"BILL"

Now that it's over, it is hard to believe, but it is all true and everyone is mighty glad that they did not miss it. Yes, it was the largest crowd of Chelsea men that was ever seen together at one time, and it was a sight that was well worth seeing. Those who were so unfortunate as to miss the big time can only listen to the others and stand by making their regret as short as possible.

First place it looks like a real brotherly spirit and that we are told about but seldom. It looks like cooperation will bring about the things that all look for in Chelsea.

When the men stood in front of the prison awaiting orders to proceed, someone passed the remark that it wasn't enough of the male species back in Chelsea to even put out a roof fire, and it was about as true as home. Someone else suggested that it would have been a good day for a bank robbery. How many men there were left back here is hard to say but at any rate they were few in number and no doubt small in size.

In the crowd at the prison there was almost every business that could be mentioned, represented. If we tried to list all that were present, it would take up too much space and for fear that someone might be overlooked and they naturally would feel slighted, for which we can't blame them, we are leaving the list out.

Chelsea made a fine showing and the turnout was one that would have almost appeared unbelievable. But the big thing of it all was the fine spirit. Warden Harry Hulbert was a royal host and entertained. His friendliness was the kind that made you feel at home, even though you were in the state's prison for awhile. Those high walls and formidable gates held no fear for the Chelsea men because they knew that the warden would go a long way toward getting them out.

The tour of the prison and industries was the most interesting and educating trip that could be made by any group of people in Michigan. Here was seen the workings of industries as great as any place in the state, all different and yet arranged by one head, the warden. The bewilderment of it all is that one man can take care of some twenty odd industries besides three farms and what else is hard to tell, and in conjunction with this take care of the small and large cases of punishment that are sent to him from all over the state.

Such a feat is the one that Warden Hulbert has to perform and he carries on his business with the exactness of the finest machine. When a man of such type comes before the people he seldom is an entertainer and a host, but here again is found the exception because the warden is a most elaborate entertainer.

At the first census, it looked like the crowd at the banquet was going to be comparatively small as compared with the number who went through the prison, but when certain facts were passed out some folks evidently changed their minds.

And the speaker who spoke so highly of Chelsea and its fine water and the blonde waiter in the restaurant. Where did he eat when he was here and what did he drink before he came? It must have been before because according to the warden he would not have anyone in the prison from here except for the 18th amendment. But at that Chelsea can be proud of the drinking water it has and more than that it can be very proud of the village.

All that is needed is some of that spirit that was so obvious when men called each other brother and had the idea presented in an impressive manner, that the only way to get ahead is by doing it yourself, and not expecting help from anyone else. Chelsea business men should now see the idea, and get together, without the selfish motive of personal gain but of community betterment and growth. This can only be accomplished by organized effort and cooperation among all. Petty grievances and dislikes can easily be thrown aside as they were yesterday and the desired end obtained.

Several interesting comments were made in regard to the souvenirs that were given at the dinner tables last evening. Some folks wondered if the use of soap was an insinuation that they might need a bath and then to top all there was a brush to help scrub

FEDERAL PETROLEUM
CO. BUYS BAPTIST
CHURCH PROPERTYModern Gas Filling Station to be Erected on Corner.

Over a week ago a deal was consummated between the Federal Petroleum Company of Jackson and the State Baptist Association for the purchase of the property on the corner of Main and Orchard streets. At the time of the purchase this paper was asked to withhold publication for a short time regarding the purchase of the property, and the deal was finally closed with the Federal Petroleum Co. of Jackson, when they were the highest bidder.

The old Baptist church which has been unused for several years will be razed by the company and in its place will be erected a modern drive-in filling station. The station will be built with beauty and service as the aim.

According to James Park, local agent of the company, the new building will be started as soon as possible and it is planned to have the new station in readiness by the first of the year.

The Federal Petroleum Co., whose main offices are in Jackson is doing business over the entire country and even into foreign lands.

BELL RINGERS PLAY TO APPRECIATIVE HOUSE
WEDNESDAY

Before a large audience at the opera house Wednesday evening, the Six Royal Holland Bell Ringers put on by the American Legion, Herbert J. McCune Post, No. 31, presented a program that furnished a delightful evening for all and was well worth the price paid. The melodies rendered were all the old songs that everybody loves and were played with skill on the different instruments. The company consisted of father, mother, and three children, all dressed in their native costumes which added to the effectiveness and made a most pleasing spectacle. The Westminister Cathedral chimes and the Cymbal Harp were certainly pleasing. The bird music by the boys was exceptional, and the singing in the Holland language transported one to the famous dykes and windmills of old Holland with its cultured and talented people. The company was enthusiastically received and held the attention with hearty encores and applause of the audience to the end of the concert.

LOCAL FREIGHT AGENT TO RETURN TO DETROIT.

G. A. Gifford who for some time past has been the local freight agent, has resigned his position here with the Michigan Central R. R. and will return to Detroit where he will return to the audit department of the same company. Before coming here Mr. Gifford was in the audit department of the Michigan Central. Relief agent Baughman of Detroit will take charge of this office until another agent is obtained. Mr. Gifford resigned his position here Thursday.

Big Events in the Lives of Little Men

JUST TWO BOYS

By: Dr. Fredrick A. Perry, Director,
Boys' Work, The American Legion.

That was all. Just two boys. Not different from most boys—plump, rosy little fellows, aged two and four, about, the like of which we pass daily on the city streets without a thought.

But these two boys were different, for they were at this moment being taken away from their mother. The mother of the American Legion Children's Bill was there, trying, at the same time, to reassure the weeping mother, and to make friendly overtures to the rather shy little boys.

But what is it all about? It is only another one of those tragic stories of suffering which are going on all about us and which we are too busy to too selfish to notice. This was but another one of the reasons why the American Legion of Michigan has established a Children's Bill—available haven of refuge for the widows and orphans of the World War. These little fellows, whom we will call "Teddy and Eddy," are the sons of a soldier who was wounded on the western front, but like many others, was pronounced cured when discharged from the service.

This husband and father resumed life's work and all went well, while little ones were added to his family, until suddenly the healed wound in his head again began to trouble him, and soon he became violently insane and was committed to an asylum. The little mother now took the burden of caring for her family, by working out through the day and returning to her household in the evening. By being of strict economy she got along very well while weary months passed until the joyful news was received that her husband was to be released; that he was again well. But, as though the cup of her sorrow was not yet filled, the excitement incident to the return home of the afflicted man rendered him again violent, and it was only the intervention of neighbors that prevented him from taking the lives of his loved ones. This last blow was more than the overtaxed woman could stand and she yielded her little ones to the kind care of her husband's buddies at the Children's Bill. Of course, they would have been glad to have taken the mother along with her little ones, but, because of lack of funds and room (the same old story), the mother was left standing desolate on the walk, while the taxi, bearing all that was dear to her in life, rolled away. Turning to the woman, after the taxi had disappeared down the street, we found her crumpled like a wilted flower, in a dead faint on the walk, and our last glimpse was of kind neighbors leading her into her cheerless home.

Yes, these were but two boys, but back of their lives is a story of suffering, which need not be, if all the kind-hearted and generously inclined people of the country would stop to consider. The heavy burdens which are crushing the life out of this poor woman might be lifted if each one would assist, even a little. It would go far toward healing the wounds that are now sapping the lives of our citizens.

Be glad that Teddy and Eddy are happy within the spacious confines of the American Legion Children's Bill, but make it possible by your gifts that the mother can there join her little ones.

EXPERT ROAD BUILDERSBureau of Public Roads Performs
Great Service

The administration of the Federal Aid road acts are in the hands of the Bureau of Public Roads, Department of Agriculture, which organization develops the enormous responsibility of seeing that the millions of Uncle Sam's money for aid in state road programs, are wisely spent upon needed roads, that the states contribute their proper proportion of the cost of such roads, and that the roads are properly built from an engineering standpoint.

This organization, which started as a small office attached to the Department of Agriculture, has grown to the status and dignity of a bureau, housed in a building by itself, and with a large and competent force of road experts. These not only look after the clerical details of the work, and superintend the engineering features, but in addition do a great deal of educational work, and maintain one of the best equipped and most scientific of testing laboratories for road materials in existence.

The experimental work of the bureau has been of the highest value to roadbuilders everywhere; not only the laboratory work, but the actual construction and testing of stretches of road of all kinds, in all climates, and in many locations. The outdoor tests of the speeds of automobiles with reference to the amount of dust raised and damage done to water-bond roads are classic in the industry, and bureau information of the effect of impact of loads upon roads, worked out according to drop of wheel, weight of load, and size of wheel, were fundamental in road construction.

The enormous road mileage built and building, with the aid of the Federal Government, is a series of monuments to the ability, fore-sight, wise planning, and able administration of this bureau of the Department of Agriculture.

NEW MILL STARTED
OPERATING WEDNESDAYLarge New Unit Greatly Increases
Production

The Chelsea Milling Co., who for some weeks back have been busy installing a large amount of new mill machinery, turned on the power Wednesday to grind the first flour through the machinery.

A battery of seven new machines has been installed which handle the wheat from start to finish. These machines have more than doubled the capacity of the mill. All the machines are of the best make and have the newest of patents. During the installation of the equipment eight millwrights have been constantly employed.

The new unit is operated by a 100 HP motor, whereas the old unit used by a 60 HP motor. As the mill gets into perfect operation the output of flour will be about 300 bushels a day, which will require at least 2 carloads of wheat a day.

As soon as the new unit gets into operation the old plant will be shut down for repairs and then held in reserve for times when it might be necessary to operate it.

MAN HAS NARROW ESCAPE

WHEN D. U. R. CARE HITS AUTO

A Ford car driven by Alvin Vail had a narrow escape Thursday noon, when he came to the crossing of the D. U. R. tracks on S. Main street and proceeded without stopping. A repair car switching at the crossing was going east and struck the car just enough to smash a rear wheel and spin the machine around. Both auto and street car stopped at once. No one was hurt.

A new Buick sedan being driven from Stockton, Illinois, turned off the pavement and into the ditch just west of town Wednesday, and smashed into a tree. The driver said that he was looking out into a field that ran off the road. The car was badly damaged, the front end all being smashed in.

VISIT JACKSON PRISONBanquet At City Club Given To Chelsea MenAfternoon And Evening Completely Filled With Finest Of Pleasures

Wonderful, marvelous and great, were three of the most used expletives yesterday by the business men of Chelsea who visited the Jackson State Prison as the guest of Warden Hulbert. The business men were all more than pleased with the wonderful time that was extended to them on the visit and feel greatly indebted to the men who were so hospitable.

The largest crowd of business men and people of Chelsea that has ever gotten together for one social and educational time was the showing made Thursday afternoon. When the count was made going into the prison there were 162 men from Chelsea, 14 marks and 10 men from the Jackson Chamber of Commerce. At the appointed hour the streets of Chelsea were lined with autos and men. At least 45 machines were used to take the crowd to the prison city.

Largest Crowd That Ever Went Through Prison.

Upon arriving at the prison the entire group was greeted by Warden Hulbert. With the aid of the men from the Chamber of Commerce of Jackson and the guards the large aggregation were escorted through the prison in groups of 12 and 14. This trip was one of the most educational and inspiring, according to most of the men, that they had ever taken.

According to the warden the Chelsea business men comprised the largest single group of people that have ever gone through the prison at one time. Totalling 162 men, this number exceeded that of the Detroit men who came to the prison last summer by 52.

A short sketch of the various industries that were seen in operation behind the walls or under guard might be interesting. First the cells of the inmates, and then their dining room, where they can all be fed at once. Some of the factories were: the stone cutting shop where stones were being made into monuments and were being cut by skilled hands. The feed factory where chaffs and settees etc. were being woven by the prisoners. Their hands traveled with the dexterity of machines as they completed their operations.

The canning factory was in operation peeling the apples by hand, and cut and sliced them. The sealing and cooking machinery was all operated by the prisoners. In the machine shop and other places were men busy employed. In the aluminum department the spinning of aluminum pans and dishes was witnessed, also the polishing of the wares.

The binder twine plant was another extremely interesting place, where the manufacture of the twine was seen from the hemp as received and until it was in the finished product. The men also saw the automobile licenses that would adorn the cars in Michigan next year, as they were being made and then painted black upon yellow.

At the farm were more scenes that pleased. The textile industry there was wonderful. The fine cattle and horses that were at the farm and the Improved conditions showed fine management.

Banquet at City Club.

At the farm the warden instructed all to be sure and be at the Jackson city club at six o'clock for a real dinner, and from the number that were there, it was obvious that but few deserted. Over 200 were served in the banquet room of the club. John Louren was chairman and welcomed the Chelsea men. Entertainment was furnished by Miss Seafeld of the Capitol Theater who sang several songs for the men.

H. D. Witherell and John Kalmbach were called upon by the chairman and voiced the great appreciation of the Chelsea men for the hospitality extended. N. S. Potter, president of the Michigan Portland Cement Co., gave a fine address. President Warren R. Daniels expressed his appreciation to the warden and the business men of Jackson and also to W. S. McLaren of the Capitol theater where the men were entertained during the evening. Louis Appleton of Jackson, gave a most inspiring address which brought to every mind the idea that has been lying dormant for some time, which was that Chelsea had to pull for itself and not expect anyone else to help. Mr. Appleton complimented Chelsea on the fine village that it was and encouraged concerted action in all efforts.

Warden Harry Hulbert gave the men a few of the facts and figures that are coincident to the prison and that show the wonderful strides that this institution has made. The warden outlines the plans of the prison for the coming year. He said "Fifty six percent of the criminals come from Detroit. There are fifteen lifers in our prison from Jackson but not one from Chelsea and if it were not for the 18th amendment I would not have anyone from Chelsea."

During the dinner several souvenirs were passed to the men present. All were either Jackson made products or products sold in Jackson.

All seemed hard to realize, and the continued expression of bewilderment at the fine showing made by the business men was indication that this was the first time that such a gathering had been made. To President Daniels much credit is due and for the hearty enthusiasm that he took of the matter and in seeing it carried out with such fine success. To Warden Hulbert no end of thanks can be extended for his cordial reception and painstaking care to insure a pleasant time.

The Jackson Chamber of Commerce and its men are also to be thanked for their courteous reception and attentiveness in assisting the Chelsea visitors. Such a trip has never before been deemed possible but with a wonderful spirit of co-operation and brotherly love all joined in and made the day one long to be remembered by all of this place. How a reciprocation of such kindnesses is possible is not known at present but it is hoped that some day it may be possible.

OUR POLICIES

Let us all get together for a bigger and better Chelsea.
A sewerage system for Chelsea.
A building program that is bound to build.

TRADE WITH ARGENTINE.

The leading South American country is Argentina and our trade with that country encounters greater competition than with any of the other Latin American nations. Roughly stated about one-third of Argentina's imports are from the United States and about one-fourth from Great Britain. Exports from the Argentine go about 28 to 30 per cent to the United States and 15 to 18 per cent to Britain. France comes third in Argentine foreign trade.

During and immediately following the war Argentine enjoyed unprecedented prosperity, due to its ability to export its agricultural and pastoral products at record prices. But the effect of the rapid drop in prices toward the close of 1920, coupled with a lessening of the European demand for these commodities, struck the country with full force in 1921. Large advances had been made by the banks on cattle and wool and the drop in their values brought about many business failures and a tightening of money. The decrease in value of the peso (normally worth about 97 cents) was the cause of the cancellation of orders placed in the United States, the refusal of goods actually shipped, and the almost complete cessation of any placing of new orders. The end of 1921 showed a far more cheerful outlook, especially for business relations between Argentina and the United States.

According to statistics of our department of commerce our trade with Argentina for 1922 (fiscal year) totaled $141,000,000, divided into imports from $61,000,000, exports to $80,000,000. For 1923 it totaled $241,000,000, divided into imports from $132,000,000, exports to $109,000,000. Comparing the first eight months of the current year with the same period last year, imports have nearly doubled, while exports increased 34 per cent. The trade of Argentina ran as high as $1,800,000,000 in 1920, exports totaling a billion. In 1921 it fell to about $1,300,000,000.

The 1921 figures are the latest we have itemizing the trade between the United States and Argentina. From them we learn that our chief imports from that country, expressed in millions of dollars, were flaxseed nearly 9,000,000 bushels valued at $14,800,000; wool 34,000,000 pounds valued at $12,000,000, about 80 per cent of it clothing wool; quebracho extract for tanning leather 117,000,000 pounds valued at over $5,000,000; hides 87,000,000 pounds worth $13,000,000; about 15,000,000 pounds of meat and dairy products; $3,000,000 worth of furs; various metal and ore products and a few agricultural commodities. When corn was on our free list we imported considerable Argentine corn.

Our exports to Argentina that year totaled $111,000,000. Being an agricultural country the Argentine looks to us chiefly for manufactured goods, and our exports of farm and dairy products reached but about $5,000,000, including meats, tobacco, and other agricultural products. That left something over $100,000,000 in manufactured goods purchased from us by the Argentinians—agricultural implements, automobiles, cotton textiles, electrical machinery, iron and steel products of all kinds, paper manufactures, photographic goods, over $5,000,000 of lumber products, and about $16,000,000 of mineral oil products.

Argentina will continue to be a highly competitive field in which American exporters will have to meet the prices and terms offered by European manufacturers, declares our commercial attaché in Buenos Aires, who advises our exporters to place their own agencies down there. He also says the political events of the past year have inspired more public confidence toward the United States. The Argentinians are a fine people and their friendship and markets are well worth cultivating.

ENFORCING PROHIBITION.

William Allen White, the Kansas editor said a mouthful the other day when he declared that enforcement of the prohibition act will be a sham until such time as United States senators controlling federal patronage see to it that men who are appointed dry enforcement officers are dry themselves. Persons familiar at all with federal enforcement know that in this branch of the federal service are any number of men who don't believe in the law they are supposed to enforce, drink all they can get themselves and see no violation by persons with whom they are on friendly terms for one reason or another. In consequence there is more or less a free flow of illegal liquor into American communities.

Arguing that the state and city governments should stop this flow of booze is like opening up a dike and telling the people it's their duty to keep the sea out.

It is the duty of city and county and state officers to fight the illegal liquor traffic. And it is true that many of these officers don't show an enthusiasm for their work. But they have little opportunity for mopping up, even if so disposed, so long as there are permitted breaks in the federal dam.

FOR WETS AND DRIES.

An absolute drying up of the country is what those wets who believe in temperance want, as well as the dries. Bootleggers and rum runners are strong for present conditions. They take risks but the profits are great. They would be confounded if the country should vote for beer or beer and light wines.

The only way we can get a showdown on liquor is to make it impossible to buy it. Then we would have a vote which would show conclusively whether the majority is for the one-half per cent law or not.

Anybody familiar at all with the trend of American opinion knows that it is absolutely set against strong drink and the old saloon. But there is debate as to whether a modification of the Volstead act permitting wine and beer would carry in a popular vote. It would carry a majority of the states but it would likely get most votes. That is if the country were dry.

This is the season for pancakes. Do you ever serve them for supper with oodles of real maple syrup. They are good. Here is a recipe for sour milk pancakes. Two cups sour milk, two cups flour, a teaspoon of sour cream if you have it, two eggs, salt, two teaspoons soda. Beat eggs, add milk, and sift flour, salt and soda.

Good Form.—Never crumble the bread, mark on the table cloth or play with the silver. When eating hold the elbows not more than six inches to the right or left of the body. Eat slowly with closed lips. Do not attempt to speak with food in the mouth.

When only the white of the egg is used the yolk may be kept in a cup or glass covered with a damp cloth fastened with an elastic band. The same holds true if only the yolk is used.

Changeable Velvets are new this season and are particularly liked for wraps.

Don't Forget that fresh fruit is an excellent dessert and one that requires slight preparation. Serve it daintily and it will always be accepted.

Fur Lined Coats are shown extensively in Paris, the outside being a soft wool mixture or sometimes a silken fabric.

Care of the Hands.—There is nothing more attractive than a nice hand and there is certainly no member of the body subject to so much misuse. It is possible to make any hand look well, and women naturally blessed with pretty hands are often curiously oblivious to the necessity of caring for them.

Michigan Happenings

"Newspapers gradually are becoming strong, self-sufficient business organizations, with no hidden master, independent of the large local advertiser or banker, politician and uncompromising defenders of the public faith and the public welfare," and while commercialism now is the dominant note, there is no reason to believe that it is more than a passing phase," declared James Wright Brown, editor of Editor and Publisher, talking on "Tendencies of present day Journalism," before the University Press club of Michigan recently.

Wayne county's budget as approved in final form by the county board of supervisors is $7,635,512.11. Income to the county treasury from various sources provides approximately $2,000,000 of the amount required to run the county this year, leaving $4,774,191.22 to be spread upon the county tax roll. Property in the city of Detroit, which pays 79 per cent of the total county tax will be required to pay $3,863,744.30 of the total county tax. The county tax rate will be $1.53 per $1,000 of valuation this year.

In recommendation of the committee on a code of ethics for newspaper practice, the University Press club of Michigan, at its fifth annual session in Ann Arbor, adopted the "Canons of Journalism," established by the American Society of Newspaper Editors, in Washington, D. C. April 23, Michigan being the first state to take such action, which, it is believed, will lead toward recognition of a national code of ethics for newspaper publishers.

Under the direction of John C. Hoekje, 37 extension classes have been organized by Western State Normal school of Kalamazoo, in 21 cities of southwestern Michigan. By means of the extension course teachers can continue their professional work and still pursue their studies in the local schools. Courses are being offered in psychology, literature, history, economics and other subjects.

"For man in man and master of his fate."—Idylls of the King. This is the spirit that we find in the story of the "Idylls of the King." Out of the night that covers me, black as the Pit from pole to pole, I thank whatever gods may be for my unconquerable soul.

It matters not how strait the gate, how charged with punishments the scroll, I am master of my fate; I am captain of my soul.

Few men, however, are satisfied to be masters of their own fate; they wish to be masters of the universe and its fate as well as Epictetus puts it:

"When it is in our power to take care of one thing, and to apply to one, we choose rather to take care of many, and to incur ourselves with many."

body, property, brother, friend, child and slave; and by this multiplicity of innumerable we are burdened and weighed down. Thus, when the weather doth not happen to be fair for sailing, we sit screwing ourselves, and perpetually looking out. Which way is the wind? North. What have we to do with that? When will the west wind blow? When itself, friend, or Aeneas pleases; for Jupiter has not made you dispenser of the winds, but Aeneas."

Just as Descartes arrived at his philosophy of belief through first doubting everything, even mathematics, so a man becomes master of his fate through being able to say sincerely:

Conduct me, Jove, and thou, O Destiny, Wherever your decrees have fixed my lot.

Or through meaning what many millions say by rote, meaninglessly: "They will be done in earth, as it is in heaven."

Epictetus points out Diogenes as an example of a man who was master of his fate and captain of his soul: "Not because he was of free parents, for he was not; but because he was so himself, because he had cast away all the trappings of slavery, nor was there any fear of getting at him, nor anywhere lay hold on him to enslave him. Everything sat loose upon him, everything only just hung on. If you took hold on his possessions, he would rather let them go than follow you for more; if on his leg, he let go his leg; if on his body, he let go his body; acquaintance, friends, country, just the same. But he would never have forsaken his true parents, the gods, and his true country."

Maccabee Masquerade

The Ladies of the Maccabees held their annual Halloween Masquerade party Tuesday evening in their hall for the pleasure of the members and guests. A large crowd attended. The costumes were many and varied. The bride and groom and attendant were there. Black Manmoy's and old Black Jock's, Tramps and every known costume. Mrs. John Bacon and Mrs. Edith Content won first prize for the prettiest costume. A prize was also awarded for the funniest. A grand march followed by unmasking and dancing and the good old Halloween refreshments, cider and doughnuts.

JOKE ON COUNTRY YOUTH LEADS TO HIGH POSITION

Given Mythical Job and Is Now Vice President of Firm.

New York.—Members of the office force of a New York mercantile establishment gathered round a festive board in a downtown restaurant recently to celebrate the anniversary of the vice president's connection with the firm. The main entertainment of the affair was the big boss' description of how the guest of honor originally got his job.

A little more than 15 years ago the office had been puzzled by the receipt of a crated typewriter from an upstate town. It was addressed to some one unknown in the establishment.

A few days later a young man, bearing all the marks of a country youth of that period, arrived and announced he was ready to go to work.

"Work? Who said work?" asked the executive in charge.

"Why didn't you send for me?" asked the young man. "That's my typewriter over there in the corner now."

"Well, we never sent for you," insisted the executive. "There must be some mistake."

Then, just as the country youth, surrounded by the smiling office force, was about to shoulder his typewriter and go forth among the pitfalls of the great city, the big boss happened along and stopped to learn the cause of the commotion. The boss seemed interested and directed that the young man be sent into his private office.

The interview lasted several minutes. It developed that one of the traveling salesmen of the firm thought he could play a joke on the ambitious clerk of a general store where he was selling a bill of goods. He had told the young man that the firm wanted him and all he had to do was to ship his typewriter, go down to the city and make his fortune.

When the country youth came out of the boss' private office he walked over to his typewriter, kicked the crate off, put the machine on a desk and settled down on his road to the vice presidency of the concern.

LITTLE GOLD KEY

ONCE upon a time there was a little Princess who used to ride a black pony. And every time she could run away from her attendants she did and went into the forest and far from the castle where she lived.

One day while she was riding alone in the forest she saw a little gold key hanging from a tree branch. "Now I wonder what that will open," thought the Princess, just as another little girl would have wondered.

The Princess reached up and took the key and when she did she noticed a stream of water ahead of her which she had never seen before. In fact, she seemed to be in a strange place. Nothing looked as it did before when she had been in the forest.

The pony did not need urging; he walked right into the water. But when they came to the opposite side of the stream the Princess, to her amazement found that her black velvet dress had changed to white and her black pony was as white as snow.

This was not all. The whole country around was white, the leaves on the trees glittered like silver, the ground was like crystal, and before her was a hill like a huge block of ice.

The little Princess was not frightened by this strange white country; not at all. She thought it was an adventure, and shaking the reins on the pony's neck, she was soon galloping up the crystal hill, which, though very slippery to look at, seemed not to bother the pony at all, as his little feet went clattering along.

At the top of the hill the Princess found a little white house, and this, too, was like crystal. "The gold key," she thought, "I do believe it will unlock the door."

But, as she came closer, the Princess was surprised to find there was no door to this strange looking place. "Oh, I must get in," she said, jumping from her pony and running to the little house and looking all around.

WE Pause Today upon the threshold of this solemn occasion to bow down our heads before the tomb of him who typifies the thousands who have suffered that the world may live again in peace.

It must not be said that we have forgotten the blood they have shed, nor that we are wanting in appreciation of the idea for which they fought.

It behooves this Nation to love and cherish through the the long, dim years of the future the memory of those who suffered their young lives to be extinguished in the cause of world democracy and lasting peace.

DETROIT NEWS ARRANGES PROGRAM FOR EVENING BEFORE MARINE GAME

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 2.—Friday night, Nov. 9, will be Michigan night over the Detroit News Radio Station, WWJ, and an elaborate program which will be of interest to every Michigan graduate and former student has been arranged.

This is the evening before the large Marine football game at Ann Arbor and Major General John A. Lejeune, who was in command of the Marines at Belleau woods during the war has consented to speak on this important branch of the service.

Fielding H. Yost, Director of Athletics at Michigan, will speak on the Objectives in competitive games and physical education and Regent James O. Murfin will speak on Michigan Student Activities. There will also be musical selections of Michigan airs by the Michigan Hawaiian Quartette, Michigan vocal quartette and Varsity Saxophone Sextet. The program will last from 8:30 o'clock to 10:00 o'clock.

MICHIGAN GRAD TO BE REMEMBERED IN DEDICATION OF ILLINOIS STADIUM

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 1.—One of the features in the dedication of the new Memorial Stadium at the University of Illinois was the dedication of 128 columns, massive memorials to Illinois sons who were killed in the Great War.

Among these 128 columns is one which is a memorial to Lt. Col. Curtis G. Redden, a Michigan graduate, former captain of Michigan's football and basketball teams and a former resident of Danville, Illinois.

Through the efforts of Fielding H. Yost, Director of Athletics at Michigan, prominent alumni of the Wolverine institution contributed one-half of the cost of this memorial while Battery F, Col. Redden's former command, contributed the other half.

The memorial is a splendid testimonial to the close relations between Illinois and Michigan in athletics and while it commemorates the deeds of a Michigan man, it also expresses the high esteem which exists between these two great Western institutions.

Michigan Happenings

Inmates of Marquette branch prison have organized two foot ball teams, called the Colored Giants and Colored's College of Reform. The Giants won the first game, 20-13. Other games are scheduled with Northern State Normal School and Marquette Legion teams. The prison teams are equipped with old uniforms donated by the University of Illinois.

Emil Glasser, 83 years old, a justice of the peace at Escanaba for more than 50 years, died at his home last week. He was a veteran of the Civil war, was wounded at Gettysburg and was one of Lincoln's guard of honor when the Gettysburg national cemetery was dedicated. He organized the first G. A. R. posts in the upper peninsula.

After a year's service in the ministry as pastor of the Congregational Church at Mattawan, the Rev. B. F. Townsend has resigned to re-enter the Army. He will be stationed in Kalamazoo and will have charge of a three-year recruiting campaign there with the rank of sergeant. Mr. Townsend entered the Army as a private in 1913.

Joseph, 8-year-old son of Percy W. Woolley, who lives south of Charlevoix, was killed recently by a Pere Marquette train. The boy had wandered away from home and followed his father's two hunting dogs to the railroad tracks. One of the dogs led the brakeman, who had picked up the unknown lifeless form, to the child's home.

Dr. C. M. Overstreet, of Detroit was elected president of the Michigan State Osteopathic association at its annual business session at Battle Creek. Dr. Overstreet formerly was chairman of the bureau of publicity of the association, where his work won him recognition.

Students of the University of Michigan who distinguish themselves academically will be given public recognition through a special "honor convocation," which probably will be held in the spring. Deans of the various schools and colleges have approved the plan.

For the twentieth successive time Mrs. J. K. Jackson, of Otsego, was elected president of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society of the Kalamazoo district, at the closing session of the annual convention here.

Chats With Your Gas Man

Customers sometimes asked us: "Why is the heating value of gas so much higher in summer time than it is during the cold winter weather?" They seem to think that gas like everything else gets cold in winter.

The fact is that the heating value of gas is actually higher during cold weather than it is during hot weather. The reason for this is that the heating value is increased one per cent for each five per cent decrease in temperature of the gas.

However, the starting temperature of the food and water that must be heated in cooking will be colder in winter than in summer; therefore, a larger quantity of heat will be needed to bring the food or water to the boiling point. This explains briefly, why more gas is used for cooking in winter than in summer.

FUTILE TASKS

The Cortlandts of Washington Square

by Janet A. Fairbank

Copyright © The Bobbs-Merrill Co. SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Returning to her home in a small town, Milton Center from a visit to New York, the widow mother of ten-year-old Ann Hyman announces her wedding to the Cortlandts. Her husband, socially and politically prominent, her husband has not been told about Ann, and the new wife fears to be disappointed.

CHAPTER II.—With Ann, Mrs. Cortlandt returns to New York, to the use of Hendricks Cortlandt, her husband's brother, with whom the latter living. Hendricks practically refuses to have anything to do with Ann, and she is left to her own devices. Hendricks Cortlandt, a well-to-do man, is the position as United States minister to Switzerland, the pair are in the thick of the vessel.

CHAPTER III.—Ann satisfactorily is a gap in Hendricks Cortlandt's busy life, and their affection becomes mutual.

CHAPTER IV.—At sixteen years of age, Ann is confronted with the beginning of the Civil War. Hendricks Cortlandt's acknowledged helplessness is a natural prominent society, and the attention is received by Mrs. Hendricks Cortlandt, who, when she looks upon the natural heir of the Cortlandt wealth, the Civil War breaks out, the fall of great numbers of soldiers in New York and the North generally.

CHAPTER V.—A tentative engagement between young Hendricks and Ann is understood, the youth enlisting in a New York regiment on the first of the North to the colors.

CHAPTER VI.—His brief term of enlistment expired, Hendricks returns to New York. Ann is instructed in nursing, and she is sent to a hospital established in New York, and Ann is eager to help in the work, but meets with opposition from her guardian and his sister.

CHAPTER VII.—Ann has her way in spite of Mrs. Hendricks' opposition, and she is sent to the hospital. The work of cheering the unfortunate wounded who have been sent back from the front.

CHAPTER VIII.—With her guardian, Ann visits Hendricks' hospital, and she is deeply disappointed in his work. He is strongly disapproved of her work in the hospital, but she refuses to give it up. There is a rift in their affection.

CHAPTER IX.—From Liberty Densley, Howard, Hendricks' boyhood comrade of Ann is brought to the New York hospital. The girl has her share in caring for him. Hendricks' possibility of recovery, Ann has been removed from the hospital to his home, where he passes his last few days in comfort.

CHAPTER X.—Dispatches from the front announce the death of Hendricks' comrade of Ann is brought to the New York hospital. Ann has written to him, breaking off their engagement, but he confided in no one, and her guardian and relatives naturally believe her heartbroken. Hendricks Cortlandt is sent by the president on a diplomatic mission to Europe.

CHAPTER XI.—From a patient in the hospital, Ann receives news which leads her to believe that Hendricks is still alive. In her guardian's absence, with no one to advise her, she sets out for the front, reaching Gettysburg on the eve of the famous battle.

CHAPTER XII.—Before Gettysburg Ann meets Hendricks and by him is committed to the charge of the Marquis Avezzana, Italian military observer with the Northern army. With Avezzana she is compelled to pass the night in a farmhouse near the village. The girl's beauty naturally appeals to the Italian, but she is not interested in him. The next morning with nothing but gratitude on the part of the girl, for his protection.

CHAPTER XIII.—Returning home, with a trainload of wounded soldiers, Ann again meets Avezzana. Their views as to the conventionalities of life conflict. At New York Ann finds the city in a whirlwind of excitement over the enforcing of the conscription law. She imparts her life in saving the colored butler, Joseph, being rescued by a man whom she later recognizes as a childhood friend, Peter Smith, who is taken into the house, until his strength returns.

CHAPTER XIV.—Peter recalls old times at Milton Center, and tells Ann of his ambitions, though they part without an understanding.

CHAPTER XV.—Avezzana, in New York, succeeds in getting Ann's consent to a marriage engagement, though the girl is doubtful of her real feelings toward him.

Guido's dark face flushed. "No. For the Countess Avezzana it is not necessary to go quite so far back. In my country no one will question where I find you. It will be enough that you have become my wife."

"It will never be enough for me!" Ann burst out. "Guido—can't you see that I am all wrong for you? Can't you understand that I can never make you happy?" She was horrified at her words as she said them, but she did not withdraw them. Instead, she waited, breathless, to hear what Avezzana would say.

To her amazement, he patted her hand with complete calm and murmured: "You are nervous, my Ann. Do not distress yourself; you have only to leave all to me."

It was too much; the girl's nerves, to which he had so thoughtfully referred, suddenly snapped. She poured a torrent of appeal upon him; she found herself saying things of which she never had any premonition; she begged him to let her go to Guido. It was after this climax that she felt the Italian's cold eyes upon her; they brought her up short.

"Go? No—never," he said frigidly. "You are a child to speak to me so!" "This is what comes of undisciplined talk. You see, my way is better."

"But, Guido—I don't love you. I never entirely realized it before—but don't."

"Why should you, before we married what Avezzana would think if he could see her running along with a strange man's hand on her arm, but she did not care. She was so glad to see Peter! Good old comfortable Peter! Nothing alien about Peter, nothing mysterious, nothing restrained! They found a bench where the shade lay thick. There Peter spoke.

"Annie," he said, "you are not going to marry that Italian!" Ann looked at him open-mouthed; it would have been impossible for her to have been more surprised. Peter's eyes were fixed, and the long structure of his jaw was suddenly noticeable to an extraordinary extent.

"You must be mad," the girl said at length. Her feelings were divided between indignation and amazement.

"I am not half so mad as you are," Peter shouted indignantly. "Marrying a foreigner like that! How do you know he will make you happy? Going off to a strange country, too! Italy with him! What would you do if you didn't like it, away off there alone?"

Ann shivered a little, for suddenly the castle in Piedmont, where they were to go on their wedding trip, seemed like a prison to her. "You haven't any right to talk to me like this, Peter," she cried fiercely. "I am unhappy enough as it is."

Peter's entire face lit up at this incoherent outburst. He pointed upon it at once. "Unhappy, are you?" he asked. "That makes it simpler." He faced her mockingly. "I let you go half scared," he said, "and wishing you didn't have to go through with it." "There's something you don't know, Peter," she could feel her cheeks burn, under his eager eyes. "I have to marry Guido. We were to be married last night, at Gettysburg."

"What of it?" Radiant relief flashed into Ann's face. "Oh, that is what I tried to make them see! We were trying to get away from the battle, Peter, and we couldn't find the Sanitary commission, and I was too tired to go on, and we found an empty house."

"You can tell me the story of your life some other time, Annie. The thing to do now is to make up your mind to throw over this Italian!"

"Oh, Peter, you know what I did to Hendricks! I have to marry Count Avezzana, now I said I would. Do you know what everybody would call me if I didn't? A Jilt! And I don't see how I could go on living with the Cortlandts if I did a thing like that, now they're so pleased with the match?" She began to cry, softly and hopelessly.

"You don't have to live with the Cortlandts," Peter said roughly. He leaned over and put an urgent hand on her arm. "You're coming to Chicago to live with me."

Ann was too startled to reply. She looked at him in wide-eyed astonishment, her last tears trembling on her cheeks. Peter answered the interrogation in her look.

"You don't think I came here just to talk, do you?" he demanded. "I came to take you back with me, and I am going to do it. Do you know what this is?" He produced a stiff official-looking paper from his coat pocket. Ann shook her head, speechless. "It's a marriage license, that's what it is! I've got it all fixed up with a minister at the Catholic church, to marry us this morning."

"But, Peter," Ann expostulated feebly, "I never heard anything so ridiculous in my life! I am going to marry Count Avezzana next Wednesday, at eight o'clock, in the Catholic cathedral."

"Are you a Catholic?" "Not yet, but I will be, Monday."

"Well, you can get ahead and be a Catholic, if you want to, but the wedding is off! Understand that?" "Why, Peter, I'll have to go through with it—so late, like this?"

Peter frowned at her fiercely. "You have to do nothing of the sort," he stormed. Suddenly he let go his grasp on her arm to take hold of her shoulders and pull her toward him with a pleasant roughness. Then he kissed her.

"How about it?" he demanded, boyishly, holding her away from him and laughing into her perturbed face.

"Oh, Peter, I don't know. I've got my trousseau and everything, and Guido has given me a lot of things—rings and brooches, and I have had a present from my mother, and a letter from Guido. I think he wishes me to marry Count Avezzana. I've been such a trial to him, I couldn't disappoint him again."

Peter's mouth set in a straight severe line. "This has nothing to do with any one in the world except you and me," he said sternly. "I guess you know I love you, all right. I don't say anything before because I am so d-d poor. I thought I'd go back to Chicago and work like the devil and make some money before I tried to let you up, but you have rushed me. You belong to me, Annie, don't you know that?"

A delightful peace settled down on Ann. "I never knew it before this minute," she sighed happily. "It will be hard work at first, but you won't mind that, will you? You're strong, and you won't be born to all this luxury. We'll do something out there before we're through, and we'll do it together. Partners! I've got a little money. Before I get through I'll make a rich woman of you. But just at first, Annie, if it is hard work, you won't mind?"

"Peter, I'll have to work," Ann assured him expansively. "I hate being a fine lady. But do you think it would be possible for me to marry you, and just go off? Leave all this behind me?"

Peter laughed and kissed her again. "Possibly," he said. "This is happening. You will be set up in half an hour."

RED CROSS ADVANCING IN HEALTH CAMPAIGN

Extends Service to New Fields and Brings Healing Hope to Remote Sections.

"The supreme opportunity for leadership in the American Red Cross is its health service. Then a committee made up of prominent physicians, sanitarians and public health experts, reported and urged that not only should the Red Cross continue its present service, but should undertake a comprehensive educational campaign along public health lines. The annual report of the American Red Cross, just issued, discloses that it has grasped this opportunity in the fields of public health nursing, instruction in home hygiene and care of the sick, nutrition work, first aid to the injured and in water-saving."

Health service is fundamentally, historically and practically an important function of the Red Cross, and each year marks its extension into new fields and along broader lines. In the Red Cross Nursing Service, there are enrolled nearly 40,000 nurses, 20,000 of whom served during the World War. The past year Red Cross nurses were assigned to duty in isolated sections of Alaska and North Carolina and to work among the fishermen of Penobscot Bay, Me.

The Public Health Nursing Service, inaugurated by the American Red Cross in 1912, which operates chiefly in rural sections untouched by other public health agencies, has 1,048 Red Cross nurses working under the direction of chapters. This work has won so high a regard that many of the nurses are taken over by the local authorities to maintain health services for their communities. Instruction in home hygiene and care of the sick is making a steady advance. Since 1914 certificates of proficiency have been given 304,477 women who completed the Red Cross course. In the last year 26,595 certificates were awarded and 65,901 students were under the instruction of 1,634 Red Cross nurses.

The benefits derived from meals balanced to meet each person's peculiar needs is winning widespread recognition through the work of the Red Cross Nutrition Service, particularly in the schools. During the school year 1922-23 carried on regular instruction in nutrition, reached more than 150,000 children and adults. More than 2,540 volunteers assisted in this work. Throughout the country 32,251 health meetings were held under Red Cross auspices, attended by approximately 251,569 persons.

The annual summons to Red Cross Banner On Armistice Day

America's great humanitarian effort in behalf of stricken Japan early in September, gave the answer to the question: "What is there for the Red Cross to do in time of peace?" When the American Red Cross did its duty when this crushing earthquake disaster came without warning showed that it was ready on the instant with country-wide team work to carry out quickly and effectively the request of the President to lead the national effort for the relief of the many thousands of sufferers. Preparedness to take the field when relief is needed is a charter duty of the Red Cross. Without a membership enrolled in every community in the land this readiness would be impossible. That is why your dollar membership is most important.

It is imperative that the structure of the American Red Cross be made up of millions of individual units. Opening Armistice Day, November 11 and closing with Thanksgiving Day, November 29, the Roll Call this year will penetrate to the ends of the earth and to the ships sailing the seven seas. The 3,800 Red Cross chapters in the United States will have their busy volunteers enrolling members during this period imbued with renewed enthusiasm due to the recent revival of effort when the call came from Japan.

Nearly 400 representatives from 26 Western Michigan counties and 100 towns met at Grand Rapids to plan an advertising development campaign to spread the fame of "The Nation's Summer Playground." The meeting was held under the auspices of the Michigan State Tourist and Resort Association.

Major John D. Black, formerly of Bayonet, who served on the staff of General Nelson Miles in both the Civil and Spanish-American wars, was buried here beside his wife, who died 40 years ago. Major Black died recently in San Diego, Cal.

Merritt Chandler, 58 years old, a pioneer settler of Cheboygan and founder of Onaway, died at his home in the latter town. He served several terms in the state legislature and fathered the original dry law of Michigan.

The Ottawa County Board of Supervisors appropriated $1,500 for extension work by the Ottawa County Farm Bureau. The road budget of $119,000 also was adopted.

Frank Grater, who came from Detroit to resume management of the Gratiot elevator at Kinde, was headed when he slipped in a puddle of grease and fell against the fly wheel of a gasoline engine used to operate the elevator machinery.

Completing a record of 36 years of continuous service with the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad, C. M. Pika assistant superintendent of the Pika insula division at Escanaba has tendered his resignation.

The Board of Supervisors of St. Clair County adopted an ordinance which prohibits hunting on Sunday in St. Clair County to all who have not first obtained permission from the owners or lessors of the land where game is sought. This action was taken following complaints to the supervisors that the western section of the County was overrun with hunters on Sundays, mostly from Detroit, who shot at anything within the range of their guns. When ordered off the land, it is said, the hunters threatened the owners.

Final figures show Western State Normal registration 200 higher than ever before. The enrollment total to 1922 students, 625 of whom are men. Twelve states, one foreign country and 69 Michigan counties are represented, according to announcement from the office of President D. B. Waldo. Students have come from Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Nebraska, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin. One student has registered from Bulgaria.

Isabella County farmers have organized a corporation to operate a co-operatively-owned elevator to be located at the county seat. More than 160 stockholders have already subscribed and the directors and officers chosen. W. J. Hazelwood, manager of the local farm bureau, is the secretary-treasurer. The organization will be capitalized at $50,000.

Parts of tusks believed to be the remains of a prehistoric mastodon have been unearthed in a swamp in Ottawa County, near Burnips Corner. One piece weighs 33 pounds, and is 28 inches long. The discovery was made by a workman, who was digging a drain. A search has been started to find other parts of the tusks.

Heavy windstorms last week worked havoc among Mason County apple growers. Reports indicate that 50 per cent of the unopened crop was blown to the ground. It is figured the storm caused a loss running into thousands of dollars, because windfalls do not command the price that hand-picked apples do.

The Brotherhood of the Congregational church and the Young Peoples League of St. Paul's church have been real fortunate in securing four excellent numbers, as follows, for this year's Lyceum programme.

versatile and best male quartettes before the Lyceum public.

The L. Verne Slout Players

L. Verne Slout, himself, is personally appearing along with four other especially picked artists in

"WHEN MOTHER GOES ON A STRIKE"

A different comedy full of humorous sayings, a few heart throbs and many much-provoking situations. The play will take you on an excursion through the "Land of Laughter" and send you home with a smile on your lips and joy in your heart. With all its humor it also leaves a message.

In addition to the three-act comedy, a costume sketch from the big farcical scene of the "Taming of the Shrew" is presented. This is not only finding a big evening entertainment but furnishes amusement for the tastes of everybody. Costumes especially designed for period represented. Mr. Slout appears as Petruchio "The Wife Tamer."

The Colonial Trio

In the stately costumes of the days of the Revolution, these talented singers and players present a delightful evening of song and story. The program consists of vocal and instrumental solos, concerted selections, readings and a sketch dealing with colonial life.

Not the least effective are the readings with instrumental accompaniment given with violin, cornet and piano obligato. The Colonial Trio presents one of the most distinctive programs in the entire concert field.

The Jugo Slav Tamburica Orchestra

The Tamburica is the native musical instrument of the people of Croatia and has been their household instrument for generations. The instrument itself is similar to mandolin, guitar or banjo but it produces more life and sweetness of tone and is especially adapted to orchestra work. The range of music is almost limitless, varying from simple popular numbers to the most intricate of their native compositions.

Appearing in the bright and novel costume of their country they tender a program that is entirely unique and most extraordinary, not alone in exquisite sweetness but in thrilling power. They never fail to please.

The American Glee Club

The work of the quartette lies on a plane of high artistic endeavor. As a singing organization, its ensemble work ranks with the best, while the instrumental and character specialties make for a well-balanced program.

There is a bass soloist who is second to none in quartette work, a first tenor soloist and baritone soloist, a reader, three pianists, three saxophonists and four xylophonists. These qualities stamp the American Glee Club as one of the most

Costume Party.
A group of 16 young women partook of a delightful Halloween party Friday evening at the home of Mrs. A. Johnson. All the guests came in quaint costumes and were masked, which caused much amusement as each guest invited had been requested not to tell so no one knew who was present. After all had arrived the hostess invited them into the dining room and after being seated were allowed to unmask. Black cats, pumpkins, ghosts and witches with festoons of orange and black ribbon crepe formed the decorations of the home. A delicious Halloween lunch was served and the remainder of the hours were most happily spent by the ladies in showing their skill at cards. Attractive honors were received by Mrs. Laura Spiegelberg of Ann Arbor, Mrs. P. Leach, Mrs. Waltz, and Mrs. W. Guerin.

Dancer Reunion
The Dancer family reunion was held Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Dancer. The home was prettily decorated in the Halloween colors. Thirty-five were present to enjoy the pot luck dinner that was served at noon. Following the dinner a musical program was given and the remainder of the afternoon was spent in a social manner.

IN THE CHURCHES

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.
E. L. SUTHERLAND, Pastor.
Morning service 10:30 o'clock. Subject "A Wall of Fire."
Sunday School 11:30 o'clock. We are aiming at the 150 mark.
Evening service 7:30 o'clock. Subject "Fires." This is a special service and all the kiddies are asked to come, little and grown-up ones, too. Come and hear the S. S. class that shall participate.
If you were asked the question: What do you think sin is, would this be your answer?
Whatever weakens my conscience, impairs the tenderness of my conscience, obscures my sense of God, takes off my relish for spiritual things, whatever increases the authority of the body and material over the spiritual, that thing is sin to me, however innocent it may seem to me, or in itself.
Again you and your friends are invited to worship with us at the above stated hours. We try to preach a pure simple gospel, the kind that helps in everything where the gospel can be used.

CHELSEA METHODIST CHURCH.
C. S. RISLEY, Minister.

Worship 10:30. "Cleaning Up The World."
Sunday School 11:15. "Temperance Lesson."
Epworth League 6:30. "Prayers of Jesus."

Junior League 6:30. Leader, Lawrence Foster.
Evening service 7:30. "America and Europe."

Sunday is "World's Temperance Sunday." Our theme will be "Law or Lawlessness." Shall we be governed by a gang of lawbreakers, criminals, etc., or shall our laws be upheld? Can the 18th Amendment be enforced? Come out Sunday morning, we'll have an interesting time. Sunday evening a sermon-lecture on the European situation and our relation to it. Will there be another war? What can prevent it? What should America do? This subject should be of unusual interest. We invite you to its services. We had very fine attendance Sunday. Let us do better next Sunday--several missing. Our Sunday School has a place for you, if nowhere else. Everybody in town go to some church Sunday. Our churches are all warm and comfortable. The pastor's will do their best to interest you. We venture to say that there will not be a poor sermon preached Sunday in our village. Come with us and we will do thee good. Special music everywhere. What say you? "I'll be at some church." Thank you. Goodbye.

Four-Door Sedan

Fully equipped, $585, f. o. b. Detroit

Inside and out, the new Ford Four-door Sedan shows improvements of far more than usual importance.

It is lower and sturdier in appearance. New cowl, hood, radiator and apron add size and finish to the front. Sun visor, and wide, well-finished aluminum doors with bar handles perfect the design of the body.

Silk window curtains, deep broad-cloth upholstery; dome light, door lock, window regulators and handles, all finished in nickel, complete a refinement you would expect only at a far higher price.
