A Well-Prepared Seed Bed Produces Bigger Crops

When you can make a better seed bed simply by using a disc harrow that does better work, pulls lighter, and lasts longer, why not do it? We can show you just such an implement—one that can be adjusted instantly to penetrate, and pulverize the soil thoroughly its entire width in dead furrows, hard and soft ground, and over ridges, as well as on level land.

JOHN DEERE

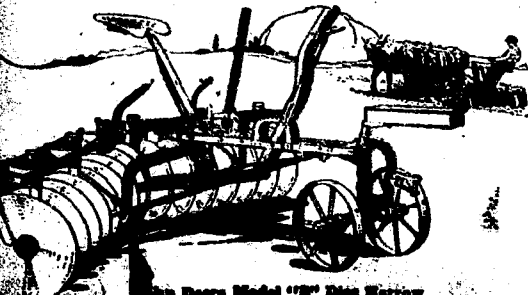

MODEL "B" DISC HARROW

Next Saturday, or the first time you are in town, drop in and look at the John Deere Model "B" Disc Harrow which we have set up. Get on the seat and operate the levers. Notice that there is a lever for angling each gang backward or forward so as to make the pull on the horses just right when part of the harrow is working in soft ground and part in hard ground. And remember to ask us about the third lever. That is the feature you will appreciate because it enables you to give the required pressure to the inner ends of both gangs to make the harrow penetrate at the same depth its entire width in dead furrows or over ridges.

We want you to notice also the neat, substantial construction of this harrow. You will readily understand why it lasts longer.

"THE GOLD BUG" PLEASES AUDIENCES

Seniors of Chelsea High School Present Class Play to Capacity Houses Both Friday and Saturday Evenings.

Playing before audiences which filled to capacity the town hall on both Friday and Saturday evenings, the Senior class of Chelsea high school presented their class play, "The Gold Bug," a four-act drama, involving the fortunes of William Legrand, the Butterfly, played by Paul Risley in the title role.

The plot of the play lays around the disinheritance of William Legrand, a dashing young man of the "idle rich" type, who has been dependent on the monthly checks of a wealthy uncle for his income. Suddenly bereft of his monthly checks he starts out for himself, and because of competent training and self-independence, he finds himself so handicapped in his struggles to win that failure is met at every turn. However, fortune once more smiles on him, and after trying to successfully conduct a newspaper, "The Tri-Weekly Bee," in South Carolina, he dabbles in swamp land and finds a fortune buried by pirates years before. Then, after finding the fortune, he wins the girl, and finds that his "hard luck" was only a test put to him by his grandfather to determine his worthiness. The part of Legrand was played by Paul Risley, and the supporting cast of characters acquitted themselves in a very creditable manner, each one playing their part in a manner which showed the result of thorough training and painstaking care in the selection for the different parts. The play was staged under the direction of Miss Maude Jayne, principal of the local schools, to whom much credit is due for the success of the whole affair, as well as other members of the faculty who assisted in staging the production and Mrs. E. L. Anderson who had charge of the costumes.

Specialty numbers given between acts were especially good. Among them were a ukelele chorus, composed of members of the high school and faculty, comedy act by George Atkinson and Miss Weinmann, negro comedy stunt by Misses Doris Foster and Helen Dancer, vocal solo by Miss Margery Mitchell, a ball solo by Katherine Fletcher. The high school orchestra furnished music before the opening of the play program.

The cast of characters in the play was as follows:

William Legrand, The Butterfly—Paul Risley.
Barry Linton, The Friend—Harold Davis.
Jupiter, The Butler—Lucien Brocasme.
Eugene Kipp, The Carolinian—Paul Buehler.
Noll Phelan, The Mystery—Paul Graber.
Mr. Job Merrimack, Esq., The Bostonian—John King.
Isaac Milligan, The Graft—Harold Davis.
Kate Horne, The Stenographer—Ella Hagadon.
Dollie Shatterly, The Romantic—Anne Rogers.
Old Hagar, The Vagrant—Florence Turnbull.
Jo Cherry, The Girl—Dorothy Dancer.
Mrs. Horne, The Mother—Elenora Lambert.
Mrs. Farrington-Foster, The Aristocrat—Gertrude Eppler.
Buelah Farrington-Foster, The Debutante—Audrey Harris.

STATE CHAMPIONS AWARDED MEDALS

Medals awarded St. Mary Reserves and officials for coping the state basketball championship in their class, in the Detroit Amateur Athletic Association tournament at Detroit recently, were on display over the week-end in the show window of A. G. Hindelang, the clothier. On the front of the medals is inscribed, "Championship, 1923, D. A. A. A." On the back is the one word "Basketball." The medals are gold, suspended on a red, white and blue ribbon. The basket ball used during the season by the Reserves has been varnished a brilliant red, with the words "St. Mary Reserves, State Champions, 1923," in white, this also being on display over the week-end in Mr. Hindelang's window. The ball will be suspended in a prominent place in the St. Mary high school room.

PARENT-TEACHERS HEAR ADDRESS

Professor McKay of Ypsilanti, Addresses Gathering at High School Building on Monday Evening.

Drawing his illustrations from every day life and personal reminiscences, F. B. McKay, professor of the State Normal College at Ypsilanti, developed his subject, "The Home as a School," in an address before the Parent-Teacher Association at the high school Monday evening. Professor McKay pointed out in the course of his address, the influence surrounding the home life of the child, the environment, ambitions of the youngsters, their susceptibility to outside influences, or home influences, as the case may be, and in general gave a huge insight into the lives of children, methods of control, and the results of proper training.

Touching on the subject of where the child should receive the greater part of its training, Mr. McKay stated that, in his opinion, it was not in the churches, nor the schools, but in the home life of boys and girls that they should be taught the principals of right living, and acquire the ability to do things for themselves. His address was well received by the audience in attendance, everyone present taking a deep interest in his remarks.

Musical entertainment of the evening included orchestra music by the high school orchestra, violin duets by Mr. and Mrs. Lattin, trombone solos by M. W. McClure, and vocal solos by A. B. McClure. Schuyler P. Foster, president of the association, presided as chairman, and conducted a business session immediately following the program of music and the speech.

One more meeting of the Association will be held during the present school year—that of May.

SPRING CO. REACHES PEAK PRODUCTION

Re-opening of Kalamazoo Plant Recently Burned, Shows One Hundred Per Cent Output.

Rebuilding of the plant of the C. G. Spring company plant at Kalamazoo has been practically completed and work started Monday by a much enlarged force of men. One hundred per cent production will be maintained, according to Christian Girl, president of the Spring company, in an interview with a representative of a Kalamazoo Sunday newspaper.

While 150 men have been employed steadily since the burning of the plant some weeks ago, 200 additional men will be employed at the Kalamazoo plant, in an effort to keep up with the demand for their product. The new plant, situated on "Bumper Hill" is a big improvement over the old plant, in equipment, lighting and ventilating and it is expected that working conditions will serve largely to increase the production ability of employees. $25,000 worth of new machinery has been added to the equipment of the concern there.

In spite of the fire, Mr. Girl states in the interview, production was maintained during March on such a scale that $390,000 worth of finished bumpers were shipped during that month from the Kalamazoo plant. In Chelsea the Spring company plant has been booming. Night and day shifts are working steadily, a force of approximately 80 men being employed here. New men are being added as they can be secured, and a shortage of labor at the present time is reported by authorities at the plant.

The importance of this industry to Chelsea can readily be seen after taking into account the greatly increased force at the plant, and the wages being distributed here monthly. Approximately $10,000 per month is being paid employees, much of which, in turn is being expended in the regular channels of business throughout the village, and is no small item in the industrial and business life of Chelsea.

The outlook for the future at the local plant is indeed promising. Orders being booked by the company promise capacity operation for many months to come, insuring steady employment to a large number of Chelsea workmen, and a steady period of prosperity for the concern and employees alike.

AUTOISTS ESCAPE SERIOUS INJURY

Employees of C. G. Spring Company, Enroute From Detroit, Capsized on Pavement East of Lima Center Saturday.

Four men, Ben Conrady, his two sons, John, 20, and William, 18 and Edward Pratt, 19, were injured and the car in which they were riding was damaged beyond repair, when they turned over on the pavement two miles east of Lima Center Saturday afternoon. The men are employees of the C. G. Spring Company and were enroute from Detroit to Kalamazoo, the main plant of the Spring Company.

Following the accident the injured men were brought to Chelsea, where their injuries were dressed by local physicians, and were taken to the home of A. A. Hemstreet, superintendent of the local plant of the company. Cuts and bruises about the face and head were sustained by three of the men, while John Conrady suffered injury to his back which has confined him to his bed since Saturday. The three less injured have returned to their homes, the latter still being care for at the home of Superintendent Hemstreet.

According to the story related by the men, they were driving their new Auburn touring car west on the pavement when they attempted to pass a Ford driven by A. Duckworth of Detroit. In passing it is said the driver of the Ford crowded them off the road onto the gravel at one side, the rear wheels side-swiping each other, causing the driver of the Auburn car to lose control of his machine, it turning over in the road. None of the occupants are considered seriously injured.

FIBRE PRODUCTS CO. OPERATING TO LIMIT

Local Concern Recently Moved Into New Location With Increased Floor Space and Conveniences.

The Central Fibre Products Company have moved to the Wilkinson building and now occupy the entire second floor, giving them one of the finest factory sites in Chelsea. They have a large floor space and a well lighted plant.

The company has a capital stock of $7,500 and the officers are: President—Howard S. Holmes. Vice President—Jabez Bacon. Secretary-Treas.—Donald Bacon. Factory Superintendent—Benjamin Bacon.

The products of the company are used by the manufacturers of reed furniture and auto tops and cushions, and are shipped to their customers who are located in Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania and a number of other points.

The company has orders booked ahead for their entire product for the next three months and are operating their plant with a day and night force.

The products of the company are manufactured from kraft brown paper and sulphite fibre paper. The kraft brown is used for furniture and the sulphite in auto tops and cushions. The raw material is purchased in carload lots and comes in rolls from 1 1/2 to 2 inches in width and it takes about five weeks to work up the raw material. The equipment consists of eight automatic spinners, one slitting machine, one stake machine and two wetting machines.

NO NEED OF FEELING SORRY YOU MISSED IT

A stirring of affection for a wayward brother who had begun a new life in the cattle country and a desire for change caused Mandelie Hammond to visit the West.

Arriving alone and in the dead of night at one of the wildest cow towns, she had a particularly thrilling experience, one that would jolt the serenity of a western woman, and that to a girl of her experience and upbringing was shocking and unsettling in the highest degree. One of the wildest, bravest, handsomest, most dissolute and at the same time most generous and capable of the cowboys figures in the affair.

This is but one of the series of thrilling incidents you will find in "The Light of Western Stars" which started serially in the Standard last week. We have a few copies of the paper left; if you missed the first installment you can probably secure a copy at the office.

Much favorable comment was heard about town this week and last about the splendid window display of Vogel & Wurster. Last week ladies wearing apparel and silks were the center of attraction and this week men's clothes, shoes and furnishings drew the attention of the community. The background of both displays was made up of beautiful window glass.

Editorial

THE SUICIDE EPIDEMIC

The startling report of Dr. Warren, head of the Save-a-Life League, that 15,530 persons took their own lives last year would be sufficiently serious even without the added note that 900 of these were around fifteen years old. Indeed, it would indicate that suicide is becoming a matter of daily occurrence where it was a big news item a few years ago.

Among the juvenile cases, girls take the lead, with causes for their self-destruction ranging from intolerable home conditions and temperamental disorders to unhappy love affairs. In 1919, only 477 children killed themselves and if the increase continues, the next few years will present a staggering array of cases where lack of courage, distorted attitudes toward life and disillusionments send building youth to a premature grave.

The reasons given are often as foolish as the deed. One temperamental wanted to die to get a new thrill; another had bobbed her hair and regretted it; a woman missed two trains and was so vexed she took poison; the coal shortage drove one man to his death, while a costume designer failed to guess correctly the correct models for the next season and ended his despair with his life.

When we think of 15,500 people going out voluntarily into the unknown within a year, with many more who try and fail, it seems as vital and pressing a problem for our national welfare as any which Congress has to tackle. Nor is it easy either to fix the blame or find a remedy. The causes, while varied, are not within our power entirely to remove, and we cannot change a weak nature into a strong and self-reliant one. In spite of pictures of the torment painted by the pulpit, reserved for those who end their own existence; and in spite of the sorrow and disgrace which suicides bring to relatives and friends, man still seeks to end momentary misery by stopping his breath for trivial reasons and in increasing numbers.

It is easy to understand the feelings of a person who has had a lot of trouble or is in a big dilemma. A quick death holds but one sure way out of the earthly muck, which, added to the fatal fascination of the idea, plays havoc with man's reason and robs him of power. It is obvious that every suicide was insane in the moment of self-destruction, else logic would surely have overcome the lure of the silent Unknown.

The psychologist Freud and others condone suicide saying it automatically removes the "taint" from the world; that the world is better off. But no psychology and no reasoning can justify the tragedy and suffering left in the wake. No matter the extent of our faith in some future life, we hardly expect suicides to find it a bed of roses across the River.

It is a sign of restlessness, of spiritual ailment, of deplorable social conditions when man thinks he cannot adjust himself to live longer and goes out. Individual cases could easily be relieved if known beforehand. We would gladly give money, time and interest if we knew it would save a life. Yet the general condition often goes unnoticed; there is plenty of poverty, misery, hardship, sadness which could easily be relieved. It is a national, even a world problem, but must be settled by individuals. We are all trying with more or less zeal and more or less definite intent to make it a nicer world to live in. This big number of suicides can give us another and a strong motive for striving. It is a general condition with an individualistic appeal; and like other social problems where man's relations with his fellow man are concerned, its solution begins at home.

LET'S PLAY

Sure, let's play. What will we play? Ball, or hide-and-seek, or tag or Indians? Only in memory. We're grown up now. All that has gone. We're selling goods, working at a desk, doing something with our hands or planning work for others. The idea of suggesting a game! Yet we can shut our eyes and go back twenty, thirty, maybe forty years and see the fields and hills and scenes we used to love. And all the playmates we fought and played with, and to whom we told our heart's secrets. Back there, ah. Days when maturity seem a long way off. Hours of discovery and dreams and countless enthusiasm. We weren't afraid of anything then. We trusted people and things, and the sins we committed were such little sins. So we shut our eyes and go back, back until we feel a bat across our shoulder or feel our feet carrying us to where the dog is trying to dig out a rabbit, or feel the old creek current carrying us in the June sunshine.

So let's play. Put down that important letter; throw away those spectacles. What do you need them for? Forget that rheumatism. Wipe that frown off. And that hair isn't gray, but dark and curly and uncombed, and you're wearing knickerbockers and an old hat again. It's Saturday, and there's no more school until Monday. And there aren't any chores. Hooray! Let's play. Let's play something that makes a fellow run or shows how well he can climb trees or how far he can jump. Let's yell and romp and get dirty. Let's play.

But, no. We can't play. There's that big order to attend to. There's work to do, a family to support, the rent, grocery bills, raise in salary, insurance. Then, we don't feel as spry as we once did. Why, we couldn't run a hundred yards! And we've forgotten how to yell. And wouldn't it be strange to hold a baseball bat again! No, don't ask us to play. Look at the work which has piled up here while we've been dreaming!

BERNHARDT PASSES

When Sarah Bernhardt was buried in Paris the other day, the world lost its greatest tragedienne and most illustrious example of feminine achievement of modern times. She was more than an actress; she was a genius, acclaimed over all the world as the true expositor and interpreter and portrayer of human emotions. Although she is buried in France, the world still claims her. Born of French parents on German soil, she was a native of no one country, but them all. Art knows no language or geographical boundaries. Divine Sarah belonged to everybody.

She did not reach personally into the lives of even a majority of people. Few folks outside of the bigger cities ever saw her on the stage. Her dramatic talent did not mean so much to those who live out in the smaller places. But the story of her ambitions, her tremendous will power, her virile enthusiasm, her nobility of soul and her ultimate triumph over hardship will always linger with those who crave encouragement in their efforts to ascend, and although she is dead she still lives in the hearts of others.

Her dynamic power was a noteworthy characteristic even in her last illness. She refused to die after physicians gave her up, arising and taking up her work and making the Reaper. Eccentric, perhaps, and highly emotional, she was the ideal of a stage world which has all too few today.

Her wish to die on the stage where she won her triumph was not granted. Yet in her last delirious moments she fancied herself taking a curtain call, bowing to ovations and smiling at thunderous applause. And she went out like that, supreme to the last. Napoleon died on St. Helena in exile, but as the shadows gathered he marched once more in fancy at the head of his gallant troops, murmuring in ecstatic triumph, "the head of the army." St. Paul died on the Isle of Patmos un-sung, Columbus went on without public recognition while Robert Fulton's ships cross the Atlantic in four days with him lying in an unmarked grave.

There must have been something superhuman about a woman who could hold the public regard for fifty years without publicity agent or "pull." She never had to resort to caprice or start some scandal to get a following. Few actresses today seem willing to try Bernhardt's methods. Instead of studying ten hours a day, patiently perfecting the voice, carriage, expressions and gestures they try quicker means and get two-column pictures in city papers showing their third or fourth husbands or revealing other irregularities.

Bernhardt will be remembered chiefly because she was a good actress, able to put life and soul into cold lines and sway people's hearts. But she wasn't a born actress. She started low enough and worked her way to the top. When she left, the world lost an immortal inspiration and an example of accomplishment over handicaps. She was in poverty at the last, but her casket was covered with a fortune in flowers. She had only distant relatives living, but a million people watched the funeral procession.

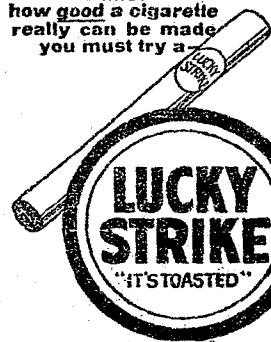

Most people knew Bernhardt only by name. Many girls strove to reach her height in threatredom by patterning after her, and have now no similar ideal to follow. But even those who knew little of her, even those hostile to the stage, look upon the frailness of our modern stage and regret that Bernhardt left. For she evidently had ideals, even as she herself was an ideal, and we have all too few today.

MAMMIES

Some one in Congress wanted to erect a statue in Richmond to the old colored Mammies of the southland. Congress was to pay for most of it, and those who wanted to could chip in. But it didn't go through. Perhaps Congress got an economical streak, but in view of other developments, we have serious doubts. Perhaps it was because the colored W. C. A. of Baltimore strenuously objected to such a monument to memories of slavery. Negroes apparently want to forget that life even more than we do. Perhaps it was because so few people were interested in the project.

We have read a lot about these old southern Mammies, and a number of near-sentimental songs have been written about them. To hear some folks talk, and to read sentimental verse, one might think that a third Mammies. In some ways, they make a picturesque and appealing memory picture. But, like many idealized images, they hardly meet present day requirements. No Mammy could survive today. There are too many calories and germs and infant-feeding laws and hygiene mandates to contend with. Nobody seems to want a Mammy any more.

WE GROW ALARMED

Mrs. W. T. Graham, Vice President of the Nebraska Women's Christian Temperance Union, wants Governor Bryan to discharge U. S. Rohrer, the district Federal prohibition director at Lincoln because he is ugly. Tom Carroll, his new state Sheriff, is likewise threatened with the boot. Apparently Mrs. Graham is of an aesthetic temperament so that only handsome men seem efficient to her. Rohrer isn't discouraged by the good lady's disapproval of the shape and general make-up of his physiognomy. "I have realized for some time," he said, "that I am no Apollo. In fact, I don't like my own face. But I have put up with it in close association much longer than Mrs. Graham, and I'm still fairly robust."

We grow alarmed at this woman's attitude. Suppose it should become general, and insist. Suppose only handsome men could get or hold jobs. Wouldn't some of us be out of luck? What if a fellow had to be a regular Adonis, or a Valentino, or a Francis X. Bushman, or a masculine Mary Pickford to get by in this world. We know a lot of jobs in this community which would be vacant in two seconds if this were enforced. In fact, our editorial staff might possibly suffer. On the other hand, we know some handsome chaps who would get instantaneous promotions. But what would the women do if they held beauty essential to woman's office holding? Some of them, we'll admit, are not at all hard on the eyes, but some wouldn't stand a much better chance than the men. In fact, we have two or three in mind who never would get a job.

Mr. Rohrer has our sympathy. We can imagine how sad he could feel if he were of a mind to. And if he gets fired, maybe we can hunt him up a job in the newspaper game where we're not so particular about looks.

NOTHING IN POLITICS

Representative Andrew J. Volstead of Minnesota has gone back to Granite Falls, his home town, and hung out his shingle as a lawyer. After twenty years of Congress he wants to devote his talents to keeping title-jumping and wife-beating clients out of the county jail.

"There's nothing in politics," he says disgustedly as he goes home to try and forget Washington and hoping his neighbors will welcome him in spite of a certain Act which has aroused a bit of comment over the nation.

No, there's nothing in politics. It's a rotten mess, an unnecessary evil, a complicated system of unmeritorious bulldozing destined to find out the will of most of the people and execute it, and succeeding one time in a thousand.

Mr. Volstead isn't far wrong. But candidates cut each other's throats with scathing phrases; citizens with wires to pull and axes to grind give thousands to see their candidates elected; and those who want offices spend fortunes and turn loose much warm wind trying to land them. It's politics. But Mr. Volstead says there's nothing to it. Perhaps not. Perhaps he merely sighs for the old strict, cut-and-dried party standards of a decade ago. Perhaps he sighs for another Lincoln to come forth out of the wilderness without trumpet blasts or an army of publicity agents marching before, tossing money to the crowd. Perhaps he got saturated with politics and wanted out in the fresh air.

Better Than Ever

There is an erroneous idea abroad. You hear it every day. "Gasoline is not as good as it used to be." The fact is that the Red Crown Gasoline you are getting today is an almost perfect fuel.

Perhaps there is no industry where progress has made such rapid strides as the refining of petroleum.

For example, we cite the Burton Process, developed and perfected in the laboratories of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana). The Burton Process has enabled the refiner to bring gasoline to a point of efficiency hitherto un hoped for.

Release
The following Resolution was offered by Palmer and supported by Schenk:
RESOLVED That the Common Council of the Village of Chelsea, Washenaw County, Michigan, hereby permits for and on behalf of said Municipality, that the Board of County Road Commissioners of said County may take over as a part of the County Road System the following described streets and parts of streets:

Beginning at the intersection of State Trunk Line Road No. 92 with State Trunk Line Road No. 17 in the northeast 1-4 of section 13, T2S, R4E, Sylvan Twp., Washenaw Co.; thence north on State Trunk Line Road No. 92 to the south end of pavement in the Village of Chelsea.
Yeas—Hummel, Koebbe, Schenk, Palmer, Heselshwerdt.
Nays—None.
Resolution adopted.

Approval of Plans by Common Council for Project No. 22-2.
The following resolution was offered by Heselshwerdt and supported by Palmer:
Whereas plans and specifications have been prepared and filed with the (village) clerk by the State Highway Department for the improvement of the following named streets in the (village) to-wit: Beginning at the intersection of State Trunk Line Road No. 92 with State Trunk Line Road No. 17 in the northeast 1-4 section of 13, T2S, R4E, Sylvan Twp., Washenaw Co.; thence north on State Trunk Line Road No. 92 to the south end of pavement in the Village of Chelsea, the same being known as project No. Trunk Line No. 92-2.

Whereas the said plans provide for the improvement of the surface of said streets by the state to a width of not to exceed twenty feet in the center or traveled portion thereof, together with additional improvements for the use and benefit of the said (village) which additional improvements include all necessary drainage structures, and Whereas it appears that said plans are in proper form and are satisfactory to this body, and Whereas it is understood and agreed that the (village) is to pay for all improvements outlined on said plans and specifications except the strip which is to be improved by the state, or as especially noted.

Therefore be it resolved that said plans be and the same are approved and the consent of the (village) is hereby given for the making of said improvement in accordance herewith.
Be it further resolved that the (village) improve its portion of said streets in accordance with the plans and specifications as prepared by the State Highway Department and that the (village) clerk be instructed to advertise for bids for such improvements, if necessary, said bids to be received at the same time and place as the bids to be received by the State Highway Department.

Be it further resolved that the Resident Engineer of the State Highway Department having charge of the supervision of said work on behalf of the State is hereby authorized to act for and represent the village in the supervision and inspection of that portion of the improvement belonging to the village and that the State Highway Department be reimbursed out of the village treasury on bill rendered by the State Highway Department, for the actual cost of such supervision and inspection, said actual cost to be determined when the work is completed and to bear the same proportion to the total cost of supervision and inspection as the cost of the village portion of the work bears the total cost of the work.

Be it further resolved that a copy of the final estimate to the contractor for the village portion of the work be sent to the State Highway Department for the purpose of a record.
Be it further resolved that the village will at no time hereafter, without the written consent and approval of the State Highway Department, attach any further or other improvements to the improvement so made by the said department, or make any changes from these plans.
Motion adopted by following vote:
Yeas—Hummel, Koebbe, Schenk, Palmer, Heselshwerdt.
Nays—None.
Motion made and carried to adjourn.

G. W. Walworth,
Village Clerk.

BREVITIES.

Jackson—There is some talk of having a new hotel erected in this city.

Dexter—The Dexter Savings Bank has increased its capital stock $20,000 making it a $40,000 institution.—Leader.

Stockbridge—A Father and Son banquet was held in the M. E. church Friday evening. The event was a very successful one.

Sallie—The matter of paving Michigan avenue this year has progressed to the point where it is expected bids will be asked for on the part of the village, some time this month, for its share of the work.—Observer.

Grass Lake—Wedding bells rang Saturday, April 14th, for Miss Hazel Barnes and Mr. Clyde Gieske. The Rev. W. J. Dudgeon of Clia, Michigan, performed the ceremony. Miss Emma Glenn was the bridesmaid and Mr. Laurel Wertheim of Manchester was best man.—News.

Manchester—Funeral services for Christian Zeigler of Manchester, who shot and killed Mrs. Carol Butts in Jackson Friday and then committed suicide, was held by the Elks of Jackson Monday afternoon. The body was taken to Manchester Monday afternoon for burial, Elks of Manchester conducting the services at the grave.

Manchester—The ordinary fisherman surely does not wish to see anybody injured by high water, but he would like to see enough water flowing over the various dams between Manchester and Monroe, so that lake fish, bass and pickerel, can come up and fill the ponds and lakes with at least enough to go round once more.—Enterprise.

Manchester—Spring must be near. The frogs have been singing for some time. We don't know how many times a coat of ice over their lodging places has been formed—surely more than once. Besides, snakes have put in an appearance, and they seldom crawl around much in the winter time.—Enterprise. Send some of that Spring outfit over to Chelsea, Bro. Blosser.

Stockbridge—The fire alarm last Friday afternoon called people from the village out to what is known as the Ocean farm. A grass fire which is supposed to have been started by a passing train, and a high west wind was rapidly approaching the building. The crowd of men soon beat out the fire but it had passed over the ground to within a few rods of the large basement barn, before it was put out.—Brief-Sun.

Jackson—James Stevens of Grand Rapids was arrested Friday by Detective Wilensky, while trying to dispose of a new blue serge suit valued at $10, for $4 at a second hand store on Michigan avenue. Stevens has a police record at Grand Rapids and claims that he bought the suit of a man on the street in the Farmington City three weeks ago. When questioned as to where he had come from, he replied that he had come from Ann Arbor Friday in a coal car, but his clothes were not soiled to bear out his statement. Stevens had a new expensive penknife and a new fountain pen upon his person.—News.

Jackson—Walter Kaminski of Waterloo, convicted in the September term of circuit court on charges of liquor law violation, was given a sentence of from six months to one year at Jackson prison by Judge Parkinson Thursday afternoon. At the time of Kaminski's conviction his attorney started proceedings to carry the case to supreme court because of an alleged faulty search warrant, but he failed to perfect his appeal. Kaminski was arrested for manufacturing moonshine at an establishment he ran in a woods in Waterloo township. Officers raiding the place said it was one of the most unsanitary they had found.

Pinekey—For some time past a number of thefts have been reported to Irvin Kennedy, Deputy Sheriff. Chickens have been stolen from numerous farms and automobile parts from several machines. George Sigler was the latest victim, somebody having taken the battery from his having taken the battery from his stolen property and also auto parts and tools stolen from M. J. Renson and Leon Lewis. The alleged thief proved to be Lawrence Flangsbury, 16, home Attica, who has been staying at the home of his uncle, Alting at the home of his uncle, Alting, Pinekey railroad section foreman. It is claimed by the authorities that young Flangsbury admitted stealing the goods, but he was not at first arrested. The boy is in jail at Howell and has implicated several others.—Dispatch.

Canada Offers Last Chance for Virgin Farms

THINK of what you could produce on a farm of virgin fertility, without the burden of high acreage cost. Think of what 20-to-40 bushel wheat would mean to you under these conditions, and of dairying and stock raising on cheap pasture land. Land pays for itself in a few crops—no artificial fertilizer—no heavy investment. You have saved the farmer who got his start when land was cheap. Here's your chance, perhaps your last chance, for the same brand of prosperity.

Western Canada—Your Opportunity!

Western Canada is the farmer's land of opportunity. Thousands of settlers who started not many years ago with little or nothing, are today the owners of fine farms, with comfortable homes and barns, thoroughbred stock, dairy herds and the marks of prosperity. Yet land is not only $15 to $20 an acre for rich, virgin, practical, convenient to railways. Land is not dear in Western Canada—yet—because there is so much of it. But many settlers are expected in 1923, and now is your opportunity, before the best lands are taken. Get started. Taxes are reasonable, and reduced on land brought under cultivation. On farm buildings, improvements, machinery, personal effects, automobile, etc., there is no tax at all. Canada wants workers—wants the land farmer—and the farmers, through their municipal councils, have practically waived all local taxation.

Special Renter's Plan—Buy Out of Profits

To aid and encourage the honest worker with perhaps little capital, the Canadian Government has a "Renter's Plan", whereby one may work a new or improved farm—"Try it on" for several years if desired—and buy a farm of his own out of profits.

Thirty-Two Years to Pay

For the benefit of those wishing to buy land, a national non-profit, sharing organization—the Canada Colonization Association—has been established, with head office at Winnipeg, and United States office at St. Paul. This Association offers selected land convenient to railways—much of it at $15 to $20 per acre—a very small cash payment; no further payment until third year; balance extended over thirty years, but purchaser may pay up and obtain title at any time, if desired. Interest six per cent.

USING NICOTINE DUST FOR PESTS

Application of New Method of Insect Control Is Discussed in Recent Bulletin.

LESS EXPENSIVE THAN SPRAY

Tiny Particles Reach Many Bugs Inaccessible to Liquid and May Be Applied With Various Devices—Avoid Windy Day.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

An important application of a comparatively new method of insect control is discussed in Farmers' Bulletin, 1282, Nicotine Dust for Truck-Crop Insects, by Roy E. Campbell, assistant entomologist, truck-crop insect investigations, bureau of entomology. This method thus far has surpassed any other known methods of controlling such important pests as the onion thrips, cucumber beetles, the melon aphids, and the pea aphids.

Nicotine dust has several advantages over a liquid spray of nicotine sulphate. Dusting requires much less weight of material per acre than spraying, and may be done in a much shorter time with a lighter and less expensive machine, in most cases at less cost for labor. The tiny particles of dust reach many insects inaccessible to sprays. Dust may be applied with hand-dusters, horse-drawn outfits, or power-operated outfits, according to the size of the acreage.

Nicotine dust is a nicotine-sulphate mixed in correct proportions with a dust carrier. Lime alone is ordinarily used for the carrier, but the addition of sulphur to the lime makes the material more effective against most insects. Several thorough applications may be necessary. These should be made when the insects first appear, before any damage is done. The dust is most effective at temperatures above 65 degrees F. and when the air is still. It loses strength if held for any length of time or if not put up in airtight containers, and should not be applied on a windy day.

Certain diseases, as well as certain insect enemies of vegetables can be controlled by adding a proportion of powdered sulphur to the nicotine dust. Several forms of chewing insects attacking vegetable crops can be controlled by adding 10 per cent of powdered lead arsenate to the nicotine dust used against aphids or thrips, and this combination treatment is advisable when dusting small plants for cucumber beetles.

Farmers' Bulletin 1282 is available upon application to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

MANURE WELL WORTH SAVING

Figures Collected by Eastern Station Show That Pit Is Most Valuable Investment.

Some valuable figures have been collected by an eastern experiment station, which show the value of manure, and how it pays to invest in a concrete or tile pit to save the liquid and best part of the barnyard manure. These figures prove that the average value for a year's saving in manure runs as follows: From a horse, 5.2 tons at $6.00; a dairy cow, 8.5 tons at $4.50; other cattle, 4 tons at $5.47; sheep, over $3 worth, and a like amount for a hog. This totals $90.80. Of course, these figures are an average. They were found by finding what fertilizer value the manures had, and then seeing what it would cost to buy the same value in commercial fertilizer. Any way you take it, the returns over a period of years on increased crops will more than pay for the pit, if you are looking for a good investment right in your own business.

USE GYPSUM AS FERTILIZER

Remarkable Results Produced in Australian Wheat Areas, According to Reports.

Gypsum as a fertilizer appears to have produced remarkable results in Australian wheat areas, according to a report made to the department of agriculture of the state of Victoria. A dressing at the rate of one and one-half tons per acre, applied with one hundredweight of superphosphate, increased the yield by 20.8 bushels, as compared with crop grown without fertilizer. Superphosphate by itself increased the yield on another block by 8.8 bushels per acre, so that the use of gypsum increased the yield by 11.1 bushels per acre. The results were obtained in the 1921 season, and were confirmed in the season of 1922. The report of the department states, however, that the results obtained are only preliminary and do not as yet justify the use of gypsum by farmers.

POOR ALFALFA SEED SAMPLE

Kansas Farmers Unwittingly Bought Life-Time Job in Eradicating Johnson Grass.

The Kansas seed laboratory recently analyzed a sample of alfalfa seed which contained along with other noxious weed seed 1,478 seeds of Johnson grass. Farmers who bought this seed received for good measure, a life-time job eradicating Johnson grass.

HOG SHIPPERS URGED TO WATCH FORECASTS

Warnings Broadcast by Department of Agriculture.

Out of Approximately 46,000 Animals Shipped in May and June, 1921, 181 Were Dead on Arrival at Chicago.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Warnings to hog shippers to be guided by weather forecasts in loading hogs for shipment during the early summer months is being broadcast by the United States Department of Agriculture. A sudden climb of the mercury may result in dead hogs for the unprepared shipper, statistics collected by the bureau of agricultural economics show.

Out of approximately 46,000 hogs shipped from local points in May and June, 1921, the figures show that 181 were reported dead upon arrival at Chicago. Thirty-eight per cent of the deaths occurred on May 23 and June 13. Weather charts recorded that the temperature on each of these days was extremely high as compared with that on the day or two immediately preceding. Where the temperature continued high for several days relatively few animals died as compared with the number that succumbed at the beginning of the hot spells.

Further studies of the possible effect of high temperatures on hogs in shipment are to be made by the department. Numerous causal factors are responsible for the death of hogs in transit and the department is not yet prepared to establish a definite relationship between the number of animals reported dead on arrival at any given market and the atmospheric temperature at the market. The data is regarded as sufficient, however, to warn shippers to watch the weather forecasts and to load their stock accordingly.

COMPLAINTS AGAINST MOLES

Much of Damage Reported Has Been Due to Mice Following Underground Passages.

Many complaints concerning damage by moles in lawns, gardens and truck farms have received attention from the biological survey, United States Department of Agriculture, during the past year. Much of the damage reported has been found to be due to mice following in the mole runways. This is generally the case where sprouting grain, vegetables and flower bulbs are being eaten. Moles do real damage by lifting up the soil into ridges, so that grasses or other plants are killed by the breaking or drying out of the roots. This is the more common type of injury in the Eastern states. In western Washington and Oregon and in northwestern California, moles, in connection with their burrowing activities, also pile up mounds of dirt which cover and destroy crop or forage plants, and interfere with the use of harvesting machinery. Practical methods of control have been supplied to those complaining of this kind of damage, through correspondence, published material, and demonstrations.

IN PLANTING SECOND CROPS

Good Plan to Stimulate Growth by Adding Bone-meal—Scatter Over Surface Thoroughly.

In planting the second crop it is a good plan to stimulate the growth by adding bone meal. Scatter it over the surface thoroughly, rake it in, and then sow the seed. It is soon worked into the soil, and within two weeks the plants begin to show signs of the plant food they get from the bone meal.

SMOOTH PEA TO START EARLY

Harder Than Wrinkled Type and Will Germinate Even When the Soil Is Cold and Wet.

The smooth pea is the one to start early, because it is harder than the wrinkled type. Wrinkled peas often rot in the ground if planted too early, while smooth peas will germinate even when the soil is cold and wet.

Garden Don'ts

- Don't begin without a plan.
- Don't start the garden on manure and fertilizer.
- Don't work the ground too wet.
- Don't wait too late in the spring to risk some early things.
- Don't try to economize by buying cheap seed.
- Don't be stingy with seeds; use them freely.
- Don't fail to cultivate frequently.
- Don't be satisfied with a one-season garden, but plant for a succession and for all the year.
- Don't fail to rotate as much as possible.
- Don't neglect the berry plants in the garden.
- Don't let bugs and worms eat what you grow for the family.
- Don't waste the surplus.
- Don't lose your pep when the sun gets hot.

The Disadvantages of Polygamy.
Occasionally the subject of polygamy comes up. And I have observed that women speak only of the hard fate of polygamous wives, and intimate that polygamy is always a joy for men. How about a man compelled to settle the cows of three or four wives and listen to their "howling"? If a wife lacks ability to give an offending husband a whipping, it doesn't mean he escapes a punishment.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

WHY TAKE LAXATIVES?

Discovery by Science Has Replaced Them.

Pills and salts give temporary relief from constipation only at the expense of permanent injury, says an eminent medical authority.

Science has found a newer, better way—a means as simple as Nature itself. In perfect health a natural lubricant keeps the food waste soft and moving. But when constipation exists this natural lubricant is not sufficient. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication.

As Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, it cannot gripe and, like pure water, it is harmless and pleasant. Nujol is used in leading hospitals. Get a bottle from your druggist today.—Advertisement.

Railway Seismographs

An indication of the swift progress of the Japanese mind in practical science is afforded by Doctor Onari's report on the measurement of the vibrations of railway cars by means of seismographs. The primary purpose of the seismograph is to measure the oscillations of earthquakes. Japanese engineers use it for determining the proper balance of locomotives and the state of the permanent way of railways. Many practical advantages in the saving of fuel and the detection of faults in construction have thus resulted.

Much Interest Being Shown in the Large Number of Women Safely Carried Through the Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The Following Letters Are Impressive

Owing to modern methods of living, few women approach this perfectly natural change without experiencing very annoying and often painful symptoms. Those dreadful hot flashes, nervousness, headaches, melancholia and irritability are only a few of the symptoms incident to this trying period of a woman's life, and the following letters prove the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to overcome these abnormal conditions.

Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to help them I will gladly answer their letters."—Mrs. MAX W. HAHN, 637 N. Jefferson Street, Ironia, Mich.

A New York Woman Helped

Syracuse, N. Y.—"I was used up with nervousness, weakness and hot flashes so I could hardly keep around, and could not get out much on account of those awful prickly feelings. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I cannot tell you how much good the medicine did me, as I had such a hard time before taking it. I can only advise every woman passing through the Change of Life, to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it did so much for me."—Mrs. EDWARD B. NEAL, Star Route, Fisherville, Ky.

Restored Little Turns to Autos.
The city of Little is again taking on an aspect of prosperity, according to a report to the Department of Commerce from Vice Consul J. G. Kinley, and is fast assuming the character of a thriving center of commercial and industrial activity worthy of its synonym as capital of the north-west France. A considerable change has taken place since 1921, the consular states. Streets situated in the districts not damaged are well stocked and apparently enjoying a good business and electric lights, unknown in 1921, have appeared in various parts of the business centers which give much animation to the city at night. The number of automobiles, almost imperceptible in 1922, has increased in an exceptional degree.

Practical innovation.
Recent discussions concerning the decimal system of weights and measures render more interesting a curious paragraph reported in the Journal des Debats from its issue of August 22, 1900, when "Napoleon I" was at the height of his power. It states that there were two dials on the principal building of the Tuileries, one counting the hours by twelve and the other by ten. Taking advantage of the need for repairs, the dial divided into ten hours was destroyed, since, as the report goes on to say, "it had served for no purpose, except to show to what point the mania for innovation was capable of amounting in opposition to the settled habits of all times and all peoples."—Washington Star.

Smart Boy.
"Your boy Josh is a smart kid."
"He is," replied Farmer Cornstossel. "He's so smart that he kin take life easy an' leave me to do all the worryin' 'bout whether the farm will support him."

"ALFRED!"

SYNOPSIS.—Arriving at the lonely little railroad station of El Cajon, New Mexico, Madeline Hammond, New York society girl, finds no one to meet her. While in the waiting room, a drunken cowboy enters, and she is married and departs, leaving her terrified. He returns with a priest, who goes through some sort of ceremony, and the cowboy forces her to say "I do." Asking her name and learning her identity, the cowboy seems to be in a shocking rage outside the room a Mexican is killed. The cowboy lets a girl, Florida, take his horse and escape. Then, conscious Madeline to Florence Kingsley, friend of her brother.

CHAPTER II

A Secret Kept

Because of that singular reply Madeline found faith to go further with the cowboy. But at the moment she really did not think about what he had said. Any answer to her would have served if it had been kind.

As she walked on into the windy darkness, much relieved that he had answered as he had, reflecting that he had yet to prove his words true, she began to grasp the deeper significance of them. There was a revival of pride that made her feel that she ought to stoop to think at all about such a man.

Presently Madeline's guide turned off the trail and rapped at a door of a low-roofed house.

"Hello—who's there?" a deep voice answered.

"Gene Stewart," said the cowboy. "Call Florence—quick!"

Thump of footsteps followed, a tap on a door, and voices. Madeline heard a woman exclaim: "Gene! Here when there's a dance in town! Something wrong out on the range." A light flared up and shone bright through a window. In another moment there came a patter of soft steps, and the door opened to disclose a woman holding a lamp.

"Gene! Al's not—"

"At is all right," interrupted the cowboy.

Madeline had two sensations then—some of wonder at the note of alarm and love in the woman's voice, and the other of inimitable relief to be safe with a friend of her brother's.

"It's Al's sister—came on tonight's train," the cowboy was saying. "I happened to be at the station, and I've fetched her up to you."

Madeline came forward out of the shadow.

"Not—really—Majesty—Hammond?" exclaimed Florence Kingsley. She nearly dropped the lamp, and she looked, astounded beyond belief.

"Yes, I am really she," replied Madeline. "My train was late and for some reason Alfred did not meet me. Mr. Stewart saw fit to bring me to you instead of taking me to a hotel."

"Oh, I'm so glad to meet you," replied Florence, warmly. "Do come in. I'm so surprised. I forgot my manners. Why, you are white as a sheet. You must be tired. What a long wait you had at the station! If I had known you were coming! Indeed, you are very pale. Are you ill?"

"No, only I am very tired. Traveling so far by rail is harder than I imagined. I did have rather a long wait after arriving at the station, but I can't say that it was lonely."

Florence Kingsley searched Madeline's face with keen eyes, and then took a long, significant look at the silent Stewart. With that she departed, and quietly closed a door leading into another room.

"Miss Hammond, what has happened?" she had lowered her voice. "I do not wish to recall all that has happened," replied Madeline. "I shall tell Alfred, however, that I would rather have met a hostile Apache than a cowboy."

"Please don't tell Al that!" cried Florence. "Then she grasped Stewart and pulled him close to the light. "Gene, you're drunk!"

"Now, see here, Flo, I only—"

"I don't want to know. I'd tell it. Gene, aren't you ever going to learn decency? Aren't you ever going to stop drinking? You'll lose all your friends. Molly and I have pleaded with you, and now you've gone and done—God knows what!"

"What do women want to wear bells for?" he growled. "I'd have known her but for that bell."

"And you wouldn't have invited her. But you would the next girl who came along. Gene, you are hopeless. Now, you get out of here and don't ever come back."

"Flo!" he entreated.

"I mean it."

"I reckon then I'll come back tomorrow and take my medicine," he replied.

Stewart went out and closed the door.

"Miss Hammond, you—you don't know how this hurts me," said Florence. "What you must think of me! It's so unkind that you should have had this happen right at first. Now, maybe you won't have the heart to stay. Oh, I've known more than one eastern girl to go home without ever learning what we really are out here. Miss Hammond, Gene Stewart is a bad man, whatever he did. He meant no shame to you. Come now, don't think about it again tonight. She took up the lamp and led Madeline into a little room. "What's your name?"

let me help you undress—can't I do anything for you?"

"You are very kind, thank you, but I can manage," replied Madeline.

"Well, then, good night. The sooner I go the sooner you'll rest. Just forget what happened and think how fine a surprise you're to give your brother tomorrow."

With that she slipped out and softly shut the door.

As Madeline laid her watch on the bureau she noticed that the time was just two o'clock. It seemed long since she had gotten off the train. When she had turned out the lamp and crept wearily into bed she knew what it was to be utterly spent. She was too tired to move a finger.

When she awakened the room was bright with sunlight. She was lazily and dreamily contemplating the walls of this little room when she remembered where she was and how she had come there.

How great a shock she had been subjected to was manifest in a sensation of disgust that overwhelmed her. She even shut her eyes to try and blot out the recollection. She felt that she had been contaminated.

Presently Madeline Hammond again awoke to the fact she had learned the preceding night—that there were emotions to which she had heretofore been a stranger. She scarcely remembered when she had found it necessary to control her emotions. There had been no trouble, no excitement, no unpleasantness in her life. It had been ordered for her—tranquil, luxurious, brilliant, varied, yet always the same.

Then Madeline heard Florence rap on the door and call softly:

"Miss Hammond. Are you awake?"

"Awake and dressed, Miss Kingsley."

"Presently there were slow, reluctant steps outside the front door, then a pause, and the door opened. Stewart stood bareheaded in the sunlight. Madeline's glance ran over him with lightning. But as she saw his face now she did not recognize it. The man's presence roused in her a revolt. Yet something in her, the incomprehensible side of her nature, thrilled in the look of this splendid dark-faced barbarian.

"Mr. Stewart, will you please come in?" she asked, after that long pause. "I reckon not," he said. "The hopelessness of his tone meant that he knew he was not fit to enter a room with her, and did not care or care to much."

Madeline went to the door. The man's face was hard, yet it was sad, too. And it touched her.

"I shall not tell my brother of your rudeness to me," she began. "It was impossible for her to keep the effort out of her voice, to speak with other than the pride and aloofness of her class. Nevertheless, despite her loathing, when she had spoken so far it seemed that kindness and pity followed involuntarily. "I choose to overlook what you did because you were not wholly accountable, and because there must be no trouble between Alfred and you. May I rely on you to keep silence and to seal the lips of that priest? You will spare me further distress, will you not, please?"

His hoarse reply was incoherent, but she needed only to see his working face to know his remorse and gratitude.

Madeline went back to her room; and presently Florence came for her, and directly they were sitting at breakfast. Madeline Hammond's impression of her brother's friend had to be reconstructed in the morning light. She felt a wholesome, frank, sweet nature. She liked the slow southern drawl. And she was puzzled to know whether Florence Kingsley was pretty or striking or unusual. She had a youthful glow and flush, the clear tan of outdoors, a face that lacked the soft curves and lines of eastern women, and her eyes were light gray, like crystal, steady, almost piercing, and her hair was a beautiful bright waving mass.

Presently Madeline Hammond again awoke to the fact she had learned the preceding night—that there were emotions to which she had heretofore been a stranger. It had been ordered for her—tranquil, luxurious, brilliant, varied, yet always the same.

Yet something in her, the incomprehensible side of her nature, thrilled in the look of this splendid dark-faced barbarian.

A sharp knock on the parlor door interrupted conversation. Florence's sister went to open it. She returned presently and said:

"It's Gene. He's been dawdling out there on the front porch, and he knocked to let us know Miss Hammond's brother is coming."

Florence hurried into the parlor, followed by Madeline. The door stood open, and disclosed Stewart sitting on the porch steps. From down the road came a clatter of hoofs. Madeline looked out over Florence's shoulder and saw a cloud of dust approaching and in it she distinguished outlines of horses and riders. A warth spread over her, a little tingle of gladness, and the feeling recalled her girlish love for her brother. What would he be like after long years?

Looking out, Madeline saw a bunch of dusty, wiry horses pawing the gravel and tossing their heads. Her swift glance ran over the like horsesmen, trying to pick out the one who was her brother. But she could not. Her glance, however, caught the same rough dress and hard aspect that characterized the cowboy Stewart. Then one rider threw his reins, leaped from the saddle, and came bounding up the porch steps. Florence met him at the door.

"Hello, Flo. Where is she?" he called, eagerly. With that he looked over her shoulder to spy Madeline. He actually jumped at her. She hardly knew the tall form and the bronzed face, but the warm flash of blue eyes was familiar. As for him, he had no doubt of his sister, it appeared, for with broken welcome he threw his arms around her, then held her off and looked searchingly at her.

"Well, sister," he began, when Florence turned hurriedly from the door and interrupted him.

"Al, I think you'd better stop the wrangling out there."

He stared at her, appeared suddenly to hear the loud voices from the street, and then, releasing Madeline, he said:

"By George! I forgot, Flo. There is a little business to see to. Keep my sister in here, please, and don't be fussed up now."

He went out on the porch and called to his men:

"Shut off your wind, Jack! And you, too, Hagg! I didn't want you fellows to come here. But as you would come, you've got to shut up. This is my business."

Whereupon he turned to Stewart, who was sitting on the fence.

"Hello, Stewart!" he said.

It was a greeting; but there was that in the voice which alarmed Madeline.

Stewart leisurely got up and leisurely stepped to the porch.

"Hello, Hammond!" he drawled. "Drunk again last night?"

"Well, if you want to know, and if it's any of your business, yes, I was—pretty drunk," replied Stewart.

It was a kind of cool speech that showed the cowboy in control of himself and master of the situation—not an easy speech to follow up with undue ineptness. There was a short silence.

"D—it, Stewart," said the speaker, presently, "here's the situation: It's all over town that you met my sister last night at the station and—" insulted her. Gene, you've been on the wrong trail for some time, drinking and all that. You're going to the pad. But Bill thinks, and I think, you're still a man. We never knew you to lie. Now what have you to say for yourself?"

"Nobody is insinuating that I am a liar!" drawled Stewart.

"No."

"Well, I'm glad to hear that. You see, Al, I was pretty drunk last night, but not drunk enough to forget the least thing I did. I found Miss Hammond waiting alone at the station. She wore a veil, but I knew she was a lady, of course. I imagine now that I think of it, that Miss Hammond found my gallantry rather startling, and—"

At this point Madeline, answering to unconsidered impulse, eluded Florence and walked out upon the porch.

"Gentlemen," said Madeline, rather breathlessly; and it did not add to her reluctance to feel a hot flush in her cheeks. "I am very new to western ways, but I think you are laboring under a mistake, which, in justice to Mr. Stewart, I want to correct. Indeed, he was rather—rather abrupt and strange when he came up to me last night; but as I understand him now, I can attribute that to his gallantry. He was somewhat wild and sudden and—sentimental in his demand to protect me—and it was not clear whether he meant his protection for last night or forever; but I am happy to say he offered me no word that was not honorable. And he saw me safely here to Miss Kingsley's home."

CHAPTER III

Sister and Brother.

Then Madeline returned to the little parlor with the brother whom she had hardly recognized.

"Majesty!" he exclaimed. "To think of your being here!"

The warmth stole back along her veins. She remembered how that old name had sounded from the lips of this brother who had given it to her.

"Alfred!"

"Dear old girl," he said, "you haven't changed at all, except to grow lovelier. Only you're a woman now, and you've fulfilled the name I gave you. G—d! how sight of you brings back home! It seems a hundred years since I left. I missed you more than all the rest."

Madeline seemed to feel with his every word that she was remembering him. She was so amazed at the change to her that she could not believe her eyes. She saw a bronzed, strong-jawed, eagle-eyed man, stalwart, superb of height, and like the cowboys, belted, booted, spurred. She had hidden good-by to a disgraced, dissipated, dissolute boy. Well, she remembered the handsome pale face with its weakness and shadows and careless smile, with the ever-present cigarette hanging between the lips. The years had passed, and now she saw him a man—the West had made him a man. And Madeline Hammond felt a strong, passionate gladness and gratefulness, and a direct check to her sudden inspired hatred of the West.

"Majesty, it was good of you to come. I'm all broken up. How did you ever do it? But never mind that now. Tell me about that brother of mine."

And Madeline told him, and then about their sister Helen. Question after question he fired at her; and she told him of her mother; of Aunt Grace, who had died a year ago; of his old friends, married, scattered, vanished. But she did not tell him of his father, for he did not ask.

Quite suddenly the rapid-fire questioning ceased; he choked, was silent a moment, and then burst into tears. It seemed to her that a long, stored-up bitterness was finding a way out. It hurt her to see him—hurt her more to hear him. And in the succeeding few moments she grew closer to him than she had ever been in the past. Had her father and mother done right by him? Her pulse stirred with unvoiced questions. She did not speak, but she kissed him, which, for her, was an indication of unusual feeling. And when he recovered command over his emotions he made no reference to his breakdown, nor did she. But that scene struck deep into Madeline Hammond's heart. Through it she saw what he had lost and gained.

"Alfred, why did you not answer my last letters?" asked Madeline. "I had not heard from you for two years."

"So long? How time flies! Well, things went bad with me about the last time I heard from you. I always intended to write some day, but I never did. You remember all about my little ranch, and that for a while I did well raising stock? I wrote you all that. Majesty, a man makes enemies anywhere. Perhaps an eastern man in the West can make it, if not so many; certainly more bitter ones. At any rate, I made several. There was a cattleman, Ward by name—he's gone now—and he and I had trouble over cattle. That gave me a back-set. Pat Hagg, the sheriff here, has been instrumental in hurting my business. He's not so much of a rancher, but he has influence at Santa Fe and El Paso and Douglas. I made an enemy of him. I never did anything to him. The real reason for his animosity toward me is that he loves Florence, and Florence is going to marry me."

"Alfred!"

"What's the matter, Majesty? Didn't Florence impress you favorably?" he asked, with a keen glance.

"Why—yes, indeed. I like her. But I did not think of her in relation to you—that way. I am greatly surprised. Alfred, is she well born? What connections?"

"Florence is just a girl of ordinary people. She was born in Kentucky, was brought up in Texas. My aristocratic and wealthy family would scorn—"

"Alfred, you are still a Hammond," said Madeline, with uplifted head.

Alfred laughed. "We won't quarrel, Majesty. I remember you, and in spite of your pride you've got a heart. If you stay here a month you'll love Florence Kingsley. I want you to know she's had a great deal to do with frightening me up."

Well, to go on with my story. There's Don Carlos, a Mexican rancher, and he's my worst enemy. Don Carlos is a wily Greaser, he knows the ranges he has the water, and he is dishonest. So he outwitted me. And now I am practically ruined. He has not gotten possession of my ranch, but that's only a matter of time, pending lawsuits at Santa Fe. At present I have a few hundred cattle running on Stillwell's range, and I am his foreman."

"Foreman?" queried Madeline. "I am simply boss of Stillwell's cowboys, and right glad of my job."

Madeline was conscious of an inward burning. It required an effort for her to retain her outward tranquillity.

"Cannot your property be reclaimed?" she asked. "How much do you owe?"

"Ten thousand dollars would clear me and give me another start. But, Majesty, in this country that's a good deal of money, and I haven't been able to raise it. Stillwell's in worse shape than I am."

Madeline went over to Alfred and put her hands on his shoulders.

"We must not be in debt."

He stared at her as if her words had recalled something long forgotten. Then he smiled.

"How imperious you are! I'd forgotten just who my beautiful sister really is. Majesty, you're not going to ask me to take money from you?"

"Well, I'll not do it. I never did, even when I was in college, and then there wasn't much beyond me."

"Listen, Alfred," she went on, earnestly. "This is entirely different. I had only an allowance then. You had no way to know that since I last wrote you I had come into my inheritance from Aunt Grace. It was—well, that doesn't matter. Only, I haven't been able to spend half the income. It's mine. It's not father's money. You will make me very happy if you'll consent. What is ten thousand dollars to me? Sometimes I spend that in a month. I throw money away. If you let me help you it will be doing me good as well as you. Please, Alfred."

"You always were the best of fellows, Majesty. And if you really care—if you really want to help me—I'll be only too glad to accept. It will be fine. Florence will go wild. And that Greaser won't harass me any more. Majesty, pretty soon some titled fellow will be spending your money; I may as well take a little before he gets it all," he finished, jokingly.

"What do you know about me?" she asked, lightly.

"More than you think. Even if we are lost out here in the woolly West we get news. Everybody knows about Anglesbury. And that Dago duke who chased you all over Europe, that Lord Castleton has the running now and seems about to win. How about it, Majesty?"

Madeline detected a hint that suggested scorn in his gay speech. And deep in his searching glance she saw a flame. She became thoughtful. She had forgotten Castleton, New York, society.

"Alfred," she began, seriously. "I don't believe any titled gentleman will ever spend my money, as you elegantly express it."

"I don't care for that. It's you!" he cried, passionately, and he grasped her with a violence that startled her. He was white; his eyes were now like fire. "You are so splendid—a wonderful. People called you the American Beauty; but you're more than that. You're the American Girl! Majesty, marry no man unless you love him, and love an American. Stay away from Europe long enough to learn to know the men—the real men of your own country."

"Alfred, I'm afraid there are not always real men and real love for American girls in international marriages. Alfred, tell me how you came to know about me, 'way out here?' You may be assured I was astonished to find that Miss Kingsley knew me as Majesty Hammond."

"I imagine it was a surprise," he replied, with a laugh. "I told Florence about you—gave her a picture of you. And, of course, being a woman, she showed the picture and talked. She's in love with you. Then, my dear sister, we do get New York papers out here occasionally, and we can see and read. You may not be aware that you and your society friends are objects of intense interest in the U. S. in general, and the West in particular. The papers are full of you, and perhaps a lot of things you never did. Majesty, I must run down to the sliding," consulting his watch. "We're loading a shipment of cattle. I'll be back by supper time and bring Stillwell with me. You'll like him."

Madeline went to her room, intending to rest awhile, and she fell asleep. She was aroused by Florence's knock and call.

"Miss Hammond, your brother has come back with Stillwell."

Madeline accompanied Florence to the porch. Her brother, who was sitting near the door, jumped up and said:

"Hello, Majesty!" And as he put his arm around her he turned toward a massive man whose broad, craggy face began to ripple and wrinkle. "I want to introduce my friend Stillwell to you. Bill, this is my sister, the sister I've so often told you about—Majesty."

"An' Gene Stewart had hit the trail for the border."

Church Members Object to Oil Wells

Members of the congregation of the little country church at Tonkawa, Okla., are up in arms against oil prospectors who have drilled wells in the garden of the church property, as pictured. The oil well-operators assert their lease on the property permits them to drill wells in the churchyard and cemetery and seek to have the courts sustain their claims. Members of the congregation are on guard at all times, and seek to prevent the operators from drilling. They have refused thousands of dollars offered for the property, which is one of the richest oil centers in the state of Oklahoma.

The Sun is Shining; Patch the Roof--

We believe the following editorial, taken from the Chicago Tribune, is worthy of sound consideration by every thinking person, and expresses the sentiment of this bank in its policy of safe, sound and conservative banking.

The editorial:

There is no doubt that the United States is in the full tide of return to maximum prosperity. A building boom is in progress throughout the country. Wages are going up. Some building mechanics are getting as much as $2 an hour. Most factories are running at full capacity. There is a demand for all sorts of goods and money is generally available to pay for them. The outlook is excellent.But three years ago we were enjoying a similar condition. And in the meantime business reached depths of depression at least equal to the heights of prosperity. At one period in the interim nearly 5,000,000 persons were out of employment. There was severe suffering among the poor and improvident.It is unfortunate, but probably true, that the tide of prosperity again will ebb. It has flowed and ebbed through all the years of our history. Of course it should not. If we had sufficient intelligence and the proper organization to bridge the depressions all would be well. Perhaps some day we may have. There is no reason to believe that we can do so as yet.That being the case, we must admit the probability of a rainy day some time in the future. We will not always remain on the heights. It is common sense, therefore, for the individual to make personal preparation for any economic depression which may come. Each individual can do so by the exercise of a little self-denial for the moment. If each will put part of present day income into savings banks or Liberty bonds, which are almost at par and still pay more than 4 per cent, there will be much less misery when the tide of prosperity ebbs.We do not oppose the purchase of silk shirts or flivvers, or patronage of moving pictures and similar entertainment. We are for those things. The working man or woman has as much right to the luxuries he or she can buy as has any one, and more than some. In so far as they do buy these things they help maintain prosperity. But common sense and the experience of very recent years should indicate to them that there is a path between extravagance and parsimony. That path goes by the savings bank window and leads to stability and safety. Those who are wise take it in periods of prosperity such as the present.

Chats With Your Gas Man

Sometimes you wake up in the morning to find the house frightfully cold. Mother lights the gas in the oven, or perhaps the top burners, and the kitchen soon becomes comfortable.

My, but that warmth is welcome! You would gladly pay almost anything for it just then. Kindly remember, therefore, that when the bill comes in some mild day a month later that you got some extra and very valuable heating service from gas service when you needed it badly.

Gas ovens are not an economical means of warming up a room. They are built to keep heat in. Gas heating appliances are built to throw heat out. For quick action to offset those sudden drops in temperature there is nothing to equal a good, modern, gas heating appliance.

WASHTENAW FARMERS ENTER LITTER CONTEST

Twelve Washtenaw men have already signed up for the Ton Litter Contest which is being promoted through the efforts of the Michigan Agricultural College and the County Farm Bureau. Any pig raiser in the county is eligible to enter this contest. The idea of the contest is to promote the economic production of pork. Appropriate prizes are being awarded by the different breed associations in the state. Prizes are to be computed on the total weight of the litter when six months (180 days) old. Memorandum of ration, records and inspection must be conforming to. There are three classes—Litters weighing 2000 pounds or more, litters weighing 1800 pounds and less than 2000 pounds, litters weighing 1600 pounds and less than 1800 pounds.

The first notice of the contest announced entries to close April 1st. Due to poor luck with early litters of many of the breeders, the date for receiving entries has been extended until April 30th, so that additional farmers may enter the contest. Application for entering the contest must be received by April 30th. Litters qualified to enter must be farrowed between March 1st and May 15th. Entry must be made before the litters are farrowed.

County Agent Oster has already received several entries and announces that he will receive others that are interested in joining the contest. If interested, get in touch with County Agent, join the contest and help promote the livestock interests of the county.

V. A. Freeman, Extension Specialist in Animal Husbandry, M. A. C., will be in Washtenaw County on April 17th to visit those who have already registered for the Ton Litter Contest. Details relative to the contest will be taken up with the different herd owners when they are visited by Mr. Freeman and Mr. Oster. In Washtenaw County, several Boys' and Girls' Club members have already entered the contest and expect to make the older breeders "step some" to hold the lead.

His Reason for Remaining.
They had dined and winged a guest, with some distance to travel, was pressed to stay the night. He refused. But walking from the door to the garden gate he changed his mind. "That's right," said his host; "it would have been too much for you. I think, on a night like this." "Not at all; not at all," said the guest, "it's only that my hours are tight."—The Hit.

FAIR NEWS

Work is proceeding rapidly on the 1923 premium book and program. This year's book will surpass all previous efforts. Last year's book was the largest and best County Fair book in the state. This year's will be still larger and replete with cuts and illustrations of Washtenaw's live stock and farm products. Some increase in premiums has been made in several of the departments and a great many new and additional classifications have been added.

Every effort is being made to make Wednesday of fair week "Ford Day," and in the event this forms part of the program, all Fords and their drivers will be admitted free and the driver will receive a free ticket on a Ford car.

If half of the people exhibit who have expressed an intention to do so, Washtenaw County will have one of the finest fairs in the state this year. Ann Arbor, Pittsfield, Saline, Seio, Sylvan, Webster, York and Ypsilanti Townships have each made an appropriation of $50.00 to be used as Special Premiums available for the residents of the respective townships. Subscriptions are being taken for a $50.00 fund to grade a ball ground on the race track infield. The soil there is ideal for a fast diamond. 200 more life memberships will be sold this year and the funds raised thereby will be used to build the first sections of the grand stand.

CHAPLIN DROPS BERRY FOR MINISTRIAL HIT

Enter Charles Chaplin in the pulpit.

The inimitable comedian has been a tramp, a soldier and a duke on the screen, but now he blossoms forth in the full regalia of a parson.

In "The Pilgrim," the First National picture which will be shown at the Princess Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday, April 26 and 27, he discards his battered derby and swaggar cane of other film triumphs for the clerical hat and frock.

Charles' ministerial garb is stolen property, however, for he portrays an escaped convict who exchanges his prison stripes for the clothing of an unsuspecting parson in swimming.

The complications which ensue when an eloping couple endeavor to get "The Pilgrim" to marry them and when he is unwittingly forced into the pulpit by a chain of extraordinary circumstances, are among the most ludicrous ever screened.

"The Pilgrim," like all of the comedian's starring vehicles was written and directed by Chaplin himself. It is a feature production in four reels and, according to preview reports, rivals that screen classic, "The Kid."

MOODY BIBLE INSTITUTE GRADUATION EXERCISES

The Winter Term graduation exercises of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, will be held April 15. The fifty-eight graduates of the day classes, together with two hundred and nine graduates from the Correspondence department, represent forty states of the Union, Panama, Ecuador, Scotland, Denmark, Egypt, India and the Philippines.

The enrollment in the day classes is now the largest in the history of the Institute.

The graduation address will be given by Rev. R. E. Vale, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Oak Park. By request he will repeat an address on "Ambassadors for Christ," which was recently given, with much acceptance, before a body of Christian workers of the Presbyterian church of Chicago.

IN MEMORIAM

In Loving Memory of our Dear Mother, Mrs. Christ Klein, who died one year ago tomorrow, April 22, 1922.

Dear Mother, when the evening shades have fallen and we are all alone,

To our hearts there comes a longing if you could only come home.

No one knows the silent heartache only those who last can tell.

Of the grief that's borne in silence for the one we loved so well.

Mother is not dead but sleeping, though she sleeps beneath the sod and in spirit has departed to dwell above with God.

We miss her, Oh so badly, our hearts ache every day.

And we often stop to wonder why Mother went away.

Though we feel she is happy and we miss her from our side, our life has been so lonely since our Dear Mother died.

Off and oft our thoughts do wonder to a grave so far away.

Where we laid our Mother just one year ago today.

Sadly missed by her loving family, Christ G. Klein, Miss Mata Klein, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Engelhart.

In fond and loving memory of our Dear Sister, Mrs. Christ Klein, who passed away one year ago tomorrow, April 22, 1922.

Your memory Sister Dear, lives and always will.

Your presence hovers 'round us, still it seems, as if you come to share each joy and sorrow that we bear. But 'tis sweet to know we'll meet again when parting is no more.

And that's the way it is.

until May 1st

Firestone Prices on Fabric and Cord Passenger Car Tires and Tubes, also Solid and Pneumatic Truck Tires Will Advance May 1st

The postponement of this price revision is possible only because of our realization of the price danger in the British Crude Rubber Restriction Act which became effective November 1, 1922. We were fortunate in our rubber purchases before the Restriction Act increased the price of crude rubber 160%.

We have always endeavored to champion the cause of better made tires delivered at lowest cost to the tire user by economic manufacturing and distribution. And we are glad of the opportunity to give the car-owner the additional savings at this time.

Firestone Cords embody certain special processes which result in their producing mileage records, heretofore unheard-of in the industry. Among the more important of these superior methods are blending, tempering, air-bag cure and double gum-dipping.

Firestone Dealers are co-operating with us in our movement to supply your needs at present prices as long as their stock lasts and we have advised our dealers that we will supply them with additional tires this month only so far as our output will permit.

See the nearest Firestone Dealer. Purchase a set of these Gum-Dipped Cords. Prove for yourself their remarkable mileage advantages and easy riding qualities.

METHODIST CONFERENCE FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Epworth League and Sunday school young folks of the Ann Arbor district of the Methodist church are said to be looking forward with great interest to the annual Epworth League convention, and Crusaders Conference which will be held in the First Methodist church, Ann Arbor, April 27 and 28.

Owing to the fact that Bishop Theodore S. Henderson is to be there both days and Ann Arbor being a great educational center it is expected that a record attendance will result.

Previous to the convention Dr. and Mrs. Peter P. Stair will spend a fortnight in the district working with local churches and conducting pep meetings.

The meeting at Chelsea will be held April 19 and will include Chelsea, Grass Lake, Leoni, Dexter, Napoleon and North Lake.

Evert Benton, Chelsea, is third vice president of the District.

EX-GOVERNOR WARNER DIED IN FLORIDA

The body of Fred M. Warner, 58, former governor of Michigan, and one of the most widely known political leaders of this state, has arrived from Orlando, Florida, at Farmington, Michigan, his home. Mr. Warner died early Tuesday following a long illness. He had gone south for the winter in a vain attempt to regain his health. A kidney affection was the direct cause of death.

The former governor, the only man in Michigan history to be elected the chief executive of the state three times in succession, also was republican national committeeman from Michigan.

With Mr. Warner when he died were Mrs. Warner and his son, Howard. Other surviving relatives are a son, Harley, and two daughters, Mrs. Claire Gaudier of Pontiac and Mrs. W. W. Slocum of Farmington.

Former Governor Warner was the son of an English immigrant who was so poor that when he died, leaving Fred M. Warner at the age of seven years, it was necessary for the lad's mother to give him for adoption to an Oakland county merchant.

Mr. Warner, largely by his own efforts, achieved success in business, having founded a chain of cheese factories throughout the state. Before he was 40 years old he was elected governor, being, with one exception, the youngest man ever chosen for that office in Michigan.

Previous to becoming governor he served two terms as secretary of state. He holds the distinction of being the youngest man ever to hold that position in Michigan. He also had been the youngest senator in two state legislatures.

Governor Warner's education was obtained in the Farmington school and in Michigan Agricultural college.

IF STOMACH IS SORE, FOOD WON'T DIGEST

No stomach filled with sour poisons can digest food. Everything you eat turns into more poison and gas, making you nervous and weak. Simple Muckhorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adierika, expels all sour poisons and gas from BOTH upper and lower bowel. Removes food, decaying food-matter you never thought was in your system which caused sour and gassy stomach. Adierika is a SUREST to guard against appendicitis. Henry H. Fehn, druggist, Adierika.

LAST LYCEUM NUMBER OF SEASON FRIDAY

The last number of the Lyceum course will be given at the Town Hall Friday evening, April 20, by the Metropolitan Glee Club, an organization composed of four men who appear in both vocal and instrumental numbers. The club comes highly recommended and no doubt will prove to be the equal if not the best, of the local Lyceum numbers. They appear under the auspices of the Congregational Brotherhood and the Young People's League of St. Paul's Lutheran church. Admission will be 25c and 50c, the time 8:00 o'clock.

NOTICE TO CREAM PATRONS

The Ann Arbor Dairy Company will be open for business Wednesday and Saturday evenings each week. Highest market price for cream and eggs.

A Glass Roadway.
In the Yellowstone National park, along the base of the Obsidian cliff there is a glass road. The cliff through which the road was cut is of volcanic glass, jet black and quite opaque, with occasional streaks of red and yellow, and in the sunlight it gleams like a diamond.

DON'T RISK NEGLECT

Don't neglect a constant headache, sharp, darting pains or urinary disorders. The danger of dropsy or Bright's disease is too serious to ignore. Use Doan's Kidney Pills as have your friends and neighbors. A Chelsea case.

Jacob Houk, 211 Lincoln St., says: "I was in bad shape some years ago and had lumbago and rheumatic trouble. For a while I was compelled to lay off work as the pains across my back were so severe. The rheumatic trouble was worse in the spring and in damp, cloudy weather, especially in my lower limbs. My kidneys didn't act regularly so I knew something had to be done. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and went to Fenn's Drug Store and got two boxes. I used them until the trouble left entirely."

Price 60 cents at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Houk had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.—Advertisement.

Mrs. Leonard Embury of Lyndon, aged 42 years, died Sunday evening, April 15, 1923, in St. Joseph hospital, Ann Arbor.
She is survived by her husband, two sons, one daughter and a number of brothers and sisters.
The funeral was held in the North Lake M. E. church Wednesday, Rev. Howard of Albion, conducting the services. Burial at North Lake cemetery.

CHURCH CIRCLES

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.
Rev. C. S. Risley, pastor.

Public worship 10:00. "The Biggest Task in the World."
Sabbath school 11:15. "A Leader That Leads."

Epworth League 8:30. "How Does Your Community Play?"
Evening service 7:30. "The Fear of Fear."

The morning sermon will deal with a man's position that is not an enviable one. Yet, he endured to the end. What to do, if our lot is a hard one. Come and hear it. The evening service will be different from any we have ever attempted before. It will be in the nature of a book review—such as is being followed by many today. The sermon will be based on Basil King's book "The Conquest of Fear." Come and hear the story and its spiritual lessons. There is a place waiting for you in our Sunday school. We missed several last Sunday. Be on hands Sunday. Come to church.

CONGREGATIONAL--

Rev. Lloyd Wallace of Ann Arbor, will conduct services Sunday morning.
Sunday school at the usual hour. No evening service.
