Here's the Corn Binder You Want

The John Deere is the kind of binder you want in your corn fields. There's no work for you in operating it, and it's easy on the horses. It's the biggest improvement made in corn binder construction for many years.

JOHN DEERE CORN BINDER

The Binder with Power Carrier and Quick Turn Tongue Truck

The John Deere is equipped with a power bundle carrier. To dump the bundle only slight pressure on the carrier trip is necessary. The bundles are delivered all in one pile away from the path of the horses—this is a labor-saving worth-while feature.

You will like the Quick Turn Tongue Truck. It takes off all neck weight from the horses and enables them to turn at the most freely and easily. This quick turn makes the horses' work a lot easier.

The John Deere does good work in any field in which a corn binder can be operated. It has a wide range of adjustment which makes it possible to operate it in short and tall corn.

It is equipped with roller and ball bearings, 17 sets in all, which lighten the draft and decrease the wear.

It has three packer arms and four discharge arms on the regular attachment. This insures prompt discharge and complete separation of the bundles. The short corn attachment has two packer arms and three discharge arms.

In every particular you will find the John Deere Binder is built on a quality standard that means real satisfaction and profit to you.

Come in and let us show you other important features on this better binder

FOUR RAISED TO MASTER MASONS

Olive Lodge, No. 155, F. & A. M., Held Special Communication Tuesday Evening

Howard Baer, Lloyd Hirth, Herbert Vogel and Staffley Vickers, four fine specimens of American young manhood, were raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason at a special communication of Olive Lodge No. 155, F. & A. M., held at the Masonic Temple Tuesday evening.

The degree work was exceptionally well exemplified, several past masters assisting Worshipful Master Baxter in certain portions of the ritual. The attendance of the brethren was good with several visitors present, and all enjoyed the session.

At the conclusion of the lodge session adjournment was taken to the banquet hall, where ice cream and wafers were served.

Plans are in progress for the annual Masonic picnic to be held at Eisenbeiser's grove, North Lake, on Thursday, August 24. Smith's band will furnish music for the occasion and a program of sports, etc., is in preparation.

Masons, members of the Eastern Star and their families are looking forward to this annual outing and making plans to attend.

NO PAVEMENT HERE THIS YEAR

South Main Street Job Held Over To Spring On Account of Cement Shortage

People who were active in securing signatures to a petition for the paving of South Main street, in fact all citizens interested in the much needed improvement, will be disappointed to learn that no paving will be done on that street this year.

This decision was given by State Highway Commissioner Frank Rogers at a meeting with the Washtenaw county board of road commissioners at Ann Arbor Saturday.

Mr. Rogers informed the board that work would not be done on Chelsea's main southern outlet this year because it was almost impossible to secure cement at present. He further stated that road work was being done in several Michigan villages and as the streets in these towns were torn up it was necessary to complete that work before starting new construction.

Mr. Rogers informed the commissioners that he would later advertise for bids on the South Main street pavement and would let the contracts so work could be started early in the spring.

Trenches for tile on both sides of South Main street from M-17 are being dug and that part of the work will probably be completed this fall.

WASHTENAW SHERIFF SHOTS MAN IN SELF DEFENSE

Acting in self defense when his prisoner attempted to take his life, Sheriff A. C. Pack shot and fatally wounded Dominico Gantile, aged 30, of Ann Arbor, Tuesday night near the first cross road this side of Whitmore Lake. The wounded man was rushed to St. Joseph's sanitarium by the sheriff where he died ten minutes later making no statement.

The sheriff accompanied by Carl Overbacker, had followed Gantile to Whitmore Lake and the arrest was made on the return trip to Ann Arbor. Gantile drew his revolver on Col Pack, but was overpowered before he could shoot. A still was found in Gantile's auto.

CAVANAUGH LAKE ROAD TO BE WIDENED

Township Board Takes Steps to Make Safe Public Highways

Monday evening Sylvan township board, consisting of Supervisor H. J. Dancer, Clerk George Davis and Justices E. A. Lowry and E. A. Ward, accompanied by Highway Commissioner J. M. Heselschwerdt, made a survey of the highways in the northwestern part of the township and the east shore of Cavanaugh Lake.

The roads over which the party drove were found in quite bad shape and should receive attention at once or the township may have some repair bills for broken autos and other vehicles and perhaps a law suit or two.

Upon their return the board held a session in H. J. Dancer's store, where the situation was discussed.

A petition containing the names of 59 taxpayers was presented asking that the drive on the east shore of Cavanaugh Lake be widened from the cottage of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Schenk to the intersection of the highway at the Y. W. C. A. Club house.

A motion was made by Justice Lowry and supported by Justice Ward, that the prayer of the petitioners be granted. The highway commissioner was instructed to proceed at once with the work of repairing the road-way. Also to cut the brush along the highway and build sufficient turn-outs from the Schenk cottage to the summer house of L. P. Vogel, to make the drive safe and passable.

The hill at the home of P. H. Riemenschneider has been so badly washed out that it is dangerous for vehicles of any kind to travel over and the commissioner was instructed to put the roadway in a safe condition at once. He was also instructed to cut the brush on the highway between the residence of Albert Elsie and the farm of Wm. J. Weber known as the Wm. Long place to safeguard the public.

As there is but very little cash left in the two highway funds of the township, the board will be compelled to make an appropriation to cover any deficit after the work has been completed. As a matter of fact if all of the road work was done that is demanded of the board by the residents of the township it would run into many thousands of dollars.

THREE BADLY HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Machine With Three Young Men Crashes Into Truck.

Lima Center, Friday evening at 8:30, was the scene of an auto accident, in which three young men were painfully and seriously injured. The men were Joseph Nelson and Cornell Hudler of Jackson, and Ivo Rowan, a young soldier of Co. K, 54th Infantry, Ft. Sheridan.

Nelson suffered internal injuries and lacerations about the hands and head. Hudler received a compound fracture of the right leg and cuts about the head and arms and Rowan also received a compound fracture of the right leg and cuts about the head and arms. The young are reported as making satisfactory recovery.

Hudler and Nelson were driving from Jackson to Ann Arbor, picking up Rowan, the soldier, on the road. Witnesses state the Ford coupe was going along at a pretty good pace when it struck a truck standing on one side of the road in front of E. H. Dancer's home. The young men claim the truck displayed no tail light and when the truck was seen there was not time to turn out.

The truck driver had just completed some repairs and managed to get from underneath his machine when struck, the impact driving it fully a length ahead.

A physician was called from Chelsea to give medical aid, but the injuries were such that the young men were taken to the University hospital.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

POINT-DE-VUE PESSIMISTIC.

In a generalization court recently the black was filled out thus: "Name?—Abraham Cherkowsky, Born?—Yes. Business?—Rotten!"

The coal and rail strikes have brought feelings of apprehension to many citizens and business men of the country. Chilsea has and is feeling the effects and it may become more serious than it is.

But why borrow trouble? If we feel apprehensive why spread that feeling among our fellow citizens? Why not be optimistic instead of pessimistic—look on the bright side instead of the dark? "Gloomy Gus" has lost his popularity and we should strive to imitate him.

There is an end to all disturbances such as we are passing through. We have passed safely through greater difficulties and will come out right side-up now.

It is difficult to keep cheerful in adversity, but that is exactly the time when we should put on a cheerful front.

We must not only be optimistic of the future and be cheerful ourselves, but we must spread our optimism and cheerfulness to others.

There are thousands of acres of untilled land left removed from the land companies that were made exorbitant rental prices for the crops we who want a democracy, industry on business activities. They are of little use to us here.

WHY NOT GET FACTS?

"Chilsea—located on the main line of the Michigan Central railroad, in a good farming community, home of the Lewis Spring and Axle Co., Hoover Steel Ball Plant No. 2, it is one of the finest and busiest villages in Michigan. All advantages of modern life are found in Chilsea, while it presents many advantages not found in larger cities. Two strong banks provide for commercial interests, and the enormous grain handling facilities for buyers provide first-class marketing facilities for farm products. Chilsea is a better place to live."

The Standard's attention was called by a Chilsea business man to the above, appearing in the premium book issued by the Washtenaw County Fair association. The gentleman felt a little peeved because in the article, which preceded a goodly number of advertisements from Chilsea merchants, two dead industries were exploited as an asset to Chilsea and nothing was said about the live industries—the big Michigan Portland Cement Co.'s plant that is responsible in making Chilsea the largest freight station on the Michigan Central between Detroit and Jackson, and disburse something like $20,000 monthly in pay roll, nor the Chilsea Screw Co., another important industry that gives employment to half a hundred men.

Of course this was pure carelessness on the part of the party in-charge of that part of the work of compiling the premium book. We are certain the fair officials wish to be fair to Chilsea and give her credit for what she has, especially when the good support Chilsea gives the fair is considered.

It would behoove the management to instruct next year's solicitor to revise all the captions descriptive of the various towns of the county. Stick to facts.

ROAD CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM

Three hundred Washtenaw and Lenawee residents crowded into the town hall at Clinton last Friday evening to hear discussed road construction. Frank Rogers, state highway commissioner, was present and outlined the position of state authorities.

The main discussion was the paving of Chicago turnpike from Saline west through Clinton and the famous Irish hills, the beauty spot of Southern Michigan. This road is the original trail from Detroit to Chicago, used by the early pioneers, before the advent of railroads. Along the route were taverns that became famous landmarks, some of which still remain.

No work on this road will be undertaken this year because the state is short of funds. The Washtenaw county section, including the "pestiferous" link between Saline and Clinton, will be started early next year, providing Washtenaw pays an indebtedness of $175,000, which it owes the state.

Nothing, we are told, will be done with Chilsea's South Main street pavement until the strike eases up and the department is sure of obtaining cement.

TRUE BOOSTING SPIRIT

Boosting your home town is a matter that every citizen should be interested in. When a stunt is pulled off for invigorating the trade conditions or community welfare, all the people should put their shoulders to the wheel and push together. That is true community enterprise. That's the kind of boosting The Standard believes in—not hap-hazard, half hearted methods.

One horse hitched to a wagon intended for a team makes a sorry showing in pulling a heavy load. But put on a good strong team and you will see things move smoothly and steadily. Team work, meaning all individuals and business enterprises, is the kind of work that makes for community prosperity.

Adrian board of education will put in oil burners in the heating plant that furnishes heat for the high school and central building. That's getting around the coal strike.

Petitions of candidates for political office are becoming scarce so far as circulation goes, as the time for filing same draws nigh.

THE PSYCHOLOGICAL MOMENT

A great deal depends upon the precise time or psychological moment.

This is absolutely true with advertising or business publicity.

If the merchant gets his publicity before the people of the community at the proper time he reaps many-fold benefit.

That is the reason why The Standard is published and mailed on Thursday. It reaches the people within trading distance at the right time for the heavy shopping period, which is unquestionably the week-end.

The Standard is read by more people than any other paper circulated in the community. This fact is established. The people like The Standard because it gives the news—a whole paper each week. They look forward to it and if The Standard fails to reach a home on time we hear of it.

The Standard is looking after the interests, both business and social, of the community. That's why we print a whole paper once a week rather than half a paper twice a week. It's the way the people of the community like it best.

POTATO GROWERS TO TOUR EIGHT COUNTIES

Extensive Production Methods To Be Discussed on Trip Aug. 17 to 24. M. A. C. Specialists in Charge.

East Lansing—Potato growers of the state will tour through northern counties from Aug. 17 to 24 in the interests of more efficient potato production in Michigan. Starting from Cadillac on the opening day, the caravan will cover eight counties in the heart of the state's biggest potato section winding up at Gaylord in Otsego county, a week later.

The purpose of this tour, says J. W. Weston, extension specialist at the M. A. C., is to stimulate production of tubers of better quality and to arouse interest in more efficient methods generally. Spray and fertilizer demonstrations, variety tests, seed plots, fields of certified stock, and just plain "tater patches" will be included in the tour itinerary.

Talks on potato problems will be made at all stops on the tour by specialists from the college, leading potato growers, and others. The trip will be made by automobile, many of the tourists camping at state parks, which are located at all but one of the scheduled night stops.

Local arrangements are being handled by the agricultural agents in each section. Everyone in the state who is interested in Michigan's potato crop is invited to join the tour at any point and stay as long as possible according to the committee in charge of arrangements.

THE BREEDING OF PURE-BRED SWINE

Encouraged by County Fairs Through The Offering of Premiums

To stimulate the breeding of pure bred swine, premiums totaling $1,740,000 are to be awarded to winners by the Jackson county fair, Jackson, Sept. 11 to 16.

The leading breeds of swine will be shown at the fair. Breeds for which premiums have been set aside include Poland, China, Berkshire, Chester White, Duroc, Hampshire, Yorkshire and Tamworth. Several hundred animals are expected to be exhibited, according to Supt. Wm. Livingston of the swine department.

Breeders who are planning on exhibiting, assert there is no other animal which can produce meat economically or quickly than the hog. They say that hog raising is less capital, less labor, and less equipment, than the raising of other kind of stock, with the exception of sheep and poultry.

A hog will multiply five or six times as fast as other meat animals. A sow will produce two litters of pigs in a year, or three litters in two years each. The hog has no rival as a consumer of garbage, damaged grains, and other unmarketable foods that generally go to waste. They thrive on a large crop and pasture.

A hog has a bigger percentage of marketable meat than any other animal, from eighty to eighty-five per cent of the animal being eatable. A beef animal, when slaughtered, produces an edible carcass which weighs from sixty to sixty-five per cent of the original weight. A sheep dresses out from fifty-five to sixty per cent.

Breeders who are intending to exhibit at the fair are being urged to send in their entries at once, so fair officials can arrange for extra accommodations, should it be necessary to do so.

Entries will close on September 9.

WEATHER BUREAU GIVES AID IN STUDY COURSE FOR PILOTS

Instruction embracing a course in weather forecasting based on publication of the Weather Bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture and intended to increase the efficiency of pilots and improve the navigation of power boats generally, recently been prepared by the United States Power Squadron, a national association of power-boat owners, which was organized in 1915. This organization requires that applicants for membership shall pass an oral examination in piloting and chart work and encourage its members to study weather forecasting. A pamphlet for which the Weather Bureau furnishes the authority, covering certain aspects of meteorology and forecasting, is issued to each member and talks on weather forecasting are given from time to time to classes in different cities. Instruction to advanced classes in navigation includes questions on the laws of storms and general weather forecasting. The aim of the association is to raise the standard of skill in handling and navigating power boats to co-operate with the government in enforcing regulations relating to navigation, and to stimulate interest in activities tending to build up our merchant marine and navy.

HIKING DOWN THE LONG BROWN PATH

Vacationists With Shelter Tents and Tin Cow Learning to Walk All Over Again.

Oh! It's not the pack that you carry on your back. Nor the rise on your shoulder. Nor the two inch crust of khaki-colored dust. That makes you feel your limbs are growing older. And it's not the hike on the hard turnpike that drives away your smile. Nor the scorching sun that raises the blooming bilious. It's the long long mile.

—Pittsburgh Marching Song.

Stringing out from the suburban transit terminals of New York every Sunday and holiday goes the army of khaki-clad hikers. There may be an automobile for every twenty of the country's population, but a host of city folks disprove the theory of a future leg-enfeebled citizenry and are learning to walk all over again.

To the more casual minded, the hike is just exercise, but to those who catch its real significance the hike means a great deal more. It is the cheapest form of recreation and therefore appeals to those living in crowded districts and unable to avail themselves of the more expensive amusements. And these people, be it noted, are just those the country is so anxious to have spread out and settled in the farming sections. The hike, indeed, has possibilities as a real starter for the "back to the farm" movement.

Doughboy and Boy Scout Lead Way—Just a brief survey of the rollicking groups which move off from the outlying terminals on holidays establishes a few general types. There is the ex-service man and his friends who will hear from him the story of more serious excursions on the muddy roads of France. He tightens a strap here and another there on the blanket roll adjustment or the "shelter half" in which the commissary is packed for the mid-day feast by the roadside. Expert directions come from him on the method of slinging the pack so it will not feel so heavy or interfere with the free body movement. He will pass along the information, gained in his army days, of how that same pack was evolved after numerous experiments to find the easiest way of carrying the heaviest load. With results he now compliments, but which he characterized when a doughboy as a "blankety blank total failure."

Then there are the boy scout parties, adept at everything pertaining to "shanks mare" traveling and woodcraft. The ex-service man and the boy scout are pioneers in the hiking game. Listen to one of them right off the train and making ready for a twelve mile jaunt: "Get that can-teen over the side, Jimmie, and it won't keep bouncing off your leg every step. Is it filled? Well, then, we drink. How about the cats? Let's check 'em off. You got the spuds, Bill; the bacon Jimmie. Who has the coffee and the Borden tin cow?"

"Right here," announces a freckled comrade of the road, patting his knapsack. "Snatched the mocha and the can of milk when Sis wasn't looking."

"Well, then, let's go!" snaps the commander of the expedition. This party is traveling light for real distance. Another must expect to make a shorter hitch or else be counting greatly on its power of endurance. Perhaps the camp is not far off because the group is equipped for an over-night stay with heavy blankets, rolls, hat-box, lanterns, canvas waterpails, rubber ponchos, bottles, pots, new fangled firestand, etc., etc. The blankets are laid out for a better packing of the bags and cans of food. When the party commences to lead up the members brittle all over with camp tools and equipment.

Back to the Farm—The veteran from the crowded city tenements has found a new territory to roam and one almost unknown to his associates. He is introducing them to this newly discovered land and teaching them how to be independent of any transportation but their own good legs and of any subsistence but what they can carry and prepare. "Walk and cook your own," is his motto.

Who will say the heaven thus forming in the city crowds will not bear fruit in a keener appreciation of country delights, especially as these are added to by increased comforts on the farm. With his radio hitched up, the farmer listens in on the best entertainment the country has to offer. Modern home devices wipe out many hardships formerly imposed upon isolated dwellers. There is, in short, a rapid cutting down of the differential between farm and city life.

In the meantime, knowledge must precede a true appreciation of what the country holds, and this is what the hike supplies. There is more appeal in an apple tree in blossom than in reams of printed matter put out to induce the citizen of the city to change his abode to the country. The hikers constitute a growing army, equipped with bacon, spuds, coffee and tin cow for merely a day's outing but nevertheless seeing sights that make them yearn to be among them all the time. It is not too much to assume that the army may one day recruit the open places.

Fair to Aid State Poultry Raisers, G. W. Dickinson Says

Secretary-Manager Plans Wider Range of Interest For This Department.

The surprising thing about poultry raising, from the viewpoint of George W. Dickinson, secretary and manager of the Michigan State Fair, is that farmers don't exercise as much care about producing their poultry as do the fanciers in the city or small towns.

In framing the plans for the poultry exhibition at the Michigan State Fair, Detroit, this year, September 10, Mr. Dickinson has endeavored not to neglect even the most minute detail. He predicts this department will be one of the most attractive at the exposition.

"Poultry provide meat and food at a very low cost, and that is why the farmer and every other person interested in the production of poultry should be careful in respect to management," says Mr. Dickinson. "We are going to demonstrate to this interested group how they can improve their poultry by a fine educational exhibition this year."

"One of these methods we will pursue in demonstrating this, is the egg laying contest. This will permit the lay to show the type which will lay the most eggs in a number of weeks."

which scarcely ever set. The exhibition also will show how a flock of hens will pay for their keeping. We are going to make a sort of poultry clearing house out of the fair."

Another interest which will receive much attention in the fair will be rabbits. The number devoting their time now to the raising of rabbits is remarkable and there is a constant increase noticeable.

Robert Wallace of Saginaw, a member of the board of managers, has been placed in charge of the machinery and implements which, this year, promise many attractions. His assistant will be George A. Walker of Detroit, an experienced machinery man.

"In the machinery and implements department, the farmer will have the opportunity of becoming familiar with the most modern machinery for the farm," Mr. Dickinson promises, "and he will receive some first hand information on how to operate and costs. This will guide him in his purchasing."

All of the latest electrical appliances of interest to the housewife will be included in the merchandise and manufacturing display superintended by I. Roy Waterbury of Detroit. All of the exhibitions will be in actual operation and will demonstrate how electricity has been employed to save the housewife time and labor.

Edward M. Hines of Detroit, will head the State Fair automobile show, a promising event to visitors from the state who have missed the other prominent automotive displays of the year. In the same building, will be housed radio, school and government exhibits of wide interest.

SEEDSMEN MAY STUDY IN GOVERNMENT LABORATORIES—Persons interested in learning the approved methods of testing commercial seeds are offered the facilities of the United States Department of Agriculture in Washington, without charge. Although the department does not pretend to conduct a seed school with outlined courses and classes, it has for a number of years permitted a few people to study in the government seed testing laboratories, and in July and August an expert in seed testing devotes his time to helping them.

Those who have taken advantage of the opportunity in past years have been in many instances the sons of seedmen or young men and women sent out by seed companies to learn the best methods that have been developed. The number taking up the work usually ranges from 5 to 15, and that for the department has been able to care for all applicants. These students become familiar with crop seeds, seed adulterants, weed seeds, and other foreign materials frequently found in commercial seeds. They are shown also how to make detailed analyses for purity and how to test seeds for germination. If a seedman has a special problem arising out of the peculiarities of his business, he is given every possible aid in solving it. The department welcomes the opportunity to give those who know the commercial side of the seed business additional knowledge of its technical aspects. It is an effective way to improve the quality of seeds sold to improve the quality of seeds sold to prove yields.

What Is It Worth to Change a Tire?

On the road changing a tire is not an especially pleasant task. The dust or mud, the grease and grime, the tedious delay—all are things we like to avoid. But the time to think about these things is when you buy the tire—not after the blow-out occurs. Sometimes blow-outs occur much more easily than others. Outward appearance counts for little. It is the material in the tire and the construction of it that determines its strength. Goodyear recognizes these facts and all Goodyear Tires are made of long staple cotton. Take the 30 x 3 1/4 Cross Rib Clincher Tire here illustrated, for example. It is made of Egyptian and Arizona cotton, the fibres of which average 1 1/4 inches long. Many 30 x 3 1/4 clincher tires are made of short staple cotton from 1/4 inch to 1 1/4 inches long. This means less strength and greater danger of blow-outs—more tire troubles. Yet this high grade guaranteed Goodyear Tire costs only $10.95. You can buy some tires for even less than this but none with the fine materials and construction of this one. Can you afford to take a chance on more frequent tire troubles for the sake of the slightly lower price of cheaper tires?

MRS. ABBEY PROUD OF HER BIG GAIN

Weight increased 35 Pounds and Nine Years' Trouble Ended.

"I hardly see how I endured such awful suffering, and if it hadn't been for Tanlac I don't believe I would be here today," said Mrs. Mollie Abbey, of Jennings Lodge, Ore.

"For nine years everything I ate caused gas to form so that it almost drove me distracted. I didn't dare eat any fruit and for four years if I even drank a glass of cold water I would suffer dreadfully. No one who didn't see me could imagine the awful condition I was in."

"But Tanlac changed all this and now I'm simply feeling fine. My appetite is splendid. I eat anything I want, have actually gained thirty-nine pounds and have so much strength and energy I easily do all my household work. Tanlac is a wonderful medicine."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.—Advertisement.

Neatly Put.
A famous Russian dancer in this country, who is himself a good musician, was once a guest at a reception, where, without winning he listened to a pianoforte performance, more vigorous than skillful, on the part of the daughter of the house.

"And how do you like the young lady's playing?" some one asked the dancer.

"Ah, madam," replied he, very tactfully, "I think the young lady has a very firm tread."—Exchange.

THE BIG MUSKEG

By VICTOR ROUSSEAU

Copyright by
STEWART KIDD COMPANY

"I'LL GO WITH YOU."

SYNOPSIS.—Looking over Big Muskeg, a seemingly impassable swamp in the path of the Mississippi railroad, Joe Bostock, builder of the line, and Wilton Carruthers, chief of engineers, are considering the difficulties. A rifle shot instantly kills Bostock and breaks Carruthers' arm. Carruthers tries to carry the body to a post of the Hudson's Bay company, where McDonald is the factor. McDonald's daughter, Molly, sees Carruthers struggling in the muskeg and drags him from the swamp, with his burden. Unaccountably, her father objects to her saving Carruthers. Weakened by his wound and exertions, Carruthers is disturbed by the appearance of Tom Bowyer, Bostock's business rival and personal enemy. Bowyer strikes him. Carruthers declares his love for Molly. She promises to be his wife. Carruthers has to reach the town of Clayton to attend a meeting at which Bostock's enemies plan to wrest control of the Mississippi from him. Molly determines to go with him.

"When Joe's death came home to me I thought things over in there, and it seemed to me that the only thing possible for me would be to go before the shareholders and tell them frankly what lay behind the enterprise—I mean the clay lands and their development."

"Well, Molly, I've changed my mind. I won't tell them. I'll keep control for Kitty. And I'll advise the shareholders to proceed with the route we've planned. I'll take the responsibility. Big Muskeg can be crossed. It shall be."

"And I'll do more than that, Molly. I'll get the shareholders' authorization before they know Joe's death. If they knew that, it'd be all up with the line. Bowyer doesn't know. Nobody knows except ourselves."

"I've told you all this, Molly, because you have the right to know. And just as soon as we've won I shall be in a position to ask you to be my wife. Will you, dear?"

Molly turned and put her hands on his shoulders.

"Yes, Will," she answered. "And I hope with all my heart that you succeed in carrying out Joe's plans. And I believe you will. And I believe you will find a way to cross Big Muskeg. I see now that I must let you go, though I can't bear to. Will. But now I must say something. You know my father—"

"Doesn't altogether approve of me as a son-in-law, to put it mildly," answered Wilton. "I can't make out the reason for his dislike of me. The"

"And maybe he'll die if you don't stay with him when you get to Clayton, eh, lass?" rasped out the factor in a withering scorn.

That scorn nerved her; to his weakness she had almost yielded. She went down and dressed herself for the journey. She helped Wilton on with a mackinaw, and put a caribou robe in the sleigh. Then, while the men were harnessing the dogs, struck by a sudden thought, she stooped and began to examine the tracks of the snowshoes about the edge of the portage. They ran confusedly in all directions, for the marks had been made by seven different pairs—those of Bowyer and Chambers and their Indian; those of Wilton and his two half-breeds; those of the deer-mute.

Of these Wilton's were blurred and almost indistinguishable, made by his dragging feet as he pulled him up from the swamp. But even had the vague purpose in Molly's mind been clear to her, there would have been no need to examine those. The rest were all similar in one respect—none had a broken string.

Wilton and Molly had arranged that he was to travel in the sleigh, to which a second had been attached, bearing Joe's body in a roughly made coffin constructed by the men. The dogs were harnessed, and they started.

It was a little more than fifty miles to Clayton. Travelling along the cleared road, the distance could be covered easily in two days. The dogs ran well, the weather was clear and fine, and Wilton felt well enough to walk a good deal. Their dinner was almost like a picnic. By evening the railroad had come into sight in the distance, the empty camp, the long sheds with the miscellany of supplies, the locomotive shops, and the great ballast pits beside the line.

As the dogs climbed the last hill there came yelping from the cleared way behind them. Looking back, they perceived a sled approaching. Two men walked beside it, and the dogs, sighting Wilton's, yelped in challenge, which was taken up in an outburst of answering growls.

The sled drew in toward them, and the men resolved themselves into a sergeant and a constable of the mounted police. Wilton had stopped his dogs, but the newcomers did not halt, and went on, with curt greetings, toward the cache.

A little surprised at their abruptness, Wilton let the sled precede his sleigh. As the dogs were eager for their meal, he sent Papillon ahead with them, and death to make room for a new trouble. And he could not have refused Molly.

CHAPTER IV

"In the King's Name!"

But he worried over the situation all night, and in the morning Molly saw with alarm that he was in a feverish condition. He should never have left his bed, and the journey seemed impossible.

"I've got to go, Molly," was all Wilton could say.

"Then," she said with sudden decision, "I shall go with you. You can't travel alone. Your men may be faithful enough, but it is my right to go. And you'll never get to the meeting without some one to take care of you on the way. That's my condition. Promise me—or else I'll lock the store door, Will, and I've got a padlock that even you couldn't force."

Molly seemed to be animated by a resolution as feverish as his own. Jules Halfhead had not fulfilled his intention of absenting himself, probably on account of the storm, which had made the security of the store seem preferable to life in the forests. He was faithful to the factor, and had never deserted him in need. He could take care of him during the four or five days of her absence.

Wilton was forced to yield.

"But you must make sure that Jules will stay," he said.

"He'll understand. He'll stay," answered the girl. "He's never run away when I was gone to Moose Lake or Winnipeg."

Molly went up to the factor's room with the faint hope of reaching some understanding of plumbing her father's feeling against Wilton and overcoming it.

"Mr. Carruthers is getting ready to go," she said. "He is very ill. He is too weak to travel alone, but he must take Joe Bostock's body back to Clayton."

"Oh, ay!" said the factor, sneering. "He needs care and attention during the journey. So I am going with him."

The factor sat up in bed, transcribing her with a look of fury. "You, lass—you will go with Wilton Carruthers to Clayton!" he cried. "Ye winna come home, then! Mark me, now, I've done with you for ay! Molly, lass, ye winna go!" he pleaded, with a sudden change of tone. "Think of your good name in Clayton! I haven't feared ye to have ye desert me in my old age and sickness, Molly."

She turned quickly away to keep her tears from falling. "Jules can take care of you for a few days, father," she said. "It's not as if you were helpless. And his life is at stake."

"And maybe he'll die if you don't stay with him when ye get to Clayton, eh, lass?" rasped out the factor in a withering scorn.

That scorn nerved her; to his weakness she had almost yielded. She went down and dressed herself for the journey. She helped Wilton on with a mackinaw, and put a caribou robe in the sleigh. Then, while the men were harnessing the dogs, struck by a sudden thought, she stooped and began to examine the tracks of the snowshoes about the edge of the portage. They ran confusedly in all directions, for the marks had been made by seven different pairs—those of Bowyer and Chambers and their Indian; those of Wilton and his two half-breeds; those of the deer-mute.

Of these Wilton's were blurred and almost indistinguishable, made by his dragging feet as he pulled him up from the swamp. But even had the vague purpose in Molly's mind been clear to her, there would have been no need to examine those. The rest were all similar in one respect—none had a broken string.

Wilton and Molly had arranged that he was to travel in the sleigh, to which a second had been attached, bearing Joe's body in a roughly made coffin constructed by the men. The dogs were harnessed, and they started.

It was a little more than fifty miles to Clayton. Travelling along the cleared road, the distance could be covered easily in two days. The dogs ran well, the weather was clear and fine, and Wilton felt well enough to walk a good deal. Their dinner was almost like a picnic. By evening the railroad had come into sight in the distance, the empty camp, the long sheds with the miscellany of supplies, the locomotive shops, and the great ballast pits beside the line.

As the dogs climbed the last hill there came yelping from the cleared way behind them. Looking back, they perceived a sled approaching. Two men walked beside it, and the dogs, sighting Wilton's, yelped in challenge, which was taken up in an outburst of answering growls.

The sled drew in toward them, and the men resolved themselves into a sergeant and a constable of the mounted police. Wilton had stopped his dogs, but the newcomers did not halt, and went on, with curt greetings, toward the cache.

A little surprised at their abruptness, Wilton let the sled precede his sleigh. As the dogs were eager for their meal, he sent Papillon ahead with them, and followed more leisurely with Molly. They arrived at the cache a few minutes after the half-breeds, to find the two policemen waiting for them, while the two men were unharnessing the dogs. Andersen, the old Swedish caretaker, was standing beside Joe's coffin with a stunned look on his face. The policemen were not of prepossessing appearance. The elder man, the sergeant, was about forty years of age. He had fair hair, drooping mustache, a slight cast in one eye, and an expression of sullen insolence. His companion, a short, stocky young fellow, looked hardly less surly and evidently ill at ease.

"Evening, Mr. Carruthers," said the sergeant brusquely. "I'm sergeant Peters, and this is Constable Myers. That's Joe Bostock's body you're bringing in, I guess."

Wilton was staggered. "Yes, it's Joe," he said, gulping. "How did you get the news?"

The policemen exchanged glances. Peters smiled scornfully under his long mustache. "It's known, all right."

The Two Policemen Came In.

It's our job to know them things," he answered. "I'm taking charge of it—to bring it in for the inquest."

"But you are not from Clayton," said Wilton, who, of course, knew all the members of the small force of police that was stationed there.

"We're from the Pas," answered the sergeant shortly.

From the Pas! That explained how the sled had come along the road behind him. Bowyer must have discovered the fact of Joe's death in some manner, and had probably spread the news. Wilton surmised that Jules Halfhead had somehow managed to indicate the fact to him.

The constable solved his problem. "We was on patrol," he vouchsafed. "And we met parties who told us about Joe Bostock having met with an accident, and that you was bringing him in."

"That'll be all!" snapped the sergeant, looking angrily at Myers, who subsided promptly. "I guess this young woman is Molly McDonald!" he continued.

"This lady is Miss McDonald," said Wilton angrily, "and you'll keep a civil tongue in your head, sergeant."

Peters looked him up and down insolently, and for a moment or two the men faced each other in an aggressive attitude. Then the sergeant, sneering, swung on his heel. Wilton did not know what to make of his attitude, for the police were always friendly.

Andersen's room was placed at Molly's disposal, and after Wilton had seen to her comfort he went outside the shack.

The dogs were yelping and snarling over their fish from the cache. Papillon had just finished feeding them, and Wilton thought Peters had been speaking to him. Probably the sergeant was trying to obtain information.

The Swede came up to Wilton, holding a pan of sizzling brown potatoes. "I can't believe it, Mr. Carruthers," he said. "Only last week he passed through here with you. Gosh, he was a fine man, Joe was! How did it happen? And you're hurt yourself, sir," he continued, glancing at Wilton's arm.

"Joe was shot at my side in the woods. The same bullet hit me. I don't know who fired the shot. But I'm going to know," said Wilton grimly.

"My God, it's all up with the line yet!" muttered the old man, withdrawing to his fire.

Wilton looked at Molly, who had come out of the bedroom and was standing near him. Andersen's exclamation had gaged the whole situation. Wilton felt physically nauseated by the heat in the shack, the unpleasantness of the situation, and a recurrence of pain in his wound.

He went over to Andersen. "Do you happen to know either of those fellows?" he asked.

"I never saw them before, sir," said the old man. "I guess they ain't from these parts, from the looks and the ways of 'em."

"There's a new lot come up from Yorkton lately. Maybe they shifted these to the Pas when they sent some of the Pas men on to Clayton," Wilton reflected. He turned to Molly. "Anyway, we'll start bright and early," he said. "I suppose we'll have to have those fellows' company as far as Clayton. But I wonder—" He paused. "I wonder whether Joe would forgive me for leaving him in the hands of strangers for a while, if it were for Kitty?" he mused.

The two policemen came in, looking surly and uncommunicative as ever. After a hurried meal, eaten almost in silence, Molly said good-night to Wilton and went into the caretaker's room. As the door closed behind her Wilton saw the two men look after her. The constable whispered something to the sergeant, and both chuckled.

Wilton's blood was boiling, but he controlled himself. This was for Kitty, and his debt to Joe.

The policemen prepared to lie down. Andersen was already snoring upon the floor. The half-breeds, however, had not come in, and Wilton, going to the stables, found them curled up among the huskies.

"You fellows had better come into the shack," he said, "unless you want to freeze."

Papillon refused. "Them d—n dogs will fight each other," he said, "if we don't stay here."

"Just as you like," said Wilton.

It was not unusual for rival teams of huskies to attack each other, but such antipathy generally developed from the first, and the dogs seemed contented enough. He went back to the shack and lay down, turning over in his mind what he was projecting, but he was utterly worn out, and fell asleep before he was aware of it.

When he opened his eyes it was already dawn. The policemen were dressed and standing outside the shack, conversing in low tones. Andersen was peeling potatoes for breakfast. Wilton heard Molly moving within the room, and his doubts fell from him. He had been upset by the surliness of the two men; he had had vague suspicions not justified in fact. He determined to put his proposal to them.

He walked over to the sergeant, who was just re-entering the shack with his companion.

"I suppose you fellows are thinking of starting at once, after breakfast," he suggested.

The sergeant looked him up and down. "That's about the size of it," he growled. "Got any objection?"

Wilton resolutely ignored the affront.

"I've got important business in Clayton, affecting Mr. Bostock's interests," he said. "It is very important that his death should not be known there until midday tomorrow."

The constable, who was leaning against the door-post, chewing the end of a twig, started slightly. Peters fixed Wilton with his crooked stare.

"Rather a nifty thing to propose, Mr. Carruthers!" he sneered.

"Maybe, but it's a business matter affecting Mr. Bostock's wife," said Wilton, loathing himself for making the request, but nerving himself to do so by the thought of Kitty. "If the news of his death reaches Clayton before the time I've mentioned, some people who are antagonistic to Mr. Bostock's interests will jump at the chance to turn it to account. It will mean a heavy loss to Mrs. Bostock. You've come a long way, and you could quite reasonably wait till afternoon on account of the dogs. That will bring you in before noon tomorrow. And—if you can see your way to it, you two won't be the losers."

The sergeant eyed him more insolently than ever. "So that's the program, is it?" he answered. "Well, keep your mind easy. The news won't be known in Clayton tonight, nor tomorrow neither. We ain't going to Clayton."

"You're not, eh? Then where the devil are you going?" cried Wilton, nettled almost beyond endurance at the man's demeanor.

"We're taking Joe Bostock's body back to the Pas," retorted the sergeant. "That's what we come here for."

"The Pas? This isn't in the Pas jurisdiction!"

"It ain't, eh? Perhaps it's in yours, then?"

"See here," cried Wilton in exasperation, "Clayton has its own police detachment, as you know perfectly well. Your route doesn't lie in this direction. Joe Bostock's home's there. He's going to be buried there. And his body isn't going to be dragged here and there about the country by a couple of fool policemen. I'll make things pretty warm for you if you try any game like that."

"Keep your hands up, both of you. Give me the revolver, Molly!"

HER AILMENTS ALL GONE NOW

Mrs. Sherman Helped Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lake, Michigan.—"About one year I suffered with irregularities and a nervous and at times obliged to stay in bed. I doctored our family physician and he finally gave up. I could not understand my case, so I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After I had taken the bottle I could tell that I was getting better. I took several more bottles of the Vegetable Compound and I am entirely cured of my ailment. You may publish this letter if you wish."—Mrs. MARY SHERMAN, Route Lake, Mich.

There is one fact women should consider and that is this. Women suffer from irregularities and various forms of weakness. They try this and that doctor, well as different medicines. Finally they take Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound and Mrs. Sherman's experience is another case showing the merit of well-known medicine.

If your family physician fails to help you and the same old troubles persist, why isn't it reasonable to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

Her Curiosity.
The audience held its breath, with amazement as the acrobat swung high above the rostrum, held only by a frail cord looped around one foot.

Somewhere among the spectators a little girl arose from her seat. "Mamma," she shouted, breaking the silence, "can you do that?"

The lady tried to quiet her, but the child persisted in demanding whether or not her mother had ever climbed ropes or done anything of this sort. At last, embarrassed by the attention which the child was attracting, the mother jerked the child into the seat, warning, "You just wait until I get home!"

"Oh!" exclaimed the little disturber, "then you're gonna try it?"—Judge.

His Bluff Called.
Young Lawyer—"I haven't lost a case yet." Rival—"Oh, you'll get a case-some day."

Fall Plowing Kills Crop Enemies

Luther Burbank, the well known plant wizard, who is giving his life to the study of plant life for the benefit of humanity, is an authority that cannot be questioned. Every agriculturist has heard or read of his wonderful discoveries—vineless potatoes, seedless oranges, spineless cactus, and hundreds of other nature wonders. Mr. Burbank has demonstrated that fall plowing will destroy the breed and eggs of insects that threaten farmers' crops. His study of plant life plagues from pests have been practically eliminated. Take his advice and plow as your soil as possible in the fall.
