A MODERN AILMENT

Motorists returning to the east from beyond the Rockies tell of meeting dozens of girls en route to Hollywood, some stout, all with the irresistible yearning for fame on the silver screen.
Winners in local beauty contests, and others whose beauty has been apparent only to close friends, girls of all ages and types succumb to the universal desire for public appreciation, and usually without preparing for inevitable lean years before the celluloid city vaguely expecting to supplant some reigning queen of the cinema.
Sometimes motorists bring back a disheartened or penniless wayfarer, but we are told hundreds arrive at Hollywood only to become waitresses.
Reason, of course, should restrain such a pilgrimage. Fame in the films is rarely attained, even if it is worth the trouble. But reason does not rule mankind very much. So we find girls becoming impatient with home restrictions and dissatisfied with old ways, and joining the endless westward procession. The Young Women's Christian Association has its hands full in caring for jobless girls on the coast and helping them return home, and strongly urges that girls look before they leap.
It is a serious mental ailment, rapidly becoming an epidemic, and although modern in the turn it takes, is really as old as the world. Education seems the only remedy, and the utilization of gray matter.
The star's life is no bed of roses, and it is the general opinion among discerning people that the game isn't worth the candle; that it is necessary to give up too much to attain and retain fickle popular favor. If movie queens would speak, instead of loquacious press agents, they would doubtless warn their sisters that screen glitter is not gold. The humble life seems to have a tremendous attraction for those who reach the higher places, and the gleam they followed often grows dim upon approach.
Also it is generally agreed that stardom doesn't necessarily imply talent or even superior beauty. Combining exploitation, clever camera work, a well-chosen name, and an unusually sensitive plot to confine interest to the star, and behold a tractable imbecile becomes a national heroine.
Ambition should not be guided any less because it is normal. Instincts are blindly gratified only by animals and savages. The person who chases a rainbow is more likely to run into a barbed wire fence than find a for-lone, and the rainbow usually vanishes or pales with proximity.

Fame is a natural desire, but cannot come through unnatural means. Roads to Paradise are cobbled, and flying machines to Elysian fields carry few passengers. Chances for sudden elevation are few, and it is a hazy ambition in the first place. Those who really achieve advise the well known formula of work plus reasonable ambitions. It is still insisted that—
The heights by great men reached and kept
Were not attained by sudden flight,
But they, while their companions slept,
Were toiling upward in the night.

DREAMS

August Kolodjaske of Chicago, dreamed of a corpse the other night and the police are digging in a cellar for his missing father. Antonio Testa, of Providence, had such a terrible dream he confessed to slaying his playmate, Annie Andrews, of St. Paul, dreamed she saw money, and was soon left a legacy. All in one newspaper. Apparently dreams have become of such consequence important dailies record them.
The ancients put great faith in these nocturnal delusions, and the man who could interpret them, and pretend to, was feted. Daniel left the lions' den because he could translate royal dreams, while Joseph was given a throne because he made a good yarn out of Pharaoh's nightmares.
Moderns don't place much credence in dreams, however. We're apt to blame them more on gorged suppers than supernatural revelations, and only those who believe what gypsy fortune tellers have to say about their palms see anything more in a dream than a good joke.
Yet occasionally some dreams "come true" and sober folks sit up nights wondering if spirits are all in bottles. Let a credulous person dream three times in succession he is going to die, and he'll make his will. Let a woman dream more than once that she is going to get a red dress, and she'll try on red hats at the milliner's next day. A child dreams of a fairy or goblin and lollipops won't make him forget.
Maybe it's a good thing we have dreams and similar phenomena to keep our imaginations working. It's a good subject for conversation, like the weather, sports, the Einstein theory, the tariff, electricity and mothers-in-law—topics about which anyone can talk glibly without knowing anything about them. It would be a pity if the Universe could all be put in a man's skull, anyway. We're sort of glad, and some of us admit it, that there are a few things we don't know.

U. S. Agents have just destroyed 1,694,640 had eggs in Chicago. Perfumers there are reported to be doing a rushing business.

Twenty-two Paris doctors said Germaine Rosignori would die, but she made a pilgrimage to the grotto at Lourdes and now says she is the strongest woman in town. We know of grotesques which our friends occasionally visit, and come back wiping their mouths, just as boastful as Mme. Rosignori.

THOUSAND LEAGUE BOOTS
When Pilot Smith landed on Long Island after bringing mail from the Pacific in twenty-six hours, he satisfied the Post Office Department that the stunt could be done, and such tests have been stopped. Apparently the need for quicker transcontinental mail service isn't yet manifest.
The dream of twenty-four mail service is about realized. Such haste will hardly be necessary for many years, but the service is there when we need it. That is much better than necessity forcing invention. Twentieth century inventions and discoveries keep ahead of progress, not behind. Thousand league boots await the man who can fill them. Future requirements will be filled from stock, where before necessities were ordered. Man is being hard set to keep up with his own creations. Progress from now will depend on how man himself can develop.

MUCH ADO

The racket in New York City over the refusal of Bandmaster Harry Barahart to preface his Central Park Community Songs each night with The Star Spangled Banner seems a typical instance of inglorious quibbling.
Park Commissioner Gallatin charges Barahart with lack of patriotism for not trying to lead two thousand mixed people in the simple melody, and they have finally compromised by getting a more tractable bandmaster.
It is about such details that otherwise great men delight to make a fuss. We find grave Senators and hamlet officials rocking the same boat, forgetting main issues in many words over one-angled viewpoints.
In this case, Barahart says that the national emblem should be saved for appropriate occasions, lest familiarity destroy its significance. Mr. Gallatin, however, cites custom and desires people to show patriotism by standing up if by no other means, so words fly fast.
When people quibble over little things when by compromising differences they could get much done, it shows unwillingness to see each other's viewpoint. Theological controversies are as common as they are futile for the same reason. Every true believer in any field is by nature an evangelist, but even an authority should respect the right of individual thought. Since to change a man's opinion is an eighth labor for Hercules, it would seem the wiser policy for men, organizations or nations to agree on major questions and get away from mole-hill mountains.
In this instance, as in most others, both parties are a little right, but that is added proof there are two sides to a question. The man who respects his neighbor's opinion, though not sharing it, has a reserved seat awaiting him on Mount Olympus.

The Cleveland man who was jailed for spanking his wife has our sympathy. He told the judge he had been getting up enough nerve to do it for ten years, and it was their first battle in which he wasn't licked.

Johannes Sophus Gelert, Danish sculptor, who once had royalty smiling on him, tried to saw his throat open in a Brooklyn asylum because the world had forsaken him. Once hailed as the leader of thousands in his art, he got old and his art got old with him. Now he wants to get out of it all. With half a column of achievements listed after his name in "Who's Who," he finds dying preferable to living.
Even a great artist cannot reign forever. The man with the scythe plays no favorites, and the music of life in youth often becomes an irritating cacophony around seventy, poverty is but one of many things age fears. It must be annoying for an ageing man to keep slipping out of gear with modern doings until finally he stays in neutral and has to see the world whizz past. For a man who has always been looked up to and his opinion unchallenged, how impertinent it must seem to be ignored or scoffed at by the younger people.
Yet the rule of nature and of a boat race is to keep up the pace or get out of the course. Old age usually decides this by speeding up. That is the best way. The procession moves fast, however, and some water-logged tubs are forced to move to one side, to paddle around and watch, and perhaps advise others until the Master of the Races calls them to shore.
A man gets old. It is inevitable, though not necessarily terrifying fate. Its rewards exceeds its handicaps, or should. Logically, an old man deserves a rest, supported and honored by those making the same journey. But human nature isn't logical. It isn't even reliable. Youth insists that white hairs force respect even while it refuses to respect them. The human junkpile is deplored but seldom examined for usable material.
So the wheels turn and the hands move around the dial marking off the steps from youth to age. A man gets old, and yet the world is always young.

Sparrow Hawk Useful.
There is a long list of hawks in the country, and the sparrow hawk is the smallest of the family, says Nature Magazine. In so far as our interests are concerned, it is a most useful bird, for it feeds on mice, on not a few insect pests, as crickets and grasshoppers, also on spiders and the rest.

Not a Bad Description.
A new neighbor came to call on me, and she brought her small four-year-old boy. This child was a striking child with red hair. He was the first child Ethel had happened to notice with such bright locks, and she walked right up to him and said, "Why, your hair is regular setting sun color, isn't it?"—Chicago Tribune.

Paint for this building less than $4.00

YOU get an idea of how much surface Certain-teed paint covers to the gallon when you find that only two gallons are required for two good coats on a poultry house like this (16' x 32'). Less than $4 will buy the paint. The smaller buildings are often overlooked at painting time, but without paint they rot and warp just as quickly and in proportion are as costly to replace.
We can save you money on Certain-teed paint. Each color sells for what it costs to make plus a fair profit. On your smaller buildings you can use the less expensive colors and at a considerable saving.

Dexter—The barn belonging to Michael Schlauss on his farm about two miles west of this village was destroyed by fire about noon Friday with a loss amounting to more than $4,000. The fire was not discovered until flames were seen coming from the cupola. The origin is unknown. It was stated Saturday that the loss would be well covered by insurance. Live stock in the barn was rescued but grain and hay stored there was a total loss. Other farm buildings were protected from the flames and sparks.

Ypsilanti—City Clerk Harvey Holmes stated Monday evening that a definite proposition from Henry Ford relative to a Ford factory being built just south of Ypsilanti was expected to be made to the city soon. # An Official Statement by the Governor of South Dakota

On August 29, Governor McMaster, of South Dakota, issued the following statement:—

"At a meeting with Colonel Stewart, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana and other Standard Oil Officials, held in Pierre this morning, Mr. Stewart expressed unqualifiedly the willingness of Standard Oil to comply with the wishes of the consumers of the State of South Dakota in so far as those wishes could be expressed and interpreted by the governor of this state. These Standard officials, although they contend that the present prices do not properly reflect the costs of production, refining and distribution, plus a reasonable profit, were willing, at my request, to do one of two things—raise the price of gasoline immediately in the State of South Dakota where it would represent a six and six-tenths cent reduction over former prices, or maintain, for the time being, sixteen cent gasoline in the State of South Dakota, using Mitchell as a base.

"After due consideration, the Standard Oil officials were asked by the governor to maintain the present price of 16 cents for the time being. I wish to accept full responsibility for this situation and state that Standard Oil, by deed and act, is working in fullest co-operation with the governor of this state and therefore can in no respect be blamed for 16 cents gasoline from this date.

"I realize that the independents who have viciously assailed and attacked me will raise bitter complaint against this condition. However, after due consideration and investigation, I wish to say that if the former gasoline prices of this state were excessive, the independents of this state were just as responsible for that condition and were just as guilty of taking excess profits as was Standard Oil.

"At no time during the period which former gasoline prices prevailed did any independent of this state raise one objection or bring one complaint to this office in an effort to bring about any reduction in price but they were perfectly willing to profit to the fullest extent.

"I realize that all sorts of charges will be made against me because of this action, but in view of the fact that gasoline can be purchased at various refineries today for approximately seven cents a gallon, it will not work injury to the public cause if the Independents are forced for the time being to do business on a small margin of profit. There is no particular reason why the State Government should guarantee to the Independent Oil Dealers of this state, at least for the time being, fixed profits, especially in view of the fact that they were perfectly willing and were a party to take excessive profits from the people."

This clearly defines the position which the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has maintained throughout this controversy.

Ypsilanti—When he lost control of his car Saturday morning at Cross and Brower streets, Henry W. Weichel, 3975 Charest street, Detroit, crashed into an Edison boulevard light pole, damaging his car and injuring his wife and daughter. The accident occurred about 11 o'clock Saturday morning, and Mr. Weichel states that the only reason he can give for it is that the brakes did not work. Mrs. Weichel suffered a dislocated arm, and the daughter, Mildred, received cuts about the head. They were taken to a doctor where their injuries were treated.

Dexter—The Staebler Oil Co. has purchased the property in Dexter known as the Stebbins hotel and operated at present by the former owners, Eck Brothers, as a garage and filling station. The Ecks have run the business for a number of years and are well known throughout the country. The Ecks will turn over the property at an early date to the Ann Arbor firm which will open another Staebler filling station there, making at least one Staebler filling station in each community in the county.

Jackson—The lives of two railway section men were crushed out in a flash Thursday at 11 a. m. Gus Ginter, 33, and Arvin Walling, 16, were on a section car when struck by a D. U. R. limited, on Page avenue. Two other railway men were on the car, but they jumped and saved their lives. Ginter's home was in Wisconsin, but it is not known where relatives of Walling may be located. A misunderstanding as to orders by the limited car crew is said to be responsible for the tragedy.—Saturday Evening Star.

Jackson—Two dogs paid the extreme penalty Monday afternoon for killing sheep. They were put to death in the gas tank to the rear of police headquarters, by Dog Warden Eggleston. He had taken them into custody earlier in the day at their master's home in Summit Township. Their specific crime was the raiding last week of a flock of sheep belonging to C. D. Waite, farmer of Summit township. Responsibility for the death of several of the sheep was laid to the dogs and their owner made no protest when Eggleston came after them.—News.

Brighton—Last Wednesday while Clarence Richards was threshing for Elmer Boice on Miss Lois Birkenstock's farm in Brighton township, the gasoline engine back-fired and set fire to straw that was lying around. The men were all in the barn and did not see the blaze until Mrs. Boice had noticed it and called their attention to it. As it was close to an oat stack and had gotten quite a start before being discovered it required some quick work on the part of the men to put it out. The engine was only slightly damaged. A few minutes more and it would have been impossible to save the oat stack and barn, and probably the house would have gone too.—Argus.

Brooklyn—It is fortunate that R. F. Peterson arose at five o'clock on Sunday morning instead of waiting for the church bells to ring. Looking towards the barn he was more than startled to see a blaze creeping up the side of the John Kline barn across the alley where he keeps his horse. Mr. Peterson got there with a water bucket none too soon. He stopped the flames but about two minutes delay would have meant the burning of all the barns along the alley if not many adjoining houses. The fire must have smoldered all night in the manure pile in the alley and the start must have been a match from a careless smoker.—Exponent.

Reduce the Skidding Danger!

Buick Four-wheel Brakes

BUICK four-wheel brakes reduce to a minimum the skidding danger every driver encounters on wet pavements.

The action of the simple yet positive Buick brakes not only slows down the car safely but keeps it steady, preventing skidding to either side.

Buick four-wheel brakes operate with slight pressure on the service brake pedal, are of the Buick-proved external contracting type and function independently of the emergency brake.

Buick has taken this advanced step of designing four-wheel brakes on its 1924 cars in conformance with its well-known policy of providing owners with the safest and most dependable transportation.

We will be pleased to give you a demonstration and let you prove the effectiveness of Buick four-wheel brakes yourself.

INFLUENCED BY PERSIAN ART; CHIC DRESS ACCESSORIES

FASHION is again dallying with the East of the Orient without confining itself to any particular country or period. The influence of China is seen in costumes and millinery. There are new developments in costumes that owe their inspiration to Indo-China, to India and last but not least, to Persia, and this Persian influence promises to add a great deal of novelty and color to the season's styles.

The suit shown at the right borrows its line from the costume of the Persian court. It is of serge made with a knee-length coat ornamented with a rich braid embroidery. The collar and cuffs are finished with material of the same color as the braid. A perfectly plain, ankle-length skirt completes the costume. A smart touch is added by the hat which is ornamented with all-over embroidery in a design closely akin to that in the coat.

Jaquette and skirt in the outfit shown at the left are made of a soft tweed and it is in the blouse that the designer turns to the riotous color and superb patterns of oriental weaves. The design is pure Persian with jewel-like tones of red, green and blue against a gold background. The little round collar is of plain material and ties at the front with a ribbon tie.

There is a decided vogue for these elaborate blouses to be worn with two-piece suits. When they are not of printed silk they may be of crepe de chine, plain silks or satins ornamented with embroidery or beading. For blue serge there is the smartest kind of a blouse of blue crepe ornamented at the waistline and collar with Chinese embroidery.

For everyday wear, plain suits with an odd clasp, in the novel bracelet pictured. Onyx and jade, black enamel and rhinestones, are popular combinations in matched bracelets for evening. One worn on the upper arm and one on the wrist.

One of many small, elegantly finished black silk bags appears at the left of the picture. Moire and striped silks are the favorites in these, with small flat gold battlement finish about the edges. Next the bracelet, an enameled and jeweled ornament (mock jewels, of course) serves to emphasize the attention given to the important helps to the designer who makes much of the draped mode. Two patterns in rather short box coats, lend in popularity. The sleeves are varied, some of them plain and close fitting, others more roomy and slightly flaring.

While Lady Fashion clings persistently to simplicity of design and line in frocks and gowns, she makes up for this restraint by gaily indulging in vagaries in other directions. Never were accessories so extravagant and so heartily sponsored by stylists. All kinds of attention is given to the thousand and one small belongings that tone up dress and make the kaleidoscope of the styles always fascinating. Famous designers are much occupied with small details—as the working out of a monogram in a novel and beautiful way, the making of an original ornament, or the choice of jewelry with reference to a costume to be worn with it.

A few of these niceties of dress are earrings hold the center of the picture and reveal the adaptability of Egyptian motifs to present-day jewelry. There are myriads of earrings, in designs inspired by jewelry, or other ornamental things from all corners of the earth, and their vogue shows no sign of waning.

New gloves for fall are well represented by kid gauntlets in two colors and by gloves with cuffs, as shown in the picture. They are beautifully finished and provide a chic bit of elegance for the street costume. The low shoe shown accents the elaboration of footwear even for street wear. It appears to be an oxford adorned with cut-out and lily war.

CAPTAINS OF ADVENTURE

By ROGER POCOCK

DANIEL BOONE
A. D. 1776

As a matter of unnatural history the British lion is really and truly a lioness with a large and respectable family. When only a cub she sharpened her teeth on Spain, in her youth crushed Holland, and in her prime fought France, wrestling from each in turn the command of the sea.

She was nearing her full strength when France with a chain of forts along the Salat Lawrence and the Mississippi attempted to strangle the thirteen British cubs in America. By the storming of Quebec the lion smashed that chain; but the long and worldwide wars with France had bled her dry, and unless she could keep the sea her cubs were doomed, so bluntly she told them they must help.

The cubs had troubles of their own and could not help. There's was the legal, hers the moral right, but both sides fell in the wrong when they lost their tempers. Since then the mother has reared her second litter with some of that gentleness which comes of sorrow.

So far the French in Canada were not settlers so much as gay adventurers for the Christ, or for beaver skins, living among the Indians, or in a holiday mood leading the tribes against the surly British.

Among the hard fella' colonists a very few loved nature and in childhood took to the wilds. Such was the son of a tame Devon Quaker, young Daniel Boone, a natural marksman, axman, hustiman, tracker and scout of the backwoods who grew to be a freckled ruddy man, gaunt as a wolf, and subtle as a snake from his hard training in the Indian wars.

When first he crossed the mountains on the old war trail into Kentucky, hunting and trapping wild well in that paradise of noble timber and white clover meadows. The country swarmed with game, a merry hunting ground and battlefield of rival Indian tribes.

There Boone and his wife's brother Stuart were captured by Shawnees, who forced the prisoners to lead the way to their camp where the other four hunters were taken. The Indians took their horses, rifles, powder, traps and furs; all lawful plunder; but gave them food to carry them to the settlements with a warning for the whites that trespassers would be prosecuted. That was enough for four of the white hunters; but Boone and Stuart tracked the Indians and stole back some of their plunder, only to be trailed in their turn and recaptured.

The Shawnees were annoyed, and would have taken these trespassers home to be burned alive, but for Boone's queer charm of manner which won their liking; and his ghostlike vanishing with Stuart into the cave brakes. The white men got away with rifles, bullets and powder, and they were wise enough not to be caught again.

At the moment when the big colonial hive began to swarm Boone led a party of thirty frontiersmen to cut a pack-trail over the mountains into the plains of Kentucky. This wilderness trail—some two hundred miles of mud-holes, rocks and stumps—opened the way for settlement in Kentucky, a dark and bloody ground, for white invaders.

At a cost of two or three scalps Boone's outfit reached this land, to build a stockaded village named for the leader, Boonesborough; and afterward he was very proud that his wife and daughters were the first women to brave the perils of that new settlement.

Under a giant elm the settlers, being British, had church and parliament, but only on one Sunday did the parson pray for King George; before the news came that congress needed prayers for the new republic at war with the motherland.

Far to the northwest of Kentucky the forts of Illinois were held by a British officer named Hamilton. He had with him a handful of American Tories loyal to the king, some newly conquered French Canadians not much in love with British government, and savage Indian tribes. All these he sent to strike the revolting colonies in their rear, but the whole brunt of the horror fell upon poor Kentucky. The settlements were wrecked, the log cabins burned, and the Indians got out of hand, committing crimes; but the settlers held four forts and cursed King George through seven years of war.

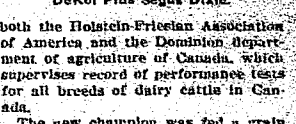

It was in a lull of this long storm that Boone led a force of thirty men to get salt from the salt-licks frequented by the buffalo and deer, on the banks of Licking river. One day while he was scouting ten miles from camp, and had just loaded his horse with meat to feed his men, he was caught, and led him to their camp where some of the hundred warriors had helped to capture Boone eight years before. There, with much ceremony and mock politeness, introduced him to two American Tories, a brace of French Canadians, and their Shawnee chiefs. Then Boone found out that this war party was marching on Fort

DAIRY FACTS

New World's Record for Butterfat Production

A new world's record for production of butterfat in one year over all breeds has been established by a Holstein cow owned by Baymondale Farms at Vaudouill, Quebec, DeKoi Plus Segis Dixie freshening at the age of nine years and three months, and weighing 1,950 pounds, produced 83,447.5 pounds of milk containing 1,849.35 pounds of butterfat in 365 consecutive days. This amount of butterfat is equal to 1,684.09 pounds of butter. This production surpasses the former world record held by another Canadian Holstein cow by 3 pounds of butter.

Because of her previous high records of production, "Dixie" was placed on strictly official test, supervised by both the Holstein-Friesian Association of America and the Dominion Department of Agriculture of Canada, which superintends record of performance tests for all breeds of dairy cattle in Canada.

The new champion was fed a grain ration consisting of equal parts of bran, hominy, dried distillers' grains, gluten meal, oil cake and cracked oats. To 100 pounds of this mixture was added one pound of salt, one pound of charcoal and one-fourth-pound of boumnet. She was fed at the rate of one pound of grain mixture to each four pounds of milk produced. Her roughage consisted mainly of mixed hay and some corn silage and beets. All of last summer she was let out to pasture two hours a day.

A four-year-old son of the new champion recently sold at public auction for $4,100 at the National Holstein sale.

Production of Fat Is Affected by Age of Cow

Fat production by the average dairy cow increases till she has passed her seventh year, reaches its peak before the end of her eighth year and then gradually declines. This fundamental truth in farming science was discovered recently by C. W. Turner, a teacher in the dairy department of the Missouri College of Agriculture.

This conclusion was reached only after Turner had worked out the relation between the age and the yearly fat production of more than 36,000 dairy cows. The data included all the yearly fat records available of pure bred dairy cows in the United States. This is the first time an extensive compilation of this sort has been carried out.

The value of this information lies in knowing what production may be expected of a cow at a certain age. For example, if a farmer knows the present production of a two-year-old cow and wishes to estimate what she will be worth to him in five years, he will have an authoritative table which he may consult.

A yearling produces 64.6 per cent compared to a cow at maturity; a two-year-old, 75.9 per cent; a three-year-old, 84 per cent; a four-year-old, 90 per cent; a five-year-old, 95 per cent; and a six-year-old, 99 per cent. After seven years the decline in production is gradual.

Of the total number of records examined, 13,723 were Jersey cows; 73,589 Guernseys; 12,504 Holsteins; 2,162 Ayrshires, and 1,014 Milking Shorthorns.

Increase of Butterfat Is Not Made by Feeding

According to experimental work that has been done, the percentage of fat in milk cannot be increased by feeding. The milk of each individual cow seems to have a fixed composition that is natural to her. True, the richness of the milk may be increased or decreased for a short time if the cow's digestive system is disturbed by sickness or improper feeding, but will return to the normal test in a short time. The quantity of milk may easily vary with feeding, consequently the total pounds of butterfat would be increased without a variation in the test. By having a cow in high flesh at the time of freshening, the test may be raised for a time, the supposition being that the body fat is drawn upon, but it only lasts for a short time, when the test returns to the point peculiar to the individual.

Pointers for Selection of Improved Dairy Cow

One or two signs tell a good cow in a poor cow the high rump down straight, so there is no place between the thigh and the udder on one side and the tail on the other. There should be plenty of daylight between the udder and the tail. One of the best ways to tell what kind of a cow you have is by her temperament. A good dairy type has a sharp spine and sharp hip bones. A good cow has a large, well-shaped stomach.

Unanimous in Report That Work Is Good Thing. (Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) Practicing veterinarians in regions where the United States Department of Agriculture, the states and counties are carrying on campaigns against cattle tuberculosis report almost unanimously that the work is a good thing and should be encouraged and increased.

Many of the veterinarians say that cleaning out tuberculosis from the herds in their communities has been a good thing for their business, and scores of them mention the general improvement in live stock which has resulted, the reduction of losses and the increasing prosperity of farmers.

Early Molting Hens Are Poor Paying Proposition

What is the trouble with the poultry business? Why are fewer hens kept this year? Is the poultry business going backward? All these questions, and many more like them, have been asked recently.

It has been proved beyond doubt that early molting hens are poor producers. Hens that begin to shed their feathers in July and August seldom start to lay before the latter part of January or the early part of February.

Increase production and increase efficiency, by keeping the late molting hens in September and thus increase the meat and egg supply of the country.

Bridge the Great Lakes with car-ferries and tunnel under the mighty connecting rivers, though we may, such accomplishments merely better our service to you; we are Michigan Railroads more than transcontinental traffic lines. Our train schedules are for Michigan, not for New York and San Francisco. To a degree greater than any other state, Michigan's welfare, and the welfare of her Railroads, are therefore one and inseparable. You cannot fall back on transcontinental lines for emergency help; we must always rely on you for our chief support. We can prosper only together. Because of this mutual dependence, the twenty-four Railroads operating in Michigan have formed this Association with the purpose of strengthening the relations of the Railroads with the People of the State, by providing you with a clearing house for the exchange of ideas, relative to the transportation problems so vital to the prosperity of our Peninsular State. We invite your suggestions toward bringing about a better understanding and closer cooperation between the Public and the Railroads. Communicate with this Association.

SQUABBLE OVER THRONE OF CZAR

Russian Exiles United in Hate for Lenin, Split as to Candidate for Crown.

Paris.—Mr. Paul Erio, "Le Journal's" well informed writer on Near East topics, contributed to that newspaper the other day an article on the anti-Soviet activities of the various exiled Russian groups.

"The exiles are divided in the main into two camps—the Democrats and the monarchists. But in each of these camps political subdivisions exist and factions and sub-factions have been created, whose work is often embarrassed by personal ambition and special interests.

"At present the monarchists seem to be the more aggressive. At least, they are making more stir. They have in the principal cities of Europe numerous committees which meet frequently. But the same ideas are not expressed in all these gatherings. Two aspirants, with about equal following, the Grand Duke Cyril and the Grand Duke Dimitri, both dream of occupying the throne so tragically abandoned by Nicholas II.

"But not all the monarchists believe in the possibility of a return, pure and simple, to the former regime. Many of them, convinced that the Red army will soon rise against the Moscow government, think that at that moment Russia will have need of a strong man, capable of maintaining order in the country until elections can be held.

Getting Wasps Pictures. Nature photographers know birds are easiest to approach and photograph at their nests, and so it is with wasps, says Nature Magazine. In addition they are not unlike birds in that they may be attracted by putting up covered boxes for them.

The Hand of Fellowship

IS extended to you by the business interests of Chelsea. Grasp it. Feel the strength of its Sincerity and Eagerness to satisfy--learn of its actions in moulding this--our town --into a greater and more enterprising community.

It's that hand of Fellowship, of Welcome, of Ambition and Determination which has done so much in contributing to the welfare of our fair town.

Think back a few years. Note the many public and private improvements that have been made since then as a direct result of local enterprise.

What motive prompted them? Certainly, not selfishness. Those who contributed, did it for the purpose of adding to your convenience and pleasure. Yes, to create--GOOD FELLOWSHIP and GOOD WILL.

Of course, these improvements were not made without considerable sacrifice on the part of our business interests. Quite often they came forward with financial aid when they could least afford it. And yet, they did it with a generous heart and cheerful smile. That's the spirit that has made Chelsea so progressive.

All those interests ask in return is your CO-OPERATION in building an even BRIGHTER FUTURE for this community.
