BILL'S COLUMN
 Timely Discussions of various facts that may interest you.

"BILL"

An old camping ground for some folks, not the kind where you go out and pitch your tent, but the kind where you move in every day and chat and then drop on, has been closed for some days now. The lock on the door is strong enough that something is wrong, and as all those usual persons who used to keep the chairs warm in place, pass they cast a longing eye at the shop. The proprietor of the blacksmith shop has been ill and late the bunch have either found necessary to go to work a little earlier or get up a little later.

Whether the world is getting worse or not is not for us to decide. Most of us feel that it is a fairly good place to live in. But did you ever stop to take a daily paper and glance just at the headlines on the first page. About three fifths of the headings concern murders, holdups, accidents and here and there some clever scandle. It's strange what people like, but it's just what which makes it interesting. Here in the quiet of the little village we do get all the hustle and bustle of a big city. We do not get the great excitement and big scandle, but nevertheless we have almost everything that can be wanted.

The Chicago Evening American comments editorially upon an article in the Christian Science Monitor, a well edited publication, which took trouble to measure inch for inch the space given to the Dempsey-Gilbert fight and a great educational meeting held the same day. The editor was shocked to learn that on the average, the fight beat the educational meeting for space a thousand to one.

The Hearst paper says that this time once more that the modern newspaper is a mirror reflecting the people. "For one person in the United States who would have paid 10 cents to attend the educational meeting, unfortunately a thousand would pay $10 to see the prize fight," says the American, "and" adds, "newspapers can't change that situation, the people themselves must do it. The editor cannot change the face that looks into it."

It is the same situation the world over. A variety football game draws hundreds of thousands, and a convocation or a lecture a few hundred to a thousand or so. Movies, ball games, circuses, races, and theatres draw more people than prayer meetings, bedroom farces, the slightly risqué drama, the burlesque show, draw more people than the efforts of the Gamma League with their "Back to Bethlehem" and "Peer Gynt."

In our time in and around various newspaper offices, we heard complaints about too little sport news, too little water news, not enough stock market quotations, too much careful shades of vice stories, and so on, but never a complaint about too few book reviews—or their absence entirely, or too few standard books given in serial form, or too little poetry of the better kind.

Newspapers are conducted for the people. They would not last long if they were put out for the minority. In any, as in everything else, the masses must be pleased and satisfied. In fact, it is seldom, if ever on a real newspaper that the editor can play up his hobby or air his pet peeve for himself in business to please himself, but to support himself and increase his bank account. Thus he must air the pet hobbies of the people and their preferences.

HARDING'S CONDITION SERIOUS LUNG AFFECTED

Early Optimism Fades; First Lady Changes From Patient to Nurse

According to statements issued by President Harding's physicians last evening, it was admitted that his condition was serious. An official bulletin issued by the five medical officers said President Harding "except for weakness and restlessness has been fairly comfortable though his condition is a serious one."

The bulletin here out that there was congestion in one lung. He took some nourishment which was some of the best news of the day.

He has more than held his own against further complications and developments. Favorable conditions were also found such as the absence of peritonsal symptoms and freedom in the passages of the lungs.

Mrs. Warren G. Harding, left the White House more than a month ago with the president on his 15,000 mile trip. She insisted on making the tour despite the fact that she had recovered but a short time from a serious illness. Today she is nurse in the sick room of her husband. She has cheerfully assumed the burdens of the sick-room and besides is lending an effective hand in the business office, where secretaries and clerks labor with the work of cancelling arrangements made in advance and acknowledging hundreds of messages of solicitude and responding to continuous telephone calls by anxious friends from everywhere in the country.

TOO MANY ACRES WHEAT BLAMED FOR LOW PRICES

Washington Experts Charge World Over-Production Is Chief Cause.

Washington, July 30.—"What's behind the big slump in the wheat markets?" This is the all important question which is being asked by wheat growers everywhere as they face the prospect of selling their 1923 crop at prices well below the dollar mark.

Considerable interest attaches, therefore, to the recently announced report of the committee of 12 economists and statisticians selected by Secretary Wallace to study this and similar problems.

In their report they declare, "The expansion in the wheat area of the chief exporting countries, coupled with the decreased buying power of Western Europe is responsible for the price situation which now prevails."

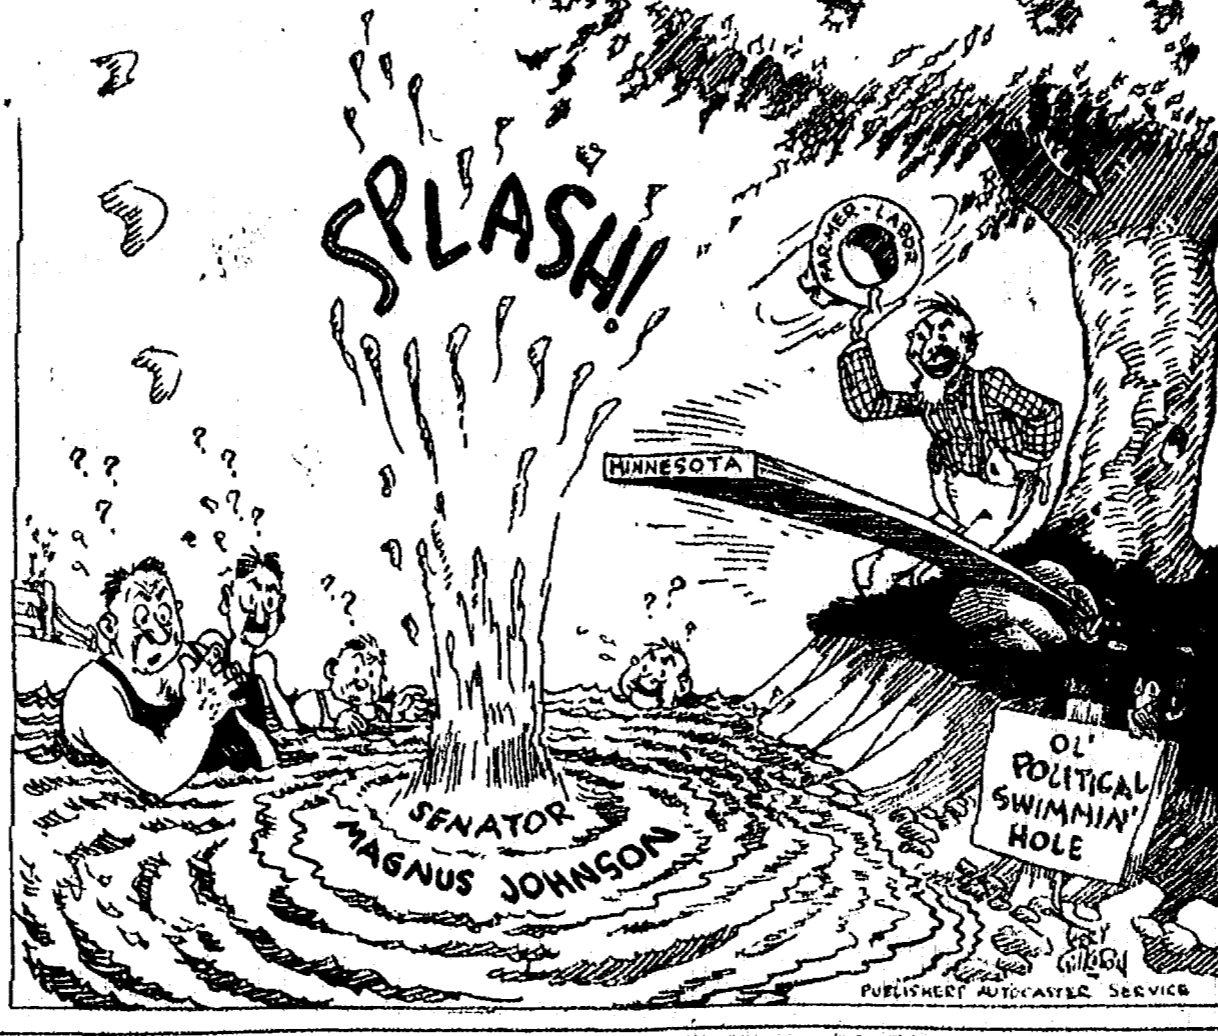

"They go on to show that the five chief wheat exporting nations are now growing 28,000,000 acres of wheat more than the pre-war average, and declare that there is no buying power in the world capable of absorbing this tremendous surplus, which in the United States alone amounts to some 14,000,000 additional acres.

The report concludes that only drastic reductions in the wheat acreage in all the chief wheat exporting countries can bring relief to the present world wheat situation.

TRIBUNE SMILES

The average woman will forgive a man anything except his having let her make a fool of him, and he often forgives that.

Even if a man is a howling excess there is no use for his howling about it.

All men make their marks in the world—and the majority are black.

The wise man accepts just praise but he draws the line at flattery.

AUTOMOBILES FILL TOWN SATURDAY

Biggest Crowd Seen Here in Number of Years.

Automobiles and people filled the town Saturday night so that it was almost impossible to get around. The band concert and the carnival must have added in bringing the people here.

Smith's Concert Band of this place gave an interesting and delightful program on the street. Following the concert the band went to the carnival and played there for a short time.

Autos were parked all along the streets in Chelsea, and as far as two and three blocks from Main street. Not many horses and buggies were to be seen although there were a few.

LIVE STOCK MEN KNOCK WIND OUT OF OLD-LINE FOE

President E. C. Brown Dodges Facts to Strike at Gaining Co-ops.

In an effort to discredit the farmers' co-operative live stock selling organizations, Pres. E. C. Brown of the old-line National Live Stock Exchange, has issued a statement trying to blame the co-operative selling agencies for the present low price of hogs. The facts are that the country is suffering from an over production of hogs and a "dumping process" on light hogs, due to the fact that farmers have neither corn nor money nor credits to buy feed to hold these hogs. The big volume of light hogs rushing to market is pulling down the price of all hogs.

Between Nov. 1922 and July 1923, seven western hog markets received 5,000,000 more hogs than during the same period for the preceding two years. Hog shipments from 11 corn belt states to all markets have increased 32.2 per cent. this year in the period from Nov. 1 to June 1 as compared to the same period for last year. Behind it all is the enormous over-production of corn two years ago. With cheap corn every one got into the hog business. With high corn, farmers can't afford to hold them.

Facts Don't Bother Brown.

Mr. Brown ignores the situation, but charges that the co-ops. have so much business that they have "stopped competitive bidding." The facts are that the co-ops. have been holding first place for volume in nearly all markets and that the packers usually flock to the fellows with the volume and buy their goods first. The old-line firms have become the little fellows who may have to wait until the big lots have been sold out and take the tail end prices that often prevail. That's all.

Farmers Pay For His System.

Mr. Brown claims that distributing hogs through the 85 commission firms in Chicago, for instance is the correct way to market hogs. Mr. J. H. O'Malley, secretary of the Michigan Live Stock Exchange believes that 40 commission firms would be plenty to handle the Chicago business. With the 85 commission firms riding around on the Chicago market it is well to expect that each of them is probably paying an average of $35,000 to $65,000 operating expenses annually. Farmers must pay for that.

Why isn't it better to handle your stock through your own co-op. and eliminate some of this overhead you are paying? On the Buffalo market 18 commission firms are operating and 10 could take care of the business. It is a matter of record that since February 1st any amount of hogs from 80 to 110 pounds have come out to the Buffalo market and there is no holding them back. The average farmer haven't got the money to buy feed and they have to let them go. Plenty of cars have come in with up to 120 hogs to the deck instead of 70 to 80. Packers don't want these light weights and they have dragged down the price of all hogs.

Mr. Brown Feels The Gaff.

It is not at all surprising that old-line commission man Pres. E. C. Brown should be the very first to point out to the farmers the dangers of their co-operative live stock marketing success. He does it by loose and unfounded charges. As such successful co-op. commission houses as those we have at Buffalo and Detroit continue to grow, we believe we may expect such attacks as President Brown of the National Live Stock Exchange has just delivered himself of.

Last May the Detroit co-op. declared a patronage dividend of 10 per cent on all commissions paid or $7,000 in all. The business of both co-ops. is growing steadily so the service must be quite satisfactory.

50 YEARS OF TYPEWRITER.

Young ladies who type for a living will be interested to learn that the typewriter was invented 50 years ago this month. The inventor was Christopher Latham Sholes, and he perfected his device in Iliou, N. Y.

Like all other important inventions, the idea of a typewriting machine had been buzzing in the inventors' heads for untold generations. Probably even centuries. For laziness is back of most inventions, and the idea of a typewriter must have occurred thousands of years ago when the making of records was a slow and laborious task.

As far back as 1714, Henry Miller patented a crude typewriter in England. He gave this description of it: "A machine for impressing letters singly and progressively, as in writing, whereby all writings may be engrossed on paper, so exact as not to be distinguished from print."

But to Christopher Latham Sholes, apparently, goes the honor of perfecting the first typewriter "that really worked." That is to say, a practical device.

It's queer how, when humanity tries to do something in a new way, it cannot get the old methods out of its heads.

For instance, the first railroad passenger cars looked like stagecoaches. And the first autos looked like buggies.

So with the typewriter. In most of the earlier typewriting machines, models of which are preserved in the patent office, the keys were laid out in a row like the keys of a piano. It's difficult to thrust precedent aside. Finally the matter of convenience (laziness again) led to a rearrangement of typewriter keys in several ways. Then the letters instead of running in alphabetical order (a, b, c, d, etc.) were shifted so that the key to be struck next was close as possible to the one just tapped.

Penmanship was an accomplishment and a matter of pride in old days, so many of the early typewriters printed an imitation handwriting instead of type.

The typewriter has brought many advantages, but with it have come disadvantages worth thinking about. The typewriter certainly aided in the facility of expression and communication (ease and speed), but it has also contributed to the multiplicity of unnecessary work by making expression and communication too easy.

It has been a boom to the eyesight of those who otherwise would have had to scan pained letters. But it has destroyed the man and admirable art of letter writing, and frayed the nerves of multitudes.

It helps promote business through direct advertising, but at the same time it aids the flow of worthless literature without end. Around, the typewriter forged one more link in the great chain of mechanical devices that enslave us. However, you can have the hand and ink, we'll take the typewriter.

WHAKE WHITE COLLAR FOR OVERALLS.

In Chicago they announce, the white collared workers are giving up their positions to learn trades. This is owing to a big difference paid for clerks and mechanics—$20 a week for clerk and $40 for some classes of skilled labor.

It is a good sign of Americanism this willingness to give up white collar for the blue shirt and overalls. Shows that the boys of today don't care so much about the clothes they wear as what the job pays. Taking a "position" for 20 a week when one can get a "job" paying $50 doesn't appeal.

The rush to enter the trades also illustrates once more that the law of supply and demand can't be denied. Just so long as the best outlook for the youth is in the trades he will turn that way. When he can make as much at some other work it will attract him.

THE HAIR.

We have become accustomed to seeing our girls "dolling" up like an dake it as a matter of course now but in Grass Lake yesterday we got a new illustration of the distressing feminine vice. A visiting "sheik" sitting with his "sheba" in an ice parlor walled in by looking glasses got out his pocket comb and combed her locks and eyebrows all the while carrying on an interesting conversation. His boudoir effort concluded he dusted her with his handkerchief and placed the comb in his lady's clenched hand. She was perhaps more deft in the hair dressing than her companion, probably owing to longer practice, but she more composed. The persons who stared were put down as "hicks" they were.

LOVE OF GAMBLING.

The U. S. Playing Card company, in Cincinnati, is turning out packs of cards a day. And poker chips like a continuous stream. Not all of us, of course, play "for keeps." But all play for fun.

We are a nation of gamblers because we have built up a system of games by which success in America is to large extent a lottery. We have big jackpot winners — multi-millionaires — because they happen to win what the rest of us are after. Generally is sore at the winner, not at the game.

Michigan Happenings

Michigan's corn crop is in a 6 per cent better condition than it has been for the last 10 years, the report of the Michigan department of agriculture for July revealed. While the acreage is less this year due to the heavy abandonment of farms and the shortage of labor in the rural sections, the exceptional favorable condition of the crop at this late period in the season assures the state a greater yield than for many years, the report states. The forecast of the crop is 60,022,000 bushels, probably the greatest yield per acre the state has ever experienced.

Henry Ford filed an application with the Michigan public utilities commission asking a right to run his line, the Toledo & Ironton railway, direct from Raisenville through Dundee into Lenawee county, where it will connect again with its own line. He proposes to build about 25 miles of new track almost directly through sections of Monroe and Lenawee counties. Engineers of the commission figure that it will save better than an hour in running time for his trains.

State Highway Commissioner Frank Rogers, entered an agreement with Macomb county for the construction of 4 1/2 miles of 20-foot pavement on the Gratiot turnpike, to fill the only remaining gap between Detroit and Port Huron. The work will be done by the county, the state to share the expense.

More than one million chicks will be shipped through the Holland post-office by parcel post from the 40 hatcheries in this section during the season. The season will close in about three weeks. One week 125,000 chicks were handled at the Holland office.

This is the season of the year when we should use fruit for our dinner dessert. Just a bowl of berries is really mighty good. But then we cannot resist making them up with pies. Try a huckleberry pie with two tablespoons of cream on top of berries before baking. Then put the strips of crust on the top instead of a whole top. It is delicious.

Prof. John R. Brumm, of the Rhetoric and Journalism Department of the University of Michigan, and Prof. Emil B. Although the city was founded in the latter part of February, 1824, it is probable that on account of the weather, the city will observe the centennial celebration late in May or early in June.

Recent experiments in the laboratory of the physics building in the University of Michigan have resulted in producing the highest temperature ever produced by artificial means, and similar to that, believed to be a property of some of the stars. CAPTAIN SAZARAC

The frons she will see upon Monsieur LaFitte in New Orleans will not be an illusion. The master smiled in detachment. "This romanticism of hers for Sazarac? Go to! Ask Monsieur Jarvis who has cared for her, died for her, saved her life and refused to be anything but the veriest mystery and illusioner. He refuses to be anything else."

"My friend, Jarvis, is very kind. Monsieur Sazarac can go no other than the gallows in the Place d'Armes, and there smile down at her setting he is not himself."

Can Love a Mask—a Woman Go On Forever Loving the Illusion She Deems a Man to Be!

the flame of him . . . she hardly fell to guess why his had leaped from its sheath on the beach reef; and surely the Sera had seen enough of men's passions and their blood.

Monsieur Sazarac, too, had his blood again. He found affairs to him hushed, as, indeed, well as might on this man-crippled vessel; but once, happening to come down the cabin skylight, with incessant curiosity, she saw him there. He stood in deep thought, he stared. Then he went to the door of the emperor's stateroom, and opened it with his silver sword. She thought he laughed slightly. A man who had thought upon a matter until it became amusing. The door opened. She could not tell whom, but Monsieur Sazarac bowed an accentuated flourish. There was a sardonic smoothness to this and Sazarac entered the emperor's chamber. The door closed, and an hour nothing happened in the stateroom. It irritated Mademoiselle Lee. A mystery with grim laughter about all the blood and the fire of the weeks there had been grating mirth.

When the flying, wounded fellows, surrounded by the boarding Squads on the pier, how last night, faint, was just, far if the king's men made one more assault the Sera would have been their again. Monsieur Sazarac were the ones against them when they came back to their bay. The last of the Sera's life lay in a close embrace the Leviathan had—Leston the admiral, Nez Coupe, the French; Bohon, the smuggler; Lou of the Grand; Frontiere and others; a fallen rank to which, finally, she saw Monsieur Sazarac the last—the ho's son, Johanness. When the master stood bareheaded the sun and looked them over. He smiled satisfied; he took a deck chair and swept around them carelessly as if these were a treasure trove of the schooner's spray-fashed, and then he came aft. Mademoiselle Leston saw that he carried a number of shabby things. A faded velvet cap, a broken pistol, a faded sash, a cuff and a gold ear-ring from the ho's son's head. With them he went down the main cabin to the emperor's cabin. The door closed.

She glanced at Alderman Dominique who was at the wheel. The flapping of the schooner wore off a bit, and Monsieur Dominique's eyes opened. "What is going on?" she cried.

"Oh—I trust my head is still in the clouds. What?"

"Is this play for me?" she asked.

Mademoiselle was looking at the door. "What came a with an unending smile. The Seraphine . . . the Seraphine . . . the Seraphine . . . you a full report of the affair in which . . . The American lieutenant was, indeed, looking about with some curiosity. He saw bullet-riven woodwork and torn silk cloth . . . perhaps even running eruptions of red along the seuppers. Then he said: "Dominique, give a soft whistle of relief. The Hornet then had not sailed from New Orleans. The officers did not yet know of the affaire at the Place d'Armes."

"I can guess, sir! Monsieur de Almonester is known in Baltimore and Charleston. And this schooner—the Seraphine, the famous ship that was to take Napoleon!"

"There goes a signal gun." Raoul was watching the strange sail, and the slender figure of Louise Leston was lying an arm as though the Yankees might see. "They mean for us to lay to. Now, we will have to explain."

Mademoiselle had run back to them, her eyes sparkling joyously. She heard the young man's last word, and her keen eyes noted the constrained silence that had fallen on them.

"Your fellow countrymen, Messieurs of Louisiana! A rescue . . . what is the matter? What is there to explain? This ship, a victim of unkindness?"

"She glanced from them to the sloop of war sailing swiftly, wind-a-beam, to cross the bows of the Seraphine. Already, at her masthead, they could see the flag of the North republic."

"The Napoleon plot," the English woman guessed. "Well that—a ship of his unsteady might seize you all, but I have not heard that the Yankees have ever interfered seriously in this mad mess of New Orleans to free Napoleon!"

"The emperor," said Monsieur Sazarac, but with his smile, "is in his bed—with his boots on!"

"The Seraphine was coming around and up in the wind with a clatter of blocks and snapping cloth. Dominique sighed wearily. There was nothing else to do. Monsieur Sazarac, after that last enigmatic jest, looked gravely at the other vessel."

"The Hornet—" he shrugged; "Commander Bidde's famous sloop of the British war. Lay to, hearties! You are honoring a mate worthy of a chase if we had other than dead sailormen forward of the mast!"

Dominique watched him sorrowfully. For them all, save Jean LaFitte, there might be explanation, pardon; perhaps, even praise for a gallant exploit.

"She is up in the wind also," muttered De Almonester. "I see a boat swinging off, and a smart lieutenant's head-gear. Now, Monsieur Sazarac—"

"It depends upon who may be in the Yankee boarding party," said the other indifferently. "There may be old heads there who know me well."

Monsieur Sazarac's short laugh stung the hothead again. He crossed to him at the rail. "Monsieur Sazarac, it is idle to say I will not betray you. There is no one here who can or will, except . . . what is John Jarvis saying now?"

"He instructed, just now," Jean LaFitte, fetch the sea boats of Monsieur Sazarac."

"Pardon!" fumed De Almonester. "He will hang you yet! He will hang you yet—even at the last!"

"A word from him—from any one—was deadly!" Monsieur Sazarac took his snuff composedly. "Eh, bien! He was my jester in the old days! This entire affair seized his fancy. It was he, it seems, for he boasts of it—who caught a cannelia which was once thrown to me from a balcony. Things might have been far different if I had done so, and not he. Well, what would one have? Life depends on the slightest blague. And death as well; you see—If the Emperor of the Bottle had not caught the cannelia he might never have been inspired to outswagger Monsieur Sazarac!"

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS
is greatly relieved by constitutional treatment. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced, your hearing will be destroyed forever. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system, thus reducing the inflammation and restoring Nature in restoring normal condition.

Cause of Appendicitis.
When the bowels are constipated,
the lower bowels or large intestines become packed with refuse matter, that is made up largely of germs.
These germs enter the vermiform appendix and set up inflammation, which is commonly known as appendicitis.
Take Chamberlain's Tablets when needed and keep your bowels regular and you have little to fear from appendicitis.

VILLAGE TAXES.
