"BILL"

From the number who turned out at the meeting called for the organization of a football team for Chelsea, there evidently are not many sports or players here. Chelsea should be no different from any other town of its size or even bigger. It should be the best little town between Detroit and Chicago and with the right kind of push there is no reason why it cannot be recognized as such by all.

It isn't alone a football team that will bring about such a feeling, but it is just such things that help to advertise the place and make it more popular. Last year Chelsea had a state championship basketball team, that brought great credit to this place, but Chelsea did not seem to realize the value of this.

What is more, and what is all, that is needed is real true organization and a spirit of push. The opportunity will no doubt soon present itself, whereby all may be able to lend a helping hand to help push. When this opportunity comes, let's all be ready to do our share and get into the machine that should help all. It will do away with petty grievances and feelings, it will soften hard spots and will do a great deal to bring about cooperation in place of discol.

By all this is not meant that Chelsea is not all right. It certainly is a wonderful place and one that we can be proud of. We have nothing to be ashamed of when we say we're from Chelsea, but instead we can be mighty proud.

A first step was taken by the village officials only a short time ago, as a first move toward helping the village. This was the sign to be erected at the intersection of the two state trunk lines south of town. This one step is a real one toward the desired end.

Most of the pupils of the high school when asked, outside of school of course, if they stacked the books, seemed to say yes. Just why they would all want to take credit for such a matter, and yet not mean what they are saying is hard to believe. But of course, you never can tell, possibly the whole school did it, but if they did they certainly are an innocent looking bunch.

The parties connected with the deed are evidently keeping rather quiet about it. But the hard part of it with the guilty ones, is the fear and the guilty conscience that bothers them at night and during the day. They no doubt have their fears or they are extremely different from normal persons.

They may be having a hot time over in Germany, and military rule etc. with a military director at the head. But right down in Oklahoma they are having just about as hot a time. As yet they have not had to kill anyone or injure them but things get so warm that it almost looks as though there would almost be war. The Governor evidenced his power when the solemn of the lower house endeavored to assemble, but decided to call off their senate, and let the matter rest with able lawyers who could use glib tongues in settling the whole affair.

We still have plenty of straw hats floating around and it brings to mind the fact that September is almost over with. As in any community one is apt to find things out of season and straw hats are rather that way now. A question that has arisen many times no doubt when some of the old time grass covers are seen is, "How old is that one?" Some of them probably have histories that would require hours to tell, and others, well, we'd hate to have to listen to them.

When William Hale wrote his famous book, "A Man Without a Country," he caused much comment, because such a thing seemed impossible. Since that time many such men have been found and the latest Afanasay Severny, an anarchist, who admits it, and a "Man without a country." He is being held in Detroit under a $2,000 bond awaiting the federal grand jury on a charge of violating the immigration laws.

Severny has been in the jails of five nations all of which have deported him. He was deported from the United States in 1921 to Russia as an anarchist. Russia kicked him out as did Poland, Ukraine and other countries. He recently was caught in Canada and escaped to the United States again. Rather a hard life for such a fellow, but if he were wise, he'd find a good island somewhere, preferably down in the South Sea, and there he could, 'try to get along.'

MAKES FIRST ONE-MAN VOYAGE ACROSS ATLANTIC

Frenchman Battles Storms, Hunger, Thirst and Illness in 142 in 142 Day Trip From Gibraltar To New York.

New York, Sept. 27.—Some place beneath the name of Columbus in the marine hall of fame, must be recorded the name of Alain J. Gerbault, Laval, France, 1923. The 29-year-old Frenchman sailed into New York Harbor this week in a thirty-foot sail boat—the first man ever to cross the Atlantic alone in such a small wind-driven craft.

For 142 days, battling storm, hunger, thirst and illness Gerbault kept a spark of confidence burning. He sailed from Gibraltar April 5 and arrived in New York September 17. With the cup of victory still at his lips, he paused to say, "and now to cross the Pacific."

Alain J. Gerbault is a soldier of fortune. When two friends at Paris doubted his assertion that the Atlantic could be sailed by one man in a 30-foot boat, he decided to show them.

Gerbault is the fifth ranking tennis player of France and has contested in international matches. During the war, as a French aviator, he is credited with bringing down ten German planes. Only Alain and a brother remain of the Gerbault family. They own a lime factory at Laval, France. The brother is the business man.

"Just call me a sailor," said Gerbault here this morning. "The sea is my home—and I'll soon be heading out across the Pacific. Hazardous? I don't think so. You always pull through somehow, if you handle your boat like a sailor should."

Veteran mariners declare Gerbault's feat one of the most daring and unique in the annals of the sea. Ninety-seven days he was out of sight of land, tossed about on mountainous waves in a boat whose deck dipped under when four men crowded onto her after he docked here Monday.

Battled Great Storm.

Forty-eight hours he lay sprawled in the bunk of his tiny cabin, unconscious from a fever which struck him down during a gale which battered the little craft, sweeping her deck clean of rigging and flooding the dozen or so feet of cabin space.

Twenty-four days he battled the fury of the Atlantic which broke his bowsprit, loosened his mast and ripped his sails—a storm which reached cyclonic heights and was reported some weeks ago at the time by incoming transatlantic liners.

Provisions he'd stocked for a 100-day trip run low two weeks from New York because of delay by terrific gales while beating his way across the southern portion of the Atlantic. Two-thirds of his water spoiled and was cast overboard, poisoned by the wood in the newly made kegs.

Two weeks ago, when crazed by thirst and lack of food he was hailed by a great ocean liner bound for New York, which wanted to pick him up—or at least tow him in. He thanked the captain but refused. Victory was in sight. He was given provisions and left to his fate.

Never Thought of Failure.

Lose hope? Not this sailorman Gerbault.

"During the height of that twenty-four day storm my mast was battered loose, my bowsprit broken and I was drenched to the skin, which brought about the fever, but I always figured that if the worst should happen—the mast toppling—I'd rig up something with a sail and put in for nearest land, Bermuda. The twenty-fifth day, about the middle of July, however, the storm subsided and I continued for New York. I rebuilt the bowsprit, tightened the mast, mended the rigging and sailed on. I knew I'd reach New York somehow."

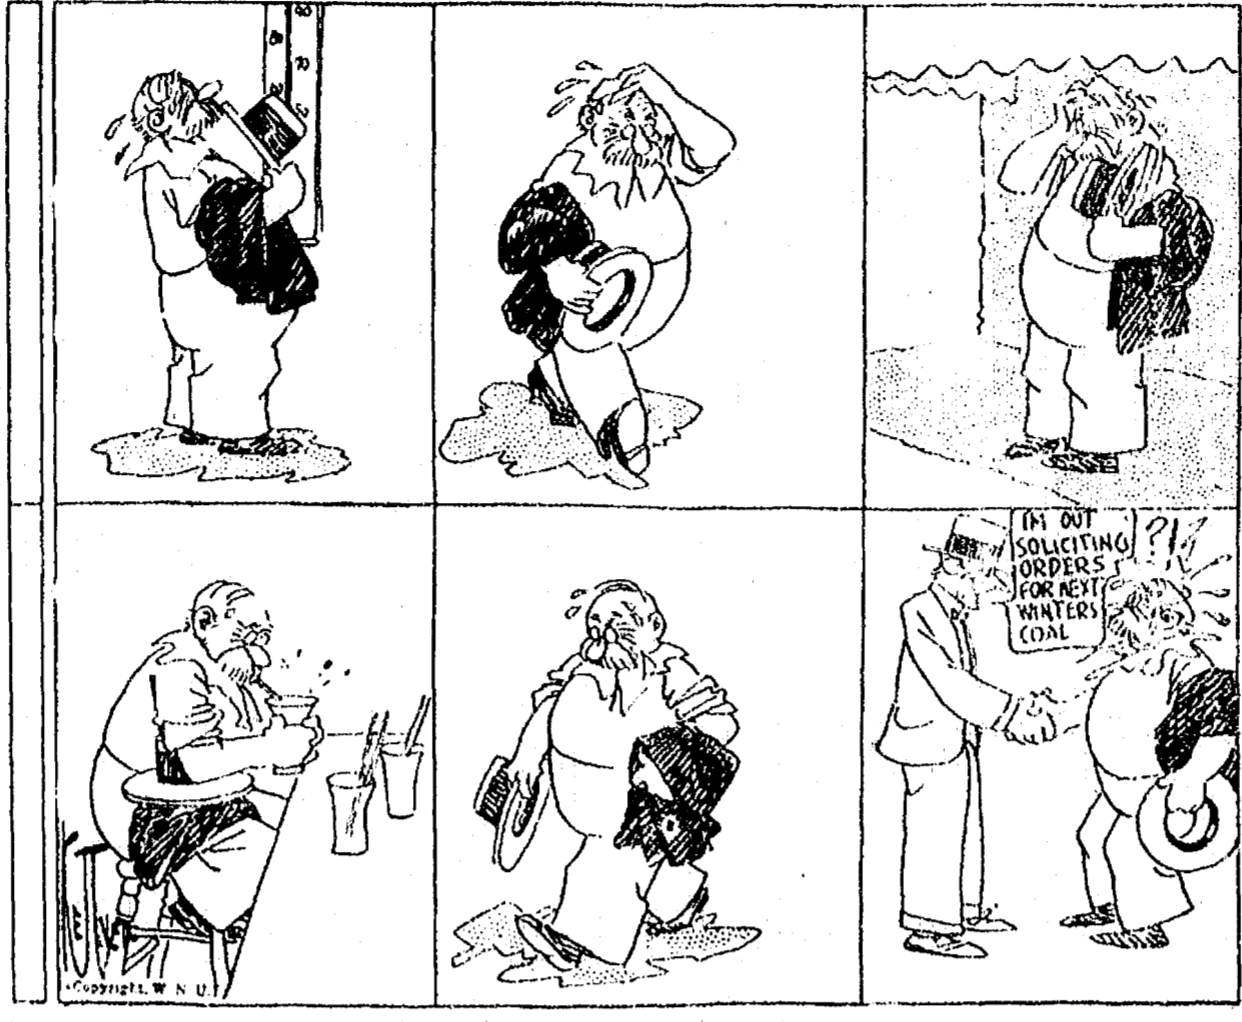

Coming over he wore only heavy woolen trousers, a slipover sweater; no socks or shoes. Since April 5, when he started his trip from Gibraltar, he had been barefooted. Doesn't like any kind of footwear while handling his boat.

STARTS NEW BUSINESS IN CHELSEA.

For some time past Verne Evans has been engaged in the making of cobblestone boxes and ornaments. He recently leased the portion of the building formerly used by the Belsor Welding Co., and expects to start manufacturing his products at once. He will make all kinds of cobblestone ornaments, such as flower boxes, baskets, monuments, etc. He has several orders booked at the present time and among them are two boxes by parties in Canton, Ohio. Mr. Evans' interesting exhibit at the Washtenaw County Fair attracted considerable attention.

LEGION CO-OPERATION

One of the very pleasant features of the American Legion's campaign in behalf of the kiddies of their fallen buddies has been the almost unanimous cooperation of Legionnaires and members of the Auxiliary throughout the state. It would seem, by the universal response that has been given to the appeal for work and for funds in launching this very worthy enterprise, that the cause was one that lies very close to the heart of all ex-service men. In a word, the boys are trying to do as nearly as possible for these unfortunate children what their comrades would have done had they survived the war.

Not to be outdone by the activities of the Legionnaires, the Ladies' Auxiliary, which is composed of wives, mothers and sisters of the members of the Legion, have worked most devotedly in supplying creature comforts for the children. One very noteworthy evidence of co-operation has been the fraternal spirit manifested by the men at the American Legion Tubercular Hospital at Battle Creek. As a matter of course, the Children's Billiet was under-privileged with all the essentials for carrying on its work, and on numerous occasions it had been necessary to draw upon the supplies of cots, blankets, foodstuffs, and equipment at the hospital. Letters and telegrams reaching the Manager, Mr. E. J. Walsh, calling for supplies have never failed to receive instant attention. The boys at the hospital have even divided their canned fruits and jellies, which were contributed by the ladies of the state, with the little ones, which have been most heartily appreciated and enjoyed at the Children's Billiet.

After all, there is nothing that comes quite so close to the heart of humanity as helpless childhood and the statewide interest in the American Legion Children's Billiet gives assurance of an institution of unparalleled value, and a new departure in philanthrop service.

MAGNETIC MABEL'S MAIL

If you don't know anything, ask Mabel. She'll tell you.

Dear Mabel: If I should drop my gloves in the street and a strange gentleman should pick it up for me, what should I do and say? On the other hand, if a strange gentleman should save me from being killed by a speeding automobile, how should I conduct myself? Timid.

Dear Timid: In the first case a simple girlish smile is all that is necessary. You could say, Oh, sir, if you think best, try, of course, to convey the idea that the gloves are your own, and not the ones you borrowed from your room mate. But if, on the other hand, as you so aptly put it, a strange gentleman drags you out from under the very hoofs of a maddened automobile, first glance into the mirror at the back of your vanity case to assure yourself that your complexion is on straight, and then smile pleasantly and say—right there in the middle of the traffic—"May I have the pleasure of knowing to whom I am indebted?" Don't forget the whom—it's so class. This speech is recommended to every one, because one never knows when one may be called upon to speak extemporaneously like, and it's so embarrassing to get gummed up in one's lines on such an occasion. Mabel.

NO TRACE OF PARTIES WHO DESTROYED PROPERTY, AS YET

As yet county officials have made no arrests in regard to the destruction of the school property. Sheriff Robinson, of Ann Arbor, spent some time in Chelsea investigating the matter, but as yet nothing has been done. Several parties are under suspicion and more information is being obtained each day, which will no doubt lead to the arrest of parties.

FARMERS' PROBLEM IS TRANSPORTATION.

Relation Shown Between Bread and Roads.

Senator Arthur Capper, Kansas farmer, who, if anyone, should know the facts about the farms, says that transportation is the greatest problem the United States has to solve. The Senator not only says it, but proves it in a few words. He says:

"In Kansas today the farmer has to pay 22 cents a bushel for shipping his wheat to Chicago. He gets about $1.25 for it there, allowing him something like 80 cents a bushel for wheat which really means a loss of about 40 cents on every bushel grown and sold at that rate. The railroads, meantime are getting twice as much for freight as they did five years ago when the farmer was selling his wheat for $2.26.

"Today the situation is 10-cent bread or higher for the consumer, while the farmer, the producer, gets but 80 cents for the wheat which costs him not less than $1.20 to grow. The same situation prevails, of course, in the beef industry. The railroads get high freight rates, while the grower gets a minimum.

"The people of this country are being brought to see that basically, if this country is to enjoy stable prosperity the condition of the farm must be better than it now is. There is no getting away from the age-old truth that 'As for the earth, out of it cometh forth bread.'

When every trunk line railroad is paralleled by a broad, smooth, well graded national highway, strong enough to support trucks of five or even ten ton capacity, the railroads will not get 22 cents a bushel to take wheat from Kansas to Chicago!

The transportation problem neither begins nor ends with railroads. The highway problem daily becomes more and more vital. The making of automobiles is today a larger industry than the running of railroads; making of roads for automobiles and trucks is inevitably to become the greatest single industry of the country. When it has been so long enough to provide three hundred thousand miles of high-grade roads (about the railroad mileage of the Nation) there will no longer be an acute transportation problem.

WILL HOUSE PRICELESS RELICS OF WASHINGTON

Masonic Memorial Will Keep Heirlooms Safe For All Time.

The George Washington Masonic National Memorial, now being erected at Alexandria, Va., will house the priceless relics of the first president in possession of Washington-Alexandria Blue Lodge, No. 22, of which General Washington was the first Worshipful Master. These relics include the old clock that was in the bed-chamber of the president on the night of his death and which was stopped at 10:20 p.m., the exact hour of death by one of the attending physicians. They include also a penknife given to the boy Washington by his mother and carried by him 56 years; the general's Masonic apron, his wedding gloves, farm spurs, pruning knife, pocket compass, cupping and bleeding instruments, bootstrap and garter and many other small articles. The lodge also owns the portrait of Washington painted by Williams, which is considered to be the truest likeness of "the father of his country," and which is different from most portraits of him.

The memorial to Washington the Mason, is being erected in Alexandria, just across the Potomac river from the national capital, because General Washington's Masonic activities centered about that city. Alexandria is almost a part of the city of Washington, D. C., and it is about half way between the latter city and Mount Vernon. The memorial will be the greatest ever erected in honor of any man. Together with the endowment, it will cost $4,000,000. It will be on Shooters Hill, an eminence overlooking the city in which General Washington lived most of his life. It will be 200 feet high, 280 feet in depth and 160 feet wide.

The cornerstone of the memorial will be laid Thursday Nov. 17 amid most impressive ceremonies. It is expected that the greatest number of Masons ever assembled in any city at any one time will be on hand for the ceremonies. All railroads are offering reduced rates to those who journey to Washington, D. C. for the cornerstone laying.

THE FORM LETTER.

You know what a form letter is—the kind sent to thousands of people, all the letters identically alike except that the names of the recipients are carefully filled in to make each letter seem personal.

The form letter is claimed by modern advertisers as one of their inventions. But form letters were used by the Hebrews as far back as 500 years ago. Samples of these ancient missives are discovered among the rare manuscripts of the Elkan Nathan Adler library.

"There is nothing new under the sun."

One of the fifteenth century form letters was designed to be sent by fathers to sons who were neglecting their work at college. Quotation: "I heard a report today that made me tremble and my ears tingle; a report that you have relinquished your studies for the pursuit of pleasure and the follies of the world." And so on.

Another old time letter was for dunning deadbeats. It apparently was the familiar No. 17 of a series: "I have your letter and have read your words, but they have passed into my ears as liquid that is poured into a funnel, entering at one end and leaving at the other. Your excuses do not please me. Do not suppose that you will succeed in concealing your designs." And so on.

The Adler collection of 500 year old form letters is almost startling in the way it discloses that ancient people had much the same problems as we have today—deadbeats, wayward sons, etc. The collection gives forms of use in congratulating, borrowing money, proposing marriage, renewing old friendships—in short, practically everything covered by a model letter writer book such as was in common use a generation ago.

Life is an endless theatrical performance. The actors and the stage settings change, but the plot repeats itself thru eternity.

LARGE BODIES MOVE SLOWLY

The bigger the body, the slower the movement. The greater the movement must be, the longer it takes to get under way.

The United States is a large body, almost entirely surrounded by good motor cars and poor roads. It is moving slowly, but surely towards a condition when it will have only good roads. The movement is slow because the body is so large, and has so many heads—110,000,000 of them.

Improving our almost three million miles of highways is a huge task. The movement is enormous. Therefore, it takes time to get under way. It is like a monster freight train, starting up a grade, requiring many locomotives to begin the travel and slowly getting up speed. But once the train is in motion, it has an enormous force for going ahead; one locomotive can keep it moving and it is difficult to stop!

So will it be with our road building program; slowly but surely the movement for better roads than Federal aid can give, for more roads than States alone can build, is gathering momentum. When it gets up speed, nothing can stop it.

Meanwhile the individual who needs a good road and needs it now, must not lose courage. It was said the Panama Canal couldn't be built in a generation. It was built in a few short years. At any rate we are at present building Federal aid roads it will take some hundred and fifty or two hundred years to improve our road system. All of us will be very dead before that movement is well started. The answer is to change the movement, to work for, educate for, vote for, national highways, built by and maintained by the National Government; give this National two hundred thousand miles of such roads (which could with ease be built in a period of five years), and the rest of the roads will be improved in even less time, by States, counties and towns, which will refuse to be kept from the benefits of such a national road system, when all that they need to do to enjoy it, is to connect with it.

SUBSTITUTE FOR COAL.

Newspaper dispatches from all parts of the country show increasing use of fuel oil in homes, apartment houses, factories and public buildings, instead of coal.

For several years the public has been subjected to a periodical coal strike with resulting hardships from lack of fuel and unreasonable prices. The public interest in the coal industry has apparently been lost sight of by both the operators and the miners. The day when lack of coal can cripple a whole nation is drawing to a close. The public is sick and tired of the annual outrage.

Electricity, fuel oil and gas are the coming substitutes for coal in the average home and factory.

Public utility plants operated by coal, will use oil or operate their own mines to the great advantage of the public. Coal mining will get the same lesson that is eventually meted out to any industry that in its operation loses sight of the public interest. A substitute that gives better service will take its place.

GETTING SIDETRACKED.

It seems reasonably proved, over in England, that Shakespeare's name should be spelled Shakspeare. This starts a quarrel among the authorities, many brilliant minds wasting their time on a futile discussion. After all, what difference does it make, how the name is spelled. Shakspeare would have been amused at the controversy.

Great minds seem to have a tendency to get sidetracked on petty matters. There never was a man whose time was too "valuable" to keep him from pausing to watch a drunk being loaded into the patrol wagon.

Statistics show the United States has 300,000 miners too many. This doesn't seem to be enough.

IDLENESS

No man has the right to be idle. Six days thou shalt work. It is a direct command resting upon every individual. There are no conditions, circumstances or positions in life which authorize one to spend his time in idleness.

The fact that an individual is rich does not excuse him from labor. Every man, regardless of his wealth, his position, his possessions or his power, should be made to labor every day in the week. For one to spend his hands in idleness and leave his brain uncoupled is to make of himself a nuisance and an incubator of evil.

The amusement craze of today is the direct evolution of idleness. There are so many idle men and idle women that it has been possible to build up great amusement enterprises. The idleness of people is being exploited by the avaricious.

The breaking down of society is another evolution of idleness. Idle women, no home duties, no children to care for, no domestic labor to perform, transforming them into dangerous social factors. They become the agents of the Devil, and expensively menaces to society. The aged men and women with nothing to occupy their time or employ their hands become a burden to themselves and a sorrow to all around them.

Idleness curses youth, damps the middle aged, and brings sorrow and premature death to the aged. Idleness fills the dens of dissipation, crowds the pool rooms, occupies the parks, litters up the streets, and glutts the avenues of traffic. Idleness is man's curse and the devil's best weapon.

FIRST SCRIMMAGE OF SEASON AT U. OF M.

Ann Arbor, Mich., September 27.—For the first time this year, candidates for the University of Michigan '23 football team engaged in a scrimmage this week and practically all of the men who returned for early practice were given a chance to display their wares.

Although rain has interfered to some extent with the week's program, the squad has been worked pretty hard in developing all of the fundamentals and the candidates were anxious to get into the active work-out and doubly anxious to take their deserved rest Sunday.

Steele, Donnelly, White, Mote and Sobel were not allowed to go into the scrimmage due to slight injuries they have received during the past few days while Kipke, Blott and Uter acted as officials for the game lasted for about half an hour.

The squad was divided into three teams, the Army, Navy and Marines and the Army team took on the Navy during the first half and the Marines during the rest of the session.

The three tennis lined up as follows:

Table with columns for TEAM, PLAYER, and POSITION. Includes entries for ARMY and NAVY MARINES.

Table with columns for TEAM, PLAYER, and POSITION. Includes entries for ARMY and NAVY MARINES.

KEEPING GARAGE DOOR OPEN

Wooden Props Attached to Each Side Prevent Annoyance in Windy Weather.

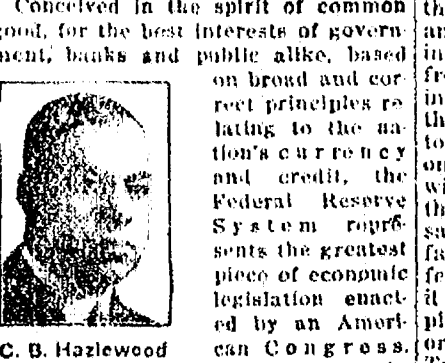

Garage doors are likely to be closed shut by a slight breeze. This is very annoying, especially when one is in the garage. The simple device shown in the drawing will prevent this.

Each consists of a stout prop, of 1 x 2-inch material, attached to the door, and a strap, nailed to the door, and fastened under the strap. In use, the strap is set under the door so that the door cannot close it. When the door is closed the ends of the props are set behind brackets provided for the purpose, or simply rested on the floor.

WORLD'S GREATEST BANKING SYSTEM

By CRAIG B. HAZLEWOOD President Association of Reserve City Bankers

Conceived in the spirit of common good, for the best interests of government, banks and public alike, based on broad and correct principles relating to the nation's currency and credit, the Federal Reserve System represents the greatest piece of economic legislation enacted by an American Congress.

The System's record of achievement through a world war, an inflation period of dizzy heights, and months of serious and costly liquidation. It is a matter of greatest importance that very earnest and patriotic thought be given to the two questions: How far has the system succeeded, and in what particular has it failed, to give our country as strong and as useful a financial system as human mind can devise?

The hope and expectation of those who framed the Federal Reserve Act that the machinery set-up for the origination, distribution and automatic retirement of currency issue, which should be entirely responsive to the needs of trade and the varying conditions of business, have been so fully realized. Every possible effort must be exerted to preserve the Federal Reserve System from political alliance and to keep its powerful influence entirely devoted to the building up of the greatest banking system in the world.

The first bank of the United States was established in 1791 and failed to obtain a renewal of its charter in 1811. The opponents charging that the bank was a "money trust" controlled by foreigners, a tool in the hands of the Federalists, and that the act chartering the bank was unconstitutional.

Note the use of the words "money trust." We have the idea that this is a modern term. The suspicions which animate the demagogue today have not changed in a century.

The second bank of the United States was chartered in 1816 and failed to obtain a renewal of its charter in 1831, the reasons being a wide spread feeling that the bank was unconstitutional, the hostility of the states the opposition of the state banks, the rise of democracy, and the navy and land which the poor always feel to be their foe.

Both banks functioned well and accomplished much for the country during crucial times. The downfall of both was caused simply and solely by attempts to place the determination of banking policies in the hands of political authorities.

ENGINE MODEL RECALLS MOST DRAMATIC EPISODE IN RAILROAD CIVIL WAR HISTORY

REPLICA OF "GENERAL," THE LOCOMOTIVE WHICH WAS THE CENTER OF A THRILLING CIVIL WAR ADVENTURE

A traveling railroad museum, "Service-Progress Special," operating over the New York Central Lines for four months commencing June 18, is the most complete transportation exhibition of its kind ever gathered. The evolution and present outlook of every phase of railroading is demonstrated by historic relics, unique models, motion pictures, still pictures, paintings and charts.

When the fugitives abandoned the engine, Andrews, their leader, said, "Every one to take care of himself," and they left in squads of three or four. By this time, however, a general alarm had been sounded. Four of the fugitives were run down by the Chickamauga River, and one was forcibly persuaded to tell who they were. In a few days the last of the fugitives were captured. Following a trial by military court, eight of the number were executed in Atlanta as spies; six were exchanged; and eight escaped from prison. Of the twenty-two men comprising this heroic effort, twenty were from Ohio and two from Kentucky.

Thus ended one of the most daring exploits on record, and the old "General" still stands in the Union Depot at Chattanooga as a monument to the American valor of the brave men who comprised both the intrepid heroes under Andrews and the equally courageous followers of Captain Fuller.

The operation of the "Service-Progress Special" is in direct response to requests from President O. E. Bradfute, of the American Farm Bureau Federation, and Master S. J. Lowell, of the National Grange, made to President A. H. Smith, of the New York Central Lines. G. A. R. and American Legion posts are arranging to meet this train at all stops.

At Marietta, a score of Federal soldiers, under command of James J. Andrews, dressed as citizens, boarded the train and paid their fare as passengers. At Big Shanty, Georgia, there was a stop of twenty minutes for breakfast.

While Captain Fuller, conductor, and the train crew with the passengers were eating breakfast, "Andrews" and the train crew with the passengers were eating breakfast, "Andrews" and the train crew with the passengers were eating breakfast.

Committee of Soft Coal Operators Formed to Put Bituminous Fuel Supply at Service of Nation in Emergencies of War or Peace

J. G. BRADLEY HARRY N. TAYLOR MICHAEL GALLAGHER

A committee has been formed at the first in the industry of mining bituminous coal—a gathering of the best brains in the business to form a closer relationship between the operators and the public and to continue close and intelligent study of the problems which the industry must face and solve to insure a fuel supply for the American people.

Twenty-five of the leading soft coal operators of the United States have consented to serve as members of the Policy Committee of the National Coal Association, and to work for these ends.

Since the appointment of the United States Coal Commission there has existed what is known as the Bituminous Operators' Special Committee, formed to co-operate with the Commission in finding out the facts of the soft coal industry. The life of this committee expires with the life of the Coal Commission. Because of the intimate acquaintance with details of the bituminous industry the members of this temporary committee have gathered from their work, its membership was taken over into the newly formed Policy Committee.

Three men prominent in the work of this committee are shown above. J. G. Bradley, of Dundon, W. Va., at the left, one of the members of the Bituminous Operators' Special Committee and its first chairman, is also former president of the National Coal Association. Mr. Bradley has recently returned from Europe, where he made a study of the situation in the coal mining industry, and is giving his colleagues the benefit of his observations.

Harry N. Taylor, president of the United States Distributing Corporation, of New York, formerly a member of the Bituminous Operators' Special Committee, is another of the new Policy Committee members. Michael Gallagher, of Cleveland, O., is prominent in the work of the Policy Committee, and has been a

Poem by Uncle John

It's a mighty good idea to follow—when you're right on the brink of a verge, with bankruptcy hot on your heels, the way to get out, is to "merge." With an alibi in front of yer Diver so horrible, rocky, and deep that the sight of it opens yer liver, and turns ye as white as a sheet—when you think you are bound for the devil, in a wreck at the end of yer spurge, the way to get back on the level— is to link up somebody and merge!

It's the heaven of refuse undoubted, for the answer that's down on his back. A merger has never been routed— you can swim in his pools like a duck. The minute the merger embraces the worst-case concerns you bring, you can set up in difficult places, and smoke cigarettes like a king! So, when you are mighty high busted, and yer balance-sheet sounds like a dreg, —if you ever expect to be trusted, there's nuthin' to do, but to Merge!

Rolling Dice By Airplane Latest of Sports

With giant dice made of light material, aviators now play the game of dice from the airplane as one of the latest American sports. Placed in front of the machine, the propeller is twirled, and the rush of air sends the dice rolling down the field with the plane in pursuit. The cubes are then placed in position again.

Suction Cup Holds Ruler Against Blackboard

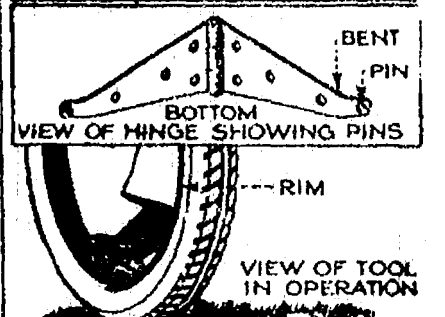

For teaching classes in subjects that require accurate drawings, a blackboard has been provided with a drawing set that can be instantly attached to a suction cup from which the instruments swing on a rot, permitting the use of protractor, T-square, rule, and angles. The suction is sufficient to hold the instruments to the surface of the board for 15 minutes, when the outfit may be removed and replaced at the same point. Being ideal, this device may be seen from any angle, and makes it easier for the teacher to illustrate his subjects.

Ship Found on Big Iceberg Reveals Mystery of Sea

For centuries mystery ships have sailed the seas, guided only by the winds of chance. One of them was found by a steamer captain rounding the Horn recently. While groping his way into the open, a gigantic mass of ice carrying a large three-masted schooner, with its bows still in the cleft, was sighted. Efforts were made to find the survivors but no trace of them was discovered. Another sea tragedy was added to the already long list of those as yet unsolved when a Greenland whaler came upon a strange-looking derelict, battered and weather-worn, apparently built in the last century and ice bound for years. A boarding crew found in the cabin the body of a young woman, preserved by the Arctic frosts. Near a long dead fire was the remains of a young man, still holding a flint and steel.

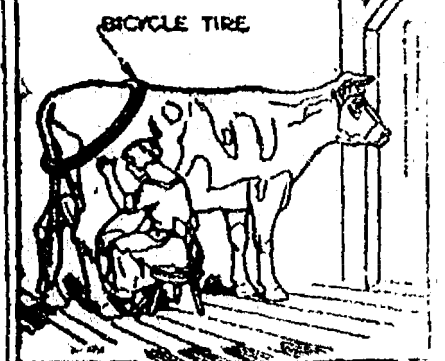

about 4 in. from the ends. Two pins are riveted or welded to the end of the hinge and each end is then bent as shown. The pins are inserted into the holes drilled in the rim and the hinge is pushed down into the foot, thus spreading the rim. If there are studs on the rim, the hinge can be used without pins, by simply butting the end against the studs, notching the ends if necessary to prevent the hinge from slipping.

"Anchoring" the Cow's Tail

Anyone who has milked cows has suffered from the annoyance caused by the animal switching its tail around to chase away the flies. This trouble can be prevented very easily if there is an old bicyccicle tire lying around the yard. The tire is simply thrown over the cow's back at the rump. This idea has been tried and found very effective.

Chats With Your Gas Man

Scientists say that gas is only substance ever discovered that will burn. They mean by that is that and liquids called "fuels" first be converted into gas for they will burn.

This is an important thing remember about gas service don't have to do anything so-called "converting" you "That is done for you at plant. Gas is delivered to the essence of coal and all the dirt, soot and mud behind at the plant.

Because gas is clean, treated heat, it does away with case-laden smoke, grime, ashes; saves upholstery, and clothes; and helps you enjoy the good health that comes with a pure wholesome atmosphere.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Returning to her home in a small town, Milton Center, from a visit to New York, the widowed mother of ten-year-old Ann Byron announces her wedding to Hudson Cortlandt, socially and politically prominent. Her husband has not been told about Ann, and the new wife fears he will be disappointed. CHAPTER II.—With Ann, Mrs. Cortlandt returns to New York to the home of her only son, and her husband's brother, with whom the latter is living. Hudson practically refuses to have anything to do with Ann, and she is left alone with her mother. CHAPTER III.—Ann satisfactorily fills a gap in Henderson Cortlandt's life and their affection becomes mutual. CHAPTER IV.—At sixteen years of age Ann is confronted with the horrible news that her father, a well-known name in the West, is naturally prominent socially, and is now in the hands of the enemy. CHAPTER V.—A tentative engagement between young Rensselaer and Ann is undertaken, the youth enlisting in a New York regiment on the day the girl of the North is born. CHAPTER VI.—His brief term of enlistment expired, Henderson Rensselaer returns to New York. Ann is instrumental in convincing him to re-enlist. War hospitals are established in New York, and Ann is eager to help in the work, but meets with opposition from her guardian and his sisters. CHAPTER VII.—Ann has her way, and in spite of Mrs. Rensselaer's opposition and her guardian's unhesitating opposition to the idea, takes up the work of cheering the unfortunate wounded who have been sent back from the front. CHAPTER VIII.—With her guardian, Ann visits Henderson Rensselaer in his regiment on the outskirts of Washington. He strongly disapproves of her work in the hospital, but she refuses to give it up. There is a rift in their affection. CHAPTER IX.—From Liberty prison, Henderson Rensselaer is brought to the New York hospital. The girl has her share in caring for him, beyond possibility of recovery. Ann has him removed from the hospital to his home, where he passes his last few days in comfort. CHAPTER X.—Dispatches from the front announce the death of Henderson Rensselaer. Ann had written to him, breaking off their engagement, but had confided in no one, and her guardian and relatives naturally believe her untruthful. Henderson Cortlandt is sent by the President on a diplomatic mission to Europe. CHAPTER XI.—From a patient in the hospital, Ann gets news which leads her to believe that Henderson Rensselaer is living. In her guardian's absence, with no one to advise her, she sets out for the front, reaching it a few days before the famous battle.

It was in vain the girl pleaded her father's; the officer was firm in his decision that she should not fall into the hands of the enemy. Two soldiers lifted her over the cossack log fence, and, once on the other side, the spirit which she hurried breathlessly along with her rescuers. They were on toward the town, although no one seemed to know why. Rumors that the enemy already held it shook the retreating troops. They were able to make an entrance, however, and here Ann found the commonplace, homely streets inexpressibly heartening. Unexpectedly, at an angle in the village street, they came upon a band of saloon men. At the ring of the officer's voice, Ann swung around; above the scene towered a commanding figure; she looked, and swept her fingers over her eyes and looked again. Fear dropped away before her incredulity. She could not believe her eyes, but it was Henderson, there was no doubt about it, and she laughed aloud in relief. As she plunged toward him she could hear his voice braying an infuriated command. He called as she came, and fell back in a dazed amazement. It seemed to her a long moment before recognition came into his dumfounded face. "Ann!" he gasped at length. "Good—good—Ann!"

As for Ann, foolish tears were poured down her cheeks, and she could not nod, with a forced and trembling smile.

Hendricks shifted his revolver to his left hand, and shook her violently to his right. "What in—I am you here here?" he demanded urgently.

"In his hand on her arm hurt, and Ann turned and down her tears, and pulled out a pocket. "Oh, Henderson, you aren't after all!" she said incoherently.

"He towered above her in furious passion. "What are you doing here?" he repeated, as he turned to shake her by the shoulder. "What in G-d's name are you here for?"

"You are not dead!" Ann repeated wildly, and, with a dash of self-revelation, "I'm glad!"

"Respect come back to her, and she shivered gloriously.

"You can't stay here!" Henderson shouting. He wanted her back to the front. "It's her place for you—can't you see that?"

"Didn't you stay in New York?" "Didn't you stay with the Sanitary Commission? Why do you have to follow me?"

"You are here for?"

U. S. EXPERIMENTS CUT COST OF GAS

Adjustment of Carburetors on Government Trucks Reduces Consumption of Fuel.

Washington.—Substantial savings of gasoline by the periodical adjustment of carburetors for 1 on the results of analysis of exhaust gases from the mobile engines are said to be feasible by the Department of the Interior following experiments made by the bureau of mines on the fleet of motor trucks used by the government in the yard at Washington. As the result of carburetor adjustment made to give analysis in the bureau experiments an actual increase of efficiency in mileage and saving of gasoline amounting to 22 per cent was attained. These tests demonstrate that a portable carbon dioxide indicator for testing the exhaust gases of a motor vehicle gives a positive indication of the carburetor adjustment, removes all guesswork of such adjustment and is perfectly reliable.

Sample of Gas Tested. The government fuel yard trucks tested by the bureau of mines ranged in capacity from two and a half to seven and a half tons. During the winter months, when the demand for coal is heavy, from 30 to 35 trucks are used. Samples of the exhaust gas were taken on the trucks kept in service for summer hauling in order to determine the carburetor adjustment as used. Changes then were made to a more economical adjustment whenever possible, without sacrificing flexibility of operation and power. In all but one case the carburetors were found to be adjusted too rich for maximum power and economy.

Increase in Mileage Noted. The actual increase in mileage as a result of the carburetor adjustments made by gas analysis when the month previous and the month following the adjustment was compared, showed an increase in mileage of 22 per cent for the second month after adjustment, 16 per cent for the third month, 9 per cent when the mileage is compared truck for truck, and not taking into consideration the distance each traveled during the month, the increased mileage equaled 24.7, 21.2 and 16.2 per cent, respectively.

The adjustment of carburetors by analysis of exhaust gas is based upon the fact that the carbon dioxide in the exhaust is a direct indication of combustion. In turn, the air-fuel ratio and completeness of combustion tell whether the carburetor is properly adjusted for maximum power and gasoline economy.

Adjustment Usually Rich. Other conditions being constant, the mileage obtainable varies as the percentage of carbon dioxide in the exhaust gas and air-fuel ratio. This has been little realized by most garage men in the past. Usually the adjustment is far too rich for maximum economy. There are, however, exceptions to this rule. A determination of the carbon dioxide content of the exhaust gas while the vehicle is being operated on the road gives a positive indication of the carburetor adjustment.

The results of the bureau of interior experiments show that adjusted carburetors tend to become more richly adjusted with lapse of time, and that the adjustments should be checked up at least every two months to maintain the most economical adjustments.

Driving is a Big Factor. The bureau suggests that one driver may be able to get considerably more mileage than another, due to the method of driving. The mileage is greatly increased by disengaging the clutch whenever possible and coasting. In approaching a heavy grade sufficient momentum should be obtained to carry the vehicle a considerable distance up the grade before making it necessary to change the gear.

Weather has a marked effect on the mileage obtainable. In general, a motor runs better at higher humidity and temperatures. Rainy weather decreases the mileage on account of the slippery nature of the streets; so does snowy weather.

Injunction to Stop Woman "Making Love"

Detroit, Mich., Judge Walter Grant of an injunction restraining Louise Keef, from "following, molesting and openly making love to" Joseph A. Grogg.

The two had been friends, the petition said, but for nearly a year Miss Keef's attentions had been unbecomingly and harassing to Mr. Grogg. She had behind "telephone poles, garages and trees." It was charged, and came upon him unawares.

She said, "Hello, grandpa," to him a few days ago when he was talking on a corner to a young woman friend, and then turned and said, "Hello, grandpa," to the young woman, according to the petition. He called police and Miss Keef was ordered to leave him alone but, according to Grogg, she refused to do so.

Only the watchfulness of his land lady caused her to fall to surprise him at his boarding house, Mr. Grogg said.

English Travel in Security. London. Only five passengers of the 1,188,79,000 carried on English railways during 1922 were killed in accidents. This is one passenger in every 237,000,000.

A dozen of the largest commanderies of Southern Michigan will participate in the annual field day meet of the Knights Templar at Kalamazoo with the regular commandery of this city at host. More than 500 uniformed men are expected to appear in the parade. Commanderies that will be represented are those of Jackson, Battle Creek, Benton Harbor, Niles, Sturgis, Marshall, St. Joseph, South Haven, Allegan, Three Rivers and Dowagiac.

AIMS OF THE RAILROADS

The railroads of the United States want to give to the people the best in transportation at the lowest cost.

The railroads ask to be given the greatest degree of managerial control of their own resources.

The railroads ask that they be allowed to earn sufficient returns in times of large volume of traffic to tide them over years of low traffic. In other words that they be permitted to make hay while the sun shines.

A policy which fails to allow sufficient earnings at all times, considering present and future operation and allowing for expansion and growth to keep pace with the country's needs is poor service because adjustments to changed conditions must be speedy and violent and railroad facilities, which are the basis of service, suffer.

The Closed Car You Buy This Month You've Got to Ride in Next Winter

Any owner who has felt winter's winds whistling through the ill-fitting doors and flimsy panels of a makeshift closed car knows there is no substitute for quality.

The Studebaker Light-Six Sedan you buy now will not only serve you admirably this summer and next winter, but will endure for years.

It is sturdily built for long, hard service, to ride comfortably, to look well and to operate at a moderate expense as long as you care to drive it.

We believe the Light-Six Sedan is the peer of all closed car values at anywhere near its price.

The substantial hardwood and steel body with its broad windows and four wide doors, rich mohair velvet plush upholstery and many refinements, is a model of Studebaker craftsmanship.

The chassis embodies many features of advanced design. Its construction is an achievement in the use of precision methods in large scale manufacture. Proof of this lies in the machining of all surfaces of the crankshaft and connecting rods to which is largely due its virtual freedom from vibration. This is an exclusive Studebaker practice on cars at this price.

The Light-Six Sedan is low priced because it is built complete by Studebaker in large volume, but there isn't a cheap thing about it. It is above par in every particular.

The name Studebaker is assurance of satisfaction.

Poor Eyesight

A very large percentage of all school children have defective vision. Many children are considered dull and backward who are simply suffering from weak eyes.

Such children are unnecessarily handicapped. The eye troubles which interfere with their progress can be overcome with a little attention and proper corrective glasses at this time may result in perfect vision in after years.

The matter is too important to be neglected. It concerns the future of the child.

An examination will determine whether or not your child requires glasses.

Timely Discussions of various facts that may interest you.

Chelsea is indeed fortunate to have as capable a man as they have at the head of the Electric Light plant.

The story runs that one must have money to make money. In the business of furnishing electric power it is necessary to have proper equipment before money can be made.

When a new business comes to Chelsea it is the duty of all to help if possible in seeing that they get the right kind of a start so that they can be an asset to the community.

Chelsea has endeavored to do much to bring things to Chelsea but efforts have in many cases been futile.

Auto prices are taking drops every few days now. Only a short time ago some of the manufacturers of larger machines dropped the prices and then came other drops.

Oklahoma is anything but a safe place to be in now. Everything was set for a special election today but until noon no reports had been heard as to whether or not the election was held.

Special deputies and the sheriffs officers are all agog with flurry and flight. Whether the special deputies will be stronger than the sheriffs who have shown their intention of carrying the election will be a matter for the day.

There is one place that it might not be safe to be an election clerk, and if there were the small fee that is obtained could be insignificant to the dangers that are apt to present themselves.

Those who own property and dwell from here and are wondering how they are, might get a squad of state troopers to accompany them to the land if they want to go down now. That would be a safe way of looking things over.

At least the governor stated that he would not call out the national guard to interfere with the election.

Someone tried to palm off an unwanted baby on William Greatrix, whose one infant son disappeared a few days ago in Detroit, through the mistake of a nurse.

A note was found telling parties finding the baby to give it to Greatrix. The father of the lost child does not know about the many offers for babies but wants his own.

TIME TO PAY TAXES AGAIN EXTENDED

New Company to Get Extension of Light and Water Lines.

The regular meeting of the village council was held last evening in the council rooms. After some discussion the time for paying village taxes was again extended until the 10th of October.

The property recently purchased by the company is just outside the corporation limits and some members of the council did not deem it advisable to extend the light and water lines outside the corporation.

The company will stand expense. The Gordon Pagle company will require at least 25 H. P. to run their machinery.

During the discussion of the evening various other phases of the electric light situation were brought before the council.

Comment was made by the councilmen as to the work being done by the men at the plant in the new line that is being erected.

The matter of the small signs purchased by the council of last year, and which have been stored away since that time was discussed and was found that the committee in charge of the creation of the sign at the intersection of the roads south of town were also to have charge of that matter.

This Week

On Plates of Gold, Why Fighting is Respectable. 98,000 Miles a Second. Whiskey, Champion Criminal.

One hundred years ago Joseph Smith, prophet, founded the 'Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints.' He received from Heaven gold plates, mysteriously engraved, and from them, divinely guided, translated the Book of Mormon.

At least, that's his story. His followers say it should not be questioned by Christians that accept a similar story from Moses, about the tablets of the law.

Those that wisely respect all religions, denying none, are interested especially in the changes that have come over Mormonism, still full of vitality after 100 years. Joseph Smith made a particular virtue of many wives for one man—so did wise King Solomon, by the way.

Modern Mormonism, rallying under the purple, blue and gold banner, 'Cumorah-Ilamah,' says, 'one wife is enough.' That does not mean repudiating Joseph Smith. Many good Christians tone down Jonah and the whale, knowing that the earth is round, do not insist that the four angels actually stood at the four corners of the earth. All life is a compromise.

The Department of Commerce, Bureau of Census, calculates the total wealth of the United States as about three hundred billions of dollars, three thousand dollars for every man, woman and child, nearly double the total wealth of 1912.

One hundred per cent seems encouraging, and the Census Bureau figures may be technically accurate, but they don't mean anything.

A lady asks why the Dempsey-Firpo fight is allowed. 'Once,' says she, 'prize fighters had to hide away in barns, like dog fighters. Now they have the police to keep order for them while they knock each other down. How can you explain that?'

Easily. A big prize fight now is worth two million dollars to the promoters. That makes it RESPECTABLE.

The owner of a little gambling house must hide away. The owners of a stock or produce exchange, where they bet millions, is respectable and protected. We have our weaknesses in this country, but we do show respect for anything above one million.

One single IDEA might be worth three hundred billions—for instance, an idea supplying men with unlimited free power from sun or tides.

There are many times three hundred billions worth of wealth below the earth in mines, oil, gas, coal, and in the earth's thin crop producing carpet of soil.

There are more than three hundred billion dollars' worth of nitrogen in the air above us. This is a rich country, but we need more people, and instead of encouraging them to come in, we foolishly keep them out.

Henry Ford is studying a better kind of boat to carry freight and passengers. If he produces it, he will add billions to the nation's wealth. The height of mechanical folly is carrying, on pounding rails and wheels, freight that ought to glide, without friction or wear, along thousands of miles of canals and rivers.

To enjoy a good headache, read Sir Ernest Rutherford, great British scientist, on the atom. A thousand atoms in the corner of your eye wouldn't know they were there.

The atom, a complex unit of pure electricity, of which all substances, elements, wealth, rocks, buildings, money and men are made, is a miniature solar system. It has a central electron which is like the sun.

Around it revolve dozens of smaller electrons like planets. The lectrons farthest away from the centre, in this miniature solar system, travel slowly in their orbits—only five hundred miles a second. Those nearest the centre travel at the inconceivable speed of ninety-three thousand miles a second.

What horrible forces are locked up in those minute particles of matter? In such an 'infra-world.'

Who knows what may happen, what generations may be born and die in those seconds?

OUR POLICIES

Let us all get together for a bigger and better Chelsea. A sewerage system for Chelsea. A building program that is bound to build.

YES, WE HAVE NO BANANAS.

The classical masterpiece, "Yes, We Have No Bananas," already has earned about $100,000 in royalties for its composers, Frank Silver and Irving Colton. They expect to make at least 70,000 more by the end of the year.

Critics with acid temperaments must writhe in agony at this bit of news. The popularity of "Yes, We Have No Bananas" made the inevitable target of a lot sour criticism. Partly due to envy, partly to the principle noted by psychologists, David Gibson, that the tree of much fruit gets the most clubs.

Logically, the critics should concentrate their ridicule on failure. Instead, they usually attack success.

After all, isn't $100,000 a cheap price for the public to pay for the tremendous amount of diversion and fun derived from the bananas song?

The public certainly got more than it paid for.

Fun—relaxation—is cheap at any price in our nerve tense civilization of mechanical monotony. In this sense, old P. T. Barnum was the ideal type of philanthropist.

We rather hesitate to spread the news that "Yes, We Have No Bananas" has earned $100,000 for its authors. Hesitate because it may inspire thousands of bright young men and women to waste their time trying to counterfeit the success of this song, by writing others.

There is always a market for a "Yes, We Have No Bananas" but for each bananas song success, fate has at least a thousand failures.

You rarely hear of the failures. And such censorship is a mistake, for this reason: In studying success, we learn what to do. In analyzing failure, we learn what to avoid. And success depends fully as much on what we don't do as on what we do.

PEACE CHANCES ON IMPROVE.

The winner of the $100,000 Bok peace prize will present the world its sixtieth plan for international peace since the DuBois peace scheme was suggested in the year 1306, over 600 years ago.

Men with acid temperaments may scoff: "Sixty! And world peace not in sight. There'll always be war, as long as we have human nature."

However, for each peace scheme that has been advanced there have been at least 1,000 war schemes. And a peace scheme that will win out is inevitable—an United States of the world. Six hundred years is a short period in the long history of humanity.

LIQUOR'S LIFT.

Liquor lifts civilized man out of the rut, says Lord Dawson of Penn., distinguished physician to the king of England. His idea that in our age of specialization, with high pressure industry making us cram 12 hours into six, the mind of man at the end of the day is running in a single groove or rut. "Alcohol in modernization gets that man out of the track. It livens his mental touch," says Lord Dawson.

Yes, and after lifting him out of the rut, it pushes him back deeper than he was before. Alcoholic stimulation has its equivalent reaction to as far below par or normal as the drink rises the drinker above par. The truth is learned in the cold gray dawn of the morning after.

CUSTOMERS AND VALUES.

This is worth remembering: Europe now buys almost exactly half of all the exports from our country.

Of equal importance but receiving less publicity is the other half—consisting principally of Canada, Mexico, South America and the orient.

Take the 30 leading articles exported from the United States. These exports are running 45 per cent more than in 1913, measured in dollars. But the gain is only 6 percent measured in tonnage weight.

Tonnage tells more than the dollar. A pound is always a pound. The dollar has a way of changing.

MAN'S SWEET TOOTH.

Men now eat as much candy as women, says Mrs. Ora H. Snyder of Chicago, queen of the candy industry, who started in business 13 years ago by inventing a nickel in an egg and a cup of sugar.

Mrs. Snyder notices that men like candies that have to be chewed—taffies, butterscotches, etc. She says the only reason men fortunately did not eat so much candy was because no one was making and advertising the sort of candies they like.

Discover a want, not being filled. Then fill it. Success.

SERVICE TO HUMANITY.

Scientific magazines tell how J. D. Dunlop invented the pneumatic rubber tire. His child, riding in a baby carriage, objected to the humps of ordinary wheels. So he took rubber tubes, filled them with water and fastened them to the wheels. Later he had the idea of filling the tubes with air instead of water.

From this came the pneumatic tire used on autos and bicycles. Big services to humanity usually result from attempts to make life happier for a near relative or friend of the inventor. Service—is the mother of more inventions than necessity and business.

WESTERN TARIFF CONGRESS TO MEET IN DENVER

Denver, Col.—Widespread interest is being shown in the western Tariff Congress which has been called to meet in Denver, Oct. 3 for the purpose of organizing a permanent Western Tariff Association. The movement is strictly non-partisan it is declared, and has for its primary purpose, taking the tariff out of partisan politics, creating a medium for the discussion of the tariff and other economic issues which affect the welfare of Western producers and to assist in maintaining the present tariff duties upon Western products.

The non-partisanship of the movement is further attested by the fact that Nine Western governors, both Democratic and Republican have joined with the producers in calling the Congress in an effort to lift the discussion to a higher plane than that of merely party politics.

In addition to the Governors, practically every producing organization west of the Mississippi, including many national associations, as well as Chambers of Commerce, press associations, banks, mayors of cities and civic bodies joined in the call for the Congress.

Here is another Nut Bread recipe. I gave you one some time ago.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Returning to her home in a small town, Milton Center, from a visit to New York, the widowed mother of ten-year-old Ann receives an announcement her wedding to Hudson Cortlandt, socially and politically prominent. Her husband has not been told about Ann, and the new wife fears she will be displeased.

CHAPTER II.—With Ann, Mrs. Cortlandt returns to New York, to the home of Hendricks Cortlandt, her husband's brother, with whom the latter is living. Hudson practically refuses to have anything to do with Ann, and the child is gladly adopted by Hendricks Cortlandt, falling, with his wife, to his position as United States minister to Switzerland, the pair are lost in the wreck of the vessel.

CHAPTER III.—Ann satisfactorily fills a gap in Hendricks Cortlandt's lonely heart and their affection becomes mutual.

CHAPTER IV.—At sixteen years of age Ann is confronted with the headship of the Cortlandts. Hendricks Cortlandt's acknowledged heiress she is naturally prominent socially, and the situation is resented by Mrs. Rensselaer, Hendricks's sister whose son, Hendricks, has been looked upon as the natural heir of the Cortlandt fortune. This Civil War breaks out, the fall of Fort Sumter causing consternation in New York and the North generally.

CHAPTER V.—A tentative engagement between young Rensselaer and Ann is understood, the youth enlisting in a New York regiment on the first day of the North to the color.

CHAPTER VI.—His brief term of enlistment expired, Hendricks Rensselaer returns to New York. Ann is instrumental in causing him to re-enlist. War hospitals are established in New York, and Ann is eager to help in the work, but meets with opposition from her guardian and his sisters.

CHAPTER VII.—Ann has her way and in spite of Mrs. Rensselaer's opposition and her guardian's ill-concealed aversion to the idea, takes the work of cheering the unfortunate wounded who have been sent back from the front.

CHAPTER VIII.—With her guardian Ann visits Hendricks Rensselaer in his incarceration at the castle of Washington. He strongly disapproves of work in the hospital but she refuses to give it up. There is a rift in their affection.

CHAPTER IX.—From Liberty prison Stanley Howard, forgotten layabout, murderer of Ann's father, is brought to the New York hospital. The girl has her share in caring for him, beyond possibility of recovery. Ann has him removed from this hospital to his home, where he passes his last few days in comfort.

CHAPTER X.—Dispatches from the front announce the death of Hendricks Rensselaer. Ann had written to him, seeking their engagement, but had handed in no one, and her guardian and relatives naturally believe her broken. Hendricks Cortlandt is told by the President on a diplomatic mission to Europe.

CHAPTER XI.—From a patient in the hospital Ann hears what she wishes to believe that Hendricks Rensselaer is living. In her guardian's absence, with no one to advise her, she sets out for the front, reaching Gettysburg on the eve of the famous battle.

"Fudge!" echoed Ann rapturously. "Do go and look for them!" She seized the opportunity of his absence to rearrange her tangled hair, and to wash her face and hands at a pump in the yard. She was greatly cheered after these stultic rites, and more ready to face her decidedly unpleasant situation. He had found eight eggs, and a forgotten pull half filled with berries, and Ann discovered the remains of a loe cake; it was not bad breakfast.

As she regretfully finished her last sip, Ann said, "Do you know that I don't even know your name? And you—!" She broke off with a stifled glance about her.

"My name is Guido," he answered. "Guido Avezzana. I am in your company as military observer for my king, Victor Emmanuel."

It had never occurred to Ann to have that it was a romantic thing to have a king, but she liked the way in which he announced his allegiance, and her hearing eyes betrayed her.

Avezzana leaned toward her as he asked, interest in his own.

What they said was unimportant, she told him that she had never been Italy—no, her in Europe, although she spoke French rather well, really, she reluctantly admitted that she was no Italian. It was a beautiful change, she commented, and he responded with a burst of liquid syllables, translated, made Ann stiffen self-consciously. She told herself, sensibly, not to say a language was not so wonderful as she was too absurd to be ment to notice, but her careless remark was a trifle delayed. Avezzana not laugh, but he studied subtly, his eyes remained intent. Under her regard, Ann became at length, in view of herself, uneasily silent.

Over a half pail of berries topped with four eggs each, will not last two young people forever, and as the last delicious morsel vanished, Avezzana, who had not failed to take Ann's morning freshness, said and smiled, "Is it, then, that you love him so much?"

Her amazement Ann dropped the fruit, it clattered on the bare floor. She had an entirely disproportionate amount of noise. "Love whom?" she queried, honestly puzzled.

"Your captain," Hendricks' her white teeth set in a reminiscent little grin; he led her to have the old question answered merely put. "You came through danger to see me—that's true," She smiled weakly at the conclusion.

The young Italian regarded her with eyes that were almost tragically intense; it was evident that he found the situation too much for him. "Why did you come?" he asked, and his voice took a deeper note.

She became somewhat nervous under his increasing solemnity. "I came because we all thought he was dead," she explained, "and then I heard he wasn't—but I had to be sure."

"You wondered, possibly, if you were free?" She nodded her bright head. "Exactly."

Avezzana leaned nearer, across the table. His manner was somehow changed; he was in a subtle fashion, more intimate, and, without taking time for thought, Ann pushed her chair back, instinctively.

"We must be getting started," she announced. Her companion continued to look at her; speculation had leaped into his black eyes. "Do not make haste," he urged. "It is a pity to leave this—our little house."

Regardless of the tension she sensed in the closed room, Ann brightened. "It isn't much to boast of—our little house," she commented lightly. "Although it did keep us from the rains."

Avezzana frowned. "You will add, madame, that I have been well behaved here."

Remembrance of his kindness of the day before swept over Ann. "You are so good!" she cried remorsefully. "And I am such a bother!"

"When you are gone, I fear what you call my goodness may be a thing I shall regret."

The girl looked, the interrogator, she lacked the courage to voice, into the eyes of the man who was sitting before her.

CHAPTER XIII En Route. When the battle was over, the Sanitary Commission unit which Ann joined moved into the town of Gettysburg, and with great difficulty the girl managed to get a message through to New York announcing Hendricks's well-being. The result was as she had feared, a bombardment of telegrams from Mrs. Cortlandt clamoring for her immediate return, but as there were not nearly enough nurses at the front, and as at last she was where she had for so long wanted to be, Ann ignored the summons. She thought she had, in the past two years, learned all about the misery of the wounded soldier, but she had known nothing like the suffering she found there.

She was put to work in an operating-room; sometimes she mopped the floor, where blood spread like a crimson lake, and sometimes she forced stimulants between white and bay lips, endeavoring to snatch men back to life when they were already in the grasp of death himself. She worked all day and far into the night, and she was so tired that her sensitivities were momentarily dulled. Her foot ached, her very soul ached, as she beheld the courage of her suffering soldiers.

Never in all her life before had she been so sure that she was doing the right thing, and she was determined to stay until the crisis was over. Unfortunately, however, Mrs. Cortlandt knew a colonel, and she was not a woman to let privilege lie idle; a week after the battle ended the girl was officially ordered home.

The blow was somewhat softened by the fact that the Sanitary Commission was sending trains of wounded to the North as fast as the railroad could handle them, and Ann was detailed as a nurse in transit, in charge of a car.

"You Will Admit, Madame, That I Have Been Well Behaved Here," he continued. "It is because you are so beautiful."

"You mustn't say that to me." "Why not?" "Well, it's ridiculous, for one thing."

Avezzana continued to look at her closely. "I thought possibly—because of—your husband?"

"My—husband?" Ann's tone vibrated with amazement, and suddenly her eyes widened and a light danced in them, as the delicious realization came to her that the young Italian thought her a married woman. "You mean Hendricks?" she said demurely. "I suppose perhaps he wouldn't like it."

"And do you never do anything of which he disapproves?" "I never do anything else!" "Then—why not be kind to me?" "But I am kind, am I not? I want to be."

The young man said nothing at all, but he looked at her with tragic eyes, which somehow made her think of an actor's, and after a moment he kissed the hand he held, swiftly and not too impressively. Ann continued to stand looking after him, while he led the horse from the shed, and, with a wave of his hand to her, mounted, after the Italian method—a spirited leap from the ground to the saddle. He was almost at the gate, when Ann sprang after him.

"Wait," she called. "Please wait!" She ran lightly over to him, and came as near to the blazing horse as she might. "There is something I must tell you," she said bravely. "I am not married to Hendricks!"

Avezzana's face glowed down on her, frozen with astonishment. "To whom, then?" "To no one, I am—just a girl. I wanted you to know."

The young Italian started. "It is, then, all the more reason why I should not be found here," he said, true to his code. "But—a riverbed? Shenandoah?"

In a moment he had disappeared around the bend in the little lane, where the forested gully were calling.

"And do you never do anything of which he disapproves?" "I never do anything else!" "Then—why not be kind to me?" "But I am kind, am I not? I want to be."

He may have thought her wistfulness provocative, and probably he did not realize that, in the simplicity of the Puritan 'sixties, even had she been the experienced matron he took her for, she would in all probability have been honestly amazed by his advances.

He seized her hand, and bent over it, across the little table. "You are adorable!" he cried, his restraint released.

He was unprepared for the strength with which she wrenched herself free, although he made no effort to hold her. "Please don't," she whispered feebly. She was trembling all over, so that she could scarcely speak.

"If you do not wish it—no," he said, instantly compliant, "but you are like nothing I have seen before. How is it possible that I should not love you?"

Oblivious an instinct to escape, Ann swiftly opened the door and stood in the frame, a black silhouette against the luminous gray. She swung toward him in crisp indignation. "But you think I am married! How can you talk to me about love. In the hurry of her panic she retreated through the open door, and stepped unexpectedly out into the rain. She looked back at Avezzana with entreating eyes. "Please," she begged pitifully, "won't you get the horse?"

The Italian did not hesitate; for, according to his code, the moment had come when pursuit was no longer possible. He only gave her a stricken look as he passed her, just outside the door.

He returned much more quickly than she had expected; he came running across the little yard that lay between the shed and the house, and Ann knew at once that something had happened. "Your people are just here," he called—"at the next house, I

SAFETY FIRST!

Safety first! is the cry of every community where automobile traffic is at all heavy. But either because drivers are careless, or because the gasoline car falls short in the qualities necessary for quick stops in the city, the list of fatalities continues to grow. The guardians of every city are anxious to make it a safe place in which to live, and for that reason they have made and are still making various investigations by which automobile drivers may learn something more about driving.

In its endeavor to decrease accidents, the New York City Health Department issued a statement recently whereby any person driving an automobile can, by the simple method of multiplying the speed of the car (in miles per hour) by itself, and dividing by ten, learn the exact distance in feet that the car will travel after the brakes have been applied.

The blocks north and south in New York City measure about 260 feet including the width of the cross streets, so that if a truck is going at a speed of thirty miles per hour, it will travel for ninety feet after the brakes have been applied. This is about one-third of a block.

Many drivers have used this information successfully, but as yet there has been no evident decrease in accidents. The fault, however, does not rest entirely with the driver so much as with the gasoline automobile, which cannot, and will not stop as quickly as is necessary in crowded thoroughfares.

In fact, there is but one type of vehicle that can be brought to a stop instantly, and that is the electric truck. For this reason many of the farseeing merchants of the large cities are already operating electric trucks because they find them effective in curbing reckless, breakneck driving and consequent accident litigation.

Moving Your Coal

The 24 steam railroads operating in Michigan are already well advanced in their yearly task of bringing in the coal that will keep Michigan warm and working through the winter.

We are better prepared for this job than ever before.

Our repair shops contain only current work; there is no accumulation of crippled rolling stock. Our construction operations have been purposely pushed to release all equipment for this emergency. For four months we have been accumulating our own coal supplies until they are now at their highest point in history—79% of our entire storage requirements filled.

Best of all, we are swinging into use the record-breaking addition of 175 new locomotives, and 21,344 new freight cars, all brought during 1923. More improvements and additions are planned if you will back us by giving your support.

From the gateways, and the junction points, where we receive your coal, we are promptly carrying it on to you. Unload promptly and release our car for us to use in serving your neighbor's needs.

Are we doing this job as you want it done? We ask your criticism or approval.

Poor Eyesight

A very large percentage of all school children have defective vision. Many children are considered dull and backward who are simply suffering from weak eyes.

Such children are unnecessarily handicapped. The eye troubles which interfere with their progress can be overcome with a little attention and proper corrective glasses at this time may result in perfect vision in after years.

The matter is too important to be neglected. It concerns the future of the child.

An examination will determine whether or not your child requires glasses.

In the Realm of Society

Entertains S. P. I.

Marking a brilliant spot on the social calendar of the S. P. I. club was the delightful dinner party given at the home of Mrs. William Kuebler at Manchester, Monday evening. Soon after arriving the hostess invited the guests to the dining room which was prettily decorated with fall flowers and the club colors and where a delicious three course banquet was served.

Suspended from the electrolyser were streamers of yellow and white crepe paper and centering the table was a large bouquet of double marigolds surrounded with white asters, while each end was grazed by crystal sticks holding yellow lighted tapers, while the dainty place cards and napkins were in keeping with the same color scheme.

At the conclusion of the banquet a short program followed, Rev. P. H. Grabowski in his pleasing manner gave a short talk expressing for the men present the appreciation to the club that the husbands were also invited and in behalf of the club gave special thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Kuebler for their kind hospitality.

The remainder of the evening was enjoyably passed in a social way. Guests of honor were Rev. and Mrs. A. A. Schoen of Manchester.

The fraction of a second? Who knows that this milky way cosmos of ours, compared to which the earth is as big as an atom compared with the earth itself, may not be a mere atom in a bigger cosmos?

The power that holds together the atoms in a glassful of water would, if released, run all the machinery of the United States for an indefinite period.

There's another headache in that thought.
