

GOVERNOR ISSUES

ARBOR DAY EDICT

It Will Be The Fiftieth Arbor Day.

Governor Groesbeck has issued a proclamation over his seal to the people of Michigan to observe Arbor Day, May 5th is the day set for the observance of the fiftieth Arbor Day. The proclamation in full is as follows:

"Fifty years ago the State of Nebraska instituted the observance of a day set apart for tree planting. This day was known as Arbor Day, and its observance has become general throughout the nation. It is a day of sentiment, reverence and faith—sentiment in the acknowledgment of the tender susceptibility of man toward all the living things of the out-of-doors; reverence inspired within us by the sturdiness of the oak, the majesty of the pine, the beauty of the elm and the splendor of the leaf bearing branches of the maple with its seasons of changing color; and form; a well grounded faith in the productive energy of nature's generous creative forces.

"To us of Michigan, Arbor Day is of particular significance. Time was when our forests outshone in splendor and magnificence those of any other State. Today, through the utilization of this natural product and the devastation wrought by forest fires, these forests have to a large extent disappeared, though we still have many thousands of acres of beautiful forest land.

"Therefore, by virtue of the authority vested in me as Governor of the State of Michigan, I do hereby designate Friday, May fifth, 1922, as Arbor Day, and I request that exercises appropriate to the day be held in all our schools."

At the same time a similar number of young first offenders will be transferred from Marquette to the state reformatory at Ionia.

The group of men going to Camp Custer include mechanics and men skilled in the building trades as well as common laborers, and will be paid a self supporting wage while engaged in the work of building the hospital, and will have something to contribute to the support of their families.

Records of their conduct will be kept and reported to the parole commission and prison authorities. Failure to meet the conditions of the temporary parole will automatically bar them from full parole and will send them back to Jackson to serve their maximum sentence.

SPRAY NOW TO CONTROL APPLE SCAB, SAYS M. A. C.

East Lansing, April 28.—That the next few days, if warm, will be the critical period in the control of apple scab in Michigan orchards, is the warning sent out today by plant pathologists at the Michigan Agricultural College. Examinations made in various parts of the state show the scab fungus to be fully mature and ready to infect the new growth of the trees, unless proper spraying work is done. "Pre-Pink" spray, as well as the usual Pink Spray, should be applied this year," said Prof. C. W. Bennett of the college Botany Department in discussing the state situation. The apple scab fungus has advanced far beyond the apple buds, although it usually develops at about the same rate as the buds and flowers. This means that early precautions must be taken. "The Pre-Pink spray should be applied when the blossom buds have begun to separate in the clusters. This is about a week before the regular Pink spray."

The horticultural department at the college is also advising the early spray this year for all varieties susceptible to the scab, according to Prof. C. P. Halligan, head of the department. Bordeaux mixture or lime sulphur, one and one-quarter gallons to fifty gallons of water, with the addition of one to one and one-half pounds of arsenate of lead powder to each fifty gallons, is the mixture being advised for the Pre-Pink spray.

A new bulletin giving spray and practice outline for Michigan fruit growers has just been issued at the college, and is available on application to the Dean of Agriculture, M. A. C., East Lansing. The Bulletin is known as Special Experiment Station Bulletin No. 114.

She said that she was a junior in the journalism school at Missouri, that she wanted to get to New York, and, lacking funds, decided to beat her way.

"I rode a freight to Chicago, from Columbia, Mo.," the girl explained. "Before I left Columbia, I shipped my dresses, garter pin and powder puff to New York, then bobbed my hair, and started out."

"It was the way she crossed her legs," explained Patrolman Manning Wednesday in telling how he pierced the young woman's disguise.

PRESIDENTIAL PARTY

HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

President Harding's adventuresome 30 mile voyage up the Ohio river Thursday to participate in the 100th birthday anniversary of General Grant narrowly escaped serious disaster when part of the third deck of the steamer Island Queen crashed to the deck below, carrying with it some 200 persons.

Only half a minute's warning by cracking timbers gave a school children's band and many others on the deck below, time to get from under the crashing deck. Only three persons were injured.

Due to advice of government inspectors late Wednesday night, President and Mrs. Harding and other distinguished personages in the presidential party were not aboard the Island Queen. Consequently the president and his party were assigned to the Cayuga, a government boat which led the flotilla of seven steamers from Cincinnati bearing between ten and fifteen thousand people.

GAYNOR CLUB DRAWS

SMALL AUDIENCE

Fine Concert Is Given By Glee Club Wednesday Evening.

That the audience which heard the Kalamazoo College Glee Club Wednesday evening, at the town hall was not adequate in point of numbers cannot be denied. The concert was good and without doubt one of the best that has been in Chelsea for some time and every seat should have been filled. It can also be said that the enthusiasm of the audience left nothing to be desired.

The first part of the program was given over to songs by the club, vocal solos, and readings. The club, composed of twelve girls sang well and were most generous with their encores. The solo work of Miss Hough was especially fine. The reader, Miss Frances Klyver, gave two clever sketches.

The last of the program was a farce entitled "The Kleptomaniac." The parts were well interpreted and kept the audience in continuous good humor.

AGRICULTURAL BILL AGREED ON

Senate and House Conference Reach Compromise on Appropriations.

Agreement was reached late Wednesday between the senate and house conference committees on the agricultural appropriation bill. The house delegation accepted the four important amendments of the senate, but with the appropriations carried by them reduced. Most of the lesser charges made by the senate likewise were compromised, each committee receding in some instances.

The important amendments made by the senate included increases in appropriations for the state relations service of the agricultural department for combating the white pine blister rust, and to enable the purchase of more land in the watershed of the Appalachian mountains at the head of navigable streams.

Increase to Fight Barberry.

The fourth big increase by the senate was from $142,000 to $500,000 for fighting the barberry bush as a breeder of wheat rust. The committees agreed finally on $500,000 for the purpose.

The amendment, which increased the fund for co-operative extension among the states from the house allotment of $1,000,000 to $1,500,000, was compromised at $1,300,000. The Overman amendment adding $500,000 to $750,000, fixed by the house for the purchase of land to the head of navigable streams, was cut, so that, as the bill was reported to the senate, the provision carries $400,000.

PASSION PLAY

OPENS MAY 14

Thousands From All Parts of the World Soon Will Start Oberammergau Pilgrimage.

Thousands of people from all parts of the world, including devout pilgrims and ordinary sightseers, will soon be flocking into the little Bavarian village of Oberammergau to witness the historic Passion Play. Preparations for this great spectacle are rapidly approaching completion, and by the end of the present month the first full-dress rehearsal will take place. This will be followed by a second rehearsal, on May 11, to which press representatives will be invited. Three days later the first public performance will be given.

According to present arrangements there will be 31 performances between May 14 and September 3, but in order to prevent disappointment to vast numbers of visitors arriving in July and August it is probable that extra performances will be given. Although people from practically every land will be represented in the audiences, it is likely that Americans will predominate. At the last presentation in 1910 the spectators numbered 270,000, of whom 120,000 were Americans. It has been estimated that between 50,000 and 100,000 visitors from this country will register in Oberammergau during the coming summer.

700 People Take Part.

Nearly 700 people take part in the play, 122 of whom have speaking parts, while 260 act but do not speak. The most important part is that of Anton Lang, whom will appear as Christus, a role that he filled in 1900 and 1910, when he became world-famous for his wonderful representations. Other important parts have been filled as follows: Peter, Andreas Lang; Judas, Guido Mayr; Annas, Sebastian Lang; Herod, Gregory Breitsamer; Mary, Marta Veit; Mary Magdalene, Paula Repndt; John, Melchior Breitsamer, Jr.; Caiaphas, Hugo Rutz; Pilate, Hans Mayr.

During the play season the chief performers, who are selected by a local committee, put aside their usual occupations and endeavor to live the parts assigned to them. As soon as a man is chosen for a part he is forbidden to have his hair or beard cut. That is why a visitor to Oberammergau sees so many men with hair reaching to their shoulders.

Play Not Commercialized.

Although they have to devote months of their time to the play, the earnings of the various players are remarkably small. Anton Lang received only $400 in 1910 and other players much less, the pay of children performers being under $6 for the entire season. For a year's work, and that only once in 10 years, $400 could hardly conduce to any great prosperity, and this, taken with the fact that the players abandon their customary work, is sufficient proof that the play has not been commercialized.

In spite of the large numbers of people who witness the play, the profits, after all expenses have been paid, are not large. They are divided into three parts, one part being given to the performers, another devoted to upkeep of the theater, wardrobe, advertising, etc., and the remainder to public utilities, such as canals and roads, education, charities and the church.

Most of the costumes for the play are made in Oberammergau, the materials being obtained from Paris, Berlin and Munich. Some of the rarer stuffs come from Jerusalem and Damascus. The cost exceeds $5,000. Great care is taken in following the designs of ancient garments, while the work of making and keeping in order the costumes and properties of fully 700 performers is by no means small.

GERMANY TO RESUME

SALE OF DYES

Germany has finally agreed to resume the sale of dyes to the no-alliance of America with the result of a conference many between an official of the alliance and the head of the dye alliance. It is regarded by American alliance officials as a distinct victory for the textile industry of America. It will soon, they believe, normalize the shipment of dyes from Germany to the United States.

WHAT'S AHEAD OF US?

You, like every one else in the country, are wondering:

(1) When business gets going again how will times compare with the great boom of 1919? (2) What standard of living lies in store for the average American?

On every hand you hear people saying, "I guess we can't expect times ever to get as good again as they were during the silk shirt days of the war boom."

Developments in the iron and steel industry suggest that this may be the wrong view. For instance:

During March, the country produced 2,034,794 tons of pig iron, or roughly four-fifths as much as in March, 1913, which was a typical month of normal "good times."

Before the war it was customary for pig iron output to increase 1,000,000 tons a year to take care of the normal growth of the country's needs.

On this basis, if the climb had continued normally and there hadn't been a war, pig iron production in March, 1922, would have been 3,225,000 tons, which compares with 3,090,243 tons produced in March, 1919, during the boom.

In other words, pig iron output during the war boom was no larger than the normal, natural growth.

Pig iron production, by the way, is one of the two barometers of general business. The other is wheat.

How about the future standard of living? Nearly every one has learned from bitter experience that prices and dollars have little to do with it. The real standard of living is the amount of commodities you are able to buy with your money.

Furthermore, America can buy only in proportion to what it produces.

If the farmers raise 106,000,000 bushels of wheat a year, there's only one bushel for each of us. But we have three bushels apiece if they raise 318,000,000 bushels.

Similarly, if the men who make autos produce 106,000,000 cars a year, there's a car for each of us. If only 1,060,000 cars are produced in a year there's only a car for each 100 persons. The future standard of living will depend largely on how much we Americans produce—how hard we work.

To pay the interest on our national debt would take yearly only 1-32 of the American people's total income in 1913. The burden, unless pyramided by profiteers, is not big enough to subtract materially from the future standard of living.

HONESTY

The pretty young white wife of a Chinese restaurant keeper was arrested in an opium raid in New York.

She lives uptown with her daughter, among the whites. Her husband bored by curious Caucasians "staring at him every time he went out of the house," moved to an apartment in Chinatown.

When the white wife visits her yellow husband, she takes all her furs with her because "no Chinese would steal." She is not as sure of the white men in her own district.

In the matter of honesty, the Chinese are the greatest people in the world. And they are honest, not from a moral standpoint, but because they have learned through thousands of years that honesty pays—in prosperity as well as happiness.

That is something the infantile white man's civilization should learn from the ancient east.

DANGER

In the Amazon jungle, where no one worries much about prices and cost of living, the most dangerous things encountered by a group of American explorers were not giant snakes or wild beasts.

"Worst peril we found there was a screw worm," says Orlando E. White of Brooklyn botanical gardens.

The Amazon screw worm develops from an egg laid by a jungle fly in a human wound as a scratch by a thorn. If not cut out deadly inflammation follows.

Most of life's dangers and pitfalls start with little things. The monsters that worry us most are usually phantoms of the imagination.

Life pivots on small details.

PENNY

Standard Oil company, more interested in the present than in the hereafter, raises the price of gasoline in the Chicago district a cent and a half a gallon.

That increase, applied all over the country, would increase the nation's yearly gasoline bill $67,620,000.

A penny, one way or the other in gasoline price, makes a difference of more than $45,000,000 a year.

A powerful friend, the penny, when treated with respect. It is the core of individual success and dividends.

The habit of borrowing small sums of money anticipating pay-pernicious practice and breaks many a friendship. It is a readiness to loan money to a professional borrower.

Everyone loves the man who pays his bills promptly.

The real purpose of education is primarily not to give information, but to give people an understanding that will enable them to act intelligently.

Rubber tires are a nineteenth-century invention, but Egyptian gods in chariots with leather-tired wheels more than 3,400 years old.

Michigan Happenings

An important state precedent has been made by the Michigan Industrial accident board in the case of Mrs. Albert Smith, Kalamazoo, who has been awarded $4,200 compensation, the result of the death of her husband September 30, on the crossing at the Tex Paper mill. Smith was driving to work at the mill. Rain prevented him seeing the approach of the train. The insurance company contested the widow's claim, but the board held that the compensation act covers employees on their way to work as well as those actually engaged at their regular employment.

After 44 years as president of the local W. C. T. U., Mrs. Mary B. Dickie, wife of President Emeritus Samuel Dickie of Albion college, has resigned. When Dr. Dickie was superintendent of schools at Hastings, from 1873 to 1877, Mrs. Dickie became leader of the "Red Ribbon" society, which was the forerunner of the W. C. T. U. When Dr. Dickie in 1877, came to Albion college, his wife was chosen head of the local dry organization. Mrs. Harvey G. Pearce has been named to succeed Mrs. Dickie.

A request from the state welfare commission of American Legion that $5,000 be appropriated for assisting widows and children of disabled war veterans and $24,000 to replace money already spent by the legion in aiding veterans has been received at Lansing by the state administrative board. The commission asked that the appropriations be made from the state war preparedness fund. The matter was referred to a committee.

Twenty minutes after the jurors retired at 4:30 o'clock April 19, they brought in a verdict finding John Duval Dodge, Detroit, millionaire, and Rex Earl, of Kalamazoo, guilty of possessing, transporting and furnishing intoxicating liquors. Attorney Harry Howard, of counsel for the defense, asked a stay of sentence to file a motion for a new trial. It was granted. The trial was held at Kalamazoo.

Fire caused by a painter's blow torch, destroyed the $50,000 home of George B. Yorkes, former prosecuting attorney for Wayne county, near Northville. Village water mains do not extend to the residence and the fire department was unable to fight the flames. A water supply system on the farm failed. Firemen were salvaged. Insurance partially covers the loss.

After following to an end another chap, which, at first, apparently accounted for the whereabouts of Jerome Dickinson, 19-year-old acting pastor of the Church of the Ascension, of Ontonagon, who disappeared April 4, W. M. Dickinson, of Detroit, his father, announced he had little hope of finding his son alive. He believes the young clergyman drowned in Lake Superior.

All state institutions and departments will be informed by order of the state administrative board, that overdrafts on appropriations for this year will be deducted from appropriations for next year. This means that institutions or departments overdrawing their appropriation will be spending their own money, and have that much less to spend next year.

Reuben Johnson, of Albion, charged with attempted murder in connection with the shooting of Deputy Sheriff R. S. Scott and Robert Dowsett in Albion April 1, after the officers made a liquor raid, pleaded guilty before Judge Walter H. North in Circuit Court and was sentenced to 16 to 20 years at Marquette Prison, with a recommendation of 21.

Robert Barney, Traverse City farmer and banker, has received notice of his appointment by Governor Alex J. Groesbeck as a member of the state fair commission, succeeding Perry F. Powers, of Cadillac.

Home builders are preparing for a busy season. Prospective home owners are actively engaged selecting the plans for their new homes. This year promises to be one of the greatest for a building standpoint, as the prices of materials have come down considerably from the exorbitance they have occupied for a number of years and in many places the skilled labor required is accepting lower wages. Planning and building a home is not a step that can be taken hurriedly. The selection of the plans requires much thought. How many are in the family? What are the personal desires as to room arrangement of the house? The size of the lot and where it is located; and, what is most important, how much can the family afford to invest in the home? These are questions that demand serious consideration and require time and study.

It is in this preliminary that the architect, contractor and building material dealer are most helpful. These men have had a wide experience in designing and building homes. They know how easy it is to make mistakes that are costly to remedy when they are discovered. They have a pretty concise idea of costs. They can give advice as to materials and methods of construction that will help the prospective home owner to get the best value in appearance, durability and comfort for his money.

Ideas of what is desirable to the individual in a home are secured from the architect, contractor and building material dealer. Included with the rooms are the conveniences found in the modern home, such as a toilet and washroom on the first floor, a bathroom on the second floor and plenty of closet room.

The entrance door opens off the porch and into a vestibule, adjoining which is a coat closet. To the left is the living room that is larger than the average—14 feet 6 inches by 18 feet. This is a light, well-ventilated room, and has an open fireplace in the outside wall at the end. Back of the living room is a large dining room, 14 by 15 feet, with an attractive bay window which will be just the place for a window box. To the right of the dining room is the kitchen, also a corner room, which insures good ventilation. Between the kitchen and vestibule is a hall, off which is the toilet and washroom mentioned. Adjoining the kitchen is a good-sized pantry.

An open stairway out of the corner of the living room leads to the second floor, which contains four good-sized bedrooms, all of which are on corners. Between two of the bedrooms is the bathroom.

The basement extends under the whole of the house, with the exception of the porch. Here is plenty of room for the heating plant and fuel; the laundry equipment and storerooms for fruits and vegetables.

In both exterior appearance and interior arrangement this is the type of home that insures comfort for the occupants and exceptional value for the money required to build it. Also, it is the sort of house that will appeal to the average family, which makes it readily salable.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Wealthy and highly placed in the Chicago business world, Benjamin Corvet is something of a puzzle and a mystery to his associates. After a stormy interview with his partner, Henry Spearman, Corvet seeks Constance Sherrill, daughter of his other business partner, Lawrence Sherrill, and leaves from her a promise not to marry Spearman. He then disappears. Sherrill learns Corvet has written to a certain Alan Conrad in Blue Rapids, Kansas, and exhibits strange agitation over the matter.

CHAPTER II.—Corvet's letter summons Conrad, a youth of unknown parents, to Chicago.

CHAPTER III.—From a statement of Sherrill it seems probable Conrad is Corvet's illegitimate son. Corvet has denied his house and its contents to Alan.

CHAPTER IV.—Alan takes possession of his new home.

CHAPTER V.—That night Alan discovers a man ransacking the desks and bureau drawers in Corvet's apartment. The appearance of Alan tremendously agitates the intruder, who appears to think him a client and raves of the "Miwaka." After a struggle the man escapes.

He did this and stopped over to the Sherrills'. The man who answered the ring recognized him at once and admitted him. In reply to Alan's question, the servant said that Mr. Sherrill had not yet returned. When Alan went to his room, the valet appeared and, finding that Alan was packing, he him pack and went downstairs; a motor had just driven up to the house.

It proved to have brought Constance and her mother, Mrs. Sherrill, after informing Alan that Mr. Sherrill might not return until some time later, went upstairs and did not appear again.

Constance followed her mother, but, ten minutes later, came downstairs.

"You're not staying here tonight," she asked.

"I wanted to say to your father," Alan explained, "that I believe I had better go over to the other house."

"Are you taking any one with you?" she inquired.

"Any one?"

"A servant, I mean."

"Then you'll let us lend you a man from here."

"You're awfully good, but I don't think I'll need anyone tonight. Mr. Corvet's my father's man; he's coming back tomorrow, I understand. I'll get along very well until then."

"She was silent a moment as she looked away. Her shoulders suddenly quivered a little, and when she took some one with you," she persisted, "I don't like to think of you alone over there."

"My father must have been often alone there."

"Yes," she said. "Yes." She looked at him quickly, then away, checking a question. She wanted to ask, he knew, what he had discovered in that lonely house which had so agitated him; for of course she had noticed agitation in him. And he had intended to tell her, or rather, her father. He had been rehearsing to himself the description of the man he had met there in order to ask Sherrill about him; but now Alan knew that he was not going to refer the matter even to Sherrill just yet.

Sherrill had believed that Benjamin Corvet's disappearance was from circumstances too personal and intimate to be made a subject of public inquiry; and what Alan had encountered in Corvet's house had confirmed that belief. Sherrill further had said that Benjamin Corvet, if he had wished Sherrill to know those circumstances, would have told them to him; but Corvet had not done that; instead, he had sent for Alan, his son. He had given his son his confidence.

Sherrill had admitted that he was withholding from Alan, for the time being, something that he knew about Benjamin Corvet; it was nothing, he had said, which would help Alan to learn about his father, or what had become of him; but perhaps Sherrill, not knowing these other things, could not speak accurately as to that. Alan determined to ask Sherrill what he had been withholding, before he told him all of what had happened in Corvet's house. There was one other circumstance which Sherrill had mentioned but not explained; it occurred to Alan now.

"Miss Sherrill," he checked himself.

"What is it?"

"This afternoon your father said that you believed that Mr. Corvet's disappearance was in some way connected with you; he said that he did not think that was so; but do you want to tell me why you thought it?"

"Yes, I will tell you," she colored.

"One of the last things Mr. Corvet said to me, the last thing he said before he sent for me to come to me and warn me of some of my friends."

"Stop a moment, Miss Sherrill? How? I mean, when you said what?"

"Against thinking too much of him," she turned away.

"I think I can see your father in the morning," Alan said, when Constance looked back to him.

"But you'll come over here for breakfast in the morning?"

"You want me?"

"Certainly."

"I'd like to come very much," she followed.

"I'll expect you," she followed.

"I'll expect you," she followed.

"I'll expect you," she followed.

"I'll expect you," she followed.

"I'll expect you," she followed.

In Mr. Corvet's house last night which made me want to know, if I could, everything you could tell me."

Sherrill opened a drawer and took out a large, plain envelope.

"On the day after your father disappeared," he said, "but before I knew he was gone—or before any one except my daughter felt any alarm about him."

Sherrill Opened a Drawer and Took Out a Large, Plain Envelope.

"I received a short note from him. The note was addressed, almost incoherently. It told me he had sent for you—Alan Conrad, of Blue Rapids, Kansas—but spoke of you as though you were some one I ought to have known about, and commended you to my care. The remainder of it was merely an agitated, almost indecipherable farewell to you. When I opened the envelope, a key fell out. The note made no reference to the key, but, comparing it with one I had in my pocket, I saw that it appeared to be a key to a safety deposit box in the vaults of a company where we both had boxes."

"The note, taken in connection with my daughter's alarm about him, made it so plain that something serious had happened to Corvet, that my first thought was merely for him. Corvet was not a man with whom one could readily assume the thought of suicide; but, Alan, that was the idea I had—I hurried at once to his house, but the bell was not answered, and I could not get in. His servant, Wassaquim, was very few friends, and the few times he has been away from home of recent years have been when he visited an acquaintance of his—the head porter in a South Side hotel. I went to the telephone in the house next door and called the hotel and found Wassaquim there. I told him over the telephone only that something was wrong, and hurried to my own home to get the key which I had, to the Corvet house, but when I came back and let myself into the house, I found it empty and with no sign of anything having happened."

"The next morning, Alan, I went to the safe-deposit vaults as soon as they were open. I presented the numbered key and was told that it belonged to a box rented by Corvet, and that Corvet had arranged about three days before for me to have access to the box if I presented the key. I had only to sign my name in their book and open the box. In it, Alan, I found the pictures of you which I showed you yesterday, and the very strange communications that I am going to show you now."

Sherrill opened his long envelope, from which several thin, folded papers fell. He picked up the largest of these, which consisted of several sheets fastened together with a clip, and handed it to Alan without comment. Alan, as he looked at it and turned the pages, saw that it contained two columns of typewriting carried from page to page after the manner of an account.

The column to the left was an inventory of property and profits and income by months and years, and the one to the right was a list of losses and expenditures. Beginning at an indefinite day on month in the year 1895, there was set down in a lump sum what was indicated as the total of Benjamin Corvet's holdings at that time. To this, sometimes undated items, the increase had been added. In the opposite column, beginning apparently from the same date in 1895, were the missing man's expenditures.

Alan having ascertained that the papers contained only this account, looked up questioning to Sherrill; but Sherrill, without speaking, merely handed him the second of the papers. Alan unfolded it and saw that it was a letter written in the same hand which had written the summons he had received in Blue Rapids and had made the entries in the little memorandum book of the remittances that had been sent to John Welton.

It began simply:

"Lawrence—

"This will come to you in the event that I am not able to carry out the plan upon which I am now, at last, determined. You will find with this a list of my possessions. Deeds for all real estate, accepted and complete except for recording of the transfer at the county office; bonds, certificates, and other documents representing my ownership of properties, together with signed forms for their legal transfer to you, are in this box. These properties, in their entirety, I give to you in trust to hold for the young man now known as Alan Conrad of Blue Rapids, Kansas, to deliver any part or all to him or to continue to hold it in trust for him as you shall conclude to be his greatest advantage."

DePalma Will Drive Yankee Car in Five Century Grind

HERE YOU ARE, RALPH, DOLLED UP

INDIANAPOLIS, IND. (AP)—Ralph DePalma, "darling of the race fans," will pin his hopes on Tuesday, May 30, to winning the tenth annual 500-mile race with an Indianapolis-made Duesenberg "straight eight." DePalma has endeavored himself to the speed followers by the gracefulness with which he can descend, as well as by the speed and for the neat personal appearance of himself, his mechanics and his pit crew, to say nothing of the immaculate car he always drives. Since 1919 DePalma's racing cars have always been crimson colored and at the start of a race have a mirrored finish, without a hook of soil. With all his attention to detail he always gives the fans a run for their money, furnishing 90 per cent of the thrills of the speed spectacle, had the fastest car a year ago and holds the 500-mile record average of 89.84 miles an hour, established when he won the 1925 event.

IS WORLD'S TIME CENTER

Elaborate System by Which Observations Are Made at Greenwich, England, and Made Public.

The astronomical, wind and rain instruments on the roof of the observatory building at Greenwich, Eng., make the scene an interesting one.

Here, in this building, is the time center of the world. Time is usually determined by watching the stars.

The stars are used for this purpose because they are many and the sun is but one. Star transits can be taken at various times throughout the day and night while the sun can be used but once a day.

This is how observations are made at Greenwich: About two minutes before the appointed time the operator takes his place at the eye piece of the telescope. As he looks he sees a number of vertical lines. These are spider threads placed in the focus of the eye piece. Presently a bright point of silver light comes moving quickly toward the telescope. The watchman's hand now seeks the side of the telescope until his finger finds a little button, over which it rests ready to strike. On comes the star without haste, without rest, until it reaches one of the glowing threads. Tap! The finger falls sharply on the button. In three or four seconds the star has reached another thread. Tap! Again the button is struck; and so on until the ten threads have been passed and the transit is over.

Now let us consider what the finger taps have done. Each tap completed, for an instant, an electric current and recorded a mark on the "chronometer." This is a large metal cylinder covered with paper, and turned by a carefully regulated clock once in every two minutes. A similar mark is made once in every two seconds by a current sent by means of the standard sidereal clock of the observatory. If then one of the clock dots and one of the observer's dots come exactly side-by-side it is known at what precise second the star was on one of the wires, as the spider threads are called. If the observer's dot comes between two clock dots, it is easy, by measuring its distance from them with a dividing scale, to tell the instant the star was on the wire to the tenth part of a second.

transit was taken over (on the distance of each wire center of the field of view) practically ten separate observations have been made, and these gives the time of Greenwich Observatory.

TO ONE IN FLANDERS

As on that day, among the red leaves blowing. We lay and watched the wild hawks wheeling through the air, and you looked at me and, like thin water flowing. Time and creed went past; And old earth sang to us her old wild song.

As on that day—alone, 'mid dead leaves blowing. I stood and watch the dark ships seaward glide, And wonder if the Flemish autumn's snowing. Red, low-singing leaves where, like stopped water, you will splendor died.

Do you regret in fields of ghost-flowers blowing. The sterner love that cleaved our passion here? Or do you dream my tears are dew-drops glowing. Round your unmarked sleep? And do you wake, and weep—I wonder. Dear?—

FREAK POTATOES IN ENGLAND

Season Has Been Prolific of Remarkable Formations Which Are Credited to Peculiar Weather.

A potato freak, quite new to agriculturists, has been dug up in Wheatthorpe, Hertfordshire. The tuber, proper, formed early in the season has developed five nutcracker-like offshoots. They have grown inside the skin of the old tuber, completely encircling its contents. They have broken a slit in the skin, but only one of the five is at all inside. The other four are of five eggs inside an oval basket, or nest. It has been a year of freak potatoes, because in the forcing weather the tubers sprouted early and formed a new generation. These button potatoes often stuck out from the older potatoes in all sorts of queer shapes. A two-pound potato was dug up at Sutton Bridge, in Lincolnshire, which had a close resemblance to a rather crude doll, with arms, legs, head and eyes complete. But it is no new thing for the new potatoes to grow inside the parent.

Burglars Don't Seek the Limelight

DARKNESS is their stock in trade. They work by stealth—unheard and unseen—their movements cloaked in secrecy. It's honest folks who can risk it.

It's the same way in business. The manufacturer or the merchant who is not sure of his goods does not dare to advertise. Advertising would hasten the end of his business career—put him to a test he could not meet.

The man who advertises, deliberately invites your inspection. He tells you about his product or his merchandise and then lets it stand on its own merits. You can depend on him. He knows his product is good.

That's one reason why it pays to read the advertisements you find in the columns of The Tribune. It is through advertising that you are able to keep in touch with the good things that progressive business men are spending their money to introduce and to keep before you.

Advertisements are interesting, instructive and profitable. They throw a powerful light on the very things that concern you most. Read them.
