GUY DISC VALVE MOTOR CO. READY

To Begin Operations When Clear Title of Factory Property Is Turned Over to Them.

Negotiations in the matter of the Guy Disc Valve Motor Company located in Chelsea are still pending, and, according to reports, the company is ready to begin operations here as soon as a clear title of the factory property is turned over to them.

The meeting last Thursday evening of the Chelsea Board of Commerce in firemen's hall was attended by nearly every member of the organization.

Howard Holmes, trustee of the funds that residents of Chelsea had raised, to the amount of $25,000, made a report of the disposition made of them and also read the statement of Fred H. Lewis of what he had paid out—$14,000 to clear up the liens and judgments that were standing against the factory property. The statement showed that there were $11,000 in notes in the hands of Mr. Lewis that had not been used. Both of the local banks had taken $7,000 each of the $25,000 that had been raised.

Messrs. Hanover, Matthews and Heaverich, officials of the Guy Disc Valve Motor Co., who have been negotiating with Mr. Lewis for the factory, were here and stated that they were ready and willing to take over the property and begin operations as soon as the property could be turned over to them with a clear title.

After considerable discussion a committee consisting of Trustees Howard S. Holmes, H. H. Fenn, Jacob Hummel and John W. Schenk were appointed to hold a conference with Mr. Lewis and the representatives of the Guy Disc Valve Motor Co. The committee met with the interested parties in the factory proposition and held a conference Monday evening, but were unable to reach a definite agreement when they adjourned at 12 o'clock.

A report of the conference will probably be made at the meeting of the Board of Commerce to be held at the firemen's hall this evening.

MANCHESTER GROCER SHOT BY FARMER

Long Time Dispute Over Line Fence Cause of Tragedy.

Joseph E. Seckinger, a grocer of Manchester, was shot and seriously wounded about 10 o'clock Tuesday forenoon, when it is alleged that William Stetman, a neighbor on an adjoining farm, carried out threats to attack Seckinger the next time he visited the farm.

Seckinger and Stetman own adjoining farms two miles east of Manchester, and have had a long standing dispute over the line fence between the two farms, and it is reported that Stetman had warned Seckinger that he would shoot him the next time he visited the farm. On his way to the farm Mr. Seckinger saw his neighbor lying in ambush awaiting him and said that he was armed and evidently intended to carry out his threat. When Seckinger turned to run away it is reported that Stet-man fired a number of times. Stetman is a bachelor about 45 years of age. He was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Clarence Lindbert and taken to the county jail in Ann Arbor Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Seckinger was taken to Mercy hospital in Jackson Tuesday afternoon where he will receive treatment for gunshot wounds.

Mr. Seckinger resided in Chelsea for a few years and was employed as clerk in one of the stores here. Mrs. Seckinger is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Weber of Sylvan.

KILLED IN AUTO RACES AT JACKSON

Earl P. Burman, Detroit, Loses Life In Sunday Motor Races

Hurled into the air 20 feet when his machine struck another racer, Earl P. Burman, aged 23, of Detroit, was fatally injured in the auto races at Jackson Sunday afternoon. Burman was going at 65 miles an hour when he crashed into the machine piloted by Rudolph Huebner on the southwest turn of the track at the Jackson fair grounds.

The force of the collision was so terrific that Burman's car was thrown over 12 feet in the air and turned two complete loops before it fell to the ground a twisted, shapeless mass of wreckage. Burman was thrown from the car when it made the first loop in the air and the momentum hurled him 20 feet in the air, his body making two complete turns.

The injured man was taken to the W. A. Foote Memorial hospital where he died about 7 o'clock. An autopsy performed Sunday night disclosed the fact that death was due to shock, no bones being broken and no organic trouble found.

Huebner, driver of the other car in the collision escaped fatal injury.

$9,123.10 PRIMARY MONEY FOR SYLVAN

Sylvan will receive from the primary school fund this year $9,123.10. There were according to the school reports filed with the state department of public instruction in September 1921, 643 pupils of school age in the township.

This is the largest apportionment of primary school money the township has ever received and the rate per scholar is $11.70.

The following is the number of pupils in each district and the amount that they will receive:

District No. 2, pupils 15, ... $175.50
District No. 3, fr. pupils 519 $6,072.30
District No. 4, pupils 48 ... $561.60
District No. 5 fr. pupils 8 ... $93.60
District No. 6, fr. pupils 18, ... $210.60
District No. 7, pupils 15 ... $175.50
District No. 10, pupils 20 ... $234.00

The money has not yet been received by Township Treasurer Theo. Wedemeyer, but it will probably be in his hands by September 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Keusch and children were guests Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Emmer of Brooklyn.

Why Chelsea Should Buy Electric Current

The municipal plant is overloaded and needs enlarging at a considerable outlay of money. The plant has been running at a loss and the coal situation suggests more loss for some time to come. The Consumers Power Company secure their current from large dams, hence they can manufacture electricity cheaper than can be done with coal consuming boilers.

The city of Mason was in a similar position as is Chelsea. Following is a letter from S. L. Marshall, editor of the Ingham County News, which tells the experience of Mason. the change and the result:

Mason, Mich., July 17, 1922.

Mr. Ford Axtell, Sec'y Board of Commerce, Chelsea, Michigan.

Dear Axtell:—

I came to Mason five years ago, just after the Consumers Power Co. acquired the local plant. Hence, I am not in a position to tell you from actual experience how the service of the Consumers compares with that which Mason had prior to that time. From what I have gleaned from local business men, the old Mason plant had become depleted and worn out. The city faced the expenditure of many thousand dollars to rebuild it, or sell to the Consumers. There was strong opposition to this from certain influential men. These men from time to time were appointed to the Board of Public Works and became more familiar with conditions at the municipal plant, they became converts to the Consumers idea. They were good, hard-headed business men and they were looking at the "dollar and cents" side of the matter. The ultimate result was that an election was held in the spring of 1917 and the Consumers Co. was given a franchise. They paid the city $15,000 for the old plant and wrecked it.

Frankly, I believe that the Consumers can give as good service as can any municipal plant and at a considerable saving over a period of years. In my opinion, the question you should decide is whether or not your present plant can be operated longer economically. If not, I presume your problems are much the same as those of several small cities I recall, all of which are discarding the municipal plant as an expensive plaything for local mechanics and officials.

I think I can safely say that the majority of large users of electricity in Mason are very well satisfied with the service now being given by the Consumers Power Co.

Truly Yours,

STATE VALUATION TO BE RAISED

Tax Commission Recommends Boosting Valuation Nearly One and a Half Billion Dollars.

In a report of the state tax commission to the state board of equalization made public Friday, it is recommended that the taxes for the coming year be equalized on a total value of property in the state of $6,497,187,000 as against the figure of $5,000,000,000 adopted for equalization purposes by the state board of equalization a year ago.

The recommendation of the state tax commission is also $886,565,709 more than the assessed valuation of the state and nearly $1,000,000,000 more than the figures used by the county boards of supervisors in equalizing their county and state taxes this year.

Copies of the report have been mailed to all counties in the state and the board of equalization will meet August 21, at which time counties desiring to appeal from the proposed figures will have an opportunity to do so.

Washtenaw county raised $10,000,000 in the report, new figures being $117,046,000, would pay .0180 per cent of the total tax as against .0177 per cent at present. The figures as recommended by the commission are about $12,000,000 greater than the figures used in equalization by the board of supervisors.

In the chart issued by the state tax commission Washtenaw is credited with a population of 49,520, with acreage according to government survey of 454,047.24. The valuation of property in the county was valued at $83,795,410 and assessed accordingly in 1922.

The figures for valuation as equalized by the board of supervisors in 1922 were the same, $83,795,410. The figures for valuation as equalized by the state board of equalization for 1921 were $88,307,000. The valuation recommended by the state board of tax commissioners in 1922 is $117,046,000.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

COAL STRIKE ENDED

The coal strike is settled and mines in six states of the Union resumed operations yesterday. The approval of an agreement between operators and miners at the conference in Cleveland Tuesday afternoon brought a feeling of relief that is felt nation wide. However, this will not entirely relieve the coal situation, for the coal has to be mined and transported, and if the rail strike continues for any length of time, there will be a fuel shortage this winter that will prove a hardship to many a family. The settlement of the coal strike, however, shoots a ray of light through the dark horizon of the strike-infested country and brings hope that the rail strike may be called off in time to benefit the situation.

RAIL STRIKE SITUATION

The opening of the seventh week of the rail shop workers' strike shows a spread in the far west that means a serious loss to fruit growers. Violence in the form of bomb throwing and incendiary fires also marked the opening hours of the week.

Northern and Central California were without fast freight service, meaning an estimated loss of a million dollars a day to fruit growers and indications pointed to the abandonment of passenger routes.

At Granton Junction, N. J., lives of passengers were endangered and ten persons injured when a train of week-end excursionists was bombed. Other bomb outrages were also reported, and at Ash Grove, Mo., the St. Louis & San Francisco 400 foot bridge over the Sac river was dynamited.

The settlement of the strike it is said lay in the hands of the union organizations who still have before them the proposal of President Harding that the Railroad Labor Board be permitted to settle the question of seniority, the chief remaining bone of contention.

THE LITTLE BLACK HEN.

Said the little red rooster, "Gosh all hemlock! Things are tough, Seems that worms are getting scarcer, and I cannot get enough. What's become of all those fat ones is a mystery to me; There were thousands thru that rainy spell—but now where can they be?"

The old black hen that heard him didn't grumble or complain, She had gone thru lots of dry spells, she had lived thru floods of rain, So she flew up on the grindstone, and she gave her claws a whet, As she said, "I've never seen the time there weren't worms to get."

She picked a new and undug spot; the earth was hard and firm, The little rooster jeered, "New ground; That's no place for a worm." The old black hen just spread her feet, she dug both fast and free, "I must go to the worms," she said; "the worms won't come to me"

The rooster vainly spent his day, thru habit by the ways, Where fat worms had passed in squads back in the rainy days, When nightfall found him supperless, he growled in accents rough, I'm hungry as a fowl can be. Conditions sure are tough."

his neighbor that follows the example of the little black hen and digs after knowledge? Will he be equipped to meet sharp competition in gaining a livelihood?

Follow the example of the little black hen. When you want something want it bad enough to dig for it.

Everything listens mightily quiet in the electric lighting proposition in Chelsea. Must be the people of Chelsea have either made up their minds how to vote at the election August 29th or they are doing some quiet thinking.

Vacation time will soon be succeeded by a general revival of business activities in town. In a few weeks schools will open and churches will resume their more active work after the summer months.

Fair time is here. Almost everybody attends the county and state fairs which have become institutions of practical learning. Also a place where people of a neighborhood rub elbows.

Viscount Northcliffe, publisher of the London Times, England's greatest newspaper, is dead. Lord Northcliffe visited this country in July, 1921.

The annual reunion of the McDonough family was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Kearney of Northfield, Sunday. There were one hundred present from various parts of the state and a picnic dinner was served at noon. At the business meeting Henry H. Fenn of Chelsea was elected president and Mrs. Rose Kearney, of Northfield was chosen as secretary. The reunion of the family will be held at Whitmore Lake next year.

Those from Chelsea who attended the reunion were Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Fenn, C. H. Fenn, Mrs. J. E. McKune, and Miss Agnes Weber. Misses Myrtle and Bernette Fenn and Frank Fenn of Detroit were also present.

SEITZ FAMILY REUNION.

The Seitz families held their annual reunion at Blind Lake, Wednesday, August 9, 74 members being present. Those attending were, Mrs. Charlie Hertler and family of Bridge-water; Mrs. May Guenther and family; Mr. and Mrs. Adam Seitz and family of Lodi; Mr. and Mrs. Will Bell, Miss Minnie Burkhardt, Mrs. Margaret Graff of Detroit; Fred Halst, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Seitz and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Seitz, Mr. and Mrs. William Seitz and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Seitz and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Jones Seitz and family, Mrs. Emma Mast and sons, Mrs. Mary Kern, Miss Helen Wahr, David, Emanuel and Rose Seitz all of Ann Arbor; Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Wuertth of Ypsilanti; Mr. and Mrs. Will Eschelbach of Freedom; Mr. and Mrs. George Halst and daughter, Mrs. Philip Seitz, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Fred Seitz and family, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Seitz and family, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Seitz and daughter all of Lima; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Seitz and family of Chelsea; Mrs. Marie Smith of Lima, Ohio. It was voted to meet again next year at the same place, the second Wednesday in August. Martin Seitz was elected president and Jones Seitz secretary-treasurer. Seitz brothers of Ann Arbor sang several songs which were enjoyed by everyone. After a bounteous dinner the afternoon was spent playing ball, boating and visiting.

PREMIUMS FOR LEADING CATTLE BREEDS

To encourage the raising of better beef cattle in this territory, the Washtenaw County Fair, Ann Arbor, September 19th to 23d inclusive, is offering $750.00 in premiums for the leading breeds.

Many letters have been received by the management asking about the show. The breeds for which the prizes are offered include Shorthorns, Polled Durhams, Herefords, and Red Poll. More than sixty animals are expected to enter this year according to superintendent Jay A. Smith, in charge of the beef cattle department. Entries will close September 16th.

The fair management asserts that there are many reasons why the raising of more pure-bred cattle should be encouraged. Fair officials and exhibitors of cattle say that the use of a pure-bred sire on every farm will put stock farming on a firm basis in a short time.

Cattle-raising enables much of the crops to be fed on the farm and builds up the fertility of the soil by permitting the return of manure to the land. When crops are sold off the farm the fertility of the soil gradually decreases. Cattle-feeding makes the rotation system of farming necessary, which does away with the single-crop system, checks the growth of weeds, and helps to control plant diseases.

The breeding and feeding of cattle can be made a profitable business when right types and breeds are raised, according to all livestock authorities. Scrub cattle will not feed out well and do not get tip-top prices on the market. A pure-bred sire at the head of an ordinary herd of cows, will produce calves so superior that they can be fed and marketed at considerable profit.

Farmers who are thinking of buying a pure-bred bull are being urged by the fair to put off such a purchase until fall has looked over the herds which will be exhibited.

Despite the fact that there were more deaths this year, the death rate for the state remains 11.8 per 1000 population, the same figure as last year and the lowest the state has ever experienced.

THE PSYCHOLOGICAL MOMENT

A great deal depends upon the precise time or psychological moment.

This is absolutely true with advertising or business publicity.

If the merchant gets his publicity before the people of the community at the proper time he reaps many-fold benefit.

That is the reason why The Standard is published and mailed on Thursday. It reaches the people within trading distance at the right time for the heavy shopping period, which is unquestionably the week-end.

The Standard is read by more people than any other paper circulated in the community. This fact is established. The people like The Standard because it gives the news—a whole paper each week. They look forward to it and if The Standard fails to reach a home on time we hear of it.

The Standard is looking after the interests, both business and social, of the community. That's why we print a whole paper once a week rather than half a paper twice a week. It's the way the people of the community like it best.

BETTER BABIES AT STATE FAIR

Mothers Have Privilege of Entering Babies in Contest.

A drive to obtain a large entry of babies from the local districts of the state for the better babies contest at the Michigan state fair, opening September 1st, has been started by G. W. Dickinson, secretary-manager of the exposition.

In connection with the better babies contest, a general educational program "care of babies" is being outlined for the mothers who bring their children to the fair. Dr. E. P. Mills of Highland Park will be superintendent of the department again this year.

It is important to the success of the fair that we secure a large number of entries in the better babies contest from the rural districts," said Mr. Dickinson, "because you know, this fair has to be representative of all Michigan."

The plan of the fair administration this year is to go farther than the ordinary blue ribbon which goes to the perfect children and a thorough medical examination will be given every baby entered in the contest. Definite scientific advice will be offered the parents following the examination.

The competition this year is divided into six classes: Babies from rural districts and towns of 1,000 and less population, babies from cities and towns of over 1,000 and less than 10,000 population, babies from cities of over 10,000 population. Twins, triplets and champions.

Examinations in the contest are scheduled to begin Friday, September 1, and awards will be made on Saturday September 9th, the day preceding conclusion of the fair. No child suffering from an acute or constitutional disease will be allowed to be entered.

Entries for the contest will close August 30th, two days previous to the opening of the fair and should be mailed to G. W. Dickinson, 502 Bowles building, Detroit.

SAYS CLOVER SEED SHOULD BE CLEANED

Contamination With Weeds Lessens
Its Value, Declares M. A. C.
Crops Expert.

East Lansing, Mich.—Clover seed in Michigan may be freed from accompanying weed seeds with benefit to both grower and buyer, according to Prof. J. F. Cox, head of the farm crops department at M. A. C., who recommends the elimination of some of the more troublesome plants that persist in clover fields.

"The market is always stronger for seed that is free of weed seeds," says Prof. Cox. "While it is possible for seed handlers to take out the great majority of obnoxious weed seeds with adequate machinery, the cost of handling is increased in the case of weeds seed, and there is a considerable waste of clover seed in cleaning."

"During the last year many growers in Michigan's leading clover seed producing areas have given much attention to the pulling or cutting out of sticky cockle (night-flowering catchfly) and thistles, and the avoiding of patches of buckhorn, catchfly thistles or other weeds in fields that are to be harvested for seed."

"In the alkali section of north-eastern Michigan the presence of sticky cockle has greatly lowered the price of seed as produced by farmers. A much higher percentage of clean fields is notable this year in that region owing to the careful roguing out of weeds by farmers. The cleanest seed is usually produced the second year after planting."

"Not only does the individual grower secure a much better price on clean seed, but the seed handler is able to get a better profit. The greatest benefit comes to the buyer who grows clean seed for planting. Cheap seed usually carries a higher percentage of weed seeds than the better grades or is poorer in germination. Cheap seed is often the most expensive seed that can be bought."

QUOTA OF PICRIC ACID INCREASED

Michigan To Get 1,648,000 Pounds.
Must Be Taken By Jan. 1, However.

East Lansing, Mich.—The amount of picric acid available for Michigan farmers has been increased from the original quota of 1,250,000 pounds to 1,648,000 pounds, announces L. F. Livingston, land clearing specialist, who has just completed negotiations with the war department at Washington for the additional amount. All picric acid in this allotment must be taken by Jan. 1, however. Otherwise it will be distributed to those states which can use it. In view of this regulation, Mr. Livingston wishes to emphasize the necessity of prompt placing of orders on the part of Michigan farmers who expect to clear land.

BLIGHT APPEARS IN SOME POTATO AREAS

Danger To Michigan Crop Not Over-stated, Outbreak of Disease Shows.

East Lansing, Mich.—That late blight is actually menacing the potato crop of Michigan has been evidenced within the last few days by the receipt of specimens of plants infected with disease at the botany department of M. A. C. The danger from blight, due to cold wet weather in the early part of the season, was pointed out not long ago by Dr. G. H. Coons, plant pathologist, who recommended thorough spraying with Bordeaux mixture as a preventative measure. The disease is said to be threatening potato fields in the upper peninsula and in many counties of the lower peninsula.

Direct State Fair Entertainment

John Endicott, business man and farmer, is chairman of the 1922 entertainment committee of the Michigan State Fair. G. W. Dickinson, secretary-manager, announces in the premium catalogue for this year's exposition.

Arthur Peterson, of Escanaba, and John A. Miller, of Swartz Creek, are assisting Mr. Endicott on this committee.

During the past decade, Mr. Endicott has occupied a unique position in Michigan farming circles. His beautiful farm near Detroit has been the subject of considerable favorable comment throughout the state.

Of late, Mr. Endicott has taken keen interest in raising Gurnsey cattle. His exhibition was one of the finest at the last National Dairy Show. He has been attached in an official capacity to the State Fair for a number of years, and this year will be in charge of the grandstand, one of the most important duties of the fair. Besides being a member of the entertainment committee, Mr. Peterson, an Escanaba florist of enviable reputation in the upper peninsula, is head of the floral department at the Michigan State Fair. He was named by the governor to the fair board in 1921 for one year and reappointed this year.

John A. Miller, who heads the Swiss department at this year's fair, is manager of the Crapo farm at Swartz Creek. Few men are so qualified as Mr. Miller to occupy this position in the opinion of G. W. Dickinson.

PREACHOCRAPHS FROM THE PULPIT OF THE METROPOLITAN CHURCH — of — Detroit —
M. S. Rice, Preacher.

"Thou hast a few names, even in Sardis which have not defiled their garments" Revelations, 3-4.

"EVEN IN SARDIS," is the phrase that runs out from that passage with strong meaning to the world.

There was a great company in Sardis holding the belief that the excuse of their address would justify poor living.

They could not believe that the world expected much from a town like Sardis; and this has always been the weak declaration of folks who have sought defense in environment.

I am from Sardis and it is too hard to be good where I live to even justify an effort.

Here is a message of courage for those who believe that because of difficulties peculiar to their environment they have a sufficient excuse for giving up any endeavor at goodness.

This is a common excuse. I live in the wrong town. No one can be good or make good in a burg like this.

No one can be good where I have to live in Sardis of Sacramento, Duluth or Detroit, Dallas or Denver. I want to lay these encouraging words "even in Sardis" close against that attitude of mind and spirit.

Sardis was a rich manufacturing city of Asia Minor, and a large agricultural market. Its people had become indifferent to goodness, in luxury. The individual or race that keeps busy on the fundamental struggle of living will always arrive at something worth while. Softness and needless indulgence do not creep into the struggling life.

In wicked Sardis was a little church. Its membership had become infected with the prevalent evils of the city, and surrendered the very influence the church must preserve. The iniquity of Sardis, instead of being the ruin of the church should have been its opportunity.

But the record says that "even in Sardis," there were a few who did not run with the wicked crowd. There were some folks there who could not be whipped by the surroundings. The story of that little company should be told down every tempting street and alley in the world.

No man or woman must be mightier than Sardis. It is no great compliment to say that a man attained a strong righteousness when every conspiring goodness has surrounded him. I would not minimize the helpfulness of good surroundings, but I would put distinction on that life that has won against heavy odds.

Sardis lives in the world's history because out of its unkindly antagonisms came a few whose souls were shaped in the heroic mould of opposition. That great truth has been written with a pen or fire across every serious hindrance to righteousness.

The day will never come when a noble life can be lived without a noble effort. It is not easy to be good, but a man can beat Sardis, and make it his throne. If a thing is hard, a victory over it is worth while.

The greatest chapters of life have been written in the reddest blood of hardship. That old city thought that wickedness was the real way of living, yet out of all its population the only ones who are mentioned in history are those who stood out against its iniquity.

I remember across the years a plain every day fellow who owned the pulpit dais in the little home town. Many a time I mounted that dais to ride with him from the depot. His father and all his brothers had died drunkards. But George, knowing the liability in his own life, never allowed a drop of liquor to reach his lips.

He fought his inherited liability with a complete denial and he was safe. His conquering spirit has been an inspiration to me through the years. May God bless every Sardis oppressed soul. It is a great thing to make a hard fight in a hard place.

DRIVE SHOWS LIME AS SOIL BUILDER

Several Agencies Co-Operate For Demonstrations in Twelve Counties of Michigan

East Lansing, Mich.—Value of lime in soil building will be demonstrated in twelve counties of southern Michigan through co-operative arrangements made by the soils department at M. A. C., the Michigan Central Railroad, the France Stone Co. of Monroe, county agricultural agents and township supervisors. Dr. M. M. McCool professor of soils at M. A. C., announces that the campaign will start at once.

The demonstrations will cover a four-year period. One thousand tons of lime will be donated by the France company from its quarries at Monroe, while the railroad will furnish transportation. A car of lime will be utilized in each county. The four farms which in the judgment of county agents and farm bureau officials best represent the main soil types of the county will be chosen for the work. On each farm a six-acre project will be established. Lime in varying quantities and qualities will be applied, so as to determine its exact relation to each particular type of soil. Other commercial fertilizer will also be used to a certain extent. Field meetings will be held on the projects as soon as they are under way.

This is one of the most extensive land fertility drives ever undertaken in the state, according to Dr. McCool. Other railroads and other commercial lime producers are expected to co-operate in similar campaigns elsewhere at a later date.

Counties in which the demonstrations will be made are Washtenaw, Jackson, Calhoun, VanBuren, Ingham, Barry, Berrien, Oakland, Lenawee, Hillsdale, Branch and St. Joseph.

CLIENT "SPILLED THE BEANS"

Altogether Too Truthful in Answering Question Put to Him by His Own Attorney.

"Were I giving advice to a young lawyer," said an attorney the other day, "I would advise him to be careful about placing his client on the stand. It is at least as well to know what he is likely to answer to his attorney's leading questions. Some time ago," continued the lawyer, "a case was tried in which the plaintiff's attorney certainly 'spilled the beans,' though actually it was a cargo of bread, rolls and cake that was upset. A baker's wagon had been hit by a train in spite of the 'Stop, Look, Listen' sign, and the driver sued. On the stand he was asked how he conducted himself when he came to the crossing, and he replied: 'I just trotted gently across, looking the other way and thinking about nothing in particular.' The attorney threw up the case on the spot, but it was really a lack of foresight on his part," continued the narrator.

Amundsen's Ultimate Object.
Captain Amundsen's plan is to make his base at Cape Barrow. From thence he proposes to cover by the air route the 1,275 miles to the North pole. His ultimate goal is Cape Columbia, a total distance of 1,760 miles. As he will doubtless be compelled to deviate from the straight course, this estimate that he will cover approximately 2,000 miles. Just how he will recognize the actual pole is not quite clear, as it is not distinguished by any particular physical features. He will, however, be able to discover what chances there are for carrying out his projected drift in a vessel across the polar basin, which is his main purpose of flying over the top of the earth.

New Methods.
Calling upon a friend, the visitor found another visitor there in the person of the small granddaughter, Mary. Seated in her tiny rocker, playing with her doll, the little girl was apparently utterly oblivious of their conversation until it touched upon the death of a mutual acquaintance and the details of her burial, when suddenly the small voice piped up with, "Gran'mauver, when you die I ain't goin' to bury you nor nothin'. I'm goin' to have you stuffed."

The Big Muskeg

By VICTOR ROUSSEAU

STEWART KIDD COMPANY

"HANDS UP!"

SYNOPSIS.—Looking over Big Muskeg, a seemingly impassable swamp in the path of the Mississippian railroad, Joe Bostock, builder of the line, and Wilton Carruthers, chief of engineers, are considering the difficulties. A rifle shot instantly kills Bostock and breaks Carruthers' arm. Carruthers tries to carry the body to a post of the Hudson's Bay company, where McDonald is the factor. McDonald's daughter, Molly, sees Carruthers struggling in the muskeg and drags him from the swamp, with his burden. Unaccountably, her father objects to her saving Carruthers. Weakened by his wound and exertions, Carruthers is disturbed by the appearance of Tom Bowyer, Bostock's business rival and personal enemy. Bowyer insists Molly and Carruthers strike him. Carruthers declares his love for Molly. She promises to be his wife. Carruthers has to reach the town of Clayton to attend a meeting at which Bostock's enemies plan to wrest control of the Mississippi from him. Molly goes with him. They are delayed by a storm. Attacked by his dogs, Carruthers' life is saved by Molly, who is forced to kill the animals.

"You will, eh?" sneered the sergeant, with a side glance at Myers. "Got any sort of special pull in Clayton?"

"Enough to put the lid on you."

"Well, I guess you won't be going into Clayton yet a while," jeered Peters. "You're coming back to the Pas with us and Joe."

Wilton realized that Myers had come up quietly upon the other side of him. He had the bewildered feeling of being in a trap.

"What the devil do you mean by that?" he shouted.

The sergeant thrust his face forward into his own, grinning maliciously.

"It means that I arrest you for the wilful murder of Joe Bostock," he answered. "And I warn you, in the king's name, that any statement you make will be used against you."

At the same moment Wilton felt the touch of steel against his right wrist, and swung his hand free just in time to avoid the snap of the handcuff.

Looking at Sergeant Peters after the instant's sideways glance, he found himself covered by the heavy, regulation .45 Colt. Before he could stir, Myers had seized him from behind and made a violent effort to slip the handcuff upon his wrist.

Wilton heard Molly scream. The girl came running out of the room with her hair tumbling about her shoulders, and caught at Myers' arm. The caretaker started toward them, still holding the frying pan, in which he was cooking the potatoes, his face working with rage.

"You d—n fools!" he shouted, lapsing into his vernacular in his excitement, "you got it all wrong! Mr. Carruthers was Joe's best friend. So that was your game when you come here last night, eh? You'll get broke for this job already, both of you fellows, I tell you."

Molly was grasping at Myers' hand as the constable still fumbled nervously with the handcuff. "Won't you men listen to common sense?" she cried. "Mr. Carruthers is the chief engineer of the line. All his interests are bound up with it. Why should he want to murder Joe? He was Joe's best friend. Everyone in Clayton can tell you that. Why, he risked his own life to save him! Somebody's put you on the wrong track. They're trying to make use of you to keep him out of the way while they ruin the line. And you'll pay for your mistake, that's sure!"

And, with frenzied desperation, she succeeded in pushing Myers away from Wilton, and interposed between him and the sergeant, whose revolver pointed steadily at his forehead.

Peters scowled viciously at her. "You can tell all that at the inquest," he snapped. "I've got orders to bring you in, too. Get out of the way!"

At that the superhuman tension that held Wilton's rage in bounds seemed to snap. His ears were ringing, and a spotted mist floated before his eyes. Through this he saw Peters an infinite distance away, the revolver, now hardly larger than a pencil, pointing at his head. Behind the sergeant he saw Andersen, a doll-like figure with a toy pan in his hand. He leaped at Peters, heard the weapon discharged, and was conscious of the sting of powder on his forehead and a commotion in his hair.

Peters had shot to kill, but the weapon, the least bit diverted by Molly's intervention, had been reined in at Wilton's forehead a little hurriedly, and he had forgotten that the strong ammunition, of which complaint had frequently been made by the police superintendents, was apt to throw the bullet high at short distances.

Wilton shot his uninjured arm forward with a vicious swing that caught the sergeant on the cheek and sent him staggering backward. But the force of the blow, communicated to Wilton's left shoulder, wrenched the wound and forced a groan of pain from his lips. Peters reeled, regained his balance, and rushed forward again, swinging the revolver aloft, butt forward, in his hand.

With his powerful build he could have delivered a blow that would have crushed Wilton's skull. But before the blow fell Andersen had raised his pan and brought it down edgewise upon the sergeant's head, cutting the scalp to the bone and drenching the man with the boiling grease.

With a scream of pain Peters stumbled forward, letting the revolver fall from his hand, slipped in the grease that had begun to ooze along the floor, and fell full length on the planks, where he lay writhing in anguish, and trying to clear his eyes of the melted fat and the blood that streamed down his forehead.

Instantly Molly stooped, snatched up the weapon, which had fallen at her feet, and covered the constable, who had flung himself upon Wilton again. Myers stopped dead and threw his hands up automatically.

"Get over there!" said Molly briskly, pointing toward the wall behind the sergeant.

Myers obeyed immediately, and took his post against the wall, the picture of confusion. Peters struggled slowly to his feet. His face and pea-jacket were covered with a film of grease, over which the blood from his wound was trickling. The tables were turned with dramatic completeness.

"You know what this means!" spluttered the sergeant, trying to clear the fat from his eyes.

"I do, and I'll take my chance," answered Wilton, gritting his teeth at the pain from his injured arm. The wound did not seem to have reopened, but either his blow or the grasp of the constable had displaced the broken ends of the bone, and he could feel them grating together at his slightest movement. "Keep your hands up, both of you!" he ordered. "Give me the revolver, Molly! Got a rope, Andersen?"

"Well, I guess I have," grinned the Swede. He stepped to a packing case behind the stove, and brought out a short coil of manila, which, with a kitchen knife, he sliced into four or five lengths.

"I thank I tie them to that beam," he said, indicating one of the vertical uprights of the wooden shack.

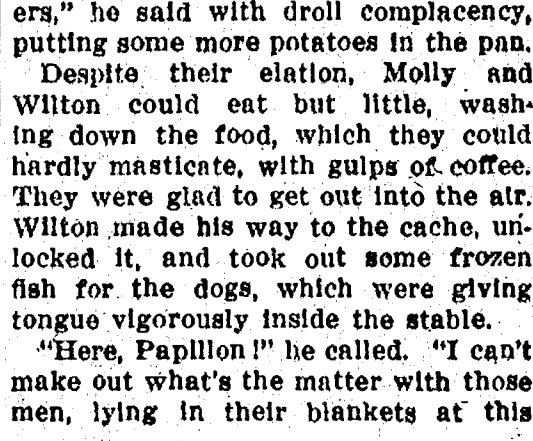

"All right, Andersen," said Wilton. "Tie 'em so that they can sit down. They'll have some time to wait, and they may get tired of standing."

He took the revolver from Molly and slipped it into his pocket. Peters let loose a string of vicious oaths as Andersen proceeded to truss him up, but neither man offered any resistance. The caretaker stepped back and looked at his work with critical satisfaction.

"I thank you get to Clayton by tomorrow night, all right, Mr. Carruthers," he said with droll complacency, putting some more potatoes in the pan.

Despite their elation, Molly and Wilton could eat but little, washing down the food, which they could hardly masticate, with gulps of coffee. They were glad to get out into the air. Wilton made his way to the cache, unlocked it, and took out some frozen fish for the dogs, which were giving tongue vigorously inside the stable.

"Here, Papillon!" he called. "I can't make out what's the matter with those men, lying in their blankets at this hour, with the dogs howling for their breakfast," he said to Molly indignantly. "They must have known I'd feed them before starting on a run like the one we've got before us. I suppose they heard the row and got scared back to bed," he added.

But no answer came to his call, and suddenly Molly uttered a cry and pointed. On the other side of the stable were the tracks of a sleigh, obliterated at the entrance by the falling snow, which had drifted against the building.

Wilton wrenched the door open. His sleigh and the dogs were gone, together with the rifle, shotgun and transit-compass. The half-breeds had deserted during the night.

"They must have guessed that those men meant to arrest you, or else they heard them talking," said Molly.

But Wilton had hurried to the horse stalls, separated from the dog stable by a stout door. He breathed a deep sigh of relief. The second sleigh was there. For a moment the thought of possibilities had made his heart almost stand still.

He came back grim and resolute. "There's something pretty deep in all this business," he said. "I know why the men ran away. The sergeant gave them the tip to. I saw him talking to Papillon last night. And that's the reason why they wouldn't sleep in the shack—because they meant to run. I suppose the policemen were afraid that they would make trouble, or try to help us. But I can't fathom it. Those men acted like criminals. That's not the way of the police."

He clenched his fist and swore under his breath.

"I'll have those fellows broke for this, if I have to go to Ottawa," he said. "And I'm going to run down those breeds, if it takes me a lifetime. I tell you this, Molly: it's all bound up with Joe in some way or other, and Tom Bowyer's at the bottom of it."

"But first—remember Kitty," said Molly softly, laying her hand on Wilton's shoulder.

Even the slight touch made him wince. For the pain of his broken arm was becoming unbearable. He realized that in all probability he was in for a long spell of illness. He knew that the bone would have to be reset. His head felt strangely light, and the ground seemed to slope downhill from him in all directions. But he shut his teeth hard, and would not let Molly guess. And a feverish energy took possession of him. He must hold out for the journey, until after the shareholders' meeting—until he had told Kitty!

"We'll take the police sled and start at once," he said to Molly. "It looks as if a storm was brewing. I'll tell Andersen to let those fellows go about noon, and I'll leave the revolver with him."

Inside the shack they found the policemen eating their breakfast on the floor, with the caretaker diligently serving them. They were still bound, but their hands were free.

"Turn them loose at noon, Andersen," Wilton said. "Give them enough slap-bang to carry them on their way. Just turn them loose and see that they haven't any dangerous weapons to do you mischief with."

"You bet I take care for that," grinned the Swede.

Wilton let Andersen harness the dogs, to save his strength for the journey. In a few minutes the sled was ready, with the sleigh carrying Joe's body attached behind, and the huskies, harnessed, sitting docile in the snow, awaiting the command to mush.

The sun was just showing above the horizon when Wilton and Molly started on the second stage of their journey to Clayton.

CHAPTER V.

The Bitter Cup.

Hardly had they topped the rise behind which the cache was situated when the full force of the wind caught them. A blizzard was sweeping up, and it grew in strength all that morning, until by noon it was almost a hurricane. They pushed on doggedly until about one o'clock, avoiding the temptation to rest at the auxiliary caches which had been established along this part of the road.

At one o'clock they came to an empty cache and horse stable, which had been built in anticipation of winter development work, and had formed the hub of many radiating reconnaissance roads. They had come no more than six miles, and it was still a good fifteen miles to Clayton. By this time the blizzard had increased to an intense violence, driving great sheets of snow along the road. It was impossible to face such a hurricane any longer.

"We'll have to wait till this lets up a bit, Molly," said Wilton.

The little shack, hardly more than four walls and a roof, was unoccupied. Wilton broke down the door and went in. He found the key of the stable, unlocked it, and unharnessed the dogs. He drove them in and shut the door. Then he took the blankets out of the sleigh and went into the shack.

To build a fire was impossible, but they ate biscuit and tinned beef, washing it down with water.

"I'll have to let up soon," said Wilton. "If it doesn't, we'll just have to face it again."

A dozen times he had regretted having yielded to her insistence to accompany him. Traveling in that weather was hard on a man, let alone a girl such as Molly. He looked at her in wonder as he saw her apparent unconcern, the courage with which she faced the difficulties of the journey. But his fears were centered chiefly on Kitty. Suppose he couldn't go! Suppose he couldn't be at the shareholders' meeting on the morrow!

Toward the middle of the afternoon the wind seemed to have lessened, though the driven snow still swept in blinding clouds along the road. It might be possible to reach Clayton soon after nightfall.

"I think we might try again, Molly," he said.

"I think so, Will," she answered. He caught her to him. "You are the bravest woman I know," he said, kissing her. "We must succeed—for Kitty's sake."

She kissed him back. "Of course we shall, Will, dear," she answered. Wilton went into the stable and called the dogs. They were lying with their noses together, and at his entrance sprang to their feet with menacing growls. They knew very well what his advent portended, and it was plain that their wildish temper was thoroughly aroused.

Wilton had handled a refractory pack once before. He knew that quick action was necessary. He stepped forward, and, as the gleaming jaws gaped at him, and the animals prepared to spring, snarling and quivering with rage, he brought his whip across the leader's nose with all his strength.

Immediately, with maddened yell, the pack leaped at him. Wilton swung right and left with the whip, and then, retreating till his back was against the wall of the shack, he laid about him with the shortened stock.

With gaping jaws and wicked, blood-shot eyes, the pack came on again and again, leaping at him, tearing at his clothes; one sank its fangs into his right hand, and, as he freed himself with a smashing blow, the others were upon him sideward.

In an instant he was struggling with his one hand against the heavy bodies that bore him back, shielding his throat, thrusting the whipstock into the red, cavernous jaws, while the anguish from his wrenched shoulder almost made him scream with pain.

Everything was swimming round him. They had him down. Their belching howls grew fainter in his ears. Mechanically he kept his right hand at his throat. The left, torn from the sling, flopped grotesquely in front of him. He heard the click of the fangs that met in it, and felt no pain. He was swooning.

Suddenly he heard the "snap-snap" of a revolver. A leaping body seemed to stop short in the air, and tumbled on him, knocking him on his face. Dimly he heard the discharge of the weapon again. And then, out of a semi-stupor, Molly's face, and her tears upon his cheeks.

She was kneeling beside him upon the floor of the stable, stanching the blood from his wounds with a strip torn from her petticoat. Upon the floor lay three of the dogs, dead. Two more were writhing and moaning in a distant corner. Wilton looked up.

Molly bowed her face upon his and broke into hysterical weeping. It was the first sign of weakness he had ever seen in her. He held her in his right arm. He saw that his blood had stained her hands, her clothing.

"Molly," he said weakly, "Molly—" She wept in utter hopelessness. "It is useless, Will," she sobbed. "Let us die here. We can't go on. They have torn you. Your arm is broken again. Oh, the snow—the snow—"

She seemed to have completely broken down. She crouched beside him, her whole body shaken by her sobs. And in his apathy it seemed to him good to lie there, with Molly at his side, till he grew stronger, or—

"Molly! Remember Kitty—and Joe!"

His words seemed to galvanize her back to courage. She got up. Her face grew suddenly composed. With streaming eyes she bandaged up his wounds. She improvised another sling, to hold his arm.

"I shall walk into Clayton," she said. "You must lie in the shack. Help will come by noon tomorrow, perhaps sooner."

"Seven miles yet, and the meeting's at nine," he said. "I can't make it, Molly!"

Repulsive Birds.
The greatest bird gourmand is the vulture of southeast Europe. Seven vultures can strip the carcass of a horse in half an hour. After such a meal they can fly only a few yards. They stand with puffed-out bodies, drooping wings, and blood-shot eyes, uttering hideous cries.

PEAT IN PROCESS OF MANUFACTURE HERE

Substitute for Coal Taken From the Earth at Chelsea

An important industry in Chelsea, especially during the prevailing strike, is the manufacture of peat, a fuel that has proven a satisfactory substitute for hard coal. A quantity of the fuel is now ready for delivery.

The plant is located just east and south of the D. U. R. passenger depot and is operated by the Morse Process Company. J. Campbell Morrison is chief engineer and superintendent of the work at the plant. He also designed a portion of the equipment.

At the plant a large mast of 70 feet in height has been erected, to which is attached a 1 1/2 inch cable drag that extends 600 feet into the peat bed. A steel bucket that holds 1 1/2 yards of peat is attached to the cable and every two minutes the bucket traverses the length of the peat bed and deposits a bucket full of peat in a storage bin in the building. The hoisting engine is located near the mast and is equipped with two large drums, one of which lowers the bucket at a high rate of speed into the bog where it is automatically filled. The other drum elevates the bucket to the top of the mast, where it enters the building and dumps its contents. From the storage bin, the raw material is gathered up by an endless chain bucket, and conveyed to the macerating machine; then it is conveyed to the press where it is thoroughly kneaded by revolving screws running in opposite directions, coming out of the press in bricklets under a pressure of about four tons. From the mouth of the press the bricklets are delivered to a table, then to the cutting machine where they are cut to the size wanted. After the cutting process the bricklets are conveyed on an endless belt to the storage yard where they are placed in racks and nature finishes the drying process. This is known as the wet process.

The waste or ashes of this fuel is only about five per cent of the gross weight. A percentage of gas can be obtained from the raw material, we are informed, sufficient to furnish light, heat and generate electricity for every building in Chelsea for several generations. Many by-products for fertilization can be manufactured from the material in the peat bed, and underneath the bog is found a fine quality of potter's clay. In fact, there are in Chelsea, pieces of pottery that have been made from this clay which was sent to New Jersey by one of the early settlers, Mr. Congdon, who had it manufactured into household utensils.

The company has just completed installing two large dynamos and the electricity to operate the plant is supplied by the Consumer's Power Co.

The machinery for a dry process designed by Mr. Morrison is being manufactured and is to be added to the present equipment in the near future. This process will more than double the output of the plant.
