FREEDOM FARMER IS EXONERATED

Henry Altenberndt Cleared of Suspicion in Connection With Death of Wife.

Henry Altenberndt, Freedom township farmer, was officially cleared Monday of suspicion of burning his wife, Bertha, to death.

Mrs. Altenberndt came to her death in a fire which destroyed a barn on the Altenberndt farm, May 2, a jury sitting at an inquest into her death decided in Ann Arbor late Monday night.

"The verdict clears Altenberndt's name of suspicion," Coroner Samuel Burchfield said. "There was no good reason for suspecting anything wrong in the first place. Gossips tried to kill his good name, and I had to order the inquest."

Several witnesses at the inquest, airing their "beliefs" were sharply criticized by the coroner.

FARM BARN AND CONTENTS BURNED

The barn and its contents were burned to the ground on the farm of James Killam Saturday night.

The building was struck by lightning at 11 o'clock and burst into flames almost instantly. The contents consisted of hay, grain, farm tools and harnesses.

The live stock was in the fields and escaped the flames, but almost all of the fowls on the farm burned up. As soon as the neighbors received warning that the building was burning they rushed to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Killam and rendered what assistance they could, for which Mr. and Mrs. Killam feel very grateful.

The loss is a very great one and is partially covered by insurance.

CARNIVAL COMPANY WILL SHOW HERE

James Pakenham, advance man of Roscoe's Imperial Shows, was in town Wednesday and Thursday making arrangements for his outfit to appear here during next week. The company of show men and women will pitch their tents Monday and make Chelsea their headquarters for the entire week.

Shows, rides and concessions are listed among the entertainment available to the public, while emphasis is made by Mr. Pakenham that theirs is not the cheap, immoral show which so often misleads the public in their advertising of high-class entertainment. Mr. Pakenham says their shows are clean, moral and entertaining, with "fun for all and all for fun."

From there they will go to Port Arthur and Isle Royale, then to Winnipeg and Hudson Bay. On their return trip they will come back to Duluth and take the steamer to the Soo and stop off at Mackinac, completing the trip by boat to Detroit, thence home.

SEEK TO CONTROL

BUMPER INDUSTRY

C. G. Spring Company Named in Suit Brought by Government to Prevent Monopoly and Restraint of Trade.

In a dispatch from New York, daily papers the fore part of the week carried reports of an attempted conspiracy to monopolize the automobile bumper industry on the part of the American Chain Company and the C. G. Spring Company of Kalamazoo, Michigan, was named as one of the parties assisting in the conspiracy. The Spring Company has a large branch of the factory in Chelsea which is running at top speed in turning out the company's product.

The dispatch says: United States Attorney Hayward late Monday filed suit under the Sherman anti-trust act against the American Chain Company, Inc., seeking to restrain it from alleged monopoly and restraint of trade, with the manufacture and sale of automobile bumpers.

The government, asserting that the American Chain Company controls sixty per cent of the automobile bumper industry and that it will control 100 per cent of it if it wins certain patent litigation pending, seeks to restrain the company from endeavoring to fix wholesale prices to yield a minimum profit of not less than 10 per cent for itself and the manufacturers.

Moreover, the government alleges that the company, with offices and place of business in Bridge, Conn., has been "assisted in the conspiracy to restrain trade by several other concerns including the Wolverine Bumper and Specialty Company, Grand Rapids, Mich., New Era Spring and Specialty Company, Grand Rapids, Mich., and C. G. Spring Company, Kalamazoo, Mich."

MRS. WALTER HUMMEL

Mrs. Marjorie Hummel, aged 24 years, died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. J. O'Brien, of Jackson, at 2 o'clock Sunday morning, July 15, 1923, after an illness of several months.

She was united in marriage with Walter Hummel on January 18, 1922, and their home has been in Chelsea until a short time ago when they returned to the home of her parents owing to her failing health.

She is survived by her husband, a son six months old, her parents, and two brothers.

The funeral was held at 9:30 o'clock Tuesday morning in St. Mary's church, Jackson, her cousin, Rev. Fr. Hewlett, pastor of St. Paul's church of Detroit, celebrating the mass. Burial at St. John's cemetery, Jackson.

MRS. W. H. REED

Miss Sarah E. Cowherd was born in New Washington, Kentucky, May 1, 1840, and died at her home on Orchard street, Chelsea, Thursday afternoon, July 12, 1923.

She was united in marriage with W. H. Reed in Missouri in 1860 and shortly after their wedding they became residents here and for many years they resided in the home where she passed away. Mr. Reed died about five years ago. Mrs. Reed had been in failing health for many years.

She is survived by one brother, who resides in Missouri, and several nieces and nephews.

The funeral was held at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon from the residence, Rev. C. S. Risley, pastor of the Chelsea M. E. church conducting the services. Burial at Vermont cemetery, Chelsea.

CANDIDATE PASTOR EXTENDED CALL

Official Trustees of Congregational Church Invite Rev. E. L. Sutherland to Become Resident Pastor.

Subject to ratification of the congregation, the trustees of the Congregational church, at a meeting held Monday afternoon, extended a call to the Rev. E. L. Sutherland of Whitehall, Michigan, to permanently fill the pulpit of the church in this village. The congregation will vote on the invitation at the regular church service next Sunday morning. Rev. Sutherland was in Chelsea last Sunday, preaching the sermon at the morning service at the Congregational church. Following the favorable comment heard from members of the congregation it was decided to extend the invitation, hence the action of the trustees Monday. Rev. Sutherland is married and has one daughter. During his pastorate at Whitehall, which has extended over a period of four and one-half years, he and his family have been very successful, but it is said that because of the extreme winters and the fact that Whitehall is a summer resort town lacking the advantages of an "all year round" population, he desires to change. Their removal to Chelsea will be welcomed by citizens in general who extend their best wishes for eminently successful work in their efforts here.

Should the congregation vote favorably next Sunday the new pastorate will begin September first. August will be observed as vacation month by the local church.

DEATHED WEDDINGS

Herman Swanson and Miss Eleanor McCarthy, of Chicago, were the last couple we read about to get married just before the Grim Reaper took bride or groom. Deathbed marriages are fairly common, and the wisdom and propriety and justice of such rites has always been a good subject for argument.In this case, Swanson was sixty-two and the bride twenty-four. They had been good friends, and when Swanson was about to die he begged her to wed him. She did, and he died a few moments later. Now the girl mourns for a husband, is a widow and must bear just a bit more sorrow because she fulfilled a dying man's whim and made his last moments
happy.In addition to its being a December-June wedding, which extremely seldom proves wise, we wonder if logic and common sense shouldn't have over-ruled sentiment here. It is none of our business if the girl,
like many others have done, accepted bonds and pains of more intense bereavement than another might die
with a smile. But the general principle of keeping one's heart subordinated to reason would probably hold good here. It is, obviously, a question for argument.The measure of beautiful sentiment attached to such rites is obvious, but not large. Aesthetics and the real spirit of marriage get an awful jolt.
An outsider sees little to appreciate in cementing together two lives a moment before one must be torn away, or in promising to devote one's life to another when that life is ebbing away. It seems to increase the burden the survivor must bear, and many intelligent people see little use in humoring the whims of the dying, especially when it entails such sacrifice. It is not necessary that one be stony-hearted or lacking in respect or affection to refuse the cross. At any rate, it would indicate strength of will and foresight which looks beyond the next hour, into long years to come, which should not be spoiled even slightly by ill-considered unions.

FATE'S STRANGE TRICKS

Movies and cheap novels almost put real life to shame, but occasionally truth offers thrills beyond the wildest dreams of fancy. Exaggerated tales of last-minute escapes are not all on the screen. For instance, Frank Fervola was dressed for the electric chair in Sing Sing the other day, when a messenger arrived out of breath with a reprieve. Fervola had already suffered almost a mental death, and five minutes more and he would have sat in the fatal seat.F. C. Holly, of Ogdensburg, N. J., forgot he loaned a small fortune to a friend, left town, and returned after thirty-six years to find his friend's son keeping it for him. He hadn't got rich and the money had so increased until he should now be as happy as any fiction character.
John King was arrested three months ago for some trifling offense, lodged in the Schenectady prison, and forgotten.
He wasn't on the records,
and but for an accident would be in jail yet.Hardly typical of daily events;
rather unusual and freakish occurrences.
Yet such things do happen,
and when men stop to consider them,
they often wonder if there is such a thing as fate or destiny. Luck has never been proved, yet has many believers. And the more often such strange tricks become evident, the more glibly we talk of some mysterious power.Yet the sane man or woman puts little dependence upon anything so vague as fate. Experience has not proved it unquestionably. The safest course seems to do the best one can.
Then if a seeming good fate over-takes or assists one, so much the better. And if a jinx seems to pursue one, self-castigation and remorse play little part.

GASOLINE ON THE WING

Aviators are having a big time recently with the newly discovered
stunt of taking on gasoline from another plane with both several thousand feet in the air. It is altogether
a modern idea, just as the airplane is modern. Apparently intrepid bird-men are going to get all out of the game they can and attempt every stunt they can think of. When they learn to take on fuel easily and without danger of burning up they will have surpassed Jules Verne's dreams. Even land vehicles have not gone so far. Flying, theoretically, seems on the verge of subverting
to man's control after centuries of experimenting. Long dreamed of,
we see the heavens dotted just a few years off.Taking gasoline on the wing doesn't seem very practicable, and is little more than a new stunt. Planes can now carry enough fuel to last almost as long as the fliers can live without sleep. And since sleep in a plane in flight behind a roaring motor is asking too much, and since staying up much longer than at present,
even with the additional fuel,
is impossible, we look for practical development of flying to come from another direction. Safety, carrying capacity, ease of control and expense
are good factors for improvement.
Permanent flying, however, must remain
a dream until necessity gives it birth.

FOR BETTER OR WORSE

The title sounds familiar to all married folks, and rather solemn to the unmarried. Rev. W. H. Gysan, of Columbus, Ohio, thinks the phrase
is too familiar to be of much use,
and declares that perjury by marrying couples is almost as common as bootlegging. He told his congregation that people now seemed to marry
for better, and if things went bad made them worse. Like hundreds of other speakers, he found marital loyalty getting more rare each year,
and like hundreds of others, he deplored
the situation. Part of this luxury he laid to the woman."Every girl should have training in conology, washology, ironology, sewology, darnology and sweepology," he declared. He seemed to think modern girls are more interested in bacteriology than babyology, and could play bridge with more success than make omelets. He also says,
"Judge your prospective mate when things go wrong instead of
when they go right, and don't look for a perfect mate. There is none on earth."He is either a cynic nor a second Solomon, yet he has a fairly good philosophy. Barring the modern girl is dangerous, foolish and narrow,
like any sweeping generalization.
And not everyone is convinced that she is any worse than her feminine ancestors, or ought to follow their footsteps. Nor is she universally blamed for disrupted and unhappy homes. She shouldn't be. And when we insist upon progress in everything else, we should encourage "emancipation" of woman. The trouble seems to lie in defining, arranging and limiting that emancipation.Dr. Gysan is fairly typical of many who attempt to right an obvious evil situation. Like the others, he believes centering public opinion on the situation will make for transformation. Perhaps it will. But adverse public opinion seems to discourage divorces but little, and we must find a more powerful persuader or go back to the beginning. The latter seems most feasible and most urgent. Once the seriousness of the promise "for better or worse" is fully realized and practiced, we will have fewer of the "perjurers" Rev. Gysan seems to discover.

WHEN FORTUNE TURNS

Old Bill Dunlap, of Beaumont, Texas, didn't cut much ice in his home town a few weeks ago. He had been well-to-do but had lost most of his money, and for fifteen years
has pursued Lady Luck in vain.
Bankers refused to lend him more money for his little rice farm, and merchants displayed their "No Trust" signs when he appeared. It was a case of cold shoulder with a vengeance.But prospectors found oil on an old farm of Dunlap's up in another county, and after he had been offered a million for his land people began to speak to him again. Bankers forgot former coldness, and storekeepers insisted that he take anything in the store on credit. Women who elevated their chins at Dunlap's daughters who had to work found it remarkably easy to recognize them on the street, and the local social smart set realized it hadn't been so smart, after all. All things considered, it seemed as if Old Bill had become a prominent and respected citizen overnight, instead of just a poor farmer. And it is astonishing how prominent and respected a citizen may be if he can write a big check.Fortune seems to govern friendship to a big degree with certain people, and when the wheel turns forward one's calling list may look like a telephone book. When it turns backward, one's friends often seem to be limited to the family cat
and the village undertaker.

A MINISTER TAMPED

The Rev. George Lyman Paine,
prominent Boston pastor, went walking into the meadows with another man's wife. Falling a victim to her charms, doubtless intentionally displayed, he kissed her. Her husband thrashed the minister, and the latter had to resign his position. Apparently the woman didn't get punished, although it is more than likely she needed it worse. The average man doesn't act so foolish without encouragement, and a minister surely must require more than ordinary temptation.Rev. Paine acknowledged his indiscretion apologetically. He says it was only a paternal carelessness. Since the girl was only nineteen and he forty-seven, it sounds plausible. He doesn't blame her, which is another commendable factor. Yet, knowing human nature as we think we do, the minister, like hundreds of other men,
seems to have succumbed to outside influences.A Michigan judge dismissed a
"masher" who admitted he had flirted
with a strange girl, when the girl admitted she had smiled on him. Extenuating circumstances for a mis-deemeanor, it was listed. It is occasionally true that one party isn't solely to blame. Perhaps Rev. Paine was not discouraged strongly enough.
Yet the result is the same. From a high pulpit he is cast down to be ridiculed, pitied, condoned or sym-pathized with as the case may be.
But he is down, just the same. His life is blackened. Meadows, sweet summer days, loneliness and a pretty girl are a powerful combination.
Not even the cloth is immune from the devil.

TELLING THE DOCTOR

The national association of osteopaths, at their convention the other day, heard a famous doctor urge them to let their patients talk all they wanted to, and to refrain from volubility themselves. Not only should the physician not risk shaking the confidence of the patient by babbling, he said, but a diagnosis can better be made if the patient is allowed to tell all his symptoms, among other troubles.There is a lot to the counsel. And,
however little the physician needs
to be curbed, still less does the average sick person need encouragement
in narrating his manifold pains.
Men, especially, are often alarmed at a stomach ache, and a heavy cold
may cause them to beg to be saved from death. Few people are reluctant to talk about their ailments,
during or after their confinement,
and the doctor is the person above
all others to inspire confidences.Apparently a sick person thinks he may have a new ailment, or at least epoch-making developments of an old one, and doesn't want to keep the knowledge from the medical world. Anyhow, a doctor usually gets an awful of doleful accounts of pains, often fondly believed to be harbingers of the Grim Reaper. The imagination gets sick along with the body, and plays tricks with an ailing person's mind.Small wonder, then, that doctors visit "dying" people almost every day, and get tales of woe in return for their pills and powders. Small wonder, then, that they should need urging to listen to, to say nothing of encouraging, talking, by patients when they get so much of it.Telling the doctor is almost as much fun as telling the neighbors,
and the fun increases with the pains.
The latter, however, may have the pleasure to the story many, many times.

Privilege in Friendship

If ever a man is to be a real anything, the sense of privilege will be the sign. A physician to whom doctoring is not a privilege is no real physician. A teacher to whom teaching is not a privilege is no real teacher. A friend to whom friendship is not a privilege is no real friend.—
Harry Emerson Fosdick.

DISINHERITED

Marguerite Kelley, of Jersey City,
nine years old, is suing to recover $20,000 left by her father to pay for masses in the Church for the repose of his soul. That his daughter would be left penniless while the repose
was forthcoming apparently didn't bother the father. He had probably lived in such a way that he felt the masses to be necessary for ultimate salvation, and wanted to insure his own safety even at the girl's expense. The girl is disinherited.There are many such cases of bequests which ignore seeming rights of relatives or friends. A father, angered because his son married, cut him off by making a new will. He repented on his death bed but too late to change it. Many times some institution is bequeathed large sums while relatives are left poor. The old old question of the right of a man to dispose of his fortune as he wishes often comes up. And so often there are champions for both sides.Obviously, no man has a moral right to leave his children penniless without good cause. One man cannot outrange social obligations with only a whim for excuse. It is the old competition of individual rights against rights of all. Society must help care for poor people, and the general welfare is not helped by dis-inherited children.Courts of law are rapidly agreeing that wives and children and other relatives have a just claim on money normally intended for them,
but accidentally bequeathed otherwise. Mr. Kelley was selfish. His little daughter needs the money, and will probably get it.

A BLEAK OUTLOOK

Apparently Wall Street speculators
are not satisfied with various panics, prolonging the War and much misery already caused other people, for they are so manipulating the wheat crop that farmers in this country alone face a loss of $250,000,000.
Some say the loss may be six hundred millions.Added to big crops here and in Canada, a carry-over of 300,000,000 bushels from last year, and the growing production of Europe, speculation has brought a gloomy condition. Dollar wheat, once the fond hope of farmers, faces now as an alarming possibility. Although it cost on the average $1.40 a bushel
to raise, wheat may drop to thirty to sixty cents. And since wheat is the main dependence and barometer of farmers, to say nothing of everybody else, the outlook is very bleak.Since legislation would accomplish little, the only feasible alternative is to hold the wheat until prices are better. Many cannot do this; nearlyeverybody needs money by harvest time. But those who do may have a ghost of a chance of breaking nearly even. A profit is only a wild hope.The Government has arranged, through banks, to extend credit to farmers for the sole purpose of enabling them to win their wheat until prices gain. Any banker can explain details. And since the Government is behind the loans, they will be fairly made. They seem a lone hope in a tragic situation. Those who take advantage will at least escape
being victimized by unscrupulous wire-pulling wheat gamblers whose betting proclivities and future deliv-Only

Brooklyn—"Dad" Spencer was 80 years young on Sunday when he celebrated his birthday. Daddy don't seem to mind the heavy responsibilities of being health officer of the township and he takes care of all Saints church and the village council rooms and library. He loves the children and is by their consent an inspector of school report cards. He is interested in politics and prize fights and you had also better be sure of your geography when you talk with him about the places of the good old U. S. A. He has walked over more territory than most Brooklynites will ever see. But the nicest part of it is that after looking the country all over Dad picked out Brooklyn to live in and everybody expects to see him keep up his good speed here for the next forty years. —Exponent.

Many Advantages of Fireproof Crib

Concrete Is Ideal Because It Won't Burn and It Keeps Out Harmful Rodents.

The storage of farm crops is becoming an increasingly important problem. Indeed, some authorities assert that the time is not far distant when negotiable warehouse receipts will be issued to farmers who have their grain in storage. It will go far toward preventing a glut in the market at harvest time.

Safe Storage of Grain.

Naturally the issuance of warehouse receipts will be made dependent upon safe storage of the grain. For this reason it will be necessary to build granaries of fireproof materials. Concrete makes an ideal protection for grain since it will not burn and since rats and mice cannot gnaw through it. It has been estimated that every rat in the United States eats or destroys $4 worth of food in a year. Let him make his home in a concrete and he will spoil more than $4 worth. An additional advantage of a concrete crib is that there are not expensive point bills to undertake. The first cost is practically the only one.

A Permanent Concrete Crib.

Double Crib Most Popular.

The plan of crib most popular in the corn belt is the so-called double crib, shown in the illustration, with a driveway between two parallel sets of bins. The crib is usually placed in the side bins. Overhead a special bin is provided for the storage of small grain. In eastern states it is not safe to make corn cribs more than five or six feet wide, but this dimension can be increased to eight or nine feet in western states of the corn belt.

Concrete floors in cribs are very much to be desired. When properly made they are absolutely satisfactory since they are dry and smooth. Concrete mixed in the proportions of one sack of cement to two cubic feet of sand to three cubic feet of pebbles is recommended for floor construction. A smooth surface finish is desired as it will not retard the scoop shovel when sliding over it.

Hay Should Always Be Cured in the Windrow

Hay should always be cured in the windrow in preference to the swath. The side-delivery rake has been found to be of value not only for putting the hay in windrows, but also for turning over hay which has been rained upon.

Production of the very finest quality of hay comes when the crop has been bunched or cocked soon after wilting. This practice, of course, involves more labor, but in the case of alfalfa or a fine quality of clover hay, it is usually well worth the extra work necessary. In the case of alfalfa, in a rainy section, it has been found profitable to cap the cocks. Observations made at the Wisconsin experiment station have disclosed the fact that alfalfa which was thus protected had a decidedly higher content of bone and muscle-building materials and vitamins than alfalfa which was exposed to weathering.

Poisoned Bait Is Very Good to Control Moles

Poisoned grain can be inserted in the runways and more or less effectively control moles. To poison corn for this purpose, dissolve one ounce of strychnia sulphate in eight quarts of hot water, preferably rain water. In this solution, after cooling, soak one peck of corn for 48 hours, using as a container a vessel that will close tightly enough to prevent evaporation. When draining the corn at the end of this period of soaking save the poisoned water, as there will ordinarily be enough to soak half a peck more of grain, if needed. When the corn is treated is thoroughly dried it will return to its former bulk and will have its germinating qualities unimpaired.

Farm Animals Harvest Many Different Crops

Live stock are our greatest harvesters: they consume 100 per cent of our hay, 85 per cent of our corn, 75 per cent of our oats and barley, besides using up vast amounts of straw and forage of various kinds. We must keep live stock on our farms and we wish to give them the best of care and gain the largest profit. The silo lowers the cost of feeding an animal from 25 to 35 per cent, and it also increases production and growth.

Testing Compounds for Contact Insecticides

Most of Materials Examined Showed Little Toxicity.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Investigators who are studying insecticides will be interested in a contribution to the subject just published by the bureau of chemistry of the United States Department of Agriculture, as Department Bulletin 1169.

The investigation involves a study of the toxicity of the more readily available organic compounds when used as contact insecticides. In addition, a number of compounds which offered possible value as insecticides or which served to indicate working theories of insect toxicology were made in the laboratory. It is expected that this investigation will form the basis for future study and possibly lead to the discovery of compounds of commercial importance.

Most of the compounds tested showed little toxicity. These were ordinarily used in but few experiments unless questions of theoretical significance appeared to be involved. Those compounds which showed appreciable toxicity were subjected to greater study when available in sufficient quantity. Particular attention was given to the compounds which offered possible commercial value.

This bulletin is intended to furnish entomologists, chemists, and others who are working on insecticide problems, information concerning the relative value of a number of organic compounds not at present used on a commercial scale. Those interested may secure a copy of this bulletin free of charge by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Lessen Ravages of Flies by Applying Repellent

While there is probably no cheap, handy and effectual method of keeping all flies off cows in summer, their ravages may be much reduced by applying to the skin of the animals every alternate morning a little of a mixture of seal or fish oil and crude carbolic acid in the proportion of a tablespoonful of carbolic acid to a quart of oil. It is readily applied with a brush. Another preparation that is highly recommended is a mixture of pine tar and lard in the proportion of one part of the former to ten parts of the latter. It is put on with a cloth, rubbed down the neck, back, chest and joints, where the flies are most troublesome.

For a spraying mixture that may be made at home there is perhaps nothing better than coal oil emulsion—a mixture of coal oil and soapuds. This has to be applied every day when the flies are bad, and it evaporates in the course of several hours. A good way of applying a spray is to have a large sprayer, arranged to strike the animal at all points, stationed beside a wall built of poles, having a door at each end, so that the cows can be quickly sprayed and run through one after another.

The ideal summer treatment of cattle, whether dairy or feeding cattle, is to give them access to a darkened barn or shed in the heat of the day when flies are most troublesome. Gunysacks hung over the windows shut out the light without interfering materially with the circulation of air, and the doors may also be striped with this material.

Soy Bean Straw Makes Good Roughage for Cows

Straw which is obtained from threshing soy beans for seed makes a very good roughage for all kinds of stock. It will not dry up cows, but on the contrary it has been found that it will increase milk production. It is a common practice in sections where the crop is grown extensively for seed to bale the straw after threshing and sell it to dairymen and stock feeders.

Soy bean straw contains almost as much digestible nutrients pound for pound as does timothy hay. It is slightly richer in protein but contains a trifle less carbohydrate material. Those who have soy bean straw will make no mistake in feeding it to dairy cows or to any other class of stock, but the ration will need a protein supplement such as cottonseed meal or oil meal.

Use Capons as Brooders or for Raising Chicks

Capons have been used with very good results for hatching eggs. They have large, soft bodies, and are content to remain on the nest. For market needs the best breeds to caponize are the medium breeds, such as Rhode Island Reds, Plymouth Rocks or Wyandottes. People differ in their regard for capons as brooders, or for raising young chicks. This has seldom been a real help, as most people use an artificial brooder after the eggs are hatched by the capons.

Good Thinning of Fruit Will Hasten Maturity

Thinning should be done as early in the season as it is possible to determine that the fruit is set, in all events before the seeds are formed. Proper thinning of pears and early apples will hasten the maturity of the fruit and will advance the time of picking at least a week. This is a decided advantage in marketing, as first pickings of early fruit bring more than later pickings.

DAIRY FACTS

Dairy Animals Help in Country's Meat Supply

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

About 17 per cent of the matured dairy animals in this country find their way to the slaughter and packing plants, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. If this percentage is applied to the number of matured dairy animals reported on farms by the last census, and the average live weight and dressing yields are used in calculating the beef production, the result shows about 1,602,450,000 pounds of carcass beef produced from dairy cattle during the year 1920. This quantity represents more than 23 per cent of the total beef production of the United States for that year. Probably 80 per cent of all the calves slaughtered are of dairy breeding. If this percentage is applied to the total number of calves slaughtered in 1920 and the resulting figure multiplied by the average live weight and dressing yields, the amount of beef produced by dairy calves is about 500,647,000 pounds for the year 1920.

The principal conditions which cause dairy cows to be discarded for milk production purposes are old age, disease, physical defects, low milk yield, and sterility. Many old dairy cows and others that are unprofitable as milk producers are fattened for a short period and then sold for beef. When properly fed such cows make rapid gains, although the tendency is to accumulate fat externally and in the body cavities rather than to produce a well-marbled flesh. About 85 per cent of the cow carcasses are graded as common or lower, and the meat is used largely in the preparation of sausage and canned meat.

Bulls that are no longer desired in the herd for various reasons make up a part of the meat from dairy cattle. They are seldom suitable for dressed beef, a large proportion of the rounds being used for dried or smoked beef and the remaining portions of the carcasses for sausage.

While the quality of beef produced from mature cows and bulls is of lower grade, that is not necessarily true with respect to the meat obtained from dairy calves. Probably 95 per cent of the male and 50 per cent of the female dairy calves are slaughtered as calves. Most of these animals, if properly handled and slaughtered while young, produce a high grade of beef.

Comfort in Hot Weather Necessary for Dairy Cows

During the hot summer months many high producing cows are prevented from giving their normal supply of milk by carelessness of their owner in not supplying some one of the many necessary comforts for hot weather milk and butterfat production.

One of the most common of these is the furnishing of drinking water.

A cow in milk requires about 100 pounds, or 12.5 gallons, of water daily, and heavy producing cows frequently double this amount. During hot weather a cow must have the normal supply of water and an added amount necessary for adjusting her supply from normal to hot weather needs.

The question of how often cows should be watered, when they are not kept with a constant supply before them, varies with the condition of the weather, kind of feed, etc. It is safe to say, however, that cows in milk should have water at least three times a day.

Profitable Cow Ought to Produce Much Milk

It is pointed out by successful dairymen that to be profitable a cow ought to produce at least 5,000 pounds of milk in a year. In producing this quantity of milk, her butterfat would amount to about 200 pounds. In addition to the sale of butterfat, the skimmed milk, the manure, and the calf must be reckoned as of value.

Daily Water Supply Is of Greatest Importance

Cows which produce 25 pounds of milk a day require 75 pounds or more of water daily, and instances are on record in which heavy milkers have consumed more than 300 pounds of water a day. A gallon of water weighs eight pounds.

Young Calves Should Be Fed Good Grain Ration

Young calves should be fed grain as soon as they will eat it. Ground oats, corn chop and wheat bran, mixed in equal proportions, constitute a good grain ration. Feed twice daily all calf will clean up, remembering also that calves must have plenty of milk.

Value of Soy Beans.

Regarding the value of soy beans for milk cows, the Iowa station says that soy beans are worth $60 a ton when oil meal is worth $45.

High Quality Butter.

High quality butter is in the greatest demand and it is natural that creamery men should be willing to pay more for the better grades of cream.

A good cow will always give good returns for feed consumed as long as she is fed judiciously.

Already in the Sere and Yellow.

Some one has said that an old man is simply a man twenty years older than ourselves. This little joke from Punch is evidently founded on the observation, which, if you will consider it, is an acute one:

"And how's dad?" asked the visitor of a small friend of about eight years. "Pretty well, thank you, considering," replied the boy.

"Considering what?" inquired the visitor, puzzled.

"Well, he's getting a bit old, you know," replied the boy. "He'll be thirty tomorrow."—Youth's Companion.

He had duly proposed and been accepted and the engagement sealed with a kiss, a number of them, in fact. Then, as they sat on the sofa, he ventured to discuss more prosaic matters. "One little question, dearest."

"Yes?" she replied expectantly.

"Can you cook?" he asked earnestly.

"Why no?"

"Then how will we eat?"

"Oh, George, aren't you going to continue to bring me bomboms?"

Woman Has Important Post.

Although Miss Manning is attached to the general accounting office she handles the entire work of seven bureaus and at rush times is often seen with her sleeves rolled up accounting for her share of the output. There is little about the machines she oversees that Miss Manning does not know, and she is frequently called upon to perform some mechanical miracle upon them.

Urging that the candidates in an impending local political struggle make a study of terse English, the Boston Herald drives its argument home by quoting this conversation between two young women who met at a party:

POULTRY

Farmer Can Make Money by Culling Farm Flock

Each year a nice little profit could be made by the average farmer by giving his hens a little study and culling out the poor layers, thus allowing more room for the good layers, saving on feed, labor, time and closer attention.

The good poultryman will cull his flock the year round beginning at incubation, but for the farmer who doesn't make poultry raising a business, and wants to make it a profitable side line, one thorough culling each year will increase the production average of his flock. About the middle of the mating period is the proper time to give your flock a good culling. This will vary with different flocks, but usually comes in the middle of July, August, September, and the first part of October. The characteristics which distinguish the poor layer from the good are most evident at this time. The poor producer will not lay during the fall and winter months. A careful culling at this time will reduce the feed bill but not the egg production.

Culling pullets is based on an estimate of the future production of the bird. Culling hens is based on her past performances.

A careful culling of your pullets just before they start the laying season will improve the production of your flock. The pullets that mature early, showing best body development and redness of comb, should be saved. Pullets that are undersized, lacking vigor, deformed or hatched too late for winter production should be culled. Select pullets with prominent eyes, broad back with the width well carried to the tail, broad head and a deep rectangular body.

To cull a flock right each bird must be handled. In order to save time and enable one to go through a large flock of birds in a short while some means for catching the hens should be arranged. A coop or crate open at one end so the hens may be driven through a small floor in the hen house into the coop is a good method. If the coop has an opening in the top so the birds can be lifted out, you can call the whole flock with little disturbance and quickly.

Molting is one important point to consider. When a hen molts she has finished her laying season. The early molters, that is, the hen that molts in July, August and September, is a poor producer. Phil H. Hayes, Extension Poultryman, Oklahoma A. & M. College.

Only Quality Eggs Get High Prices in Summer

Egg markets of the country are overloaded at this season of the year, and thus eggs are sold on a quality basis and not simply as eggs.

And because eggs are not "just eggs" these days, and because quality eggs are the only ones that get the prices, the wise poultryman takes every step to put a super egg on the market.

Quality eggs are produced by taking the male birds out of the pen as soon as breeding is over and being very particular to keep broody hens off the nests, for a "setting" hen can start the process of incubation after a few hours.

R. F. Gray, assistant poultry specialist at the New Jersey State college, suggests also that eggs be gathered twice a day and kept in a cool, dry, clean place. Eggs should be shipped often and in clean, dry cases with good fillers. A moldy filler will spoil the quality of the entire case of eggs. He further adds:

Keep the nests dry and clean, as washed eggs will not keep very long in warm weather.

Cover the eggs up when on the way to the station and keep them out of the sun at all times.

Be sure to grade more carefully during this season if you would get high prices.

Always Catch Ducks and Drakes by Their Necks

To pick up grown ducks and drakes, always catch a bird by the neck in a firm grasp. Never pick up a duck by the body. If you do, you will make trouble for yourself and the duck. You are liable to bend or twist, or dislocate, or break the bones of the wings and legs. You can carry three or four ducks, or more, as many as you can lift, between two hands, in front of your body. Do not be afraid of strangling the ducks, or breaking their necks.

In Shipping Live Birds Uniformity Is Big Factor

When shipping live birds, sort them as to size, age, color and sex, and don't crowd the coops. The buyer will always pay more for uniformity in color and size, because these factors appeal to his eye, just as good food daintily served appeals to the palate.

Poor Place for Chicks.
Ground where last year's chicks died isn't good ground for this year's chicks. Move the coops and brooders.

Borrow Modes From Elders;

Jacket Blouse Scores Success

SINCE simplicity is the keynote of summer fashions, many ideas for children's frocks are borrowed from the modes for their elders. Straight lines, short sleeves and especially decorative features, tell the world that the little miss, entering, or in her early teens, is apt to own a frock which mimics one of her mother's. In several details. And dresses for the flapper or debutante may develop much in and jackets are of the same material. At the left, a very smart model is made of light silk printed in an old Persian design. It slips on over the head and is gathered at the low waistline into a belt of the same material. The rather high V neck is finished with a flat collar and bow tie of the material. In the sleeves the tendency of the late summer styles is emphasized. These are set-in, have a wide common with those of a youthful grandmother.

In the little frock pictured here, for instance, a silk crepe proclaims that it looks as well on children as on grown-ups. The narrow val lace frills used for decorating it are favorites on afternoon dresses for women of any age, and so is the rosette at the side of the waistline. It is made of row on row of ruffled val and centered with small flowers. The long ends of narrow velvet ribbon, falling from the center of the rosette are decidedly youthful, but everybody wears them. The medallions of lace that trim the skirt and little lace frills at the neck and sleeves, are especially pretty on taffeta frocks and are used on dresses for grownups, but the lace is massed in many rows.

These val lace decorations look well on nearly all the sheer cotton goods that contribute so much to the beauty of little girls' clothes in summer time. Val is as popular as crepe, both are far more sturdy than they look. Or-gandy always has admirers and is estare and are so fashioned that the stripe of the material forms the edge of the cuff.

The suit at the right is of heavier crepe and is simpler in design, though equally as attractive as the costume at the left. The skirt is of plain material with deep plait and is shown with a blouse, machine embroidered in an all-over design. The blouse, in this instance, is slightly higher-waisted and is gathered into a wide belt pecially well suited to dresses for very little misses. Entire outfits are made of it in gay colors; they include the dress, knicker, and adorable little bonnets. Narrow tucks edged with the narrowest val lace, hemstitching and frills of self material are favored for their decoration.

Borrowing its colors from every tint of the rainbow and its designs from all sorts of sources, the jacket blouse has scored a success as a rival of the silk sweater for wear with plaited skirts. A blouse of this variety may well serve more than one purpose, as it is equally effective when worn with a skirt of the same material in a suit or with one of contrasting color. The illustration above shows new suits in which the skirts

Vogue of Knitted Garments.
Knitted outer-garments have won so much popularity that they have come to be considered as staples. The machine-knit material is, of course, referred to, though the more exclusive hand-knit garments are always the aristocrats in woolen wear. Silk, flannel, silk, and wool, and all-wool are used.

He found it in Valparaiso

Then he headed north and found it up near the "jumping-off place"

No matter what part of the world you may find yourself in, few things make you feel more at home than to walk into a store and discover your favorite smoking tobacco for sale.

You get a great thrill from finding your home newspaper in a strange land and an even greater thrill on meeting someone from the old home town. But tobacco certainly comes next in the order of importance in away-from-home thrills.

With your favorite tobacco in your favorite pipe, life is worth living in almost any corner of the globe.

This thought was inspired by the following interesting letter from Mr. W. E. Bromley, an Edgeworth smoker from Fort Wayne, Ind.:

Larus & Brother Co.
Richmond, Va.
Gentlemen:

In some of your advertisements from time to time I have noticed letters from different parts of the world. I have read them with interest and I wonder if anyone ever had a more varied experience than I have had.

When in Valparaiso, South America, I could get it and when I was far north as a man could go without going to the "jumping-off place," I could get Edgeworth Ready-Rubbed.

I have an old briar that I have had for ten years and it never had a crumb of any but Edgeworth in it.

If that isn't going some, "you tell me."

Yours truly,
(Signed) W. E. Bromley.

If Mr. Bromley makes frequent skips from continent to continent, his record of keeping all tobacco but Edgeworth out of his briar is indeed noteworthy.

Although Edgeworth does reach the far corners of the earth, there must be times when the supply runs low in Zanzibar and other remote districts.

But as a rule Edgeworth smokers, wherever they are, generally manage to find a way to get Edgeworth, for they don't feel as if they are really smoking unless the tobacco comes from a little blue can.

If you are not an Edgeworth smoker but would like an opportunity to find out if you want to be one, send your name and address to Larus & Brother Company, 75 South 21st Street, Richmond, Va.

You will receive almost immediately free samples of both Edgeworth Plug Slices and Ready-Rubbed. Then you can judge for yourself what you think about this tobacco that so many smokers claim gives complete pipe-satisfaction.

If you will include the name and address of your regular tobacco dealer with your request for the free samples, your courtesy will be appreciated.

To Retail Tobacco Merchants: If your jobber cannot supply you with Edgeworth, Larus & Brother Company will gladly send you prepared by parcel post a one- or two-dollar order of any size of Edgeworth Plug Slices or Ready-Rubbed for the same price you would pay the jobber.

The Slavery Days are Over

And yet many of you are still holding in bondage your wife—slaving, she is, over the hot coal range, during the hot, sultry days to feed you, when her work should be made as easy as possible.

Did you ever think of it from that angle—perhaps you are out enjoying a game of golf, or sitting beneath a cooling fan in your office.

What can you do to make her task lighter, particularly during the heated period?

Why not buy her a Gas Range? No coal to carry, no smoke, no building fires, or carrying ashes—it's the ideal way to cook—and believe me—if you haven't one already, she will appreciate your thoughtfulness.

WASHTENAW QUOTA 19 AT MILITARY TRAINING CAMP

Nineteen men is the quota of Washtenaw county to the Citizens' Military Training camp at Camp Custer to be held from August 1 to September 1. The quota for the whole Sixth Corps area, which includes Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin, is 3,800.

The aim of the camp is to promote good citizenship and an interest in national defense. Enrollment implies no later service obligation for men in the first or second year, and all men between the ages of 17 and 24 years may attend.

One advantage of the camp this year is that boys from the same town and county will be placed in the same company and in the same or neighboring tents. This means that friends may live together and may come to the camp with the knowledge that they will not be separated.

There will be four courses of instruction at Camp Custer. They are: The basic red, advanced red, white and blue. Applicants for the advanced courses are allowed to select the branch of service in which they wish to be trained. In the basic red course no previous military experience is necessary. It provides for preliminary military training and all in this course are given opportunities to qualify for the advanced red course.

In order to enter the advanced red course, one must have graduated from the basic red camp or else have had military training equivalent thereto. Training in various branches of the army is provided in this advanced course.

Physical requirements for those entering the white course are higher than those of the advanced red camp. This course qualifies selected enlisted men of the regular army and selected citizens who indicate their willingness to serve at some future time.

Those in the blue course must have educational requirements prescribed for appointments as second lieutenants in the officers' reserve corps. It provides training for service as second lieutenants.

It is being emphasized by the officers at Camp Custer that all expenses are paid by the government. This includes expenses from the time of leaving home until return thereto, travel expenses, meals, medical attention, all outer clothing and even laundry.

ODD VERSION OF "SHYLOCK"

On the Japanese Stage Shakespeare's Famous Character Is Made a Fisherman.

The globe trotter went to a performance of "The Merchant of Venice" recently. He had but recently returned from the Orient, where, he told his friends that were at the theater with him, he had seen a Japanese version of that Shakespearean play.

"It's interesting to note the changes they make in it," he remarked, according to the New York Sun. "Of course they have to localize it, or else they'd miss the meaning of it altogether. For instance, the part of Shylock, as played in the Japanese 'Merchant' is not a Jew, because the Japanese could not understand the anti-Semitic feeling prevalent in certain of our occidental countries. Instead, he is pictured to them as a fisherman, which is rather a despicable type in Japan."

"Then Shylock does not cry for his pound of flesh. Instead, it is an inch of flesh he demands. The Japanese Shylock, when Antonio the merchant bares his breast, marks with brush and paint a square inch on the latter's flesh. Just at the moment he is about to draw forth his knife, a longer and far more murderous looking one than any used in English productions, Portia is brought to the court in her dainty Jirikisha."

ORIGIN OF THE HAWAIIANS

Belief Has Been Held That They Are Descended From the Lost Tribes of Israel.

The origin of the Hawaiian people is still somewhat obscure. Oldest inhabitants of the islands told the earliest missionaries that the largest island was produced from a large egg, deposited by an immense bird upon the water, which, bursting, formed the present island. From the first land the other islands of the Hawaiian group developed automatically.

The conservative Hawaiians of early days stoutly held the opinion that the first human inhabitants of the islands descended from the gods, or were created by a miracle upon the islands. Some of the earliest American missionaries found conclusive evidence, to their minds, that the Hawaiians sprang from the lost ten tribes of Israel. The Rev. S. Dibble, in his "History of the American Mission," 1843, gives much space to tracing the parallels between customs and traditions of the Hawaiians and the ceremonies and scripture of the Jews.

Gentle Hearts.

Great minds—male and female—have gentle hearts. Frank Walton handled a frog as if he loved him. Cooper would not unnecessarily hurt a worm. Lincoln upset his White House cabinet to rescue a mother pig from a fire. Webster neglected the Supreme court to replace a baby robin that had fallen from its nest.

Walton, the father of fishers and fishing, angled for the habits of fishes more than for their hides. The capture of a fish was insignificantly incidental to the main notion of his hours abroad—his diving love of the waters, the fields, the meadows, the skies, the trees and God's beautiful things that inhabit these. "Is the soul we seek to replenish, not the cruel?"—From "The Persistent Angler," by Charles Bradford.

Sparrow's Bravery Overdrawn.

"The English sparrow," remarked the amateur ornithologist, "gets credit for a lot of combativeness and bravery he doesn't possess. He is supposed to drive other birds away, but I doubt if he does it. Certainly the robins are not afraid of him, and he flees headlong before blackbirds when they strut toward him on the lawns. Speaking of the robin, our red-capped friend is no coward. In my backyard two robins have their nest, and believe me, they don't allow other birds to molest it. They drive blackbirds away better skelter, and even bluejays, among the meanest of the feathered tribe, are not allowed to get too fresh. The robin is a peaceable bird at heart, but he is no professional pacifist by a long shot."—Detroit News.

Doctor Nature.

The young man had been ill all his life. Nobody seemed to know what his complaint was, but everybody he came in contact with agreed that he was ill. He looked it, and often said he was born that way. I defined his case the first day I met him—the city complaint, a complication of general under-the-weather-ness that is brought about by foul air, improper exercise, steady indoor work, irregularity, cigarettes, and incorrect food. Inevitably, he's well now. He went out in the woods for two weeks every three months for six years, and at present he's fat and solid.—From "The Determined Angler and the Brook Trout," by Charles Bradford.

Making a Home.

"It takes a heap o' living in a house to make it a home," writes Eddie Guest, the Detroit author. And it takes only a little common sense in the selection of furniture to make that home better furnished according to the American standard. Sentiment surrounds the furniture in the home as well as it centers on some particular spot or locality in which that home was built. In fact, sympathy for your furniture means better furnished homes and the treatment of that furniture.

WOMEN OF THE OLD SOUTH

Had by No Means a Life of Idleness. Since Their Domestic Duties Were Many.

There is still widespread conception that the wives of the ante-bellum southern planters led a life of ease and idleness. Such was far from the truth, says a writer in the New York Sun. Woman played a vital part in the old southern economic system, a role which kept her busy and loaded her with grave responsibilities.

She was the head of the domestic side of the plantation life. Not only did she supervise the housework of the mansion, but she had to look after the servants' quarters as well. As for the slaves, their food, their clothing, their health were under her care.

It is related that a distinguished foreign diplomat was astonished, when visiting Mount Vernon, to find Mrs. Washington surrounded by negro girls from ten to fifteen years old, busily knitting stockings for the slaves of the plantation.

Thus was the sphere of the southern woman sharply defined. It was an important sphere, so far as it went, but it was dependent upon the plantation system out of which it grew. After the freeing of the slaves and the industrial revolution which it produced, the women of the South found themselves bereft of the occupation for which they were bred.

CARRY THE MILK IN BASKETS

Nature of Filipino Deliverers' Work Has Led to Their Superb Physical Development.

Treading softly, the Manila milkman delivers freshly forming carabao milk in tall Spanish wine bottles to his customers' front doors long before sunrise.

Unlike the American milkman, he has no equipment in which to transport his wares, but carries them in two wicker baskets slung from the ends of a bamboo pole which is laid across the shoulders through a wooden neck yoke.

Carabao milk is said to be delicious when served in coffee or chocolate, surpassing in flavor both cow's and goat's milk.

Because of their early morning track work, Filipino milkmen are superior physically to any other type of workmen in the islands, with powerful leg muscles and broad, strong shoulders.

Horseferry Road.

Visitors to London will remember a street back of Westminster abbey, which was called Horseferry road. It leads to a bridge across the Thames and once had the only horse ferry allowed in London, a monopoly granted to the archbishops of Canterbury, and when most of the traffic of the old ferry was diverted by the opening of Westminster bridge, the see of Canterbury was granted $11,000 compensation for loss of revenue. The old ferry, which continued to ply until the erection of Lambeth bridge, 60 years ago, had a place in English history, for by it James II and his consort passed from Whitehall to the Surrey side one dark night in December 1688, en route for France and exile. The king threw the great seal into the river from the ferryboat during the crossing. It was picked up by a fisherman and given to William of Orange.

Carvings as Guides to Water.

In the country around Saline valley, Inyo county, Calif., Indian rock carvings can still be seen, and many whites know how to read them to the extent of using them as guides to water. In eastern Arizona these rock carvings were made by the ancient tribe from which the present-day Hopi descended. This is proved by the similarity between these pictures and those made in modern times by the Hopi, and by the fact that the sacred snake, worshiped by the Hopi for many centuries, was dug up in a ruin near Springerville. The Blackfeet have a tradition that many years ago a delegation was sent south to the land of the Hopi, by their head medicine man, to worship and pray before his sandstone figure, for the return of the buffalo herds to the Blackfeet country, after a migration.

Cursed to Wander Over Earth.

People without a country, the gypsies roam to all four corners of the earth. It is said that many years ago a Moslem saint of Turkey cursed the people with these words: "May you never more enter or belong to the 772 races of the earth, but as outcasts be scattered, homeless, wretched and poor; ever wandering and toiling, never realizing wealth, never enjoying the fruits of your labor, and never acquiring the esteem of mankind." The curse didn't work in all its particulars. For instance, a lot of gypsies are not poor. It is said that many have pretty fair bank accounts. And the saint cursed them to everlasting toil. But who ever saw a gypsy work?

The Congressional Record.

The Congressional Record, a printed Journal of the daily proceedings of congress, has been issued since 1789. Up to that time only secret sessions were held by the senate, but after that date all regular sessions were open to the public and publication was required except in the case of "executive sessions." Until 1824 this publication was known as the "Annals of Congress," from 1825 to 1837 as the "Register of Debates"; from 1837 to 1874 as the "Congressional Globe." In the latter year it became the "Congressional Record."

The Familiar Triangle

By ELLA SAUNDERS

(© 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

"GO DOWN to the Mesopotamian when she comes in, and see if you can pick up any of these men," said the chief to Halloran. "They're all wanted for something or other. You'll find what on this slip."

Halloran went down to the pier. His heart was slugging for Kathleen was coming over from the Old Country on the Mesopotamian.

Kathleen and he had been engaged ever since they were children together. Halloran had been three years on the force. He had saved up enough to furnish a little apartment uptown, and Kathleen and he were to be married the day of her arrival.

Halloran looked at the list. There were five names. There were Jones and Ellersley, wanted for fraudulent bankruptcies—warrants were out against them, but they had skipped, but were expected back. Black was a murder case—suspected. Thompson had frauded the customs on his last trip. And there was Ronaldson, alias the bits—he was a slick customer, a true atlantic card-sharpener. The police didn't want him, but he was to be held for the immigration bureau, who would doubtless deport him in due course.

The big ship warped into her berth. Halloran scanned the decks. He did not see Kathleen for quite some little time.

Then at last he saw her. She was leaning against the rail alone, but she was apparently not looking for him, not waving a frantic hand as the rest were doing. As soon as the ship was thrown across Halloran made his way to where she stood.

"Kathleen?"
"Michael?"
Her arms were round his neck, and yet the kiss she gave him felt colder than ice upon his cheek.

"Kathleen! You're glad to see me?"
"Oh, yes, Michael."

"What is it then, darling?"
"Kathleen was looking at him with swimming eyes. "Nothing, Michael. But it is something. Come here. Tell me."

"Michael, I—I don't love you much as I thought I did."

"Something broke in Halloran's heart. After all those years—those years."

"There's somebody else?"
Kathleen's answer was almost audible.

"Who is he, Kitty?"
"Some one I—I met on board the ship. Oh, I'm so sorry, Michael, I love him—I do love him, and I'm very fond of you, but I don't love him in that way. But I'll marry Michael. I will."

"Not if you don't care any more, Kitty," answered Halloran. "Who he?"
But there was no need for Halloran to ask that question, for he saw, approaching the girl, and he saw look in Kitty's eyes that would tell him even if he had not been so warned. There is no mistaking that look.

Halloran looked his man over. He turned to the girl. "Kitty, I want to talk to him for a few moments. I don't be frightened. I'm not going to do him any harm. Run away like a good girl."

Kathleen stepped a little distance away and looked at the two men curiously. Halloran walked up to the other.

"What name is it this trip, bitts?" he asked blandly.

The other looked at him fearfully. "I—I don't."

"Oh, I guess I've got you to right," said Halloran.

"My name's Kate."

"Well, Kate, I think the immigration people would like to have a little talk with you."

The other put out a tremulous, stalling hand. "For God's sake, me a chance," he pleaded. "I've second—not much doing in the line second. I've quit the game."

I want to go West and settle down on a ranch. There's a girl I met on the boat. She'd marry me, I think, and for God's sake give me a chance."

Halloran half-glanced at standing near. "You have your chance, Kate," he said quietly. "But remember, if you play false with me or the little girl, I'll—Oh, never mind, guess she can keep you to the path if any one can."

He turned and grasped a man's side him by the arm.

"Black, I want you," he said.

Dogs in City Less Friendly.

Many who have come from other parts of the country to live here in New York is an unfriendly city, point to many instances where New Yorkers are lacking in neighborliness, a New York Sun writer says.

One woman, who has never been quite used to New York ways, is convinced that a city rears a spell on its people.

"Why," she says, "even the dogs meet on the street are affected. In the country every dog one meets is a sort of treasure, which runs to nose you for a minute, demands a pat on the head and then trots away. In New York they are just as much as not to be stepped on by your heels."

Use.

The Egyptian dynasty, which was the first to use the word "primrose," is said to have been the first to use it.

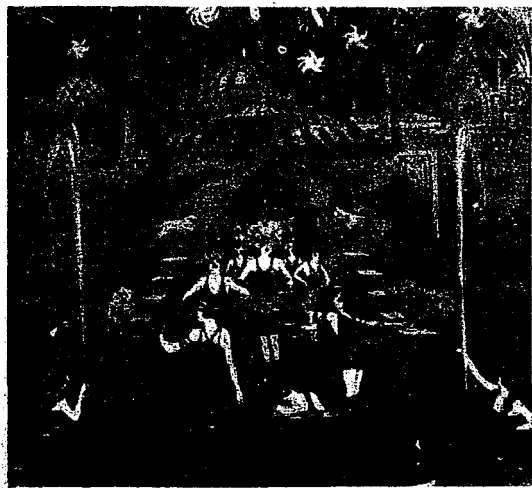

Foolish Ideas.

Some will not learn because they think they know enough already; others will not learn because they are afraid they are showing their ignorance by asking questions. It does not pay to belong to either class.—Buck.

How We Get "Primrose."

A primrose is neither prim nor a rose. The original word was "primrose," meaning the first, and has no conception of primness whatever. It changed into "rose" because that word had a recognizable meaning to English.

"What Becomes Of Those Girls?"

When 50 beautiful girls dance down the broad flight of stairs into a big tank of water at "The Awakening" and disappear beneath the water's surface without reappearing, the question arises from over 17,000 tongues, "Where do they go?" and later in the program when a group of them come up from beneath the water as "butterflies," and more of them reappear in a beautiful gondola the question "Where do they come from?" is just as puzzling.

"The Awakening" is being staged at Dexter boulevard and Davidson avenue, west, Detroit, by Shadukian Grotto, under the direction of N. C. Chapman, and is said to be the most mammoth as well as the most dazzling outdoor spectacle ever shown. Seats to the number of 17,420 are nightly filled by spectators, and the miles as far away from Detroit as Lansing are daily sending large delegations to witness Michigan's most wonderful spectacle.

In charge of the water acts is Mr. H. N. Neppell of New York and Atlantic City whose fame in submarine moving pictures and in other aquatic feats is nation-wide. In charge of the giant ballets is Alexander Oumansky, ballet master at the Capitol theatre, New York, as assisted by his ballerina, Miss Elie. De Larches late of the Hungarian Royal opera of Budapest and a corps of dancing instructors. Over 600 Detroit girls appear in the various ballet numbers.

Heading the animal acts are the Hippodrome elephants from New York, and as the comedy, headliner is Marceline, the Hippodrome clown aided by an army of fun makers.

The largest order ever placed for fireworks attests to the magnitude of this section of the spectacle, and boggles in comparison all previous attempts at pyrotechnic entertainment.

FAIR NOTES

The big Merchants building is about one-third completed. This provides 70 new exhibitors for the fair of a class impossible to accommodate under canvas.

The main entrance has been graded down, smoothed and gravelled and well packed by the Odd Fellows and Grotto circuses. The big arch erected by the Grotto will be stayed permanently and used for the fair. A new six inch water main will provide ample water supply for this year's fair and also adequate fire protection.

The Fair needs a permanent dining hall and dance pavilion and either of these should be a good investment for some enterprising citizen. According to the present plans, the fruit and vegetable departments will be accommodated in a building at this year's fair. Now is the time to collect specimens of seeds, grains and grasses and also early fruits. The Fair Society will provide, without cost to the exhibitors, cold storage for early fruits.

AMBER A FOSSILIZED RESIN

Takes About a Thousand Years for the Material to Become of Commercial Value.

It is said by the orientals that when a tiger dies its soul penetrates into the earth and becomes a stone. This stone is the yellowish-brown amber which we see so often today in the long and short strings of Chinese amber.

Amber is a fossilized vegetable resin found in geological deposits. The heavy drops of resin are brought out on trees by the hot sun. The red tree is one instance. These balls of resin drop from the tree and sink into the earth. Each year the resin goes deeper below the surface. After a thousand years have elapsed the resin has become fossilized and is mined in large pieces. The beads for combs, necklaces and bracelets are cut and polished from the mined amber. There are many varieties of amber, such as stone amber, water amber, flower amber, black jet amber and wax amber. The latter is yellow in color and transparent.

The Chinese identify genuine amber by rubbing the stone between the hands. If it is the genuine stone it becomes warm from friction and will attract the mustard seed, or chaff, or dried leaves, just as a magnet attracts iron.

UNDERSTAND TALK OF BIRDS

Arabs Boast That They Can Hold Converse With the Creatures of the Air.

To understand the languages of birds is peculiarly one of the boasted sciences of the Arabs, who pretend that many of their countrymen have been skilled in the knowledge of the language of birds ever since the time of King Solomon.

It is related that Balkis, queen of Sheba, had a bird called Muid-hud—that is, lapwing—which was her trusty messenger to King Solomon. Another story tells that when Aheja, a famous Arabian commander, and a camel driver were talking together, a bird flew over their heads, making at the same time an unusual sort of noise. The camel driver, hearing it, looked steadfastly on Aheja, and demanded who he was. Aheja, not choosing to answer, desired to know the reason of that question. "Because," replied the camel driver, "this bird assured me that a company of people is coming this way, and that you are the chief of them." While he was speaking, Aheja's attendants arrived.

Pigeons are the favorite bird of the Mohammedans, as, according to their legends, a pigeon built its nest in front of a cave where their prophet was hid, and thus favored his escape from his enemies.

Madstone Treatment a Fallacy.
The belief that a madstone cures hydrophobia is an old tradition with no foundation. The Pasteur treatment administered by a competent physician is the only effective treatment known. For centuries the fallacy of the madstone treatment has existed among men. But, according to physicians, no person treated with a madstone ever recovered if the poison of rabies actually found its way into the blood. Many persons, after having been attacked by a supposedly rabid animal, have recovered upon the application of a madstone to the wound. The madstone's effect, however, was wholly imaginary.

The history of the madstone is as mythical as the efficacy of the stone in the treatment of rabies. It generally is concluded, however, that the "stone" was a part of the practice of medicine in India in the latter half of the Seventeenth century. Later explorations carried it to Europe and thence to America.—Kansas City Star.

Cockfighting Old Sport.

Cockfighting has flourished at one time or another in most countries of the world. The gambling attendant on such encounters led, in 1508, to the first prohibition of cockfighting in England. This prohibition was, in due course rescinded, and Henry VIII built the cockpit in Whitehall, destined to so many vicissitudes. In Peru even church dignitaries have figured among the lovers of "feather." When Sir Clements Markham was investigating Peruvian antiquities in 1853, he enjoyed the hospitality of a bishop who, after dinner, produced a gamecock and fought a match with the Cura Parroco's bird on the dinner table.

On the Night Shift.

Nighthawks and whoopvoills work chiefly at night, when most of the other birds are off duty, and at daybreak their good work is taken up by the swifts and swallows, says Nature Magazine of Washington. These birds are provided with big scapnet mouths, and as they swing through the air over wide areas of country they scoop up almost unbelievable numbers of insects. Six hundred were taken from the stomach of a single Arkansas nighthawk.

Unsafe to Wed in Afternoon.

"Married at high noon." In the old days in England, couples were always married at noon because the bridegroom could not be relied on to stay sober after the hour of one o'clock in the day. That was the origin of the expression. And in those days it was the custom for the newly wedded man to wait on his bride on their wedding day. As she sat at the table, he acted as servant to her. That was the origin of the word "bridegroom."

One Great Damage.

A Pair of Home-Wreckers

By MORRIS SCHULTZ

(Copyright Western Newspaper Union.)

TOM TARRISH was through with his home—through forever. He had dreamed of it for years, but his wife's last outburst had finally nerved him to take the plunge. There had been a furious quarrel over the gas range—Tarrish couldn't remember how it had started and he didn't want to. One cause was as good as another.

God, how he hated that home, its shining specklessness, the sound of his wife's broom!

How he hated the memory of those years of married life!

He even hated the children. He had been so contented in his old bachelor days; he had never dreamed that marriage was such an unmitigated hell. Well, he was through with it all.

He would send Polly a sum of money each week, and he could always earn a decent living as a printer. He would not let them suffer. He was simply removing himself from a place where he was not wanted.

His plan was to take the car to Tarrish, and there he meant to make the through train to Wilmington. In Wilmington he knew that he could get a job at once. There he would settle down to the delights of a bachelor existence once more.

He stepped on board the car, and sat for a long while listlessly, watching the scenery flash by. He felt glad that he had had the courage to make the plunge at last. It had become inevitable. Nevertheless—

Well, Polly certainly could cook. That was one of the sacrifices that he would have to make. He would have to reconcile himself to restaurant and boarding house cooking. That wasn't much.

But of course it was nice to have a whole house instead of the hall-bedroom that would be his lot henceforward. And the garden—spring was coming—he certainly would miss that garden. He specialized in dahlias; he had planted a number of prize sorts, and he wondered how the hybrids would evolve.

Oh, well, he would have to give that up. It wasn't much.

Nevertheless, when he reached Tarrish, the first flame of his anger had already burned itself away. After all, the associations of years had centered about his home. He wondered how Tom would get along without him. He wondered what they would tell Elizabeth. Elizabeth and he had been such chums.

Because the temptation to return was becoming overwhelming, he thrust these thoughts angrily aside and went up to the depot. There was half an hour to wait. He sat down on a seat.

Another car came up. A woman—several women, but this one in particular—stepped out. She was coming toward him. He gave a gasp. Polly!

His flight was discovered, and Polly had come to take him home.

His knees shook under him. Desperately he darted into the waiting room. He hoped devoutly she wouldn't look for him there. He must hide there, all day if necessary, take a later train.

He glanced out through the window. Polly was pacing up and down the platform. There was a look of despair upon her face. It didn't seem like anger. Consolation began to smite Tom Tarrish again. It dealt him some terrible thumps. He covered.

And suddenly the door of the waiting room was flung open and Polly entered. She flung herself down upon a seat and buried her face in her hands. She had not seen him.

This was a desperate situation. At any moment she might look up and spot him. The only chance was to slip past her, take to his heels, and run.

Inch by inch Tom crept toward her. He was nearly at the door when Polly looked up and saw him. She gave a gasp.

Tom Tarrish remained staring stupidly at her. He was rooted to the ground, unable to stir an inch. A cold sweat broke out all over him.

"Run!"

She sprang toward him, and put her arms about him.

"Oh, Tom, how did you know? Oh, Tom, I'm so sorry. It was wicked of me to think of running away like this. But I should have come back."

"Running away?" he gasped.

"I was so upset, Tom, but if you'll take me back I promise to try to keep my miserable temper under control. Say you'll take me back and forgive me, Tom."

"All right," said Tom.

The "Old Manse."

This is an old house at Concord, Mass., erected in 1803, and famous as the birthplace of Ralph Waldo Emerson and the home of Nathaniel Hawthorne. In the study, on the floor above the dining room, Emerson wrote his famous essay on nature, and Hawthorne his "Mosses From an Old Manse." Adjoining the house is the bridge over the Concord river, "where the embattled farmers stood and fired the shot heard 'round the world.'"

Hawthorne lived in close retirement in this old house for three years, "during which time he was not seen by more than a dozen of the villagers."

One Great Damage.
