Merchants Here Leading in Low Prices—Survey Shows Chelsea Better Equipped Than Ever to Look After Your Wants.

Chelsea again takes the lead over her neighboring cities as the trading center in this section of Michigan. This summer more than ever before has trade from the outlying territory increased. The advent of good roads, of bargain days, of larger stocks, of brighter stores and better service have been felt by the business houses here.

And more and more are efforts being made by our business men to keep this trade on the increase. They are making prices more attractive, are putting larger and even more up-to-date lines and offering to the buyer service unequalled before. The latest move on the part of the business places is to meet or even beat prices of outside competition wherever possible. And in most every case the careful buyer has found by buying at home, he is not only getting things for the same money or less, but is getting the personal service of the business men and that shopping is really a pleasure here.

It is our sincere belief that Chelsea possesses every requirement to fill the wants of all the people of this section and we trust the following presentation of the business places here will merit the careful consideration of those who live within this trading radius.

Make Chelsea your trading center. Meet the business men. Ask them to give you prices and compare them with outsiders. You'll find it pays to trade here.

FORD SALES AND SERVICE FINEST IN LAND.

Chelsea can boast of one of the finest Ford Sales and Service buildings in the county. Under the guiding hand of L. G. Palmer this business has certainly grown and prospered. Mr. Palmer at all times keeps on hand all parts for the Universal car. He also sells the Fordson tractor with every attachment which helps the farmer bring forth the record crop.

Mr. Palmer typifies the Ford dealer spoken of by one writer in a late issue of the Fordson Farmer. It runs: "I am the Ford Dealer. I stand among you as a personal representative of an industrial organization that has done much to make life more worth living in the city and on the farm and that has done more to make the word 'service' have life and breath and action than any other."

"I add to the joy of living for millions by making it possible for them to enjoy life more through the chance to travel at a price more within the reach of the most humble."

"I make farm life more worth living by making it possible for the farmer to raise bigger crops, at less expense, and at the same time permit him to do away with much of the drudgery of farm work. I am engaged in selling Ford cars, trucks and Fordson tractors." "I am the Ford Dealer."

ing by making it possible for the farmer to raise bigger crops, at less expense, and at the same time permit him to do away with much of the drudgery of farm work. I am engaged in selling Ford cars, trucks and Fordson tractors." "I am the Ford Dealer."

AUTHORIZED WESTINGHOUSE BATTERY SERVICE.

The motor car drivers of Chelsea and vicinity can indeed feel fortunate in having an authorized Westinghouse station in their midst. And Chelsea especially lucky. For Chas. Bycraft the progressive manager, is an expert in his line. Mr. Bycraft is thoroughly familiar with every angle of the battery and repairing business.

People have come to know of the famous Westinghouse battery. They have also learned to place explicit confidence in Mr. Bycraft's judgment and in his ability to rebuild and repair batteries.

At the present time there are 1700 Westinghouse service stations through

EDITORIAL COMMENT

WHY NOT GET INTO THE GAME?

Elections—primary, national, state and municipal—all of them cost money—good money that the people themselves dig out of their jeans at tax time. Why will not the people get this idea into their heads and turn out and use the ballot?

Take the primary election of Tuesday. Out of 1650 registrations only about a quarter vote was cast. What's wrong? Just lack of interest and an inclination to let the other fellow do it. Such a vote as was cast Tuesday does not show the will of the people, for the majority remained away from the polls. In the state the political ring or machine was busy, the office holders were busy and those expecting public jobs were busy. The ring carried the day in the state as was expected, because organization is bound to win over unorganization unless the people themselves, get busy.

Then, look back at the recent municipal election, when an important question was submitted to the people. Only about one-third of the eligible voters turned out, the others remaining at home. The majority of those voting at that election favored discontinuing the operation of a plant that was reported as steadily losing money. How did the other two-thirds feel about the proposition? Why didn't they express themselves? Just because of lack of interest. "But why should they lack interest? Isn't it their business—their money that is being used to run the municipality? Why not wake up and take an interest in the public conduct of your business, from the municipality, county and state to the national?"

THE COUNTY FAIR

World fairs and state fairs have come to be looked upon generally as institutions for disseminating and gaining knowledge. The world fairs tell us what is accomplished in the line of production and manufacture of the various countries and nations of the world and the progress in civilization made and new ideas developed. The state fair is of an educational nature in that it tells us what is being accomplished in the different sections of our great commonwealth along the line of agriculture, horticulture, stock breeding, manufacturing, etc. These two fairs reach far along educational lines if the people attending them will use their faculties in proper observance of what is about them.

Closer to home is the county fair, also an institution of an instructive nature, together with the advantage of co-mingling of a people of a smaller neighborhood. At the county fair the farmer sees what his neighbor is doing along agricultural lines. He learns that his neighbor has made a success in breeding certain live stock. He is not looking at exhibits from foreign nations or different sections of the state, but at what is produced in his immediate neighborhood. And one of the greatest values of the county fair is that people of a community get together and rub elbows. They do not mix with a strange crowd, but with people they know.

The county fair is not an institution to benefit the farmer alone, however. There are many interesting features for the business man, the housewife, the preacher and lawyer, the school teacher and pupil. Looking at the county fair from this standpoint we would state that it is an institution that should by all means be supported by the people of the community. Attend the county fair and assure for it a future healthy growth.

AMERICA.

(By F. A. Perry)

America is an IDEAL, a GOAL, a STANDARD.

America was an ideal when the Pilgrim Fathers landed on these shores. America was an ideal when the Declaration of Independence was signed by representatives of the colonists.

America was an ideal when the Constitution of the United States was drafted and adopted by the Fathers of our country.

America was an ideal when Abraham Lincoln saved the nation from dissolution.

America is an ideal today, though often threatened and defamed by its enemies.

And every day finds a fuller and better realization of the American Ideal.

What then is the great American Ideal?

It is:—

The promotion of the common good.

Obedience to the established laws.

Belief in the sovereign will of the majority.

Insistence upon a square deal and fair fight.

Active participation of every citizen in politics.

Dignity of honest toil and full reward for labor performed.

The liberal education of every child.

The opportunity to succeed for

WORTH TALKING ABOUT.

(By F. A. Perry)

Radicals of all sorts, who are today over-running America, seem to think that they have a cause worth while, so they speak, print, and scatter broadcast their messages of revolution. They work and give freely of time and money to promote class consciousness, and to sit up industrial strife.

Why then are the rest of us so quiet? Why not talk America a while? Is it not worth talking about? Our glorious history—our righteous laws—our educational opportunities—our unbounded charities—our increasing wealth—our happy homes. What! with unnumbered blessings and privileges within reach of all, have we not something worth talking about?

BRIGHT IDEAS OF YOUTH.

Two Chelsea boys were delivering papers one evening last week, when a new idea was sprung upon the writer. "Say," said one kid to the other, "I'm going to leave two papers at this house tonight, then I won't have to stop here tomorrow night." This lad must have heard the motto, "Do not leave for tomorrow what can be done today."

On the opening day of school a Chelsea lad was heard to tell a merchant: "Say, I've got to get up earlier now. You know, I've got to go to school now." Lucky lad! How many of us would give worlds to be able to go back to the good old days when such a speech would be appropriate.

BREVITIES.

Grass Lake—The ball team from this place went to Clinton Sunday and won by a score of 3 to 2 a persistently contested game. Many rooters accompanied the team.

Brooklyn—The public schools commenced Monday with a total enrollment of 218 pupils. The high school numbered 77, grammar room 55, intermediate 35, and primary 51 pupils.

Milan—Earl E. Poll, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Poll of this place, was united in marriage with Miss Edna V. DeForest of Adrian Thursday evening at the Methodist parsonage in that city.

Adrian—Chas. Helm, proprietor of a trucking business, was doubly fined Thursday. He paid $1 fine and $5 costs for parking a truck in city streets without proper lights displayed and $5 fine and $12 costs for hauling a heavier load than permitted by the state laws.

Tecumseh—Winner of the essay contest conducted by the Knights of Pythias, Miss Bernice I. Austin, of Tecumseh, now is attending the state convention of the K. of P. at Charlevoix as a guest of that organization. Four thousand students of the state took part in the contest.

Adrian—Orva Ottgen, living two miles west and two miles north of here, owns a prize herd of 30 Holstein cattle that came to grief Thursday, being suddenly taken ill, two of the valuable herd dying despite the efforts of two veterinarians. They had been turned into new pasture containing a quantity of sweet corn.

Hudson—Seeing a half water melon lying on a shelf in the cellar of his home, James Inman helped himself. Shortly after eating the melon he was taken violently ill, but a hurried visit to a physician's office saved his life. His wife had put some rat poison on the melon to kill rodents and was absent from home when Mr. Inman ate the melon.

Saline—Dr. Gregg escorted a few farmers to Detroit abattoirs one day last week. His guests were a little skeptical before the trip in regard to tuberculosis in cattle, but returned fully convinced the government and state are conducting a worthy movement in the eradication campaign.—Observer.

Ypsilanti—Justice M. B. Stadtmiller Friday morning paid to the city treasurer $371.50, the total amount of fines, costs and fees collected by him during the month of August. This is the largest sum turned in by him during any month of the year. For the past eight months Justice Stadtmiller has turned over $1,426.34.—Record.

Manchester—Rev. Fredrick Hewitt, who recently purchased the old Walker tavern at the junction of the Monroe turnpike with the Chicago turnpike, south of Brooklyn, perhaps better known as Cambridge Junction, and repaired the house, which in pioneer days gave entertainment to many distinguished men and women, has now purchased the brick tavern across the road of George Burton, formerly of Norvell.—Enterprise.

Clinton—The hardware business of A. B. VanDeMark & Co., conducted by A. B. VanDeMark since 1897, has changed hands, Fred VanDeMark, son of the owner, purchasing the business. This is one of the oldest established businesses in Lenawee county. The store building was erected in 1834 and is in an excellent state of preservation. The hardware store was opened in this building by the grandfather of the present owner in 1865.

Brighton—The maniac prowler or wild man has evidently left Livingston county and the people are safe. Friday, Sheriff Teeple and his force were called to Losco to help locate and capture a wild man who was reported as entering houses and scaring people out of their wits and doing many unseemly acts. Unable to capture the man, although seen at times and fired at eight or ten times with guns, blood hounds were procured and put on his trail, but the man escaped to Conway and finally across the line into Locke township.—Argus.

Ypsilanti—The total enrollment in the public schools of Ypsilanti was 1,225, an increase over the enrollment of last year. The senior high school shows the largest increase, with an enrollment of 450, as compared with 405 last year at this time. The junior high shows a slight increase, with 160 enrolled. This division includes the seventh and eighth grades.

Grass Lake—School began Monday for the fall term with the following corps of teachers: Supt., C. W. Price; principal, Vera Haven; history and English, Velma McCreary; languages, Mrs. Herbst; seventh and eighth grades, Bertha King; fifth and sixth grades, Mrs. Close; third and fourth grades, Nina Hilton; first and second grades, Mrs. Craft; music, Ruth Abbott.—News.

Jackson—The intense heat took its first toll in Jackson Thursday afternoon when David Lazebnik, aged 55 of Detroit, was stricken while working in the yard at the home of his son, Samuel Lazebnik, 524 North Jackson street. Mr. Lazebnik had suffered some time from heart trouble. Besides his son, whom he was visiting, he leaves his wife, Jessie, one son and two daughters, all of Detroit.

Ann Arbor—Farrand Reighard, 18 year old son of Prof. J. E. Reighard of Ann Arbor, was shot by a negro Friday morning near Michigan City, Ind. Mr. Reighard, with his brother, John, of Minneapolis were camping for the night while on their way to Minneapolis. A negro, giving his name as Earl King of Chicago is held as a suspect. Robbery was the motive. The remains were brought to the home at Ann Arbor, where funeral services were held Tuesday.

Dexter—Two barns in Dexter township owned by Closser brothers of Detroit, and containing 900 bushels of oats and a quantity of hay were totally destroyed last week Wednesday afternoon by fire after they had been struck by lightning. Sixteen pairs of double harness were destroyed also. Edward and William Closser were in one of the barns at the time the lightning struck. They were slightly stunned but escaped unhurt. The barns were partly covered with insurance but all the property was not.

Tecumseh—In the current issue of a magazine devoted to articles of interest to persons engaged in commercial enterprise appears an article by Sir Harry Gordon Selfridge, London merchant prince, which discusses differences existing between American and European methods of distribution, applying particularly to department stores. Mr. Selfridge is a former Tecumseh resident having clerked in a local store previous to his going to Jackson and to Chicago, where he was a member of the Marshall Field organization.

Tecumseh—Workmen employed on the La Plaisance Bay turnpike at the intersection of Chicago and Evans streets have unearthed the roadbed of the Jackson branch of the old Palmyra and Jacksonburg railroad, constructed in 1836. The rails consisted of a wooden beam faced with a strip of iron, which according to pioneer recollections was one of the perils of early day travel because occasionally, the metal strips became loosened and curling upwards penetrated the floors of the coaches. The rails forming the crude train laid by early road builders make an interesting contrast with the 110 pound T rails now employed on the Grand Rapids division of the New York Central railroad which runs over the original roadbed of the Palmyra and Jacksonburg road.

Howell—The blasting of a ditch with tributaries totaling close on half a mile long, with dynamite, all to be done by throwing on the switch, which, no doubt, will be the greatest feat of its kind yet on record, will take place on September 21st on the Puritan farms, five miles northeast of Brighton. County Agent C. L. Bolander, is making arrangements now for a whole day of demonstrations in ditch, stone and sink hole blasting on that day, and Mr. Dunk, the owner of Puritan Farms, has ordered a ton of dynamite to be used in the demonstrations. This, no doubt, will be very spectacular, as the ditch through the marsh will run in the shape of a half square with considerable elevated area in the center where the crowd can observe the whole performance with safety.—Democrat.

The menu consisted of roast pork, mashed potatoes, brown gravy, apple sauce, pickles, salad, coffee, rolls, ice cream and cake—all prepared in an appetizing manner.

Following the feast a program was carried out as given below:

DEDICATION OF NEW FAIR GROUNDS

Plans Progress To Make Event a Real Feature.

It is becoming rapidly known that the new fair grounds, besides having unusual adaptability for the usual requirements of a fair is a place of unusual beauty with possibilities which, when developed, will bring thrills of pride to every real citizen of Washtenaw county.

In order to carry out the spirit of a real county fair, it was decided at a special meeting of the fair board to name the different avenues, groves and beauty spots for the various cities and villages of the county. This plan will not only give every citizen a personal interest in the fair grounds but will provide definite meeting places for people planning to meet at the grounds.

The names adopted for the various places are as follows:

For the main avenue, from the main entrance to the grandstand "Ypsilanti Avenue". Main avenue from entrance to bridge, "Chelsea Avenue". The tourists camp "Ann Arbor Tourist Camp." The fountain in main avenue, "Saline Fountain". The ravine, "Dexter Dell". The rustic bridge, "Bridgewater Bridge". The square at the intersection of Chelsea and Ypsilanti avenues and main entrance, "Manchester Square". The grove in the center of the grounds, "Milan Grove".

As fast as opportunity presents itself, it is planned to provide for the names of the smaller hamlets. Part of the dedication service will be the placing of appropriate markers on each of the above designated places, the presentation being made by Governor Groesbeck and the acceptance by the mayor or president of the various places.

"DON'T TELL EVERYTHING" Story of Big Outdoor Picture Production Proves Lying Bad Policy.

Have you as a picture fan ever come across these lines?

"What a tangled web we weave When first we practice to deceive."

This might be the text of "Don't Tell Everything" which comes to the Princess Theatre Wednesday and Thursday, September 20 and 21. It is a Paramount picture with Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson and Elliott Dexter in the feature roles.

In the story the handsome Cullen Dale, played by Mr. Reid, is ensnared in a trap of his own making when he tries to deceive the girl he is engaged to, in some cases, and tells her the truth in others. The result is that she doesn't believe him at all and when the other woman comes into the story, is jealous. There is a battle of women's wits and a self sacrificing friend (played by Elliott Dexter) who tries to help Marian (Miss Swanson) to win out against the intriguer, played by Dorothy Cummings.

There is a polo game, a scene in a luxurious mountain lodge, some love scenes that are most entrancingly real, a lot of good wholesome comedy and withal the spirit of the out of doors. The climax is a complete surprise.

This is the type of picture that makes you want to hunt and golf and play polo and be an outdoor type. If you can't or if you can—you'll enjoy the picture. Sam Wood was the director.

TWO CHELSEA HOMES BURGLARIZED SUNDAY

Four Polish Boys, Claiming Detroit Residence, Arrested.

Four Polish boys, aged from 16 to 19 years, who were "bumming" their way on a freight train from Jackson to their home in Detroit, Sunday, left the train when it took the siding near the Methodist Home and burglarized two homes during the absence of the families who were attending the morning services in the churches here.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Sibley the boys secured a watch, fountain pen, magnifying glass and a pair of shoes. Most of the stolen wares belonged to Harry Knickerbocker, who was in the employ of Mr. Sibley.

Going across the fields from the Sibley home the boys entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Hafner where they secured a watch, pocket-book and a number of old coins.

Deputy Sheriffs, L. G. Palmer and E. P. Steiner were notified of the thefts and about four o'clock in the afternoon they captured the boys in the cornfield on what is known as the Adelaide Westfall place in Lima, now owned by John Kalmbach and occupied by Otto Trinkle.

When the boys were captured one of them had on the pair of shoes stolen at the Sibley farm and the balance of the property was recovered. The boys claimed that they were employed in the Kelsey Wheel Works in Detroit. They were taken to Ann Arbor by the officers who captured them.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Hart—The farm barns of Fred Luther adjoining this town were struck by lightning and together with contents were totally destroyed with a loss of $13,000.

Albion—Sixty members of the Warner family attended its seventy-seventh annual reunion at Montcalm lake. Mrs. Mandana Warner, 95, was the oldest person present.

Saginaw—Burns resulting from a fall into a tub left on the floor by his mother, may bring death to Jack Blohm, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund C. Blohm, physicians here.

Battle Creek—After being unconscious in his home for three days following a stroke of paralysis, Miss Mary N. Hawgood, 33 years old, was discovered by her sister and taken to a local sanitarium.

Traverse City—Jesse George won the woman's club prize of $10 and the title as champion ragweed puller in the city. In an effort to eliminate ragweed the Woman's club enlisted school children to pull the plants. The champion turned in 63,600 of the weeds.

Iron Mountain—According to announcement made by the Cleveland-Cliffs company, operation of its iron furnace and chemical plant at Kipling will be resumed by October 15. The plants will employ about 250 men. They have been closed for two years.

Ann Arbor—Dr. Robert L. Harkness, of Houghton, was chosen commander of the Department of Michigan, American Legion, at the fourth annual convention here, for the fiscal year ending October 1, 1923. Ironwood was chosen for the 1923 convention.

Port Huron—Harry Dale, 17 years old; Dean Livingston, 17 years old, and a 15-year-old boy are under arrest charged with several automobile thefts. The boys have been stealing machines for joy ride for several weeks, later abandoning the autos, it is alleged.

Ypsilanti—The large barn on the farm of Marion Merrill, Ypsilanti township, with 300 tons of hay, seven horses, and a large quantity of wheat and oats, was burned to the ground. The fire was caused by spontaneous combustion. The loss will probably reach $20,000.

Dowagiac—Ada Powers, 3 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Powers, slipped from the railing of Cass avenue bridge, fell into Dowagiac river and was drowned. A brother, Nelson, 4 years old, and the girl were hanging over the railing when the tot lost her balance.

Kalamazoo—John Griffin, of this city, is the first man ever arrested in Kalamazoo county, under the statute which forbids driving away from an accident without stopping to offer aid. Griffin's car is said to have struck and severely injured occupants of another machine, a few miles south of the city. Griffin asserts he did not know that he had hit another car.

Grand Rapids—Recovered from nearly fatal burns received in a boiler explosion in which a fellow workman was killed, Nurski, 34, waded into the Thornapple river for a swim and drowned in sight of his wife and half hundred other picnickers. Nurski, who recently returned to work after his narrow escape in the explosion, had not taken a swim in years. The body was recovered by clam diggers.

Hastings—Mrs. Lora Lavery and her stepdaughter, Beulah Hanks, of Orangeville, strangely disappeared following the suicide of the first woman's husband, John Lavery. Barry county officials were unable to learn where the two women had gone following their release from the hospital here. Both were injured severely by Lavery, who attacked them with a hammer before he shot himself, but they recovered quickly at the hospital.

Rochester—Pinned under his overturned car for four hours, John Robinson, of Rochester, was losing consciousness when rescued by a passing motorist. Robinson, alone, was driving into the city when his car went into a ditch two miles south of Rochester about 1 a. m. The weight of the car held him fast in the soft mud at the bottom of the ditch. A farmer, driving to the city about 5 o'clock, heard moans at the roadside and, investigating, found Robinson.

Pontiac—F. A. Neuman, Detroit man, who pleaded guilty to a charge of assault and battery on two girls in a Lake Orion club, as a sequel of raids at that resort, has taken an appeal to circuit court from his conviction. He drew a 60-day term in jail without a fine. Neuman's appeal is based upon the technicality that the complaint against him was signed by a deputy sheriff and not by the two girls who accused him and another man of attacking them while they were guests in the cottage. He was released on bail, pending trial.

Lansing—Construction work now being way on buildings at state institution is not to be stopped by the injunction granted Lansing taxpayer in the Ingham county circuit court.

Judge Collingwood, by whom restraining order was issued, said he did not contemplate interference with work now under way, but he would restrain the state aid board and disbursing of the state from incurring further expenses in connection with the building on the Muskegon—Howard E. Galvin, assistant secretary of the Muskegon Chamber of Commerce, has been named acting secretary until an appointment is made to succeed James E. Coad, who recently resigned.

Detroit—Eleven park sites, comprising 627 acres, are to be presented to the State of Michigan by Dodge Brothers, Inc., as a memorial to John F. and Horace E. Dodge. Eight of the sites are in Oakland County and one in each of Livingston, Macomb and Monroe counties.

Detroit—Dodge Brothers, Inc., have announced that work will begin immediately on an eight-story addition that will cost in the neighborhood of $1,500,000. The new building will contain approximately 500,000 square feet. It will be 400 feet long, and will be used entirely for manufacturing operations.

Owosso—A bomb hurled into the yards of the Ann Arbor railroad here, endangered lives of workmen. It tore a hole in the yards, falling a few feet clear of the turn table and some distance away from the shops. Two engines passed over the place where the bomb fell, a few minutes before the explosion.

Cedarville—Upper peninsula lumber on are planning an appeal to the state for aid in fighting a devastating worm that is threatening the life of all the birch growth in this section. According to forestry experts the plague will ruin hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of standing timber this year.

Hart—Swift Lathers, publisher of The Mears News, nearly was killed. He was riding on a truck to Pentwater and when near Pentwater Lake the truck went too close to the edge of the bank and sunk into the mud and tipped over pinning Lathers beneath it. He was rushed to the Ludington hospital in an unconscious condition.

Kalamazoo—Kalamazoo is enjoying the lowest priced milk of any city in this section of the United States. As a result of a fight between producers and distributors, milk has been lowered from 11 to 7 cents a quart by the Dairyman's Milk company, a firm controlled by producers. The 7-cent price is 3 cents lower than pre-war prices.

Grand Rapids—Detroit carried off the honors at the Biennial Michigan convention of the Choral Societies affiliated with the American Polish National alliance, when the male choir of that city took the first cup in the singing contest. The Bay City women's choir was second and the Grand Rapids choir, the Lutna Halka, was third.

Ironwood—Nine business places and two dwellings were destroyed by fire at Bergland, Mich., northeast of here, the fire wiping out all but two dwellings in one block. A dry good store, barber shop, two pool halls, a physician's office, restaurant, drug store and hotel burned. The fire started at 3 a. m., and the bucket brigade fought it until 6.

Flint—Resignations have removed three more officers from Flint's police force. The men quitting are: Albert Schewe, lieutenant of detectives, who is taking a more lucrative position at Port Huron; Detective William Brittain, who goes with the General Motors corporation; and John Chisholm, chief mechanic, who will enter the garage business.

Lansing—The annual financial statement of the Ford Motor Co., filed with the secretary of state shows total assets of $409,820,132.90. These include cash on hand and in the bank, $145,985,869.31; plant, land, improvements, buildings, fixtures and structures, $81,626,016.03; machinery, tools and equipment, $39,581,079.343, and good will, $20,617,985.82. The statement is of June 30, 1922.

Sturgis—Mrs. Claude Curtis, appointed by the State Highway Department to count traffic on State Trunk Line M-23, reports that on this highway, which follows the old Indian trail from Port Dearborn, now Chicago, to Detroit, she counted 1,025 vehicles in one day. Mrs. Curtis' mother-in-law, who is a Sturgis pioneer, recalls that the biggest day's traffic in her time was when Chief Blackhawk and 200 braves went over this route on their way to Fort Malden, in Canada, to receive their annuities.

Lansing—"I have been a thief for 57 years, but I am going to quit now. I am retiring from a life that does not pay, and I am going back to live with my sister in Chicago until I die." Thus spoke Thomas Coleman, alias "Doc" McKagen, Edward Casey, etc., who had been picked up with two others by Lansing police. The veteran pickpocket is said to be about 70 years of age. He admitted he spent 25 years of his life in prisons. The trio had just arrived in Lansing and registered at a local hotel when they were taken into custody.

Diplomacy—"When Mrs. Peckton lays down the law, do you acquiesce?" "Yes," said Mr. Peckton, slyly, "as the diplomats do."

Mrs. Enfield's Man

By CLARA DELAFIELD

"Free?" asked Mrs. Enfield tartly. "Believe me, Mrs. Reames, I never knew what freedom meant before. All my life I've worked for men—first for my old father, who was a regular tyrant, and then for Jim Enfield."

"Why, I couldn't call my soul my own so long as that man was in the house. It was cooking and cleaning, and darning his socks—he was as helpless as a baby, for all his viciousness—and cross words all the time. And then he went and left me."

"You poor thing," said her visitor. "But that's what we women have to put up with."

"He left me," sobbed Mrs. Enfield, "and that poor child there"—she pointed to her daughter Gladys, aged fifteen—"and wrote a letter saying he was tired of my tongue-lashing, and was never coming back. Me that had slaved for him! Me that couldn't call my soul my own while he was in the house!"

"I suppose there's no danger of his ever coming back after all these months, is there?" asked the visitor.

Mrs. Enfield's voice rose into a shrill scream. "Come back? Well, I'd just like to see him try it!" she answered. "I'd give him a tongue-lashing, as he had the impudence to call it. I'd let him know whether he could treat us that way or not, going off and abandoning us, and leaving me to work for our living."

"Suppose he came back rich?" suggested the other.

"Rich? Jim Enfield rich? That man couldn't save a penny even if he was man enough to get a job! But if it was to happen, I'd throw his money in his face. Never shall Jim Enfield set foot inside my doors again, rich or poor!"

"That's the way to talk, ma," said Gladys. "We're better off without a great hulking man to support."

"You hold your tongue, Glad," answered her mother sharply. "It's quite true what you say, but it ain't for you to abuse your father."

Gladys tossed her head.

"Anyway, when I see what he's done to you, ma, capturing your young love and then wrecking it, it makes me feel sore," she answered.

In spite of her attitude, Jane Enfield knew that there were times when she missed the presence of a man in the house. As a husband, Jim Enfield had been beneath contempt, but as a man he had his virtues. He could drive in nails and hammer things; he could fix taps and do odd jobs.

But Jim Enfield should never enter her home again. "Not if he crawled in dying on his bended knees, Gladys," she said. "I'm just living for the day when he comes back. Tongue-lashing? Huh!"

A few days later, when Mrs. Enfield was preparing supper, Gladys rushed in, wild with excitement. "What d'you think, ma?" she asked. "Father's been seen in town!"

"Huh?" said Jane Enfield. "Let him try to come here, that's all! Glad, if he tries to force his way in, you run for the policeman. And I'll—"

she looked about her and snatched up a rolling-pin. "I guess I'm woman enough to hand him what he deserves," she said.

Suddenly rather uncertain footsteps were heard outside. They looked at one another and shivered. And then there came a tapping at the kitchen door. After a few moments of hesitation Gladys went and opened it.

Jim Enfield came in. He wore a very shabby suit of clothes, a battered hat was on the back of his head, and he glanced rather sheepishly from his wife to his daughter.

Then he advanced slowly and uncertainly, glancing askance at the rolling-pin in Jane Enfield's hand, and threw himself into a chair.

"Well, here we are again!" he said. "Had a mighty rough time, Jane, old girl! Been on the tramp six weeks since I lost my last job, and nearly dead. Guess I'll have to lay up for a spell before starting out to look for a job again."

"Hello, Glad! How's the school coming along? My, you're growing quite a big girl now, ain't you? Come and give your daddy a kiss!"

Gladys, advancing as if hypnotized, suddenly flung her arms around her father's neck and imprinted a succession of fervid kisses on his cheeks. Then she drew back and looked at her mother.

"Well? What are you staring at me like that for?" demanded Jane Enfield. "Hurry out to the corner store and get some ham for your father. And get a lettuce and a bottle of pickles—the kind he likes. You ought to know if any one does. Jim, I'll run upstairs and fix things up a bit. Watch the kettle and see it doesn't boil over."

She ran to him and put her head down on his shoulder. "You must rest up a while before looking for work, Jim," she said. "Poor boy, you must have had a rough time. Gladys!" She stopped the girl as she was going out of the door. "Go and get your father's slippers first, and then hurry to the store. My, Jim!" she continued, "it feels good to have a man in the house again!"

"When Mrs. Peckton lays down the law, do you acquiesce?" "Yes," said Mr. Peckton, slyly, "as the diplomats do."

"Huh!"

"In principle."

"I knew him when he was a boy"

What one is there of us that has not felt the glow of satisfaction over the outstanding success of a life-long friend? Often a surprise—seemingly "all of a sudden." Yet neither surprising nor sudden, when you stop to think back over each step of his progress.

THE United States Rubber Company—makers of U. S. Royal Cords—were first to conceive, make and announce the balanced tire. A tire in which there is such complete unity of action in tread and carcass that neither will give way before the other.

First to conceive, make and announce a complete line of tires—a tire for every need of price and use under one standard of quality.

First to tell the public about the good and bad in tire-retailing. (You remember the phrase "Go to a legitimate dealer and get a legitimate tire.")

First also to arouse industrial and trade minds to the need of a new kind of tire competition. (Competition for better and better values. Greater and greater public confidence.)

THESE high spots along the U. S. road to leadership indicate the intent—the will to win by the quality route in a price market.

Now that so many car-owners have given their verdict for quality tires in general, and U. S. Tires in particular—a number of dealers and car-owners whose vision has been clouded by "discounts," "sales" and what not, are beginning to remember that they "knew him when he was a boy."

The Big Muskeg

He led her toward the muskeg. But on the way he stopped suddenly beside the summit of the ridge.

"Kitty," he said, in a low voice, "I don't know if I ought to tell you—perhaps you'd like to know. This is where Joe—"

Her grasp upon his arm tightened convulsively. "No, no, Will!" she said hurriedly. "I don't want to see it. I can't bear to think of it."

They followed the line of ballast trucks along the narrow-gauge down to the swamp's edge. Construction upon the foundations was well under way. Tons of debris had been poured into the muskeg, and had simply spread themselves over the bottom, finding their level like water. Soundings taken had showed the bedrock hardly raised from its level twenty feet beneath the surface.

Wilton and Lee Chambers had therefore begun the construction of trestle-work. Teams hauled bundles of logs, bound with a chain, to the scene of operations. The uprights for the lower tier were driven into the ground, and the horizontal members and diagonals were nailed up, completing a crazy, shaking structure just strong enough to take a pair of metals at the top.

As they reached the edge of this structure the whistle blew. The workmen knocked off and came slowly toward the camp. Wilton and Kitty stood alone at the edge of the embankment, where the flimsy structure of the trestle began.

Kitty looked at Wilton breathlessly. "It's wonderful, Will!" she said. "It makes me feel so out of place and useless."

Wilton looked at her in surprise. "Why, how can you feel that way, Kitty?" he asked reproachfully. "You have been loyal to the core to Joe!"

"Don't say that!" she cried fiercely, and, turning swiftly from him, began to make her passage across the temporary sleepers. Twelve feet beneath them the sluggish stream forced its narrow channel through the muskeg. Wilton called to Kitty.

"You'd better come back," he shouted. "It isn't very secure, and you might lose your footing."

But she went on without heeding him, until she stood almost at the end of the shaking structure. It was a dangerous place. The wind blew strongly, sending her skirts flying about her, and tumbling her hair upon her shoulders.

"Come back, Kitty!" called Wilton, making his way across the planks until he reached her side. He put out his hand to steady her. Then he saw that the tears were streaming down her cheeks.

"Why, Kitty, what is it?" he begged. "I didn't hurt you?"

She shook his hand from her arm with a violent gesture, leaning back; and suddenly she lost her stance and toppled from the edge of the trestle into the river below.

A plunge into that viscous water was more dangerous than a fall. Wilton realized it instinctively. He leaped feet first and found himself struggling in the gluey swamp, half mud, half water. Kitty, who had fallen into the center of the stream, appeared half a dozen feet away, her white face upturned, her hands catching for support as the shallow current carried her toward the lake.

Fighting madly, Wilton detached his limbs from the sucking mud and managed to grasp her skirt as she drifted past him. With a desperate effort he drew her to him and struggled through the yielding muskeg until he was able to catch an upright of the trestle-work.

He glanced at Kitty as he halted to catch his breath. She lay passive in his arms, her eyes closed; she seemed to have fainted, but she breathed easily, though quickly. Her dripping clothes clung to her tightly, and her fair hair streamed over her arms.

Then, plodding through the yielding swamp, he struggled on until he reached the shore. Kitty opened her eyes and looked up at him.

"God, we're all right now!" she said. "It was a near thing in there. You'll be quiet and rest a while. You'll hurt back, and you'll get things quickly."

A quick catch of Kitty's arm. "Will, you are so blind!" she said. "Couldn't you see? Are you making me tell you, Will? I want to make me tell you."

She said about his neck, and about his shoulder. Wilton, dumfounded, did not stir.

"I see I must," she said. "I always loved you, I was always for Joe."

He took her hands in his. "It's all forgotten, Kitty," he said. "We won't think of it."

He took her hands in his. "It's all forgotten, Kitty," he said. "We won't think of it."

"You must hear Joe now," she said. "I never cared for Joe—not in that way. He loved me, and I thought I could learn to love him. I was happy with him, but what could he expect? He would have been old enough to have been my father. What right had he to marry me, ignorant as I was of love and of the world? I was happy with him—till I met you."

"I always loved you, Will, and it was my right to love you. It was you built up in your mind all that about my loyalty to Joe. I cared for Joe in a way, but that was all. If you imagined all that you did, was I to blame for it? Sometimes you nearly drove me crazy with your talk about Joe, about his work, about my loyalty to him, when I was hungry for your love."

"I'm ashamed—God knows how I'm ashamed to tell you this. You made me, Will. While Joe lived I was true to him. I'm free, and you are free, and love cannot be bound. And I don't care a snap of my fingers for the Missatibi. I care for you. I'm shameless now, when I say this, but you should have seen—you should have known. What right had you to drone out your refrain of Joe, Joe, all the day to me, when my heart was crying out for you, and you would not hear it? I want your love, Will! I want you to love me, and to take me away from Manitoba, where I'll never hear of the Missatibi again—or Joe!"

Afterward it seemed to Wilton like a dreadful dream. Gently he put her arms from his neck, and rose to his feet. And, because the nature of the man was of that simplicity that instinctively understands, it was not anger, but a deep pity that filled his heart.

"I'm sorry, Kitty," he said. "What you have told me makes an end of much that I have planned and dreamed of. It takes the zest out of things. It was my fault. Let us go back."

She looked at him with white face, set lips and blazing eyes. She rose without a word, declining his hand, and without a word they went back along the cleared road in the twilight. He left her at her door.

He went to his shack and sat at his desk for a whole hour, his head resting heavily in his hands. All that he had given his life to seemed broken, his ideals outraged; his love for Molly was the lodestone of his life, but even love is not all a man has to live for.

After a long time he was aware of a low tapping at his door. He rose and opened it. Kitty stood there in the gathering darkness. She came a few steps into the office, and stopped.

"Will," she said in a low voice, "I want to ask you to forget. It was true what I told you—partly true. But I was overwrought and weak."

The heavy cloud that hung about him partly lifted. Wilton grasped at the hope she gave him as a man, convinced against his will, turns again to his accustomed habits of thought, and will not see.

"Kitty," he said, "I should have known. I was blind. I looked for perfection. I was to blame. Let us forget it all."

She answered in the same strained, monotonous voice. "I did love Joe," she said. "In a way, I did. As much as women mostly love their husbands. I gave him all the love that was his right. And I do care for the line. I want you to wipe all memory of this afternoon out of your mind. Try to think of me as you need to."

He took her hands in his. "It's all forgotten, Kitty," he said. "We won't think of it."

velled about that dark spot in his mind, which he had barred off, as if it had been a prison.

CHAPTER VIII

Treachery.

When Kitty left the shack she went slowly toward her house. At the door she hesitated and then, as if with a sudden resolution, she made her way quickly in the direction of the portage.

There was a rig with two horses before the factor's door. Inside the door Tom Bowyer was standing, and Molly faced him, white to the lips, and rigid. "I've given you your answer many times," said Molly.

Bowyer smiled. "No decision that was ever made can't be changed," he retorted. "Is it a crime to love you—to want to make you my wife?"

"No; but it is a crime to persecute me when you know you have no right to ask me at all."

Tom Bowyer, who had cultivated his rages until they had mastered him, could never refrain from falling into the bully's pose when he met opposition. He slammed his fist down fiercely on the counter.

"I'll change your answer, Molly!" he cried. "Before I leave this store to-night, I'll have you at my feet, for all your pride. D—n it, it's your pride I want as much as you. I want to humble you, because there's never been man or woman I couldn't tame sooner or later. I'm making you an honorable proposal. Your father's a dying man. Anyone can see that. I want you, and I want to take care of him for your sake, the rest of his days. I ask you to be my wife, to come to Cold Junction with me and marry me. D'you suppose he could hold his job here another day if the company knew he's paralyzed? I'll drive him from the portage unless you marry me and let him take his pension and live with us."

"I tell you 'no' again!" cried Molly. "How many times am I to answer you? Will you go now?"

He caught her by the wrists, thrusting his face forward into hers. She screamed in fear, and they heard the dragging footsteps of the factor in his room above. The old man felt his way slowly down the stairs and edged along the counter. There was fear in his sunken eyes; but it was anger made him tremble.

"Ye go too far, Mr. Bowyer!" he quavered. "Ye canna insult my girl in my own house!"

"Get back to bed, you old fool!" sneered Bowyer. "Didn't you do your own love-making?"

"If she winna have ye I winna sell her! Leave the house and do your worst!"

"If I do," answered Bowyer, "I'll do it. D'you mean that? Answer me, McDonald!"

The factor sank back against the counter and glared at him with haggard eyes, his gray beard brushing his breast. Bowyer smiled triumphantly.

"Speak for me, McDonald," he jeered. "Tell her why she'd better change her mind."

The factor raised his head. "Molly, lass," he whispered, "it's a grand opportunity he's offering ye. Have ye no thocht of that? It'll be a hame for ye in my old age, when I canna care for ye."

Molly fixed her eyes in horror upon McDonald. But Bowyer strode between them.

"You're a fine love-maker!" he sneered. "Get out of the way!"

And, inflamed almost to madness, he seized Molly in his arms and pressed his lips to her cheek and throat again and again.

"I guess you're not so coy as you pretend, Molly," he cried. "You women are all alike, after all. I never knew one yet that wasn't in a hurry to get hitched up, however much she pretended to dislike it."

The opening of the door behind him made him start. Kitty stood there, and it was quite clear that she had been a spectator of the scene. With a strangled cry Molly broke from Bowyer's grasp and ran into her room. She dragged her bed against the door and stood behind it, sobbing with terror and anger. The factor leaned against the counter, a look of dull apathy on his face. Bowyer turned sheepishly to Kitty.

"Well, I guess you caught me this time, Mrs. Bostock," he said. "But, being a woman, you'll understand."

Kitty's disgust for Bowyer held her silent. She made the slightest gesture of her head to him and went out of the store. Bowyer followed her.

"What does it mean?" asked Kitty. "It means that I want Molly McDonald, and I've never wanted any man or woman yet that I didn't get," said Bowyer. "Make the most of it, he blustered. 'I've as much right as Carruthers, haven't I?'"

"No," said Kitty. "Why haven't I?"

"Mr. Carruthers was first. They are engaged."

"What's to stop her breaking it?" As his agitation subsided, Bowyer, a keen judge, noticed that Kitty's pose was unnatural; she seemed laboring under some suppressed emotion. He looked quickly into her eyes and saw that she had been crying. And then he knew.

A slow smile spread over his face. Kitty Bostock had not made Big Muskeg her home so long out of devotion to the memory of Joe.

With a deliberated impulse Bowyer put out his hand and took hers. "I want two things, Mrs. Bostock," he said. "Molly McDonald, and the Missatibi. How many do you want?"

He looked at her still more keenly. "One?"

Kitty said nothing, but there was the slightest nod of her head in answer.

should have to lose all Joe's money in that ten-cent line," said Bowyer. He was quite at his ease now, feeling himself in his accustomed element of intrigue. "Even if it could be built, it wouldn't pay. And if it did pay I'd take it myself. I want it, anyway. Not that I'd hurt you, if I could help it, Mrs. Bostock; but I've got my interests to look out for."

"Well?" asked Kitty, breathing quickly.

"By the end of the year your shares will be worth nothing. You'll be ruined. It will be impossible to raise the capital to keep the line, either. It's a shame that Carruthers should waste his time and strength trying to carry out an impossible dream. If you could sell your shares at par when the note falls due, you could pull out, and you and he could make a sensible investment. He'd soon get over the disappointment. You could see to that."

He could not hide the flicker of a smile. Kitty saw it, and loathed Bowyer the more. She knew he was playing on her hopes, and yet the sudden vision made her heart beat furiously.

"I'm going to marry Molly," he continued. "I swear that I possess the power to make her my wife. But I want the line in return. I want to see some of Joe's papers. They're yours, and you can let me see them without doing wrong, and you'll be helping Carruthers indirectly. They're in his safe. You know the combination."

"I'll marry her this fall. You can trust me, Mrs. Bostock, because you oversaw just how I feel about her."

Kitty tapped softly at the door of Molly's room. "He's gone, dear," she whispered. "Let me come in to you."

The bedstead was dragged back. Molly stood before her, white-faced and tense. Kitty put her arm round her and sat down on the bed beside her.

"Tom Bowyer's a beast, Molly," she said. "But most men are. If you give them the least bit of encouragement—"

"I never encouraged him!" cried Molly, sobbing violently. "I've always hated the sight of him. He has some power over father."

"He seems very fond of you," suggested Kitty.

"Do you call that fondness? I hate him. I hate the sight of him."

Kitty stroked her cheek softly. "You haven't met very many men, dear. Love doesn't last very long. And it doesn't hurt very much. I was quite happy with Joe, after the first month or two."

Molly looked at her in wonder. "Why, I thought you and Joe loved each other!" she exclaimed.

"I admired Joe and respected him. And then, there was not the dreadful specter of poverty with him. Joe was a man like Will Carruthers, he'd keep his word, no matter at what cost."

Molly sprang to her feet. "What are you hinting at?" she cried hysterically. "What word is Will keeping? Do you mean his promise to me?"

Kitty drew her down beside her.

"Kitty Drew Her Down Beside Her."

won't come to have any feeling against me, dear. Only you didn't seem to understand—well, things. And what I'm saying hasn't anything to do with Mr. Bowyer, if you feel that you don't care for him."

"Care for that beast!" said Molly.

Day by day the trestling grew, and the embankment appeared about it until the first part was hidden under the permanent way. Thousands of feet of logs had gone into the building. Each day the engine pushed the laden ballast trucks farther out upon the creaking, swaying structure. Then the pressure of the lever, tons of debris discharged through the frame of the woodwork, and the engine went snorting back toward the ballast pit, dragging the empty trucks behind it.

Kitty had gone back to Clayton. She had said that she would return, but Wilton doubted it. He still cherished the hope of friendship, when time had obliterated their joint memory of that afternoon. He could not bear to lose her. She seemed a part of Joe, and he found it hard to shake his mind free of his preconceptions. For the present, however, he recognized that her remaining there would prove an embarrassment.

He sent her back to Clayton with Anderson, who had proved entirely trustworthy since the first night, and was going in on business for him.

And he had very little time to think of Kitty in the critical period that followed. Wilton slept only a few hours nightly. For five days he could not even go to the portage. On the sixth success appeared at hand. The sink-holes had been filled in and there was not the slightest subsidence of the grade. Andersen returned that night and Wilton went to bed in confidence. Chambers was as confident as he.

Four Counties in Outcrop Area Will Be Reached by M. A. C. Staff This Fall.

Four men from the college staff, headed by J. O. Veatch, of the soils department, and an equal number from the United States Bureau of Soils will comprise the survey team. Survey Shows Profit in Poultry Flocks

Average Return Above Two Hundred Dollars On Farms Checked in State by M. A. C.

East Lansing.—An average return of two hundred dollars above feed and other direct costs is reported for 39 Michigan farm poultry flocks included in a survey recently completed by the farm management department of the M. A. C., an indication that poultry are often one of the farmer's most profitable enterprises.

"These were average Michigan farm flocks," says H. M. Elliot, head of the farm management department. "They averaged 118 hens to the flock, with the average return per hen of $1.70. Thirteen of the flocks show returns below $1.50 per hen, seven above $2.25 per hen, and nineteen between these figures."

A striking feature of poultry management brought out by the survey was the beneficial effect of protein foods upon egg production and net returns per hen.

Church Bars Collection Plate.

A new method of meeting church expenses is told by the London Morning Post, which reports that collections have recently been entirely abolished at the parish church of Fulham, in London, except for special occasions for objects not connected with the parish.

Church expenses will be met out of a special fund which has been formed and to which every member of the congregation is asked to contribute a definite sum weekly. The experiment is said to be the first of its kind so far as the Church of England is concerned, but the vicar of Potterswell, who was secretary of last year's church congress at Southend, has for some time had a very successful special fund at his church, if he has not entirely abolished the ordinary collections.

"Allocation," said the wordmonger, "is a word that is being given considerable prominence, it became popular during the war in connection with ships and loans. That was in April two years ago, and being an honest 'cop' he turned them in. No owner turned up and recently Nick went around to the lost property bureau and put in a claim for them as their finder. 'If you were a citizen you could have them,' said his superior officer, 'but you are just a cop and the police rules and regulations say the proceeds from unclaimed property found by members of the force goes to the police pension fund.' $650 IN PREMIUMS

FOR SHEEP OWNERS

Washtenaw County Fair Encourages Raising More and Better Sheep.

In an effort to encourage the raising of more and better sheep, premiums totalling $650 are being offered owners of sheep exhibited at the Washtenaw county fair, Ann Arbor, September 19 to 28.

The sheep show is expected to be a large one this year, according to superintendent Fred Reichert, of the sheep department. A large number of animals are expected to enter the exhibit. The breeds that will be permitted to compete for the premiums include, American Merinos, Rambouillettes, Cheviots, Black Tops, Hampshires, Standard Daineses, Oxford Downs, Shropshires, Cotswolds, Lincolls, Leicester, Horned Dorsets and Tunis.

It is believed by the fair management that an exhibit of sheep of the leading breeds will not only interest many visitors in going into the sheep raising business but will put farmers who own flocks in personal touch with breeders from whom a few animals can be bought as foundation stock.

A small flock of sheep, say specialists, will convert the weeds of the farm into meat and wool. Sheep do well on high rocky ground, unfitted for farming, of which there are millions of acres in America. A sheep will produce a fleece in the spring and a lamb crop in the fall. Little grain and shelter are needed to keep the flock in good condition. Sheep can be fattened on a bigger percentage of roughage than any other farm animal.

The mutton type which will be the most popular one at the Washtenaw county fair will be found to be much different than the wool type. Judges will favor the animals that are short-legged, deep and rather square in proportion. Being raised primarily for meat and secondarily for wool, such a sheep produces the maximum amount of high priced meat cuts.

Entries for the sheep show will close on September 16th.

GAIN AND LOSE POPULARITY

"Allocation," said the wordmonger, "is a word that is being given considerable prominence, it became popular during the war in connection with ships and loans. The 'allocation' of shipping and the 'allocation' of loans came to be current phrases. Not long ago the senate called on the President for information as to how he had 'allocated' certain funds. In a recent newspaper story about an operative benefit in one of the big cities the newspapers said that the 'allocation' of boxes is to be based on the size and date of the contribution."

"Allocation" is so closely allied to "allot," assign and "apportion" that the shipping and treasury authorities might just as well have said the 'allotment' of ships and the 'apportionment' of funds for loans. But words come into fashion and writers and speakers fall into or 'fall for' the prevailing mode in words as some persons do for the prevailing colors in socks or neckties and the prevailing style in haircuts, says the Washington Star. In the 'olden times'—that is, when grandfathers were in business—'allocation' had somewhat of a run as a financial word and one could often hear and see the phrase 'allocation of the shares of the company.'"

"Findings is Keepings."

"The appellate division of the Supreme court of New York, has decided that 'findings is keepings,' even for a copper," writes the New York correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger.

"You see, Policeman Nicholas J. Majeski was off duty when he picked up an envelope lying on the sidewalk in Third avenue. Lucky pick! Envelope contained fourteen $50 Liberty bonds. That was in April two years ago, and being an honest 'cop' he turned them in. No owner turned up and recently Nick went around to the lost property bureau and put in a claim for them as their finder. 'If you were a citizen you could have them,' said his superior officer, 'but you are just a cop and the police rules and regulations say the proceeds from unclaimed property found by members of the force goes to the police pension fund.' Nick hired himself a lawyer, made a fight for the bonds and the law stands back of him."

A new method of meeting church expenses is told by the London Morning Post, which reports that collections have recently been entirely abolished at the parish church of Fulham, in London, except for special occasions for objects not connected with the parish.

Church expenses will be met out of a special fund which has been formed and to which every member of the congregation is asked to contribute a definite sum weekly. The experiment is said to be the first of its kind so far as the Church of England is concerned, but the vicar of Potterswell, who was secretary of last year's church congress at Southend, has for some time had a very successful special fund at his church, if he has not entirely abolished the ordinary collections.
