

BILL'S COLUMN

Timely Discussions of various facts that may interest you.

Thievery has become a distinct nuisance in Chelsea of late. Most of the cases have been only petty robberies, but such as they were they should be watched and penalty given to the parties implicated when caught.

Saturday evening during the band concert an automobile tire was taken from the wheel of one car parked just off Main street, and a motorometer was stolen from another car. These two cases were brought to the attention of the village officer.

One village officer is bound to have hard time taking care of traffic, such as was seen in Chelsea Saturday night to say nothing of watching suspicious characters. And in the second place the village marshal is too well known and recognized to be able to watch the entire district.

Why would it not be a good idea to have more officers on the job and have each thievery stopped. If the articles taken were by local parties they will show up sooner or later and the owners if on the watch may be able to identify the articles, but if the property has been taken from town, the chances of recovery are small.

Desires the village marshal there four constables in the village, but they are not required to do police duty unless sworn in for that work. Our village marshal on duty during the night and other times can generally take care of the greater share of affairs, but in cases such as Saturday night, a few special officers appointed by the council could easily be on the job and could watch the property much better.

Chelsea has been fortunate to say the least in that there has been so little thievery and petty larceny committed here, but it is due in all probability to the strict watch that is kept on the confined condition of the business district. When confusion and suggestion appear as they do on Saturday nights the matter is a different one, and the requirements are made imperative for more watching.

Funny things happen in a newspaper office, and this one is no exception. One of the persons here came to work the other day and after being here a few minutes we noticed that there was a handkerchief tied about their neck. A caller at the office noticed the peculiar arrangement, and asked why some of the rest of us did not take a walk. Such the case might have been but after due inspection it was found that there was nothing of that nature, and was only a case of hay fever, and the arrangement no doubt was a time saver in the case of sneezing.

This being the hay fever season many of the unfortunates who are affected with the disease are wishing they could get to cooler and different climates. Some are lucky, and can get away, while others are not that lucky. Those that must remain are trying to do everything possible to relieve their suffering, and the cool weather that has been with us has been a big relief.

To those poor unfortunates that are suffering, you can only say we feel for you but can't reach you. It seems like a long time until the first frost, but it won't be long. When we extend those sympathies, we naturally think back to when this column was originated. It was back when Bill was confined with the Mumps and had to stay in bed. Those were by no means pleasant days, but it was during that time that this column was started, and since that time it has grown, until it is so well known, that the writer is often called the column's name.

You all know how the old saying goes, "Some folks are born lucky, etc." What do you think about the boy in Meriden, Conn., who fell heir to an estate of about $50,000. He was just an ordinary little fellow but his kind-ness to Robert W. Hallam, a factory superintendent, netted him a neat sum that will take care of him during the rest of his life, if he uses it right. When the will was read it was found that the boy was the main heir, Italian having no children.

Out in Kingston, N. Y., Frank Delbert really made a bull's eye with a shot of tobacco and saved himself and friend. The two men had been working in a field and a bull attacked them. They hastily climbed a tree thinking the bull would leave. The next thing the bull would leave were kept treed for over an hour. Finally it was suggested that spitting on the bull's eyes might drive him away. After several wild shots Delbert scored a bull's eye and that started the bull racing for the mountains.

VILLAGE ASKED TO BUY NEW METERS

New Lines In W. Middle Street to Carry 110 Alternating Current.

The members of the Chelsea Electric Light and Water Works Commission held a meeting Monday evening and discussed the matter of the construction of new lines. It was decided to go ahead with the present project of putting in a new line down W. Middle street.

As the plans are now being worked out the new line will carry 110 volt alternating current to that section of the village. The members of the commission decided last evening to purchase meters for the new current and install them.

All changes that will be necessary to mechanical parts of machinery in private homes will have to be taken care of by the individuals.

The improvements as being made have to be carried on in a small way, because of the limitations of funds. Without the help of the village it will be impossible to get the whole village changed over for some years, as the extension is limited to the profits of the plant.

As soon as possible the steam plant which is the costly part of the utility now, will be dispensed with and the power will all come from the motors. At the present time the steam plant cannot be disconnected because of the heavy peak loads.

YOUTH RETURNS HOME.

Horace McColgan, son of Dr. and Mrs. James McColgan of Grass Lake, who disappeared two years ago last July and had not been heard from since, arrived home Monday morning, bringing joy to his parents. The latter have been in ill health since the loss of their son, the father being forced to give up his practice. At the same time of the youth's leaving, Miss Helen Capen, daughter of Mr. Arthur Capen of Grey Tower, also disappeared and it was supposed they went together. It is said they were married and have been living in Chicago. The girl is ill in a hospital at Chicago and the young man returned to that city later in the day.

JACKSON COUNTY FAIR HAS MUCH TO OFFER THIS YEAR.

Well just what has a county fair to offer that is of benefit to a community? This is a question asked many times by all classes of people and against are many arguments for and against, but if it functions as it should and is clean and its educational departments are built with care no business or enterprise will reach as many interests or congregate in one place where a general research can be made in so short a time as at a small cost as at a Fair. There is no interest in a community that is not represented and a marvelous comparison teaches the good, better and best in all things a community is interested in.

In professional life there is a constant research in books, travel, schools and clinics for the last word in improvements and a Fair should be the last word in improvement in the interest of the profiting public and the school for research and education to finish each year's training and begin next year's responsibilities.

The officers and management of the Jackson County Fair have in the past strived for these ideals on which to base the Fairs benefits and from year to year its educational departments have been extended and improved until it stands out as one of the best County Fairs in the whole country, and it is promised that the 1923 Fair will do even more than in the past to teach, encourage and help all public interests, and thus make the investment of 500,000 at the present time in the Fair not only profitable but wise.

Mr. and Mrs. David R. Peck and children Ivan and Beatrice, Miss Helen Wise and Mr. W. H. Zentmyer motored here from Eaton Rapids and spent Sunday with C. H. Zentmyer and family.

CRASHED INTO CAR PARKED WITHOUT LIGHTS

Little Girl Injured in Accident.

A car belonging to Jackson parties was parked alongside the road near Lima Center last evening. A car enroute to West Levanon, Ind., struck the parked car which had no tail light. The moving car was badly damaged and a little girl, a daughter of the driver, was badly injured in the crash. She suffered a severe cut on the head and other bruises. A local physician attended the injuries. The parked car was without lights and was disabled. The accident happened about 8:30 Monday night.

FORMER CHELSEA PEOPLE TO THE NORTH.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Hans left recently for Banff and Lake Louise, in the Canadian Rockies. They will be away a month. Their return trip will be across Canada, with stops at the Woods district, near Winnipeg, and at Lake Nipigon, north of Lake Superior, where Mr. Hans, accompanied by an Indian guide, intended to do some fishing. Northern pike, Muskeg-lunge and big trout abound in those waters.

Mr. and Mrs. Hans have many friends and are well known here. Mrs. Hans being a former Chelsea girl.

D. N. COLLINS OF STOCKBRIDGE Dies.

David Newall Collins, third son of Jedidiah and Clarissa Baker Collins, was born in Zansville, Ohio, December 3, 1851, and slipped away from his family suddenly in Stockbridge, Aug. 23, 1923, aged 72 years, 8 months and 20 days.

He began work as a tow-boy on the Erie canal, at the age of 11, then followed the mason trade in Toledo and Cleveland, and lastly serving the Michigan Central Railroad faithfully for 40 years, making his home in Detroit. In 1914 he gave up railroad work and came to his farm in Lyndon Township. On October 17, 1920, the farm residence was destroyed by fire, and Mr. and Mrs. Collins moved to Stockbridge, where they have since resided.

In the year 1870, he was united in marriage to Alice Sophia Moore, of Windsor, Canada. To this union were born two children, David who died in infancy and Dr. Frank P. Collins, who passed away in June, 1907.

On February 14, 1889, he was united in marriage to Ada Luella Hill, of Detroit. To this union were born five children, two of whom died in infancy.

In early manhood he was confirmed in St. Paul's Episcopal church of Detroit, by Bishop Harris, to which faith he has always adhered. In his last illness, and in the long nights of patient suffering and sleeplessness his prayer book brought peace and comfort to his heart and soul.

He was made a mason at the age of 27, and was a member of Lion Lodge No. 1, F and A. M., and Michigan lodge No. 1, I. O. O. F., both of Detroit, at the time of his death.

He is survived by his wife, one son T. Herbert Collins of Stockbridge; two daughters, Mrs. Alva Beeman of Lyndon Township, and Mrs. Ralph Reynolds of Jackson; nine grandchildren, one sister, Mrs. Anna Robinson of St. Petersburg, Florida, and one brother Thomas Collins of Jackson.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at 1:30 from the residence in Stockbridge, Rev. Adair officiating, and then from the Waterloo 2nd United Brethren church, at 2:30, Rev. Rhoads, assisted by Rev. Adair, officiating, with interment on the family plot in Waterloo cemetery, six nephews lovingly carrying him to his rest.

The following old railroad friends were honorary pallbearers, coming from Detroit to attend the funeral: J. W. Fletcher, Robert Dyer, George Fitzpatrick, Cory Derousie, William Green, F. D. Wolf, W. G. Maltz, Andy Lund, and Charles Finney.

"RAILROAD JACK" PLEASUED WITH RECEPTION HERE

Keeps Crowd Interested During Band Concert.

Harry Cooper, or better known as "Railroad Jack," visited Chelsea Saturday and pleased a large number of people with his famous memory. He was met on the road by Chelsea parties and came here, saying that he had no definite place to head for.

During the afternoon "Jack" called at the Tribune office and told his story in interesting fashion. He has memorized 5000 characters and can tell almost anything anyone happens to want to know about them.

In previous years "Jack" has visited Chelsea. On two occasions he has spoken here in the public schools, once when Prof. Gifford was here and the last time when Prof. E. E. Gallup was here. He also knew Father VanDyke when he was in school.

Saturday evening between numbers of the band concert, the large crowd was entertained by the witticisms of the traveler and with his feats of memory. Following the program he talked for some time to a large crowd.

Railroad Jack has donated his services to the Washtenaw County Fair for the week of September 18 to 22. He will not accept any remuneration whatever from the Fair association. He will also be at the Michigan State Fair in Detroit during the first week of September.

In speaking with Railroad Jack, Monday morning the writer can only reiterate what was said. "I had a very pleasant evening in Chelsea Saturday, and I was given the finest and most courteous treatment that I have received anywhere. I will certainly be glad to give Chelsea my best recommendation at all times and will do all the boasting I can for this village at the Fair." Such was the expression of Railroad Jack as he was about to leave for Jackson early Monday morning.

As to the experts history, he has not slept inside of a house for 27 years, sleeping out-of-doors at all times. In his traveling about Michigan he has spoken in about 600 schools. During the past few weeks he has been speaking nightly on the U. of M. campus, also at the Michigan State Normal school.

The first public talk given by Railroad Jack was made from the courthouse steps in Ann Arbor on September 10, 1896, and he was introduced by the esteemed former sheriff, Wm. Judson, who was a former resident of Chelsea, and well known here. It was 34 years ago that Railroad Jack came to Michigan. For 26 years he spoke in Detroit five months every year. For a year he published a paper in Chicago, and enjoyed several other business and professional enterprises.

He claims to be the smartest man in the country and his intelligence can not be disputed. He will give the date of birth and death of all the prominent persons in history and facts about them. He also performs seemingly impossible feats with the calendar and dates and days.

While at the Tribune office he demonstrated some of the feats which appear miraculous. He told of his traveling and his experiences, of his charity and his opportunities, all in an interesting way that is characterized by his Irish wit and humor.

LAST BAND CONCERT PLEASES ALL.

The last band concert of the season was one of the finest. The band gave some exceptionally fine numbers. Miss Georgia Smith pleased the crowd with a saxophone solo and responded to an encore. Railroad Jack entertained between numbers and all in all it was a fine evening. The streets were filled with cars and people.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Schiller entertained Sunday the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. John Kirchberg Sr., Mr. and Mrs. John Kirchberg Jr., and children, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kirchberg and son Robert of Jackson, Helen Koch of Ann Arbor, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Koch and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Koch and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mjhlensen and daughter Lucille of Detroit, Mrs. Mable Russell and daughter Virginia of Chicago, and Mrs. F. W. Kruger and Mr. J. Mason of Detroit, spent Sunday at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Webster at Crooked Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Clair Congdon and family, Alfred Congdon and wife of Ypsilanti, A. Prudden of Vixburg, and Katie Selber of Ann Arbor, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Prudden.

Alex Griffin and family returned to their home in Niles, Monday, after spending the summer at their summer home at Sugar Loaf Lake.

FARM LAND GETS STATE TAX CUT

Farm Leader's Pleas For Reduction In Rural Levy Granted.

Lansing, August 27.—Members of the state board of equalization after hearings extending over several days, have fixed the equalized value of Michigan for 1923 at $8,540,000,000. This is an increase of $1,540,000,000 over the past years and falls entirely upon the industrial centers of the state.

The total reduction made from the tax commission's recommendation is $6,065,000. The reductions are entirely in agricultural counties.

Wayne county was raised to $2,686,500,000, an increase of nearly $600,000,000 over the equalized value of a year ago.

Ten northern counties were given reductions. As the result of the big increase in valuation, the state tax will be considerably reduced. George Lord, chairman of the tax commission, states that it will be about $2.32, as compared with $3 last year.

State Tax Total Less.

The amount of state tax to be collected this year will be about $16,000,000. This is a considerable reduction in the amount that Michigan taxpayers must pay to the state. Last year the state tax was over $17,300,000.

The reduction in the levy on the rural districts and the raise to the industrial centers is all the more noteworthy because of the tremendous effort which was made by Detroit representatives to show that city levies should be reduced or at least kept down to present levels. The decision of the board is a splendid tribute to the supervisors and others who so ably represented the rural districts.

Farmers Well Represented.

It is well to recall that in the hearings recently held before the State Board of Equalization to determine the State's equalized value and to re-apportion the tax levy among the several counties of the state, Michigan farmers and the Michigan State Farm Bureau were ably represented by Melville B. McPherson of Lowell, member of the Board of Directors of the State Farm Bureau, and an acknowledged authority on taxation matters.

Mr. McPherson presented evidence to prove what is commonly known to be true, namely that in Michigan to-day rural property is valued relatively higher than is city property. He declared before the Tax Board that Wayne county should remain at its recommended value for 1923 while the rest of the state should be reduced an average of 10.87 per cent.

There's a Difference.

McPherson declared that farm property is either assessed too high or the utilities of the state and city property are assessed too low and he gave figures to show that while the tax commission had increased the general property valuation of the state 78 per cent since 1916, mining properties from 1915 to 1922 were increased only 25 per cent, and for the same period the railroads and other corporations paying the primary school interest fund specific tax were increased only 19 per cent.

Mr. McPherson said real estate and corporate property in Detroit showed an assessed value of about 61 per cent of its actual value, while rural property showed 85 per cent of that value. Later, in reply to Mr. Nagel of Detroit, he cited a number of tracts of farm land in Kent county showing by their sale prices they were either purchased recently or offered for sale at less than the assessed valuation. Nagel claimed that only in Detroit could property be bought at less than its assessed valuation.

OUR POLICIES

Let us all get together for a bigger and better Chelsea. A sewerage system for Chelsea. A building program that is bound to build.

INSTINCT IN THE HUMAN.

Our motives—the mysterious impulses that cause us to do things—usually are more interesting than the things we actually do.

The other day 10,000 people, watching the ponies perform on an eastern race track, abruptly lost all interest in the races when a big fire started in the stables. That was natural, since nobody is ever too busy to stop and watch a fire. We get that from our fire worshipping ancestors.

Trapped in the wooden stables were 150 thoroughbred horses. Spectators by the hundreds rushed forward to help in the rescue. Many dramatically braved the flames and dashed into the roaring furnace to wrap blankets around the horses' heads and lead them out. (Just why a horse refuses to leave a burning building is another mystery, never satisfactory explained.)

Out of 150 horses, only nine perished. The rest were rescued—by people who had no direct interest in them. Why did they risk death to save the horses?

The rescuers wouldn't have rushed into the flames to save a cat or a useful beast such as a cow, sheep, hog or chicken. Only dogs or horses (occasionally people) appeal to the rescuers.

For one thing, the rescuers were responding to an instinct inherited from the days when savage dogs helped fight the enemy and wild beasts, and horses were indispensable in combat and for travel and flight.

The dog and the horse helped man over the rough bumps until he got in sight of civilization. Being indispensable, they naturally simply had to be saved in ancient times. To lose one's dog in the far north or one's horse in crossing the plains was often a matter of losing one's life. That's why they hung horse thieves in frontier days. Value was not a consideration.

Horses and dogs no longer are indispensable to most of us, but our inherited instinct still leads us into flames to rescue them.

Another angle of the psychology of the race horse rescuers is that the race had worked them into the frenzy of emotion without which the average person is backward about playing hero at the risk of life or limb.

They had their conscious and subconscious selves about ninety-ninths concentrated—focused—on race horses. These horses to them temporarily were the most important things in the world—the horses in the stables, waiting to perform, as well as the ones on the track.

Get a man concentrated on anything (autohypnosis) and he'll fight if you try to take it away. Reach for a match or any worthless object on which a man has absent mindedly concentrated, and watch him grab quickly to stop you.

You can't imagine a race horse trying to rescue a man.

IODINE A FOOD.

The white race's supremacy is due to the fact that ages ago it took up its abode by the sea, where it obtained food rich in iodine, says Dr. Grant Mitchell.

Iodine assists the thyroid gland, which plays a big part in regulating mentality and physical vigor.

The bodily power and alertness of the Japanese are materially due to their large consumption of seafood.

On the other hand, the Eskimos, who live largely on sea food, are virtually disease proof, but as a race they are intellectual weaklings.

WHAT MAKES VALUE?

Historic old Tammany Hall, in New York city, offered for sale, attracts retail merchants and movie and theatrical managers. One bid over $600,000.

The "Wigwam" can be sold, but the institution itself—not. If it could, a good many rival politicians would multiply the $600,000 many times over. Value is in the institution itself, rather than in the actual material thing, and as true of individuals as of organizations or objects. This principle underlies real estate values.

INTEREST IN LIFE.

A little man 84 years old wanders into a New York police station in his bed room slippers and shirt sleeves. He gives his name as John Burke and says he got lost while running after a fire engine.

On the average, most of us are interested all through life in the things that strike our fancy in youth. The older we get, the more we realize how few really interesting things there are in life, which at its best is dull without the coloring of imagination—delusions.

HAIR TONIC.

Nine times as many manufacturers of hair tonic and other barbers' allied supplies as there were before prohibition, discovers Frederick A. Hazeltine, prohibition sleuth in the Philadelphia district. He bases the figure on the situation in Philadelphia.

Scalloped Cabbage. — Shred a cabbage or cut fine, put layer of cabbage, cracker crumbs and dots of butter. When baking dish is full pour in milk up to last layer. Bake one hour in medium oven.

In cooking Asparagus do not salt it until it is nearly done and it will be much more tender.

Good Form.—One should make the necessary introduction at a dinner party before coming to the table, particularly of people who are to be seated near each other. Introductions should not be indiscriminately made; try to ascertain beforehand that they will be mutually agreeable.

Long Neckchains of big beads of ivory, amber, crystal or imitation precious stones are very popular at the moment.

If the board of the kitchen table is discolored, cut a lemon in half and rub it over the discolored surface. Rinse well with clean water. Pastry boards and rolling pins may be treated in the same way.

Our Complexion.—Powder furnishes a protection to the skin against wind and sun and helps to preserve its texture. Excessive use of powder has a tendency to enlarge the pores. Continually used in combination with a greasy substance it will not only clog the pores but will eventually result in blackheads. It is well to experiment until you find a powder exactly suited to your skin. Not all facial powders agree with the various skin textures. For very sensitive skin which will not tolerate starch or rice powders, a good talcum is recommended, and for some skins, powdered magnesium is found most satisfactory.

Michigan Happenings

The cornerstone of the new board of commerce building at Saginaw, was laid by the Masonic Grand Lodge of Michigan. The building, when finished, is intended to house all the varied community activities that a board of commerce implies. The impressive coronation of the Masonic cornerstone ritual, presided over by Grand Master Charles A. Durand, of Flint, were carried out in full form. President George H. Boyd, told something of the objects of the organization in undertaking the construction of the building.

Completion of concrete highways between Ann Arbor and Detroit and between Grand Rapids and Grand Haven, has been approved by the state administration board. Contracts were let for the stretch of road between Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti needed to connect up the concrete on M-53, while other contracts were let for connecting bits of road near Marne on M-16, supplying the parts of the road between Grand Haven and Grand Rapids not finished or under contract at the present time.

The purchase of a second steamer for the state ferry service across the Straits of Mackinac was authorized by the State Administrative Board. A report submitted to the board showed that the boat now in service cost about $25,000 and is averaging about $500 a day receipts, although its rates are far lower than those formerly in force. It is the idea of Gov. Grosbeck and other board members to ultimately make the ferry service free, as part of the state highway system.

Michigan has 125,000 acres of land devoted to the culture of sugar beets, as against 45,000 acres in Ohio and 10,000 acres in Indiana. So much was developed in the report of F. R. Hathaway, of Detroit, secretary-treasurer of the Michigan Sugar Beet association and an officer of the Ohio organization, as he offered it to the Trans-Michigan-Ohio-Indiana Shippers' convention at the Board of Commerce, Detroit.

From three states outside of Michigan come students who received certificates at the first commencement program ever held in the Northern State Normal school at Marquette at the close of the summer school session. Three are from Kansas and Wisconsin and one from Minnesota.

LABOR

"Easy come, easy go" explains the failure of thousands of well-paid workers to get ahead in the world, to better their condition, to own a home, provide for old age and give their children a better chance than they had.

How easy it is to set aside a certain portion of one's earnings to be deposited in a bank regularly on each pay day! And how astonishingly rapid is the growth of this reserve when it is added to consistently! This habit, if formed early in life and followed persistently, in itself is sufficient to insure financial success.

Start a savings account with at least one-tenth of your earnings deposited on every pay day. You can easily adjust your expenditures so that you will never miss this amount. Just as easily, you could spend one-tenth more than you are making, and never get any real benefit from it. It is all a question of depositing it and letting it stay in the bank.

Many great fortunes were originated in this way—by saving a certain percentage of earnings and putting it to work for its owner. Interest works for you day and night and on holidays. It increases your capital, and the return is constantly growing.

Start a savings account.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Returning to her home in a small town, Milton Center, from a visit to New York, the widowed mother of ten-year-old Ann Hyrne announces her wedding to Hudson Cortlandt, socially and politically prominent. Her husband has not been told about Ann, and the new wife fears she will be displeased.

CHAPTER II.—With Ann, Mrs. Cortlandt returns to New York, to the home of Hendricks Cortlandt, her husband's brother, with whom the latter is living. Hudson practically refuses to have anything to do with Ann, and child is gladly adopted by Hendricks Cortlandt. Settling with his wife, to his position as United States minister to Switzerland, the pair are out in the week of the vessel.

CHAPTER III.—Ann, satisfactorily a sear in Hendricks Cortlandt's lonely heart and their affection becomes mutual.

CHAPTER IV.—At sixteen years of age Ann is confronted with the beginning of the Civil war. As Hendricks Cortlandt's acknowledged heiress she is naturally prominent socially, and the situation is resented by Mrs. Hendricks, Hendricks' sister, whose son, Hendricks, has been looked upon as the destined heir of the Cortlandt wealth. The Civil war breaks out, the All of Fort Sumter causing consternation in New York and the North generally.

CHAPTER V.—A tentative engagement between young Hennessey and Ann is understood, the youth enlisting in a New York regiment on the first day of the North to the colors.

CHAPTER VI.—His brief term of enlistment expired, Hendricks Hennessey returns to New York. Ann is instrumental in causing him to re-enlist. War hospitals are established in New York, and Ann is eager to help in the work, but meets with opposition from the guardian and his sisters.

CHAPTER VII

Hospitals.

The first army hospital in New York was no sooner opened than the need for it was evident; the camps were over-crowded, and a score of men was sent in on the opening day. Mrs. William Cortlandt, who proved to be an excellent nurse, brought home tearful faces of heroic and suffering youth to Mrs. Ann Hennessey with shining eyes. Annance hovered over the common-room building that housed the wounded, and it was not long before the girl suggested that she might be allowed to serve as Mrs. William's assistant. It seemed to her to be a position obediently chaperoned to be acceptable, but Mrs. William said, flatly, that she wouldn't undertake the responsibility of having a young girl about.

About a fortnight after Hendricks' departure Ann was working at the military commission when a call came from the hospital for more bedding. "Let me take it down," she volunteered, eagerly. "I can have the carriage here in ten minutes."

They piled the seats high, but at the hospital it was all quickly unpacked. Ann had no excuse to linger, fascinated, in the yawning doorway. In time at all she was on her way back, lost in gloomy disappointment, when suddenly, while crossing a street, the horses shied violently to one side. She roused herself bewilderedly, and looked hurriedly about her. A man was standing in the middle of the road, and she beside her; he surveyed toward her as she passed, so that for an instant she feared that he would be caught by the carriage. She thought that he must be drunk, and she looked back curiously. He lay, a crumpled blue heap, in the roadway. "What was a soldier! In a moment she was kneeling beside him, turning his blind face toward her, with hands that trembled.

"Oh, what is it?" she cried. "Did he run you down?" "No, ma'am. I'm just sick." "The case of typhoid, doctor said." "Ann's tone was relieved. "You can't be lying here, you know. Where are you going? I'll drive you there." She signaled to her coachman to come and help him get up. He closed his eyes wearily. "Hospital," he said weakly. "Oh," Ann pleaded, "don't faint! Please don't faint!"

"I won't," the soldier promised, and by his word, even when the coachman hauled him up into the open carriage, while Ann stood at the horses' heads to keep them perfectly quiet. He was, however, alarmingly white as he lay back against the cushions. When the hospital was reached the man roused himself.

"I'll see if they have a stretcher, and can carry you in," Ann volunteered. "No. . . . I'll walk. . . . I feel better after my ride." And he was later; he managed to descend, with Ann's eager help, but he clung dogmatically to the gate-post when he reached it. He looked wistfully up the sidewalk that led to the door. "I'll never leave it," he said childishly. "But don't leave me, will you?"

Ann's eyes filled with unexpected tears. "Never," she promised. She held him up manfully.

Ann looked out of the open door. "John!" he bawled, as he stepped forward. He brushed Ann through who were the merest of the rescue of her sick soldier. He immediately John applied a nurse—Ann could not see the opening room—but she was the same as the opening room, too, ignored Ann. He was a man, and he was a soldier.

the open doorway. Ann followed him, but she felt very superfluous. "Well," she murmured. "Well!" She was possessed by a feeling of extraordinary flatness, and she was hurt, too, which she knew was unreasonable of her. There were benches against the wall, and she dropped down on one, disconsolately. "Men," she said to herself, "how horrid they are!" Her eyes filled again, and she luxuriated in her tears.

"In trouble?" A great, shaggy gray man, comfortably shabby and amazingly kind-looking, enveloped her in an expansive personality. Ann looked up at him and nodded dazedly.

The stranger sat down beside her, quite as if he had known her all his life. "Tell me about it, sister," he said buoyantly.

"I want to be a nurse," she replied, unexpectedly to herself, and as she voiced the grievance, she knew that what she resented was not the casual manner of the two attendants; it was being shut out from their paradise.

"And why not?" demanded her new friend. "But what can I do?" "Can you nurse?" "I never have."

"No—you are too young. The men like middle-aged nurses and mothers of families."

"But if I can't nurse, is there anything else?" "I should say so," he fairly shouted. "I believe the reason I am able to do good among the wounded boys is that I am so strong and well—and so are you, and beautiful, too. Men come in faint and wounded; they need nourishing things to eat. I am going now to buy oyster soup for those that came from the Philadelphia ferry. It will give them an addition to their dinner. They like home-made biscuits, too, and sweet rookies and jelly; you could go through the hospital every day doing good deeds. You can read to them, and talk cheering talk to them; save lives by keeping men from giving up! You can do oranges for them." Encouraged by Ann's fascinated stare, he drew a little notebook from his pocket. "I keep a list here of things they want, and buy them for them. And so it goes. Want to help?"

"Oh, yes," Ann gasped. "Come along then—I'll get you started. What is your name?" "Ann Hyrne."

"Well, Annie, good luck! My name is Whitman—wait—ever hear of me?" "No." Her ignorance spoke eloquently of the perfection of her upbringing.

He chuckled. "No, but you will. All these United States will. I am a poet," he explained grandiloquently. "But come, we must hurry, or no oysters for my boys!" He hustled Ann unceremoniously through the nearest doorway, and the girl paused, gazing.

of light revealed mercilessly all the horror of a war hospital ward. Rows of cots ran up and down the room; they were crowded close, for a new lot of wounded had just been brought in. There was incredible confusion everywhere. The air was very bad, for already gangrene was making hospital wards places of torment. The men lay sprawling on the beds, more often than not still in their dirty uniforms. Inexpressible forlorn and unkempt. Ann wanted to cry, looking at them; she was afraid that she would, and set her jaw hard, to control its trembling.

Whitman approached the nearest cot, and bent over a man who lay there; he radiated vitality and helpfulness. "Can I do anything for you?" he asked. "Is there anything you want?"

"I want my dinner," the patient answered ungraciously. "I can't relish melasses."

"I thought you might like to write to your folks."

"Write home? To Massachusetts? I'd like that first rate, but there's no paper, and anyway, I can't see. The d—d Johannes got my eye."

Ann moved unceremoniously forward. "Oh, please let me write for you," she gasped; and she wrote, at his dictation.

She wrote at his dictation.

tion, how her patient had been hurt in street fighting in Baltimore, and how he would like to be at home again. Her nerves steadied somewhat under this occupation, and when she had finished, her amazing new friend had disappeared. Following his example, she made a list of the things the men wanted, and promised to bring them on the morrow.

There seemed no end to the things she could do, and when Fanny's mother found her she was so deeply immersed in her new service that she simply paid no attention to her horrified protests. After an interval Mr. Cortlandt arrived, ominously stern-looking, but when he found Ann sitting by the bedside of a white youth whose operation loomed close ahead of him, reading aloud the last installment of "The Adventures of Phillip," he could not take her away.

The operating room was overcrowded and a passing nurse whispered to Ann to keep her patient amused, as it would be a long time before they would be ready for him. Anxious! Ann looked pitifully down at the boy on the cot; he lay with his eyes screwed shut, and his lower lip caught tight in his teeth; agony was plainly written on his face. With an unaccustomed hand that trembled, she mopped his face with her handkerchief.

She brought him water to sip, and bathed his face and wrists until his tension relaxed somewhat. She consoled his mother's name from him and wrote a little message for her, more hers than the dying boy's.

After a while he said, "I wish you would go on reading to me. I like the sound of your voice." Ann continued her reading; but she turned page after page, with no idea of what she read. Presently, when the dark was beginning to gather in the corners of the room, and the attendants had lighted the lamps on the mantel, the doctor came. When he saw her, he walked across to her, and leaned over the cot. "How long have you been reading?" he said.

WHERE THE MONEY IS AND WHO HAS IT

Savings deposits in banks in the United States now approximate the stupendous total of 18 billion dollars, deposited by a little more than 30 million persons. In 1914 the total of savings deposits was 5 billion dollars, deposited by 11 million persons. Savings accounts are now considerably more than three times the total previous days while the number of depositors is quite a bit less than three times as many.
