BONUSES IN DISCARD.

A few years ago the bonus system was the approved plan to bring new factories to communities, but industrial history proves that bonus hunting factories leave just as easily as they come, and today bonus giving is not approved by progressive communities.

Cities are built by men. Industrial development is under the hats of men. A concern that is substantial and means business will usually pay its own way. If it wants a factory building, it should either pay a moderate rental or pay installments on the value of the building, so as to acquire it in time.

It is the opinion of men with experience in this line of work that almost any town having reasonably good transportation facilities can get new industries if it will put forth the proper effort.

Factories frequently locate in country towns simply to get cheaper labor, but if the concern is not adapted to that particular locality and has to move on it hurts the reputation of that town as a business center. It is really worse off than it was before the factory located there.

SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS

Give Where Your Gift Is Needed; Or Where It Will Surely Bring Joy and Gladness.

"The Lord loveth a cheerful giver," and "It is more blessed to give than to receive," are faithful sayings, and worthy of all acceptance. Give where your gift is needed, where it brings joy and gladness, and your own heart will swell with real pleasure. To lavish gifts upon the rich, the strong, the powerful, in hope that you may receive in turn, is mean, groveling and pitiful. Don't belittle yourself that way. Give freely only where love prompts, or better yet, go out among God's poor, hunt out those less favored or less fortunate and do acts that will brighten human lives and the brightness will come back into your own heart by reflection.

The great and noble characters of the world, the men in all ages who have been admired and loved have been the generous men. The shunned and hated and despised creatures of the human race have always been the mean, the stingy, grasping, hoarding, pinching wretches who valued money above human souls, and hugged their wealth in the face of misery. The world shouts and laughs when such men die, but it follows the generous man to his grave with tears and real sorrow.

To Auction 15 Naval Ships.
Washington—Fifteen ships of the Navy will be put on the auction block soon, being worthless to the Navy now, it was announced by the Navy Department. Several of them helped make American history, among them being the Cruiser Brooklyn, flagship of Rear-Admiral William S. Schley during the battle of Santiago. Others are the Cruiser Columbia, and the Battleship Maine, which replaced the battleship of that name destroyed in Havana harbor.

Ascalon a Desolation!

Seek ye the Lord, all ye meek of the earth, which have wrought his poverty; seek righteousness, seek ye know; it may be ye shall be hid in the day of the Lord's anger.

For ye shall be forsaken, and Ashkelon a desolation; they shall drive out Askelon at the noonday, and Libnah shall be rooted up.

Woe unto the inhabitants of the sea coast, the nation of the Cherethites; the word of the Lord is against you, O Canaan, the land of the Philistines. I will even destroy thee, that there shall be no inhabitant.—Zephaniah 2:2-7.

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN.

ASCALON (Ashkelon) is a desolation—the words of the prophet were fulfilled long ago. But out of the desolation are now coming clues that shall add much to the knowledge of the present concerning the day in which the prophet wrote.

At Christmas time everyone has a thought of Jerusalem and Palestine. And Ascalon is close to Jerusalem and the birthplace of Herod the Great, who ordered the "Massacre of the Innocents."

During the World War the activities of the Palestine Exploration fund were necessarily suspended. Now they have been resumed with extraordinary success. Archaeologists are uncovering many splendid buildings of ancient days, some of them of great informational value. The greatest finds have been uncovered in Ascalon.

The Palestine Exploration fund is a society founded in London in 1865 for the accurate and systematic investigation of the archaeology, topography, geology and physical geography, natural history, manners and customs of the Holy Land for Biblical illustration. A preliminary expedition was made by Captain Wilson in the winter of 1865-6. Since then no less than eight expeditions for varying purposes have been sent out. Since 1889 the society has issued a quarterly statement and has published several works and maps. It maintains a museum at its London office.

Ascalon is a desolation in the literal meaning of the word and has been a desolation for many a year. Vegetation is scanty. The once splendid harbor has been filled up. The great walls and towers that surmounted the ridge that surrounds the city lie in crumbled ruins. The confusion is extraordinary; the walls and towers appear to have been blown asunder by powder. Yet once the city must have been a vision of beauty. Here and there broken columns of marble and granite tell of the glories of the past. Probably Ascalon once looked something like Jaffa, making allowance for the modernizing of that ancient city.

Ascalon lies on the shore of the Mediterranean, in Judea, 36 miles southwest of Jerusalem. It was a fortified city in ancient times. How old it is, nobody knows. It passed from the Egyptians to the Canaanites about 1500 B. C.; in those days the Egyptians were the overlords of Palestine, which was then called Canaan. Between 1200 and 1100 B. C. Philistines and Hebrews struggled for possession of Canaan. The Hebrews finally gained control and the Canaanites were submerged. In 1000 B. C. the divided Hebrew tribes were united into a kingdom under Saul, David, his successor, completed the establishment of Israelite supremacy in Palestine. Under David and Solomon, for the first and only time in history, Palestine was the home of a united people under one central government.

Then followed its division into Israel and Judah. Then followed conquest by the Assyrians and by the Babylonians and by the Persians and by the Egyptians and by the Romans. In 70 A. D. the struggle against Rome was ended by the capture and ruin of Jerusalem. In 132-135 A. D. it was the

IMPROVED ROADS

TRAFFIC CENSUS FOR ROADS

Motorists on Connecticut-Massachusetts State Line Contribute Much Information.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Thirty thousand motorists who were stopped on the Springfield-Hartford road at the Connecticut-Massachusetts state line have contributed valuable information to the bureau of public roads, United States Department of Agriculture, which, when analyzed, will assist the department to develop more rational methods of road design to meet varying traffic needs.

The motorists were counted in the first traffic census to give complete information ever undertaken by the bureau. The work was done in co-operation with state highway departments of Massachusetts and Connecticut, and will be duplicated in the near future elsewhere. It was taken between August 16 and 20, covered 146 day hours and 28 night hours, and resulted in accurate records concerning 20,851 vehicles. For passenger cars this information covers type, make, number of passengers, time, direction, starting point and destination. The state authorities recorded, in addition, license numbers and engine information. The work was handled so expeditiously that the average stop lasted only 15 seconds.

Trucks were stopped somewhat longer—100 seconds for south-bound and 37 seconds for north-bound vehicles being the average. Truck drivers were asked to give, in addition to the information obtained in the case of passenger cars, capacity, driver's estimate of length and frequency of trip, kinds of loads carried, location of consignee and consignee. Roadside scales specially placed, took required weight data, and observers ascertained the speed of trucks.

Motorcycles and horse-drawn vehicles also were included in the census. The data thus obtained are being analyzed, and will be used, in connection with information obtained from experiments on impact of trucks and effect of impact on pavement, to design better roads.

GOOD ROADS ARE EXPENSIVE

Projects Costing an Aggregate of $7,693,778 Were Approved During Month of July.

Road projects in 18 states, totaling more than 255 miles and costing an aggregate of $7,693,778, or an average of $29,000 per mile, were approved during July by the bureau of public roads, United States Department of Agriculture, for federal aid, according to the bureau's publication, "Public Roads," just off the press. The total federal aid approved for these projects is placed at $3,023,152, the remainder of the cost being borne by the states.

All told, there were 56 such projects approved during the month. New York led with 20, Pennsylvania came second with seven, and Kentucky and South Carolina tied for third with five projects each. Four Texas projects were approved; New Mexico, Washington and Wisconsin had two each, and Arizona, Arkansas, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, Oklahoma, Tennessee and Virginia each had one project approved during the month.

Wide variation was shown in the character of materials to be used in building the approved roads, but concrete, bituminous macadam and gravel were the chief materials.

Wild Lands Open to Travel.

With the recent opening of the Wind River extension of the Rocky Mountain highway, it is said the last of the really wild lands of the United States are available to automobile travel. The total distance from Denver to the Yellowstone National park over the route is 589 miles.

Date of Oiling Announced.

In Pennsylvania roads on which oiling work is to be done are announced each week by the state highway department.

HIGH QUALITIES OF FANCY FOWLS

Ornamental Varieties May Provide Attractive Revenue When Properly Developed.

HAMBURG IS PROLIFIC LAYER

Principal Characteristic of Frizzles Is Peculiar Feathering—Have No Particular Qualities to Recommend Them.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Eggs and meat for home uses or for marketing are not the only possibilities of the poultry industry. In addition to the fowls kept primarily for their economic value or utility there are many throughout the country whose owners breed them merely for pleasure and secondarily for the profits more than likely to result in supplying others whose fancy takes the same channel.

Ornamental breeds and varieties may and often do possess considerable economic value, and some of them undoubtedly could be developed, as according to the poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture, into birds having high utility qualities. For example, the Hamburgs are fowls which always have been rated as very prolific layers, although their eggs are small. Because they have not been extensively kept in this country and because they have not been bred very systematically for any purpose except exhibition, their utility qualities have not been developed to the highest possible point.

In the same way the Polish fowls frequently are prolific layers, but the crests they carry, while unique in appearance and adding greatly to their beauty, are handicaps when the birds are kept for utility purposes.

In the Polish breed are these varieties: White-Crested Black, Bearded Golden, Bearded Silver, Bearded White, Buff Laced, Non-Bearded Golden, Non-Bearded Silver, and Non-Bearded White. The Hamburg breed has these varieties: Golden Spangled, Silver Spangled, Golden Penciled, Silver Penciled, White and Black.

Farmers' Bulletin 1221, recently issued by the Department of Agriculture, credits the game breed with eight varieties: Black-Breasted Red, Brown Red, Golden Duckwing, Silver Duckwing, Birchen, Red Pyle, White, and Black.

The Oriental class includes two breeds, the Sumatra of which there is one variety, the Black, and the Malay with one, the Black-Breasted Red. The Standard of Perfection gives this class also the Black-Breasted Red Malay Bantam.

The miscellaneous class includes two breeds, the Sultan and the Frizzles, and the Standard of Perfection includes with it the Silkies, a bantam breed.

Types of Plumage and Form.

The ear lobes of all Polish chickens are white, the eggs are white, and the hens are classed as nonsitting or nonbroody. The legs and toes are slate blue in all varieties except the White-Crested Black in which they are a darker blue, approaching black. The skin is gray or grayish white, which does not recommend the birds for table purposes in this country where the demand is for yellow-skinned fowls. The crests which all Polish carry are characteristic of the breed and adds much to its beauty. The contrast between the white crest and the black body of the White-Crested Black makes this variety very beautiful, and rather difficult to breed in perfection.

The color scheme of the Bearded Golden Polish is very beautiful, the plumage being a golden bay laced with black throughout except for the buff which is light bay with some black mixture or tinge, and for the primary feathers which are bay with a black end. The color schemes of the male and female are identical.

The Bearded White Polish is a pure white throughout, free from any foreign color.

The Hamburg, said to have originated in Holland, although the name has come from the German city of Hamburg, is a small fowl, if anything smaller than the Leghorn. There is more or less variation in size among the varieties, the Black and Silver Spangled tending to run largest. There are no standard weights for this breed. In type it resembles the Leghorn very closely. The birds are neat bodied, well rounded, and well finished throughout. The comb is rose, and runs rather large for the size of the bird. The ear lobes are of good size, white and nearly round.

Hamburg Popular in Europe.

The Hamburg lays white eggs, and the birds are classed as nonsitting and nonbroody. In Europe these birds have an enviable reputation as layers of large numbers of eggs, but they have not been kept and bred extensively along that line in this country. The small size of the egg has been one reason for this.

An interesting peculiarity of the Sumatra, one of the Oriental class, is the small red ear lobe on a hen laying a white egg. The breed is classed generally as broody, and the hens have the reputation of being excellent mothers. The Sumatras are black throughout, the surface having a very lightly developed green sheen, while the undercolor is dull black.

The Frizzles, in the miscellaneous class, are peculiar birds. In an exhibition they are certain to attract attention. Their principal characteristic is the peculiar feathering. Instead of the feathers growing in the usual manner, they have a curled or curved appearance, the end of the feather tending to curl up and back toward the fowl's head. A considerable variation occurs in the amount of this curling, but the more pronounced it is the better. The comb should be single, and the number of toes four. A number of colors are allowed in the Frizzles, without dividing the breed into separate varieties. These are black, white, red, and bay, the only requirement being that each bird shall be a solid color unmarked with any other. Shown to pens the birds, male and female, shall be of the same color. Frizzles are not often seen in this country, and are kept only on account of their unusual appearance. They have no particular qualities to recommend them over normally feathered fowls.

The bulletin referred to above, No. 1221, contains complete descriptions of many of these interesting and peculiar breeds and varieties of ornamental poultry.

BALANCED RATION IS ESSENTIAL FOR EGGS

New Things Discovered to Be Given Consideration.

To Overcome Acid in Feed Mixtures Necessary to Supply Meat Scrap or Something Similar—Fresh Milk Will Help.

Every person who keeps poultry is sure to be impressed sooner or later by the importance of feeding well-balanced rations, especially for the production of eggs. Ordinarily a balanced ration means a ration that has the proportions of carbohydrates, protein and fat that have been found by experience to produce the best results, but new things are being discovered that need to be given consideration in balancing a ration. For instance, it is now thought that it may be well to have a balance between the acid and alkaline feeds and that there is a possibility that the continued use of an acid-forming diet may lead to a greater susceptibility to certain diseases.

The grain mixtures that are commonly used by poultrymen are acid. Mash mixtures containing sufficient quantities of digester tankage, meat and bone meal, dried milk or dried blood will be alkaline. The acid in feed mixtures can be overcome by these feeds just mentioned and by ground limestone and oyster shell. This further emphasizes the necessity of feeding a mash containing meat scrap or some feed of this kind. Green corn and fresh milk also help to overcome acidity.

FEED FOR PIGS AND POULTRY

Nothing Better Than Buttermilk for Supply of Protein in Most Digestible Form.

There is nothing so good for an all-round feed for pigs and poultry as buttermilk. It furnishes protein in the most digestible form, and contains the vitamins that are now known to be absolutely essential for the growth of the young and the health of all animals.

WELL-MET

By MILDRED WHITE

The girl sat in a luxurious chair, in the marble patterned balcony. Below in the body of the great hotel, people moved continually on their various ways. But the one for whom her violet eyes were seeking, had evidently been delayed. She arose to slip off her heavy fur cloak, and stood a slim figure in molish blue.

Impatiently, she swung upon its chain, the key of her hotel room. She had decided not to leave it at the office until sure of being called for, yet she was anxious to leave, anxious for the handier comfort of her father's residence. Elaine dashed her key as she bent over the padded railing—then, dropped it. She was too astonished to draw back into obscurity, as she saw the weighted key land deliberately on a dark, uncovered head—a man's head, with no deep cushion of hair to relieve the blow.

The man painfully surprised, glanced up quickly, rubbing his parrot crown; then he stooped to recover the key. Elaine saw him still something his head as he read the room number on the metal ring attached, then he waved the key up to her in announcement that he would restore it. He came shortly up the wide stair, and he was young, and tall, and good to look upon.

"Your key, I presume," he said rather coldly.

"I am so sorry," she began confusedly, "so careless of me, I did not realize—"

The young man sat down promptly before her. "That you were aiming a blow," he finished. His own laughing eyes, now expressed open admiration, and his words might have intended a double meaning. Elaine flushed, very prettily, but her tone was severe.

"I was," she remarked, "waiting for someone, the time seemed long." "It usually does seem long," the man responded pleasantly, "when one is waiting for a someone. Happy someone?" he added daintily, and sank further back in his opposite chair. Elaine turned to him, her round chin tilted. "You are—also waiting?"

Dismissal was in the question. The young man merely smiled. "For your apology," he told her, "you cracked me on the head." She did not want to laugh but the man's smile was as engaging as his manner was ridiculous. Elaine did laugh, and promptly regretted that friendliness.

"When my key slipped," she informed him, "I was standing there, looking for Tom. Tom is the man I love. He is coming to take me away. The pleasing countenance immediately became forlorn. "Away," the young man echoed, Elaine nodded.

"To a home," she explained heartlessly, "of our own." Across the balcony the orchestra played. For a time the young man listened in silence, then his somberness lifted.

"Would you mind," he politely questioned, "telling me the name of this lucky Tom, I know a couple of Tom's at college. Where did this particular Tom of yours go to college—if he went?" Elaine dimpled.

Tom attended college in this city. I think that is why he likes so much to come back. Tom's other name is Cavers. The stranger leaned forward and joyously clapped his knee. "Well, would you believe it?" he cried, "Tom Cavers, good old Tom! Why, he was the best friend I had here in school." Elaine raised her eyebrows. "That is amazing," she said. "Never hear Tom speak of Jerry Wraybourne?" the young man went on. The girl considered, then shook her head. "But it's not strange," she admitted, "I don't remember half the names of the people Tom talks about."

"You are going off to a home of your own," Jerry Wraybourne slowly repeated. He tossed his dark head. "Oh! Well," he muttered, "every man ought to have at least his one happy hour. This, is mine. I am going to order tea on the balcony, and you are going to partake of it with me. You, boss from me at a tea-table, as I've dreamed the you, would be," he broke off abruptly.

"What nonsense," Elaine sooted, but her violet eyes softened. The music came to them now, fraught with a new tenderness, as they sat. "It's queer," the young man was saying, "how some fellows reach out and get what they want, while some other poor devil dreams a dream of hope, all his life, only to wake up at last with—"

he laughed shortly. "A blow on the head. I suppose your Tom will be coming along now. I'd better get out. You see, I may as well confess. I've been lying to you. I never knew a Tom Cavers. Just wanted to prolong the pleasure of looking into your face. I thought if I seemed to be a friend of this Tom's, it might give me at least this chance." The girl laughingly put out her hand. Across the tea cups, they looked at each other tensely, wonderingly. "Of course, you could not have known Tom at college," she explained demurely. "For Tom, you see, happens to be my father. It is he, for whom I am waiting, to take me to our own home. You were so daintily flirtatious. Mr. Jerry Wraybourne, that I had to deceive you in self defense." Jerry grinned joyously. "There were two of us then," he exclaimed, "well-met. And now I want to stay and meet your father when he comes, may I?" Elaine settled back in the big chair. "Father is always so tardy," she remarked comfortably.

Fossils Reveal History.

The fossil shells of the early invertebrates, or spineless creatures, are of great importance to geologists, for they indicate the geologic period in which the rock beds containing them were formed—in other words, the age of the rock. Each fossiliferous rock bed contains characteristic forms or groups of forms that determine the period in which it was laid or sand. Former Director Powell of the United States geological survey once tersely explained to a congressional committee the value of paleontology by saying that it is "the geologist's clock," by which he tells the time in the world's history when any rock bed was formed.

Gave No Promise of Greatness.

If we study the childhood of great people we shall find that many eminent men and women were voted dull in their youth, and looked upon as mediocrities. The school-mistress of Oliver Goldsmith proclaimed him to be one of her dullest boys, and Harriet Martineau was a source of anxiety and perplexity to her parents during the whole of her young days. By reading her autobiography we see how easy it is for a gifted child, a well-intentioned child, and one anxious to do right and merit approbation to be so wholly misunderstood as to be continually in fault and causing perpetual trouble to all around her, to say nothing of making life a burden and misery to herself.

less plain, fig trees once grew in abundant numbers in North Dakota, according to studies of the fossil life found in that state.Fossils have been aptly called the illustrations in the great book recording the world's history, the pages of which are the layers of rock that form the outer part of the crust of the earth. By looking at some of the photographic reproductions of fossil plants we can restore in imagination the ancient vegetation of parts of the world.Fossil plants are very abundant in the Fort Union formation, a series of Tertiary rock beds in North Dakota,
where they are found in the sandstone
in the harder concretions or lenses, and in the clay between the beds of sandstone. Most of them, especially those in the clay, are preserved with remarkable fidelity. About 300 species of plants from this formation have been described, and the total number of species it contains may perhaps reach 500 or more, according to the United States Geological Survey.This abundant fossil flora shows that what is now an almost treeless plain was once covered with splendid forests of hardwoods, interspersed with scattered conifers and ginkgos.
The presence of numerous and at many places thick beds of lignite make it clear that in this region there were great swamps, which must have existed with little change for long periods of time. Among the plants of this epoch were fig trees and a fan palm with leaves five or six feet across, indicating that the climate was as warm or warmer than that now prevailing on the South Atlantic slope of the United States.THE CURIOUS MISTLETOESomething Like 300 Varieties in the World—Pink Berries Found Only
on Cedar Trees.There are about 300 kinds of mistletoe in the world, and each variety grows on the branches of trees and has little white or pink berries, says
St. Nicholas. But the pink berries are found on only the cedar trees. The mistletoe, unlike other plants, gets no food directly from the ground. Instead, it gets its nourishment from the trees on which it grows.Another curious thing about the mistletoe is that though it blossoms earlier in the year than the tree on which it grows, yet the little berries do not ripen before December. Maybe that is because it has to steal its food from the trees, and therefore cannot ripen early. The very name "mistletoe" gives some idea of its insignificance.
In the Anglo-Saxon language "mist" means gloom, and it comes in mid-winter, the gloomiest time of the year.The gathering of mistletoe was a very important ceremony among the ancient Druids. About five days after the new moon they marched in stately procession to the forest and raised an altar of straw beneath the finest mistletoe-bearing oak they could find.
The arch-druid would ascend the oak,
and, with a jeweled knife, remove the sacred mistletoe. The others stood beneath the tree and caught the plant upon a white cloth, for, if a portion of it touched the earth, it was an omen of misfortune to the land.And this is doubtless the reason why it is still the custom to hang it from the ceiling and why it is supposed to lose its charm if it touches the floor.Advertising is the hyphen that brings buyer and seller together.Hall's Catarrh MedicineThose who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them

fluenced by constitutional conditions.
