FORMER STUDENTS ARRESTED TUESDAY

Three Boys Admit Participation in Depredation Committed at High School Building Recently.

Paul Buehler, Raymond Cannon, Chelsea, and Ray Knickerbocker, formerly of Chelsea, but now a resident of Ann Arbor, were arrested Tuesday morning, formally charged with the depredations committed at the high school building on Sunday night, September 23, when books were stacked, library book cases emptied, one bookcase smashed and ink thrown over the walls of the assembly room. The arrest was made by a special investigator from the department of justice who has been working on the case for several days.

Taken to Ann Arbor on Tuesday morning for questioning, it is stated by authorities that the boys, former students at Chelsea High, stubbornly maintained their innocence and denied any knowledge of the affair until late Tuesday afternoon when stories told began to conflict and get twisted until admission of their guilt was finally procured in signed statements given authorities.

Advices from Ann Arbor this forenoon stated that the boys were arraigned in Justice Thomas' court yesterday, and, waiving examination, were bound over to circuit court on bond said to be $2500 each. Two furnished bond and were released Wednesday afternoon while the third was expected to find the necessary bond and be released this morning.

Arrest of the Chelsea boys is expected to clear up a series of book-stacking and other stunts which have been annoying school officials for the last two years. A number of such incidents which occurred last year were given only passing notice merely drawing reprimands from officials with warnings as to future conduct. However, commission of the recent crime caused the public in general to demand apprehension of the perpetrators with the result that an expert from the department of justice was called in, fingerprints taken and suspects questioned, followed by the arrests and admission of guilt.

Following admission of their guilt, the boys were questioned in an effort to find a motive for their deeds, two of them, Buehler and Knickerbocker, it is said, declaring none other than that they "had it in" for Superintendent Clark of the schools. Cannon is said to have ascribed no motive, merely being with the gang assisting in the work of destruction. Claims were made by the latter, according to officials, that it was not his wish to destroy any property, but rather to stack the books only.

In an interview Wednesday, Superintendent Clark expressed himself as being satisfied county authorities would do the right thing when disposal of the case was finally made. Acquaintance of the public with facts in the case, Mr. Clark said, is all that is necessary to properly fix the responsibility, he stating that an extraordinary effort had been made by him and the teaching staff in general, to inculcate in the minds of pupils the things which would help them grow up men and women capable of assuming positions of high standing.

The question before the people of Chelsea is whether duly elected officials and appointed teachers shall conduct the affairs of Chelsea schools or whether they shall be turned over to the whims of irresponsible persons, according to the superintendent who stated that if the latter were to be the case the school buildings might better be locked and left unused.

WILKINSON RESIDENCE ENTERED LAST WEEK

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Wilkinson was entered sometime between Wednesday afternoon and Friday morning last week. Mr. and Mrs. Wilkinson were away from home on a visit to out-of-town relatives. Mr. Wilkinson left home Wednesday and on his return home Friday he discovered that the dwelling had been entered.

The rugs were covered with burnt matches, the contents of dresser drawers and closets strewn about the rooms. The missing articles after a thorough search consisted of a wrist watch, a gold hunting case ladies' watch marked with the initials J. F. and a fine Collie puppy. The gold watch was one that belonged to the grandmother of Mrs. Wilkinson, who prized it very highly as a keepsake.

The appearance of the home would indicate that it was the work of a young boy or boys and entrance was gained through a window that had been left unfastened when Mr. and Mrs. Wilkinson left home.

The first number of the Lyceum Course will soon be here. Buy your season tickets early.

STAEBLER OIL CO. BUYS NEW LOCATION

Acquisition of Klein Block, West Middle Street, Announced by Oil Company Officials, Saturday.

An announcement of importance to Chelsea and vicinity was made Saturday when the Staebler Oil Company, with headquarters in Ann Arbor, made known the purchase of the Klein block on West Middle street. The building, according to officials of the Oil Company, will be used at some future date for the location of another of the Staebler chain of oil and gasoline stations.

Purchase of the property was made from M. W. McClure, who has owned the building for some time. The White Bakery, present occupants, will continue for the present to conduct their bakery, they having possession under a lease which does not expire for several months.

This is the second site to be purchased in or near Chelsea by Staebler Oil Co., within a few weeks, they recently purchasing the Chelsea Service Station, corner of South Main and M-17. Opening of the second location as a gasoline and service station will not be possible at the present time, but in order to secure a desirable site, centrally located, acquisition was made when the opportunity presented.

The history of the Staebler Company is an interesting one. Organized in 1919 by J. Fred and Edw. W. Staebler, brothers, and natives of Waukegan County, the company first established a service station in Ann Arbor. Growth of the business was so rapid that expansion was deemed advisable, with the result that similar stations numbering six altogether, have been established in the city of Ann Arbor alone. Out-growing the confines of Ann Arbor, the company has been gradually branching out into adjacent territory until at the present time Waukegan county possesses twelve sites which are or will be, Staebler stations: one each at Milan, Ypsilanti, Dexter, Saline, and two in Chelsea. Under the guidance of experienced men, square dealing, and aggressive business principles, Staebler Oil Company has been on the upgrade continuously, making a place for themselves in the oil and gasoline world not to be ignored. With service and quality injected into every deal the general public has come to recognize the economy of dealing with Staebler's and as a result a business of mammoth proportions is reaching out to grasp the opportunities offered in new territory.

Chelsea and vicinity will welcome the advent of the Staebler Oil company here. It is another evidence of the prosperity being experienced by Chelsea and is bound to be reflected in business circles.

FORWARD or BACKWARD?

Following suggestions coming from a number of prominent business and professional men of the village, the idea of reorganization, bringing to life, or starting an organization for the purpose of looking after the business side and welfare of the village in general is brought before the public for their approval or disapproval. Whether under the name of the Chamber of Commerce, Board of Trade, Kiwanis Club, Rotary Club, Exchange Club, or other suitable designation, the organization of such a body would be well worth looking into by those having the future of the village at heart.

At the present time there is no organized movement on foot looking toward the advancement of business ideals, social welfare, community spirit, and betterment which includes the village as a whole. Social clubs and churches, of course, stand for advancement in community welfare as well as other ideals, but from a business standpoint an organized movement toward cooperation among local business houses for a better and bigger Chelsea is sorely needed.

It is not our purpose to point out the work and program for such a board or club. Such a program would be the natural result of a good, live, energetic body of men, grouped into one big brotherhood with one purpose in mind—that of the common good. That there is work to be done is self-evident. We leave that for our readers to determine. But, as suggested by persons who would be enthusiastic supporters, Chelsea is in a position where concerted action on the part of her business men will mean more business, more community spirit, a bigger Chelsea, a more prosperous Chelsea, and last, but not least, a happier Chelsea.

VILLAGE TO FURNISH POWER AND WATER

Gordon Page Baking Company Asks Extension of Village Lines to New Station on South Main Street.

That the village will agree to furnish light, power and water to the Gordon Page Baking company at their plant to be built on the site purchased two weeks ago on South Main street, was the decision reached at the regular meeting of council body Monday evening. Contention that the baking company should come into the village before they should receive benefits of municipal power and water plants was brought up by members of the council, but the final vote was: Hummel, aye; Kogbe, aye; Haselswerdt, aye; Schenk, aye; Chandler, aye; Palmer, nay. Light, power and water will be furnished providing an agreement to be drawn by the village attorney proves acceptable to both the village council and the Gordon Page company.

Extension of the time for paying village taxes was approved by council and 10 days were added to the limit in which time tax money may be paid into the village treasury. An extension of thirty days had previously been made a month ago. Forty-five persons had not paid their taxes yesterday morning.

Discussion of a proposition brought up by Superintendent Boehm of the Municipal power plant, whereby a change would be made in the street lighting apparatus occupied a good share of the evening's session. Under the plan proposed by Mr. Boehm the boulevard lamps would be changed from cluster to single lights of higher wattage, giving more and better light, at less expense, and after midnight, or when lights could be dimmed, half of the lights could be turned out, effecting a saving which is not possible at the present time. All possible speed is being made to change municipal lines to alternating current in order to cease operation of the steam engine, the latter being necessary at the present time in the evening when the added load of street lighting is carried.

No formal action was taken in the street lighting matter, the proposal "hanging fire" for the present. Compliments were extended Mr. Boehm and his assistants for the excellent work done on the new lines in the west part of town, council expressing satisfaction with the quality of work being done.

Informal sidewalk discussion and allowance of bills completed the session.

FORMAL RECEPTION GIVEN MINISTER

Rev. E. L. Sutherland and Family Receive Assurance of Cooperation From Membership and Others.

In honor of their pastor, Rev. E. L. Sutherland and family, members of the First Congregational church and others gathered at the church on Friday evening to formally receive them into their midst and assure them of their hearty cooperation in the work of the church here in Chelsea. The large auditorium of the church was practically filled by members and friends who desired to extend to the minister best wishes for a happy and fruitful pastorate.

A program of entertainment, presided over by Mrs. J. N. Dancer as toastmistress, was listened to with interest by the audience. Introducing each number with a verse of original poetry, Mrs. Dancer called on representatives of different departments of the church who expressed, on behalf of their organization, their welcome to the new pastor and his family. Likewise, Rev. C. S. Risley, pastor of the Methodist church, and Rev. P. H. Grahowski, pastor of St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church, were called on for remarks in behalf of their churches.

Musical numbers were given by an orchestra, the Chat 'N' Sena ladies' quartet, Miss Fletcher, a bell solo, Mrs. Baxter, vocal solo, and organ numbers by Miss Doris Schmidt, organist of the church.

Sutherland addressed the Brotherhood, encouraging the men to carry out a constructive program during the year to come. A roast beef supper was served.

A POLITICAL LABORATORY

Russia set up the rule of the proletariat. Italy revived the Napoleonic scheme of dictatorship and embellished it with the novelty of law enforcement by castor oil. Spain has caused her premier to flee for his safety and emptied the offices of the ministries. Nine generals and an admiral will run the government, the king standing by and trying to maintain a smile of approval.

We look at Europe as a streaming line bed of trouble. We can, more profitably, look at it as a political laboratory—a continent given over to experiments in government, a vast area seeking out a practical method of fitting governments to the industrial order of human endeavor, a testing ground for ideas and thoughts and philosophies and isms.

Probably the most striking thing about the three great European experiments has been the suppression of government by representation. The short-lived Kerensky government in Russia extended the powers and duties of the Duma beyond any dreams entertained during the czarist regime. But the bolshevik leaders would agree to no division of authority. They insisted upon being both lawmakers and the administrators of laws. Nominally, the soviets govern. Actually the dictators lay down regulations as to justice and industry and finance and religion and family life and the dissemination of information. Russia and her admirers advertise the country as a communism. What it really is is an absolutism. Mussolini in Italy is more frank than Lenin and Trotzky. But he, too, governs without check by or reference to parliament. He has declared it as his opinion that the average human creature does not care for a voice in government; all he asks is prosperity and a minimum of responsibility. By this rule he carries on affairs of state. The Spanish experiment is too new to have a philosophy. But it follows the pattern of suppressing popular legislative power. The nine generals and the admiral are the whole thing.

American democracy is in no danger of eclipse. But the American government is very likely to experience modification as political evolution in Europe develops worthy and efficient methods for governing the relations among citizens. The three European dictatorships are throwbacks today to grimmer and harsher times. But they contain the germs of change. They are bound to assume new forms, acquire new methods, hit some time upon valuable improvements in the science of government. We should consider them less as horrible examples than as workshops, testing and trying and at last finding something that all the world can adopt for its betterment.

In a portion of the ancient city wall at Athens has been found a block of marble that formerly was the pedestal of a statue. Three sides of the block are ornamented with superb carvings, and two of the sides have brilliant painted backgrounds. The ancient Greeks, like the more ancient Egyptians and most ancient Cro-Magnon artists of the Stone Age in France, combined painting and sculpture. It is an interesting find, and should be a stimulating one. This pedestal was carved fully 25 centuries ago. Athens has been a city all that time—yet here is this bit of ancient art just come to life. Much might be learned about the origins of civilization by continued, systematic search for a few years, in likely spots of western Asia and southeastern Europe. All that has been accomplished in this line is a mere suggestion of what remains to be done.

Look around you, and note the great number of common men who are making a success of life. There is plenty for those of us who have no great genius; all we need to do is to take advantage of abundant opportunities. Examine into the history of any man who is "getting along" better than the average, and you will find the secret of his success is no secret at all; all he does is to be reliable, work hard, watch out and practice politeness, says a writer in E. W. Howe's Monthly. And the importance of these things have been drilled into our ears since birth. Almost every day I meet a very successful man who does not seem to know any more than I do, but on investigation I conclude he more steadily practices a few of the more necessary good habits.

Every language and dialect spoken in the world is being recorded on copper phonograph disks in Berlin by Prof. Wilhelm Doegen. He says the records will last 10,000 years. If they do, and are played in the year 11923, will anyone except scholars be able to understand them? Ten thousand years from now speech may be a lost art, with people conversing by mental telepathy.

THE NAVY SALVAGE SALE

Going, going, gone! Just like that. Here's your first chance to buy a battleship and get it cheap. But don't labor under the misapprehension that you may go out and start a war of your own with a private navy. The United States has become the world's greatest junk seller. One of the stipulations is that the seventeen battleships and four battle cruisers to be offered must be broken up by the purchaser within eighteen months from the date of the ratification of the treaty limiting naval armament. The treaty became effective August 17, 1923.

There will be four sales, the first on October 25 and others at intervals until November 1. The first sale will be the greatest. At that time four first line battleships, all larger than any others the government will be offered. They are the South Dakota, Indiana, Montana and North Carolina. They have not been completed or launched. Each is 684 feet long, 105 feet wide and of 43,200 tons displacement. Cost figures are not given, but some idea of the huge investment which is to be scrapped may be gained by comparison. The newest battleships in commission are the California and Tennessee, completed in 1919. They are sixty feet shorter and 11,200 tons less displacement than the monsters which are to be sold and junked. They cost close to eighteen million dollars each, but the California and Tennessee are not to be sold. The smallest battleships which will go under the hammer are the old Rhode Island and Nebraska, completed about eighteen years ago at a cost of about six million dollars each. They are in the 14,000 ton displacement class.

There will be a difference of many millions between the cost price and the sale price of the ships. The government will lose this large sum of money, but the taxpayers will be relieved of the heavy burden of the manning and upkeep of the ships. And the limitation of armament treaty may be a peace insurance policy worth a great deal more in lives and money.

TO THE CITY TO DIE

Investigating the Negro migration out of the South into the North, the City Club of Atlanta learned that:

Among Negroes in southern cities the death rate is 127 per 100 births.

In northern cities 115 Negroes died for every 100 births.

On northern farms the Negro death rate was 134 per 100 births.

On southern farms it was 66 per 100 births.

In short, the southern farms alone are maintaining a reproduction in excess of deaths. At the close of the revolutionary war the Negroes comprised about one-fifth of the population of America. They are now about one-tenth of that population. Professor Walter F. Witcox of Cornell university estimates that in the year 2,000 the colored folk will constitute no more than one-twentieth of the national population. Walter Besant made the statement several years ago that the mass of the people of London was kept at its high level by an in-flow from British rural sections and small cities. These places were sufficiently fecund to keep London growing. In the case of the American Negro only one place, the southern countryside, can be looked to for keeping the race numerically prosperous. And the drift both South and North is from the farm to the city.

RED CROSS SEEKS HEIRS OF WORLD WAR VETERANS

Through the county chapter of the Red Cross the United States veterans' bureau has asked that the attention of heirs of veterans be called to the fact that compensation is being paid to dependent wife, children, father or mother of veterans of the World War.

The time limit for filing claims for compensation is within five years from date of death if deceased died in service, or within five years from date of discharge. This compensation amounts to $35 a month for one person and increasing for each additional person. It is entirely separate from money paid on war risk insurance policies. Bonus claims may also be settled at the office of the county chapter in Ann Arbor, as heirs are entitled to bonus.

OUT OF THE GLOOM

Many a Gloomy Countenance in Chelsea Now Lightens With Happiness.

A bad back makes you gloomy. Can't be happy with continual backache.

The aches and pains of a bad back are frequently due to weak kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills are recommended for weak kidneys.

So Chelsea citizens testify. Jacob Houk, 211 Lincoln street, Chelsea, says: "I was in bad shape some years ago and had lumbago and rheumatic pains. For awhile I was compelled to lay off work as the pains across my back were severe. The rheumatic pains were worse in the spring and in damp and cloudy weather, especially in my lower limbs. My kidneys didn't act regularly so I knew something had to be done. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and went to Fenn's Drug Store and got two boxes. I used them until the trouble left entirely. I am at all dealers. Foster-McClellan Co., New York, N. Y."

MICHIGAN'S RAILROADS TACKLING BIG JOB

Michigan's railroads are tackling the big job of handling the peak load of freight traffic this fall with every facility in good condition for the rush of business and every feature of railroad operation brought to a high standard to meet the demands for service, according to a statement issued by the Michigan Railroad Association today. Annually the railroads expect a huge increase in traffic during the months of September, October and November, far in excess of shipments during the other months of the year, and this extra load always has taxed every facility of the railroads.

Last April the railway executives of the country met and adopted a program of things to be done to bring the roads up to a high standard of efficiency by the time the freight rush started this year. The railroads of this State are well up to the standard, it is shown by a statement covering the improvements made to carry out the program adopted. For instance the railroad managers laid down the rule that the roads should, as far as practicable, get their coal storage facilities filled by September first, in order that all coal carrying equipment might be free when the cars are needed for carrying the big load of coal into the State for industrial and domestic purposes. Michigan's railroads, although two of them are in the hands of receivers, have 79 per cent of their coal storage requirements filled now, while eight of the roads out of the twenty-four are up to 100 per cent, in their coal storage piles.

During the war the condition of all rolling stock and motive power became bad. The huge rush of freight of war time wore out a great deal of equipment. At the end of the war came the shopmen's strike, which prevented keeping up the repairs, even of the equipment then in use. In consequence the number of bad order freight cars and defective locomotives reached proportions threatening a bad tie-up in freight service. The program adopted last April called for a clean-up of these conditions and the railroads of Michigan have met the demand, the data compiled showing that 90 per cent of the power equipment of our roads was in perfect condition on September 1st, and the other equipment is 95 per cent perfect condition, it is announced. In order that all possible equipment might be available for us during the busy season, it was determined to push maintenance of way work as rapidly as possible. The first of September found the roads of the State in 85 per cent condition in this feature of the program. Some roadway work necessarily has to be carried on all the year.

Traffic has been speeded up so that the daily movement of the freight cars is now 30 miles, being more than 10 per cent better than it was last year, the Association statement declares. This was the standard fixed and the railroad managers feel that in connection with this part of the policy for better service, they are entitled to the co-operation of shippers in Michigan in making it effective. They urge all shippers to see to it that cars are loaded and unloaded promptly.

President Alfred of the Pere Marquette, Chairman of the Association, discussing the program as adopted and the success of Michigan Roads in carrying it out, said today: "So far as our resources would permit and in the time available, the railroads of Michigan are ready for this peak load period. Some things will go wrong of course, but we believe we have done well and know that our Michigan System of transportation is now in the best condition it has ever been in. If we can have a fair chance we will continue to improve our service. By that I mean we are asking the people of the State to judge us by our accomplishments and not allow heavier governmental burdens to be placed on the railroads, until there can be a demonstration of results under the present regulations."

Dexter—Sunday evening Rev. Frederick Cousins announced his resignation as rector of St. James' Episcopal church, his last service October 7th.—Leader.

Stockbridge—Postmaster R. C. Brown has circulated a petition, and is making an effort to have the first class mail brought down by bus from Jackson in the morning. He was in Gregory and Pinckney Tuesday getting these villages lined up for similar service.—Brief-Sun. The Standard hopes that Postmaster Brown will succeed and the patrons who reside in the north part of Lyndon and Dexter townships and get their mail on the rural routes from the three villages would take off their hats and shout praise for Mr. Brown.

Brooklyn—Brooklyn Knights of Pythias lodge went on record at their regular meeting as favoring two items of community improvement. A committee was appointed to aid in any way possible the improvement of the electric lighting and power service for the community. Another committee will try to revive the interest of Henry Ford in the water power development at Brooklyn. The Pythian order has the idea that it should not only interest itself in fraternal affairs concerning its own members, but that it should be of service to the community.—Exponent.

Moving Your Coal

The 24 steam railroads operating in Michigan are already well advanced in their yearly task of bringing in the coal that will keep Michigan warm and working through the winter.

We are better prepared for this job than ever before.

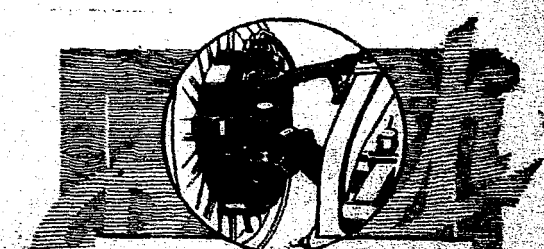

Our repair shops contain only current work; there is no accumulation of crippled rolling stock. Our construction operations have been purposely pushed to release all equipment for this emergency. For four months we have been accumulating our own coal supplies until they are now at their highest point in history—79% of our entire storage requirements filled.

Best of all, we are swinging into use the record-breaking addition of 175 new locomotives, and 21,344 new freight cars, all bought during 1923. More improvements and additions are planned if you will back us by giving your support.

From the gateways, and the junction points, where we receive your coal, we are promptly carrying it on to you. Unload promptly and release our car for us to use in serving your neighbor's needs.

Are we doing this job as you want it done? We ask your criticism or approval.

Last Longer—Less Adjustment

Buick Four-Wheel Brakes

Buick four-wheel brakes not only double the braking efficiency of the new 1924 Buicks by doubling the braking surface, but for the same reason lessen the wear on each brake mechanism in proportion. Buick four-wheel brakes last longer. They require less adjustment and the linings do not wear down as quickly.

Simple in construction and positive in action, Buick four-wheel brakes give added safety under all circumstances. They are of the Buick external contracting type and each brake has a three-quarter wrap or grip instead of the usual half-way grip.

Buick four-wheel brakes are operated with a slight pressure on the service brake pedal. They act quickly, smoothly and easily.

All 1924 Buicks (both four and six) have these new four-wheel brakes. In addition, the 1924 Buicks embody further advancements in power, in construction and in beauty that make Buick more than ever "the Standard of Comparison".

GOOD STORAGE SPUDS NEED HARVEST CARE

Use of more careful methods of harvesting Michigan's potato crop would result in a saving of thousands of dollars to farmers of the state, through better keeping quality of the tubers when placed in storage.

Many farmers fail to realize the need for care at digging time, with reference to keeping qualities of the crop, says H. C. Moore, extension specialist at M. A. C., who gives the following general rules for handling the spud harvest:

"Potatoes should be dug when they are well matured, so that the skin is not easily broken in handling. Immature potatoes are easily bruised and skinned. Such stock takes on a dark color which renders it undesirable on the market. Furthermore, immature potatoes are likely to rot in storage, and the shrinkage loss is heavy.

"If possible, the digging should be done on bright, cool days and when the soil is comparatively dry. When harvested under these conditions, the potatoes will maintain a brighter color and will keep better in storage than when dug in warm, rainy weather.

"One of the main criticisms on the markets against Michigan potatoes is that many lots show too high a percentage of mechanical injuries. Growers are urged to use more care in digging. When digging with a fork or potato hook, pains should be taken not to stab the potatoes.

"The use of the mechanical diggers is becoming more general throughout the state. When properly operated, these machines dig the crop with a minimum amount of injury. The shovel point should be adjusted deep enough to avoid cutting the tubers. "After the potatoes have been dug leave them on the ground an hour or so to dry and toughen their skins."

RAINS CAUSE DAMAGE TO STATE BEAN CROP

Recent heavy rains have subjected the Michigan bean crop to considerable damage in many of the bean growing districts, beans on the ground in process of harvest being dried only with difficulty and the standing crop also showing damage, according to Prof. J. F. Cox, head of the farm crops department at the Michigan Agricultural College.

Bean elevators are said to be receiving beans unusually high in moisture—in some cases as high as 24 or 25 per cent. These beans must be dried down to 17 per cent in order to comply with standards of the "Bean Jobbers' Association and the government for shipment, and the fact that there are only 17 commercial bean dryers in Michigan means that facilities will be taxed to the utmost in handling this year's crop.

"There is great danger of spoilage in holding beans high in moisture," says Professor Cox. "Hence, growers with beans in such condition will avoid risk by selling the crop as soon as it is threshed. Only those who have threshed their beans early, before the recent rains, or who will be able to dry their crop sufficiently before threshing, will have beans in condition for holding for sale at a later date. A large crop of good beans will be produced in the state, but a considerable percentage of it will be weather damaged and will need to be dried and given extra attention in 'hand picking.'

"If the moisture content of beans is above 17 per cent, a just deduction in price is made according to the moisture present. Usually a charge of 25 cents per hundred pounds is made for drying beans which carry from 17 to 25 per cent moisture, and 50 cents per hundred pounds for those above 25 per cent. Threshed wet beans must be dried slowly in artificial dryers in order to put them in condition for storage and shipment and to retain their cooking quality.

"Every effort should be made by growers to dry beans in the field as much as possible before threshing."

Cabinet Members Caught Unawares

Entirely oblivious to everything about them, Secretary of War John W. Weeks and Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. It is seldom that two cabinet members are caught so entirely unawares in a photograph.

After being held in Siberia by representatives of the Soviet government for six weeks, the American-owned gas schooner Iskum arrived at Nome, Alaska, with the two Red guards who had been placed aboard to watch the crew. SWAGGER NEW MATERIALS;
HATS ADD COLOR AND STYLE

IT SEEMS that every possible demand that women may make in materials for her costumes is anticipated by the genius of weavers and knitters and their marvelous machines. As the sports idea has impressed itself on women there have been materials and costumes furnished her, all particularly well suited to outdoor activities, most of them unusually becoming. Some of these proved so attractive that they became the vogue for everyday wear.

Coat With Swagger Charm

The camel's hair coat is still popular but there have been other materials produced in knitted goods that resemble, and rival it and have more individuality. The coat pictured here shows one of these made up into a garment which has a swagger charm and, in addition, combines warmth with lightness. The coat, collar and cuffs are made of brushed wool with a nap of ordinary length. The same but at the top is a large modified collar, in which black latters plush and velvet are combined and it is designed for dressy wear. It is trimmed with a handsome and delicate feather fancy of burnt goose, which forms a substitute for the banished egret.

The small felt cloche shown at the left is in a light orchid tone faced with a darker shade in velvet and trimmed with chenille with gold tinsel thread stitching introduced in the design. Colls of metallic cloth form the material with much longer nap is used in the huge kimono sleeves giving a slinky cape effect. Large square buttons of celluloid add a pretty touch of color. Top coats for fall wear are also made in soft, fleecy fabrics (both woven and knitted). Many of these are shown in prominent stripes and plaids with ample fur collars, and they provide a smart and comfortable garment, rich and stylish enough to be worn almost anywhere. The Chinese influence makes itself felt in the drier styles with collars, cuffs or panels of embroidery combined with materials in black, blue or dark green and high-price fabrics continue to lead in popularity. The military offerings for the present season are bright with color and often glittering with metallic brocades and brilliants. DAIRY

POINTSCommunity Breeding for Improvement of Herds

By community breeding is generally meant that a number of breeders in a community own and use a pure bred sire co-operatively. We read in the Official Record, United States Department of Agriculture, that 75 per cent of the dairy bulls in the United States are either grade or scrub. As long as this condition exists any method by which this high percentage of grade or scrub sires in service may be reduced is worthy of consideration. Community breeding offers a solution to a limited extent at least.

To be successful the bull association should be formed by a very few members, preferably not more than five or six. This association should be confined to a small area, so that the driving distance would not be too great.

The advantages of such an association when it can be efficiently carried out are many. It makes for a systematic and rapid improvement of cattle. Better bulls can be secured by this method and it extends their usefulness in bettering the cattle of the community.

The difficulty is often in finding a group of men who will work unselfishly in harmony. Personal differences should be set aside for the greatest good for the community and the dairy industry. Competent leaders to act as officers are sometimes hard to find. There is also some danger of communiting disease, but if care is taken, this objection need not be a weighty one.

As one dairymen recently said: "Trouble with us, we are all trying to go alone." Co-operation is a good thing so we might take a little trouble in trying to get used to it.—R. W. Fairbanks, Associate Professor, Animal Husbandry, Colorado Agricultural College.

Scours Is Most Common Cause of Calf Troubles

There are a few common diseases of young calves which must be guarded against and treated immediately if detected. Scours is probably the most common cause of trouble. There are two kinds. One, the white scours, is caused by an infection of the navel soon after birth and is almost incurable. The calf is taken very sick soon after birth; the eyes become sunken and the calf dies within a comparatively few hours after showing the first symptoms. The best means of combat is prevention. Disinfect the entire stall and premises thoroughly and disinfect the navel of the calf at birth.

The other is ordinary scours caused by indigestion brought on by overfeeding or giving sour, old or dirty milk or using dirty buckets. This may be prevented to a great extent through careful feeding. The chances for recovery are fairly good if the case is taken in time, but the calf will receive a serious setback and will likely be undersized for a long time.

Outline of Simple Plan to Figure Silo Capacity

If your cows are fed 40 pounds all day for six months they will need nearly 7,500 pounds or a silo capacity of four tons each. In estimating diameter and height, allow each cow 4 or 5 square feet of feeding surface in the silo. Ten cows would require a feeding surface of 50 feet. A silo eight feet in diameter would have a cross section or feeding surface of 50 square feet. For ten cows therefore, a silo should be 8 feet in diameter. Fifteen cows should have a silo 10 feet in diameter (if 20 feet high it has a capacity of 20 tons and if 32 feet high, 61 tons); 20 cows should have a silo 12 feet in diameter. Forty cows will need a silo 16 feet or 18 feet in diameter and about 30 feet high.

Milk Is Excellent Food
for Developing Calves

Milk is a most excellent food for young calves as everyone knows, but it is also very important to furnish the young calf with hay as soon as it is two or three weeks old. Legume hays are the best for the youngsters because they are rich in protein and mineral matter. Roughage helps distend the stomach of the calf and thus aids in developing the digestive system.

For the sake of economy the whole milk ration should be changed to skim milk at the end of the first two weeks or such a matter. The change should be made gradually, at the rate of about one pint per day, otherwise digestive disorders are apt to creep in. It is a good plan also to feed a little grain when the change is made from whole to skim milk.

Big Points on Calves.

Remember that the important things to consider in raising dairy calves successfully are: First, cleanliness; second, regular and prompt attention both in feeding and care; third, proper proportion of ration to produce uniform growth.

Knows Value of Sires. Every good dairymen knows the value of a pure bred sire of good record and what such an animal may accomplish in the way of improving a grade or scrub herd.

CAPTAINS OF ADVENTURE

By ROGER POCOCK

THE CONQUEST OF PERU A. D. 1532

Pizarro was reared for a soldier; long years of soldiering made him no more than a captain, and when at the age of fifty he turned explorer, he discovered nothing but failure.

For seven years he and his followers suffered on trails beset by snakes and alligators, in feverish jungles haunted by man-eating savages, to be thrown, at last battered, ragged and starving on the Isle of Hell. Then a ship offered them passage, but old Pizarro drew a line in the dust with his sword, "Friends," said he, "and comrades, on that side are toll, hunger, nakedness, the drenching storm, desertion and death; on this side ease and pleasure. There lies Peru with its riches; here Panama and its poverty. Choose each man, what best becomes a brave Captain. For my part, I go to the south."

Thirteen of all his people crossed the line with Pizarro, the rest deserting him, and he was seven months marooned on his desert isle in the Pacific. When the explorer's partners at last were able to send a ship from Panama, it brought him orders to return, a failure. He did not return but took the ship to the southward, his guide the great white Andes, along a coast no longer of horrible swamps but now more populous, more civilized than Spain, by hundreds of miles at end of well-tilled farms, fair villages and rich cities where the temples were sheathed with plates of pure red gold. As in the Mexico of eight years ago, the Spaniards were welcomed as superhuman, their ship, their battered armor and their muskets accounted as possessions of strayed gods.

They dined in the palaces of courtly nobles, rested in gardens curiously enriched with foliage and flowers of beaten gold and silver, and found native gentlemen eager to join them in their ship as guests. So with a shipload of wonders to illustrate this discovery they went back to Panama, and Pizarro returned home to seek in Spain the help of Charles V. There, at the emperor's court, he met Cortes, who came to lay the wealth of conquered Mexico at his sovereign's feet, and Charles, with a lively sense of more to come, despatched Pizarro to overthrow Peru.

Between the eastern and the western Andes lies a series of lofty plains and valleys, in these days irrigated and farmed by an immense civilized population. A highway, in length 1,100 miles, threaded the settlements together. The whole empire was ruled by a foreign dynasty, called the Incas, a race of fighting despots by whom the people had been more or less enslaved. The last Inca had left the northern kingdom of Quito to his younger son, the ferocious Atahualpa, and the southern realm of Cuzco to his heir, the gentle Huascar.

These brothers fought until Atahualpa subdued the southern kingdom, imprisoned Huascar, and reigned so far as he knew over the whole world. It was then that from outside the world came one hundred sixty-eight men of an unknown race possessed of ships, horses, armor and muskets—things very marvelous, and useful to have. The emperor invited these strangers to cross the Andes, intending, when they came, to take such blessings as the sun might send him. The city of Cuzco was cleared of its people, and the buildings enclosing the market place were furnished for the reception of the Spaniards.

The emperor's main army was seven hundred miles to the southward, but the white men were appalled by the enormous host attending him in his camp, where he had halted to bathe at the hot springs, three miles from their new quarters. The Peruvian watch fires on the mountain sides were as thick as the stars of heaven.

The sun was setting next day when a procession entered the Plaza of Cuzco, a retinue of six thousand guards, nobles, courtiers, dignitaries, surrounding the litter on which was placed the gently swaying golden throne of the young emperor.

Of all the Spaniards, only one came forward, a priest who, through an interpreter, preached, explaining from the commencement of the world the story of his faith, Saint Peter's sovereignty, the papal office, and Pizarro's mission to receive the homage of this barbarian. The emperor listened, amazed at first, then bored, at last affronted, throwing down the book he was asked to kiss. On that a scintillated and the Spaniards except for their ambush, blocking the exits, charging as a wolf-pack on a sheepfold, riding the people down while they slaughtered. So great was the pressure that a wall of the courtyard fell, retreating thousands whose panic flight stamped the Incas' army. But the nobles had rallied about their sovereign, unarmed but with desperate valor clinging to the legs of the horses and breaking the charge of cavalry. They threw themselves in the way of the fusillades, their bodies piled in mounds, their blood flooding the pavement. Then, as the heavers fell, the golden throne was overturned, and the emperor hurried away a prisoner. Two thousand people had perished in the attempt to save him.

The history of the Mexican conquest was repeated here, and once more a captive emperor reigned under Spanish dictation.

This Atahualpa was made of sterner stuff than Montezuma, and had his defeated brother Huascar drowned, lest the Spaniards should make use of his rival claim to the throne. The Peruvian prince had no illusions as to the divinity of the white men, saw clearly that their religion was the adoration of gold, and in contempt offered a bribe for his freedom. Reaching the full extent of his arm to a height of nine feet, he boasted that to that level he would fill the throne room with gold as the price of his liberty, and twice he would fill the anteroom with silver. So he sent orders to every city of his empire commanding that the shrines, the temples, palaces and gardens be stripped of their gold and silver ornaments, save only the bodies of the dead kings, his fathers.

Of course, the priests made haste to bury their treasures, but the Spaniards went to see the plunder collected and when they had finished no treasures were left in sight save a course of solid golden ingots in the walls of the Temple of the Sun at Cuzco, and certain massive beams of silver too heavy for shipment. Still the plunder of an empire failed to reach the nine-foot line on the walls of the throne room at Cuzco, but the soldiers were tired of waiting, especially when the goldsmiths took a month to melt the gold into ingots. So the royal fifth was shipped to the king of Spain, Pizarro's share was set apart, a tithe was dedicated to the Church, and the remainder divided among the soldiers according to their rank, in all three and a half millions sterling by modern measurement, the greatest king's ransom known to history. Then the emperor was tried by a mock court-martial, sentenced to death and murdered. It is comforting to note that of all who took part in that infamous no one escaped an early and a violent death.

Pizarro had been in a business partnership with the schoolmaster Lope of Panama, and with Almagro, a little fat, unceasing adventurer, who now arrived on the scene with reinforcements. Pizarro's brothers also came from Spain. So when the emperor's death reached the Peruvians to desperation, there were Spaniards enough to face odds of a hundred to one in a long series of battles, ending with the siege of the adventurers who held Cuzco against the Incas Manco for five months. The city, vast in extent, was thatched, and burned for seven days with the Spaniards in the midst. They fought in sheer despair, and the Indians with heroism, their best weapon the lasso, their main hope that of starving the garrison to death. No valor could possibly save these heroic robbers, shut off from escape or from rescue by the impenetrable rampart of the Andes. They owed their salvation to the fact that the Indians must disperse to reap their crops lest the entire nation perish of hunger, and the last of the Incas ended his life a fugitive lost in the recesses of the mountains.

Then came a civil war between the Pizarros and Almagros, whose share of the plunder turned out to be a snowy desolation to the southward. It was not until after this squallid feud had been ended by Almagro's execution and Pizarro's murder, that the desolate snows were uncovered, revealing the incomparable treasures of silver, Potosi, Spain's share of the plunder.

PARTIAL CURE FOR DEAFNESS

New York Makes Announcement That Humming and Singing Will Be Found Beneficial.

That humming and singing will cure deaf noises and make it possible for partially deaf persons to regain their hearing is the contention of Dr. Paul V. Winslow, attending ear, nose, and throat surgeon at the Brooklyn State hospital, New York.

After innumerable experiments, Doctor Winslow has prescribed a series of exercises in singing and humming. For example, he declares that it is excellent practice to hum the consonant "M" in such a way that the lips can be felt vibrating, or to sing the vowel "E" for two-minute periods three times a day, placing the tongue high up in the nasal chambers with a decided nasal twang.

One deaf patient who could not hear his own voice is said to have succeeded by this method in hearing voices three feet from his right ear and six inches from his left. — Popular Science Monthly.

As to Chicks. "Some day," said Uncle Eben, "I may feel that it's up to me to go on one of these here hunger strikes. If it ever happens I'll have to be at do time of year when it's too late for spring chickens and too early for watermelon."

Black Knot Most Serious Disease Must Be Carefully Watched and Controlled by Spraying.

There is a disease of plum trees that bears the very descriptive name of black knot. It is observed on the twigs of plum trees, and sometimes on cherries, where it causes a knot like a swelling that is olive green in color in spring and black in the fall. Where the disease appears on limbs, the swelling may extend up and down the branch for as much as a foot, while on fruiting spurs it may exist as a knot no larger than a grain of wheat.

Caused by Fungus.

Black knot is caused by a fungus that affects the wood, causing it to swell into the rough, deformed places. It is regarded as a serious, destructive disease, and one that must be carefully watched and kept under control. Damaged plums are more subject to black knot, and varieties of the triflora group the least liable to suffer.

Spores of the fungus are liberated in spring from the galls formed the year before. When infection takes place the knots may be observed in the fall, but they are more conspicuous in the spring. With the beginning of growth in spring the knot swells rapidly and bursts the bark, which at that time may uncover a yellowish surface which rather quickly turns to a velvety dark green color. The knot then is covered with a mass of summer spores, which are carried by the wind to spread the disease. Toward fall the knot turns black and develops a new crop of spores that are not liberated until the following spring. These are called winter spores and differ very much in their origin from the summer spores.

Most Satisfactory Control.

While spraying may be a safeguard against infection, the most satisfactory control of black knot is to prune off and immediately burn the infected twigs and limbs. When this is done in the fall or winter, the source of infection is removed. In doing this pruning, it must be remembered that the tiny, little knots so easy to overlook on the fruit spurs are capable of keeping up the infection. Watch for the little knots on the twigs, and cut them out. Burn all of the prunings at once, otherwise they will liberate spores just the same as if they had not been cut off.

Important That Horses Receive Liberal Ration

During the working season when horses are performing heavy work, it is very important that they receive a liberal ration of grain and roughage. Opinions differ greatly regarding the amount and kind of feed a horse should receive when performing hard work. Corn and oats, mixed, make a very acceptable grain feed. A good combination of these two feeds is two bushels of oats to one bushel of corn. A general rule that will give good results is to feed about 1 1/2 pounds of grain to every 100 pounds of horse at hard work. One gallon of grain mixture three times a day is about the proper amount for a 1,200-pound horse. Approximately one pound of good quality hay per day per one hundred pounds of live weight is sufficient. The amount of hay to be fed will necessarily vary somewhat with the kind and quality available. Where horses are turned on a night pasture, they should have access to hay at least during the noon hour. Plenty of water is very essential to good success with work horses. They should have access to clean water in the morning, at noon and during the night.

Select Breeding Males as Soon as Practicable

The selection of breeding males for next season should begin as soon as they can be distinguished from the pullets. The Missouri experiment station bred up a great flock of layers in a few years simply by selecting the cockerels that showed first and the pullets that laid first for breeding purposes. If one does not trap-nest it is difficult to select the pullets from large flocks. But a few minutes spent with the cockerels early on a clear morning will readily distinguish the more advanced males. A peeping red comb is the first indication; and a squeaky crow is the second.

The exceptional cockerels of the Leghorns and other lighter breeds will start to crow at about six weeks. The heavier breeds usually take from eight to nine weeks. These early crows should be marked by wing bands or leg bands and given special attention until maturity.

A few minutes spent in observing the males at this age will repay the breeder many times over for his trouble.

Dampness or Draughts in Hen House Cause Roup

Dampness or draughts in the poultry house cause roup. Isolate the sick birds. Remove as much of the accumulations in the nostrils as possible. Rub the head of the sick hen with camphorated grease. A coal tar disinfectant is useful in treating, and especially preventing roup. The success with most roup cures depends on treating the bird with a cold and curing the cold before the devitalized condition of the hen makes a cure impossible.

Seed Cheapest Way to Increase Corn Yields

Best Place to Make Selection Is From Farm Yields.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Corn yields can be increased more surely and cheaply by the use of good seed than in any other way, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Unless a community has an experienced and honest corn breeder, the best place for the farmer to get seed corn is from the fields on his farm or in his neighborhood which were planted with a variety that has proved successful in the locality. The time for selecting seed corn in the field is almost here and preparations for handling the seed should soon be under way.

In selecting corn for seed, the ears should be taken from stalks which yield best in competition with others. Picking the seed corn direct from the field will give the farmer a chance to do this, and also to get ears that are free from disease and being at a height convenient for husking. Drooping ears which shed grain readily usually will give the best seed, while in the South it is necessary to choose ears that are well protected from insects by a long, tight husk covering.

The sunny day the seed is gathered it should be hung in a dry, airy place. One of the best ways to cure seed corn is to hang it from the rafters of a barn or open shed, care being taken to see that it is thoroughly dry before there is danger of freezing. After it is well cured, store the corn in a dry place where it will not be damaged by mice, rats, birds and insects. The corn that produces the best crop is cheapest in the long run and care in selecting and handling seed corn will be more than repaid by increased yields.

Cut Corn for Silage as Lower Leaves Drop Off

Opinions differ as to the best time to cut corn for silage. While the largest yield of food nutrients will be obtained if the corn is permitted to mature fully well, it should not be too ripe for the reason that it will not pack so well in the silo and is more likely to mold. It may also be somewhat indigestible if fully matured.

Andrew Ross, vice director of the Minnesota experiment station at University farm, says that as a safe working plan one should begin cutting corn for silage when three or four of the lower leaves dry up and drop off. Then the corn will usually be in the milk or hard dough stage and some of the early ears will be glazed or dented. Silage made under these conditions will be at its best for dairy cows.

But for beef cattle, says Professor Ross, the corn should be left in the fields until fully dented unless perhaps a severe drought or hot spell has dried out the corn prematurely. Beef cattle feeders prefer better developed ears and greater maturity of the plant than do those who put up ensilage for dairy cows.

Best Variety of Fowls for Beginner to Raise

Perhaps the most frequent question asked of the poultryman is this: "What is the best variety of poultry to raise?" It generally depends upon the chicken man to whom you address your question as to what the reply will be. If he raises White Plymouth Rocks himself, he will quite naturally be inclined to tell you that Plymouth Rocks of the white variety are the best fowls to raise; if you happen to ask the question of a Barred Plymouth Rock fancier, then in all probability it will be Barred Rocks that you must raise to succeed, and should you ask the question of a Rhode Island Red enthusiast, why then there is absolutely nothing to it—Reds always were and always will be the best breed. And so it goes all along the line—White Wyandottes, White, Black and Buff Orpingtons, White and Brown Leghorns, Anconas, White and Black Minorcas, Golden and Silver Campines and even Blue Andalusians—yes, these and all the others mentioned have supporters somewhere who will tell you that your success is assured if you select the one best variety and each will name a different one.

Take Good Care of All Early Hatched Pullets

Take good care of the early hatched pullets. Sell most of the young cockerels, as soon as possible, but hold on to the pullets and keep them for winter laying. The hens older than two years had best be disposed of at once, unless they possess some special merit for which you desire to carry them over another winter. As a general rule, it is well to keep the flock young and vigorous. Hens will lay just as well without males as with them, and it is an inexcusable mistake to carry over winter a lot of surplus roosters. Get rid of them at once.

Wheat Is Satisfactory Ration for Brood Sows

Wheat makes a fair feed for sows if fed with other feeds in the ration containing better balanced protein and the necessary minerals. Brood sows must not be allowed to become too fat and should not be allowed a ration consisting almost entirely of wheat. If carefully watched and given some supplement such as a legume or tankage the wheat will be very satisfactory.

Highway Commissioner J. H. Miller has commenced work on the road leading by the homes of L. C. and H. W. Hayes. There are a number of large oak stumps near the center of the road and a Mr. Smith of Grass Lake made an effort to blow them out but charges of dynamite from 12 to 15 pounds under each stump failed to lift them out. The cost of blowing out all of the stumps would be more than it would to build an entire new drive on the east side of them and the township officers, after going over the route, decided to make a new drive and leave the stumps to decay. While the trees were cut several years ago the stumps are apparently as green today as they were five or six years ago. The ground is heavy clay and after it has been turned up it will be given a dressing of gravel. The narrow places will also be widened.

Straight Thinking.

Clear, straight thinking is needed today more than anything else. Loose and misdirected thought cannot lead to logical conclusion. Such thought results in a "deadlock" in our own heads which nobody but ourselves can break.

FORMER RESIDENT ACCUSED OF MURDER

Adolph D. Boos, Native of Sylvan Township, Charged With Killing of Man Near Seattle, Wash.

An item of interest to many residents of Sylvan and others is contained in a clipping taken from a Seattle, Washington, paper which gives an account of the trial on a charge of murder in the first degree of a former resident of this vicinity. Mr. Boos, the person charged with the killing, was born on the farm now owned by Lewis Kilmer and spent his younger days in this vicinity.

The Seattle paper says: Opening the fight to win freedom for Adolph D. Boos, Mercer Island rancher, who with A. M. Bailey is jointly charged with the first degree murder of J. C. Smith of Rainier Beach on the Boos farm, May 12, 1923, Attorneys Adam Beeler and Walter S. Fulton, representing Boos, today filed in the Superior Court a demurrer to the information and a demand that Boos be given a separate trial. Argument was scheduled for this afternoon.

Mr. Beeler said he believed the information faulty because it charged both Boos and Bailey with the actual holding of a shotgun at the time Smith was shot.

"It was impossible for both men to be holding the shotgun," Mr. Beeler said. "The state must specify which of the two men it believes was holding the shotgun."

Both Bailey and Boos, who are held in the King County jail without bail, also are charged with beating and choking Smith.

Mr. Beeler asserted that his client should be given a separate trial because the defenses of Boos and Bailey might be antagonistic.

Shortly after the killing, Boos surrendered and said he had accidentally shot Smith. Five weeks later, he made a statement accusing Bailey of the slaying and charging Bailey with intimidating him to make a confession. Bailey was then arrested.

Walnuts in Bulgaria.

The walnut in Bulgaria is almost indispensable to the housewife. The nut is eaten in the raw state and used for producing a cooking oil. The meats are salted, fried in a pan and then pressed with a rolling pin. Jam is made from the green walnuts and large quantities are used in the production of a very potent brandy.

Your "Dollars Do Double Duty" When Spent At Home

THERE'S ONLY ONE ANSWER TO THE QUESTION:

"Where can I spend my dollars so that they'll not only benefit me personally by purchasing their full value's worth but where, in the course of time, they'll build for a greater community and make me more satisfied with both my neighbors and my surroundings?"

It is---

IN CHELSEA!

Because—

Here and here only, can your dollars do "Double Duty".

First, they'll always get you the necessities of life at a lower cost than you could buy them for elsewhere. The personal interest our merchants take in each patron to see that he or she is always satisfied—often sacrificing profit—makes it possible.

Secondly, not only do your dollars go farthest, but—by trading here and keeping those dollars at home—you're contributing to our fair city's PROGRESS and PROSPERITY.

More schools, more churches, better streets, better lighting systems,—in general, a more attractive city—are only possible when every citizen puts his or her "shoulder to the wheel" and "pushes" with their "home spent" dollars.

We, the undersigned business interests, always have and always will be strong for anything that is good for the community. But, remember, we need—
YOUR CO-OPERATION!
