YOUNG MAN AND WOMAN KILLED EARLY THIS MORNING

CAR RUNS INTO DITCH AND HITS CULVERT

Driver Thought to have Fallen Asleep While Driving

Emil J. Bendick, 3370 Vanderbilt Ave., Detroit and Miss Evelyn Bickley of Wyandotte were killed early this morning about five miles west of town when the car they were in left the road and turned over in the ditch.

The accident was unnoticed by anyone. Truck drivers who happened along about 4:30 o'clock were attracted by the light shining through the culvert and stopped to investigate.

The young man had his chest crushed in and several bruises about the head. The young lady had a broken jaw and a fracture of the skull.

At first everything was fine and one came a change. Someone did some heavy talking in a short space of time and changed mind, and opinions.

Several types of signs have already been proposed and the committee take care of the matter have proposed them all.

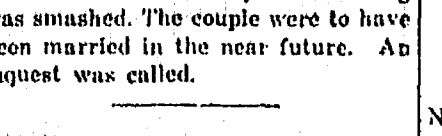

Why can't all get together and help for Chelsea? There is no reason why the sooner that all realize this the CLASSICS IS NOW PHOTOPLAY. Adams Sawyer, Famous Grand Story, to be Shown at Princess Theater. The most widely heralded of photoplays is announcing on Wednesday and to the Princess Theater. It Adams Sawyer, a picture the famous story of New York which was a phenomenal success when it appeared a decade ago. So great was the popularity printed narrative it was, and in this form it won even more interesting than the play. Everybody loves its quaint rustic charm. The story of the young man from Boston, Quincy Adams Sawyer, his coming to the small town of Mason's Corner; his experiences in running down a dishonorable scoundrel; his great love affair—all this is part of the attractive novel which is now a screen play. The delightful rural characters are fun-provoking to the extreme, and the fresh, clean, humor will appeal to all lovers of better photoplays. A lavish production has been given this famous story. To enact the roles in the picture, the entire motion picture industry was searched for its best material. As a result, one of the highest-priced assembles of talent is seen, and in the list are players who have been starred in their own right. Among the important are Blanche Sweet, Lon Chaney, Barbara La Marr, John Hovers, Elmo Lincoln, Louis Fazenda, June Elvidge, Hank Mann, Zazu Pitts and many others. "Quincy Adams Sawyer" was adapted from the novel by Bernard McConville.

It seems, the modern idea of havin' a "good time" is to go as far as possible where nothin' is a crime. The folks that live on pleasure in these hurry-hurry days, sets the limit in a measure, by the racket they can raise. They'll follow a midnight orgy in some casual spot, where virtue's target, and they'll rush the social sewer from a fountain of limpid slime—next day they'll dream about it as havin' a good time! But—the limousine turns turtle as she speeds around the curve—for the loach'll play the devil with an over-loaded eye. "We Serve Michigan"

Geographical isolation makes the Railroads of Michigan a transportation system like that of no other state. Most of our traffic either originates or ends in Michigan. Bridge the Great Lakes with car-ferris and tunnel under the mighty connecting rivers, though we may, such accomplishments merely better our service to you; we are Michigan Railroads more than trans-continental traffic lines. Our train schedules are for Michigan, not for New York and San Francisco. To a degree greater than any other state, Michigan's welfare, and the welfare of her Railroads, are therefore one and inseparable. You cannot fall back on trans-continental lines for emergency help; we must always rely on you for our chief support.

We can prosper only together. Because of this mutual dependence, the twenty-four Railroads operating in Michigan have formed this Association with the purpose of strengthening the relations of the Railroads with the People of the State, by providing you with a clearing house for the exchange of ideas, relative to the transportation problems so vital to the prosperity of our Peninsular State.

We invite your suggestions toward bringing about a better understanding and closer cooperation between the Public and the Railroads. Communicate with this Association.

UNJUST RESULTS OF MONEY PLANS

Unsound Currency Gives Sellers Unfair Advantage Over the Producers.

EXPERT EXPLAINS MONEY

Points Out Dangers in So-Called Energy Dollars—Other Plans Exposed.

How demagogues are using false doctrines of so-called "sound money" to give themselves or the class they represent unfair advantages at the expense of real producers is exposed in the Journal of the American Bankers Association by H. Parker Willis, expert on the money question.

"There is no subject in whose name more crimes against truth have been committed than that of 'sound currency,'" Mr. Willis says. "The term is always resorted to by demagogues. At the present moment there seems to be a danger that it will be used by a potential presidential candidate as representing the 'platform' upon which he expects to run. There is no question that more nearly and directly touches the immediate welfare of every class in the community."

Purpose of Money

Primary functions of money and currency, it is explained, are to serve as a means of exchanging goods and as a means of measuring the value of goods. Mr. Willis continues:

"Demagogues and those who are disposed to mislead the public for various ulterior reasons have succeeded in disseminating an entirely different view of the purpose of money. Some of them contend that the soundest or best currency is that which is so arranged as to bring about a 'fair' redistribution of wealth. They want a constantly depreciating currency—one which keeps playing into the hands of the seller of goods by enabling him to count confidently upon higher prices in terms of money so that he pays the producer from whom he has obtained them less and less. IT IS A STRANGE THING THAT THIS KIND OF CURRENCY IS OFTEN HIGHLY PRAISED OR FAVORED BY THE PRODUCERS THEMSELVES. NOTWITHSTANDING THAT HE IS THE GREATEST SUFFERER FROM IT."

Energy Currency

There is another popular view of sound currency which aims to base it upon "natural products" or "natural forces"—usually it is true, specifying products or forces which have been monopolized or can be controlled by the advocate of such currency. Thus from time to time there have been schemes to issue a currency based upon or protected by farm products stored in warehouses or occasionally representing "units of energy" or horse power.

The rulers of Soviet Russia at one time attempted to introduce a currency representing "labor time," each man receiving a check representing the number of hours of time he had put in at work, while goods themselves were to be valued in terms of hours of production time. Thus one man who put in an hour's time in street cleaning received the same control over goods as he who put in an hour's time at surgery. The theory was that this kind of "sound" currency enabled the "poor man" to get a larger supply of goods.

"The trouble was that when those who could perform a certain kind of labor were not paid in proportion to their effort they stopped making goods. So it was not very long in Russia before the sound currency which was issued in favor of the poor man had brought it about that the poor man could not buy anything with the currency. This was an unfortunate kind of 'soundness.' We do not want something like it in the United States today, yet very similar proposals are now being made in a good many quarters that ought to know better," says Mr. Willis.

FACTS ABOUT CHECKS

A bank check is a written order on a bank by one of its depositors to pay a specified sum to another party. This instrument must be dated, the amount written in full in the body and signed the same as the depositor's signature appears on the bank signature card and ledger sheet.

A check is payable on demand, provided it is not dated ahead. If dated ahead it becomes a promise to pay the same as a note or acceptance, payable on some future date. United States revenue stamps are required on a check dated ahead, at the rate of 3 cents per hundred dollars, or fraction thereof.

In case a check carries two different figures, that is $2.00 in the figures and "Two Hundred Dollars" in the written part of the body of the check, the latter, or part in writing, always controls.

A check made out to a person "or order," requires identification, and the party presenting the same must assure the bank that he is the payee. A check to a person "or bearer" is payable to the one presenting it at the bank, but a certain amount of identification is necessary, for the bank reserves the right to know that he is entitled to receive the funds.

Basket on Pole Saves Man from Injury

A Wisconsin housewife, who spent some work after her husband's death during the winter, found the method of the basket on a pole quick. The device is on the way to claims, has saved 150 more hours of labor as well as numerous painful slips. The device is simple to use. It consists of a circular rim and a supporting frame of 1/2-inch iron rod, and a cross-shaped wire basket attached to the rim. A stout cane handle is used for handle.

When the bees swarm, they usually alight in one of the trees of the orchard and often at such a height that it is almost impossible to capture them. As soon as the swarm is located and fairly settled, the basket is raised under the swarm, shaken so that most of the bees will fall into it. Of course, many bees escape; they will return to the swarm and cluster on the outside of the basket. When all is quiet again, the basket is lowered in front of an empty hive and the bees are induced to enter their new home.

"Service - Progress Special" Touring In Michigan

This is the big New York Central Lines' railroad museum train which is coming here. It is hauled by Engine 8000, the mystery locomotive of the Michigan Central Railroad—for its weight the most powerful in the world. Engine 8000, the last word in freight locomotives, with the historic world's record flyer "engine 999" and the venerable DeWitt Clinton trolley of 1831 shows complete the New York Central Lines' engine development from first to last.

The Michigan tour of this train which is known as the "Service-Progress Special" consists of sixty-eight stops, including the one here. The train has just completed a tour of New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio where thousands of persons visited it at each stop. Railroad progress of nearly 100 years is shown by the equipment and priceless exhibits of this large eleven-unit train. The relationship of agriculture, industry and the railroads is demonstrated; as well as cost of government.

Among the features of the train are the famous handcarved Warther Working Engine Models, portraying the development of the steam engine; moving pictures show present railroad operation at evening stops.

The "Service-Progress Special" is being operated by the New York Central Lines at request of American Farm Bureau Federation and National Grange.

Newspaper on Advertising

Quoted from Herman Rosenfeld, advertising manager for Sears, Roebuck & Co., here is the hand writing on the wall for the "hardboiled" retailer who "hasn't anything to advertise." Use it on him once, and if he doesn't wag the Waterman for you then, you can figure the fellow across the street to be buying him out within a year or so:

"We have a bureau whose duty it is to read each week the country newspapers from all over the country," says Mr. Rosenfeld.

"There is not a paper of any consequence in our trade territory that our bureau does not get. This bureau looks over these papers and when we find a town where the merchants are not advertising in the local paper we immediately flood that territory with our literature. It always brings results far in excess of the same effort put forth in territory where the local merchants are using their local papers."

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Returning to her home in a small town, Milton Center, from a visit to New York, the widowed mother of ten-year-old Ann Byrne announces her wedding to Hudson Cortlandt, socially and politically prominent. Her husband has not been told about Ann, and the new wife fears will be displeased.

CHAPTER II.—With Ann, Mrs. Cortlandt returns to New York, to the home of Hendricks Cortlandt, her husband's brother, with whom the latter is living. Hudson practically refuses to have anything to do with Ann, and the child is gladly adopted by Hendricks Cortlandt, settling with his wife to his position as United States minister to Switzerland, the pair are not in the wreck of the vessel.

CHAPTER III.—Ann satisfactorily fills a gap in Hendricks Cortlandt's life, and their affection becomes mutual.

CHAPTER IV.—At sixteen years of age Ann is confronted with the beginning of the Civil War. As Hendricks Cortlandt's acknowledgment of her she is a naturally prominent society, and her situation is resented by Mrs. Rensselaer, Hendricks' sister, whose son, Hendricks, has been looked upon as a natural heir of the Cortlandt estate. The Civil War breaks out, the fall of Fort Sumter causing consternation in New York and the North generally.

CHAPTER V.—A tentative engagement between young Rensselaer and Ann is understood, the youth existing in a New York regiment on the front of the North to the colors.

CHAPTER VI.—The brief term of enlistment expired, Hendricks Rensselaer returns to New York. Ann is instructed in causing him to re-enlist. Her hospital is established in New York, and Ann is eager to help in the work, but meets with opposition from her guardian and his sister.

CHAPTER VII.—Ann has her way, and in spite of Mrs. Rensselaer's opposition and her guardian's increased aversion to the idea, takes to the work of cheering the unfortunate wounded who have been sent back from the front.

CHAPTER VIII.—With her guardian, she visits Hendricks Rensselaer in his camp on the outskirts of Washington. He is strongly opposed to work in the hospital, but she refuses to give it up. There is a rift between them.

When Denzley Howard was finally published in Washington square, the pertinence of her hospital service suddenly dwindle for Ann. The long afternoons, empty as a perfect blissed veil, were her own, to do with as she pleased, and she poured into them the shyness of association with Denzley. He never talked of his symptoms nor bowed her to burden him with inquiries as to his condition. He settled in on the first day.

"Some one of these days," he said, "shall just sit—quite quietly."

CHAPTER IX.—Let Us Never Speak of It Again.

There is no one to care, particularly. . . . And now—let us never speak of it again. . . . That is settled.

Instead they talked of many delightful things, unimportant in themselves, but curiously intimate, in the isolated companionship of the bare white room, they reviewed his life abroad, and covered a wealth of beauty to the colored girl. It was all mangle to him, and it was no wonder that the two spring afternoons seemed all too brief.

It was not until the third day of an easy companionship that she asked the question which she had been dreading. She thought, when she came that she looked more ill than usual, and she could not suppress a murmur of pity.

"He frowned at her ferociously; the earnestness to which she was accustomed had left his face, and the warmth of his being was all gone, have had a blow," he said.

"I am," she said.

"I saw him at Fairfax Court-house," he said.

"You saw him? You saw Hendricks?" she asked. "You never told me—how did he look?" she asked.

and kiss him, very shyly, on his wasted cheek.

He did not try to detain her, nor to return her caress. "Thank you," he said. "You have given me something to think about. Thank you for everything."

She smiled to have him, lying alone there in the big room, with the flickering candles making weird shadows across the high walls, especially as she did not know when she might return, if her guardian should prove obstinate. Her heart was heavy as she slipped out of the silent house.

Immediately after Mr. Cortlandt's arrival, early the next morning, she told him of her escapade, and she was surprised at his calm reception of her news.

"You are not displeased with me, uncle?"

"Displeased? No. . . . If you gave him any happiness—poor boy. . . . Denzley Howard died in the night, Ann."

CHAPTER X Tragedy.

Ann could not tell how much her guardian surprised of her feeling for Denzley, but she knew it was for her sake that he, in the absence of anyone in authority, took charge of his neighbor's house, with his sinister knot of craps on the slyer knocker. It was he who notified the inheriting brother in Detroit, and who made the arrangements for the funeral, although he left it to her to see that the house was ready for the services.

Only once did she venture into the dear familiarity of the upper front room; the blinds had been closed, and a thin gray light pervaded the spacious white place. Denzley lay as she had seen him last, except that the eager blue eyes, which had always followed her persistently, were closed; it was strange not to meet their shining response. . . . His hands were folded on his breast; they were pitifully thin. . . . She put out her own hand to touch them, but shrank back from their cold response. . . . He looked sad, she thought, and older. Now that he had nothing to give her he was very beautiful, she knew, but it seemed a curiously long time ago, and she wondered, as she stood, gazing above him, if she really loved him.

What was love, she questioned; it seemed to her eyes fixed on that graven face as on an oracle. She could not tell, nor could Denzley Howard now enlighten her.

One thing, however, she did know, and that was that she must break immediately with Hendricks Rensselaer. She went straight to her own room, after this meek farewell, and, sitting sternly upright before her little desk, she wrote her letter to him.

"And so, dear Hendricks," she inscribed, "I cannot marry you, because I know, now, that I do not love you, and no one could be sadder than I am about it."

The specter of her guardian's disappointment stalked in vain before her determination; she sent her letter to the mail and would have told Mr. Cortlandt all about it when he came in, had he not forestalled her with astonishing news of his own.

"Ann," he said, immediately on his arrival, "I have heard from the Presdent. He wants me to go abroad at once—to England."

"Uncle," cried Ann, her personal ailments forgotten, "may I go with you?"

"I am afraid not, Ann. I considered it, but I am going with other gentlemen, and in London we are to join Mr. John M. Forbes of Boston."

"Mr. Lincoln is sending you to keep those English shipbuilders from letting the Confederates have their iron ships?" Ann guessed keenly. "I am so glad, uncle! I know you will never let them do it!"

Mr. Cortlandt smiled affectionately at her. "My dear, I am flattered at your belief in my powers—but Mr. Forbes has that matter very well in hand; I am only to confer with him informally about it. . . . What the President really wants me to do is to go first to England and then to France and Germany, to acquaint European capitalists with the actual circumstances in this country, and with the resources of the North. He believes it is only in this way that we can destroy their partially for the Confederates. I don't want to go, Ann. I should prefer to work here. There is more to be done here."

Ann's frightened eyes interrogated him. "Confederates?" she whispered, unwilling to voice the possibility of loss at that important point.

"Yes. . . . Another defeat?"

"But I thought we had twice as many men there as the Confederates?"

"Lee is a great general, Ann, and the sooner we Federalists realize it the better. . . . They say the loss of life is appalling—perhaps twenty-five thousand men killed, and many more wounded."

Longshoreman Carves Heads in Clay Banks

Art is where you find it, according to an old saying. Los Angeles artists and sculptors have been attracted by a series of facts and carvings seen in the clay banks of a hill near San Pedro, Cal.

Heads of historical characters are prominent, together with the heads of Indian chieftains. Above is shown Nicholas Sander's, a longshoreman, who is one of the two sculptors whose work on the clay cliffs has attracted much comment. In the background may be seen some of the face carvings.

Time Flies at Prison
When Clock Goes Amuck

New York.—Time that moves with laggard feet through the dingy corridors of Sing Sing prison where thousands of men wait impatiently for their shadow to quit their cell and terminate their sentences, today is treading the sluggish tempo of its ways some more at the prison.

The hands of the large clock in the central office, where men behind the gray walls watch the minutes of their incarceration mournfully tick away, have been fixed. A break in the mechanism caused the hands to move with such speed that an hour was recorded every minute.

"Time is flying, boys," one of the convicts cried, with grim humor.

Germany Builds Mexican Radio.
Mexico City.—Four modern wireless transmitting stations, to cost 100,000 pesos, have been ordered from Germany by the Mexican government. It is stated by the department of communications in announcing the imminent reorganization of the country's radio system.

That northern Michigan—Emmet, Charlie and Cheboygan counties soon will become the chief source of supply of seed potatoes for Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and some other states, was the prediction made at Petoskey following the visit of the second annual Michigan potato tour, interested in potato growing is increasing in northern Michigan, where scientific methods are being studied in an effort to produce more and better potatoes to the acre.

MACK'S BASEMENT STORE

Fall Styles are Here Merchandise is Priced Lowly

The Basement Store is ready for the new season with complete displays of fall and winter coats, silk and wool frocks, millinery, foot wear and children's attire. The displays include such a varied assortment that it is an easy matter to select garments for individuals. The merchandise is of the best quality at the lowest price possible.

NEW DRESSES

$6.50 and Up

The wool dresses are of a mode that may be worn during the first fall days as street costumes. The wool frocks are rather simple of mode and come in straight line styles; yet their simplicity is not too much exaggerated, for novelty trimming and flaring flounces adorn them in unique manners. The wool dresses are priced from $6.50 up.

Fall Hats

As for the new fall hats there are jaunty felts for sports costumes, priced $2.98 and $3.98. The hats for dress and semi-dress wear are of velvet in becoming styles. Close hats are especially good for the coming season but are apt to have a feather placed jauntily on one side, or a slightly flaring brim at the side. These smart velvet hats are priced popularly, $6.00.

A profit of $14,000, although it has been in operation a little over a month is the record made by the state-owned automobile ferry at the Straits of Mackinac, according to Frank F. Rogers, state highway commissioner, who was at Iron Mountain on a tour of Upper Poutnauia roads. The ferry cost $18,000. It is expected the close of navigation will see the project paid for and that there will be something over to defray the cost of a new boat next spring. Mr. Rogers said.

Morton Davis, 51 years old, farm hand employed by Charles Skiegan, near Pottersville, was killed instantly when he fell from the top of a 20-foot ladder to the barn floor.

Where President Wants Your Help

President Coolidge's prompt appeal to the American people to help relieve the distress in Japan, following the unprecedented earthquake there, Sept. 1-2, was the keynote for an outpouring of world sympathy and helpfulness. The U. S. Army and Navy in the Far East cooperated with the National Red Cross and in less than twelve hours were rushing all available supplies to the scenes of disaster. Other world powers also quickly started relief activities. The President requests that all contributions be sent direct to the chairman of the National Red Cross at Washington for transmission to Japan. It is recalled that Japan contributed $100,000 to the people of San Francisco at the time of the earthquake and fire there. Upper picture shows scene of terror and confusion in Tokio in 1921, following a quake not one-tenth as severe as that which resulted in the present disaster. Lower: The sea wall at Yokohama, which city with Tokio, was virtually destroyed.

SERVICE PROGRESS SPECIAL WILL ARRIVE HER FRIDAY (Continued from Page one) will talk on the old DeWitt Clinton, the queer old relic of early railroading which was built back in 1831, before the most methods of fast travel, and is being brought in on a flat car.

Ernest Wurthler will visit Chelsea with the Special. Wurthler is the carver of the noted engine models which show how every passenger locomotive from the time of Sir Isaac Newton's "teakettle" to the fast passenger locomotive of today, appeared and moved. His collection of engines is said to be the finest of its kind in the world. Mr. Wurthler expects to take the collection to Europe next winter.

The Special has many interesting features which have attracted attention all over Michigan, Chelsea is fortunate in being one of the two cities visited on the last day of its stay in Michigan. Two or three stops are made every day, in some rich agricultural center. The people of Chelsea and visitors from surrounding points will be permitted to climb up into the famous engines. Everybody is cordially invited by the N. Y. C. lines to go through the cars and see the noted exhibit.

Gov. Groesbeck is personally directing the reconstruction work by state prisoners on the nine miles of the Dixie Highway between Flint and the Genesee-Oakland line. About 255 prisoners are employed on the job. The work has been under way for nearly a month, yet not quite a mile and a quarter has been completed. The Governor relieved the Highway Department's district engineer assigned to the work and four other department men, replacing them with others to whom he gave instructions to speed up.

Governor Groesbeck will call a special session of the legislature some time in November, for the purpose of taking up the question of legislative reapportionment, which under the constitution, must be fixed this year for the next 10-year period. Although there has been no formal or official announcement of his intention to call the lawmakers into extraordinary session, it was learned from reliable sources here last week that the governor practically has decided upon that course.
