VANDALS DESTROY SCHOOL PROPERTY

Night Marauders Gain Entrance to High School Building, Destroying Students' Property and Defacing Walls and Flag.

Authorities of Washtenaw county have been asked to aid in a search for vandals who, on last Saturday or Sunday night, broke into the Chelsea high school building and destroyed valuable property belonging to the school and pupils attending the school.

Gaining entrance at a window in the south-eastern part of the building the marauders made their way to the assembly room on the second floor, where the real work of destruction began. Books belonging to pupils were stacked, fountain pens deliberately broken in two, ink bottles emptied on seats, desks, and on the recently decorated walls of the room. Continuing their detestable efforts to the library, the vandals emptied all the books from all the bookcases but one, it being deliberately pulled over onto the floor, smashing glass and framework in the crash. More than 1900 volumes of books were dumped onto the floor in any manner possible.

Probably the thing which, more than any other, has raised the ire of school officials and others, is the desecration of a beautiful American flag hanging on the walls of the assembly room. Ink thrown from bottles in the hands of the outlaws bespattered stripes of the flag until it is a sight which stirs the fighting spirit of every true American. This alone no doubt, will prove expensive to the culprits when caught.

The exact time of the outrage is not known. Superintendent Clark of the schools, was in the building Saturday and states that apparently everything was as it should be at that time. Consequently it is supposed either Saturday or Sunday night furnished cover of darkness for the infamous deed, characterized by many as being perpetrated by "some of the worst kind of vandals known." Deliberate destruction of public school property for no known reason, is a matter which every public spirited citizen has taken to heart with only one idea in mind—that of punishment for perpetrators of the crime.

No estimate has been made by school officials on the amount of damage done. Books belonging to pupils were recovered by their owners without much loss. Damage to the library has not been investigated, the library being locked with its interior just as the vandals left it, until a more complete investigation can be made by the proper authorities. Redecorating may be necessary to part of the assembly room walls, this phase of the expense probably amounting to more than any other, financially.

No stone is being left unturned by school authorities in their effort to unearth the guilty parties. Every clue obtained is being traced to its source with the result that suspicions have been aroused which only lack actual evidence before arrests are made. Names of those suspected have not been disclosed as yet and probably will be withheld until they are taken into custody.

HEIM-KOEBBE WEDDING

The couple were attended by Miss Irene Heim, sister of the bride, and Mr. Harold Roller of Manchester.

The bride wore a gown of navy blue canton crepe and a hat of gray devetynne. She carried a shower bouquet of brides roses and lily of the valley. The bridesmaid wore a dress of blue canton crepe, and a hat of brown devetynne. She carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses.

NEW EQUIPMENT BEING INSTALLED

Erection of Switchboard and Other Equipment Means Alternating Current for West Section of Village.

Following arrival of a new switchboard at the local power plant of the village the latter part of last week, workmen under the direction and with the assistance of P. Boehm, superintendent of the municipal plant, have been busy this week erecting the board and connecting wiring necessary to a new operation.

The new switchboard, a product of the General Electric Company, is the latest word in switchboard designing, and for its size, one of the most complete on the market. Installed at a cost of $1700 the board is expected to take care of power for the entire village as soon as changes can be made in wiring for the different sections. For the present only the west end of the town will be changed over, plans calling for alternating current for the whole municipality as soon as financial arrangements can be made.

According to estimates made by Superintendent Boehm, alternating current will be turned on in the west end in another two or three weeks. This depends upon delivery of certain materials for completing construction under way. Extensive changes have been necessary to put lines in shape to handle the new current, which will be purchased by the village from the Consumers Power Company and retailed by the village to its residents.

Relieving the local plant from operation of a portion of the village lights and power is expected to prove a great saving in the plant's operation. Should the relief afforded amount to enough to discontinue operation of the steam plant it is thought savings will soon amount to enough to pay for changes necessary to convert the balance of the village to alternating current. One hundred and ten volts will be carried in place of 220, the amount now carried, and will necessitate purchase of new equipment by householders who have been using electrical appliances for direct current.

DEFEAT FOR THE HORSE

There can be but one end to the struggle between the automobile and the horse, now that the war department of France, looking around for opportunities to cut down expenses and save money, found one in the chargers that hitherto had been provided with the groans appertaining to the same—for all field marshals and generals, says the New York Times. So hereafter the field marshals and generals, if they want horses to ride, will pay for them out of their salaries as private luxuries, and the French taxpayers will be spared one fraction of their burdens. That the taxpayers will feel the difference in their pockets is more than doubtful, legislators in every country having both skill and custom in the spending of money saved, with a little something added, usually. But a general, and especially a French general, without a horse! He is almost inconceivable, or would have been 20 or even 10 years ago. In an automobile the once impressive hero will lose more than half his dignity. He will have no chance to display his noble mastery of a prancing steed; he only will be able to pose solemnly on the back seat and trust to his chauffeur for everything else. That was well enough for kings, but it is a poor role for the sons of Mars.

INJUNCTION FOR WIVES

Now, why have not the women with husbands of too gregarious tastes thought before of the remedy found by the wife of a Chicago man, who has been restrained by a court order from "visiting, seeing, talking to or riding with any woman" but his wife? This is a pretty comprehensive injunction and ought to keep peace in the family, if anything will in a household where court orders are necessary. There are embarrassments ahead for this Chicago man, but doubtless he has brought punishment on himself. His wife says so. He has, to be sure, what some may regard as a mitigation of his sentence in the fact that the court issued another injunction, this one forbidding his mother-in-law from visiting his house or interfering with his affairs. But the fact remains that if any lady wishes to put a check on the volatility of her husband, and can find a complaisant magistrate, there could hardly be a more effective way, says the Indianapolis Star. Whether or not it would tend to increase domestic happiness is another matter.

Some years ago I put an advertisement in a newspaper reading: "Wanted, strong boy for hard work." The job was an easy one, with good pay, but I thought I would try to find a boy who really wanted work, says a writer in the New York Herald. I did not get one reply. Recently I answered five "situations wanted" advertisements and on purpose said nothing of what the job was, and gave no indication of what the business was. Again I did not receive one response. What's the matter with young men today? They seem to expect business houses to "show me first." Once I went to see the principal of a large business college and explained to him that I was seeking the services of a young lady, and when I asked him about department he said he knew nothing about department, and he looked queerly at me when I remarked that department was as important as ability. Are we reaping the result of false teachings these many years past?

There is reason to think that much of the world's best work has been done by men who have triumphed over intellectual as well as physical defects. The best observer is not necessarily the one with the best eyesight; the best thinker is not necessarily the one with the best brains, says the Springfield Republican. Larcadio Hearn was half blind, and there have been eminent mathematicians who were clumsy in adding figures. A defect may be allowed for and circumvented, and splendid things may be done by an untiring will even with defective tools. For all these reasons we should be a little cautious about taking too mechanical a view of the mind and its powers. The artist must have eyesight, yet a certificate from the oculist is not the essential thing in deciding to learn to paint. No more is a first-class brain essential for intellectual work.

Insects that destroy metal are honey-combing lead-covered cables connected with Panama canal locks. Nothing is purposeless in nature. So you wonder what's the purpose of this. Insects, like dirt, probably are sent to keep us busy and out of mischief. Can you imagine the deviltry that would be raised if everyone had all his time free, no work? Babylon!

An insane woman escapes from the asylum at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. When captured, she had walked 40 miles in one day. Such spurts of energy are common among the insane. It often requires half a dozen strong men to overpower a maniac and get him into a padded cell. Take a sane man, a weakling, who cannot lift 100 pounds. Five minutes later, if he suddenly goes crazy, he can easily lift 500. Strength of muscle and power to accomplish are largely matters of confidence. Weakness is lack of confidence, fear—all in the imagination. You are what you think you are, no more, only occasionally less.

You talk of "the four corners of the earth." Where are they? Post-office figures it out. Taking a Mercator's projection map, it finds Chicago is the center. The four extreme corners are Nome, Alaska; Christchurch, New Zealand; Bergen, Norway, and Cape Town, Africa. A letter takes 13 days to reach Nome from Chicago, Christchurch 27 days, Cape Town 25 and Bergen 12. Communication on this little earth of ours has made great strides, but it's still in knee pants, not uniformly developed.

Americans are writing shorter letters, reports the Post Office department. It reasons to this conclusion because the average now is 45 letters to the pound, against 40 in 1907. This doesn't necessarily prove that letters are briefer, for stationery is lighter than it was 15 years ago. The average American probably writes as much as ever. Letters may be shorter, but more are written. It used to take a week's rallying of the will power to get started with "I take my pen in hand."

In Guam our Department of Agriculture finds the natives keeping their pigs at home by connecting them to a tree or stake with a grazing rope. After arduous labor, the officials are teaching the natives the advantages of pens, and showing how to build them. "When any American seems boneheaded, just reflect that there are people on earth whose mental development has not reached the point where it can conceive the building of a pigpen without outside assistance. Few of us know what real stupidity is until we travel."

Four different types of airplanes, each with a speed of more than 200 miles an hour. A nonskid device that makes a tennis court big enough for a landing field. Those are America's contributions to flying, up-to-date, says Brigadier General Mitchell, head of Uncle Sam's flying forces. When the fliers get the speed bug out of their heads, popularization of the airplane will begin. In buying planes people will want safety instead of dizzy speed.

Sidney, Australia, claims it is the healthiest city in the world. Last year its death rate was only 19 out of each 2,000 inhabitants. However, there is no occasion to rush across the Pacific. Only 21 out of each 2,000 Americans die yearly. This is but seven above the world's healthiest city. And our death rate is being cut steadily.

Approximately 107,000 persons die of tuberculosis in this country each year. The one bright spot in this sorry state of things is that the rate is steadily growing smaller. The war against tuberculosis must be kept up. The white-seal stamps supply ammunition for that war.

Perhaps the world seems to be growing more wicked because there are more people in it to be wicked than there used to be.

When you get down to brass tacks, you will have to admit that humanity owes much more to its bull-tongue plows than to its silver-tongue orators.

The postoffice has 500 cases on hand in which swindlers have got $140,000,000 by fraudulent use of the mails. Oh, dear, and that's only one of the ways people are getting cheated!

A French newspaper says Columbus did not benefit the world when he discovered America. But where else would Europe borrow the money for her wars?

The gentleman who is starting for India to hunt pink ducks with elephants is wasting his time and money. He can get results much more quickly and cheaply with a quart of hootch.

One invariable result of war is that the rich get the shackles and the poor get the shackles.

To Remove Corks. Corks placed in bottles containing gum, glue, shoe polish and other sticky substances are often difficult to remove. They will not stick if a little glycerine is rubbed over them.

Scotland Gets Elliland. The farm of Elliland, near Dumfries, where Burns wrote "Scots Wha hae" and "Tam o' Shanter," and many other poems, has been given to the Scottish nation by the terms of the will of the recent owner, a gentleman of Edinburgh. The buildings as far as possible are to remain as they were in the time when they were occupied by Robert Burns.

ENABLES BLIND TO READ MUSIC

Blind Printer Invents System by Which Sightless Musicians Can Read Notes Easily.

Jacksonville, Ill.—Five years ago L. W. Rodenberg, blind printer of the state school for the blind, began experiments to perfect a system of musical scores for the blind. In 1923 his device has been accepted by all the leading institutions for the blind in the United States, and the school at Jacksonville now publishes more music than any other institution in America. Formerly when a blind musician would run his fingers over the embossed dots of his score, he could read only notes designed for the left hand without the slightest knowledge of what the composition as a whole would sound like. Then he had to go back to find out what the right hand's part was like, since each score was printed separately.

Alternate Two Clefs.

The English devised a different system by which they placed the treble and bass alternately. That is, there would be a few lines for the left hand and then a few for the right hand, but even this innovation did not please the blind musicians who wanted to study the full score of the composition as they proceeded.

Mr. Rodenberg devised eighteen different systems while he conducted his experiments and submitted them to teachers of the blind throughout the country, asking them to select the one which seemed most practicable.

The system chosen has been received with acclamation by the blind musicians everywhere, and the presses at Jacksonville are kept busy meeting the demand for music written according to the new system.

Uses "Bar Over Bar" Method.

It sounds simple enough, according to Mr. Rodenberg. He calls it the "bar over bar" method. Instead of printing the whole composition for the left hand and then following the music for the right, after the manner of a puzzle in which the two parts must be pieced together, Mr. Rodenberg follows the conventional method of printing music.

On the top line of the page is printed the score for left hand. Just underneath he places the right hand score. Thus a blind musician can read with both hands at once and get a perfect idea of what the composition as a whole will sound like.

SYRACUSE CHINA

Syracuse China was not made to be locked carefully up in a china closet. It was made to use—three meals a day, every day in the year! For Syracuse China combines an exceptional beauty of appearance with a beauty of true usefulness.

Come in to see us next time you are shopping. We will be pleased to show you our Syracuse China patterns. They are very lovely, some bright and colorful, others quietly dignified.

Syracuse China resists unsightly nicks and cracks that so soon mar china that is not so well made. But, if by any chance, you should happen to break one piece, you can easily replace it, for every Syracuse China pattern is kept open.

An early order is suggested since you may have the advantage of a more complete variety of patterns from which to choose. You will find the Syracuse in white and in colored designs, all moderately priced.

Buy Your Tires from a Firestone DEALER

At the Latest Prices—The Lowest in History

You will find the Firestone Dealer one of the stable business men of your community. He offers a clean, fresh stock, backed by a well organized service. He wants you as a permanent customer.

That is the reason he sells Firestone tires. He knows and has plenty of proof that they are the best tires on the market. He can give you the greatest value and thereby retain your trade for years.

Every day you find new proof of this unequalled value. On the 15th of this month, Firestone Tires set two new dirt track records at Syracuse when Tommy Milton slid around four turns at every mile and covered the 100 miles in 75 minutes, 33 hundredths seconds. He also established a new world's record for one mile by covering it in 42 and 28 hundredths seconds. The next four cars to finish were also equipped with Firestone Gum-Dipped Cords. Each one of them went the entire race without a stop. This and every other important race this year was won on Firestone Gum-Dipped Cords and Steam-Welded Tubes. Such performance gives you conclusive proof of their strength and durability.

Not only do race drivers use Firestone Tires as protection to their lives and the surest way to victory, but the largest tire buyers in the world insist on and buy Firestone Tires for economy and service. These buyers include the leading car manufacturers, the biggest commercial car operators and the taxicab and motorbus operators. 57,639,714 tire miles were sold to taxicab and motorbus operators in the month of August.

Think this over. You cannot afford to accept anything less than Firestone service and economy. You can buy this service and economy from any of the dealers listed below.

BREVITIES.

Sullivan—Arthur Nisly is in receipt of a cablegram from Miss Dorothy Arbaugh, who sailed from San Francisco August 10 for a year's stay in Peking, China, stating that she escaped the earthquake at Yokohama by but four hours.—Observer.

Manchester—No wonder the people in the west part of the village are in favor of the big sewer project. With the pipes running into the river, what is to hinder the big fish from swimming right up to the kitchen door.—Enterprise.

Brooklyn—Light frosts have not injured any corn in this locality and the crop is now rapidly being cut. The corn yield is generally good but would have been benefited by more rain. Popcorn growers say that crop has come through even better than field corn.—Exponent.

Parma—The pavement from Marshall to Albion is now open to within half a mile of the street. Shops, a bad detour brings you back onto the road at the car barns and the street from there to the pavement in the city is simply awful.—News.

Milan—Next week will witness the departure of many of Milan's young people for the various colleges in the state. Several are leaving home for the first time and experience the joys of their freshman year, while other will be lordly seniors and complete their courses next spring. Several have already gone and are now hard at work wrestling with the problems of school life, both academic and social.—Leader.

Howell—The Howell Board of Commerce has erected a large sign board at the intersection of Grand River and Michigan avenues in that city, with arrows pointing the way to many Michigan towns, also giving the number of miles to the places, which is real convenience to travelers, especially to long distance tourists, who are not familiar with this locality.

Brooklyn—Prospect hill sits on a lake of oil perhaps, but if it does it can keep on sitting. The Prospect Hill Development Co. of Cleveland which drilled on the Jns. Wheaton farm about 2000 feet don't think there is oil there to the extent of any more money, and that is what oil thinking is done with. They quit drilling several months ago. Now the big steel derrick and other equipment has been dismantled and hauled to Devils Lake for shipment to some more alluring field.—Exponent.

Ypsilanti—Ypsilanti's fourth annual autumn festival will be held on Thursday and Friday, October 4 and 5 this year, and plans now already on their way to maturity assure all residents of the city and vicinity a super festival. One radical change is planned. Every merchant will be asked to show in one of his windows the produce of some one farm in the vicinity. The farmer and merchant may get together and plan a display of choice products of the farm and a card will be attached so that the many who annually view the city's autumn festival may see the choice products raised on farms in this vicinity.—Record.

Ypsilanti—Carlton Rice, employed by the Detroit Creamery, and Craig Brown, son of Attorney Lee Brown, of this city, abruptly ended their ride in a borrowed car Wednesday morning when they failed to turn off the Oak street hill onto River boulevard and crashed into a telephone pole, wrecking the car and breaking young Brown's leg. Both were taken to Beyer hospital, where Rice's wounds were dressed, and he was later released. Brown is still in the hospital. The car belongs to Chester Beal. It is completely wrecked.—Record.

Clinton—While mounting a pet horse at his home west of the village Saturday morning, Elmer Stahl was thrown about four feet over the horse's head when it reared, and was badly injured. He was taken to the U. of M. hospital at Ann Arbor by Dr. J. L. Tuttle, where it was found that both bones were broken in the leg above the ankle and about four inches above that the large bone was broken again, also that the knee and wrist were sprained. One bone penetrated the flesh, causing a wound which required nine stitches to close. Latest reports from there are that he is resting comfortably.—Local.

Manchester—An effort is being made to enroll new members and increase interest in the Wampler Lake Protective Association, organized some years ago among cottagers and others interested about the lake. At that time the association was instrumental in building the cement dam at the outlet into Mud lake, thereby maintaining the level of Wampler, and it is now proposed to take an active hand in affairs affecting lake property, such as stocking the lake with fish, looking after road matters, influencing improvement of Cedar Hill state park, etc. George Lancaster of Clinton is president and G. W. Gust of Morenci, secretary, both of whom with others are making an active canvass for members, believing that all residents and frequenters of the lake should help in a movement of this kind.—Enterprise.

"WESTBOUND LIMITED" IS EPIC OF THE RAIL

An American railroad system is the greatest in the world. No other commercial organization is as thorough and efficient in all its minute details except, possibly, Uncle Sam's gigantic mail service. A report in duplicate and triplicate is made on every little piece of business transacted on the entire road with all its branches.

When the agent receives the railroad mail he signs for it. When the engineer receives his engine from the yards and when he receives his orders for engine movement, he signs a receipt. The conductor signs for his train orders and the brakeman verifies them. No incident is too trivial to escape having complete report made of it.

Emory Johnson, the famous director-producer who filmed the great policeman picture, "In the Name of the Law," and later the stupendous fireman drama, "The Third Alarm," perceived, in the life of the railroad man a marvelous opportunity for filming an epic of the greatest commercial organization in the world, not in the actual concrete system in itself, but in the lives of the men who, by their honesty and integrity of purpose and their self-sacrifice, have been responsible for building up the organization.

Johnson has taken the life of an engineer with his unswerving loyalty in face of danger, his unfailing courage and his love of home, and built one of the most virile dramas that has ever shown on the screen, in "Westbound Limited," which will be shown at the Princess Theatre, Wednesday and Thursday, October 3 and 4.

Ralph Lewis plays the role of the veteran engineer, with Ella Hall as the feminine lead. A splendid supporting cast, including Claire McDowell, Johnny Harron, Taylor Graves, Wedgewood Nowell, David Kirby, Richard Morris and Jane Morgan, appear in the production.

Saline—What promised to be a deep, dark mystery, when Caretaker Albee of Oakwood cemetery, discovered last Friday morning that someone had buried a few inches below the surface the night before a small box containing the remains of a premature infant, was dissipated the first of the week. The remains were taken to Ann Arbor, and later the coroner issued a permit for its interment here, which was accomplished without much ado Monday evening.—Observer.

Pineknur—Mrs. George Bland has one hen shrewd enough to outwit the watchful housewife and hatch out a family of sons and daughters at this unusual hatching season. Mrs. Bland does not encourage her hens to hatch eggs in September, fearing the little chicks will have cold toes before growing large enough to take care of themselves. But this particular hen disappeared some time ago and was not noticed until one morning last week when a commotion occurred in a nearby tree, investigation showed a nest and the proud mother with ten lusty chicks. A ladder was procured and the family removed to more commodious quarters.—Dispatch.

Brighton—The ordinary traveler is not particularly observing as most of the residents north of town can tell you. Hardly a day passes but some auto driver (and some days many of them) follow M-1 north of Brighton thinking they are on M-65. They come in from Ann Arbor road and keep right on through not noticing their mistake until they get out of town a couple of miles or so. Then they stop and enquire. There is a sign in town indicating a right hand turn for M-65 but many do not see it. It seems to us that the state or Automobile Association should erect a large sign at the two points where M-16 and M-65 intersect.—Argus.

Milan—The next meeting of the Milan Chamber of Commerce will be held Friday evening, October 19th. The place of the meeting has not been definitely decided but one of the local societies will furnish the dinner. The dinner will be served at about six thirty and it is expected that every member of the organization will bring a friend to the meeting. Earl C. Michener, representative in Congress from the second district of Michigan will be one of the principle speakers. The committee of the Chamber of Commerce has been fortunate in securing Mr. Michener at this time as most of his time is spent in Washington, working on various committees and boards.—Leader.

Double Braking Efficiency Buick Four-Wheel Brakes

Buick four-wheel brakes, because they double the braking surface brought into action, increase the braking efficiency of the car practically 100 per cent.

The action is simple, positive and rapid. A slight pressure on the service pedal (the method of operation is unchanged) and all four wheels are retarded—the car is quickly, smoothly and safely brought to a stop. With these proved Buick four-wheel brakes a stop is made in a much shorter distance with a minimum of skidding danger.

Obtaining braking friction at four contacts with the road increases the braking power and lessens the wear on each brake lining and each tire.

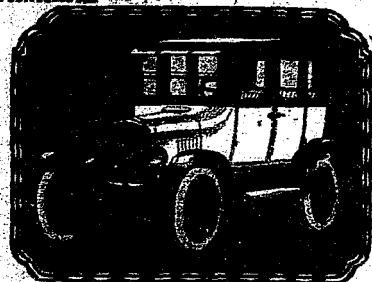

The 1924 Buick models, with four-wheel brakes, a more powerful engine, beautiful new bodies and numerous other advanced features fully exemplify the Buick policy of incorporating every improvement that will give greater safety, comfort and satisfaction to the owner.

All body fittings—window regulators, door grips, door latch levers, door lock, dome light—are finished in nickel. The upholstery carries a fine dark line on a soft brown background that also is used for the dash and door. Here is the latest thing in aeronautics. It is called the Omnivator and belongs to the ornithopter class. It reproduces the movement of the bird's wings in a smooth-running rotation instead of by a reciprocating action as is usual in this class of invention. The inventor, E. P. Johnson of Chicago, claims that his machine will ascend and descend vertically, go backwards and forwards, and stand still in the air without reversing the engine. The machine will be ready for its preliminary tests in a short time. It will be entered for the $250,000 prize offered by the British government for a practical, vertically rising machine.

CAPTAINS OF ADVENTURE

WOMEN

Two centuries ago Miss Mary Read, aged thirteen, entered the British navy as a boy. A little later she deserted, and still disguised as a boy, went soldiering, first in a line regiment, afterward as a trooper. She was very brave. On the peace of Ryswick, seeing that there was to be no more fighting, she went into the merchant service for a change, and was bound for the West Indies when the ship was gathered in by pirates. Rather than walk the plank, she became a pirate herself and rose from rank to rank until she hoisted the black flag with the grade of captain. So she fell in with Mrs. Bonny, widow of a pirate captain. The two amiable ladies, commanding each her own vessel, went into a business partnership, scuttling ships and cutting throats for years with marked success.

In the Seventeenth century an escaped nun did well as a seafaring man under the Spanish colors, ruffled as a gallant in Chili, and led a gang of brigands in the Andes. On her return to Spain as a lady, she was very much petted at the court of Madrid. The last of many female bandits was Miss Pearl Hart, who, in 1890, robbed a stagecoach in Arizona.

Mr. Murray Hall, a well-known Tammany politician and a successful business man, died in New York, and was found to be a woman.

But of women who, without disguise, have excelled in adventurous trades, I have known in Western Canada two who are gold miners and two who are cowboys. Mrs. Langdon, of California, drove a stagecoach for years. Miss Calanthy Jane was a noted Montana bull-whacker. Miss Minnie Hill and Miss Colbie French are licensed American pilots. Miss Evelyn Smith, of Nova Scotia, was a jaffer. Lady Clifford holds Board of Trade certificates as an officer in the English mercantile marine. A distinguished French explorer, Madame Dieulafoy, is an officer of the Legion of Honor, entitled to a military salute from all sentries, and has the singular right by law of wearing the dress of a man.

Several English ladies have been explorers. Miss Bird explored Japan, conquered Long's Peak, and was once captured by Mountain Jim, the Colorado robber. Lady Florence Dixie explored Patagonia. Miss Gordon-Cumming explored a hundred of the South Sea Isles, put an end to a civil war in Samoa and was one of the first travelers on the Pamirs. Mrs. Mulhall has traced the sources of the Amazons. Lady Baker, Mrs. Jane Mair, and Miss Kingsley rank among the great pioneers of Africa. Lady Hester Stanhope, traveling in the Levant, the ship being loaded with treasure, her own property, was cast away on a desert island near Rhodes. Escaping thence she traversed the Arabian deserts, and by a gathering of forty thousands of Arabs was proclaimed queen of Palmyra. This beautiful and gifted woman reigned through the first decades of the Nineteenth century from her palace on the slopes of Mount Lebanon. Two other British princesses in wild lands were Her Highness Florence, Maharane of Patiala, and the sherifa of Wazan, whose son is revered by the Moslems in North Africa as a sacred personage.

Among women who have been warriors the greatest, perhaps, were the British Queen Boadicea, and the saintly and heroic Joan of Arc, burned, to England's everlasting shame, at Rouen. Frances Scantagati, a noble Italian girl, fought with distinction as an officer in the Austrian army, once led the storming of a redoubt, and after three years in the field against Napoleon, went home, a young lady again, of sweet and mild disposition.

Doctor James Barry, M. D., inspector-general of hospitals in the British army, a duelist, a martinet, and a hopelessly insubordinate officer, died in 1866 at the age of seventy-one, and was found to be a woman.

Apart from hosts of adventurous camp followers there have been disguised women serving at different times in nearly every army. Loreta Velasquez, of Cuba, married to an American army officer, dressed up in her husband's clothes, raised a corps of volunteers, took command, was commissioned in the Confederate army during the Civil war of 1861-3, and fought as Lieutenant Harry Buford. She did extraordinary work as a spy in the northern army. After the war, her husband having fallen in battle, she turned gold miner in California.

Mrs. Christian Davies, born in 1807 in Dublin, was a happy and respectable married woman with a large family, when her life was wrecked by a sudden calamity, for her husband was seized by a press gang and dragged away to serve in the fleet. Mrs. Davies, crazy with grief, got her children adopted by the neighbors, and set off in search of the man she loved. When she returned two years later as a soldier, she found her children happy, the neighbors kind, and herself utterly unknown. She went away contented. She served under the duke of Marlborough throughout his campaigns in Europe, first as an infantry soldier, but later as a dragoon, for at the battles of Blenheim and Fontenoy she was a squadron leader of the Scots Greys. The Second dragoon guards have many curious traditions of "Mother Ross." When after twelve years' military service, she ultimately found her husband, he was busy flirting with a waitress in a Dutch inn, and she passed by, saying nothing. In her capacity as a soldier she was a flirt herself, making love to every girl she met, a gallant, a duelist, and notably brave. At last, after a severe wound, her sex was discovered and she forgave her husband. She died in Chelsea hospital at the age of one hundred and eight and her monument may be seen in the graveyard.

Hannah Snell left her home because her husband had bolted with another woman, and she wanted to find and kill him. In course of her search, she enlisted, served as a soldier against the Scots' rebellion of 1745, and once received a punishment of five hundred lashes. A series of wonderful adventures led her into service as a marine on board the British warship Swallow. After a narrow escape from foundering, this vessel joined Admiral Boscawen's fleet in the East Indies. She showed such extreme gallantry in the attack on Mauritius and in the siege of Arcacopong, that she was chosen for special work in a forlorn hope. In this fight she avenged the death of a comrade by killing the author of it with her own hands. At the siege of Pondicherry she received eleven wounds in the legs, and a ball in the body which she extracted herself for fear of revealing the secret of her sex. On her return voyage to England she heard that she need not bother about killing her husband, because he had been decently hanged for murder. So on landing at Portsmouth she revealed herself to her messmates as a woman, and one of them promptly proposed to her. She declined and went on the stage, but ultimately received a pension of thirty pounds a year, and set up as a publican at the sign of the Women in Masquerade.

Anna Mills, able seaman on board the Maidstone frigate in 1740, made herself famous for desperate valor. Mary Ann, youngest of Lord Talbot's sixteen natural children, was the victim of a wicked guardian who took her to the wars as his foot-boy. As a drummer boy she served through the campaigns in Flanders, dressing two severe wounds herself. Her subsequent masquerade as a sailor led to countless adventures. She was a seaman on a French lugger, powder monkey on a British ship of the line, fought in Lord Howe's victory and was crippled for life. Later she was a merchant seaman, after that a jeweler in London, pensioned for military service, and was last heard of as a bookseller's housemaid in 1807.

Mary Dixon did sixteen years' service, and fought at Waterloo. She was still living fifty years afterward, "a strong, powerful, old woman." Phoebe Hessel fought in the Fifth British regiment of foot, and was wounded in the arm at Fontenoy. After many years of soldiering she retired from service and was pensioned by the prince regent, George IV. A tombstone is inscribed to her memory in the old churchyard at Brighton.

In this bald record there is no room for the adventures of such military and naval heroines as prisoners of war, as leaders in battle, as victims of shipwreck, or as partakers in some of the most extraordinary love affairs ever heard of.

Hundreds of stories might be told of women conspicuous for valor, meeting hazards as great as ever have fallen to the lot of men. In one case, the casting away of the French frigate Medusa, the men, almost without exception, performed prodigies of cowardice, while two or three of the women made a wonderful journey across the Sahara desert to Senegambia, which is the one bright episode in the most disgraceful disaster on record. In the defenses of Leyden and Haarlem, besieged by Spanish armies, the Dutch women manned the ramparts with the men, inspired them throughout the hopeless months, and shared the general fate when all the survivors were butchered. And the valor of Englishwomen during the sieges of strongholds in India, China and South Africa, has made some of the brightest pages of British history.

Total Population of Two. An islet with a population of two is disclosed by the British census report for the Orkney group of islands. It is Holm of Grimstister in the bay of Forth. Other islands in the group run it very close. Hunda island, ten miles south of Kirkwall, has three, and Oupinshay, off the southeast coast, has seven. Three lighthouse stations, Skerry, Aukerry and Hellyar Holm, have three, four and six inhabitants respectively. The population of the main island is 14,063 or more than half that of the whole group. The census revealed the fact that the total population is 24,111, the smallest since the census was established, the next lowest, being 24,445 in 1901, the first census year. It was at its highest in 1901, when the figures were 22,300. Since 1891 it has steadily declined.

COOLIDGES FOND OF PLAIN FOOD

"Mac," Their Boston Waiter, Talks About Their Simple Gastronomic Tastes.

Boston, Mass.—Much has been written lately about the simple tastes and unassuming ways of Calvin Coolidge, now President of the United States, and of Mrs. Coolidge, and those who are well acquainted with them say this simplicity permeates their life. When Coolidge was governor of Massachusetts he and Mrs. Coolidge made their home at the Adams house, and their regular waiter there, "Mac," who is known to many hundreds of Bostonians, told a writer for the Boston Sunday Advertiser a lot about their gastronomic tastes. Said he:

"Their breakfast order was always the same—Two Special No. 1, grapefruit for Mrs. Coolidge and orange for me."

"Special No. 1 never varied. It consisted of two small pots of coffee, graham muffins and fruit."

"Mr. Coolidge would give the order and call for a clean glass and a whole orange. He would squeeze the orange himself into the glass, and drink the juice."

Silent at Meals.

"Mrs. Coolidge always had half a grapefruit."

"They were generally alone at breakfast, as their boys were at school and only visited them in vacation time. Once, though, when the boys were there, they wanted ham and eggs for breakfast. Mrs. Coolidge ordered it for them, but when the governor found it out, he frowned on giving the kids meat for breakfast."

"They were seldom at my table for lunch, as they were both often gone all day. But they would be back for dinner, unless they were dining out."

"Then Mrs. Coolidge used to order a chop—the way you do," interpolated "Mac," who has an uncanny memory for the likes and dislikes of every one of his patrons.

"Sometimes she would have a steak. But Mr. Coolidge always made his dinner on cereal—usually grape nuts and tea or milk."

"He was just as quiet at their family meals as he is in public life. Hardly ever said a word. Breakfast over, he would go away in silence."

"They seldom had guests, except Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Stearns, who were with them frequently."

"Sometimes there would be one or two others with them at dinner. On those occasions Mrs. Coolidge would try every way in the world to get him to join in the conversation. Nothing doing. He would look and listen, but hardly ever opened his mouth—except for his grape nuts. Once in a while he would shoot a little snarl—like this—" and for a fleeting instant "Mac" was the living image of the President.

Lapsing back to his natural expression, which is intense but amiable, "Mac" continued:

"He is a hard man to get at. If you know what I mean. But when you once do get at him, you find he has one of the best hearts in the world."

All Liked Mrs. Coolidge.

"But for kindness and a charming manner combined, Mrs. Coolidge was the one. Every waiter in the dining room liked to serve her. She was always considerate, always appreciative for anything done for her. If Mrs. Coolidge once knew you, she knew you everywhere, no matter where she happened to meet you. In the hotel corridor, or in the street, she would always bow. She's a fine woman."

"I used to look at those boys, and their good manners, and wonder how she did it. But then, bringing up six. (Six little McKenoughs, remember.)"

"I said to one of my boys the other day, 'Look at young Calvin Coolidge. His father's President of the United States, and he's looking for farm work at $3.50 a day. I suppose if I was president you'd be wanting to take it easy in the White House.'"

A Healthy Climate.

"You must go to the healthiest neighborhood you can find," said the eminent specialist to Mr. Forsythe. "And when you get there you must stay there for six months and have a thoroughly good rest."

In due course Mr. Forsythe arrived at the seaside town he had selected and inquired of one of the old inhabitants if it was a really healthy neighborhood.

"Well, you see me," said the old man, who was a fine specimen of health and vigor "when I came here I couldn't walk across the room and I hadn't the strength to utter a simple word. I had scarcely a hair on my head and I had to be lifted on and off the bed."

"Ah, you give me hope," said the invalid. "How long have you been here?"

"I was born here," was the reply.

Missing Links.

The owner of a coconut plantation has trained a monkey to climb the trees and gather the nuts. But that is too much like his usual occupation to count for much. In China they had done better than that a century ago, for there they had been trained to pull rhabarb and gather rice. In Abyssinia they had similar torch-bearers for supper parties, but the station master at Uitenhage, a small wayward station in Cape Colony, did better and trained a baboon to act as signalman and work the switches.

PICTURE these shingles in non-fading tile red, sea green, blue black. Imagine what a beautiful roof they make—in solid colors or in combinations.

Then remember that the tapered shape is due to heavy butts built up of extra coats of everlasting asphalt. The taper doubles the thickness of the exposed portion of your roof and but slightly increases the weight.

Is it any wonder fifteen years of weather fail to harm a roof of Winthrop's—made in Michigan for Michigan weather.

Foolish Advice.
The fussy dentist was examining the teeth of the patient, and assured an air of great wisdom.

"Do you ever clean your teeth?" he inquired, as he pried and poked.

"Yes," replied the patient.

"How many times a day?" pursued the dentist.

"Twice," was the answer.

"Have you had any advice before with regard to your teeth?"

"Yes, I called on a doctor last night."

"And what foolish advice did he give you?"

"He told me to come to you!"

Three other smaller California towns also were burned, all the conflagrations originating in forest fires.

Lansing—Suicide was held a compensable injury under the workmen's compensation act in a unique ruling made by the state department of labor and industry. Chauncey M. The department ruled that death was due to an injury incurred in the course of employment and that his dependents are entitled to compensation.

MRS. COFFMAN ILL SEVEN YEARS

Saved from an Operation by Lydia
E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sidell, Ill.—"I was a nervous wreck. I was suffering from a pain in my left side, which was almost unbearable, and I could not even let the bed clothing rest on my body at night. I had been sick for seven years, but not so bad until the last eighteen months, and had become so run-down that I cared for nobody, and would rather have died than live. I couldn't do my work without help, and the doctors told me that an operation was all there was left. I was brought to a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and begged me to take it. I have taken fourteen bottles of it and I feel ten years younger. Life is full of hope. I do all my housework and had a large garden this year. I never will be without the Vegetable Compound in the house, and when my two little girls reach womanhood I intend to teach them to take it. I am never too busy to tell some suffering sister of my help, and you can use my name and letter to spread the good news of Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine."—Mrs. Ida M. Coffman, R. B. 2, Sidell, Ill.

POULTRY

Avoid Overcrowding of Chicken House in Fall

Overcrowding of poultry houses, which generally means overeating, and is likely to cause colds and finally roup, is strongly deprecated by poultrymen of University Farm, A. G. Smith, in charge of the division of poultry husbandry, says:

"Because of the noticeable change in living conditions—from colony coops and free range to the poultry house and confinement—the young birds are timid and group themselves together in corners against the walls and partitions on the floors and roost platforms. The birds become too warm while so closely grouped and, consequently, chill easily when they separate. To correct this habit, house only a few birds at a time. When these few become sufficiently accustomed to their quarters to take to the roost, house more birds, as these first in the winter shelter will act as teachers to those that follow.

"Until early winter sets in give all the air possible from one direction and do not subject the birds to a draft. In short, make the changes between the range and the winter quarters as gradual as possible. Provide a light loose litter of straw or leaves in which the fowls can get the exercise necessary to maintain health. Succulent food must be supplied as the birds are cut off from the green food of the range."

Cut Bone Necessary to Provide Balanced Ration

One pound of cut bone for a dozen hens every day is just about right. On farms the cost for bones should be little or nothing, yet some folks think it does not pay to procure a bone cutter. This is a mistake. Bone cutters are now cheaper than many ordinary garden tools and are strong, durable and efficient. The cost of the cutter is an investment soon returned by the increased number of eggs laid. It is almost indispensable in providing fowls with a balanced ration. The regular use of bone also effects a great saving in the quantity of grain feeds necessary for the flock.

Chickens Self-Feeders When Given Free Range

Chickens will "pick up" a good part of their living from waste that otherwise would never become of any value. They will feed themselves, to an extent, from grass, weeds, insects and crumbs, and small scraps, that if not eaten by chickens, would not become of food value to man. They will eat the eggs and larvae from which come various destructive insects, particularly orchard pests. In some orchards where chickens range, the brown-tail moth has almost disappeared, while nearby orchards, where chickens do not run, are damaged by the pest.

Guinea Fowl Does Well With Little Attention

Guinea fowl might well be bred in the United States more extensively, either along with other poultry or in larger numbers by themselves. The varieties have been improved in recent years and there is reason to believe that the improvement will continue and breeding them will become an increasingly important branch of the poultry industry. The birds do well on comparatively little food in addition to what they will gather if allowed to range.

Egg Production Depends Greatly Upon Protein

Egg production depends more upon the amount and kind of protein eaten than upon any other feed. Hens are naturally grain eaters and will do well on almost any grain mixture if they have milk or meat scrap to go with it. By holding most of the whole grain until the night feeding, you keep the hens hungry and thus force them to exercise and eat the more concentrated protein feed through the day.

POULTRY NOTES

Do not handle the chicks by unnatural restrictions. Let them hustle.

Keep all young poultry thrifty and growing. The profitable fowl is not the sick one made well, but the healthy one kept healthy.

Lousy fowls will not lay, and will require much more feed to keep in good condition than those free from the pests.

Hens like a dark nest for laying in. If a covered nest is used, it is well to have it face the wall, and to have a slanting cover, to prevent roosting.

Always keep in mind that the constitutional strength and vigor of the flock must be kept up to a certain standard that the fowls may have the necessary power of disease resistance.

Forecasting Big Help to Farmers

Statement of What May Be Expected to Happen Based Upon Present Conditions.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"Agricultural forecasting by public agencies will put farmers more nearly on an even basis with those in other industries in deciding whether to continue in accordance with their old plans or readjust their production, owing to permanent changes which may have taken place in marketing conditions," says Dr. Henry C. Taylor, chief of the bureau of agricultural economics of the Department of Agriculture.

"In periods of unsettled economic conditions, agricultural forecasting is of great importance," says Doctor Taylor. "The great war has thrown economic relations out of equilibrium. The agricultural depression has resulted in efforts on the part of the farmers to improve their situation through readjustments.

"Forecasting can be viewed not only from the standpoint of the individual farmer and the merchant dealing in farm products, but also from the national point of view—the supply of food and raw materials for the nation throughout a series of years. From the individual point of view, forecasting is the basis of wise farm management and marketing.

Basis of Policy.
"From the national point of view it is the basis of a national agricultural policy. From the latter point of view agricultural forecasting centers about the question of the right utilization of land—how much should be used for each of the cultivated crops, how much for forestry and how much for parks and playgrounds in order that the maximum of national well-being may be attained.

"Frequent changes in the sources of supply, quantities produced and the consequent changes in prices of farm products lead to a desire for a better basis of judgment than most farmers now have when projecting their plans for the coming year," says Doctor Taylor. "This has led various agencies to attempt to supply this need by making forecasts of what is likely to happen. A forecast is a statement of what may be expected to happen, based upon present conditions and observations interpreted in the light of previous experience and is the basis of planning beforehand what action to take in order to secure a desired end.

"Farmers of necessity make forecasts. In the light of their knowledge of the physical and economic environment they decide what they will undertake to do for the coming year—how much land they will use, the average they will put into each of the various crops and the live stock they will keep as a part of the farming operations. Merchants who deal in farm products give even more attention to agricultural forecasting than do farmers themselves. In so far as the economic factors are concerned farmers too generally determine how much they will produce next year of a given crop on the basis of present prices rather than prospective prices. As a result they have often planted high-priced seed in increased quantities and sold the increased quantities of product at low prices and, in turn, planted lightly of low-priced seeds and had a small production to sell at high prices.

Supply and Demand.
"The buyers of farm products take into account not only produce on hand, but the probable future supply of the product which may be forthcoming. If there is a 10 per cent surplus of the product of one year to be carried over to the next year, the buyer of this surplus naturally makes the price he is willing to pay upon the probable price he will be able to secure the next year and this he bases on the forecast of what will probably be produced the next year.

"While forecasts have always been made by farmers and merchants and will continue to be made, it is believed that agricultural forecasting can be made more accurate by bringing to bear historical and statistical methods of collecting materials which will add to the accuracy of this forecasting.

"A knowledge of present trends in production and prices in the light of past experience will add greatly to the accuracy of forecasting. Furthermore, knowledge of the intentions of others who are simultaneously figuring on making readjustments, will improve the basis of passing judgment. The purpose of agricultural forecasting is the wise guidance of production in order that there may continue to be a proper balance between the various lines of production and between agriculture and other industries."

Pullet Characteristics Denoting Good Layer

Any one who has studied and understands judging beef cattle will have but little difficulty in understanding the characteristics that a pullet destined to be a good laying fowl must possess. She must be built with a somewhat rectangular shape—much on the same order as is desired in a fine beef steer. Her back should be broad and flat on top, with the sides deep.

Her head should be neat and trim, with no hint of masculinity about it. It should be short and broad, with a short, well-curved beak and a bright eye.

Direction for Tanning Leather and Fur Skins

Farmer Can Make Use of Hides Produced on Farm.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Directions for tanning hides on the farm are given in a new bulletin just published by the United States Department of Agriculture, and issued as Farmers' Bulletin 1234, "Home Tanning of Leather and Small Fur Skins." This bulletin was prepared in response to the thousands of requests received from farmers for information that will enable them to make use of the hides produced on their farms and for which there is often no market. Sometimes hides can scarcely be given away, yet farmers must pay from $1 to $1.50 a pound for leather in small pieces. Under such conditions farmers naturally feel that they must either work up their raw materials or do without the finished leather.

While it is possible to do a fairly satisfactory job of tanning on the farm, it requires some skill and a considerable amount of experience. Only in the event that the margin of price between the raw hide and the finished product is such as to warrant the farmer in tanning for himself is it advisable to attempt home tanning. The inexperienced cannot hope to make leather equal in appearance, or possibly in quality, to that obtainable on the market, but farmers and ranchmen should be able to make serviceable leather for most farm purposes by carefully following the directions given in the bulletin.

It is never advisable for an inexperienced person to try to tan valuable fur skins or large hides to be made into coats, robes, or rugs. The results would be disappointing, both in appearance and quality. Small fur skins of low market value, however, can be tanned for home or country use, according to directions given in the bulletin, a copy of which may be obtained from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, as long as the supply lasts.

Moderate Pruning Each Year Will Help Cherries

Probably there is no commonly grown fruit tree that is so little pruned as the cherry, unless it is the quince. This is not viewed as neglect by the fruit growers but rather as an unnecessary operation. It is partly due also to the fact that the cherry is likely to throw out a mass of gum wherever the bark is injured or mutilated. But as a matter of fact, the cherry will respond to a moderate pruning, just as does any other fruit tree.

When the centers of the trees become thick and the twigs and branches throughout the inner area of the trees are seriously shaded it results in unfruitful and dying branches. Also, what fruit is borne is likely to run small in size. It has been observed that cherry trees (both sweet and sour) which are left unpruned and underfed are likely to produce spurs which are irregular in their bearing.

For proper functioning of the cherry tree it is necessary to have good light conditions, and any impairment of the foliage weakens the tree. It is well known that the cherry tree should be planted very early in the spring or else late in the fall, so that it becomes established as soon as possible. This is partly due to the dependence the tree places upon the leaves as soon as they are put out.

Therefore the cherry tree, contrary to popular belief, should be given a moderate pruning each year or every other year, opening up the tree so that light can penetrate to all parts. This applies particularly to the trees which are found in the door yard of so many city, suburban and country homes.

Cows on Scant Pasture Need Mixture of Grain

Whether or not to feed moderate amounts of grain ration to producing cows on pasture is entirely a matter of judgment on the part of the feeder. Wise dairymen will play safe and add an inexpensive grain mixture, especially late in the summer when pastures are dried down. Cows that are dry will benefit to a great extent by this plan, care being taken not to pile up excess flesh beyond the acceptable condition for dairy cows due to freshen in the fall. In any event the rate of grain to correspond with a milk flow is much less under average summer conditions on pasture than for winter stable feeding. High producing cows, or cows due to calve in the fall, should not be allowed to get into a run-down condition, and so the short pasture season is a critical period in the year's cycle.

On ordinary pastures oats with corn or barley will furnish the bulk of the grain mixture, but when pastures get short one must reckon on adding bran and oilseed in limited amounts.

Feeding Screenings Is Most Harmful Practice

If you buy screenings for the chickens it does not pay to feed them over a large area that may be used for gardening. The screenings may bring you the finest collection of variegated weeds that your garden has ever grown. It also pays to use precautions in the scratch feed that is scattered on the range for young stock. If the mixture contains weed seeds a lot of the weeds may be left on the range to cause future work of eradication.

DAIRY

Best Feed Is Essential Even With Dairy Cows

The best results from dairying follow the combination of good cows, and the right feeds. Without a correctly balanced ration even a good cow cannot yield profitable returns. Because of this fact the dairy specialists at the Missouri College of Agriculture are able to put dollars into the pockets of the dairymen who will apply their recommendations.

"Profitable production in dairying must begin with the feed," says E. M. Harmon, extension dairy specialist. "Without the right feeds no animal can make milk and butterfat efficiently, no matter what her breeding. It is essential to have balance in the ration. The cow's body and her product—milk—are both made up primarily of four kinds of constituents: Water, protein, carbohydrates (and fats), and mineral matter.

"The water supply is of utmost importance. As a general rule the mineral requirements will be satisfied if plenty of legume hays are fed. This leaves the protein and carbohydrate requirements to be satisfied. Either of these cannot replace the other any more than the air in an automobile tire can replace the gasoline in the tank.

"Some feeds are high in protein while others are high in carbohydrates. If we feed more of one than necessary to balance with the other the excess will simply go to waste. For instance an average farm ration of 25 pounds of corn silage, 5 pounds timothy hay, 4 pounds of corn chop and 1 pound of wheat bran supplies enough carbohydrates to maintain the body requirements of a 1,000-pound cow and produce 20 pounds of milk. It supplies only enough protein, however, to produce 4 pounds of milk after maintaining the body.

"By substituting a legume hay for the timothy, adding a pound of cottonseed meal and a pound of bran and reducing the corn chop to 3 pounds we get a ration that will supply just the right amounts of both protein and carbohydrates to maintain the cow's body and produce 20 pounds of milk."

Dairy Farmers See Need of Well Built Ice House

The dairy farmers who smile during the hot days are those who had the foresight to lay in a supply of ice last winter.

Many other dairymen now see the advantage of having a large, cheap supply of ice to keep their milk cooled and are therefore thinking of erecting their own icehouses. A good house can be built on the following plan, says E. H. Gross, professor of rural engineering at the New Jersey State College of Agriculture:

The floor should be pebbles or gravel to afford drainage. The foundation of masonry or concrete should extend well into the ground and the capacity of the house will be increased if the floor is placed at the bottom of the foundation. Make the foundation 9 to 12 inches thick. Use 2 by 4 inch studding, with sheathing, building paper and weather boarding outside. Sheathing alone on the inside will make a good house, but it is still better if the inside wall is constructed of two layers of boarding—sheathing against the studding, and the sheathing covered with tongue-and-grooved boarding, with a layer of paper in between. An ordinary shingle roof left open at the eaves and with a ventilator at the ridge completes the building. One and one-half to two tons of ice is needed for each cow. One ton occupies 50 cubic feet.

The packing of the ice is probably the most important of the things to be observed in ice storage. The ice must be cut evenly so it will pack closely, and crevices should be filled with chipped ice. The ice block, if properly packed, is practically one solid mass of ice. On top, bottom and all sides of the ice, pack not less than 12 inches of sawdust, chopped straw or other insulating material.

Income From Hogs.
Savvy the summer and early fall farrowed pigs, with a view to adding 100 pounds to their January weight and selling during late March at a weight of 200 pounds or better assures an income at a time when farm receipts are light and the price for hogs usually good.

Three Hog Essentials.
Good judgment, a fertile soil and labor are three essentials to success in raising hogs. Omit any one of these and the venture will stand up like a three-legged stool with a leg missing.

Get Rid of Culls.
Cull out those that show signs of ailment and disease. Get rid of them.

Cost to Feed Mongrels.
It does not cost any more to feed pure breeds than it does the mongrel or mixed type. In the case of the mongrels there is no uniformity in size, shape or color of the eyes and they will never bring a premium for hatching purposes, as do the eggs of pure breeds.

Mash for Young Ducks.
Young ducks should be fed a mash without the grain ration until they are well matured. An important part of the ration is a good grit.

OLD CUSTOMS SEEM CURIOUS

Common Plates and Cups Were Once Shared—Fought for the Biggest Share.

Noble families in England in the Middle Ages shared common plates and cups, used fingers instead of forks, licked their plates, wiped their teeth on the tablecloth, and scrambled for the largest portion, says the Detroit News. Books on etiquette issued in the fifteenth century pointed out that these things were not good manners. The art of cooking in the Middle Ages flourished, however, cooks excelling at artistic and rich confectionery.

Punching in medieval times was true to its name. Dancers really moved with nimbleness and agility instead of slowly posturing round the room in the manner of modern dancers. The noble and his family and servants lived and slept in the great hall of the castle, with next to no privacy. A better sense of things evolved gradually, more rooms being added and more windows put in, insuring greater seclusion for the lord and his family.

How She Felt About It.
Mrs. Carter dropped in at the office for a few minutes' chat with her husband.

"John," she remarked, "I think you had better discharge that stenographer you have now. I am sure she has been trying to flirt with you ever since she has been here."

Mrs. Carter, when she said this thought the stenographer was surely out of her mind—but she wasn't! She stepped to the door of the private office and vented her indignation.

"Madame, I'll have you know that I wouldn't flirt with your old husband for a million dollars!"

Mrs. Carter was abashed.
"Now, John," she exclaimed, "you simply must discharge that girl. She has insulted you!"—Kansas City Star.

DODGE BROTHERS TOURING CAR

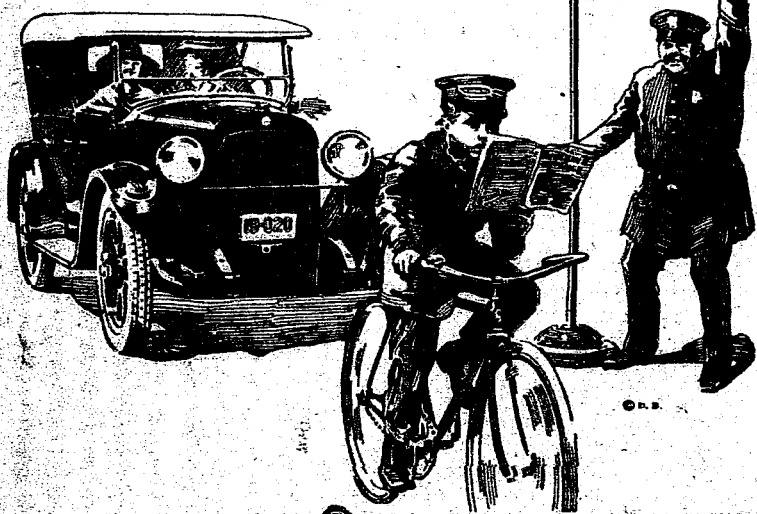

In city traffic or on the open road, this new touring car impresses you instantly with its exceptional riding comfort.

The seats are deeper and lower. The body has been lengthened to afford more leg-room. Its low-swinging design reduces side sway and increases the car's stability at all speeds.

The front springs are wider, and built of more, and thinner leaves; the rear springs—now underslung—have been materially increased in length.

In fact, the comfort of the car is comparable in every way with its good looks and the well known character of its performance.

NEED GOOD SEED TO BOOST WHEAT PROFIT

Securing highest yielding varieties for planting in their localities, and following cultural methods which will give maximum returns, are practices which Michigan wheat growers must follow in order to increase yields per acre and lessen the cost price per bushel, especially in view of present price levels, according to Prof. J. F. Cox, head of the M. A. C. farm crops department.

"Planting good seed on a good seed bed is the surest way of guaranteeing the best possible returns from the wheat crop," says Cox, in discussing the present wheat situation.

"Fortunately there is an unusually good supply of high class Red Rock and American Banner seed wheat available in the state. The Red Rock is a bearded, red winter variety of unusually good yielding ability on fertile loams and clay loams, soils ordinarily known as 'good wheat lands.' This wheat is Michigan's leading variety from the standpoint of milling quality."

"The American Banner is a winter hardy, beardless white wheat. It is better adapted than Red Rock to soils high in organic matter and to soils somewhat depleted in fertility. The Nigger and Egyptian, bearded red winter wheats, are highly esteemed by farmers and millers in many Michigan localities."

"For best results, wheat should be planted as early as it is possible in any particular locality in order to avoid the Hessian Fly and yet make good top growth before winter. The use of from 200 to 300 pounds of acid phosphate nearly always gives excellent returns with wheat. The treatment of seed wheat with formaldehyde to prevent smut is a practice which has come into general use among leading wheat growers. Failure to treat for stinking smut exposes the crop to the possibility of serious loss."

M. A. C. TO OPEN FOR SIXTY-SIXTH YEAR

The Michigan Agricultural College will open its doors to the young men and women of the state on Wednesday, September 26, for the sixty-sixth consecutive year since the state college was founded in 1857. Registration for freshmen will be held on September 24 and for upper classmen on September 15.

Advance registration figures available at the office of the college registrar this week indicate that the attendance this year will equal or exceed the best previous mark in the history of the school. More than 1,700 regular four-year students, in addition to several hundred special winter agricultural course and summer school students, were enrolled during the past year, and an even larger attendance is looked for this fall.

The agricultural course, the oldest at M. A. C., and the one from which the college takes its name, is expected as usual to draw a large proportion of the students, as is the engineering division. These two courses accounted for more than 1,000 of last year's enrollment. Home economics, forestry, veterinary medicine and applied science courses have also had many advance registrations.

The applied science division, first established two years ago, is expected to show the largest percentage increase, while reports show that more girls than ever will elect work under the home economics branch of the institution.

A number of minor changes in the college faculty have been announced for the year, while Miss Jean Krueger, new dean of home economics, and Harrison R. Hunt, newly appointed professor of zoology, will take office with the opening of the college year.

Cold Comfort.
It is an extraordinary fact that men buried in an avalanche of snow hear distinctly every word uttered by those who are seeking for them, while their most strenuous shouts fail to penetrate even a few feet of the snow.

Comes Down Slowly.
The resistance to the air is greatly increased by its shape. The modern one-man parachute, made of silk, varies from 18 to 30 feet in diameter, is slightly concave on the lower side and offers sufficient resistance to the air, so that when carrying a man, the rate of decent will not be more than 15 to 20 feet per second.

IMPORTANT CHANGES MADE

IN TEACHING STAFF

A number of important changes have been made in the teaching staff of the University School of Music, Ann Arbor, Michigan. Late in June by joint action of the Board of Directors of the University School of Music and the Regents of the University of Michigan Earl V. Moore was elected musical director of the University Musical Society in both its branches, the School of Music and the Choral Union Concert Series, and also professor of Music in the University succeeding to the dual position held so many years by Dr. Albert A. Stanley. Mr. Moore's promotion has met with a wave of approval not only locally but throughout the country. During the years that he has been associated with Dr. Stanley as assistant and later as assistant professor of music and acting conductor of the Choral Union, he has won much commendation, and competent authorities look upon him as one of the outstanding musical administrators of the day.

Mrs. Maude Okkelberg of the piano faculty and Otto J. Stahl of the piano and theory faculties, both of whom have been spending the last year in special study abroad, have returned to Ann Arbor and will resume their former duties.

Oran Lathard, a distinguished 'cello virtuoso, has been engaged for this department. She is a gold medal graduate of the New England Conservatory, has had several years' experience in concert work and as a teacher with distinguished success.
Her coming to Ann Arbor will add an important factor to local music circles.

James Hamilton for several years a member of the voice faculty, but who for three years has been engaged in concert work with headquarters in Chicago, has been induced to rejoin the vocal staff. Mr. Hamilton was an exceedingly successful and popular teacher as well as a favorite singer. Those who remember him will be delighted to know that he is to make Ann Arbor his permanent home. During the three years that he has elapsed since he left Ann Arbor, he has sung in practically every state in the Union, particularly in the West. During the past summer he traveled over eleven thousand miles and visited 126 cities including Chicago, St. Louis, New Orleans, Pasadena, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Kansas City, Seattle, Portland and the larger music centers of the West. He has also filled engagements with the Apollo Music Club of Chicago, the Evanston Musical Union and the Haydn Choral Society of Chicago.

The heavy enrollment predicted, not only of students who assemble from all parts of the country to specialize in music, but also University and high school students and other local musicians who desire to continue their work, indicates that the staff of instructors will all be exceedingly busy.

Director Moore and Samuel P.
Lockwood conductor of the Symphony Orchestra will both make announcements shortly regarding tryouts and rehearsals, etc., for members of the Choral Union and the Orchestra both of which organizations will take a prominent part in the season's concert activities.

A Hard Situation.

There are a few things more embarrassing than having your grocery drive up while you are paying for gasoline.

The Arab horse is said to be the records can be traced back for 13,000

CAPITOL SAVINGS & LOAN

COMPANY GAIN $1,600,000

We are in receipt of the 67th
Semi-Annual Report of the Capitol Savings & Loan Company of Lansing for the year ending June 30th.

This Company was organized 33½ years ago for the purpose of encouraging the habit of thrift, of saving, and to promote home ownership through loaning such savings to deserving people on an easy monthly payment plan in order that they might become home owners and thereby better American citizens.

During this time they have helped thousands of people to become home owners and have encouraged thousands more to become SAVERS instead of SPENDERS and have paid them the interest or earnings on their Savings twice a year, January 1st and July 1st, just as regularly as the seasons come and go.

The Company's Semi-Annual Report shows that their business has continued to grow and increase in volume year after year until their total assets are now $7,356,000, a gain of over a million dollars during the past year. They also made 1341 home-building loans, amounting to nearly three million dollars. The net earnings or profits for the year were over $350,000, out of which the holders of 5 and 6 per cent certificates were paid their interest or earnings in cash and the balance was divided between the holders of cumulative certificates and the borrowers who again received better than 7 per cent on their money.

SLEEPING MONSTER

AGAIN AWAKENED?

"Let sleeping dogs alone," may be a time worn though trusty slogan but when the dogs show signs of action, then it is time to take heed. Tuberculosis warnings issued by the State Department of Health must seem rather out of date in view of the splendid success Michigan has realized in its campaign against the disease, but in the absence of scrupulous care, the scourge does break out from time to time.

Alpena county reports a curious case where the common safeguards were indifferently practised and a tuberculosis harvest is just beginning to be realized. During the past two years, two sisters who had taught at a rural school were both found to be suffering from the disease. Examination of 26 pupils in the school last May revealed 11 charted as positive or suspected cases.
Two of these were definitely tuberculosis while the remaining 9 ran daily fever. The enrollment on September 5 was 36 pupils. Of this number, 35 were examined by Dr.
John I. Pinckney of the State Health Clinic and 14 were found to be positive or suspected cases. Of considerable importance is the fact that 6 new children all have normal temperatures at present. Will they too have to bear the burden of this inexcusable bit of carelessness?

The State Department of Health has the matter under advisement.
A full report was sent in by Dr.
Pinckney and his recommendations were forwarded to the heads of the school district. These include suggestions that the school be conducted as an open air school, that there be rest periods and that the school be placed under the direct supervision of a physician.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

CHILDREN'S BILLET

The playground of the American Legion is an organization, within the Legion, known as the Forty-and-Eight. It takes its name from the French cars which were made to accommodate forty men or eight horses.

At the various American Legion meetings and conventions the members of the Forty-and-Eight society hold separate gatherings and enjoy much fun by means of their unique forms of initiation and drill entertainment, reminiscent of life in France.

Recently, the American Legion Children's Billet Committee, which conducts child welfare work for the orphans of men who gave their lives in the service of the country, was interviewed by Mike Murray, Grande Chef de Gare, or, grand chief of train, who is the leading Forty-and-Eightier in the state, with a view of ascertaining what the Forty-and-Eight can do for the orphaned children. He said that the members of his organization were not satisfied to exist just for fun, but wished to make a contribution to some worthy cause.

An arrangement was immediately entered into whereby this organization will stand sponsor for a certain number of kiddies at the Children's Billet, and will add very materially to the funds of the Legion for carrying on this worthy work.

The beautiful new home being erected at Otter Lake for the orphaned children is rapidly nearing completion, and will be dedicated the latter part of October.

A Ponderous Query.

Another problem is whether an elephant takes the point on his own account or has the point on a bill.

Of Today.

Our better selves, our ideals, are of no time, but our faults are personal responsibilities and strictly contemporary. John W. Winkler in the Littell.
