CHELSEA STANDARD NOW ALL-HOME PRINT

Change Made This Week To Accommodate More Community News.

The Chelsea Standard, which has been partly printed in Detroit for many years, is now printed entirely in this office. This change is made to give more space for home and community news.

The change has been in the mind of the publisher since the change of ownership and to carry out the program a large press has been installed. The ready print pages of the Standard have been a serious handicap and each week several columns of interesting local matter had to be omitted because of lack of space. The change involves an expenditure of considerable money, but having confidence that the people of the community appreciate a newsy home paper there was no hesitancy in making the investment.

To acquaint the few people of the community who have not been receiving The Standard lately we are sending sample copies for a few weeks, so they can judge for themselves the quality of the Standard as a community newspaper. We further, as an introductory offer, are instituting two bargain days a week—Fridays and Saturdays—on which days yearly subscriptions will be accepted for $1.00. This low price does by no means cover the cost of the paper, but rather than offer prizes that benefit a few, we place the saving in the pockets of each individual subscriber who takes advantage of the bargain-day offer.

Announcement of the bargain days will be found in our advertisement on page 7.

MASONS ENJOY ANNUAL OUTING

Two Hundred People Affiliated With Masonic Fraternity Gather at North Lake.

Although weather indications were threatening last Thursday morning, the date of the Masonic annual picnic, fully 200 people affiliated with the fraternity gathered at North Lake and shortly after the noon hour enjoyed the picnic dinner in Eisenbeiser's grove.

Smith's Chelsea band was present and discoursed some of its excellent music during the afternoon.

Rev. Harvey G. Pearce gave the address of the day and this was a treat much appreciated by all. Rev. Pearce being himself a Mason of high degree gave an excellent talk along Masonic lines, full of spice and pep. Interesting were the anecdotes of benefits and advantages he encountered from Masonry while overseas during the World war.

In the contests Mrs. Verne Fodyce won the ladies' potato race, Raymond Dancer the pop race, Ernest Wagner the fat man's race, Mrs. Leigh Palmer the ladies' nail driving contest, Adam Faust and Dorr Rogers the barnyard golf contest.

The ball game was an interesting contest won by Dr. Brooks' side by a score of 10 to 6.

Many preparations for picnic supper were abandoned on account of the approach of threatening clouds above the horizon, and hurried departures were made to escape the heavy and soaking rain that fell about supper time.

All attending the outing report an excellent time.

HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY MEETS AT METHODIST HOME

The Home Missionary society of the Methodist church held their meeting yesterday at the Methodist Home, where an exceptionally good program was given. Rev. H. G. Pearce and family were present and contributed several musical numbers and Mrs. Pearce gave a number of readings, which, it needless to say, were greatly enjoyed. Rev. Pearce gave a talk along missionary lines and Rev. Beatty closed the meeting with prayer.

Devotionals were led by Rev. H. R. Beatty, prayer by Rev. Edwin Pearce, which was followed by roll call and a business meeting.

The members of the Home family, of which they are fifty, were the guests of the society. A contest has been in progress among the ladies and the losing side served the lunch. The tables were each centered with flowers from the Home gardens, ten tables being arranged for the members of the society and guests.

ELECTRIC CHANGE FAILED TO CARRY

Vote Tuesday Lacked Sufficient Majority to Give Consumers Power Company Franchise.

The plans of city officials to discontinue the operation of Chelsea's municipal lighting plant and grant the Consumers Power Company a franchise to operate an electric distribution system was defeated at Tuesday's election through the failure of receiving the majority required by law, which is 60% of the total vote cast.

The voters favored the propositions by a small majority. The total number of votes cast was 302, of which 154 voted yes, 145 no and three ballots were thrown out because improperly marked. According to these figures the propositions received nine majority.

The village authorities are still up against a difficult proposition and the city is out $20,000 that was offered by the Consumers Power Co. for the distribution lines and working privileges.

The coal shortage and the prevailing high price of fuel may make it exceedingly difficult to keep the plant running steadily, and the village may yet be obliged to call for help from the big power company.

Lack of interest by the voters was evident by the small vote cast when the total registration shows a list of about 800 in the village.

The light vote fails to give the officials a clew to what the people want. If they didn't want the franchise given they should have turned out full force and voted the proposition down emphatically. Then there would have been something for the officials to work on and get busy to equip and repair the plant as it should be.

As the case now stands a small majority of the people voting believe the change should be made and the money received used for other much needed improvements.

WIVES ENTERTAINED BY HUSBANDS

Crow's Nest, Cavanaugh Lake, Scene of Enjoyable Social Event.

Members of the Ladies' Bridge club of Chelsea, who at various times during the winter months have entertained their men folks, were in return given a joyous evening last Friday by their husbands, who treated them at a seven o'clock dinner at Crow's Nest, Cavanaugh Lake.

Decorations were beautiful and consisted of pine boughs and fall flowers, each table being adorned with bouquets of beautiful blossoms. Neat hand painted place cards contained the menu, which was as follows: Cream of celery soup, Maryland chicken, cream gravy, head lettuce with Thousand Island dressing, French fried potatoes, squash, peach pie, fruit cup and coffee. The viands were prepared to the queen's taste by Herbert Schenk, host of the famous Crow's Nest, and the repast was thoroughly enjoyed by the merry company.

After dinner cards were enjoyed, 500 being the game, and dancing was also indulged in. Those present were Messrs. and Mesdames George Geddes, Charles Clayton, Sam Mapes, Ed Brown, Fred Klingler, Frank Storms, L. P. Vogel and Herbert Schoenhals—sixteen altogether.

The ladies report the men folks excellent entertainers and thoroughly appreciate the event.

OBITUARY—LORRAINE R. COOPER

Lorraine R. Cooper passed away at his home, 938 Hoyt avenue, Saginaw, Mich., Friday morning, Aug. 25, 1922, aged 58 years. Mr. Cooper was born in Ontario, Canada, Feb. 29, 1864, and was the third son of Erastus and Lydia Cooper. He passed his early life at the old home in Sylvan township, later going to Detroit, where he graduated from the Detroit business college and later went to Saginaw, where for a number of years he was a prominent and successful business man.

He is survived by his widow, two brothers, Stanley E. of Grass Lake, and Hector E. of Lansing, one half brother, Carl F. of Ypsilanti; three half sisters, Mrs. Burr Hewlett of Leoni, Mrs. Phoebe Smith and Miss Esther Cooper of Lansing.

NOTTEN FAMILY REUNION

The eleventh annual reunion of the Notten family was held at the pleasant farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Walz, Leoni township, with 180 in attendance. The oldest was Mrs. Mary Havens, 77 years of age, and the youngest, baby Marie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emory Lehman, 7 months old. After a sumptuous dinner served on the lawn under the beautiful maples, a fine program, in charge of Mrs. Leonard Loveland, was rendered. It included music by the Notten band, address by Mr. Walz, talk by Rev. Carl Ertel, paper by Mrs. D. B. McKenzie, also readings, recitations, vocal and instrumental music by the younger members of the assembly.

Members of the family came from Hastings, Woodland, Jackson, Munnith, Stockbridge, Pinckney, Waterloo, Mason, Bunker Hill, Grass Lake, Chelsea, Detroit and Francisco and Cavanaugh Lake.

At the business meeting the following officers were chosen: President, Henry Kalmbach, Sec'y and Treas. Mabel Kalmbach; chairman of program committee, Mrs. Nina Dykema; master; chairs and table committee, Mrs. Henry Kalmbach.

On the whole it was a day of hearty greetings, much pleasure and social intercourse, somewhat saddened by the passing of one of the older members just a week previous, one who had never missed a meeting, Mrs. Caroline Hauer, of Woodland. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Kalmbach, Sylvan township.

A hearty vote of thanks was given

EDITORIAL COMMENT

PUTTING MONEY INTO BUSINESS
A traveling salesman, when he saw the big newspaper press being installed in The Standard office some weeks ago, remarked: "Oh My! Do you think it will pay to put so much money into this business?" He was answered that we weren't absolutely certain, but from former experiences we knew it paid for a newspaper to give the people of the community the best possible.

The answer has been verified, for since the middle of June forty-two new subscriptions have been added and only three removed, making a total net gain in about ten weeks of thirty-nine new subscriptions. And this increase comes without any solicitation whatever which is absolute "proof of the pudding" that a good newspaper is appreciated and advertises itself.

The circulation of The Standard is exceptionally good, judged by the population of Chelsea. But there are a few, among them old subscribers' who previous to the change of ownership dropped their subscription for some cause or other, and are not now receiving this paper. We want them back on the list and believe they will be regular subscribers again.

Coming back to the subject matter, we believe it pays to put money into a business for legitimate improvement. It not only pays in the printing office, but in any business. It is the only way we can keep abreast of the times. No wildcat schemes will take the place of good sound business methods and a service that is appreciated by the patrons.

THE CLOSING OF FORD PLANTS.

If Henry Ford carries out his plan of closing his factories September 16, as made public Saturday, Detroit and Michigan, and in truth the entire country, are bound to suffer a business depression that will be felt keenly, for the closing of these immense factories will throw out of work 70,000 men in Detroit and over 2,000,000 others in industries that furnish him with supplies.

The shut-down comes as the result of the rail and coal strike. Mr. Ford who lays the blame of the strike upon Wall street finance manipulators, says he will not be held up on coal and steel prices. A Detroit daily quotes the following statement made by Mr. Ford:

"I will not be a party to profiteering. That is why I am going to shut down until coal and steel conditions are over. Tolerate such conditions, and they will continue indefinitely. There is no good reason why such conditions should exist at all. It is a conspiracy to fleece the public."

"I believe both strikes—the railway and the coal strikes—are conspiracies between Wall street and the labor unions. I do not mean that union working men as a class are conspiring, but I do mean that their leaders are. I believe labor union leaders are working in close co-operation with the railway and mine owners."

BEWARE OF BULLS.

That bulls allowed to roam loose on the farm are dangerous is a warning that one of our faithful subscribers wishes The Standard to impress upon our readers.

Only a few weeks ago we chronicled a fatality when a woman on a farm near Stockbridge was put to death by an enraged bull. A week or so ago Lewis Ording, a 60 year old farmer living near Williamston, met death in the same horrible manner. In the evening he went to drive the cows from pasture and his route took him across a lot where a two-year old bull was confined. He knew the bull was vicious and sought to protect himself with a club. The broken stick was found near his mutilated body.

Too much care can not be exercised in harboring bulls and every safeguard should be utilized to keep the dangerous animals where they can do no harm.

WHERE SHOULD ECONOMY BEGIN?

The old saying "Economy should begin at home" has a mouthful of truth when the question of taxation is considered. The writer happened down town Thursday evening and listened to the talk of his former townsman and friend, Theo. M. Joslin of Adrian, candidate for governor, who told of the extravagances of the state administration—an administration that promised a strictly business conduct of public affairs. Whether we received such an administration every taxpayer can answer for himself.

"Where shall we economize?" Mr. Joslin stated that Michigan has a well developed class of professional job holders. If elected governor, he says, he will clean house and reduce the tax 40 per cent.

stitutions. He referred to the University of Michigan, stating that the institution was large enough to care for our needs if we do not encourage too largely the educating of foreigners—people from all corners of the globe—for which the university is asking a large appropriation. Would this be economy? Some say it would, while others of broad view would hesitate to make such an assertion. They would admit that curtailing the expansion of the university would be temporary economy. The influence spread over the world by Michigan's big educational institution is immeasurable. Every time a foreign graduate of the U. of M. returns to his native land, be it heathen or christianized, an influence for progress is sown that is bound to grow.

The extension work of the Michigan Agricultural College was also attacked by Mr. Joslin as an unnecessary extravagance. The farmers of the state should be good judges of the value of the college extension work.

Mr. Joslin also declared the heavy road tax is an injustice to farmers. He would make the highways self-supporting. Trucks should be taxed and he favored a gasoline tax so those using the road most would pay the greater share of upkeep.

The Standard is not promoting any political party or the candidacy of any person. In discussing public questions its object is to get people to think seriously and vote intelligently. To vote a ticket because father and grandfather voted the same ticket is not voting intelligently.

PREACHOCRAPHS FROM THE PULPIT OF THE METROPOLITAN CHURCH of Detroit
M.S. Rice, Preacher.

"The kings of the earth, and all the inhabitants of the world would not have believed that the adversary should have entered the gates of Jerusalem."
 —Lamentations: 4-12.

I read that interesting verse one day while sitting where those great proud confident walls had crumbled.

Those old Jerusalemites used to go and lean against those great stone defenses and laugh at the thought of their falling. But today as we stand before this destroyed city we conclude that the IMPROBABLE POSSIBLE must be given a calculated place in life.

Just because a thing is not liable to happen is a weak negative source of defense. It was not likely that it would snow a five foot fall over night in Washington. But because it did so last winter those buildings that had been able to stand through ordinary years collapsed under the extraordinary.

Man has done much to inspire self confidence. He has scaled mountains, sailed seas and dug deeply into the earth's heart. But I found his broken body at the base of a cliff, trampled by the mountain's granite heel; and I found his rusted ship wrecked on a solitary shore.

The man who trusts in his own prowess is bound to fail. I take my stand amid the ruin of the fallen walls of Jerusalem, where haughty confidence laughed in apparent security, to consider the havoc wrought in life by the unexpected.

We have found our greatest liability at the point where we grow sure and careless; and the carelessness of confidence has too often been fatal. Things are forever liable to us which may seem by all the calculation we can summon, to be far beyond the range of possibility. Our strongest castles tumble.

I can pluck up courage to meet certainty, but when I hold in my hand the proof of security and then see it all collapse, I am up against my most severe test. The IMPROBABLE POSSIBLE is the limit of all our lives.

It is actually true that when an army encamped around Jerusalem had besieged these solid walls the accumulated confidence that had grown in the minds of her people was proudly displayed.

They collected the crippled and the defectives of the city and, exposing them on the great walls, tauntingly said to the foe: "When you have conquered our cripples, then we will take up the fight. Fight These; Fight These." But the improbable which they had barricaded with a great wall tumbled upon them with the awful crash of the possible.

Such a fact demands attention in our calculations of life. "I have a comfortable income," you say? "If the coal strike should have run straight into winter, I have a full bin." But I knew a proud rich man who taunted the poor and he died in the county poor house, and no friends were there to ease his going.

"I have a strong healthy body," you say? "I can depend on my physical power. Making a living carries no worry to me." I saw a giant of a man, the strongest man I ever knew, undermined by disease. I took his pale thin hand before he went away, and heard him say: "It has been a hard fight and I have lost."

"I have a good reputation," you say? Reputation is a good and great possession, yet the easiest thing to lose that you have.

The big liable fact before all of us is, that we cannot build the walls of character so strong as to preclude a fall.

If the walls of Jerusalem cannot stand, are there any walls that will endure? I would hurl that question into every range of life. I know a citadel which has never broken down, and this is the inscription on its gates: "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in time of trouble." O, for a world to realize that and incorporate it into actual experience.

Amid all the toppled walls and misplaced confidences men have known I would broadcast to this troubled generation that other very heartening phrase of scripture: "The Lord is the strength of my life, of whom should I be afraid." If walls, financial or industrial or political, are falling all around you; or if adversity or sorrow has reached into your life, "Wait on the Lord, be of good courage and he will strengthen thee heart."

WOMAN HERE HAS A RECORD FOR SPEED
 There works in the Detroit post office a woman who can do the equivalent of 20,000 letters a day.

There works here in Ann Arbor a woman who can do the equivalent of sorting and routing 15,000 letters a day and perform the day's duties as secretary to the county commissioner of schools besides, without trying to break a record.

She is Miss Nellie Lowry. Yesterday Miss Lowry counted and arranged for distribution by town-small envelopes; counted and assorted and folded 1,920 transfer cards; 320 dictionary notices; 160 "save-the-white-pine" letters; 160 manuals; 920 truant blanks; 7,000 promotion blanks and reports; 320 manuals of "Poems by Grades" and language booklets; 480 daily program and recreation blanks and 640 miscellaneous notices.

After all this material was sorted the envelopes were filled, clasped and arranged for distribution by townships. Those who have watched Miss Lowry fold large numbers of letters and place them in envelopes are willing to wager that she is the champion letter mailer in the state.

The foregoing appeared in the Ann Arbor Times News of Friday. Miss Lowry is a resident of Chelsea, and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Lowry of Jefferson street.

BIG POULTRY EXHIBIT
 AT WASHTEENAW FAIR.
 A big exhibit of birds is expected at the poultry show at the Washtenaw County Fair, Ann Arbor, September 19 to 23. Premiums totaling $250.00 are being offered and all of the leading breeds will be shown. It is expected to exceed the great poultry show of the 1920 fair which was one of the three best in the state, said Mr. J. J. Desmond, secretary of the Poultry Breeders Association.

"Select a good rooster for your home flock at the fair."

This is a slogan which is to be used by poultry breeders at the Washtenaw County Fair in attempting to arouse interest in the improving of the home flocks, and elevating the standard of poultry raising. It is their contention that the output of meat and eggs in this territory could be doubled in two or three years if such a plan were put into operation.

"A hen ordinarily lays about 150 eggs" says the superintendent, Mr. Desmond. "A bird of good breeding will lay about 250 eggs in a year, nearly twice as many as are laid by the scrub hen. The most economical way of improving a scrub flock is by putting pure-bred roosters at the head. If new roosters were bought each year there would be little scrub blood left in two or three years. By that time a pure-bred flock is generally wanted and obtained."

Poultry exhibitors are planning on emphasizing the value of culling the flock. It will be their contention that not only should good roosters be brought to head the flock but that inferior hens should be weeded out by selection. Old hens, fat hens, and hens which want to set frequently and do not care to lay eggs, and hens with weak disposition, should be sold on the market or killed for table use.

Inquiries about the show are coming in at a lively rate, and no doubt but that every available space in the poultry building will be filled.

JOSLIN WOULD SMASH STATE POLITICAL RING

REDUCE STATE TAXES FORTY PER CENT BY CUTTING EXPENSES

Independent Candidate For Governor on Republican Ticket Gives Street Address Here Thursday Evening.

Reducing taxes forty per cent by cutting down the state payroll and giving a holiday to building operations for state institutions is the main platform upon which Theodore M. Joslin of Adrian is building his hopes to secure the nomination for governor of the state of Michigan in the coming primary election.

Mr. Joslin came unannounced to Chelsea Thursday evening and gave an address before a small audience at the corner of Main and Middle streets.

Mr. Joslin called attention to the lavish expenditures that have been made and are being planned for state institutions, referring especially to the state prisons, Michigan Agricultural College and the University of Michigan. That economy can be practised in the conduct of state institutions the speaker showed by pointing to the fact that under one administration Jackson prison was made self-supporting. The extension work of the M. A. C. he declares expensive and unnecessary and to enlarge Michigan University in order to educate foreigners at the expense of Michigan taxpayers he declared an injustice.

The unjust road tax in conjunction with the general tax are causing farmers who are buying on contract to abandon the farms. Young farmers years ago were able to buy on contract and come through, but in Lenawee county he knew a number who have lately made purchase contracts and were obliged to abandon the farm and lose their payments. He wanted to see the farmer and the farmer's wife and family to have conveniences that the present high rate of taxation prohibits. Farms are taxed $5 per acre that a few years ago rented for $2.50 per acre.

Speaking of the road tax he said it was unfair to the farmer. Roads should be made self-supporting by a tax on those who use them most. The state, he said, has developed a professional class of job hunters.

J. M. Wood, one of the audience, asked Mr. Joslin how he would go about it to lessen excessive taxation. Mr. Joslin replied by cleaning house, cutting down the payroll and using the governor's veto power and removal power. He expressed himself strongly against centralizing power in Lansing and taking it away from county and township.

The speaker also spoke of centralized schools that have made taxation a burden in localities adopting the plan. He believed in higher education, he wanted the boys and girls to get all they can out of school, but he didn't believe in going into unnecessary extravagances that we could not afford. The centralized school is a good thing if you can afford it.

Mr. Wood asked him what he thought of the state tax commission. The speaker said he had not given the commission much thought, but he knew they could do much good. He also knew of instances of injustice in their work.

Mr. Joslin is an attorney of Adrian who in 1896 came in political prominence as a supporter and fighter for Hazen S. Pingree for governor. He has been mayor of Adrian, prosecuting attorney of Lenawee county and has been active in state politics.

He and his family are making an auto trip through the state, speaking to the people whenever opportunity affords.

A Triumph for Value

IN the past two months Firestone has built and marketed more tires than in any similar period in its history.

are universally equipping with Firestone Cords.

This steadily increasing public preference is proof of the recognition by car owners of the greater values offered by Firestone. It is a tribute to Firestone men—all stockholders in the company—all actuated by the operating principle of Most Miles per Dollar.

There are many reasons for the high quality of Firestone tires but chief among the special manufacturing processes are double gum-dipping, thus eliminating internal friction by insulating each cord strand, and air-bag cure, insuring a well-balanced and perfectly shaped product.

The high average performance of Firestone Cords is without equal in the annals of tire making and is reflected by the general tendency to specify Firestone for hard service. Taxicab and bus lines, buying tires by the mile, Don't speculate in tires—you will find the right combination of price and quality in Firestone. Come in and let us tell you about the service these Cords are giving other car-owners whom you know.

July 27, 1922. J. W. Clark, Clerk of said Township.

The Big Muskeg by VICTOR ROUSSEAU Illustrations by R.H. Livingstone

Wilton was astounded. "Live at Big Muskeg?" he cried. "Until the work is finished. Don't refuse me, Will!" She clasped her hands together in her childish, pleading way that Joe had always found irresistible. "Joe would have let me. I won't hamper you, Will," she begged. "Kitty, you're a trump!" cried Wilton. "But you can't go there to live. The loneliness would be awful. And there isn't a house anywhere. And besides—"

He did not dare suggest the thought that came to him, that people would gossip about her. That, he felt, rested with her.

"It won't be lonely with—with the work, Will," she answered. "And I've already made my plans. I'm having a bungalow built there. And there will be Molly. Don't you want me to come, Will?"

Kitty's pleas were irresistible. Wilton yielded, and he was glad for one thing: her presence at the portage would mean much to Molly. During the next few days he was in constant consultation with the directors as representing Kitty, who had given him her power of attorney to act for her. He went carefully over the books. He was quite satisfied with their showing. If Big Muskeg could be crossed, the company could remain solvent without increasing its capital.

He devoted his attention to the personnel, taking on new men and weeding out a thing Joe had hated doing, until he was satisfied that Bowyer had no representatives on the staff.

Wilton and Betts had been named executors in Joe's will. Wilton had already gone through Joe's papers; but this task was much less satisfactory for Joe, who was a capital director, seemed to have no personal system at all. Everything was in confusion—papers were missing, records mixed up together. He had left Kitty two thousand shares in the Missattbi, and a comfortable little capital of about forty thousand dollars, together with the house in Clayton and some property in Winnipeg.

The Missattbi shares, amounting to two million dollars at their par value, represented the bulk of his fortune, and were in a safety-deposit box in the bank's vault. The receipt, however, could not be found.

This was not of much importance, but Wilton went with Kitty to look in Joe's box. Clark, the manager, took them below, opened the vault, and put in the master-key. Wilton completed the opening. To his astonishment there were only fifteen hundred shares.

"Five hundred shares are missing," he said to the manager. Clark looked at him in some surprise. "You are not forgetting that Mr. Bostock hypothecated five hundred shares with us as security for the loan?" he asked.

Wilton looked at Kitty. "Did you know that Joe borrowed on the security of those shares?" he asked. Kitty shook her head. Joe had not told her many of the details of his business. And the papers had shown no record of the transaction.

"Mr. Phayre has just come in," said the manager. They went up to the president's office. Phayre asked them to sit down, and listened to Wilton's statement.

"Mr. Clark, will you get Mr. Bostock's blank transfer of the shares?" he asked. The paper was brought. The signature appeared perfectly genuine. Joe Bostock had made out a transfer in blank of five hundred shares, in return for a loan of three hundred and fifty thousand dollars, due the 15th of December.

Unless the loan were repaid by that date, the control of the Missattbi would swing to the Bowyer interests. Wilton was almost stunned by the discovery. Joe had spoken as if his control were iron-clad.

He went home with Kitty and telephoned to Betts to come. They went through all Joe's papers again. Even Jim Betts was forced to admit that the transaction appeared regular. "Just watch them snakes, boy; that's all," he counseled. "I don't say Phayre forged Joe's signature and broke into his box, because it's a bigger risk than he's got the nerve to take, but I guess Bowyer wants the Missattbi mightily bad."

"Once I get the line across Big Muskeg, Jim, it'll be easy to raise enough money to pay off the loan," said Wilton. He arranged with Kitty to have all Joe's papers placed in the safe which held the engineering records, and sent up in it to Big Muskeg. Only Kitty and he knew the combination.

Two days later Wilton, now completely recovered, started for the there, principally engaged in hauling the cut timber. Wilton had taken Anderson from the cache and made him the foreman. The Swede was one of the best foremen in the line's employ, but had fallen from his estate owing to repeated lapses into drunkenness.

Wilton planned to reach Big Muskeg on Saturday night, in order to meet his men on the Sunday, when they would all be in camp. He took a new engineer with him, a young fellow named Digby, who had come with excellent recommendations from an English institute. He was particularly anxious to reach his destination, for he had had no letter from Molly since his recovery.

To his surprise, Wilton found the camp absolutely empty, though there were plenty of signs of an abundant population. But snores from one of the benches in the dining room betrayed the presence of a solitary occupant. A man was lying full length behind the table, his hat tilted over his face.

Wilton shook him to his feet, and disclosed Andersen, dead drunk. This foreman, widely awakened, stood reeling and blinking at him. "What have you got to say?" demanded Wilton, furious at this lapse on the part of the mad whom he had trusted. "I say—d—n poor whisky for a respectable camp!" hiccupped the Swede. "Where did you get it?" shouted Wilton, shaking him by the shoulders. "Over yander," answered Andersen, jerking his thumb in the direction of the portage. "Where are the men gone?" "Over yander," repeated Andersen, with another jerk. Wilton strode from the dining-room, his heart burning with indignation. Who had brought liquor into the camp? It was a thing dreaded by employers of labor, almost more than the occasional typhoid epidemics. While liquor was to be obtained within a radius of five-and-twenty miles, work would be practically suspended. With Digby at his heels, he strode fiercely out toward the swamp. Big Muskeg was less than three miles away by the new road which had been cut from the camp to the portage. Wilton's heart sank at the thought of the men in the factor's place with Molly. The laborers were chiefly Hunkles and Gallicans, docile as sheep when sober, but changed by drink into wild beasts. As they gained the opposite bank they heard wild shouts of drunken laughter, and, in a momentary interval, McDonald's angry protest—and then a cry from Molly. They ran at the top of their speed, Wilton leading. He burst into the store. It was filled with men, roaring and shouting; they were drinking from their tin pinnikins, which they had evidently brought designedly from the cook-house, and filling them from a hog-head of liquor that stood in the center of the room. The old factor, wedged in behind the counter, his right arm limp at his side, was pushing his left into the faces of the grinning Hunkles. Molly, at the door of her room, her lips parted, her eyes dilated with fear, was surrounded by a ring of men. One of them had his huge paws on her shoulders, and, standing a little behind, was trying to bend her backward toward him. Wilton took in the scene instantaneously through the thick haze of stinking tobacco-smoke. Everything swam before his eyes. With a hoarse roar of rage he leaped into the center of the crowd, caught the man who had his hands on Molly, and, spinning him round, dashed his fists into his face again and again until he was unrecognizable from the blood that covered his broken features. Screaming with pain, the man broke from him. Before the astonished Hunkles could collect their wits Wilton was in their midst again. He drove them before him; he snatched up a bottle containing a guttered candle-end, and, armed with this terrible weapon, brought it smashing down on their heads till he held only the splinters in his bleeding hands. Stupefied by this onslaught, the men ran for the door. But, jamming in the entrance, the rear-most turned and faced him. Three men set on him, dealing savage kicks, and rushing at him, head down, like battering-rams. One caught him in the pit of the stomach and sent him toppling against the counter. Instantly the whole mob was upon him with knives, screaming with rage. Wilton leaned against the counter, sick to his stomach, and striking out right and left, and felling a man at every blow. The respite enabled him to regain his feet, snatch up another bottle, and go to the Englishman's assistance. The Hunkles had no stomach for any more. This time they made the doorway, and ran at the top of their speed toward the portage, leaving Wilton and his assistant panting and exhausted in their wake.

Wilton was about to go back to Molly when suddenly he caught sight of two men who looked like Canadians slinking into the kitchen, which opened upon the side of the store. He recognized them instantly as the two fake policemen, Hackett and Tonguy, and it was evident enough that they had brought the liquor to the portage.

Shouting to Digby, he rushed after them. But they were through the kitchen and had gained the open before he could get within a dozen paces. Digby had evidently not understood Wilton's shout. "Good work, what?" he ejaculated. "D'you have much of this sort, Mr. Carruthers?"

"I don't know," answered Wilton. "It'll be part of our business to see that there isn't any more." "It wasn't on our school curriculum," said the Englishman thoughtfully. Wilton only glanced at him, and went into the store. Molly was on her feet before her father, who had sunk into a chair. The old man's face was ashen white, but, as Wilton approached, he opened his eyes and glared at him. "D—n ye!" he hissed with unimaginable fury. "This is your work! Get out of my store and never let me see your face again!" He turned, and began to shuffle away, dragging his palsied leg, his right arm dangling. Wilton fell back, and McDonald began to make his way upstairs.

Wilton went up to Molly and took her in his arms. "Molly—Molly, dear, it's all right now," he said anxiously. "Forgive me! I couldn't have guessed those men would have been wild beasts like that. I thought Andersen could keep them in control. Thank God, I came when I did!"

"You weren't to blame, Will," sobbed the girl; "and the men weren't. I don't think they would have done me any harm. It was the sight of you, Will, and the fight—I thought they had stabbed you—"

"I shall be in camp as long as it's open," answered Wilton. "Don't be afraid any more. I'll see that no more of this stuff finds its way here. And tomorrow I'll make an example of the worst of them that won't be forgotten."

He soothed her and soon brought her back to her normal condition. As he grew cooler he began to realize that, as Molly had said, the men were not to blame. In the morning few of them would have more than the vaguest remembrance of the affair. It was the alcohol, acting as a physical and moral poison on them.

"How did it happen?" he asked presently. "And how long have those two outlaws been in the camp?" "They came here a week ago, Will," she answered. "They were very insolent, and said that trouble was coming; they made all sorts of vague threats against you. They seemed to want to make trouble for us."

"They're here for some object, Molly," said Wilton. "It's to hinder the work, of course, but—there's more to it than that."

"I think they want to frighten us away from the portage, Will," said Molly. "Tom Bowyer has been here since I returned. He told me that my father was very ill; that he was using his influence to get him postponed, and that the best thing we could do would be to leave the portage as soon as possible."

"He wanted me to go to Winnipeg and study stenography, or anything else I chose. But I told him I couldn't take any steps without consulting you."

"Good for you, Molly, dear!" said Wilton. "He hadn't guessed how things were between us, for he changed instantly. He began to threaten me. He swore that if I didn't go with him, he would those two men came I connected their appearance with him."

"You were right," said Wilton. "But I don't think they'll show their faces here again. And I'll see you every day now. Molly, dear, why didn't you write to me? I hoped for a letter every day. Why didn't you write?"

"I wasn't quite sure—you'd want me to," she answered shyly. "You see, Will, it—our engagement—came about after I nursed you. And I thought, after you got back to Clayton—I thought—that I'd just wait."

"You thought that I might change, Molly?" cried Wilton. She nestled close to him. "Not really, Will. But I—I don't know, but somehow I—wanted to wait. I hated so to come back here, with you lying so ill, and I was so worried when Kitty didn't answer my letters."

"Kitty didn't answer you?" "Only once, when you were nearly out of danger. Perhaps that made me feel that—that I'd better not write to you, Will. But, of course, all her time was taken up with caring for you."

"She ought to have written you," said Wilton. "That doesn't sound like Kitty. And—Molly, dear," he continued, thinking of Kitty's projected stay at Big Muskeg, "I've got a surprise for you next month. Just about the thing that would please you best in the world."

And as she looked at him in inquiry, he drew her into his arms and kissed her again. "Promise me, dear, that you will never doubt my love for you," he pleaded. "I promise, Will," she answered, looking at him with shining eyes. "Never—never, dear!"

"I'll have to go, Molly," said Wilton. "Only until tomorrow, dear. And sleep quietly, because I'll give those men the lesson of their lives in the morning." (To Be Continued)

Your farm is a business, Mr. Farmer. It should be conducted as any other successful business if it is to pay a profit. And what successful business but has good banking connections?

The mechanics and management of your farm are for you to work out.

If you have a good farm and operate it efficiently, then you have a physical collateral as good or better than any business in the land.

Our doors are open just as wide and our banking facilities are given as fully to you as to any other business man in Washtenaw county.

Other business firms need financing, need advice, need co-operation in turnover of stock, and they come to us for that service. Why don't you?
