Cook With Fast, Clean Gas Heat--
Burn Cheap Kerosene

Have you thought that oil stoves were all alike. Then come in today and let us tell you the truth. Red Stars burn either kerosene oil or gasoline—but right there the resemblance to other oil stoves ends.

You cook over fast clean gas burners and you bake in a hot, fast gas oven. And it saves easily one-quarter of the fuel used by other oil stoves.

Are you entirely satisfied with your cooking? Then come today and see the new

ELECTRICAL SYSTEM MAY BE CHANGED

Current Will Be Purchased Direct From Consumers Power Company Under Plan Now Being Investigated.

Change from the present system of electrical distribution in the village of Chelsea to a more satisfactory and up-to-date current—that of alternating, 110 voltage—will be made gradually, only one section of the village being altered at a time until the entire system is operating under the new system, was the opinion today of members of the Electric Light and Water Works Commission and members of the village council, expressed to a representative of the Standard.

Work this coming summer is expected to change the circuit operating in the west part of town, that section between South street and the railroad west from Main street to the Methodist Home, to current purchased direct from the Consumers Power Company line. With the completion of this section other sections will undergo alteration until the entire village is operating direct from the Consumers Power company. This is expected to take a period of several months, even years, to accomplish because of the expease connected with the purchase of new equipment, household appliances and other electrical paraphernalia.

Saving over the cost of operating the present system it is believed, will pay the expense in proposed rebuilding program. Figures compiled by members of the board and others, have convinced them that there will be a substantial margin left after paying the operating expenses which will be applied toward payment of replacement charges in initiating the new system.

No startling amount is expected to be sayed during the first year of operation, according to members of the board, who say that the cost of replacing old equipment and building new will eat up any profits which might be made in the operating expenses. However, after the first year and the initiation of the changes contemplated, it is expected a very substantial saving over the operating expenses of the local plant will be credited to the village which in turn will be applied to the purchase of old equipment and replacement with new in all sections of the village.

Informal discussion of the proposed buying and retailing of electricity from the Consumers Power company was indulged in by members of the village council and Electric Light commission at the close of the first regular session of the new council body at the city hall Monday evening. No definite action has been taken, investigation being under way in an effort to determine the best course to pursue in securing the best possible electrical service for Chelsea.

"LADY LUCK" FAVORS CHELSEA MERCHANT

"Would you give two hundred dollars toward the fund if you won the sedan?" came a voice over the telephone Saturday night. Kent Walworth, answering from this end of the line carelessly remarked that he would. "The car's yours," was the startling rejoinder, and Mr. Walworth was notified that he had won the Durant sedan given away by the Beth Israel Society of Ann Arbor in an effort to raise funds for the construction of a Jewish temple at Ann Arbor.

Mr. Walworth had purchased only one ticket—the one with the rabbit's foot attached—and as a result is receiving the congratulations of friends on his close friendship with "Lady Luck."

JOHN G. ADRIAN

John G. Adrian, aged 50 years, died at his home in Jackson, Sunday afternoon, March 18.

Mr. Adrian was a former resident of Chelsea and was engaged in the retail butcher business while a resident here and since moving to Jackson he had conducted a retail meat business.

Mr. Adrian was united in marriage with Miss Anna Mohrlock, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Mohrlock of Sylvan. Mrs. Adrian died four years ago last February.

Five children survive their father. Marie, Margaret, Gertrude, John G. jr. and Lewis.

The funeral was held at 1:30 this Thursday afternoon.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS BANQUET MONDAY

Addresses and Music Feature Annual Affair of Local Lodge in Maccabee Hall.

Interspersing his address with clever bits of wit and humor, during which he held the rapt attention of his audience, Past Grand Chancellor H. E. Van De Walker, of the Michigan Knights of Pythias, delivered one of the most inspiring addresses ever listened to by local Knights and their wives, on the occasion of the annual banquet of the order, held at the Maccabee hall Monday evening. The affair was most successful, a large crowd being in attendance.

Mr. Van De Walker, whose home is at Ypsilanti, is a candidate for the office of Supreme Vice Chancellor, and is the moving spirit in the organization of "The Sons of Damon," Junior order of the Knights of Pythias, gaining much of his experience from several years service on International Boys' Work committee of the International Rotary organization, injecting into the new order much of the enthusiasm gained through this connection. His address Monday evening was principally on this subject, explaining the different phases of the work, the results obtained and future aspirations of the order.

O. C. Burkhart presided as toastmaster after the banquet, which was followed by a splendid dancing program played by Perry's orchestra of Manchester. The orchestra also played during the earlier part of the evening.

On account of illness in the family, Rev. P. W. Dierberger, former pastor of the Congregational church here, was unable to be present. He was scheduled to deliver "After Dinner Mints."

The program follows:
Invocation—D. A. Riker.
Banquet.
Music—Perry Orchestra.
Solo—"Give a Man a Horse He Can Ride." J. H. Boyd.
Address—"Playing the Game." H. E. Van De Walker.
Dismissal—D. A. Riker, prelate.
Dance.

HOLMES & WALKER START CAMPAIGN

Local Firm Initiates Program of Consistent Advertising and Co-operation in Effort to Supply Housewife's Needs.

Realizing the needs of every home and especially the housewife, during the coming spring and summer months, the firm of Holmes & Walker, local hardware merchants, has begun a campaign which is expected to result in not only increased business for themselves, but will be the means of lifting much of the drudgery of house work from the shoulders of scores of women of Chelsea and vicinity.

On this page, will be found the first of a series of advertisements setting forth the good qualities of the Red Star oil stove, a stove which is being nationally advertised as the last word in cooking apparatus. Demonstrations will be staged by competent men from the manufacturing concern and no doubt large numbers of people will be interested.

On page two, over the signature of Holmes & Walker and the Washtenaw Gas Company appears an advertisement of the Radiantfire gas stove for use "when the cold wind's high and the coal pile's low." There is no doubt whatever as to the demand for such a heater during the spring and fall months when it is not cold enough for the furnace, yet too cool to be without fire.

The farmer has not been forgotten by this energetic firm. On page eight Holmes & Walker call attention to the Van Brunt drill, sold by the local merchants as the very latest improvement in this line of machinery.

Prediction is made through these columns of the success of Holmes & Walker in their campaign for more and better business. Dealing on the principal "We treat you right" they are sure to reap the benefits justly theirs from years of sound business conduct.

LINDAUER HOME DAMAGED BY FIRE TUESDAY

A blaze in the roof damaged the residence of Mr. and Mrs. George Lindauer on Washington street Tuesday afternoon.

The alarm was turned in about 3:30 o'clock and the fire department responded promptly but about half of the roof was burned when they arrived. Just how the blaze started is unknown but is supposed to have started on the outside. When the alarm was given it had broken through into the interior of the house.

Contents of the home was more or less damaged by smoke and water. The loss is covered by insurance.

RESERVES WIN THREE GAMES

Fans Confident State Amateur Championship Will Result From Consistent Playing During Tournament.

Tossing their way to victory in games which have left no doubt of their supremecy over teams in their class, St. Mary Reserves have established themselves as possible winners of the Michigan State Amateur Athletic tournament championship now being played at Detroit. Another win marked up to their credit Wednesday evening gives them three victories out of as many games and leaves them as entrants to the semi-finals which will possibly be played in the next day or two.

During the last two weeks the Reserves have played some of the stiffest teams of their class in the state. On Friday, March 9, they played the Argo Athletic club and won 14 to 12. One week later they matched strength against the Farrind Park Highlanders and took them into camp 35 to 4. Wednesday evening of this week they again showed their strength by defeating the Willard Athletic club in one of the fastest games of the season, 29 to 15.

Members of the team are:
Center—Julius Eder.
Right Guard—Edward Eder.
Subs—Riedel and M. Hoffman.

It is expected that the Reserves will have two more games in the tournament, and should they be successful in these the Class C championship of the state, in the amateur field, will be awarded them for their splendid efforts in the basket ball world. Their record is an enviable one, showing the result of consistent training and aggressive playing, combined with the ability to use their heads as well as their hands and feet.

CHELSEA SCHOOL RANKS SECOND

Lack of All Eligibles Prevents Carrying Away First Prize.

While Ann Arbor high school led all other schools contesting for prizes in the Music Memory Contest, and all honor to Ann Arbor high had Chelsea Class C been better represented in numbers, of which only a few more would have been required to permit them to enter the contest as a high school, they would have carried off the chief honors with flying colors, their average being much higher than Ann Arbor high, but on account of the small enrollment it became necessary for them to consolidate with Calsses A and B, and enter contest as a city school.

Several more of the high school students had splendid grades which would have permitted them to enter the big contest and had they done so, Chelsea high school would have placed Chelsea on the map in an especially remarkable way.

The splendid co-operation of Miss Marjorie Mitchell, supervisor of music in the public schools, Supt. Clark and others in the school who assisted in this wonderful work sponsored and assited by the Thursday Musicale, in the securing of local prizes, making arrangements for concerts, etc., has enabled them to attain their high standing.

It is expected that Chelsea will carry off a number of the individual prizes.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH WILL GIVE CANTATA

Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock, St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church choir will render the beautiful Easter cantata, "The Resurrection Story," by Carrie B. Adams.

The cantata consists of a number of soles, duets, quartets and choruses, and it is expected that an evening of great enjoyment will be experienced by everyone who attends. Music composed by Carrie B. Adams is generally recognized as being among the best published and is sung by large choirs throughout the entire country. This fact alone should bring attention to the service next Sunday evening, while mention of the fact that St. Paul's choir will do the singing assures them a capacity audience.

Miss Milda Faist will preside at the organ.

PROPER FOOD FOR CHILDREN

Among the most essential foods for school children is a good fruit. The Department of Agriculture at Washington D. C., in a recent food bulletin recommends dried prunes as one of the best fruits for growing children. Try a box direct from the California fruit country and see the results of good pure fruit. THE UNIVERSAL CRAZE

The candid confession of the Michigan girl that she perpetrated the unprecedented fever-hoax on a score of famous physicians in order to get her name in the papers, is but a single instance of the world-wide craving for publicity which actuates many women and men.

What satisfaction it is to her to know that newspapers from coast to coast followed her daily condition with meticulous anxiety as her "fever" rose as high as 118 degrees and stayed there many days, is not clear to us. But equally strange is the motive which prompts certain folks we know more intimately to yearn for recognition and applause.

This Michigan girl wanted to be in the news. And since there was no other way, she used a hot water bottle, held the thermometer against it, and learned physicians thought she was burning up.

This office is bombarded with propaganda of all sorts from political dope to theatre gossip, all seeking to get somebody's name in print. Editors might be excused from becoming a group of cynics, wary about giving due credit to a meritorious public official or failing to record truthfully the legitimate comings and goings of citizens. They are not all seeking or even desiring recognition, and it is at times difficult to draw the line.

A girl in Nova Scotia started a ghost scare not long ago, burning barns, tying knots in cows' tails and other similar stunts, and allowed herself to be caught and her name broadcast to a sensation-loving public. Movie stars aren't recognized on the screen for their ability to act any more, but by their domestic irregularities. If they are not divorcing or getting engaged or marrying in an airplane or something like that, they're suing each other, getting a lizard for a pet, trying to commit suicide or getting arrested, all for the same ungovernable impulse. With them it is understood; their salary and drawing power depend upon the popular recognition. But, like thousands of other people who confound sensational publicity with good advertising, they lose taste and wreck their real reputation on the shoals of notoriety.

This craze has its good side, of course. Many public officials would be singularly lazy and do little unless they were sure their good deeds would be chronicled. Much real philanthropy is actuated by knowledge that newspapers would not overlook it. Clubs, societies, popular movements and many worthy enterprises are backed by a press which promises to record and herald their more or less benevolent activities. On the other hand, newspapers restrain many from sins of omission and commission.

But however much publicity is but a just reward for nobility, the craving desire for it has passed all bounds. College professors, despairing of fame in regular channels, write or utter statements in defiance to accepted theories and are quoted and interviewed for a gullible nation. Doctors feel they ought to start something, and start a new fad, to be snatched up and heralded as a wonderful discovery. Ministers of the gospel are not immune from the universal epidemic, and publicly challenge the fundamental creeds of the Christian faith, start a new cult, destroy the simple trust of hundreds and forget the sacredness of their mission in a vainglorious worship of self.

We see far too much of this mad craving for publicity, which is far from engendering popularity. Reputations are shattered overnight and ideals desecrated irrevocably by those seeking the limelight for a momentary acclaim. Folks who are most worth while find their greatest joy, not in the plaudits of a fickle populace, but in the calm and approving assurance of their own conscie

FIRST PEACE MOVES

Chancellor Cuno is said to be taking steps toward trying to meet part of France's demands so the latter will withdraw her armies from the Ruhr region. Germany cannot pay all, and may never be able to. But Cuno is looking about for a way to send the French back with all the gold Germany can dig up. Since France has long since rued her hasty and expensive experiment with Germany's blast furnaces and mines, she will likely accept almost any move of Germany as a pacific gesture and an excuse to withdraw.

Germany has been drawn together in passive hostility, and would doubtless be content to continue the present armed siege. France is equally determined, and if no payment is forthcoming, will probably stand fast in Germany's richest section until one nation or the other succumbs. If France forces Germany to the sword, the conflict, however favorable to the French arms, will be disastrous to her economic hopes. If Germany succumbs by degrees as at present over a long period, she will be in still worse condition to pay France. So France's anxiety is real and natural, and the likelihood great that she will accept the first real money Germany offers, however far under demands.

That will put France back where she started from, with the hatred of Germany multiplied and even more potentially disastrous. Whatever Germany's attitude toward France as her conqueror in 1918, it is now surely uncompromisingly bitter and hostile.

But first peace moves are being made, and we may soon see the end of the most miserable game of bluff ever attempted.

Several colored men were sitting about a hot stove on a cold winter night. One of them remarked that the odor about the place was not just right. Finally: "Whose toe am dat burnin'?" says Sambo. Scarcely were the words out of his mouth when he jerked back his foot with the exclamation: "Gollee-ee-ee! Dat wuz my toe burnin'."

MILLION DOLLAR PUGILISM

A bout is being arranged for deciding the heavyweight championship of the world. The fight will be held in Argentina, and in addition to hundreds of American fight fans who plan to go down for the event, many from Europe are arranging to attend. It will undoubtedly be the biggest bout, in many ways, ever staged. While Luis Firpo, the South American fighter, isn't very well known except for his defeat of Bill Brennan, his opponent will be the fistic favorite of the western hemisphere. And when Jack Dempsey fights again, almost everybody takes notice.

Aside from the championship question and the prominence of Dempsey, the main feature of the coming bout is the purse provided. Win or lose, Dempsey has been guaranteed $750,000 in cash for the bout, in addition to $25,000 for traveling and training expenses, seventy-five per cent of the moving picture returns and other sums which will swell his receipts to at least a million dollars. Since Firpo will get at least $250,000 it is evident the promoters expect to take in at least $1,500,000 at the gates.

When compared to the paltry $10,000 to $30,000 which the best fighters got a few years ago the sum is startling. But when compared to the sum paid men who rely on their brains for their incomes, it is a staggering rebuke to a civilized people.

To say that Dempsey doesn't deserve this million dollirs for boxing for half an hour or so is putting it mildly. Nobody would be. Nor can it be defended in the name of sport, with the plea that it offers an incentive to others to exert themselves. It is too big a price to set upon brawn.

Boxing is one of the finest of sports. But, like billiards, it is apt to get a bad name by the sins committed in its wake. We do not need fortunes in prizes as an incentive to youth to learn to box, and the danger of corruption is all too obvious. Prize fights do not and cannot encourage the average young man to learn self defense for its own sake. Few amateur boxers have ring aspirations. Few long to exhibit their skill in public. The main argument for the commercialized sport is that it offers men an opportunity to see men hit each other, for which spectacle they are willing to pay. Nor do we say it is abnormal to enjoy a fight between men, cocks or armies. It is an instinctive impulse to applaud combat. But we note that the more we govern our animal instincts, inhibit first impulses and cultivate the mental and spiritual in us, the more we approach that indefinite stage we term civilization. We cannot progress very far while the animal in us is sovereign, and we gauge our departure from barbarism by our subjection of the body by the mind.

The two best debaters in the country, spenking on any subject, could not draw a five thousand dollar house anywhere. Our foremost ministers, men who have spent far more time and care in preparation for their work than Dempsey, are at the top if they get $10,000 a year. Doctors, judges, teachers, editors if you please, all who work with their minds have a hard time to make ends meet. Then Dempsey pulls down a million dollars for half an hour's fisticuffs. It isn't fair.

When we as a nation or as a world feel chesty, and boast of our progress, count the steps leading back to the jungle and our savage forebears, we might think of this $1,500,000 being spent for one fight and check our self exaltation. We aren't arrived yet. We can still hear the chatter of monkeys and the rattle of spear on shield.

FORD'S LATEST FOLLY

The well-known manufacturer of the equally tin Lizzie has added another star to his earthly crown and got his name in the world's press in big headlines, for about the sixteenth time in as many weeks. His magnificnet dream of a model city at Muscle Shoals which he wished to take over from an already burdened government has apparently dissolved in the fog of distrust and jealousy which the nation settled around him. His edict that any employ who drank rum should be fired instantaneously aroused much praise and sore cynical comment, and found many ready to believe him a moonstruck radical or a business incompetent in spite of his millions, or both.

But his latest move is winning international regognition as one of the most stupendous and characteristic examples of his radical methods in business, and bringing him much commendation and some hostile and satirical criticism.

His purchase of the assets of the defunct Lincoln Motor Company even at less than half its valuation was regarded as a dubious venture. He paid only 47½ cents on the dollar for the stock which nobody else wanted. And when he deliberately paid the stockholders back every penny they had putu in, spending $4,000,000 in paying the company's debts where it was neither expected, requested or necessary, folks sat up and rubbed their eyes.

Just some more of Henry's folly, some said. Others said Ford was just getting some good publicity, while many think his friendship for Mr. Leland, head of the defunct company, was responsible.

But it seems far more likely, to one not obsessed with a bitter hostility and incredulity and distrust toward things altruistic, that Ford was actuated by an unselfish feeling in giving investors back the money they had put in, even though they had no legal or moral claim on him. Ford wouldn't spend four million dollars for the good will of a few hundred men, and Mr. Leland wouldn't permit such a tribute to their friendship.

Ford's latest folly, as some hail it, seems utterly at variance with customary business practice. Few other men would care what happened to the other fellow enough to return their money. Brokers are collecting the savings of salaried people every day, speculating with the money, and then 'failing' most opportunely. Banks fail with no strenuous efforts to redeem deposits. Ford seems in a class with himself.

He won't lose much by his generosity, but that doesn't deter from its merits. He can afford to give away many times four million lollars, but deserves just as much recognition. He is getting richer every day, but he makes thousands of folks happy with his cheap automobile, and we cheerfully make him richer. Probably, if some of his critics had bigger souls and broader minds, they could recognize in his efforts his expressed desire to make folks more happy and prosperous.

MORE FALSE PRIDE

The chief argument for the Ship Subsidy plan, given a death blow by a doubting Congress, was the supposed prestige which a gigantic merchant fleet would add to this nation, feared by many anxious upholders of the measure to be doomed to a back seat in the world's trade. The Ship Subsidy bill will not be resurrected, officials tell us. A subcommittee has been appointed to shape a new policy to be submitted to the Shipping Board and eventually to our representatives.

The problem of disposition of many ships we already own, which lie rusting and rotting at their piers, opens another problem. Some one suggested to sell them to other countries who want them. But our zealous national champions headed by Commissioner Lissner say this would never do. Added to fleets of England, France and Italy, these ships would increase the gulf which marks our lowly marine status. These countries would then compete even more strongly with American owned vessels. No, that would never do, they say.

The fact that the ships are depreciating in value thousands of dollars a day, costing vast sums for needless upkeep and cost the people an awful lot of money doesn't weigh much with these sentinels, anxiously guarding our national honor. Shipping interests here are overjoyed that their business won't be hurt, and shout "Bravo."

We should feel elated that officials are so proud of their national prestige that they refuse to realize a few million dollars by selling these rusting ships. We only wish we were as proud of them as they are of us. Were they to carry their exaggerated standards of honor into business, they would seek to operate on a grand scale for the sake of appearances, no matter what their capital, and losing money all the time. Which is, apparently, what they want America to do.

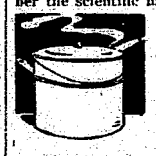
IMPORTANT FOOD PRINCIPLES



It is not necessary for us to remember the scientific names for the different food principles; it is sufficient if we have in mind an example of each. The most expensive and complex food which is necessary for health is protein, found in meats, eggs, milk, fish, beans and peas. Starch is found in vegetables, the potato being rich in starch. Sugar is found in fruits in the natural state, in honey, and in all dried fruits; mineral matter we obtain from the water we drink and the vegetables we eat.

As everything we eat, perhaps with no exception, has possibilities of harming this wonderful machine, if it is not properly masticated, so starch, the best of food, if indulged in in too large quantities, will also harm the body. Foods however good, in wrong combinations, will cause intestinal trouble. Protein foods at low heat will putrefy, giving off the most deadly of poisons, but with starch low heat, such as surrounds the food in the digestive tract, will cause fermentation and an acid which is the best of disinfectants. As the intestinal tract is inhabited by different kinds of bacteria up into the hundreds, each giving off its own peculiar poison, dead or alive, one may appreciate a little of what we owe to our starchy foods.

These starch granules, when submitted to moisture and high temperature, swell and burst and after being cooked become a paste easily attacked by the digestive juices.

In the month, by mixing with the saliva in proper mastication, begins the first stage of digestion and a very important one.

Too much starch and sugar causes excess of weight. A meal of bread, rice, and potatoes with a tapioca pudding is one with far too much starch. When more starch is eaten than is needed for the body uses, it is stored as sugar in the liver or around the heart, causing all sorts of disorders. Any organ smothered by fat is inactive and thus throws the body out of balance.

You will find dozens of combinations, surprisingly simple, that you have never tried.

...RTEST MONTH BRINGS NEW SALES RECORD

...ith 116,080 Ford cars sold at re... in February a new record for ... shortest month in the year has ...n established. February sales ex...ded those of January by more ...an 15,000 and marked the eleventh ...nth in which Ford sales have topped the 100,000 line.

This sales record bears out predictions made at the opening of the year that an acute shortage in Ford cars is certain and this shortage is expected to be felt within the next two months with the increased volume of car buying which is always attendant upon the spring months.

Even the high production schedule set at the Ford Motor Company's factory in Detroit, which will reach 6,000 cars and trucks a day about April 1, will be unable to meet the apparent demand for Ford products.

Anticipating a great increase in the demand for Ford cars during the present year the factory laid plans for increasing production to the 6,000 car a day schedule and since January first had been constantly speeding up manufacture to reach this figure. Demand so far has been of such great proportions as to absorb nearly all production, and stocks in hands of dealers are at present the lowest they have been in months.

February sales of 116,080 cars were made in the face of unfavorable weather conditions in many sections of the country which tied up freight traffic and prevented many deliveries. This was particularly true thruout the Northwest, the northern tier of states and in New England. In California, too, cold weather during a part of the month had its effect upon car sales.

Yet with even these unfavorable conditions, the February sales topped those of January by 15 per cent and set a new high record for mid-winter selling.

With February the eleventh month in which Ford car sales have gone over the 100,000 mark, the total for this period is close to 1,250,000 cars.

Peak car sales usually are reached during the summer months with drops in the fall and winter. This feature of automobile absorption by the buying public has been completely changed during the last few months thru the activities of the Ford dealer organization which has raised the "peak" line to include every month in the year.

Saline—Many dog owners perhaps do not know that they are violating the state dog law by allowing their dogs to roam about nights. A subscriber draws our attention to Sec. 3 of the Michigan dog law of 1919, which says that "every dog at all times between sunset of each day and sunrise the following day be confined upon the premises of its owner or custodian, except when said dog is otherwise under the reasonable control of some person." A night prowling dog is a considerable nuisance at times and it would stand owners in good stead to observe the law in this respect.—Observer.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Lansing—The Filkin capital punishment bill was defeated in the house of representatives, last week.

Lansing—To instruct all Michigan women in the workings of state legislation, was the object of the southeastern district meeting of Federation of Women's clubs, which convened here last week.

Grand Rapids—Alando Evans, 57, of Lakeview died last week at St. Mary's hospital as the result of an injury to the left eye and head when the edge of a board flying off a saw struck him in the eye.

Albion — Without formal ceremony, and in the presence of a few city officials, the first sod was turned, for the new $100,000 Sheldon Memorial hospital, which is expected to be completed by October 1.

Niles—Wilma Otteson, 17 years old, daughter of O. Otteson, of this city, died last week from "sleeping sickness," after a two weeks' illness. Until the end physicians worked with the girl in an effort to combat the strange malady.

Cheboygan—A conference of fruit growers of this section was held here last week, in the court house, Professor V. R. Gardner, head of the horticultural department of the Michigan Agricultural college was the speaker.

Jackson—Harvey Stone, who escaped from the Jackson prison September 21, 1916, was brought back to the prison last week to serve the remainder of his sentence of four and a half to 14 years, less than two years of which had been served when he made his escape.

St. Joseph—The jury to hear the case of the "Reds" is composed of one woman and eleven men. Among them are a grocer, a railway gateman, a housewife and nine farmers. Mrs. Olson, the sole woman juror, is the wife of Oscar Olson, superintendent of a factory here.

Kalamazoo—Furley Hoagland, confessed bank robber, was taken to Marquette prison last week in custody of Undersheriff Curtis Pringle, of this city, to begin a 20 to 30 year sentence. Hoagland was taken away secretly from the Kalamazoo county jail, following his unexpected plea of guilty.

Ann Arbor—With a vigor of expression that excelled any public speech Dr. Marion LeRoy Burton, president of the University of Michigan, told, last week, about 100 members of the Michigan Legislature what the university must have in the way of new construction for the health, safety and education of the students.

Traverse City—Students of Grand Traverse county normal, who went on strike last week have returned to their desks under County Commissioner Lee Hornsby, following the resignation of Mrs. Ida Crego, their supervisor. Fourteen of the 23 students walked out, demanding the dismissal of Mrs. Crego, whom they charged with inefficiency.

Lansing—With only 13 Wayne county representatives and five others voting in opposition, the house of representatives, last week, passed by a vote of 79 to 18, the Warner two-cent gasoline tax bill. Under terms of the bill there will be raised in this specific tax alone, the sum of $7,000,000 annually, an amount exceeding the aggregate levy for all state purposes just a little more than a decade ago.

Pontiac—Announcement was made last week by L. V. Belknap, for the Oakland county road commission, that motor trucks will be restricted to one-half gross loads on Oakland county highways. At present trucks are allowed three-quarter gross loads. The more drastic restriction has been decided upon to further protect the county's road system from damage while the frost is leaving the ground.

Lansing—The state administrative board last week authorized L. Whitney Watkins, commissioner of agriculture, to complete the survey of state farms, started some time ago and discontinued because of lack of funds in the department budget. Approximately $1,900 has been spent to date, and it will take $600 to complete the work. The survey, when completed, will be available for estimating the needs of the farms in the matter of equipment and personnel.

Benton Harbor—Mary Purnell, wife of Benjamin, head of the House of David colony at Benton Harbor, has announced that she will appear in Federal Court in Grand Rapids when the first of the suits by former members of the cult against Purnell to recover funds alleged to have been turned over to the cult leader is heard. Mrs. Purnell declared she would go on the stand and defend Benjamin against the charges that have been made against him.

Jackson—Three House members ran the engine from Lansing through Jackson to Ann Arbor in record breaking time. Chester A. Ferris acted as fireman, while Milo Johnson and Charles E. Bartlett took turns at engineer. At times they ran the train 65 miles an hour. The three members of the railroad and labor committees of the House, and they did the stunt to see if the Michigan Central engine equipment was up to all the specifications and requirements of the Michigan rail law.

Ann Arbor—A graduate course in orthodontia, the science of producing normal teeth, will be offered by the dental college of the University of Michigan during the next college year. It will be the only course of its kind in any American college.

Port Huron—Capt. William H. Reid, 51 years old, died in the Port Huron City Hospital last week, of pneumonia. For 30 years Capt. Reid and his brother, Capt. J. T. Reid, of this city, had been associated in the marine wrecking and steamship business.

Paw Paw—Nathanial Bangs, 90 years old, died at his home here last week. Mr Bangs was a pioneer in this locality and a charter member of the first farmers' club in southwestern Michigan. He was one of the few surviving members of McGowan Post, G. A. R.

Coldwater—William R. Card, 96 years old, the oldest known Branch county resident, and a Civil war veteran, is dead here. In accordance with his wish, he will be buried in his old Civil war jacket, with its badges and decorations. He has no living children.

Ironwood—Lumber valued at thousands of dollars is being hauled on tote roads from northern Michigan woods as result of heavy snows of the past few days. Lack of snow had held up lumbering operations and it had been feared by lumber men that they would be forced to leave the logs to rot.

Lansing—The fire insurance rating bureau bill, giving the state insurance department complete supervisory control over the fixing of rates, was passed by the house of representatives, last week, by 72 to 19 votes. It is said to be the most stringent fire insurance control law enacted by any state in the Union.

Lansing—Revising again the proposal that the state assume responsibility for construction and maintenance of all trunk line highways in the state including federal aid roads, Representative Charles Evans, of Tipton, introduced a bill in the house of representatives last week providing that the state bear 90 per cent of maintenance costs and the county 10 per cent.

Traverse City—A smaller bag limit on wall-eyed pike may result from a hearing of Grand Traverse sportsmen, attended by Deputy State Conservation Director David Jones, held here last week. The hearing was granted upon petitions recently filed with the conservation department by the Grand Traverse board of supervisors and the local Chamber of Commerce, urging that spearing of wall-eyed pike be prohibited.

Lansing—Smaller cities of central Michigan will be hard hit by the order of the state highway department, issued last week temporarily banning all busses of 16-person carrying capacity or over from the softened roads of the state. All bus lines running out of Lansing to Mason, Holt, St. Johns, Grand Ledge, Ionia and other points will be forced to discontinue service or else arrange for the use of touring cars temporarily.

Kalamazoo—With 2 2-to-1 decisions at Ypsilanti and a unanimous victory here, Kalamazoo college varsity debaters last week won a clear title to the state intercollegiate debate championship of the Michigan debate league. The Kalamazoo negative, at home, was an easy victory, Captain Harold Knight being invincible in rebuttal. The question was the immediate entrance of the United States into the league of nations.

Lansing—Senator George M. Condon, of Detroit, and H. Mosier, law clerk of the Senate, are working on a bill to establish a domestic relations court within the Circuit Court of Wayne County. Except that it would be a part of the present Circuit Court, the proposed tribunal would be similar to the domestic relations court established under the 1913 act, declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court the following year.

Escanaba—The "high fever" registered by Miss Evelyn Lyons for three weeks was declared a hoax last week by Dr. Harry J. Defnet, attending physician. The physician charged that the girl, by trickery, led observers to believe she was running a temperature in excess of 114. Dr. Defnet declared the girl used a tiny hot water bottle every time her temperature was taken, to force the mercury to appear to register more than 114 degrees.

Mt. Clemens—Flying activities of the air service at Selfridge field are reaching over wider territory with the advent of milder weather. Much of the state is covered by the fliers, in working out tactical problems under the direction of Major Spatz, officer commanding the field. Landings frequently are made at outlying points, as part of the training for actual battle practice. A number of new pursuit planes, of the single seated fast type, are being used at the field in test work.

Detroit—Plans formulated for continuation of Wayne County's road building projects destined to enhance the reputation of the county as the best paved in the United States have been announced by Edward N. Hines, chairman of the Wayne County Road Commission, the statement conveying the information that 50 miles of concrete road are to be built this year. The road commission's plans contemplate improvement of many roads and widening of several, with concrete and steel bridges and connecting links between main arteries.

BREVITIES.

Stockbridge—Matthew Lehman, a former resident of Sylvan, has been placed in nomination for supervisor on the democrat ticket.

Grass Lake—Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Chapman and Mr. and Mrs. Madison Davis were Wednesday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Jones, celebrating the latter's 40th wedding anniversary.—News.

Jackson—John Stewart, one of the 23 alleged bootleggers taken in the raid of February 28, was bound over to circuit court Friday afternoon by the lower court. As he was serving a sentence for a similar charge at the time of his latest arrest, no bail was offered.—News.

Ypsilanti—Mrs. John MacGillivary has just received as a gift from a friend in Detroit a picture of a Grecian head, steel engraved and framed in walnut. The picture has been in this same frame for 150 years, and the frame is just beginning to chip.—Record.

Milan—Spring must be here for the usual number of movers are to be seen on our streets and many are the calls we have to know of houses to rent. Mother Nature is not in such a hurry about spring and the ground is covered with snow and the weather cold and disagreeable.—Leader.

Jackson—After seven years of freedom, following his escape from the prison here in 1916 Harvey Stone is back behind the gray walls having been arrested in Cleveland when he attempted to pawn diamonds. Stone had served two years of a 14 year sentence when he escaped. Following the escape he went to Detroit and was married. He has an 18 months old child.

Jackson—Claud De Long and Herbert Worden, arraigned for jumping on loaded freight cars in the Michigan Central yards, were arraigned before Justice Bailey Friday and sentenced to 10 days each in jail. The railroad officials stated that they had been forced to pay $500 damages for injuries to the contents of the cars in question.

Ann Arbor—Mumps is increasing here, 11 cases being reported to the city health officer during the week ending Saturday. Ten cases of other communicable diseases were reported, including three of diphtheria, two of pneumonia and one each of whooping cough, measles, scarlet fever, erysipelas and chicken pox. One death from pneumonia was reported this week.—Times News.

Ann Arbor—Lee Freeman, Negro, Ypsilanti, Thursday afternoon was brought to the county jail charged with violating the terms of his probation. Freeman had been placed on probation by Judge George W. Sample when he was arraigned during this term of court on a charge of violating the liquor laws. He was convicted Thursday in Justice M. B. Stadtmiller's court in Ypsilanti of assault and battery on his wife. Sentence was suspended until action was taken by the circuit judge.

Jackson—Burglars entered the Dean Fuel & Supply Company office at 1400 Wildwood avenue some time Saturday night and stole $250 from the safe, a number of checks and about $3 in small change.

The man who locked up Saturday night was the one who came and opened the place early Sunday morning. He found the safe open and papers scattered about. All the money and checks were missing. He said he remembered locking the safe Saturday night. The police department was informed of the loss and the detective bureau announced Sunday evening that no clue had been discovered.—News.

Manchester—Again the safety of Arbeiter hall was questioned Sunday, but there was no panic. The cause of the scare may have been on account of the unusual number of big men in the audience—weighty men we mean. Every so often a cry is raised that the floor of the hall sags to almost the breaking point, but it has never broken, and we hope never will. There is a heavy brick wall on each side of the main stairway, that reaches to the third floor and the floor rests upon these walls as well as upon the outside walls of the building, and it would seem an impossibility for the floors to give away, whatever weight was put upon them.—Enterprise.

Ypsilanti—Mrs. P. R. Cleary of Ypsilanti is corresponding with the old settlers of the city and their descendants in order to get interesting data in regard to events that transpired there a hundred years ago. Dr. Maria Norris of Grand Rapids, a granddaughter of Mark Norris, who settled in Ypsilanti in 1828, has sent some valuable documental information which will be kept for future observation. Lyman D. Norris, son of Mark Norris, delivered an oration at the 50th anniversary of the settlement of the city, in 1873. Ypsilanti expects to celebrate the 100th anniversary on the 4th of July this year, and committees are at work preparing a suitable program. A pageant will be one of the prominent features.

STATE OF MICHIGAN

The Circuit Court for the county of Washtenaw In Chancery.

Kate Bell Tressler, plaintiff
Frank L. Tressler, defendant

At a session of said Court held at the Court House in the city of Ann Arbor, in the county of Washtenaw, and state of Michigan, on Tuesday, the Twentieth day of February, A. D. 1923.

Present, the Honorable George W. Sample, Circuit Judge.

In this cause it appearing by affidavit on file that the defendant Frank L. Tressler is not a resident of this state to-wit, the state of Michigan, but is a resident of the state of Illinois:

On Motion of Jacob F. Fahrner and George J. Burke, Attorneys for said plaintiff, it is ordered that the appearance of the said defendant, Frank L. Tressler, be entered in this cause within three months from the date of this order, and that in case of his appearance that he cause his answer to the bill of complaint to be filed and a copy thereof to be served upon the attorneys for plaintiff within fifteen days after service on him or his attorney of a copy of the said bill of complaint, and in default thereof that the said bill of complaint be taken as confessed by the said defendant, Frank L. Tressler.

And it is further ordered that the said plaintiff cause this order to be published in the Chelsea Standard, a newspaper printed, published and circulating in said county and that such publication be commenced within twenty days from the date of this order, and that such publication be continued therein once in each week for six weeks in succession, or that the said plaintiff cause a copy of this order to be personally served on the said defendant, Frank L. Tressler, at least twenty days before the time above prescribed for his appearance.

Geo. W. Sample,
Circuit Judge

Examined, countersigned and entered by me:
Jay G. Pray,
Clerk.

Jacob F. Fahrner and Geo. J. Burke,
4-19 Attorneys for Plaintiff.

MRS. CHARLES MERKER

Mrs. Flora Merker, aged 62 years, died from a stroke of apoplexy Friday evening, March 16, 1922.

Mrs. Merker had been spending the evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Young and left for her home about 9:30 apparently in good spirits. As she reached the home of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Gottschling, which adjoins her residence, she was stricken and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gottschling ran to her assistance and when his father reached them Mrs. Merker had passed away.

She was united in marriage with Chas. Merker about 33 years ago. Mr. Merker died seven years ago last September.

She is survived by her father, R. C. Brownell of Hanover and a brother who resides in the west.

The funeral was held from the home on North street Tuesday afternoon, Rev. C. S. Risley conducting the services. Burial in Oak Grove cemetery.

Featuring New Spring Coats and Dresses

These are the medium priced coats and dresses that have already brought their message of Spring to so many Women and Misses of Chelsea. A message of style and beauty combined with durability and a price that gives unmatchable value. Is your garment now here?

Betty Wales Dresses

Sport Coats--

Gerona, Primavera, Velayne, Fashona and Lustrosa—the beautiful soft and velvety fabrics that new coats prefer. All of Spring's best colors are found in them, and, of course, plenty of navy and black.

Sport coats in the newest modes at $18.50, $25.00, $35.00, $25.00 and $50.00.

- Flare Back Models
- Straight-line Effects
- Mannish Belted Coats

You'll like the easy grace of these splendid coats, with their appearance of being ready for any occasion—business, general wear or to protect one's dressy gowns. In fact, a coat of this type is practically indispensable in any wardrobe.

- Imported Fabrics
- Camel's Hair Cloths
- Angora Fleeces
- Overplaid Effects
- Fine Polo Cloths

Panels tailored some with convertible Sleeves with roll collars and choice of set-in or raglan sleeves. All with convenient pockets.

Beautifully lined throughout with crepe or fine peau de cygne in harmonizing shades.

New Easter Shoes--

New Easter pumps and oxfords are now here. Made of best vici and patent leathers. Pumps have one and two straps. Some have the low heels and others the popular Cuban heel but all have the very best rubber fixed heels. Ask to see the new oxford with the arch support.

Prices are $5.00, $6.00, $6.50 and $7.50.

New Silk Dresses--

at $20.00, $25.00 and $35.00.

The silhouette of longer, softer lines. Longer skirts, longer waists, slightly bloused.

Necklines, long on the shoulder and high and rounded in front—with the lower square neck line also, that many women find most becoming. Sleeves, either very short or long and flowing, wide at the wrists, if they are sleeves, and very often mere draperies covering the arms.

Colors are Cocoa, Laurin, Green, Tans, Taupes and Printed Silks, with plenty of Navys and Blacks. Never have the styles and values been so satisfactory to our customers. Don't fail to see these dresses.

Beautiful Silk Hose--

Made by some of the very best makers in America. All the new shades are in stock.

Luxite full fashioned pure thread silk hose at $2.50 and $3.00.

Corticelli full fashioned pure thread silk hose at $2.50 and $3.00.

Is America about to assume the leading role in things musical? So reads an article in one of our leading dailies. Community music and community interest in music has made satisfactory progress during the last year. The music memory contest has stimulated and aroused the enthusiasm of many. Last year the community band, sponsored by the merchants, gave several concerts of decided merit. Municipal bands play every day during the summer in the cities and also in many of the smaller places. Will it be possible for the people of Chelsea and vi-

J. A. Kaercher, insurance agent, 516 S. Madison street, Chelsea, says: "I was all run down when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. At first I didn't know what was wrong with me until my kidneys began to show signs of disorder. My back had a dull pain in it and there was a sharp pain through my right side. Every time I stooped I got dizzy. I tried different remedies but Doan's did me more good than anything ever used. Two boxes cured me up in good shape so I am only too pleased to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

Price 60c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Kaercher had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y. Adv.

LOCAL THEATRE BOOKS WALTON PRODUCTION

Keeping in mind that the best is none too good for the local theatre going public, the management of the Princess theatre has added another stellar attraction to the long list of premier productions being shown here. The latest attraction announced is that for Wednesday and Thursday, March 28 and 29, when Gladys Walton, Universal screen star, will appear in "The Girl Who Ran Wild."

Miss Walton will be shown at her best in this picture, when she will take the star role in the finest and most lovable characterization of her career, as Bret Harte's famous wild girl of the mountains.

The play is adapted from Harte's "M'liss," and is directed by Rupert Julian. Much interest is being manifested in the announcement which has just been made by the local picture show proprietors.

American Kerosene
Burns Freely and Uniformly

Every user of Kerosene knows that to give satisfaction, whether used for illuminating, heat or power, it must burn freely, dry and with a steady uniform flame.

American Kerosene, because it does burn freely and uniformly is the ideal oil for use in your incubator or brooder. It burns with a steady blue white flame, which insures an even temperature twenty-four hours a day. American Kerosene is a pure oil that is odorless, smokeless and absolutely safe to use.

As a tractor fuel, American Kerosene has proven economical and dependable. Economical, because it develops more power per gallon. Dependable because of its uniform quality.
These quality features of American Kerosene make it also desirable for lighting and heating purposes.

Why?

American Kerosene is a product of superior excellence--

Because, It is refined from selected crude oil.

Because, Of the skilled methods employed in its refining.

Because, It is rigidly laboratory checked and tested.

Because, It must conform to the American Certified Quality guarantee.

Because, This product must be uniform in quality.

Because, American Kerosene has proven satisfactory to thousands of discriminating users it must be a product of unusual excellence.

MRS. D. B. TAYLOR

Mrs. D. B. Taylor died at the family home in Lansing on Monday, March 12, 1923, at the age of 78 years and 6 months, two weeks after she had suffered a second stroke of paralysis.

Mrs. Libbie S. Taylor was born in Chelsea, October 19, 1844, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Congdon, pioneers in Washtenaw County, and her father was one of the founders and builders of the village of Chelsea. Libbie S. Congdon was one of the first graduates of the Chelsea high school and afterwards of the Normal college at Ypsilanti and was then preceptress of the Chelsea high school for many years. She was united in marriage with David B. Taylor on the 31st day of December, 1872. They lived 7 years at Springfield, Mo., and 24 years at Chelsea and from 1900 to the death of the deceased in Ingham county, Michigan. They had lived together 50 years December 31st last.

She is survived by her husband, two daughters, Mrs. Cora Way of Jackson, Mrs. Eva Gildersleeve of Lansing; two sons, Frank C. Taylor, manager of the Taylor Abstract Co. of Ingham County, Michigan, and A. W. Taylor of Lansing; one sister, Mrs. Lois Bacon of Chelsea; two brothers, Andrew J. Congdon of Detroit and Frank Congdon of Arizona, and many grandchildren.

Mrs. Taylor was a model wife, mother and member of the church and Eastern Star in both of which she was an untiring worker and by both her departure is very much regretted and lamented. Her place can never be filled either in the desolate home or in the hearts of a multitude of friends.

The remains were buried in the family lot in Oak Grove cemetery, Chelsea, Michigan.

MRS. CAROLINE TOWNSEND

Miss Caroline W. Dixon, daughter of David K. and Zillah Tyler Dixon, was born in Lima township, Michigan, February 10, 1845, and passed away at her home on Madison street, Chelsea, Friday, March 16, 1923, following a stroke of apoplexy.

She was united in marriage with Uriah Henry Townsend January 1, 1867. Mr. Townsend died October 18, 1906. Mr. and Mrs. Townsend spent the first two years of their married life in Lima but the family home has been in Chelsea for more than fifty years. Mrs. Townsend had attended the Congregational church for many years and was a member of Harmony Chapter. She was a charter member of the L. O. T. M.

She is survived by two children, Homer Townsend of Chelsea and Mrs. Luella Mellencamp of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, three grandchildren and one brother, David D. Dixon of Dexter. One daughter, Luanna, died in 1880.

The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at the residence with interment in Oak Grove cemetery, Rev. C. S. Risley officiating.

SYNOPSIS

PROLOGUE.—Seeking gold in the desert, "Cameron," solitary prospector, forms a partnership with an unknown man whom he later learns is Jonas Warren, father of a girl whom Cameron wronged, but later married, back in Illinois. Cameron's explanations appease Warren, and the two proceed together. Taking refuge from a sandstorm in a cave, Cameron discovers gold, but too late; both men are dying. Cameron leaves evidence, in the cave, of their discovery of gold, and personal documents.

CHAPTER I.—Richard Gale, adventurer, in Casita, Mexican border town, meets George Thorne, lieutenant in the Ninth cavalry, old college friend. Thorne tells Gale he is there to save Mercedes Castaneda, Spanish girl, his affianced wife, from Rojas, Mexican bandit.

CHAPTER II.—Gale "roughhouses" Rojas and his gang, with the help of two American cowboys, and he, Mercedes and Thorne escape. A bugle call from the fort orders Thorne to his regiment. He leaves Mercedes under Gale's protection.

CHAPTER III.—The pair, aided by the cowboys who had assisted Gale in the escape, Charlie Ladd and Jim Lash, arrive in safety at a ranch known as Forlorn River, well across the border.

CHAPTER IV.—The fugitives are at Tom Belding's home. Belding is immigration inspector. Living with him are his wife and stepdaughter, Nell Burton. Gale, with Ladd and Lash, take service with Belding as rangers. Gale telling Belding the cause of his being a wanderer a misunderstanding with his father concerning the son's business abilities.

CHAPTER V.—Mercedes gets word to Thorne of her safety. Dick also writes to his parents, informing them of his whereabouts. Nell's personality, and her kindness, attract Gale.

CHAPTER VI.—Riding the range, Gale falls in with a party of three Mexican raiders encamped at a water hole. Watching his opportunity to oust them, he sees two Indians ride into the camp. One of them, a Yaqui, is evidently badly wounded, and the Mexicans seek to kill him in a cruel way. Dick drives them off, conveying the wounded Yaqui to Belding's ranch.

CHAPTER VII.—The Indian is taken in, cared for and remains in Belding's services, becoming Dick's ardent admirer. Gale's admiration for Nell increases, and he believes she is not averse to his attentions. Belding's horses, thoroughbreds, the pride of his life, after his wife and stepdaughter, are run off by Mexicans.

CHAPTER VIII.—Gale, with Ladd, Lash and the Yaqui, pursue the raiding party over the desert, finally overtaking them. Five of the six thieves are killed and the party of whites, with the recovered horses, return to the ranch in triumph.

CHAPTER IX.—Gale secures from Mrs. Belding what he feels is reluctant permission to allow him to seek Nell for a wife. He begins his courtship with energy, confident that he can win her.

CHAPTER X.—Not getting word from Thorne, whose period of army service has expired, Mercedes loses heart. Nell, although forbidden, rides to Casita to seek information of him. She finds he is a prisoner of Rojas, and is instrumental in effecting his escape, bringing him to Mercedes at Belding's ranch. Thorne and Mercedes are married. Rojas, with a large force of raiders, appears at Belding's and demands Mercedes be surrendered to him. Fearing their ability to stand off the bandits, it is arranged that the three rangers, with the Yaqui as guide, and Thorne, convey Mercedes across the desert to Yuma, where she will be in safety. The party sets out.

CHAPTER XI.—They find the way to Yuma blocked by their enemies and are forced to take to the lava beds. Rojas, with his men, overtake them, but the Yaqui, familiar with the country, is confident they can beat him off.

CHAPTER XII.—The rangers find a place of safety for Mercedes and the fight begins. Three of the whites, Ladd, Lash and Thorne, are badly wounded, but Rojas, though he succeeds in finding Mercedes' hiding place, is killed by the Yaqui, the remainder of the Mexicans fleeing.

"Well, today, just now, when I was riding up the valley road I came upon the same fellows. They had instruments and were surveying. Remembering Dick, and how he always wished for an instrument to help work out his plan for irrigation, I was certainly surprised to see these strangers surveying—and surveying upon Laddy's plot of land. It was a sandy road there, and Jose happened to be walking. So I reined in and asked these engineers what they were doing. The leader, who was that same bold fellow who had followed me, seemed much pleased at being addressed. He said he was glad to tell me he was going to run water all over Altar valley. Dad, you can bet that made me wild. That was Dick's plan, his discovery, and here were surveyors on Laddy's claim.

"Then I told him that he was working on private land and he'd better get off. He said something about not seeing any squatters on the land, and then he shut up tight on that score. But he began to be flirty again. He got hold of Jose's bridle, and before I could catch my breath he said I was a peach, that he wanted to make a date with me, that his name was Chase, that he owned a gold mine in Mexico. He said a lot more I didn't gather, but when he called me 'Dearie' I—well, I lost my temper.

"I jerked on the bridle and told him to let go. He held on and rolled his eyes at me. He seemed sure of conquest. One thing was certain, he didn't know the least bit about horses. It scared me the way he got in front of Jose. I thanked my stars I wasn't up on Blanco Diablo. Well, Dad, I'm a little ashamed now, but I was mad. I slashed him across the face with my quirt. Jose jumped and knocked Mr. Chase into the sand. I didn't get the horse under control till I was out of sight of those surveyors, and then I let him run home."

"Nell, I guess you punished the fellow enough. Maybe he's only a conceited sorty. But I don't like that sort of thing. It isn't western."

"I'm sorry now, Dad. Perhaps the fellow was hurt. But what could I do? Let's forget all about it, and I'll be careful where I ride in the future.

. . . Dad, what does it mean, this surveying around Forlorn River?"

"I don't know, Nell," replied Belding, thoughtfully. "It worries me. It looks good for Forlorn River, but bad for Dick's plan to irrigate the valley. Lord, I'd hate to have some one forestall Dick on that!"

"No, no, we won't let anybody have Dick's rights," declared Nell.

"Where have I been keeping myself not to know about these surveyors?" muttered Belding. "They must have just come."

Belding discovered that he was, indeed, the last man of consequence in Forlorn River to learn of the arrival of Ben Chase and son, mine owners and operators in Sonora. They, with a force of miners, had been besieged by rebels and finally driven off their property. This property was not destroyed, but held for ransom. And the Chases, pending developments, had packed outfits and struck for the border. Casita had been their objective point, but, for some reason which Belding did not learn, they had arrived instead at Forlorn River. It had taken Ben Chase just one day to see the possibilities of Altar valley, and in three days he had men at work.

Belding returned home without going to see the Chases and their operations. He wanted to think over the situation. Next morning he went out to the valley to see for himself. Mexicans were hastily erecting adobe houses upon Ladd's one hundred and sixty acres, upon Dick Gale's, upon Jim Lash's and Thorne's. There were men staking the valley floor and the river bed. That was sufficient for Belding. He turned back toward town and headed for the camp of these intruders.

He came to a big tent with a huge canvas fly stretched in front, under which sat several men in their shirt sleeves. They were talking and smoking.

"My name's Belding. I want to see this Mr. Chase," said Belding, gruffly.

Slow-witted as Belding was, and absorbed in his own feelings, he yet saw plainly that his advent was disturbing to these men. One of them, a tall, rugged man with sharp face and shrewd eyes and white hair, got up and offered his hand.

"I'm Chase, senior," he said. "My son Radford Chase is here somewhere. You're Belding, the line inspector, I take it? I meant to call on you."

He seemed a rough-and-ready, loud-spoken man, withal cordial enough.

"Yes, I'm the inspector," replied Belding, ignoring the proffered hand, "and I'd like to know what in the h—l you mean by taking up land claims—staked ground that belongs to my rangers?"

"Land claims?" slowly echoed Chase, studying his man. "We're taking up only unclaimed land."

"That's a lie. You couldn't miss the stakes."

"Well, Mr. Belding, as to that, I think my men did run across some staked ground. But we recognize only squatters. If your rangers think they've got property just because they drove a few stakes in the ground they're much mistaken. A squatter has to build a house and live on his land so long, according to law, before he owns it."

This argument was unanswerable, and Belding knew it.

"According to law!" exclaimed Belding. "Then you own up; you've jumped our claims."

"Mr. Belding, I'm a plain business man. I come along. I see a good opening. Nobody seems to have tenable grants. I stake out claims, locate squatters, start to build. It seems to me your rangers have overlooked certain precautions. That's unfortunate for them. I'm prepared to hold my claim and to back all the squatters who work for me. If you don't like it you can carry the matter to Tucson. The law will uphold me."

"The law? Say, on this southwest border we haven't any law except a man's word and a gun."

"Then you'll find United States law has come along with Ben Chase," replied the other, snapping his fingers.

"You're not a westerner?" queried Belding.

"No, I'm from Illinois."

"I thought the West hadn't bred you. I know your kind. You'd last a long time on the Texas border; now, wouldn't you? You're one of the land and water hogs that has come to root in the West. Mr. Chase, the West would fare better and last longer if men like you were driven out."

"Mr. Chase, the West Would Fare Better and Last Longer If Men Like You Were Driven Out."

"You can't drive me out."

"I'm not so sure of that. Wait till my rangers come back."

CHAPTER XIV.

A Lost Son.

Time passed. The population of Forlorn River grew apace. Belding, who had once been the head of the community, found himself a person of *little consequence. Even had he de*sired it he would not have had any voice in the selection of postmaster, sheriff, and a few other officials. The Chases divided their labors between Forlorn River and their Mexican gold mine, which had been restored to them. The desert trips between these two places were taken in automobiles. A month's time made the motor cars almost as familiar a sight in Forlorn River as they had been in Casita before the revolution.

Belding's wrath at the usurping Chases increased as he slowly realized his powerlessness to cope with such men. They were promoters, men of big interests and wide influence in the Southwest. The more they did for Forlorn River the less reason there seemed to be for his own grievance. He had to admit that it was personal; that he and Gale and the rangers would never have been able to develop the resources of the valley as these men were doing it.

April arrived with no news of the rangers. From Casita came vague reports of raiders in the Sonoyta country—reports impossible to verify until his Mexican rangers returned. When these men rode in, one of them, Gonzales, an intelligent and reliable half-breed, said he had met prospectors at the oasis. They had just come in on the Camino del Diablo, reported a terrible trip of heat and drought, and not a trace of the Yaqui's party.

"That settles it," declared Belding. "Yaqui never went to Sonoyta. He's circled round to the Devil's road, and the rangers, Mercedes, Thorne, the horses—they—I'm afraid they have been lost in the desert. It's an old story on Camino del Diablo."

He had to tell Nell that, and it was an ordeal which left him weak.

Mrs. Belding listened to him, and was silent for a long time while she held the stricken Nell to her breast. Then she opposed his convictions with that quiet strength so characteristic of her arguments.

"But mother, they're gone seven weeks. Seven weeks! At the most I gave them six weeks. Seven weeks in the desert!"

"How do the Yaquis live?" she asked.

Belding could not reply to that, but hope revived in him. He had faith in his wife, though he could not in the least understand what he imagined was something mystic in her.

"Years ago when I was searching for my father I learned many things about this country," said Mrs. Belding. "You can never tell how long a man may live in the desert. The fiercest, most terrible and inaccessible places often have their hidden oasis. In his later years my father became a prospector. That was strange to me, for he never cared for gold or money. I learned that he was often gone in the desert for weeks, once for months. Then the time came when he never came back. That was years before I reached the southwest border and heard of him. Even then I did not for long give up hope of his coming back. I know now—something tells me—indeed, it seems his spirit tells me—he was lost. But I don't have that feeling for Yaqui and his party. Yaqui has given Rojas the slip or has ambushed him in some trap. Probably that took time and a long journey into Sonora. The Indian is too wise to start back now over dry trails. He'll curb the rangers; he'll wait. I seem to know this, dear Nell, so be brave, patient. Dick Gale will come back to you."

That talk with the strong mother worked a change in Nell and in Belding. Nell, who had done little but brood and watch the west and take violent rides, seemed to settle into a waiting patience that was sad, yet serene. Belding, who had been breaking under the strain of worry, recovered himself so that to outward appearance he was his old self. He alone knew, however, that his humor was forced, and that the slow burning wrath he felt for the Chases was fusing into hate.

Belding argued with himself that if Ben Chase and his son, Radford, had turned out to be big men in other ways than in the power to carry on great enterprises he might have become reconciled to them. But the father was greedy, grasping, hard, cold; the son added to those traits an overbearing disposition to rule, and he showed a fondness for drink and cards. These men were developing the valley, to be sure, and a horde of poor Mexicans and many Americans were benefiting from that development; nevertheless, these Chases were operating in a way which proved they cared only for themselves.

Belding went to Casita with a number of his white thoroughbreds and shipped them to ranchers and horse-breeders in Texas. Then, being near the railroad, and having time, he went up to Tucson. There he learned some interesting particulars about the Chases. They had an office in the city; influential friends in the capitol. They were powerful men in the rapidly growing finance of the West. They had interested the Southern Pacific railroad, and in the near future a branch line was to be constructed from San Felipe to Forlorn River. These details of the Chase development were insignificant when compared to a matter striking close home to Belding. His responsibility had been subtly attacked. A doubt had been cast upon his capability of executing the duties of immigration inspector to the best advantage of the state. Belding divined that this was only an entering wedge. The Chases were bent upon driving him out of Forlorn River; but, perhaps to serve better their own ends, they were proceeding at leisure. Belding returned home consumed by rage. But he controlled it. For the first time in his life he was afraid of himself. He had his wife and Nell to think of; and the old law of the West had gone forever.

"Dad, there's another Rojas round these diggings," was Nell's remark, after the greetings were over and the usual questions and answers passed.

Belding's exclamation was cut short by Nell's laugh. She was serious with a kind of amused contempt.

"Mr. Radford Chase!"

"Now Nell, what the—" roared Belding.

"Hush, Dad! Don't swear," interrupted Nell. "I only meant to tease you."

"Nell, you may as well tell him and have it over," said Mrs. Belding, quietly.

"Well, if you weren't such a good old blind dad you'd have seen long ago the way Mr. Radford Chase ran round after me. At first it was only annoying, and I did not want to add to your worries. But these two weeks you've been gone I've been more than annoyed. After that time I struck Mr. Chase with my quirt he made all possible efforts to meet me. He did meet me wherever I went. He sent me letters till I got tired of sending them back. He followed me until it was less embarrassing for me to let him walk with me and talk his head off. He made love to me. He begged me to marry him. I told him I was already in love and engaged to be married. He said that didn't make any difference. Then I called him a fool.

"Next time he saw me he said he must explain. He meant I was being true to a man who, everybody on the border knew, had been lost in the desert. That—that hurt. Maybe—maybe it's true. Sometimes it seems terribly true. Since then, of course, I have stayed in the house to avoid being hurt again. I feel like a poor little rabbit holed by a hound. And I daren't peep out."

Somehow the thing struck Belding as funny, and he laughed. He had not had a laugh for so long that it made him feel good. He stopped only at sight of Nell's surprise and pain. Then he put his arms around her.

"Never mind, dear. I'm an old bear. Nell, it's only the old story. The fellows fall in love with you. It's your good looks, Nell. What a price women like you and Mercedes have to pay for beauty; I'd a d— good deal rather be ugly as a land fence. . . . Well, the first time I catch this locoed Romeo sneaking round here I'll—I'll—"

"Never Mind, Dear. I'm an Old Bear."

"Dad, you promised."

"Confound it, Nell, I promised not to pack a gun. That's all. I'll only shoo this fellow off the place, gently, mind you, gently. I'll leave the rest for Dick Gale!"

April grew apace, and soon gave way to May. One morning Belding was called from some garden work by the whirring of an automobile and a "Hollo!" He saw an elderly, sallow-faced, rather frail-appearing man who was an entire stranger to him; a handsome dark-eyed woman whose hair showed white through her veil; and a superbly built girl, whose face made Belding at once think of Dick Gale.

"Is this Mr. Tom Belding, inspector of immigration?" inquired the gentleman, courteously.

"I'm Belding, and I know who you are," replied Belding in hearty amaze, as he stretched for his big hand. "You're Dick Gale's dad—the governor, Dick used to say. I'm sure glad to meet you."

"Thank you. Yes, I'm Dick's governor, and here, Mr. Belding—Dick's mother and his sister Elsie."

Beaming his pleasure, Belding shook hands with the ladies, who showed their agitation clearly.

"Mr. Belding, I've come west to look up my lost son," said Mr. Gale. "His sister's letters were unanswered. We haven't heard from him in months. Is he still here with you?"

"Well, now, sure I'm awful sorry," began Belding, his slow mind at work. "Dick's away just now—been away for a considerable spell. I'm expecting him back any day. . . . Won't you come in? You're all dusty and hot and tired. Come in, and let mother and Nell make you comfortable. Of course you'll stay. We've a big house. You must stay till Dick comes back. Maybe that'll be— Aw, I guess it won't be long. . . . Let me handle the baggage, Mr. Gale. . . . Come in. I sure am glad to meet you all."

Eager, excited, delighted, Belding went on talking as he ushered the Gales into the sitting-room, presenting them in his hearty way to the astounded Mrs. Belding and Nell. For the space of a few moments his wife and daughter were bewildered. When the Gales had been shown to rooms, Mrs. Belding gained the poise momentarily lost; but Nell came rushing back, wilder than a deer, in a state of excitement strange even for her.

"Oh! Dick's mother, his sister!" whispered Nell. "Oh, I knew it! I always guessed it! Dick's people are proud, rich; they're somebody. I thought I'd faint when she looked at me. She was just curious—curious, but so cold and proud. She was wondering about me. Dick has never written her that he's—he's engaged to me. I'm wearing his ring. It was his mother's, he said. I won't—I can't take it off. And I'm scared. . . . But the sister—oh, she's lovely and sweet—proud, too. I felt warm all over when she looked at me. I—I wanted to kiss her. She looks like Dick when he first came to us. But he's changed. They'll hardly recognize him. . . . To think they've come! And I had to be looking a fright, when of all times on earth I'd want to look my best."

Nell, out of breath, ran away evidently to make herself presentable, according to her idea of the exigency of the case. Belding caught a glimpse of his wife's face as she went out, and it wore a sad, strange, anxious expression.

Presently the Gales came back into the sitting-room, looking very different without the long gray cloaks and veils. Belding saw distinction and elegance. Mr. Gale seemed a grave, troubled, kindly person, ill in body and mind. Belding received the same impression of power that Ben Chase had given him, only here it was minus any hardness or hard quality. He gathered that Mr. Gale was a man of authority. Mrs. Gale rather frightened Belding, but he could not have told why. The girl was just like Dick as he used to be.

Belding imagined the sooner the Gales were told that Dick was to marry Nell the better for all concerned, and especially for Nell. In the general conversation that ensued he sought for an opening in which to tell this important news, but he was kept so busy answering questions about his position on the border, the kind of place Forlorn River was, the reason for so many tents, etc., that he was unable to find opportunity.

"It's interesting, very interesting," said Mr. Gale. "At another time I want to learn all you'll tell me about the West. It's new to me. I'm surprised, amazed, sir, I may say. . . . But, Mr. Belding, what I want to know most is about my son. I'm broken in health. I've worried myself ill over him. I don't mind telling you, sir, that we quarreled. He went away. And I've come to see I didn't know Richard. I was wrong to upbraid him. For a year we've known nothing of his doings, and now for almost six months we've not heard from him at all. Frankly, Mr. Belding, I weakened first, and I've come to hunt him up. My fear is that I didn't start soon enough."

Mr. Gale paused, and the white hand he raised expressively shook a little.

Belding was not so thick-witted where men were concerned. He saw how the matter lay between Dick Gale and his father.

"Well, Mr. Gale, sure most young bucks from the East go to the bad out here," he said bluntly. "They blow their money, then go to punching cows, take to whisky."

Mr. Gale lifted haggard eyes.

The junior section of the family night Bible Study class of the M. E. church held their last meeting on Thursday night with a final test.

Below are the names of those who had 100 per cent papers in this test: Ellwood Bearbower, Leon Beutler, Margaret Heselschwerdt, Edna Hemstreet, Dorothea Steiner, Frederic Steiner, Alberta Winans, Mary Jean Winans, Robert Winans. The following deserve honorable mention: Myrtle Hagadon 98 per cent, Carl Risley 98 per cent, Thelma Bahnmiller 92, Laverne Foster 90, Lyle Heselschwerdt 90, Agnes Dancer 82, Elizabeth King 82, Claude Rogers 80.

The class was divided into two sections under the leadership of Thelma Bahnmiller and Carl Risley respectively. Thelma's division having to their credit 5584½ points in attendance, department and scholarship combined. Carl's side had 531 points.

To the division with the least number of points falls the lot of making all the plans and arrangements for a Junior League banquet which will be held Friday night, April 6, to which the mothers and fathers will be invited. This will be Chelsea's first Junior League banquet.

FELLOWSHIP CLUB MONTHLY SESSION

Supper, followed by stunts, games and other amusements in which all had a part, featured the regular monthly meeting of the Fellowship club of the Methodist church in the church parlors Monday evening.

More than one hundred members with their families were in attendance at the meeting, enjoying the evening's festivities together.

While it had been announced that the meeting would be held at the Welfare building, the extreme cold weather prevented the hall being heated sufficiently hence the change to the church parlors for the supper. Word passed around during the late afternoon reached nearly all and few were inconvenienced by the decision to hold the meeting at the church.

Puts Seed and Fertilizer at Bottom of Furrows

Absolutely uniform depth of planting, which results in all grain coming up evenly and ready for harvest at one time—even distribution of fertilizer—that is what you get when use the

JOHN DEERE VAN BRUNT FERTILIZER GRAIN DRILL

You are assured of uniform depth of planting by the Van Brunt [illegible] delivery type of single-disc furrow opener. Metal reel tubes and closed-delivery disc boots conduct seed to the bottom of furrows of uniform depth and there cover it.

You have accurate control of both grain and fertilizer—the patented Van Brunt adjustable gate force-feed handles any size seed, from alfalfa to beans, without crushing or damaging the seed, and without choking up in the grain box. An even, continuous stream of seed is forced out of the grain box at all times, and when you regulate one feed opening, you adjust them all equally. Finger-type plates insure positive handling of fertilizer.

VAN BRUNT FEATURES
Patented, adjustable gate force-feed seed.
Finger-type plates insure choking of fertilizer.
Steel frame, braced.
Large grain and fertilizer boxes.
Wood or steel wheels.
Tilting device for regulating depth of planting without disturbing adjustment to depth of covering.
GRASS SEED attachment and tractor hitch extra.

Save extra labor and seed and increase your crop yield by buying a Van Brunt Fertilizer Drill from us.
