Fame, Disappears From Boat.

New York.—Lieut. Col. Charles W. Whittlesey, leader of the famous "Lost Battalion" of the 77th Division and one of the outstanding commanders of the American Army during the World War, is reported to have disappeared from the United Fruit Liner Tolosa, bound from New York to Havana.

The radio message said Whittlesey left several letters addressed to friends in his state room. His executor, John B. Prayn, with whom he was at one time associated in the law business, said the Colonel had suffered from fits of melancholia since his narrowing experiences in the Argonne Drive, and that he had been particularly depressed since attending the burial of the "Unknown Soldier" at Arlington Cemetery Armistice Day.

KIRBY TRIAL UP DECEMBER 13

Jurors To Be Recalled to Hear Baby
Death Case at Adrian.

Adrian.—Mrs. Mattie Kirby of Hudson, will go on trial Tuesday, December 13, in the Lenawee circuit court on a charge of murder.

The date was agreed upon Monday by the prosecutor and counsel for Mrs. Kirby and the jurors drawn for the October term will be recalled on that date.

Mrs. Kirby is charged with the death of an infant born to her daughter, Alice Kirby, last July 4. The case was on the regular call for the October term, but was put at the foot of the calendar as O. L. Smith of the attorney general's department, who is to assist in the prosecution, was out of the state.

LORENZ OVERCOME BY CROWDS

Sick and Crippled Eager to Consult Eminent Surgeon.

New York.—Dr. Adolf Lorenz, eminent Vienna "bloodless" surgeon, was near a collapse Monday at the hospital for joint disease, when hundreds of children, accompanied by their parents, crowded the examination room to consult him.

The people were cleared away, Dr. Lorenz smoked a cigarette and later he had recovered to such an extent that he was able to eat lunch.

Four policemen were needed to saddle the crowds which braved the rain to see Dr. Lorenz Monday. Most of the patients were on foot, or on crutches, but some came in automobiles.

Carrying On With the American Legion

Lemuel Holmes of Seattle, Wash., has been elected national adjutant of the American Legion for his third term.

Yellow Medicine is the tenth county in Minnesota to make "American Legion Day" a regular event of its county fair.

"The Pajama Gazette" is the name of a publication edited by the disabled soldiers of Asbury hospital at Minneapolis, Minn.

"Say it with Jobs" is the slogan adopted by the American Legion in Chicago in its campaign to aid unemployed ex-service men.

The bodies of Gunmar Dahl and David Thor, "pals," killed in France by the same shell, were buried in the same grave in their native Illinois town.

New Orleans will be the scene of the 1922 national convention of the American Legion. The Southern city guaranteed $100,000 for defraying expenses of the meeting.

Mayer Hena of Milwaukee, Wis., has vetoed a resolution of the city council indorsing the work of the American Legion in finding positions for jobless ex-service men.

A monumental building to be erected in Washington in memory of the National Guardsmen who gave their lives in the World war, has been suggested by Maj. Gen. George C. Rickards, chief of the militia bureau of the War department.

The growth of the American Legion is shown by the organization of 1,050 new posts in 1920-21. Many new posts were organized by American ex-service men in foreign countries and today the sun never sets on the American Legion.

The daisy has been adopted by the American Legion as its official flower. The poppy, which has been popular with Legionnaires because of its association with Flanders, was voted out because it was not an American flower and could not be obtained in large quantities.

The employment of jobless ex-service men to assist the police in combating the holdup men has been begun in Lincoln, Neb. The plan was evolved following a series of robberies in the residential district of the city. The mayor and chief of police of Lincoln have indorsed the plan.

Following a reception for him at Kansas City, staged by 50,000 members of the American Legion, Marshal Foch, who came to America as the Legion's guest, declared that although Washington and New York were the head of the United States he was certain Kansas City was the heart.

The original post of the American Legion, George Washington Post No. 1, lost no time in signing Marshal Foch as a member. The generalissimo was met at the station at Washington, D. C., on the day of his arrival in America and presented with a membership card and a ceremonial badge of the Legion.

Marshal Foch is now a devotee of the corn-cob pipe. When his special train was stopped at Washington, Mo., on its way to Kansas City, he was presented with a box of the Missouri product. Later, while he was attending the American Legion convention, he was offered a cigar, but he declined in favor of the corn-cob "furnace."

More than 30,000 bodies of Americans who died in France during the World war will rest forever in the sacred soil near the battlefields. Secretary of War Weeks declared in a recent letter to the American Legion at Washington. A total of 43,670 bodies have been returned to the United States, according to the war secretary.

"If you will walk down Main street, U. S. A.," writes George F. Kearny in a widely published magazine article, "you will come to a building which houses the American Legion post of the town. It is the most democratic institution that can be found and the discussions of the post are worthy of the closest study as an index of the future."

A survey recently conducted by the American Legion shows that between 600,000 and 700,000 service men are out of employment in the United States. The East has a greater percentage of jobless men than any other section of the country, with 150,000 former soldiers, sailors and marines in New York alone, without regular employment, many in actual want.

Police officials of Iowa are investigating the writing of threatening letters to several members of the American Legion in Iowa. The letters are believed to be the work of I. W. W.'s. One of them demanding "$200 or we'll blow you to hell" was received by John B. Wallace, son of the secretary of agriculture. Young Wallace is vice commander of the Argonne post of the Legion at Des Moines. Harry H. Polk, another Des Moines Legion member, received a letter threatening to blow up his home because he "led the boys to death in battle."

Electricity for North Atlantic Coast

WASHINGTON.—Secretary Fall submitted to President Harding the analysis made by the geological survey of a comprehensive system for generating and distributing electricity to transportation lines and industries in the north Atlantic coast region between Boston and Washington. The survey was authorized by congress.

The engineers who made the survey reported that 970 miles of 220,000 volt lines and five times that mileage in 110,000 volt lines would be needed. The 1,200 miles of wire now carrying 23,000 volts and over would be operated as simple distribution lines for local industries. This transmission network and its substations would require $104,000,000 by 1930, the report said, in which year the total investment would be $1,109,364,000.

Electrification of the Boston-Washington area, according to the report, would save 50,000,000 tons of coal annually by 1930, or $196,000,000 in fuel expenditure. While electrification of the railroads would save "11 to 19 per cent on their investment."

In his letter to the President, Secretary Fall referred "to the obvious fact that it is by multiplying our manpower by machines that American labor can best meet the competition of cheap foreign labor."

"I believe," he continued, "the engineering facts and economic conclusions here presented will command the attention alike of the financiers, railroad executives, public utility officials, industrial leaders, and others of that large group of our citizens of large vision who are building for the America of tomorrow."

"These economies on a truly national scale will affect not only coal, but capital expenditures as well, and especially the output of human energy. More and cheaper electricity must surely add to the comfort and prosperity of our citizens, and this report on a super-power system is submitted as a contribution of the Department of the Interior to the common welfare."

More Efficiency in Veterans' Bureau

SWEEPING recommendations designed to increase the efficiency of the veterans' bureau have been made in a report by the special senate committee investigating government activities for the relief of former service men. The report was the committee's second. The bureau should "broaden its interpretation and widen the scope of application of existing laws," the report said, adding that additional legislation would be sought to meet deficiencies shown. Among recommendations were:

Appropriation of $16,400,000 for hospitals; transfer of all government hospitals, including soldiers' homes not needed by the army and navy, to the bureau, creation of a chaplain corps for service in hospitals and training centers; provision of cemeteries at soldiers' hospitals; standardization of training, permitting the applicant to select as far as possible his own vocation; extension of insurance to $10,000 to each policyholder if he desires, and extension of insurance and compensation privileges to Americans who served in allied forces.

Cancellation of contracts with state, municipal and private hospitals not in existence April 1, 1917, and with all similar institutions which are found unsuitable, was recommended as one administrative reform, others under this head including: Issuance of rules and regulations for the maintenance of order and discipline; thorough inspection of hospitals and training centers, elimination of politics from appointments, establishment of additional vocational centers at institutions where mental and tubercular patients are treated.

To July 1 there had been 388,000 applications for vocational training, the committee found, adding that "although we are approaching the third anniversary of the armistice," only 5,950 have been rehabilitated.

Only 12,000 men have accepted training without pay, out of 96,013 eligibles, and only 96,000 with pay out of 159,303 eligibles, the report said.

The committee said that the government had failed to obtain "results commensurate with the large expenditures," in rehabilitation work, and expressed belief that knowledge of the government's failure prevented men "from seeking hospital treatment until too late."

At the average city dweller, particularly those in the East, the extent of the work of county agents in organizing farmers' co-operatives will be almost astonishing. Certain business interests have criticized the attitude of the department, but its policy is that the farmers' business education must now be put on a par with his education in production.

Last year 798 county agents assisted in organizing co-operative enterprises. This was 61 per cent of the total number of agents in the field. The business done through these organizations, as stated, amounted to $375,714,000, and the saving through the co-operative form was $21,162,773. The average business per agent was $620.121, and the saving per agent was $43,304.

American Elms for Lincoln Memorial

TWO American elms have been planted by the American Forestry association on the grounds of the Lincoln memorial. The elms, one for the allied armies and one for the allied navies, were dedicated by Charles Lathrop Pack of Lakewood, N. J., president of the association. After Mr. Pack's short address, Mrs. Warren G. Harding presented her tree-planting trophy to members of the American Legion who placed the trees at the Twenty-third street entrance to the grounds. The trees are to stand at the head of what will be an international avenue of memorial trees to be planted by various world governments, according to the plans of Lieut. Col. C. O. Sherrill of the department of public buildings and grounds, who co-operated with the American Forestry association in plans for the tree planting.

Mrs. Harding brought with her in the walnut box the trowel with which she planted the Ohio tree on the association's grounds last spring. The famous trowel has just returned from Canton, O., and South Bend, Ind., where it had been used for memorial tree planting at the tomb of William McKinley and along the Lincoln highway. Immediately after the ceremony the trowel was sent to Chicago for the American Legion. In dedicating the trees, Mr. Pack said:

"The elm is inseparably connected with the past and present of America. For such an avenue this is a fitting spot—the memorial to Abraham Lincoln. Look about you and you see him. He and the United States are identical. He and you men who fought are identical. He and the cause of the plain people for which you fought are identical. He, Eternal Truth, and the cause we mark today are all identical."

Only a Real Man Would Do It

By FRANK H. WILLIAMS.

As Harry Bowers crawled slowly through the tunnel toward the First National Bank building, the words of warning addressed to him earlier that evening by Clara Jennings rang in his ears.

Clara was one of the boarders at the place where Harry had been staying since being detailed to the First National case. Clara was a stenographer at the bank and she was just about as pretty a girl as Harry had ever seen in his travels. It had been a case of love at first sight with Harry, but Clara held him off provokingly. This evening just before Harry started on his perilous task, he had again attempted sentimentality with Clara. "I'm going into a dangerous job to-night, Clara," said Harry. "I wish you could say something encouraging to me."

Clara had laughed a little at this. Then she had become quite solemn. "I wish you all the luck in the world," she said. "I've got a hunch that you're going to try and stop the thieves who've been taking securities from the First National vaults. Being the president's stenographer I've naturally got on to what you're doing. And I know it will be a dangerous job. Perhaps, if you come through with it all right—" Just a faint smile of encouragement had wreathed her lips at this. "But it will take a real man to win out against this gang. They'll kill without mercy. You'd best be careful—mighty careful."

With that Clara had slipped away. And it was with nothing more than this rather dubious encouragement that he had started into the hot, narrow tunnel which he had so laboriously excavated.

Now, as Harry once more recalled Clara's words, his attention was suddenly called to something else. A noise, dull but steady, came to his ears. Harry hurried his crawling. The noise became louder. There could be no mistaking it now—the noise was directly ahead of him.

"It's the gang!" said Harry to himself. "I was right in my guess—they get into the vault by means of a tunnel under the bank. Now if I can only cut them off!"

Harry reassured himself that the heavy automatic pistol was still in his belt. Then arriving at the end of the excavation he had so far made, he applied himself to the task of quickly digging at the earth ahead of him, while he muffled the sound of his work as much as possible and gave ear now and then to the sounds ahead of him. The shovel which Harry worked in the stifling darkness he had left in the tunnel upon his last trip, and near the point where he had left the shovel was an electric spotlight connected with a wire running back through the cave and ready for instant action.

As Harry dug the sounds on the other side of his work indicated unmistakably that he was fast approaching the other tunnel.

Soon a shaft of light pierced the gloom. He had made a point of contact with the other tunnel!

Harry ceased work and applied his eye to this hole. The opening into which he looked was quite well lighted by electric light attached to the ceiling. The room, as it might be called, into which he looked was quite large. In the center was a table and around the table were grouped four figures.

The sound of the conversation going on among these came to Harry in only muffled tones. But under the light above the little table he could see a number of securities spread out. Evidently these had been just taken from the vault. The gang was apparently at its merry, if he could pull off their capture.

And as Harry speculated about the means of effecting the capture of the gang a question ran through his mind as to the identity of the four people around the table. It was supposed by those who were trying to stop the robbers and apprehend the thieves that someone in the bank was closely connected with the gang. Was there an official of the bank in this crowd? Or was some employee of the bank in the number?

Harry tried hard to recognize some one of the figures, but the black-masked faces and the nondescript figures defied identification.

While Harry looked there came some sort of an altercation or discussion. The talk became more heated and higher in tone. Then there came a concerted movement by all the four figures around the table up toward the front of the tunnel, where undoubtedly there was a cleverly made entrance into the bank's old-time vault.

Presently the room into which Harry gazed was empty. This was his opportunity.

Quickly Harry hewed at the earth in front of him. In a moment or so he had a hole big enough for him to crawl through. In another minute he was inside the room.

Harry hunted the spotlight into the room with him. Then he cast around for the wires which furnished the electricity for the lights glowing in the room. At first it was hard to discover these, but at length he found them and severed them with a quick pinch of the cutting tweezers he had brought with him.

The moment the place was plunged into gloom there came the sound of movement from the front of the tunnel. At this sound Harry switched on the light in his spotlight and flashed it toward the front of the tunnel. He then placed the light on the floor, still focused toward the front of the tunnel, and stepped away from it. He did this for fear that if he stayed near the light the members of the gang might fire at the light and hit him.

Almost instantly two figures were thrown into sharp relief as they rushed into the light. They were without masks. Harry gasped as he saw them. One of them was the cashier of the bank. The other was Clara Jennings dressed in men's clothes.

In spite of his tremendous surprise and amazement Harry shouted automatically at the two.

"Stop!" he cried. "Throw up your hands!"

He saw Clara start at the sound of his voice. Undoubtedly she recognized him. Then her hands went up, as did those of the cashier.

For a wild moment Harry thought of telling the girl to stop by him. It would be so easy to let her out of this mess. Then stern duty clamped down upon him. It was an inside job, after all, and here were the two insiders, Clara and the cashier.

Harry was thinking quickly. His next step must be to get the two other members of the gang into the light and to then disarm all of them.

But while Harry was quickly planning his next steps there came a sudden rush behind him. He found himself suddenly battling with a fifth gangster who had come from the rear. And as Harry fought with this antagonist, who seemed even stronger and bigger than himself, he saw the cashier flood him with the light from a flashlight. Then came another disarming development. The cashier pulled a pistol from his pocket and deliberately aimed at Harry.

Harry's antagonist was managing to keep away from the light, despite Harry's utmost efforts to get the gangster between himself and the cashier. Consequently Harry offered a perfectly easy target. Through Harry's mind flashed the thought that this was to be his end.

Harry gave a last despairing glance at Clara. Then to his intense surprise came another startling development. Quickly, efficiently, Clara knocked up the cashier's pistol so that the gun upon its discharge sent the bullet harmlessly into the ceiling of the tunnel. Then equally quickly and efficiently she covered the cashier with a pistol of her own.

Through Harry's veins surged a great wave of joy. Perhaps, after all, Clara was all right!

And at this thought he felt renewed strength coming to him. In a moment he had bested his opponent. In another few minutes, with Clara covering the cashier, Harry brought the other gangsters into the light and disarmed them. And within a comparatively short time the four men of the tunnel were safely lodged behind bars.

Then Harry had a heart-to-heart talk with Clara.

"You see," Clara explained, "I've been investigating the thefts just as you have for some time. I'm a private detective employed by the president of the bank. My job as stenographer was just a blind."

"You saved my life," said Harry softly. "I owe everything to you, but—I failed in my job. I didn't capture the gangsters alone. It took you to help me do it. And you said there'd be a chance for me only if I won out."

"You did win out," said Clara shyly. "You played a man's part. You didn't tell me to escape when you thought I was one of the gang. It took a real man to do the way you did. And as for winning me—perhaps I'd not have gone into the tunnel tonight if I hadn't been afraid—for you."

One fleeting glance she gave Harry as she said this. But that glance was enough. There was a wonderful message in her eyes. And with a wildly beating heart Harry caught Clara to him and kissed her.

FLOWER CHANGES ITS COLOR

Peculiar Quality of Rose-of-Sharon Distinguishes It From Others of Hibiscus Species.

The Rose-of-Sharon is different from all other roses in that it is not a rose at all, but belongs to the hibiscus genus of flowering plants. Again, it differs from all other hibiscus because its blossoms change their color three times during a single day. In the morning, the petals of this interesting flower are pure white in color; by noon they take on a delicate pink tint which steadily deepens to an old-rose shade that at night is tinged with a purple hue.

The natural domain of the Hibiscus Mutabilis—as the Rose-of-Sharon is called—is in Asia Minor and the hilly region extending from Syria to the Himalayan plateau. It has both single and double flowers, the latter being considerably larger than the former, and very beautiful and showy.

This variety is cultivated in Hawaii and other warm countries for outdoor, ornamental purposes—the slender, graceful branches suspended with magnificent pink, white and rose-colored blossoms making it a tree of unusual decorative beauty and a constant delight to study.

GARLICKY WHEAT IS UNDESIRABLE

Millers Unanimous in Saying Presence of Weed Seed Greatly Reduces Its Value.

FLOUR YIELD IS DECREASED

Great Risk of Spoilage Is Due to Fermentative or Germicidal Action Started by the Absorption of Moisture.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Because the presence of garlic or wild onion in wheat decreases its market value materially, a special study of the problem of marketing wheat so tainted has been made by the bureau of markets and crop estimates, United States Department of Agriculture. The purpose of the study was to ascertain how such wheat is purchased from producers, as regards grades and price at the primary grain markets of Maryland, and the effect, if any, on the producer.

The average garlic content of 47 samples of Maryland wheat taken from wagons, elevators, bins, and mills was 40 bulbs to a pound. Millers were unanimous in saying that the presence of garlic greatly decreases the milling value for a number of reasons, such as the greater risks from spoilage, the extra cleaning and preparation required for milling, the lower flour yields, the greater cost of manufacturing, and the lower market value of the resultant flour.

Bulbs Vary in Size.

Garlic bulbs range in size from that of a kernel of wheat to that of a pea seed. The specific gravity of the bulbs is less than that of the wheat kernel, though it varies with the season and with the weather conditions. The bulbs are heaviest at harvest time, as later the moisture evaporates and they lose weight. The greater risk of spoilage in garlicky wheat is due to the fermentative or germicidal action in wheat started by the absorption of moisture from the garlic bulbs. As this is a slow process, the danger of spoilage is slight where grain is handled or moved frequently.

None of the special cleaners for removing the garlic is entirely satisfactory. Some of them remove too small a part of the garlic, and some remove too much wheat when removing the garlic. It was noted that the condition of the bulbs had more of an effect on the resulting odor than the number of bulbs. Those full of juice contaminate flour more readily than drier ones.

One of the serious results of the presence of garlic in wheat is the clogging of the corrugations of the rolls in the mills so that they cannot function properly. Under such conditions it is sometimes necessary for the mills to shut down two or three times a day in order to scrape and wash the rolls. This slows up the work, reduces the output, and increases the cost of production per unit. There is little demand for flour made from garlicky wheat, therefore mills have to discount it when it is sold from 25 cents to $1 a barrel. It is used chiefly for blending with sweet flours.

Should Be Eradicated From Fields.

The field should be planted to a tiller crop the following spring. Any crop so planted should be carefully tilled, preferably with the knife or sweep type of implement. This will destroy the plants arising from the hard-shelled bulbs. As the hard bulbs last two years it will be necessary to repeat fall plowing, followed by another tilled crop. Rye may be sown after the late fall plowing and turned under for green manure the following spring.

Many farmers make a practice of throwing weeds of various sorts out of the bundles at the time of shocking wheat. It has been found that if the entire product of the field is removed from the land at harvest time, great care taken in planting only seed that is free from garlic and other weeds, and proper crop rotation practiced considerable progress in garlic eradication can be made within a few years. It is believed by department officials that if this is done it will be possible in time to eliminate, or at least greatly reduce, the garlic in the fields.

FALL PLOWING AIDS IN DIFFERENT WAYS

Prevents Piling Up of Work at Critical Period.

Only Disking or Harrowing Is Necessary to Put Land in Shape for Early Planting in Spring—Insects Are Dislodged.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

For various spring-sown crops, especially grain, the United States Department of Agriculture has found fall plowing a profitable operation in many sections. As an economic measure, it prevents the piling up of work at a critical period. Spring grain usually can be sown to advantage as soon as the frost is out and the ground is dry enough to work, and it is to the farmer's advantage to have it in the ground as early as practicable. The greatest obstacle to early planting is getting the ground in shape. On large operations, where either plowing or seeding takes a month, waiting for the man and horsepower to finish plowing before it can be used in seeding often means a delay that is disastrous. If the ground is plowed in the fall, when other work is not pressing, only disking or harrowing will be required in the spring.

Fall plowing serves valuable purposes. It permits the ground to store up moisture from winter snows and rains, and often dislodges eggs and larvae of insect pests which had found snug winter quarters in the soil, exposing them so they will be killed by the cold. Stubble and other vegetable matter left from the harvest, if turned under in the fall, has many more months to rot and become incorporated with the soil.

Whether to plow in the fall is of course largely a question of local conditions and individual judgment. Sandy soils, for instance, may be rendered liable to blowing if plowed and left unseeded all winter. Heavy soils are usually benefited by fall plowing.

MANURE SPREAD OVER FIELD

Sun's Rays Get at Every Part of It When Scattered Evenly, Destroying Bacteria.

When manure is spread evenly over the surface of a field the sun's rays get at every part of it. This is a factor of much importance, since sunlight is one of bacteria's greatest enemies. Through it they are either killed or rendered dormant. Furthermore, the waste begins to dry up—a fact which, even without the action of sunlight, would render the bacterial life inactive. Thus, the formation of ammonia is checked in short order as a result of the breaking up of the conditions which are favorable to bacterial life. It should be remembered in this connection that no loss ensues when manure spread as a thin layer over the surface of a field is permitted to dry out. It loses nothing under such conditions save moisture. If, while lying in this fashion in a field, it becomes wet through rain or melting snow nothing worse happens than a washing of the soluble portions directly into the soil where it is desired they should go. All possibility of further decay and heating has been eliminated by the simple process of rearranging the waste from that of a heap to that of a thin layer spread over the surface.

BARLEY GOOD FEED FOR HOGS

Use of This Grain for Pork Production Has Increased in Importance—Is Carbonaceous.

With the cessation of the extensive milling of barley, the use of this grain for pork production has increased in importance. According to the United States Department of Agriculture, the market price of barley per pound, as compared with corn, has frequently been less, and it has been found profitable to convert it into pork. Whole barley is not desirable as a stock feed on account of the hardness of the grain. However, when the barley is soaked or ground and soaked its feeding efficiency is greatly increased. Although barley contains a little more protein than corn, it is, primarily, a carbonaceous feed, and must be used with a protein concentrate as a supplement. Generally, however, barley is a less satisfactory feed than corn for fattening hogs. The rapidity and economy of gains from barley depend largely upon its quality.

I never believed in arguing, and so I just let it go at that. But when she said we'd better kill the lame hog and invite in the neighbors, I says, 'What do you want to kill the lame hog for?' The poor varmint hasn't to blame for something that happened twenty years ago. And then—well, I just sorter came away."

MOTHER, QUICK! GIVE

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP

FOR CHILD'S BOWELS

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, a teaspoonful will never fail to open the bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste from the tender, little bowels and gives you a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Advertisement.

Diamond Cut Diamond. One day not long ago there entered the office of a western business man a friend who had been much intrigued by an incident he had witnessed some days before in that same office.

"Jones, old top," said he, "that was a queer conference you had with Smith the other day. When I looked in on you, both of you were sprouting round the office like two racers or two prize fighters."

Jones frowned. "Well, you see," he explained, "I'm very well read in this efficiency stuff, and I know, of course, that in an important conference you must always have your back to the light, so that your thoughts cannot be read. But Smith, too, has been taking an efficiency course. I suppose. He was certainly wise to that degree. Why, when we finally got down to business we were both sitting on the window sill!"—Harper's Magazine.

IN BUYING ASPIRIN ALWAYS SAY "BAYER"

Look for the Name "Bayer" on Tablets, Then You Need Never Worry.

"Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" can be taken safely for Colds, Headache, Toothache, Earache, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Rheumatism, Joint Pains, Neuritis, and Pain generally.

To get quick relief follow carefully the safe and proper directions in each unbroken package of "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin." This package is plainly stamped with the safety "Bayer Cross."

The "Bayer Cross" means the genuine, world-famous Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over twenty-one years.—Advertisement.

Learning at a Discount.

"You are willing to concede that knowledge is power?"

"I don't know. Did you ever see a college professor trying to attract the attention of a hotel clerk when a multimillionaire was approaching the desk, accompanied by half a dozen overladen bellhops?"

Then He'll Learn.

"Did your son learn anything in college?" "Apparently not. Now he wants to get married."

It is better to be beaten in trying to do right than it is to succeed in doing wrong.

The 1922 Chevrolet Four-Ninety

is the greatest Automobile value on the market. Here is a car that is ready for you to enjoy and to use. It will answer every need you have for an Automobile in your business or for recreation.

Here is a car well balanced as to design and construction. For the sum of $525.00 (touring car) this Automobile presents construction and features heretofore associated only with cars selling for much more money. This car is so completely equipped that there is not a single item necessary for you to purchase afterwards.

Twenty-five miles per gallon is not an unusual record. The tires are the most economical size.

Remember the Chevrolet carries every guarantee given with higher priced cars.

The Chevrolet Motor Co. is a division of the General Motors Corporation. It is the immense resources of this giant corporation that makes it possible to produce the lowest priced, fully equipped, quality car on the market.
