SCHOOLS START TUESDAY MORNING

Busy Week for Teachers and Kiddies of Chelsea

Chelsea public schools opened on Tuesday morning under promising auspices, and everything is moving along smoothly today.

Everything was in readiness for young America to enter the institution of learning and the first day was largely taken up with classifying the scholars and the usual routine work of beginning the school year. The total enrollment is 392, of which 132 pupils are attending high school. The ninth and tenth grades are crowded, both grades requiring double sessions, while last year this was only necessary in one of the grades.

The enrollment in the grades is smaller this year than last, the various grades containing pupils as follows: Eighth, 28; seventh, 27; sixth, 34; fifth, 32; fourth, 26; third, 24; second, 35; first, 29; kindergarten, 25.

MAKES CAMPAIGN VIA THE AIR ROUTE

S. E. Crawford, Congressional Candidate, Files Over Chelsea.

Making the rounds in an airplane is the modern method of campaigning, adopted by S. E. Crawford of Ypsilanti, candidate on the Republican ticket for nomination for congressman of the second congressional district in opposition to Hon. Earl C. Michener, now serving the district in that capacity.

The airplane sailed over Chelsea very low, just above the tree tops, about 6:30 and landed for a few minutes in a field south of town. Word had been received here that the candidate would speak to the people of Chelsea, but the air craft did not stop long enough for that purpose.

Small hand bills were dropped from the plane containing Mr. Crawford's platform. The bills were headed "Paul Revere rode horseback in 1776 because that was the fastest means of travel in his time. The airplane in which I visit you today illustrates the difference between Paul Revere's time and our own."

CEMENT PLANT AGAIN STARTS KILNS

Sufficient Coal in Sight to Keep Plant Active.

The Standard is pleased to report that the Michigan Portland Cement Company's plant at Four Mile Lake started operation in every department Tuesday. The plant had been closed for about a month on account of coal shortage. During the past two weeks they have received sufficient coal to fill their bins and they will be able to operate the plant for some time with the coal on hand and that in transit from the mines.

DEATH OF ABNER A. VANTYNE

Abner A. VanTyne, a resident of Chelsea since he was 18 years of age, and the son of Dr. and Mrs. Abraham VanTyne, died at his home, corner of Main and South streets, yesterday afternoon.

Mr. VanTyne was born in Seneca Falls, N. Y., August 19, 1843. He was united in marriage with Miss Mary F. Johnson and they have resided at the present home for many years. In his younger days he was a fur buyer, and conducted a livery business. Since retiring from his former business he has devoted his time to farming.

The surviving members of his family are his widow and one sister, Mrs. Hattie Northrop, of Chelsea.

The funeral will be held from the home at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon, Rev. E. A. Carnes conducting the services. Burial at Oak Grove cemetery.

26 TEACHERS AT

CHELSEA SESSION

Twenty-six teachers attended the preschool conference held in Chelsea Thursday conducted by Evan Essery, county school commissioner.

Those attending the Chelsea meeting were: Minnie Allyn, Helen Bradbury, Helen Brunninger, Esther Beach, Floyd Boyce, Bessie Barber, Lelah Ellsworth, Gladys Forner, Anita Gramer, Mrs. Iva Gates, Marie Gulnan, Elsie Heydlauff, Mrs. Florence Heim, Josephine Hoppe, Mrs. Vera Kalmbach, Edna Koenigster, Emma Lewick and Mrs. M. W. McClure.

CEMENT PLANT DESTROYED

Pouring kerosene on live coals in a range caused an explosion that set fire to the boarding house at the Michigan Portland Cement Co.'s grounds about 6 o'clock Thursday evening. The house and contents were entirely consumed by the flames. Brodus Boyd, a colored man, was badly burned and was taken to the U. of M. hospital at Ann Arbor.

CHELSEA LOSES IN 14 INNING GAME

Takes Victory From Dexter on Labor Day—14 to 5.

Sunday's ball game with Munith was an interesting contest that required 14 innings to decide supremacy. Chelsea took the lead in the first inning by bringing in two scores, shutting out their opponents in their half. In the second the tables were turned and the score tied. In the third Munith again scored and kept in the lead until the ninth, when the score was tied—6 to 6. Chelsea failed to score in the following five innings and Munith brought in the winning score in the 14th inning. The game was an interesting one. The batteries were Miller and Wood for Chelsea and Myer and Weeks for Munith.

Chelsea Swats Dexter. A good crowd witnessed the game in Dexter on Labor day, when that team was defeated by the score of 14 to 5. Eismen and Wood were the battery for Chelsea and received excellent support from the team as the score would indicate. Richmond pitched for Dexter.

WHITAKER-ROWE NUPTIALS

Pretty Home Wedding Solemnized Saturday Evening

A pretty home wedding was solemnized at 6 o'clock Saturday evening at the home of Mrs. Caroline Whitaker, in Sylvan, when her daughter, Almarine Alice, was united in marriage to Mr. Kenneth B. Rowe, in the presence of about 100 relatives and friends. Rev. Carl Ertel, pastor of the Salem German M. E. church, conducted the service and the bridal couple were attended by Mrs. Henry Glazier, sister of the bride, and Mr. Henry I. Glazier.

The bride was gowned in pale pink georgette over white satin. The bridal veil was caught with pink rose buds and she carried a shower bouquet of roses and gardenias. The bridesmaid was attired in coral georgette over white satin and carried Columbian roses. The house was beautifully decorated with garden flowers.

The wedding march from Mendelssohn was played by Miss Doris Bagge of Chelsea. Little Bernice Tuttle was the flower girl. Preceding the ceremony, Miss Enid Rohrer of Jackson, sang "Because" with Mrs. Revilla Barnes as accompanist.

After the wedding service, a three course luncheon was served by the following intimate friends of the bride and groom: Georgia Russell, Doris Bagge, Florence Fenn, Dora Chandler, Florence Palmer, Dorothy Haselschwerdt, Gerald Luick, H. W. Klammer, L. D. Alber and James Munroe of Chelsea, Elaine and Lyle Rohrer of Grass Lake, and Caroline Kuebler of Manchester.

The bridegroom is employed in the office of the Palmer Motor Sales. On their return from a wedding trip to Toronto and New York, the young couple will make their home at Cavanaugh Lake.

HARNESS RACING AT WASHTENAW FAIR

Exceptionally Good Program to Be Featured Three Days.

Harness racing will be featured on three days of the Washtenaw county fair, Ann Arbor, September 19 to 21, it was announced today. An exceptionally fine card of events is being worked out and horsemen from near and far are expected to compete for the $1800.00 in purses. As a result, harness horses are assured good racing.

Supt. W. D. Henderson has mailed out entry blanks and other advertising material to all horsemen within a wide area. Several inquiries have been received from horsemen who have raced on rival circuits who will ship their stables to the local fair this year.

The Washtenaw county fair is working in close co-operation with the horsemen this year, and is doing everything in its power to make the local meet a big one and start the new track off right. The program is being worked out now with the idea of furnishing fair visitors with high class racing.

Harness horse racing is in better shape as a sport today than it has been for many years, according to numerous letters received from horse men by Supt. Henderson. New conditions of racing worked out by the fair throughout the country the past two years, covering rules of entry, deduction from free entry fees and size of purses, have improved the game. As a result impetus has been given to breeding of harness horses and to racing.

HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT STOPS

ROAD MAINTENANCE WORK

The state highway department has notified the Washtenaw board of road commissioners that the men and teams that have been employed in maintaining the state trunk line roads, M 92, M 65 and M 23, have been laid off as there are no funds to pay for the labor. M 92 is the highway known as the Chelsea-Stockbridge road, M 65 is the Ann Arbor-Whitmore lake road and M 23 is the Chicago pike near Saline. M 92, especially that part of it through Chelsea, needs to have considerable work given to it to fill some of the bad spots in the drive.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

PRIMARY IMPORTANT

Every voter should be interested in the election, for it is at this time that candidates are nominated whose hands may be placed in the hands of state government, or national government. Among the candidates are some who have served well and faithfully in the past, and who should be given the honor of giving them a good vote. But the primary is the power to elect, and through it you can get the kind of representation you want.

Vote and vote—get the habit of it. For the ballot is the power to elect, and through it you can get the kind of representation you want.

CALLING BUILDING HALT.

Ingham county taxpayers have started proceedings to obtain a permanent injunction restraining the administrative board from proceeding with construction work at a number of state institutions on the ground that the money is being illegally expended as no appropriations were made to cover the expenditures. Judge Collingwood of the Ingham county circuit court has issued a restraining order returnable September 26, when the injunction hearing will be held. Construction work in the meantime is held up at institutions affected being Marquette prison, Michigan Home and Training School at Lapeer and the Industrial Home for boys at Lansing. It is quite evident that the high cost of taxation is making the citizens of the state and nation sit up and listen and watch more closely the expenditures of public moneys.

LIBERTY BONDS GROW.

Two years ago the various issues of Liberty Bonds were selling at five to ten per cent below par, but today they are at par or above. The condition of Liberty Bond issues is a matter of congratulation to every person, regardless of whether or not he is the possessor of any. The increased value of these bonds indicates the financial stability of the government of the United States, and this stability makes for good of all. Many persons of limited means who purchased bonds during the war were forced to sell, and for these persons there is sympathy that they could not retain their purchases.

There are others, however, who bought them for better opportunities for investment. They rejected the advice, and in many cases their money was entirely lost. The period through which Liberty Bond issues demonstrates anew the soundness of the American system of finance, and every person should be encouraged to invest in federal securities.

LINKING UP THE ROADS.

The federal highway act of last November is rapidly assuming form through co-operation of the state highway departments with the United States bureau for public roads. A system of national or interstate roads will comprise 175,000 miles, 7% of the entire public road mileage of the United States. Of this amount, the seventh will be composed of interstate roads, the remainder of state roads connecting state systems. The state and federal money is in hand or in sight to start actual work, and nearly all of the states now have submitted to the national bureau plans for the second road that will go into the interstate systems. And the bureau is going to it that the sections meet the state lines. No federal aid will be allowed on any highway which does not fit into the general scheme of a national or state system. The United States spent $600,000,000 on roads last year, and it was well invested. This new system of road building will mean re-shaping of roads that link up and lead somewhere and bring to all rather than a favored

Worse than the war.

In the past eighteen months there have been in the United States more automobile accidents, as a result of the war, than in the past year. Only our boys went west in the war, while in the last year 91,000 Americans died as a result of motor car accidents. The feature of these figures is that the knowledge that the war was over and the motor car was with us, and to increase in use, the heavy toll it takes in lives and property is going to stop the situation of the situation is more than to the city. The security per cent of the population is in the hands of the motor car, and under the situation of the situation is more than to the city.

BREVITIES.

Baxter—The public schools opened here Tuesday with a good attendance of both resident and foreign pupils.

Jackson—Of the forty jurors drawn to serve at the September term of the Jackson county circuit court seven are women.

Jackson—P. E. Allen of Napoleon reported to the police Monday evening that his Ford touring car was stolen from its parking place on Pearl street.

Napoleon—The electors of the school district here have decided to add $1,500 to the sum of $27,500 which was voted for a new high school building.

Stockbridge—Labor day was celebrated here Monday. A blue rock shooting contest in the forenoon and a baseball game in the afternoon were among the features of the day.

Blissfield—Elmer Beamer, one of the members of the board of directors of the Detroit Packing Co. and well known among stock buyers, was badly injured by being dragged on the stone road by an unmanageable calf.

Jackson—Inmates of Jackson Prison enjoyed a treat Labor Day when a program of various entertainments, lasting nearly all day, was given. Two orchestras, a minstrel man, a monologist, dance teams and singers were included in the program.

Blissfield—R. M. Beach, ticket agent at the N. Y. C. station, has been retired on pension. Mr. Beach has spent 42 years in continuous service at the Blissfield station. A. J. Crane who has held the position of freight agent for nearly as long a period, succeeds Mr. Beach.

Stockbridge—The following teachers have been engaged for our schools for the ensuing year: A. A. Bennett, superintendent; Miss Hazel Mears, principal; Miss Alice King, history; Miss Edna Campbell, English; Miss Pears, Latin and French; Miss Ellis, 5th and 6th grades; Mrs. Dewey Weiss, 3d and 4th grades; Miss Emma Smith, 1st, 2d grades and kindergarten.—Brief Sun.

Grass Lake—Sixty-five Grass Lake people, under the auspices of the Farmers' club motored to the Farm Bureau at Lansing and the Agricultural college at East Lansing Thursday, Aug. 24. They were splendidly entertained at both institutions. At the Farm Bureau the men were especially interested in the seed department, and the women were interested in the woolen blankets and suitings.—News.

Packman—The County Road Commissioners, realizing the dangerous condition of the curve north of town on the Howell road have rebuilt the roadway so that now drivers of autos and teams and foot passengers can see the whole distance of the turning point. Land was bought from F. H. Johnson, the hill scraped, a new roadway built and fenced and now "Dead Man's Curve," where one man lost his life, several people injured and many automobiles wrecked, is merely history. The people who use the highway between here and Howell will appreciate the change.—Dispatch.

Manchester—The announcement of the death at Tecumseh Tuesday of George Chaplin, a veteran of the Civil war, aged 77 years, calls to mind the Chaplin revolving hay rake, invented by Atlas Chaplin, father of the deceased. That hay rake, put on the market early in the sixties, was a boon to farmers who were short of help on account of so many of the boys and hired men enlisting, but inventive genius soon provided the riding rake which women could handle, and the Chaplin rake had to take a back seat. However, its use was continued by many farmers for several years.—Enterprise.

Ann Arbor—One thousand delegates and guests were registered here at the opening of the fourth annual convention of the American Legion, and Ann Arbor extended a royal welcome to the ex-service men, Mayor Geo. E. Lewis giving the address of welcome. Commander Menefee responded to the address of welcome, thanking the local Legion, citizens and business men for their hearty co-operation. Many prominent speakers took part in the program. The convention parade was held Tuesday afternoon after which a big complimentary dinner for Legion and Auxiliary delegates and guests was given in University gymnasium. The business convention opened yesterday morning.

Baxter—Citizens here filled the Methodist church Sunday evening to listen to their former townsman, Dr. Royal S. Copeland, health commissioner of New York City, who told his audience many interesting experiences of his recent trip abroad. Poland, he said, was a picture of devastation and disease and he was particularly impressed upon his audience the menace of foreign disease to America. In Russia statistics showed 30,000,000 cases of typhus in four years and the country is suffering from famine. In giving his ideas regarding the safeguarding of America, Dr. Copeland did not favor restricted immigration as a remedy, but advocated a change of methods. There should be made provisions for physical examination in their native country and there should be provided more ports of immigration here.

SEEKS TO SPREAD BETTER FARM IDEA

President Friday Tells Editors State Must be Organized for $50,000,000 Income Drive

East Lansing, Mich.—Speaking before the members of the Michigan Press association, gathered at East Lansing last Friday for the start of their two-day tour to Charlotte and Battle Creek, President David Friday of M. A. C. fired another shot in his campaign for increasing the farmer's income in the state. Not only the benefits of research and education must be utilized, but also the methods of propaganda, he declared. Up to the present time only one-fourth of the farmers of the state have been reached by the "better farming" gospel preached by the college, he estimated, while the other three-fourths, who need help the most, realize their need the least.

As an illustration of his point, President Friday cited the Liberty Loan drives during 1918, when the people, besides paying six and one-half billion dollars in taxes, were persuaded to subscribe for 12 billion dollars in Liberty Bonds. They did this he said, not because they were entirely convinced of the value or necessity of buying them, but because they were organized in groups for that purpose. The Michigan Agricultural College campaign for better farming may be "put across" in just the same way, according to President Friday. "We must get all the farming people into groups he said. 'Every part of every group must carry out its share of the program. If we can get them to do it, the rest will be dead easy. I am depending upon you to help put through that thing.'

In the other half of his address, he pointed out the necessity for farmers to appreciate the difference between various "economic units." In other words, they must learn to make use of the high-producing cattle, high-producing poultry, high-producing crops and high-producing seed in order to cut down production costs. He made it clear that he is not necessarily in favor of increased total production. He predicted, however, that as the population of the state increases its food needs will be met by a farming population no greater than the present one.

Chelsea People Give Credit Where Credit is Due.

People of Chelsea who suffer with weak kidneys and bad backs want a kidney remedy that can be depended upon. Doan's Kidney Pills is a medicine for the kidneys only, and one that is backed by willing testimony of Chelsea people.

Lewis Eschelbach, farmer, R. F. D. No. 2, Chelsea, says: "I was in pretty bad shape with kidney trouble. I wasn't fit for any kind of work as my back was so painful and there was a constant weakness and soreness just over my kidneys. My head ached and I was nervous. I didn't get any relief until I started taking Doan's Kidney Pills bought at Freeman's Drug Store. Three boxes of Doan's cured me, so that I am glad to recommend them."

PLAN ASSISTANCE FOR RASPBERRY INDUSTRY

East Lansing, Mich.—Rehabilitation of the raspberry industry in Michigan will be undertaken by federal and state authorities, following a survey of the industry in Berrien and Van Buren counties. It was found that the decline in production is due to unsatisfactory cultural conditions and to the prevalence of several diseases.

Plans formulated by the authorities call for: First, an increase in the number of inspectors and more rigid inspection by the state department of agriculture; second, acquainting the raspberry growers with the importance of better cultural and fertilization practices and with the serious nature of the several diseases by means of field meetings; and third, organizing the raspberry interests so they may be in a position to certify plantings which are disease free and true to variety name much after the fashion of the potato producers.

The survey party was headed by Dr. W. A. Taylor, chief of the bureau of plant industry. United States department of agriculture, and included representatives of M. A. C., the state department of agriculture and many other agencies.

The lively garages at Hammond, La., have served notice on the local public not to dare to have more than two weddings on any single Sunday, as they are not equipped to furnish cars for more. Presumably, this suggestion goes for those who had contemplated dying on Sunday as well as those intending to wed.

A man in a neighboring town won't give the newspaper any news because the editor doesn't happen to belong to the same church as he does. "If we both happen to get to heaven," says the editor, "the joke will be on him."

ALFALFA ACREAGE INCREASES 275,000

Millions of Dollars Added to State Land Value and Farm Income, Prediction.

East Lansing, Mich.—A remarkable increase in alfalfa acreage in Michigan is announced by Prof. J. F. Cox of the M. A. C. farm crops department, who declares that enough seed has been sold during the present season to plant more than 275,000 additional acres in the state. The extensive educational campaign carried on last year by M. A. C. is believed to be responsible.

The significance of this increase may be realized when it is considered that farmers estimate the value of land to be raised 20 to 40 per cent by the successful growing of alfalfa. On this basis the addition of 250,000 acres to Michigan's alfalfa acreage will increase the value of land in the state by $2,500,000. Prof. Cox points out also that an extra ton of hay per acre above other hay crops, worth from $10 to $15, which can be expected from alfalfa will add from $2,500,000 to $3,500,000 to the annual farm income.

"The dividends from alfalfa are cumulative," says Prof. Cox, "hence further returns in the way of more livestock, more economical feeding, and increased crop yields per acre following alfalfa may be expected. Certainly the extensive planting of alfalfa, sweet clover and clover is the logical thing under Michigan conditions."

"The season has been unusually successful from the standpoint of timely rains and a very large percentage of the new acreage will stick. It can also be expected that a marked increase will be made during July and August in the area seeded."

The Michigan State Farm Bureau seed department handled about one-fourth of the alfalfa seed sold. J. W. Nicholson, manager, reported the sale of 776,798 pounds up to July 1. Of this 248,798 pounds was Grinn alfalfa from Idaho or North Dakota.

W. J. WHITE AGAIN MANUFACTURING GUM

Once Millionaire Starts to Recoupe
Fortune—Known in Chelsea.

W. J. White of Cleveland, well known to many of the residents of Chelsea and Lima, is again in the business of manufacturing gum.

Mr. White was the man who furnished the funds that built the original buildings on the site of the cement plant at Four Mile Lake, now owned by the Michigan Portland Cement Co. His investment proved to be a losing venture and he was practically out of all of the capital that he paid for the land and buildings when the operations ceased and he left for his home in Cleveland.

Mr. White has been a member of Congress from the congressional district of which Cleveland is a part, and at one time was rated as being worth several millions of dollars which he lost by financial reverses and is practically penniless today.

In 1870 Mr. White started his business career by making chewing gum in his home and peddling it from store to store and in a short time his success was so great that he established a large factory and became one of the largest manufacturers of chewing gum in the United States.

Today he is trying to regain his lost fortune by repeating the same methods that he started out with in 1870, making his own gum and selling it from store to store in his home city.

RED CROSS DRIVE

The annual roll call for registration of Red Cross membership will be held this year from Armistice Day,
November 11, to Thanksgiving day, John Barton, Rayne, chairman of the American Red Cross, has announced.
Between these dates approximately 3,300 chapters, at home and abroad, will carry on a systematic canvass for support of the peace time work of the nation's officially designated volunteer relief society during the ensuing year.

As a result of last year's roll call, the American Red Cross has now a membership of 4,500,000 adults, Judge Payne announced, and about 6,000-000 school children enrolled in the Junior Red Cross. With the prospect of better commercial and industrial conditions, Red Cross officials look for a substantial increase in membership from the next call. The yearly membership will remain at $1 it was announced.

An innovation this year will be the uniform card-indexing of the millions of members. The stub of each card or a size handy for card case or pocketbook will be given each person enrolling as a certificate of membership.

HOG CHOLERA OUTBREAK REPORTED IN YORK TOWNSHIP.

Several cases of hog cholera have been diagnosed in York township during the past week or ten days. It is not unlikely that a number of other cases will develop, as herd owners were negligent in reporting the disease, due to threshing and silo filling, and the danger from spread is considerable. Every farmer should watch his hogs carefully and at the first appearance of any trouble call a local veterinarian or get in touch with the Farm Bureau office. A federal hog cholera veterinarian is now located at Jackson and is available for diagnosing suspicious cases of this disease. Vaccination is the only sure preventative and this has to be done before the hogs become sick in order to warrant saving them. Oftentimes the disease may be in a herd and yet not be observed by the farmer, but temperature tests may indicate trouble. Local veterinarians are in a position to take care of vaccination if they are promptly notified by the herd owner.

Transportation of sick hogs is in violation of the laws of the livestock sanitary commissioner and such persons may become liable unless they have the permission of the state department of agriculture in moving animals from a sick herd. Co-operation of herd owners is the only way that the disease can be prevented from spreading. Prompt report of all sick herds as soon as first observed and vaccination of other herds in the community will do much towards keeping the disease under control.
Most serious outbreaks usually occur during the fall months.—Saline Observer.

A total of 136,441 boys and girls were enrolled in agricultural extension clubs, in 1921, for training in various phases of live-stock work.
These junior farmers owned, last year
76,148 head of farm animals and 554-286 fowls, representing a total value of $3,605,176.

During the year ending May 31, over 1,500,000 bales of cotton were stored in warehouses licensed by the United States Department of Agriculture under the United States warehouse act.

Beverly—Falling down the main shaft of the Acme Plaster company's mine here, Cornelius Dorenbos, a miner, was killed instantly.

Houghton—Francis J. Webb, of Duluth, was elected president of the Lake Superior Mining Institute and the next meeting awarded to the Mesaba Range.

Lansing—Payment of hundreds of thousands of dollars by the state to road contractors will be held up pending the sale of $5,000,000 worth of highway bonds, the state highway commission has announced.

Gladstone—The mysterious disappearance of Matt Branisch, 26 years old, an Austrian mill hand, was solved when his body was found floating in Green bay. Branisch had been missing for more than two weeks.

Pontiac—Pontiac Methodists are making plans for the entertainment of 1,100 visitors for the Detroit Methodist Episcopal conference, September 12. An appeal was made to the general public to aid in housing preparations.

Dowagiac—Until recently those interested in marriage licenses had to go to Cassopolis, the county seat, to get them. Not so any more. Justice of the Peace Bilderback announced that from now on he is in the license business himself.

Grand Rapids—Reviving an annual custom abandoned several years ago, Grand Rapids lodge, No. 8, B. P. O. E., has arranged to hold the Elks' Mardi Gras the week of September 10 at Ramona park. Arthur Rosenthal is general chairman.

Lansing—An efficiency survey of every state department will be started immediately. Gov. Groesbeck has announced. It is planned to check up on all departments with the idea of eliminating needless waste of money and labor, the Governor said.

Lawton—Michigan's grape crop will be sold this year at a price more than $100 a ton lower than last, as a result of the war between growers and shippers in this section. The stable price this season will be $40 a ton, as compared with $143 last season.

Monroe—An abandoned 24-foot motor boat with no cabin or name was found drifting in Lake Erie, a half-mile east of Bolles Harbor, two and a half miles southeast of here. Men from Sheriff Gessner's office brought the boat ashore and the sheriff is investigating.

Gladstone—Delegates and visitors from the 25 Eastern Star chapters of the upper peninsula, comprising the Cloverland District association, held their annual convention here, August 30. About 300 attended, including Worthy Grand Matron Irene L. Getty, of Kalkaska.

Cadillac—Several Granges in Wexford County will attempt to prevent the board of supervisors from appropriating money to the county farm bureau. At the annual meeting of the bureau opposition to the present manner of employing a county agent was made by Granges.

East Lansing—Mrs. Louise H. Campbell, state director of home demonstration agents since December, 1920, was appointed acting dean of home economics of Michigan Agricultural College, by the State Board of Agriculture. Mrs. Campbell succeeds Miss Mary Sweeney, resigned.

Lansing—John H. Chase, 76 years old, treasurer of Lansing lodge, No. 23, F. & A. M., was killed by a Michigan Central freight train, switching over Kalamazoo street crossing here. It is believed he tried to cross between the cars. Chase had been a resident of Lansing for 40 years.

Harbor Springs—After being out on Lake Michigan for nearly 24 hours and drifting with the wind in a 27-foot launch in which the motor had gone dead, Ray Lamb, of Harbor Springs, and Alexander Thompson, Jr., of Harbor Point, were brought into Harbor Springs in tow of a light ship tender.

Muskegon—Costly floral offerings from county officials adorned the coffin of Albert Radley, "the most jailed man" in Michigan, when he was buried here. He had spent much of his time in recent years in the county jail for drunkenness and while sober had made fast friends of the sheriff and deputies. Radley's grandfather was a wealthy Englishman, who was at one time lord mayor of London.

Sault Ste. Marie—Mrs. Ruth Knudson and her brother, Clifford Harrison, waived preliminary examination before Judge John A. McMahon and were bound over to the September term of Circuit Court, on charges of grave robbery growing out of the disinterment of the body of Mrs. C. E. Fairchild from a grave on Drummond Island. No bond was specified in the judge's order and they were returned to jail.

Ann Arbor—Dr. Margaret Reynolds, a graduate from the medical school of the University of Michigan in 1921, has been commissioned a lieutenant in the U. S. army and is stationed at Ellis Island, where, with four other women physicians, she is examining the women and children immigrants. Dr. Reynolds was one of the brilliant women graduates from the University of Michigan medical school, and took many honors during her college career. She expects to locate in New York city, where she will be joined by her mother and sister.

Albion—In the first two weeks of its use, tourists from 14 states, from Oklahoma to Maine, have visited Albion's new tourist camp.

Mt. Clemens—Rev. Caleb Rutledge declared from the pulpit of the Methodist church, that if he was elected as sheriff his first work would be to close Lake Shore roadhouses.

Big Rapids—Glenn Rider, 35 years old, formerly of Stanwood, was electrocuted, when he came against a high tension wire while at work on a pole for a local electric power company.

Grand Haven—John Marjorie killed a robin more than a year ago, but escaped after a fight with Warden F. B. Salsbury. He was arrested on his recent return to the city and paid a fine and costs of $50.

Eaton Rapids—B. H. Custer, former mayor and commissioner of Eaton Rapids, and prominent in religious circles, died as a result of an attack of paralysis. Besides the widow, a brother, sister and son survive.

Ionla—Howard A. Lawrence, Ionla County fuel administrator, declares the fuel situation in Michigan is steadily growing worse, and calls on fuel burners to use wood whenever possible and thus conserve on coal.

Lansing—The average state tax rate for 1922 will be $3.45 a $1,000 worth of valuation, the state board of equalization announced, when it equalized the state valuation among the 83 counties on the basis of $5,000,000,000 total valuation. The average rate for 1921 was $4.08.

Detroit—Inventory of the estate of the late John F. Dodge, automobile manufacturer, filed in probate court, sets the grand total at $36,892,583.41, of which $1,049,228.68 is represented by cash on deposit in banks. Other cash in Mr. Dodge's possession at the time of his death was $1,124.

Flint—A new city ordinance prohibiting the display of fruits and vegetables out of doors is to be tested here. A fruit merchant who placed tomatoes outside and was arrested contends he has a right to continue the practice as long as hucksters carry such produce through the streets.

Owosso—Interurban bus lines will be forced out of business if city and villages through which they pass continue to adopt ordinances requiring license fees, officials of the National Auto Transit Co. told the city commission here. They called Owosso's license fees of $25 and $50 per car unreasonable.

Owosso—Masked with rubber bathing caps, pulled well down over their faces, two armed thugs forced Arthur Corey and Walter Street, of the Standard Oil company's branch here into the cellar and cleared the till of more than $500. The safe in the offices of the company was blown and looted by thugs a few weeks ago.

Saginaw—William Morrell, 35 years old, married, a well known farmer of Spaulding township, Saginaw county, was slain by John Bauer, 26 years old, on the Morrell farm. Bauer was captured as he was coming out of a corn field three miles from the scene three hours later. He gave himself up to the state police without a struggle and is lodged in the county jail.

Cheboygan—Trapped in the upper story of his farm home in Beaumont township, by flames which swept the place, John Herron, 73 years old, was burned to death. Efforts of neighbors, who heard the frightened yelps of Herron's watchdogs as they sought to escape from the furnace of flame, failed to reach Herron before escape was entirely cut off. All of the buildings on the farm were destroyed.

Petoskey—The practice of spearing game fish in inland waters was condemned in a resolution passed by the Alanson Sportmen club. The resolution was introduced by George W. McNabe, president of the Petoskey Gun club. McNabe went on record with a statement that the manufacture and sale of such spears should be forbidden by law. It also was resolved to investigate the Cheboygan locks through which fish are passing up.

Grand Rapids—"This will give me a chance to plunge back into my work. Financially, I'm broke, but Mrs. Trotter hasn't proven one of her charges, and while I am physically able, I can make another start." That was Mel Trotter's comment, when Judge M. L. Lunham filed his opinion in the separate maintenance action brought by the evangelist's wife, dismissing her bill of complaint, giving him a divorce decree but allowing her alimony, costs and attorney fees amounting upwards of $50,000.

Battle Creek—Lieut. R. R. Fox, air service pilot at Camp Custer, was commended by Brig. Gen. Moseley, camp commandant, for risking his life to save members of the Citizens Military Training Camp by plunging his plane nose down when making a forced landing. The field was covered with citizen soldiers when the plane's engine broke a vertical drive shaft 900 feet above the ground. The lieutenant so guided the descending plane that while speeding 30 miles an hour he jumped his machine over a lone horseman, turned to the left and plunged it nose down to earth.

Benzonia—Swimming without pause for eight and three-quarters hours, Miss Genevieve Rowe, 17, of Hillsdale, Mich., swam the entire length of Crystal Lake, near here, a distance of nine miles. Miss Rowe did not leave the water even to eat. Her only food was raisins, which were handed to her by persons who accompanied her in a boat. Miss Rowe took the raisins with one hand, used the other in swimming. She did not rest by floating. "You see, I don't float, anyway," she explained afterwards with a grin.

CHAPTER VII

Inside Information.

Wilton's first act on reaching the shack was to write a letter to Inspector Quinn, informing him of the presence of Hackett and Tongway at the camp, and telling him of their liquor-vending activities. In the morning he sent for Andersen, who appeared disheveled, humble, and repentant.

"I thank you send me back to the cache," the foreman began. "Wilton struck his fist on his desk. 'No, Andersen, I'm not going to send you back to the cache,' he answered. 'You'll hold your job, and you'll keep the men under control and see that there's no more whisky-peddling around here.'"

"By Jink, Mr. Carruthers, you yooost bet I will!" cried the Swede. "I done

"By Jink, Mr. Carruthers, you yooost bet I will!" cried the Swede.

all I could to drive them two fallers away from here. Last night I took one, drink, thinking I'd get the men away quietly, and then—I guess I don't remember no more," he ended apologetically.

"If you see them around here again, or hear of them, you'll let me know at once," said Wilton. "That's all, Andersen. Just try to live up to your job; I don't expect impossibilities. And tell the men I want to see them at ten o'clock."

At that hour he went out to inspect the laborers, who were lined up outside the cook-house. They were a dirty, disheveled lot, still showing the traces of the last night's dissipation. Wilton looked at them grimly. "Well, men, we've met one another already," he said. "I'm your new boss. You've had a taste of me, and you've seen something of my methods. I expect my workers to make good, and I expect to make good myself. And if any man brings liquor into camp, or sets his foot across the portage without my permission, I'll make him so that his mother wouldn't recognize him. Those of you who are dissatisfied can take your pay and go."

He went back to his shack. Digby, who had stood thoughtfully beside him during this colloquy, came in after him.

"There must be quite a considerable amount of this sort of thing, Mr. Carruthers," he inquired.

"What do you mean by 'this sort of thing'?" demanded Wilton sharply. "Making men so that their mothers won't know them," answered the engineer. "It may be all right for those who like it, but it wasn't on my curriculum. In England, when a man misbehaves, we take out a summons against him."

"Where'd you serve it?"

"That's a problem," admitted Digby. "I've thought over that. But—this sort of thing wasn't what I signed on for. That's all there is to it. If you'd told me what was expected of me, I might have signed with you or I might not. I'd have thought about it. I object to my rights being invaded. So I wish to offer my resignation."

"All right," said Wilton shortly. Then, feeling that the other had a sort of justice in his attitude: "It is rather tough to expect you to do police work," he acknowledged. "But I don't think there will be any more of it."

Digby looked at him in frank astonishment. "Why, I like it!" he said. "I had the time of my life last night. It's simply the principle of the thing. I don't mind a little whisky, but I don't my position clear."

"Not altogether," answered Wilton. "However, I'm sending some special mail down this noon, and you can go in with the sleigh."

Digby's defection was a serious blow, for it would be necessary to make arrangements for a man to take his place. However, Wilton decided to take no steps to that end immediately. He inspected the camp, saw that a good job was being made of the cleaning up, and went to look at Kitty's house.

This was built substantially of logs, and had already been half completed. It consisted of four rooms and an out-kitchen, and stood at the edge of the new road near the ridge, about five hundred yards from the nearest bunk-house.

That afternoon he made his first examination of the Muskeg. He took soundings in several places, but the peat seemed bottomless. Nowhere could he reach rock bottom, except within a few feet of the shore.

The underlying bed of peat was everywhere. He went two or three miles up and down the stream without discovering any way of bridging the Muskeg.

He was too busy now to see Molly more than an hour daily, but he always went to the portage for a short visit after supper.

The factor, who had learned to expect his coming at the same hour each day, withdrew upstairs before he arrived. Once or twice, when they came face to face, he turned his head away in sullen anger.

As a prospective father-in-law, McDonald seemed about as hopeless a proposition as could be conceived, but the time to consider his own and Molly's future would not come until the line was on its feet. Big Muskeg was the giant in the way. Often Wilton, staring down at its sullen depths from the top of the ridge, would feel it as a personal enemy, defying him to overcome it.

One evening Wilton was sitting in his shack, utterly disconsolate. He had sounded nearly every possible place without result, and even Molly had failed to cheer him. He saw no alternative before him except to return to Clayton and confess himself beaten.

Andersen tapped at the door and said that a man wanted to see him. Wilton rose up and, to his surprise, admitted Lee Chambers.

The engineer was roughly dressed and wretched-looking. He told Wilton that he had tramped in from Cold Junction, thirty miles southwestward, the present terminal point of the New Northern.

"I thought maybe you would give me a job," he said. "I've left Mr. Bowyer for good. We had some trouble. He wanted me to make a crooked report, and I would not do it. I'm through with him and his dirty schemes."

Wilton gave him a chair and looked him over coldly. He did not like Chambers, and he suspected that he was lying, and that Bowyer had sent him to him for his own purposes.

Digby's disappearance had left him in a hole, but that hardly justified his taking on Lee Chambers, though he was one of the ablest of his profession in Manitoba.

"Well, Mr. Chambers," he said, "I'm carrying on my work here on the lines established by Mr. Bostock. Joe Bostock had two maxims. The first was: 'Never lay off a man if you can help it.' The second was: 'Never take on a man who's left you.' And to be quite frank—I feel about the same way. You left the Mississippi, which had treated you well, and we have reason to believe you gave useful information to Mr. Bowyer."

"I swear I didn't!" shouted Chambers, springing to his feet. "Prove that, Mr. Carruthers!"

"I can't prove it," Wilton admitted. "I am giving you my personal feeling about yourself, in confidence."

"Well, it's a mighty poor sort of confidence," spluttered the engineer. "See here, Mr. Carruthers. I didn't come here to beg you for a job. I want one, and I can get one on any other line in Manitoba. But I want to even things out a little with Tom Bowyer first. He's played me a dirty trick, and I don't take things lying down. I know what your problem is. I know you can't cross Big Muskeg. Suppose I show you, eh? How'd you feel about it then?"

Wilton's cool glance never wavered. "I'm willing to hear more on the subject, Mr. Chambers," he said.

"Right! Before you'd even started to clear the bush I was up here sounding every yard of Big Muskeg clear along both shores. And there's rock bottom within two miles of here. Does that interest you, Mr. Carruthers?"

"It does," said Wilton frankly. "If I show you—"

"I need an assistant, and you can have the position as long as you want it."

Lee Chambers grinned. "That's good enough for me," he said. "I'll hold it right along. There won't be any other road would have much use for me after Tom Bowyer finds out what I've done to him."

Wilton gave Chambers a bed in his shack. The next morning they started out to sound the muskeg. A little more than a mile north of the portage, where the river dwindled to a mere trickle between two lakes in summer, was an uninviting bed of peat, covered with rotten slush; it was one of the few spots where Wilton had not sounded.

"You'll get bottom here," said Chambers. He swept his arm upward. "You see, I've figured it out like this: Those ridges are limestone. But the foundation's granite. You've noticed that, of course. The granite was there first. The limestone was forced up later through the clefts by subterranean action. It filled up the holes and hollows and spread up above the granite till these bluffs were formed. But the granite hasn't shifted. Here's where the granite bed extends across the muskeg. The mud filled up the cleft and spread across the foundation. But the foundation's there. Try her out!"

Wilton got bottom after two or three attempts. As Chambers had said, here was the foundation for the permanent way—not the best conceivable, and one that would require considerable ballasting, but undeniably the only route possible.

The next day preparations were begun for cutting the new road from the camp. The weeks passed swiftly. With mid-April came the breaking up of the ice. The ground hardened, and the first team of horses struggled into camp, drawing its freight.

The end of April saw Kitty's house completed and the furniture installed, and the first day of May brought Kitty.

She had telephoned Wilton to expect her, and she came in a rig, with a cart-load of trunks and packages behind. Within an hour she was ensconced snugly in the new cottage, with a camp cook detailed to look after her needs.

In Her Widow's Black She Looked Prettier Than Ever.

In her widow's black she looked prettier than ever, and absurdly young even to be married.

Wilton had supper with her, and all the while they sat together at the table his heart was almost too full for speech. He was dreaming of the future with Molly, a future in which Kitty shared. He pictured her happily married—for Joe would have wished that, and Wilton's loyalty to the dead man had nothing mawkish or sentimental in it.

Kitty tapped him on the arm, and he looked up to see her face in a charming smile, and mirth dancing in her blue eyes.

"What are you thinking of, Willy?" she asked.

"Kitty," he said, evading her question, "I think you are the pluckiest woman in the world."

"Why, Wilton?"

"To come up here and put up with these hardships, just because of Joe."

She blushed faintly and lowered her eyes. "It was you who let me come, Willy," she said.

"But you wanted to come because Joe would have liked it, Kitty. It's like you to hide your real feeling."

She laughed and made a little face at him. But after supper she grew serious as he spoke of the work and his success, about which he had written her.

Wilton asked her if she would walk over to the portage to see Molly.

"Tonight?" she asked doubtfully. "Not if you're tired, Kitty."

"I thought you might be content to sit here and chat."

"I should be, Kitty. But I told her I was coming. And I said I had a surprise for her. Can't you imagine how pleased she'll be to see you?"

"Why, of course I'll come with you, Willy," she answered.

And they strolled down side by side and made their way to the trading store. They went in and, at the sound of their entrance, Molly came running downstairs, stopped short at the bottom and stared at Kitty as if she had seen a ghost. She put her hand to her heart with a sudden gesture of fear.

"Molly, this is the surprise I promised you," said Wilton. "What's the matter, dear? Did we startle you?"

Molly shook her head and came quickly forward, swallowing as if something was choking her. The woman kissed each other. Then Wilton was aware that both were watching him.

All through the busy chat that followed he was conscious of that. He put the idea out of his mind with an effort, for he did not like subtleties of feeling that he could not understand. Yet there was a chilliness under the girls' chatter and laughter.

Presently Kitty said she was tired and must get back. Molly promised to come to see her as soon as possible.

Wilton and Kitty hardly spoke on the way home. When he left her at her door she turned to him and asked abruptly:

"Will you are still as deeply in love with Molly as ever, aren't you?"

"Of course I am, Kitty," he answered.

"Then I am glad, for your sake and hers," answered Kitty, and went quickly into the house.

Wilton walked back to his shack, a little puzzled. He had arranged to show Kitty the progress of the work on the following morning; but when he called for her he found her in the midst of her unpacking, and she put it off until the afternoon. Wilton laughed, chided her and went to his work.

She kept him waiting till three o'clock, when they started. He felt the pride of the artist as he led Kitty from one place to another. Locomotives were snorting, and lines of ballast trucks occupied the narrow-gauge that had been laid down to the water's edge.

In the ballast pit, from which the screech of steam was heard from morn till night, the great, unwieldy steam-shovel scraped its huge steel teeth into the face of the cut with the scrunch of an ogre's feast, and, turning, disgorged its plunder into the empty trucks alongside.

Kitty shuddered and pressed Wilton's arm. "It's like—it's like some living monster, Willy," she said. "Let's go on."

MINIATURE FARM SHOWS CROP ROTATION METHODS AT FAIR

In Thayer county, Nebraska, the county agent wished to show to as many farmers of the county as possible a system of crop rotation adapted to their needs. He selected the county fair as an opportunity of meeting perhaps the largest number of farmers at any one time. Secure from the fair board a 7 foot square space in a prominent part of the fair grounds, he laid out on it a miniature farm with fields in proportion to the 7 foot space. Corn, oats, and wheat were sown in the fields in time to be growing nicely when the fair opened; imitation trees were placed to show the location of the farm buildings and small models of farm buildings added. Over 15,000 persons visited the tiny farm during the fair, studying the plan, and asking questions about the rotation system.

They read the ads before they came to the fair and their interest was aroused.

Edward Clodd's Vision

By ERNEST LEVINE

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper-Union.

Edward Clodd had been dead for some time, but how long he did not know. He had always thought that death was the end of everything; and he had been so surprised to find himself alive after the mortal change that that absorbed nearly all his impressions.

He was in his own home. If he had strength to rise, he did not know how to exercise it. There he was, wandering about the rooms of his big house, and nobody took the faintest notice of him.

He had screamed, threatened, shouted, and his loudest cries made no impression on any one. He had shaken his wife violently by the arm, and she had walked through him as if he were not there.

It was dreadful to find himself a cipher where he had been the master, but it was worse to see the general joy at his disappearance. Milly had ceased to care for him for years; she had been suppressed by him, but she was rapidly picking up her personality in spite of her widow's weeds. There was an atmosphere of relief, almost of gaiety.

He had thought that, if there was a heaven, his good deeds would carry him there. He had been a cantankerous old man, but he had done good as well as bad. Joan he had turned out of his home for marrying young Saunders—but that was a father's right, and he had warned her first. Harold had been a good boy; he had left him all his money after his wife's death. Milly he had provided for suitably.

Harold must regret his passing, surely. Swift as the thought, he was transported to Harold's home. Harold was sitting with his wife, Doris; they were talking of him.

"It's a lucky thing the old man kicked the bucket when he did," Harold was saying. "I don't mind telling you now, Doris, I was up against it for fair. I lost my job last month—didn't tell you. If he'd known he'd have cut me off like Joan."

"Why?"

"Well—never mind why. A little trouble. Now we'll make the money fly, eh, old girl? A car for you, and we'll hit the high spots. Yes, it's the best thing that could have happened to us!"

Edward Clodd crept away. He had idolized the boy. He felt crushed, humiliated, heartbroken. Who was there who cared?

"Ah, there was Sadie, the little stenographer, who had been with him eight years. He had lent her two hundred dollars when her mother was ill. Surely she would remember—wouldn't she?"

Instantly he found himself in his office. There was another man in his chair—Simmons, his secretary, whom he had trusted with everything. Simmons and he had been excellent friends. He had been interested in Simmons, had picked him out of the rack of clerks.

"Yep, he was a good manager," Simmons was saying, "but too cranky for me. Between you and me, Sadie, I'd already arranged to go to Witherspoons. They jumped at me with my knowledge of the business. In a year's time we'd have put old Clodd on the blink. I'm sorry the old boy died before I got the chance to get back at him."

"What had he done to you?"

"Done? Kept me down to a miserable five thousand a year. Kept me here slaving for him after hours. I had my knife into him, and he'd have found it out if he'd lived."

"He sure was a mean old skink!" answered the stenographer. "Say, you remember that time my mother was sick? He lent me two hundred dollars—and made me pay it back. Stopped my salary, two dollars a week! I'm glad he's dead!"

Clodd crept away. If ever he had been bitter in life, he was more bitter in death. Those whom he had helped and trusted had gone back on him. What about his enemies?

Joan! In his bitterness of spirit he resolved to visit her, listen to what she was saying. How she must hate him!

Instantly he found her, but not in her poor little home. She was kneeling somewhere, but the room had grown misty, and he could not see anything except Joan's white face and tearful eyes.

"Daddy," he heard her say, "dear daddy, if only you could hear me! I love you! I understand you so well. I knew that underneath all the bitterness and disappointment you loved me. And I loved you, daddy! Can you hear me? I loved you!"

The sudden rush of answering love in Clodd's heart was like a cleansing flood. He groaned in spirit. If only he had known! If only there yet were time!

"Daddy! Can't you hear me?" Clodd opened his eyes. His room, his own room swam round him. He saw the amazement on Joan's face. She screamed.

"He's come to himself! Mother, quick! Daddy's alive! The doctor said he'd live if ever he came through the crisis!"

"Joan!" whispered Clodd feebly. Very weakly he put his arm about her as she knelt beside him.
