Tomorrow night being Halloween, any persons will no doubt leave...

If being Halloween there is no telling what kind of tricks and jokes will be played. The greatest trouble...

In some places definite steps have been taken to prevent any destruction properly. Special police and deputies...

Whether Chelsea is an exception or it has not yet been given out, but if the same plan is followed as last year...

Did you happen to notice it this morning? Yes, sir. It was hard to believe and even harder to take...

If you talked to some old timer, he could tell about why back in the "ties" then there was a certain winter when...

Never did we doubt the veracity of the old timers, because we respect them too well to think that they could even prevaricate in the least...

Did you happen to notice the crowd that went on the special car to Detroit Monday afternoon? If you did...

Out west they have discovered a bath that only requires bathers to wear a bathing suit between the hours of 6 in the morning and 8 at night.

The four cylinder chariot is still to be seen standing nobly on the street or it can be heard roaring wildly along some thoroughfare in Chelsea.

The chariot becomes his property Friday, he expects to drive the no-piece of machinery to Jackson with men when they go to visit the son.

The barber can drive the car to town and return, it will be a feat of comment. What worries the rest of the men who expect to be in the procession, is whether or not the car can go fast enough to get out of their way...

NEW CURRENT IS NOW IN USE HERE

Boulevard Lights Now Run On Alternating Current

The new 110 volt alternating current is now being used in Chelsea for the new line which was recently installed by the Electric Light and Power Company...

Only a few hours of the new line have been in use, but it is being worked on as rapidly as possible for the remainder of the winter season.

Two business houses were closed over to 110 alternative current as others along the new line will be changed as rapidly as possible.

The new line which extends from the power plant to the truck and up W. Middle street was entirely newly erected. Work in changing over the lines along the line is being carried on as fast as possible.

As the work is being done, the plant changes the meter replacing the one that at present registers the 220 current with one for 110, the meter being property of the owner of the house.

All other changes of meters and equipment have to be handled by the owner with the aid of the men at the plant who help in every way.

LEGION ENTERTAINMENT SHOULD PACK HALL

Tickets for the exceptional presentation by the American Legion of the Six Royal Holland Ball Program...

The program will start at 8 o'clock and seats may be reserved at Vogel's Drug store any time Wednesday.

PLANS COMPLETED FOR TRIP TO JACKSON PRISON

Practically everything is in readiness for the trip that has been planned by the business men of Chelsea to Jackson for Thursday afternoon when they will visit the prison.

About all the business men here have indicated their intention of joining in the procession and taking advantage of the exceptional opportunity offered.

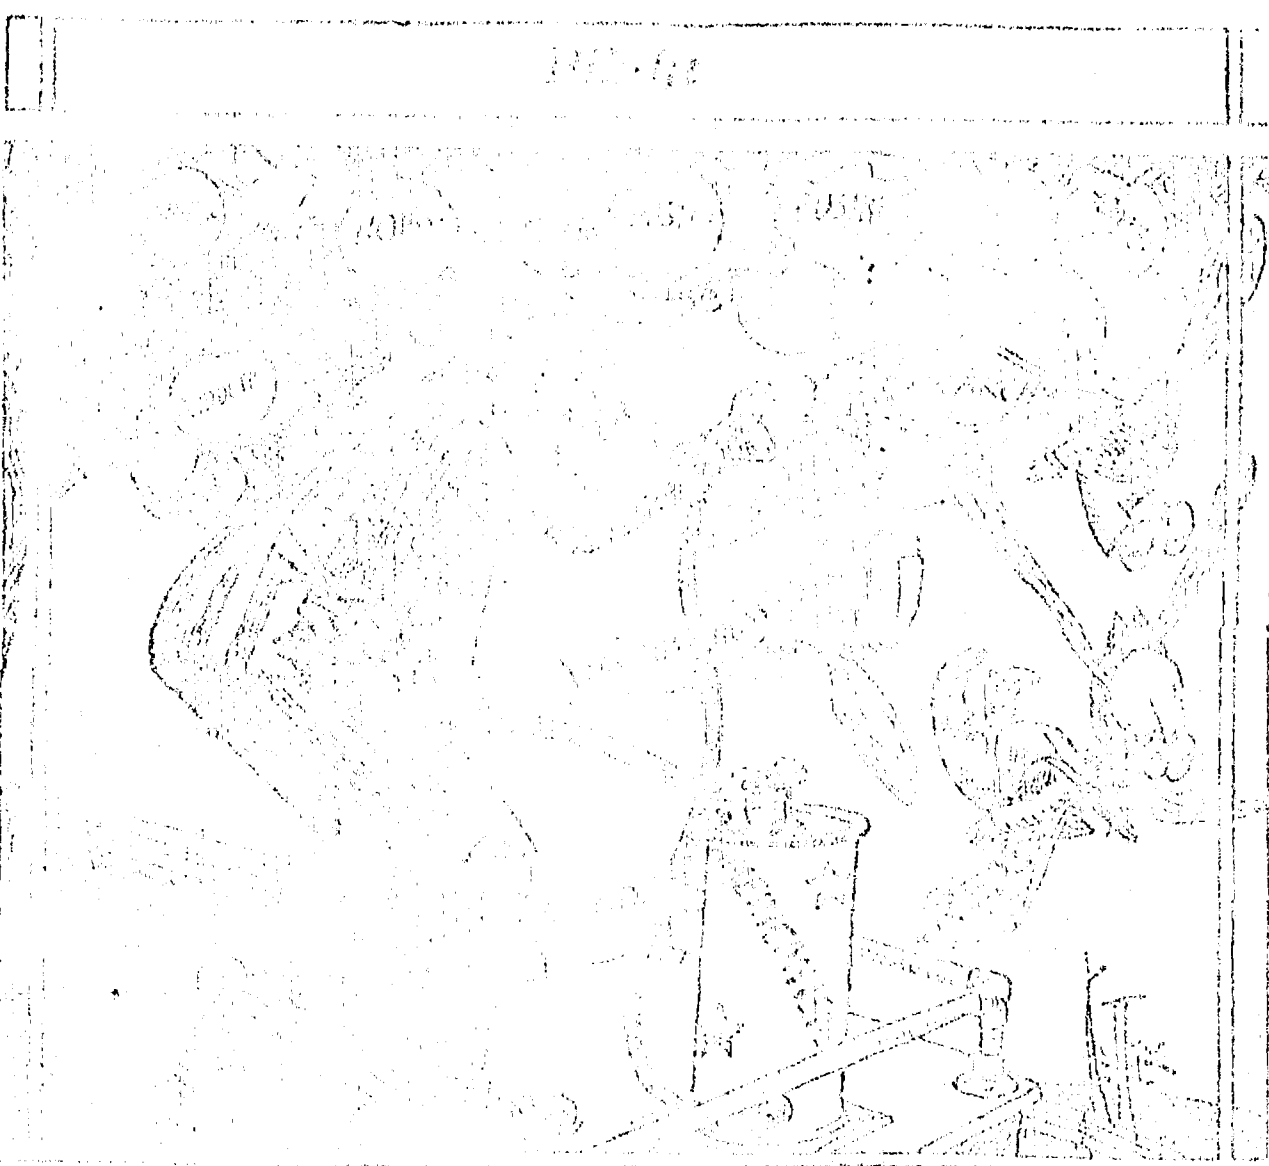

Business houses will close at 12:30 o'clock and the men will meet in the parade procession at 1:30 at the depot.

W. C. T. U. MEETING WELL ATTENDED

The W. C. T. U. held a very enthusiastic meeting in the Methodist church Friday afternoon. Ten Junior League girls led the song service...

Woman and a Water Drop Counting Ford Chickens Staring Children The Squalliest Care

County Clerk Niswander of Michigan reports that each marriage license is sold for $1.00 to insure a happy married life.

Keep up the courtship period. It's 50 on the money and 50-50 on the loss. Don't live with relatives, or keep boards. Don't be a tightwad.

Every man should know that one drop of salt water, properly applied, will tell you all about the Pacific Ocean, which is a collection of many drops.

Counting chickens even before the eggs are laid, says that Ford, running independently, will take a heavy thumping from the Republican party in the coming Democratic victory.

Democrats forget that Ford's chief rival will tell of the wonderful things he has done for the South, at Muscle Shoals.

Ford could draw farmers from the Republican party, but he might also break up the solid South, elect himself, and leave Messrs. Coolidge and McAdams wondering what happened.

October prices are strong. October cotton prices 30 on Wednesday, December went about 25 yesterday. Manufacturers would do well to buy their raw supplies now. Cotton will be higher a good thing for the South and the North, as well.

Investigation in New York shows children underfed, underdressed. Their parents need money to pay high rents.

Handlards say, quite truly, "It isn't our business. We are taxed; wages and materials are up."

Law ought to be the CITY'S business, and it ought to be the business of the entire white race, to see that young children are fed and have a chance.

The undernourished children of Chicago today may mean Avelines ruling in twenty fifty years hence.

The English interfered with child labor and child stunting, forbade the young of children that they might be fit enough for chimney cleaning, even if they found that they grew up too small for the army.

In Germany the piece of a loaf of bread means four hundred and forty flour meals in a day. That number of meals would have been one hundred and forty million dollars before the war. No telling what will happen to men when their money goes as crazy as that.

Four Nations seems to be fighting against a common enemy. In South Africa a deadly scourge and scorching pestilence have dried up the water supply, while locusts, in swarms, have devoured the green plants. It is feared that all will die.

While the rest of the world looks on, Russia, Mexico, Japan, Italy, and the rest of the human beings and nations sit in idly on robbing and killing each other.

Some philosophers have thought that a new planet there might be very rich as there are sick individuals among human beings. This could be one of the richest planets.

The Turk and the Turk have signed a treaty of "perpetual peace" in the document was probably signed in both ends without a scale.

A good treaty for the present, however, for with Russia getting stronger and wanting Poland on one side, the Balkans, and the door in the Mediterranean on another, Poland and Turkey will stay together or take their chance separately.

The Mink of China, invited to at the White House, said, "No, I know one horse can run faster than an ant." (Continued on page four)

OUR POLICIES

Let us all get together for a bigger and better Chelsea. A sewerage system for Chelsea. A building program that is bound to build.

STEALS DICTIONARIES.

A New York clerk is sent to the penitentiary for the fourth time and for the same old offense—stealing dictionaries. His fourth attempt to increase his vocabulary took place in a department store where he saw the king pin of dictionaries—$13.50, which, being a clerk of modest means, he couldn't afford.

You will read a good many days before you find anything stranger than this in the news.

Three times he had stolen dictionaries and gone to prison for it. You'd think he had learned his lesson. Not so. Back he came a fourth time.

Here you see the workings of a curious brain kink or abnormality that is also characteristic of the chronic criminal. What most of them need is expert medical attention by brain specialists.

Off to prison the fourth time, the old man (he's 75, with white hair) who can't resist dictionaries, boasts that his vocabulary now includes 100,000 words. The reporter describes him as having a "scholarly brow."

Too bad some rich man didn't catch him early in the game and "cure" him by giving him all new dictionaries as fast as they came from the presses.

Difficult to understand him and his peculiar craving? Well, after all, isn't it just as sane as some of the cravings of the rest of us have? We know many a man who is "crazier" about golf, salted peanuts or a collection of canceled stamps than this pitiful old character braving jail in his quest for knowledge.

GOOD TO HEAR.

The announcement of Dr. W. J. Mayo that cancer can be cured was good to hear. Of course the joy was tempered by the fact that he said the knife had to be resorted to for cures and that the operation was only successful in cases where the disease was still localized. Cures in this class of cases Dr. Mayo said were 71.8 per cent. And the majority of the cases not localized, can be much benefited by operation. In other words no matter what part of the body cancer attacks the disease can be cured by the knife, provided it is taken in hand in its early stages.

Of course we would feel happier if we could be assured that all cancer cases could be cured. But the fact that the disease can now be entirely defeated in most cases is wonderfully cheering. It was not so many years ago that we understood that one attacked by cancer was marked for the grave.

GREATEST POWER.

The greatest power so far discovered by man is electricity. We all know this instinctively. That's why we get a creepy feeling up our spines when we are caught out in a storm and see electricity in its natural state—lightning.

It's often said that we live in an electrical age. Yet despite the many ways electricity has been harnessed, only 111,000,000 people—or the world's total population of at least 1,700,000,000—live in electrically lighted houses.

Of these 111,000,000, 30,000,000 are Americans. Here is a gigantic power, waiting to serve us. But we have barely started to harness it. In electricity you see the future power, though, as usual, it is taking a fearfully long time to get a wonderful discovery into general use.

IN THE MINORITY.

The tomb of "Bluebeard" Landru in France has been visited this year by an endless procession of American tourists. Most of the time the tomb is covered with flowers left by morbid young women.

It's difficult to understand the psychology of the wreath bearers. But why try to? They're in the extreme minority. For each young woman who would take a flower to Landru's grave, there are at least a thousand who would leave poison ivy. Worth remembering, for most of us are inclined to base our general opinions on the activities of minorities.

OLD WOMAN'S REMEDY.

Mrs. Mary Vermett who died the other day aged 112 years and nine months ascribed her long life to the fact that she had always worked hard and had flooded her home with fresh air and sunshine. Mrs. Vermett was not a doctor but few of them could give a better prescription for long lives. Lots of fun has been made of old women's remedies but Mrs. Vermett left one that will be hard to beat. Even new glands have yet to prove out as a conditioner equalling good old fashioned work and sunshine.

NEGRO AN OUTDOOR MAN.

The death rate among negroes is high. Seventeen out of every 1,000 colored people die each year, according to the government. This is a death rate seven-tenths higher than among whites. Number of negro undertakers increased three-fifths in a decade. Whites are more adapted to stand the wear and tear of civilization, being longer removed from the natural state of outdoor life than the negroes.

Fossils a million years old have good teeth. Wonder what kind of tooth paste they used?

TUBERCULOSIS CAMPAIGN COMPLETED IN COUNTY

51 reactors were found and on the second test 31.

Following is a summary of the reactors found in each of the remaining fourteen townships:

Freedom	28 reactors	1.7%
Webster	7 reactors	.5%
Scio	29 reactors	1.8%
Lodi	18 reactors	.9%
Manchester	26 reactors	1.8%
Bridgewater	28 reactors	1.6%
Pittsfield	111 reactors	5.0%
Saline	38 reactors	1.9%
Ypsilanti	175 reactors	8.0%
Augusta	77 reactors	3.3%
Superior	118 reactors	5.3%
Ann Arbor	31 reactors	1.6%
Northfield	18 reactors	1.0%
Salem	37 reactors	4.7%

The State Department of Agriculture detailed 14 State and Federal Veterinarians to assist in the intensive campaign during September. The salaries and expenses of these men were paid by the State and Federal Departments of Agriculture. These men have now left Washtenaw and are conducting a similar campaign in Eaton county.

Dr. F. W. High the County Veterinarian will continue to do retest work of infected herds. He will also take care of any herds that were missed during the campaign. In addition to this he will take care of the accredited herds as well as retest work for any cattle shipped into the county.

Second Test Next Fall.

At the October session the Board of Supervisors appropriated funds for a second campaign in September 1924.

When the total reactors in the county is one-half of one per cent or less a county is designated as an accredited area and no retesting is done for three years. Hillsdale and several counties in the north western part of the state are now accredited counties. Packers have agreed to pay 10c per hundred extra for all hogs shipped from accredited areas.

Fourteen months work was completed October 1st. The expenses covering this period were as follows: Salary of County Vet. $2,327.74 Field expenses of County Vet. 1,065.53 Supplies, (45000 ear tags, punches, needles, etc.) 1,277.85 Transportation of State and Federal Veterinarians in county drive 2,485.65

Total cost for 14 months, October 1, 1923—$7,756.67 On October 1, 1923, the state had paid Washtenaw cattle owners indemnities totaling $39,884.39. The U. S. Department of Agriculture paid indemnities amounting to $18,557.84. On October 1st, the total receipts of cattle owners for all reactors sold amounted to $20,000.99 making the total receipts received by cattle owners for reactors slaughtered $78,442.22. The average price received by the farmer for each reactor slaughtered was $74.07.

PEGGY'S CORNER

Address all communications to Peggy, care of the Tribune.

Simple Cake.—One scant cup sugar, two tablespoons butter, one egg, 1 cup milk scant, two cups (level) flour, pinch salt, vanilla one teaspoon. Brown is to be very fashionable this winter, especially in the warm russet tones.

All Water in which meat or vegetables have been boiled should be used to make soup.

Any Cold Potatoes, rice or vegetables left from dinner may be boiled again in stock for soup.

In Ironing white Marquessette curtains fold them lengthwise to iron, the outside edge and inside edge together. They are even and nice this way.

Good Form.—The spoons are placed to the right and are held in the right hand, not too near the bowl end. All liquids should be taken invariably from the sides, not from the end of the spoon, which should never be quite full. When taking soup, the motion should be away from the diner, and the plate should never be dipped. After a few sips of bouillon the remainder may be drunk from the cup.

Care of the Hands.—Carelessness in drying the hands is a great producer of wrinkles and rough skin. A soft towel should be used and the hands patted rather than rubbed. Each nail should be dried separately and care should be taken not to break the skin about the nails. Surface spots and a discoloration may be removed with a piece of fresh lemon. After washing and drying the hands it is well to apply a lubricant.

The Cortlandts of Washington Square

by Janet A. Fairbank

COPYRIGHT BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL CO.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Returning to her home in a small town, Milton Center, from a visit to New York, the widowed mother of ten-year-old Ann Bryne announces her wedding to Hudson Cortlandt, socially and politically prominent. Her husband has not been told about Ann, and the new wife fears she will be disappointed.

CHAPTER II.—With Ann, Mrs. Cortlandt returns to New York, to the house of Hendricks Cortlandt, her husband's brother, with whom the latter is living. Hudson practically refuses to have anything to do with Ann, and the child is gladly adopted by Hendricks Cortlandt. Sailing with his wife, to his position as United States minister to Switzerland, the pair are left "reck of the vessel."

CHAPTER III.—Ann satisfactorily fills a gap in Hendricks Cortlandt's lonely heart, and their affection becomes mutual.

CHAPTER IV.—At sixteen years of age Ann is confronted with the beginnings of the Civil war. As Hendricks Cortlandt's acknowledged heiress she is naturally prominent socially, and the situation is resented by Mrs. Hendricks, Hendricks' sister, whose son Hendricks has been looked upon as the natural heir of the Cortlandt wealth. The Civil war breaks out, the fall of Fort Sumter causing consternation in New York and the North generally.

CHAPTER V.—A tentative engagement between young Hennessey and Ann is understood, the youth enlisting in the New York regiment on the first call of the North to the colors.

CHAPTER VI.—His brief term of enlistment expired, Hendricks Hennessey returns to New York. Ann is instrumental in causing him to re-enlist. War hospitals are established in New York, and Ann is eager to help in the work, but meets with opposition from her guardian and his alarmer.

CHAPTER VII.—Ann has her way, and in spite of Mrs. Hennessey's open opposition and her guardian's ill-concealed aversion to the idea, takes up the work of clearing the unfortunate wounded who have been sent back from the front.

CHAPTER VIII.—With her guardian, Ann visits Hendricks Hennessey in his encampment on the outskirts of Washington. He strongly disapproves of her work in the hospital, but she refuses to give it up. There is a rift in their affections.

CHAPTER IX.—From Liberty prison Denaley Howard, forgotten boyhood comrade of Ann is brought to the New York hospital. The girl has her share in caring for him. Beyond possibility of recovery, Ann has him removed from the hospital to his home, where he passes his last few days in comfort.

CHAPTER X.—Dispatches from the front announce the death of Hendricks Hennessey. Ann had written to him, breaking off their engagement, but had confided in no one, and her guardian and relatives naturally believe her heartbroken. Hendricks Cortlandt is sent by the President on a diplomatic mission to Europe.

CHAPTER XI.—From a patient in the hospital Ann gets news which leads her to believe that Hendricks Hennessey is living. In her guardian's absence, with no one to advise her, she sets out for the front, reaching Gettysburg on the eve of the famous battle.

CHAPTER XII.—Before Gettysburg Ann meets Hennessey and by him is committed to the charge of the Marquis Avezzana, Italian military observer with the Northern army. With Avezzana she is compelled to pass the night in a farmhouse near the village. The girl's beauty naturally appeals to the Italian, but they separate next morning with nothing but gratitude on the part of the girl, for his protection.

CHAPTER XIII.—Returning home, with a trainload of wounded soldiers, Ann again meets Avezzana. Their views as to the conventionalities of life conflict. At New York Ann finds the city in a whirlwind of excitement over the enforcing of the conscription law. She imparts her life in saving the colored butler, Joseph, being rescued by a man whom she later recognizes as a childhood friend, Peter Smith, who is taken into the house, until his strength returns.

CHAPTER XIV.—Peter recalls old times at Milton Center, and tells Ann of his ambitions, though they part without an understanding.

Mrs. Cortlandt pained; for a moment she was staggered. "I dare say," she said, at length, "that your guardian is sufficiently infatuated with you to excuse even this impropriety. But if you have ordinary gratitude for his kindness, you will marry Count Avezzana, and save him the embarrassment of explaining your escapade."

Ann's eyes widened. She had no thought of that aspect of her sorry case. "I wish you would let me explain it to you," she said, weakly.

Mrs. Cortlandt furled some of her shawl, at this concession. She scouted herself indignantly, and bent a sorry look on the culprit. "Nothing can explain it, Ann," she said heavily. "There is nothing for you to do but marry Count Avezzana. And your guardian approves the match. I have had a letter from him stating his views in regard to it."

"Oh, may I see it?" It seemed to Ann like a life line in drowning seas. "Certainly not, miss. . . . This young man is everything you could want. . . . head over heels in love with you, even. You would be mad to state, even if you had an alternative, at this concession. She scouted herself indignantly, and bent a sorry look on the culprit. "Nothing can explain it, Ann," she said heavily. "There is nothing for you to do but marry Count Avezzana. And your guardian approves the match. I have had a letter from him stating his views in regard to it."

swift capitulation. "Very well, I'll marry him. You can tell him so."

She looked at the older woman in open scorn; she saw she had been up from her seat; Mrs. Cortlandt smiled, she even kissed Ann—a swift peck on an avowed cheek—murmuring "contessa!" as she did so.

Fanny was all a-flutter over her friend's romantic alliance; the Hennesseys were pleasantly congratulatory, and flattered, too, and Avezzana was delighted. From the moment Mrs. Cortlandt conveyed the good news to him he hurried into a happy conviction that Ann had loved him all along, and that it was only incidentally, and which had prevented her admitting it. He gave her an ancestral ring of such magnificent proportions that it fairly staggered her. With it on her hand she could think of nothing else; she could perform none of the ordinary duties of her life, and looking at it in its overpowering magnificence, she understood why the Italian ladies only picked flowers and sat in the sun.

From the moment of her acceptance, affairs seemed to move along smoothly without her volition. She heard Mrs. Cortlandt and Avezzana discussing an early date for the marriage, her trousseau, wedding presents, and sailings all at once. In a half-hour she was more nearly wedded to this stranger than she had been to Hendricks in all the years of her engagement, and she was aguish at such speed. Mrs. Cortlandt's enthusiasm swept her along on its high tide, mute, but already rebellious.

CHAPTER XVI

Marriage.

Ann entered into her second engagement to marry with a diva determination to like it. It was, she thought, the best thing she could do; she was touchingly ready to be happy; she was only too willing to view her lover with bemused eyes. At first this was made easy by the fervent congratulations of every one she saw; she lived, for a while, in an atmosphere of adulation, for when the announcement was printed in the papers, the future Contessa Avezzana became, all at once, an important person. Enthusiastic acquaintances stopped her on the street to assure her of the good looks of her count, and of the romantic nature of her engagement. It was romantic, she told herself a hundred times a day, and she delighted in Guido's dark beauty. When she was not with him, she thought of him with a faint smile of ardor.

Their interviews, however, were not so satisfactory; the girl found them strangely baffling. Avezzana brought to them a sensuous atmosphere, it is true, of which Ann was tinglingly conscious, but which served only to make more barren the fact that she really knew nothing about this person she was to marry. Hitherto her erotic experiences had all been of an exploratory nature, but this man defeated all her tentative efforts to pry into the closed shell of his inner personality. In the beginning his careful formality amused the American girl; she liked to tease him into impulsive betrayals of it, but as the days ran on she had less inclination to do so. Their talk was of so trivial a nature that she, too, grew formal, but with the important difference that hers was a response to an inner recoil rather than a complicated convention.

She made, one day, an unfortunate attempt to establish companionship. "Guido, I should like to take you over to the hospital. I haven't been there since we became engaged—I am almost ashamed to go—but I want you to see where I've been working."

"You will pardon me, carissima mia, but I prefer to forget those hospitals. . . . Here, in these so charming surroundings, you are all a young girl must be. . . . Beautiful—without experience."

No. He reached out and took her hand in his as carefully as though it were made of fragile stuff. "My Ann, I have this to suggest—that you do not speak to my mother of those hospitals. She would not understand."

"But—there was nothing wrong in my working there. I'm proud of having done it; it was my share of the war." "St. carissima, but now all is different." He kissed her finger tips, one by one, with an air of savoring them, nodding. "Work is for men non e vero?"

Ann looked at him curiously. She found his life amazingly difficult to understand; he was like an unsuccessful but bascule; she could not fathom him in the round. "What work do you do, when you are at home?" she asked definitely.

"I am an officer," Avezzana straightened importantly. "But you hope soon to have peace, Italy?"

"The intelligent! Peace, yes, but there's ready much duties." "What kind of duties?"

"Duties—reviews—but why should you understand?" "Why shouldn't I?" "You are a woman."

"What of it?" Avezzana smiled deeply upon her. "Some day you will know," he murmured.

In spite of the fact that he evidently considered the matter closed, Ann persisted. "Haven't you any work to do, outside the army?"

"But yes—there is always politics." "Shall you run for something? How exciting!"

"It's funny?" "Yes. For congress—or whatever you have in Italy."

Avezzana laughed at that, but Ann could see that he was affronted, too. "No, I shall not—what you say—you for political position. . . . You would better leave all this to me, carissima mio. It is not for you."

She found it impossible to think beyond the reunion with her guardian in Paris. The fact that she was to spend the rest of her life in Italy was unbearable, and she let it go at that. She simply could not take in anything so incredible. She wondered if any other girl was ever married in this way, almost without her own volition, but she was too tired and too dejected to protest. Instead, she tried to do exactly what was expected of her every day, and every day a swift current swept her nearer the vortex. The wedding invitations were ordered, addressed and sent off by hand with extraordinary efficiency and haste. Ann was dazzled by the speed which this machine of her own making attained.

Guido was a Catholic, and he explained casually to Ann that it would be necessary for her to join his church. She had no objections to doing so, and Mr. Hennessey's frenetic but joyful confession would only a faint smile from her. Her father must have been a Catholic, she supposed. The marriage was to be celebrated in the Catholic cathedral, and she went up to look it over, late one afternoon. The distant altar swam in the tremulous light of the candles, and boys in robes were moving mysteriously about. Guido belonged there, she thought, a part of all this traditional beauty, but she felt like a rule intruder. She could not find the sweeping her white satin skirts up the long aisle.

She walked home, in the arid late September heat, with a curiously sinking heart. She could never remember being so spiritless; it frightened her to realize it. Guido was happy enough; she would have hated it had he been as depressed as she was. Perhaps, she thought she owed it to him to tell him how lacking in enthusiasm she was. At the thought her heart leaped up; she would tell him, and possibly he might dispel this unnatural dejection. She found him waiting when she reached home.

"Where have you been, mia Bella?" he demanded, gently.

As Ann looked at his radiant happiness, a perverse desire to shatter it arose within her. "I've been to take a look at your church," she said, coldly.

"My church? Per Bacco—our church, carissima—is it not? In nine days we share all things." "Shall we? Shall we, really, Guido?" "You ask me that?" His devastation at her doubt was thorough, but theatrical.

Ann persisted, in spite of him. "We don't share anything at all, now. . . . There are things I cannot even talk to you about. . . . It makes me very unhappy. . . . She broke off, in a panic lest tears should make her protest ineffective.

"What things?" "Well, that night at Gettysburg, for instance."

"No, you are right, not that." "But why not? It is where you fell in love with me. You told me so, that morning, before you left. Don't you remember? It is a part of us—that night. . . . It is ridiculous to act as if it hadn't happened! When two people love each other they should be natural. . . . We are never natural, when we are together."

"Nature? She is for the people—not for you and me."

"But I am of the people, Guido. . . . You never seem to understand that! I wasn't born to all this luxury. When I was a child I used to be poor; I peeled the potatoes, and brought the cow in at night, and in winter I cleaned away the snow. . . . You don't like me to talk about that, do you?"

Corrupt Politics

Election came round and Liza said her man was going to vote for the Democrats. She was asked why he had made this decision. Liza said it was because the Republicans had offered him more for his vote than the Democrats. "But, Liza, one would think that would be the very reason he would vote the Republican ticket." "No ma'am," she replied, "that proves for sho that the Democrats is the leas' corrupt."

Soft Peddling Daddy.

Betty. "I only put a little water in it to this ink?" ask mother. "Oh, nothing, Mom," replied our Betty. "I only put a little water in it to make it weak as I was writing to Daddy and there was something I wanted to whisper to him."

TARTY YEARS OF FOOTBALL

By FIELDING H. YOST

THE PASSING GAME

ORIGIN AND DEVELOPMENT

The forward pass has done much to increase the interest of the spectator and to draw forth all of the craftiness and strategy which makes the game so universally heralded as the one great American college sport.

Passes of some description are so old as the game of football. In the very first days of the game, as in present day Rugby, the lateral passes and backward passes were used extensively, however, it was not until the old pass play was abridged in 1905 that the forward pass came into serious consideration.

It was during this year, 1905, that the forward pass was declared legitimate as a means of advancing the ball and the beginning of the season of 1906 is credited with the birth of the forward pass. This acceptance of the pass was due primarily to the requiring of 10 yards for downs, the stationing of 7 men on the forward wall and the abolishing of the pushing and pulling tactics, which called forth other than mass plays to make the required yardage.

There is each year much controversy on the originator or "discoverer" of the forward pass but watching it grow from infancy, and using it from the first, it is my opinion that many coaches, and not any single one, are responsible for the passing game of today. I remember distinctly when the spiral pass first came to my attention. During my first year as coach at Wesleyan University, 1897, I was faced with the task of developing punters. At this time the spiral punt was just coming into use and was practiced by very few punters. Not being able to punt efficiently myself, I dropped the ball or my hand to show how it should meet the foot and he caused to rotate and while doing this, found that the ball could be passed more accurately and with more speed in this manner. Needless to say, from then on I began teaching my men to pass spirals.

And I believe such was the cause with many other coaches. By experimenting with their own teams they recognized the value of the pass, gave it attention, and developed it. The forward pass came through many stages of development before reaching its high plane. Shortly after it was inaugurated as a valuable and legitimate means of offense, the rules committee decided to block the field into 5 yard squares designed by chalk marks. A penalty was fixed which required the player, before passing the ball, to be five yards back and away from where the ball was put into play and the chalk marks aided the officials in judging this. The marks and rule were soon deemed too restricted, however, and the straight pass from formations, as of to-day's play, came into use. Since that time the rules have all been made with the idea of encouraging the forward pass.

Even though the forward pass has been a part of offensive football for over 15 years, still there are a few teams that have developed it into a consistent ground gaining attack.

ST. MARY'S ORGANIZE FOR THIS SEASON

The St. Mary's Reserves, last year's state champions, in class C, organized at a meeting held last evening. Ed. Eder, one of last year's men, was elected captain of the team for the coming year, R. Evans, manager, and A. Hindelang, was elected treasurer.

Five of last year's men are out to win their births of last year, but will have to step lively as there are other men to fill their places.

The State championship still in their minds, they are planning to put out one of the best teams that has ever represented Chelsea, to cop off the same honors that they brought home from Detroit last March. The first practice will be held at St. Mary's hall at 7:30 sharp, Thursday night, and all are requested to be there at 7:15.

BASKETBALL MEETING CALLED FOR FRIDAY NIGHT

All members of last year's St. Mary's Regular basketball team, also known as the Chelsea Independents and all persons who wish to tryout for the team and who are interested in organization of a basketball team are requested to meet in the American Legion rooms, Friday evening, Nov. 2 at 7:30 p.m. sharp. The meeting will be for the organization of a team to play under the name of the American Legion. Chelsea will here have an opportunity to show their appreciation for a local team and help support an American Legion team.

The Chelsea Independents were considered one of the best teams in Wash-tenaw Co., and played many teams that were out of their class, but most always were on the long end of the score. Chelsea would have had a chance at the state tournament held in Detroit last year, but lacked the funds necessary to send the team. This year they hope to compete for this honor.

mixed with a bucking and running attack to bring out the strategy and craftiness of the game. It should be used above all as a regular ground gaining play and not as a last desperate chance. Both long and short passes are valuable. Long passes, if completed, bring about many touchdowns while the short pass is equally valuable in that it puts the receiver in the open and it tends to disorganize and spread the defense which makes the running game easier.

Unquestionably, the forward pass had done much in increasing the popularity of football from the spectators stand point. We would like to think that the cleaner and increasingly high standards of sportsmanship in the new game of football is an indication of character and the realization of ethical values in sport. Such is doubtless the case, but at the same time no small part of this is due to the openness of the new game and therefore, to the forward pass.

Marketing Your Products

October in Michigan railroading is always the month of peak load. Coal is coming in; crops are rolling out. To so handle this additional traffic that it may be carried smoothly and without interruption to the normal year-round flow of raw materials and finished products is a task which finds every employee of Michigan's twenty-four railroads, keyed and ready.

Our personnel is at its highest point of efficiency.

Our rolling stock is in virtually 95% perfect repair condition.

Our road beds are in better shape than at any time since the disaster of Government operation. We have bought 620 miles of new rail this year.

Two seasons of prosperity of Michigan have permitted us to invest this year in new locomotives, cars and other betterments the record breaking sum of $75,980,881.26.

Despite restrictions such as handicap no other business, Michigan railroads are solving—not their problem—but the problem of transportation that naturally follows the industrial, social and economic expansion of a prosperous state.

Do you notice and experience this improvement in your transportation? Tell us frankly and fully.

Upon the attitude of you people of Michigan towards your railroad system rests much of the future prosperity of your state.

In the Realm of Society

Enjoy Hallowe'en Party.

The witch of Hallowe'en and a number of ghosts were present Monday night at the home of Miss Katharine Hoffman to meet the members of the S. P. I. club. Black cats, pumpkins, owls, were the decorations throughout the home. The spirit of Hallowe'en was shown by the members by their clever costumes. After the program the evening was spent in games, fortune telling and a special stunt of seeing who could eat an apple the quickest. The president proved herself superior in this art. The hostess served a dainty luncheon in the dining room, which was prettily decorated in Hallowe'en colors. A large pumpkin centered the table and shed a soft light on the diners. Black and orange crepe paper was suspended from the ceiling from which were hung cats, owls and witches. Unique Hallowe'en favors marked the place for the guests.

Hallowe'en Party

A Hallowe'en party will be given the pupils of Mrs. Baxter's Mrs. Luick's, Mrs. Evans and Mrs. Davidson's classes at the Congregational church parlors Tuesday evening, Oct. 30, from 6:30 to 8:30. Spooks, goblins, games and fun are a part of the surprises in store for the pupils. Hallowe'en refreshments will be served. Come children, don't miss the fun.

House Party

Mr. Paul Maroney was host to a party of young people over the weekend at his lovely summer home at Cavanaugh Lake. Those attending were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Staffan, Miss Gladys Schenk, Misses Jessie Clark and Miss Roxanna Alexander of Wayne, Carl Chaudler and Herbert Schenk and the host.

other and I don't care which it is." A hundred thousand who feel differently attended the race between an American horse and the British Derby runner last week. Many very likely laid their first bet on a horse because of excellent advertising the international contest had.

If you failed to see the race comfort yourself with this thought: An automobile can be bought for less than $500 that could run both of those horses and half a dozen others to death in a forenoon.

The most exciting romance ever filmed The George Fitzmaurice production TO HAVE AND TO HOLD with Betty Compson and Bert Lytell form the novel by Mary Johnston. Here's the world's most gorgeous romance living gloriously on the screen—a masterpiece of thrills and beauty. You'll see lovely Betty Compson as the royal maid who jilts the King's favorite for a commoner. You'll see Bert Lytell as a dashing soldier of fortune who dares a hundred deaths to win her love. You'll see roaring fights on land and sea, a pirate ship blown to atoms, passionate love scenes in thatched huts and royal boudoirs, all the shimmering splendor of a profligate court. The brilliant supporting cast, headed by Theodore Kosloff, includes W. J. Ferguson, Raymond Hatton and Walter Long.

More than a wonderful picture—a breathless adventure of pure delight!
