Harmon S. Holmes.

Harmon S. Holmes, a leading business man of Chelsea, died at the Battle Creek sanitarium on Monday morning, January 2, 1922.

Mr. Holmes engaged in business in Chelsea on March 21, 1872, when he formed a partnership with the late Thos. Wilkinson, under the firm name of Wilkinson & Holmes, and after two years he sold out his interest in the general store that they conducted. In August of the same year he became a partner of the firm of Durand, Holmes & Co. In 1880 the senior partner sold his interest to B. Parker and the firm name was changed to Holmes & Parker. This firm continued until 1888, after which he conducted the business alone until 1904, when the H. S. Holmes Mercantile Co. was formed and Ed Vogel, D. H. Wurster and E. R. Dancer became members of the firm, and the firm of Vogel & Wurster bought the interest of Mr. Holmes a few years ago. In January 1902 he organized the firm of Holmes & Walker, dealers in hardware and implements, succeeding the firm of Hoag & Holmes which was organized in 1890. On the organization of the Kempf Commercial & Savings Bank in 1898, he became interested in the bank. Since January 1, 1899, he had been president of the bank. He was a member of the Wm. Bacon-Holmes Co., and had an interest in various other business ventures in Lansing and other parts of the state and held a number of offices, both local and state.

In October, 1879, he was united in marriage with Miss Edith Cushman. Mrs. Holmes died a number of years ago.

Mr. Holmes was born in Macon, Lenawee county, December 28, 1854. His boyhood days were spent on the farm of his father in Scio, and his education was obtained in Scio district school and the Dexter village high school. He was a member of the Masonic Lodge here and the Knights of Pythias.

He is survived by two sons, Ralph H. Holmes, of Battle Creek, Howard S. Holmes, of Chelsea; one daughter, Mrs. Enid Ellis, of Grand Rapids; five grandsons, one granddaughter, three sisters, Mrs. R. P. Copeland, of Dexter, Mrs. Elizabeth Toumey, of Detroit, and Mrs. R. D. Walker, of Chelsea, and several nephews and nieces.

The funeral was held from his late residence at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, Rev. P. W. Dierberger of South Haven, assisted by Rev. E. A. Carnes, pastor of the Chelsea Congregational church, conducting the services. Burial at Oak Grove cemetery. The members of the Masonic order attended the services in a body and conducted the burial service of the order at the grave.

She was born in Sylvan and she was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Bush, pioneer settlers of this vicinity. She was united in marriage with the late James Richards in 1854, and they resided on the Richards farm in Sylvan, at present owned by Louis Lambert, from 1854 until 1879, when they became residents of Chelsea. For the last nine years she has made her home in rooms at the residence of Mrs. Stephen Clark. She is survived by one son, a resident of Detroit, several grandchildren, Mrs. Henry Frey of Francisco is a niece, Jas. Richards of Waterloo a nephew, John Bush of Chelsea and Jas. Plans Are Accepted.

The engineers' plans for the permanent development program for the new grounds and buildings of the Washtenaw County Fair association, as drawn by Bailey & Atwell, have been accepted by the board of directors and work will start as soon as possible. It is expected by next fall that the grounds and buildings will be in shape for holding the fair. Considerable work has already been done in the way of grading and on the track.

The new county drain which will drain the grounds has been sold and the contractors are making arrangements to start the work in a short time. The officers of the fair association will push the work of getting the grounds ready for the fair the coming fall which will be held the week following the Jackson county fair.

Acquires Land for Park.

The first use of condemnation proceedings to acquire land for park purposes that has actually gone through to a jury trial since the creation of the state park commission resulted in a victory for the state at Adrian Thursday.

About 100 acres of land, fronting on Wampplers lake on the border line of Lenawee and Jackson counties and including the picturesque "Cedar Hill," was found to be necessary for the public benefit by a jury before Circuit Judge Hart and damages of $9,000 were awarded the property owners.

The land will be used by the new department of conservation as a state public park site. The completed park will embrace about 220 acres, the other land having been acquired previously.

Sunday School Elects Officers.

At the annual meeting of the Sunday school board of the Methodist church the following officers were elected:

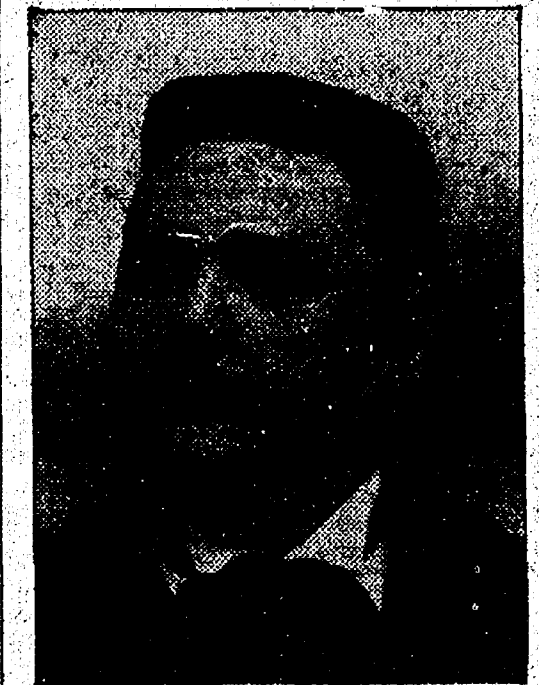

Superintendent—Mrs. N. F. Prudden.
Assistant Superintendent—P. M. Broesamle.
Treasurer—Mrs. Arthur Avery.
Secretary—Florence Ives.
Pianist—Mrs. J. A. Palmer.
Ass't Pianist—Mrs. P. M. Broesamle.

Frank P. Glazier.

Frank P. Glazier died at his home at Cavanaugh Lake, Sunday evening, January 1, 1922, after a lingering illness of several years.

Mr. Glazier was born in Jackson March 8, 1862, and was the son of Geo. P. and Emily J. Stimson Glazier. He received his education in the Chelsea public schools, a graduate of the pharmaceutical department of the University of Michigan and the Eastman business college of Poughkeepsie, New York.

He was engaged in the drug business here for a number of years and afterward was an extensive manufacturer of oil, heating and cook stoves. He was a member of the Chelsea Maccabees and held many public offices in his younger days.

FRANK P. GLAZIER

He had the fine factory buildings, at present owned by the Lewis Spring & Axle Co., the stone office building owned by A. W. Wilkinson, and the stone office building owned by N. S. Potter, of Jackson, and many houses in Chelsea during his active business career. He retired from business in 1907.

The land on which the Methodist Home is located was given by Mr. Glazier and he was a liberal contributor to the funds that were used in the erection of the building. He was also a member of the building committee that erected the present M. E. church and also a liberal contributor to the building funds.

He was united in marriage with Miss Henrietta Geddes, on December 30, 1880. To this union seven children were born, three of whom have passed away.

He is survived by his mother, wife, two sons, Harold P. Glazier of Detroit, and Henry I. Glazier of Muskegon, two daughters, Mrs. Rollin Schenk of Chelsea and Mrs. D. V. Barker of Grand Rapids, five granddaughters, four grandsons, one uncle, one aunt and several cousins and nephews and nieces.

The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon from the family home at Cavanaugh Lake, Rev. Carl Ertel, pastor of Salem M. E. church, officiating. Burial at Oak Grove cemetery.

Boy Scout Camp Burglarized.

Some time last Thursday night hoodlums cut out a screen and canvas covering a door to the kitchen in the Boy Scout mess hall at Clear Lake and stole or destroyed about $50 worth of property. There were evidently three persons in the gang. They made coffee on the range, and afterward used the dishes for target practice and also shot holes in several large dish pans hanging on the walls. Several sacks of flour were strewn over the floor and a number of gasoline lanterns were stolen.

Detectives from Lansing are working on the case, and we trust, for the good of the community that the culprits will be apprehended and punished.

Last winter the Gabel cottage on the next lot east was broken into and the entire contents taken.

A. H. Watts, Boy Scout Master, has been very liberal in allowing the public the freedom of the grounds and the use of the mess hall. Wednesday evening there was a community dance in the hall lasting until about 3 a. m. Friday about noon Mr. Watts arrived from Lansing with 20 or 30 Boy Scouts to spend New Year's and found that the hall had been broken into.—Com.

Former Chelsea Resident.

Word has been received of the death last November of Mrs. Libbie Tichenor Steinhoff. During the many years of her residence in Chelsea, she was a devoted member of the Methodist church, serving for many years as organist there. Since she left Chelsea her home has been at Hershey, Michigan, where her death occurred very suddenly.

Hunting Season Closed.

The hunting season on rabbits, ducks, coots, geese and brants, closed December 31, 1921. Deputy Game Warden Otto Rohm reports but 48 arrests for violation of the game and fish laws in Washtenaw and Livingston counties during the past year and nine of the arrests were in this county for hunting without licenses.

Saginaw—Frank Cobbit, janitor at the city hall, had a narrow escape from probable death when he was placing the flag in position and slipped on the icy roof. He would have fallen 125 ft. but for the eavesdropper which caught him. Policemen climbed the roof and rescued him with a rope.

Grand Rapids—Because Judge Orlan S. Cross, of the Allegan circuit court, is president of the First National bank of that city, the case of the bank and other creditors of the F. D. Travis company has been transferred to the Kent circuit court. Judge John S. McDonald has named Frank D. Blakey, of this city, receiver.

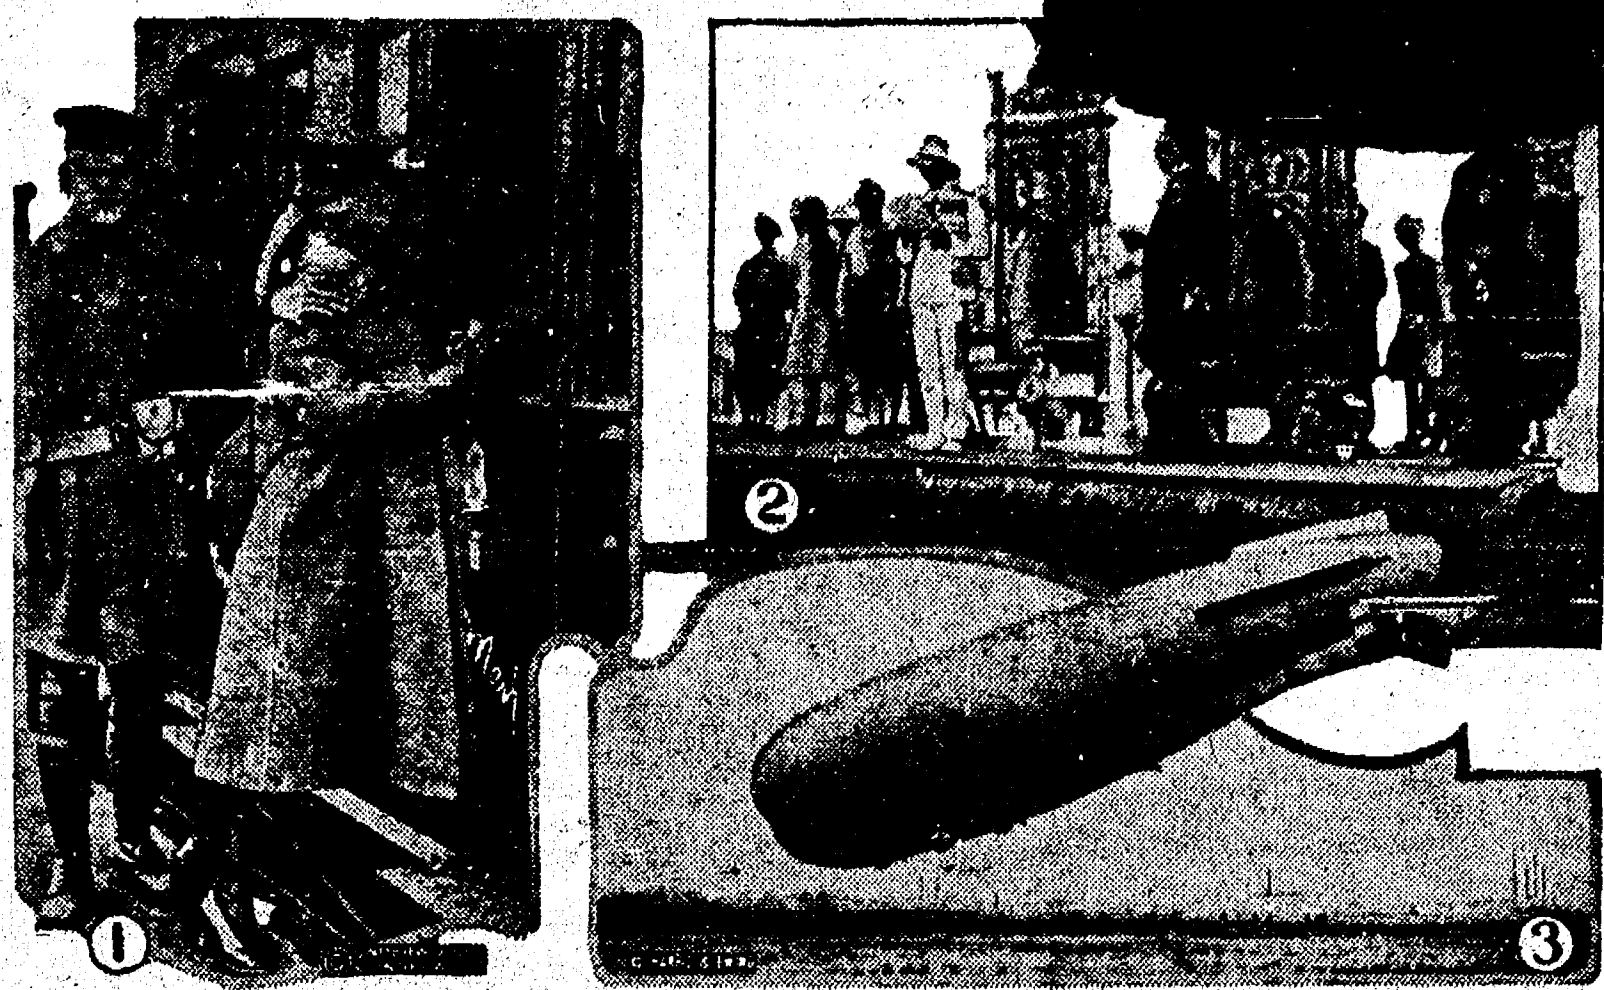

Kalamazoo—Fire of undetermined origin destroyed the $13,000 home of George Irvine at Gull lake, a few hours after workmen had completed it. A hard coal fire had been banked in the furnace. The building was one of the finest on the famous resort lake, and was situated on a high bluff overlooking the water near the Gull Lake Country club. The loss was covered by insurance.

Lansing—The State Banking Department is calling attention to the fact that the failure of the G. W. Meriman Bank at Hartford has been referred to in newspapers as a state bank through error. Harry O. Mohrmann, deputy banking commissioner, says the Hartford bank was not a state institution and that there have been no failures of state banks in Michigan since 1913.

Iron Mountain—Sportsmen in this section of the upper peninsula have recommended to the state department of conservation of the bounty on wolves, also the retention of state wolf trappers to kill off the animals, which have become a menace to farmers and sheep raisers in this section. This plea will include Tom Leon, Grand Rapids barber, who held prisoners at bay, while Board summoned help. Leon is held for putting persons in fear with intent to rob a bank.

Grand Rapids—Federal officers have closed the stores of the Liberty Home Beverage company and of August Sawyer. The beverage company's stock was seized. McDonald for selling ingredients for the manufacture of intoxicants.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

France's Excessive Demands for Submarines Block Agreement on That Topic.

MR. BALFOUR'S PLAIN TALK

Use of Submarines Against Commerce May Be Forbidden—Irish People Urge Ratification of Peace Treaty—Longer Occupation of Haiti Considered Necessary.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

FRANCE'S conception of her needs in the way of a defensive navy and the firmness with which her delegates upheld their position brought about a complete deadlock in the Washington conference last week, and made it almost certain that no agreement will be reached by the present gathering concerning the reduction and limitation of submarines and auxiliary naval tonnage. The other powers participating in the conference were willing to concede the fairness of the French position concerning the reduction of her land armament, but they feel that in this naval matter France is demanding too much.

Albert Sarraut, having received fresh instructions from Paris, told the naval committee that France accepted the allowance of 175,000 tons of capital ships, contingent upon permission to begin replacement building in 1927 instead of 1931, but insisted that she be allowed 90,000 tons of submarines and 330,000 tons of auxiliary ships. The submarine tonnage she asked is equal to the maximum proposed by Mr. Hughes for Great Britain and the United States and three times what France now has.

Mr. Balfour, in language as plain as diplomatic usage permits, retorted that France could want such a submarine fleet for no other purpose than illegal use against commerce, that the plan was a direct threat against Great Britain, and that in the circumstances the British would agree to no limitation in the building of cruisers, destroyers and other anti-submarine vessels.

To M. Sarraut's assertion that British fears of French aggression were baseless since Britain was allowed a capital ship tonnage greater than that of France and Italy combined, Mr. Balfour replied that, in the event of war between Great Britain and France, England, having no large army, could not strike at the heart of France, but France, employing a great navy of submarines against commerce, could destroy the "very existence" of Britain. To the layman it would seem that Mr. Balfour had the best of the debate, but M. Sarraut was unyielding. Therefore Mr. Hughes, deploring the attitude of the French, announced with regret that an agreement on the reduction and limitation of submarine and auxiliary tonnage appeared impossible.

DESPITE this, the naval committee reached other agreements of great importance which it was assumed the conference would confirm in its next plenary session. One of these limits the caliber of capital ship guns to 16 inches. Another was that the use of submarines against commerce be barred. The latter, in the form of a resolution drafted by Elihu Root as an established part of international law, is as follows:

"The signatory powers, desiring to make more effective the rules adopted by civilized nations for the protection of the lives of neutrals and non-combatants at sea in time of war, declare that among these rules the following are to be deemed an established part of international law:

"1. A merchant vessel must be ordered to stop for visit and search to determine its character before it can be captured.

"A merchant vessel must not be attacked without it returning to show for itself."

GREAT BRITAIN'S two other family rows—in India and Egypt—are quieting down somewhat, though the conditions are bad in both countries. Numerous arrests and the influence of Mahatma Gandhi are serving to diminish the rioting in India, where the prince of Wales goes on his festive way little disturbed. In the Indian nationalist congress at Ahmedabad an effort was made to force the adoption of a motion that complete independence from the British empire should be attained by "possible and proper means," but Gandhi and his supporters frustrated this and the words "peaceful and lawful means" were substituted.

stroyed unless the crew and passengers have been first placed in safety.

"2. Belligerent submarines are not, under any circumstances, exempt from the universal rules above stated; and if a submarine cannot capture a merchant vessel in conformity with these rules the existing law of nations requires it to desist from attack and from capture and to permit the merchant vessel to proceed unmolested."

President Harding is not disheartened by the failure to reach an agreement on submarines, but hopes that if necessary the conference will arrange for another parley at an early date to further consider that and other questions of armament limitation and that all nations maintaining navies will be invited to participate. He regards it as unfitting "that five nations should set out to legislate for the whole world."

CONSIDERABLE progress was made in settling the Chinese puzzles. Mr. Underwood's compromise plan for the Chinese tariff was accepted by all the powers. This provides for an immediate increase in tariff of 5 per cent ad valorem, a future increase to 7 1/2 per cent, and an increase to 12 1/2 per cent when the provincial tariff is abolished. It may be three or five years before the increase to 7 1/2 per cent goes into effect, since Japan and India require time to adjust their industries.

Apparently the deadlock between China and Japan concerning Shantung was complete, and it was said there would be American and British offers of mediation this week. But from Tokyo came the assertion by "high officials" that Japan had gained her main point and the whole dispute probably would be settled soon. When China agreed to negotiate with Japan for the purchase of the railway, it was asserted, she acknowledged Japan's right in the road won from Germany. China's offer of treasury notes in payment for the railway does not suit Tokyo as China has been unable to pay similar notes outstanding. Japan wants payment by a bond issue, which would prolong her control of the railway until cash for the bonds could be gathered by the Chinese.

An organization of non-Bolshevik Russians has appealed to the conference to consider the situation in eastern Siberia before adjourning. In the brief submitted Japan is accused of political and strategic aims in Siberia.

DAIL RIRBANN during its recess has been hearing from many Sinn Fein clubs and other organizations of southern Ireland, and in every instance, so far as known, has been urged to ratify the Irish peace treaty. Investigators report that fully 90 per cent of the people in the island—excepting Ulster—are in favor of accepting the pact. The English press is confident it will be ratified, and the British authorities at Whitehall are busily working out the details of plans for the immediate handing over of the government of the island to the new Irish provisional government.

Just to prod those members of the Dail who still oppose the treaty, Premier Lloyd George last week issued a statement to the effect that the British government had gone to the utmost limit, and that not only the rejection of the treaty, but even its alteration by the Dail would render it null and void. "To reopen the discussion," said he, "which has been closed only after the most exhaustive consideration of every point, would be a fruitless proceeding and is impossible."

SENATOR LA FOLLETTE of Wisconsin has come out with the remarkable statement that a secret conference was held in Washington December 9 by representatives of the railroads and of the coal, steel and lumber interests, and that they attempted to obtain from farm organization leaders, adherence to an agreement not to push legislation to repeal the guaranty section of the transportation act and to restore state control of state transportation rates. "If the farmers of the country abide by the agreement entered into by a few of their representatives," said Senator La Follette, "the railroad interests will defeat the public demand for reform in the transportation industry."

SENATOR MCORMICK and his associates of the committee which congress sent to investigate conditions in Haiti will recommend occupation of the island by American marines as necessary to the peace and development of the island. It will also ask the appointment of an American high commissioner to co-ordinate and supervise the work of the American administrators created by the treaty of 1915, and expedition in making the proposed new loan so that the debt held in Europe may be discharged on advantageous terms and the claims of Haitians against their government satisfied. One of the greatest needs of the island, says Senator McCormick, is good roads. This includes the republic of Santo Domingo, where also the committee holds the American occupation must be continued for the present.

CHILE last week accepted Peru's proposal that the two governments send plenipotentiaries to Washington to continue negotiations for a settlement of their disputes, and Peru then suggested that each nation first cable to Secretary Hughes asking the consent of the United States for holding the negotiations in Washington, and also asking that President Harding act as final arbitrator of all differences between the two countries, no appeal from his decisions being allowed. Bolivia is insisting that Chile give her an outlet to the Pacific, and Peru offers her help in settling that question. So the war cloud that has been hanging over the west coast of South America is getting thinner daily.

BANKS MERGED TO AVERT CRISIS

HEAVY LIABILITIES OF CHICAGO INSTITUTIONS ASSUMED BY OTHER BANKS.

DEPOSITORS GIVEN PROTECTION

Liabilities of $60,000,000 Attributable to Over-Extension of Loans in Industrial Enterprises.

Chicago—In a $60,000,000 bank absorption, the two Fort Dearborn banks were taken over by the Continental and Commercial banks Monday night. The action, which followed an all-day session of members of the Chicago clearing house and leading financiers, averted the most serious crisis that has threatened the La Salle street district since the day of the Walsh bank collapse.

The difficulties of the Fort Dearborn institutions had engrossed the attention of the clearing house for several days. As a result of an examination of the books of the two banks, the clearing house several days ago learned they were in a serious situation. On Thursday night W. A. Tilden, president of the Fort Dearborn National bank, called in the clearing house committee, and with his associates threw up their hands.

The banks of the clearing house association, composing most of the larger establishments in Chicago, held extended conferences on the situation. An examination of assets and liabilities was made by two of the largest, as a result of which two banks offered Monday to take over the Fort Dearborn properties. The offers were made by the First National bank and the Continental and Commercial National.

Sunday evening the proposal of George M. Reynolds, of the Continental and Commercial, was accepted. As a result, the Fort Dearborn National will be taken over by the Continental and Commercial National bank, while the Fort Dearborn Trust and Savings bank will be taken over by the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings bank.

All obligations will be met, dollar for dollar, and the Continental and Commercial National will be guaranteed against loss by the clearing house.

The absorption entails assumption of $60,000,000 of liabilities. Of these one estimate is that $12,000,000 is represented either by losses or by frozen assets.

The general explanation of the difficulties of the Fort Dearborn establishment is that they are attributable to over-extension of loans in several industrial enterprises. The institutions, it is said, instead of confining themselves to banking, went into financing.

The Fort Dearborn National bank has a capital of $5,000,000, a surplus of $2,000,000, and undivided profits of about $1,115,000. The losses as they now appear are estimated to be large enough to wipe out the surplus and the undivided profit and impair the capital to about $1,000,000—about $7,000,000 all told.

In addition it is estimated the bank has about $15,000,000 of slow assets, a considerable portion of which are considered as doubtful. The loans and deposits approximate $51,000,000.

URGES FRANCO-BRITISH TREATY

Premier Briand Says It Is Key to European Situation.

London—On the eve of his departure for Cannes to take part in the meeting of the supreme council, Premier Briand gave a statement to the Daily Mail's correspondent in Paris, the gist of which follows:

"The key to the whole European situation is France's safety. Let there first of all be a pact or alliance between Great Britain and France—a pact which we offered and asked for, but have not obtained.

"Such a pact would be the platform on which the reconstruction of Europe could best be based. It would also be the best proof that our naval building program is not, and never can be directed against our English friends.

"To such a pact other alliances, embracing our other allies, might be attached, perhaps in the form of the Pacific pact. But a Franco-British pact must be the kernel basis of them all."

The correspondent says M. Briand spoke with marked feeling, almost distress, of the comment evoked in Great Britain and America concerning the attitude of the French delegation at the Washington conference.

What He Wished.

They were buying the son and heir a new pair of shoes. Father had expressed the usual wish that he could buy a pair of number 10s as cheaply as number 8s, and mother had expressed the usual hope that the new shoes would last a long while.

"And I wish," said the youngster, "that you would buy me a football so that I could have some use for my new shoes!"—Milwaukee Journal.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not live up to the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores. Advertisement

Attention, Ford Owners!

Ford parts, like most everything else worth while, are counterfeited. The manufacturers of these imitation parts are obviously not as interested as we are in maintaining the high standard of quality and the complete satisfaction of Ford owners. Imitation parts are manufactured to sell at the highest possible rate of profit, and the grades of steel used are consequently not the same high quality, specially heat-treated alloy steels specified in Ford formulas for the manufacture of GENUINE FORD PARTS.

Don't be misled—insist upon GENUINE FORD PARTS made by the Ford Motor Company. By so doing you will get from 35 to 100 per cent more wear from them, and you will pay the lowest possible cost—the same everywhere.

VOGEL & WURST

Abnormal Children.

Both overweight and underweight children offer special nutritional problems. Both are abnormal, being subject to disease and to general retarded mental development. Mothers should study their children, decide upon individual condition, and then plan meals to conform to proper corrective diet.

The Christmas season with its accompaniment of holiday candies and highly seasoned foods, the New Year with its suggestion of new regimes and good resolutions, both, as our French neighbors say, "give one to think."

The result of over indulgence in sweets and rich food is seldom so apparent as at this time of the year when, very likely, the child cannot get out of doors to work off the effects of over eating. With the New Year, why not resolve to put that child, or those children upon a steady diet, combined with steady hours?

The supply of food should be generous in amount; if insufficient the body itself is burned to provide energy, and loss of weight results; if too much, the body refuses to function properly, more food being retained than is burned up. In either case the situation is serious, retarded mental development being the most noticeable result. The underweight child is, in addition, open to the ravages of tuberculosis; the overweight child, to pneumonia and infantile paralysis.

Cut out the rich foods from the diet of the overweight child; add them, together with at least a quart of milk a day, to the diet of the underweight child; and for both insist upon regular meals and regular sleep. Give their bodies a chance and their brains will take the chance.

The striking difference between well nourished and malnourished children will be shown graphically in the nutrition clinic which will be held at the Michigan Agricultural College during Farmers' Week this winter—Home Economics Department, Michigan Agricultural College.

In addition to its earthquakes, Michigan also possesses some mighty football players.

Son Sues Father.

Strange are many of the cases which come before Justice John D. Thomas in justice court and Friday morning's session was singular in that the first case of a son suing his father came up for hearing.

Fred Burch, jr., of Solo township, is suing his father for $220. Fred, jr., says his father owes him for work done on the Burch farm last spring and summer. The younger Burch claimed he made an agreement with his father to work for him for eight months for $30 a month.

At the end of the eight months, Fred, jr., claims, his father refused to compensate him because the son intended to buy an automobile with his wages. However, the younger man says he is 22 years old and thinks he should be able to spend his money as he sees fit.

A judgment was taken against the father for $220, against which an appeal may be made within the next five days.—Ann Arbor Times News.

Three Ann Arbor Accidents.

Carl Lehman, of Ann Arbor, prominent attorney and former prosecutor, together with his family were celebrating the coming of the new year at their home. The young son, Arthur, 14 years old, wanted to shoot off the family shotgun and Mr. Lehman loaded it and sent him on the porch to fire it off. Then, to see what the lad would do when the gun "kicked back," Mr. and Mrs. Lehman stood back in the house to watch the fun. Twice the boy shot it and then hearing suppressed laughter from the house he turned half way round, himself laughing, and in the excitement, pulled the trigger, the charge landing in his father's left thigh. The wound is a serious one, but the attending physician hopes to save his leg.

Mrs. Mary Maroney, 65 years old, of Ann Arbor, ran across the street in front of an automobile driven by Leland Wooster, of Rushton. She was knocked down and suffered a fractured skull and a broken leg. He told the officers he had no opportunity to stop the car, although he applied the brakes as soon as he saw her. Wooster took Mrs. Maroney to the nearest hospital, where she died, Sunday. She was a dressmaker, and is survived by an aged and crippled sister. Wooster was allowed to go, but will return Tuesday when the prosecutor will have determined as to what action to take.

Raymond Fletcher, 17 years old, of Ann Arbor, was found dead in an automobile in front of his father's home Sunday morning. Moonshine whisky was said to have been the cause of death. Fletcher's two brothers returned to their home shortly after midnight and saw the car standing there, but thought nothing of it. Sunday morning when they came downstairs, they reported that their brother's bed had not been slept in, and started to get the car to search for him, when he was found, dead, in the rear seat. An autopsy revealed whisky as the probable cause of death.

Fletcher and five companions had been at a party at Ypsilanti, celebrating the coming of the new year. Shortly before midnight they returned to this city. Two of the boys left the car when they reached Ann Arbor, but three others, Leo Strieter, Anson Rudd and Bernard Burns drove the young man home and left him in the car. The boys claim that when they left Fletcher, it was at his request. They say he said he wanted to sit out in the car and sober up before he went into the house.

George Rogoch was arraigned in Justice John D. Thomas' court Tuesday morning, charged with manslaughter, in connection with the death of Raymond Fletcher, the 17 year old youth who was found dead in his automobile following a New Year's eve party in Ypsilanti. Rogoch demanded an examination, which will be held January 10 at 10 a. m. Bail was fixed at $20,000 with two sureties. The boy's death, according to physicians who performed an autopsy, was due to acute alcoholism.

SPANISH
MILLA KENTONThe Bobb-Merrill Company

I have to think about gold. First of all I must get it out of the cave. It means that I shall have to leave the gold in the cave. I get the chest out by the chest is safely in the cave. I get the chest out by the chest is safely in the cave. I get the chest out by the chest is safely in the cave.

Of course I should have liked to go to the task today, but after the great event was over I found myself as weak and unsteady as a woman. So by a great effort I came away and left my golden hoard. Now I dream and play with the idea that tomorrow I shall find it all a fantasy. The pleasure of this is, of course, that while I know this wildest of Arabian fairy tales to be as real as the most drab and sober fact of my colorless life.

After all on the way back from the cave Benji brought down a pig. So he was well pleased with the day as I am. Now I am sitting in the doorway of my cabin, writing up my journal, and trying to calm down enough to go to bed. If it were not for the swift fading of daylight, I would go back to the cave for another peep into the chest. But all round the island the sea is moaning with that peculiar melancholy note that comes with the falling of night. The sea-birds have been seen from the cave and gone wheeling off in troops to their nests on the cliffs. Somehow a curious dislike, almost fear, of this wild, sea-girt, solitary place has come over me. I long for the sound of human voices, the touch of human hands. I think of the dead man lying there at the door of the cave, its silent guardian for so long. I suppose he brooded once on the thought of the gold as I do—perhaps he has been brooding so these many years! I wonder if he is dead that I, a stranger, have come to possession of his secret hoard at last.

Oh, Helen, turn your heavenly face to me—be my refuge from these shuddering unwholesome thoughts! The gold is for you—for you! Surely that must cleanse it of its stains, must give the clutch of the dead hands that strive to hold it!

February 11. This morning I was up at the cave. Yes, there it was, the same wonder-chest that I had dreamed of all night long. It was as bright as the tightness in my breast. I began at once the work of removing the bags from the chest and putting them in the corner of the cave. It was a fatiguing job, I had to stop so.

I spent so much time unloading the chest before I was ready to go. The boat the tide was up and I was on the rocks below the cave. I was only at certain stages of the cave approachable by the turn after high water, and there is such a terrific noise that it sets up a small machine among the reefs lying off the cave. At low tide is the time to go.

February 12. Got the chest out of the cave. It was a difficult job. There was no sea, and I had to go through the narrow passage around the point. I passed rather ruefully as I passed the cave of the Two Arches. To the left of the toll I wasted time! I had encountered the fate of a little sooner.

Got the chest aboard the Island Queen and stowed in the cabin. Not a word to anyone about it.

The afternoon began moving the chest. It was the deuce of a job.

February 13. Been hard at it for days. Most of the gold moved. I think, too, of provisions and for the trip.

February 14. On board the Island Queen. Have moved my traps from the cave and am sleeping on the sloop. I hear the gold. Tomorrow I will bring the last of the treasure—a trifling matter—and with the ebb. I would have all the bags on board today, but a word stretch in the sloop and stopped. I can't have the sloop go to sea in case a blow comes. There are only about a dozen bags left in the Island Queen. Helen helped me today. When I was bringing the chest, it seemed to me that I could not say more than "I had better leave it alone."

I was not really more than a child. I was not really more than a child. I was not really more than a child.

I was not really more than a child. I was not really more than a child. I was not really more than a child.

I was not really more than a child. I was not really more than a child. I was not really more than a child.

vine have again covered that lonely-looking gravestone from sight. I can't help feeling my own glorious good fortune to be somehow an affront to poor unlucky Bill.

"Tomorrow one last trip to the cave, and then hey, for home and Helen!" The diary ended here.

I closed the book, and stared with unseeing eyes into the green shadows of the encompassing woods. What happened to the writer of the diary on that last trip to the cave? For he had never left the island. Crusoe was here to prove it, as well as the wreck of the Island Queen. And, in all human probability, under the sand which choked the cabin of the derelict was the long-sought chest of Spanish doubloons.

But what was the mysterious fate of Peter? Had he fallen overboard from the sloop and been drowned? Had he returned to the cave—and was he there still? It was all a mystery—but a mystery which I burned to solve.

Of course I might have solved it, very quickly, merely by communicating the extraordinary knowledge which had come to me to my companions. But for the present at least I meant to keep this astounding secret for my own. Somehow or other, by guile or lucky circumstance, I must bring it about that the document I had signed at Miss Browne's behest was canceled. Was I, who all unaided had discovered, or as good as discovered, the vainly sought for treasure, to disclose its whereabouts to those who would deny me the smallest claim upon its contents? Was I to see all those "fair, shining golden coins," parceled out between Miss Browne and Mr. Tubbs and Captain Magnus (the three who loomed large in my indignant thoughts), and not possess a single one myself? Or perhaps accept a little stinky present of a few? I really wasn't very covetous about the money, taken just as money; but considered as buried treasure it made my mouth water.

And then there was Dugald Shaw, who had saved my life, and who seemed to have forgotten it, and that I had ever had my arms about his neck—and who was poor—and brave—

Yes, decidedly, I should keep my secret yet a while, till I saw how the cards were going to fall.

CHAPTER XII.

I Bring to Light a Clue.

My first and all but overpowering impulse was to possess myself of a spade and dash for the wreck of the Island Queen. Sober second thought restrained me. To dig through the damp, close-packed sand of the cabin would be no trifling task, for I should be hampered by the need of throwing out the excavated sand behind me through the narrow companionway. I could achieve my end, no doubt, by patient burrowing, but it would require much more time than I had at my command before the noon-day sounding of Cooke's gong. I must not be seen departing or returning with a spade, but make off with the implement in a stealthy and burglarious manner. Above all, I must not risk betraying my secret through impatience.

But there was nothing to forbid an immediate pilgrimage to the much-sought gravestone with its sinister symbol. The account in Peter's diary of his adventure with the pig placed the grave with such exactness that I had no doubt of finding it easily. That done, I would know very nearly where to look for the cave—and in order to bid defiance to a certain claim of reluctance which beset me at the thought of the cave, I started out at once, skirting the clearing with much circumspection, for it seemed to me that even the sight of my vanishing back must shout of mystery to Cooke's droning hymns among his pots and pans. Crusoe, of course, came with me, happily unconscious of his own strange relation to our quest.

Somewhere in the angle between the ragged margin of the cliffs and the abrupt rise of the craggy mountainside, according to Peter's journal, lay the grave. I began systematically to poke with a stick I carried into every low-growing mass of vines or bushes. Quite suddenly I found it. My prod had displaced a matted mass of roots. I looked down, looking for a moment at the roots, and then I saw it.

of ground, outlined at intervals with small stones.

At the head of the grave lay a large, smoothly rounded stone. I knelt and brushed away some obstinate vine-tendrils, and the letters "B. H." revealed themselves, cut deeply and irregularly into the sloping face of the stone. Below was the half-intelligible symbol of the crossed bones.

There was something in the utter loneliness of the place that caught my breath sharply. At once I had the feeling of a marauder. Here slept the guardian of the treasure—and yet in defiance of him I meant to have it. So, too, had Peter—and I didn't know yet what he had managed to do to Peter.

With an impatient shiver, I got up quickly from my knees. I whistled to Crusoe, who was trotting busily about on mysterious intelligence conveyed to him by his nose. He ran to me joyfully, and I stooped and patted his warm vigorous body.

"Let Bill walk, Crusoe," I remarked, "let him! He needn't be a dog in the manger about the treasure, anyhow."

Now came the moment which I had been trying not to think about. I had to find the entrance to the cave, and then go into it or part with my own esteem forever. I went and peered over the cliff. The ledge was there—not an inviting ledge, nor one on which the unacrobatically inclined would have any impulse to saunter, but a perfectly good ledge, on which I had not the slightest excuse for declining to venture.

There was truly nothing dangerous about the ledge. It was nearly three feet wide, and had an easy downward trend. Yet you heard the hungry roar of the surf below, and try as you would not to, caught glimpses of the white swirl of it. I moved cautiously, keeping close to the face of the cliff. Crusoe, to my annoyance, sprang down upon the ledge after me. I had a feeling that he must certainly trip me as I picked my way gingerly along.

An angle in the rock—a low dark entrance-way—it was all as Peter had described it. I peered in—nothing but impenetrable blackness. I took a hesitating step. The passage veered sharply, as the diary had recorded. Once around the corner, there would be nothing but darkness anywhere. Suddenly portentous and overwhelming, there rose before me the unanswered question of what had become of Peter on that last visit to the cave. Unanswered—and unanswerable except in one way: by going in to see.

Whereas I had so far thought principally of the treasure, I now began to think with intensity of Peter. What ironic stroke of fate had cut him down in the very moment of his triumph? Had he ever reached the cave to bring away the last of the doubloons? Were they still waiting there, unclaimed? Had a storm come up on that last night, and the weakened cable parted, and the Island Queen gone on the rocks, drowning Peter in the cabin with his gold. Then how had Crusoe got away, Crusoe, who feared the waves so, and would bark at them and then turn tail and run?

Speaking of Crusoe, where was he? I realized that a moment ago he had plunged into the passage. I heard the platter of his feet—a pause. A queer, dismal little whine echoed along the passage. I heard Crusoe returning—but before his nose appeared around the angle of the tunnel his mistress had reached the top of the cliff at a bound and was vanishing at a brisk pace into the woods.

With bitterness, as I pursued my way to camp, I realized that I was not a heroine. Here was a mystery—it was the business of a heroine to solve it. Now that I was safely away from the cave, I began to feel the itch of a torturing curiosity. How, without going into the terrifying place alone, should I find out what was there? Should I pretend to have accidentally discovered the grave, lead the party to it, and then—again accidentally—discover the tunnel? This plan had its merits—but I discarded it, for fear that something would be found in the cave to direct attention to the Island Queen. Then I reflected that very likely the explorers would work round the island far enough to find the sea-mouth of the cave. This would take matters entirely out of my hands. I should perhaps be enlightened as to the fate of Peter and the last remaining bags of doubloons, but might also have to share the secret of the derelict with the rest. And then all my dreams of playing fanny godmother and showering down on certain heads—like coils of fire—torrents of beautiful golden doubloons, would be over.

On the whole I could not tell whether I burned with impatience to have the cave discovered, or was cold with the fear of it.

And then, so vigorous is the instinct to see one's self in heroic postures, I found I was trying to cheat myself with the pretense that I meant presently to abstract Aunt Jane's electric torch and, returning to the tunnel-mouth, plunge in dauntlessly.

Effective in Ancient Warfare.

Among types of sword famous in the past must be mentioned the great two-handed affair swung by the Germans in lancesquens, who were much mixed up in the French religious wars. So large was it, it could not be carried at the side in a scabbard, but had to be swung across the back. When the lancesquens went into action they had to be ordered a good distance apart, in order to confine the casualties to the enemy. Each took his stand, started the old scythes going and developed quite a scything effect.

DAIRY

BETTER COWS HELP PROFITS

High-Producing Dairy Animals Make Best Market for Different Home-Grown Feeds.

Hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of feed is consumed annually by our dairy cows. The net income is large or small, according to the way that feed is used. When production is increased through feeding and breeding, the income rapidly expands, yet a few real scrubs on any dairy farm will dilute the net income.

Farmers of the United States furnish feed and care for 25,000,000 dairy cows. Because of low-producing cows a large part of that feed is wasted. Weighing out expensive feeds to a low-producing cow is like shovelling costly coal into the fire box under a leaky beller; and the farmer who keeps such cows seldom has to pay any income tax.

Like a factory, the dairy cow transforms raw materials—straw, hay, and concentrates—into the finished product, milk. In this way she furnishes a market for the feeds. Whether that market will be good or bad depends in part upon the way the cow is fed, and in part upon the cow herself. There is no better way to market the feeds grown on the farm than to feed them to a herd of high-producing dairy cows. The cow takes corn silage, grain, and hay and converts them into a product for which there is always a ready sale.

It is much easier to send the milk or cream to the creamery than to haul the hay to town. In the long run it is generally much more profitable, because it keeps the soil fertility at home.

In selling feeds to dairy cows the farmer has a wide choice of markets—bad, good, and very good. Few men discriminate closely enough between these markets. If a wheat buyer offers 1 or 2 cents a bushel more than other buyers he gets the wheat; if a wool buyer offers half a cent a pound more he gets the wool. But if one cow returns $3 from a dollar's worth of feed and another only $2, it is scarcely noticed. There is a difference of a dollar in the income every time each of these two cows eats a dollar's worth of feed.

According to estimates of the United States Department of Agriculture, the average dairy cow in the United States produces annually about 4,000 pounds of milk and 160 pounds of butter fat. According to 40,000 yearly individual-cow records recently tabulated by the department, the average cow testing association cow produces 5,980 pounds of milk and 246 pounds of butter fat a year. The world's records are 87,884.4 pounds of milk and 1,205.09 pounds of butter fat in a year. There is plenty of room for improvement, it would seem, in the average production.

The keeping of individual cow records is easy. To test a half dozen samples of milk for butter fat requires about half an hour. Weighing the milk, estimating the weight of roughage, and weighing the concentrates requires but little time. The testing of a composite sample of each cow's milk from two consecutive milkings once a month furnishes the figures from which the yearly production records can be computed. Any man competent to care for a dairy herd can easily learn to make the butter fat test and to keep feed and production records.

WINTER FEEDS FOR HEIFERS

Young Animals Should Not Be Compelled to "Rough It" During Cold Weather Period.

Young heifers should not be expected to "rough it" during the winter, but should have feed and shelter. The feeds should of course include bulky feeds, such as silage, stover, hay, fodder, etc., and concentrates. The young animals should have enough such concentrates as cottonseed meal, wheat bran, shorts, rice flour, alfalfa, pea hay, peanut hay to develop body.

Practice of Testing Cows.

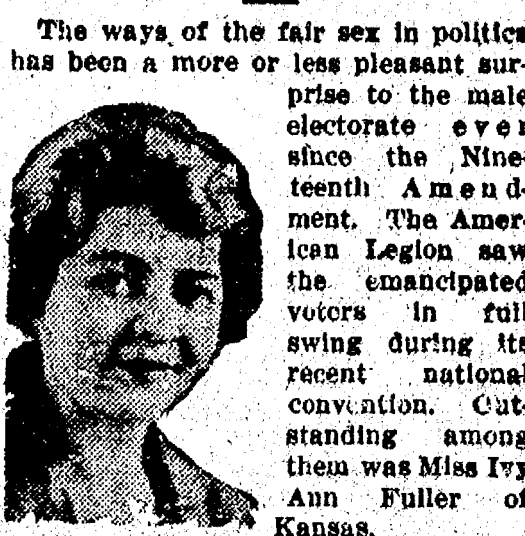

The practice of testing cows to determine their milk and butter fat production and feed consumption by means of cow-testing associations has become widespread. There are now 452 associations of this kind in the United States.

Cracking Velvet Beans.

Velvet beans, as a dairy feed, are improved by cracking, soaking and grinding. Cracking alone does not pay for the work of doing it, but grinding

WOMAN IN LEGION POLITICS

Miss Ivy Ann Fuller of Kansas Did Clever Work at Recent National Convention.

The ways of the fair sex in politics has been a more or less pleasant surprise to the male electorate ever since the Nineteenth Amendment. The American Legion saw the emancipated voters in full swing during its recent national convention. Outstanding among them was Miss Ivy Ann Fuller of Kansas.

One of the most bitterly waged fights of the convention centered over the election of a national chaplain for 1922. The East, West, North and South had candidates in the field with strong backing. Kansas put forth the name of a "fighting parson" and Miss Fuller, in speeches, caucuses and lining up of delegates, put him across by a narrow margin. Miss Fuller, a "movie" actress in New York before the war, trained in a Vassar college unit for nurses and then entered a Fifth avenue hospital and later the Walter Reed institution at Washington.

IN BEHALF OF INSANE MEN

Test Suit Filed in Providence, R. I., May Affect Numerous Other Cases.

Are former soldiers whose minds were wrecked by shell-shock, wounds and gas, temporarily or permanently insane? The question is to be decided in a suit against the government to compel payment of war-risk insurance, filed in Providence, R. I., by James B. Littlefield, attorney for the American Legion.

The action has been taken in behalf of three soldiers, Adam Mikulicz, Guiseppe Vitullo and James McGee. It is alleged by the Legion attorney that the three are totally disabled as a result of insanity. The government insurance bureau, Mr. Littlefield charges, has refused to pay the insurance of the men on the ground that they may recover.

Their minds dwarfed from shell shock, several thousand ex-service men are confined in insane asylums and private and government hospitals. The decision sought is that the men are permanently disabled and as such are entitled to the full money allowance awarded by the government instead of a small temporary compensation. The result of the suit filed in Providence will affect similar cases about to be filed in all parts of the country.

MEDAL OF HONOR MAN DUPED

John J. Kelly of Chicago Badly Advised in Signing Petition for Release of Prisoners.

That his Medal of Honor brother, John J. Kelly, Chicago, had been "duped" into signing a petition to President Harding for the release of Eugene V. Debs and 145 "political prisoners" is a charge made in a letter to national headquarters of the American Legion at Indianapolis from Michael J. Kelley, also of Chicago.

The Congressional Medal man, a former marine who wears several foreign decorations in addition to the highest award at the disposal of the American government, has informed President Harding by letter, according to his brother, that "I allowed myself to be badly advised. I now realize that I should have had confidence in my President and his administration of the government of the country for which I fought and should have refrained from interference in the matter."

Needs New Poll-Tax Law. In passing an amended bill exempting ex-service men of Alabama from the payment of poll tax, the legislature of that state has unwittingly disfranchised the men it sought to benefit. The amendment was held unconstitutional and the only ex-service men permitted to vote in recent elections were those who became disabled from wounds or sickness during the war, provided they did not own $500 worth of property. George Lewis Balles, commander of the Birmingham post of the American Legion is drafting an amendment as a substitute for the one declared unconstitutional. It will be submitted to the legislature at an extra session called by Governor Kilby.

Totally Indifferent.

The rush hour crowd was gathered waiting for cars. A middle-aged, red-faced woman dug her elbows into convenient ribs, regardless of owners.

"Say," she bellowed at a stout gentleman, after a particularly vicious jab: "does it make any difference which of these cars I take to get to Greenwood cemetery?"

"Not to me, ma'am," he replied, slipping through an opening in the crowd.—American Legion Weekly.

Chinese Dairy Farmer Had Cause for Selling His Product Without Using Scales.

A dairy farmer living in a town was recently summoned before the local magistrate charged of selling butter under weight. The complaint was the baker, who felt he was being weighed down by the farmer's butter. The magistrate said that every pound of the farmer's butter fell below weight that a pound ought to be. "Have you a pair of scales?" the magistrate of the farmer. "Yes, your honor." "And weights?" "No, your honor, I have no weights. You have no weights! How can you weigh your butter?" "That is very simple, your honor. Since the baker has bought from me, I buy my bread from and his one-pound loaves serve weights to weigh my butter. butter does not weigh what it is the baker's fault, and not you see."—North China Herald.
