MAKE YOUR MILKERS PAY

Every cow in your herd can be made to produce up to her full capacity

if you look well to her ration, her health, her appetite and her digestion.

Balance the ration. Feed bran, oats and corn, or their equivalent, cottonseed or linseed meal, clover hay, alfalfa, silage—pasture in season.

Remember, the better the appetite the greater the food consumption, the greater the milk production.

THIEVES LOOT MILLING CO. SAFE

Fifty Dollars in Cash Obtained by Bandits Who Break Into Chelsea Milling Co. Plant in Monday Night Robbery.

Thieves, working with the aid of an axe and brake-shoe bars secured from cars standing nearby, succeeded in breaking into the office safe at the plant of the Chelsea Milling Company on Monday night, escaping with approximately $50 as a reward for their efforts.

Discovery of the wrecked safe was made by workmen on Tuesday morning. That the depredations of Monday night were committed by persons acquainted with the art of safe-breaking was the belief of officials of the company and others. It was also believed that the persons were acquainted with railroadings inasmuch as brake-shoe bars were secured from nearby freight cars with which the safe was pried from its regular position to a place out beneath the mill where an axe, secured from one of the employees' lockers, was used to batter one of the doors of the safe. Nothing but the currency was taken, records being left scattered about the scene of the looting.

Fortunately for the Milling company, nothing of any great money value was left in the office safe. Howard S. Holmes, head of the concern, asserted Tuesday that possibly not more than dozen times since his connection with the company had there been as much as $50 in money left in the safe and Monday night happened to be one of these times.

The safe, which is the product of a Grand Rapids concern, will be returned to the company for repairs while the case is being handled by county officials both here and at Ann Arbor.

LIMA FARMER PASSES AWAY SUNDAY MORNING

Adam Schmid, one of Lima's oldest and respected farmers, passed away Sunday morning, January 13, after a lingering illness.
Mr. Schmid was born in Waidorf, Germany, August 31, 1839, and came to this country when 8 years of age. In 1853 he married Barbara Haas of Freedom, who died several years ago. Mr. Schmid resided on the farm where he passed away, for 53 years. He is survived by one son, Julius Schmid, at home, one daughter, Mrs. Fred Eisenman of Freedom, one brother, J. Conrad Schmid, of Pittsfield, two sisters, Mrs. Catherine Haas of Dexter, and Mrs. Dora Knapp of Freedom.

The funeral was held Wednesday, January 16, at 10:30 Eastern time at the residence and later at the Salem church in Salem. Rev. Rodamont conducting the services. Interment in Salem cemetery.

NORTH SYLVAN GRANGE

The next meeting of the North Sylvan Grange will be held in the Methodist church, on Thursday evening, January 24. Scrub lunch, work in the third and fourth degrees and the following program:
Opening song—Grange.
Roll call. Short stories.
Music—Mrs. Brownmille.
Recitation—Harold Crafts.
Solo—A. B. Skinner.
Reading—Mrs. E. Hoppe.
What modern equipment can be used to the best advantage by the housewife?—Mrs. N. W. Laid.
Topic for discussion—Has the farmer any advantage over the city man? If so, in what way? Led by Mr. Dixon.
Question box.
Closing song—Grange.

SCHILLER POOLROOM DAMAGED BY FIRE

Early Sunday Morning Blaze Causes Large Loss to North Main Street Amusement Parlor—Water Adds to Destruction.

Fire of uncertain origin, caused considerable damage at the Schiller pool and billiard hall and bowling alley on North Main street early Sunday morning when the basement became enveloped in flames. Quick response by firemen prevented spread of the fire to adjoining buildings.

Water from fire hose probably did the most damage, the billiard and pool tables and bowling alley being soaked in the deluge necessary to contain the blaze. Covers of the five tables are a complete loss, the stock of confections and cigars smoked, and it is believed the bowling alley in the basement will be useless because of the water soaked condition. Elmer Schiller, owner of the amusement parlor, estimates that the insurance of $2,000 carried on his property, will be insufficient to cover the loss. No estimate has been placed on the loss to the building, but it is believed this will amount to quite a large figure. The building is owned by Mrs. Wm. M. Campbell and W. I. Wood.

CONTEST RECEIVED ENTHUSIASTICALLY

"In the Hour of Trial" Affording Much Instruction for Public and Parochial Schools—Prize Essay Contestants.

It is not surprising that a great number of the brightest pupils in the public and parochial schools are spending much of their leisure time these busy days studying the history of our American Army and its Commander-in-Chief, George Washington, at a time when the darkest clouds overhung them.

It is an interesting subject. To go back into history and find out a few of the great obstacles that confronted Washington and the new Army, a few of their bitter defeats, their hard winter at Valley Forge, and to close with the victories that led to the supreme and lasting victory, is nothing short of real pleasure. That is what the young essay contestants have to do.

But each is inspired by a classroom calendar containing a picture of "In the Hour of Trial," the work of the distinguished artist, E. Percy Moran. This gift came from the Kempt Commercial & Savings Bank, who deserve credit for stirring these young people and their elders as well with such an uplift.

After arriving at Valley Forge, Washington and his men built a fire in the open and gave thanks to God for their safe arrival at Winter headquarters. A chaplain may be seen in this picture offering up that memorable thanksgiving prayer that did so much to keep up the morale of the army. The more you study this famous picture, the more you will ponder, and the greater you will be benefited.

Every pupil under the age of eighteen is permitted to compete for the prizes offered by the Bank. Already many are at work, and it is hoped that every child in this community will avail himself of this opportunity to widen his knowledge and send in a composition of not more than 600 words on the subject, "In the Hour of Trial." The contest closes on February 22, Washington's birthday, when all essays must be in, ready to be judged.

An announcement of the names of the committee to act as judges and awarders of prizes will be made within a few days.

LAFAYETTE GRANGE

Lafayette Grange met with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Young at their home south of town on Thursday, January 16. There was a good attendance of members and after partaking of a bountiful chicken dinner the meeting was called to order by the Master and the following officers were installed:
Master—Mary Gage.
Overseer—O. C. Burkhardt.
Lecturer—Ida Plemeier.
Chaplain—May Chapman.
Treasurer—Frances English.
Secretary—Geo. T. English.
Ceres—Nora Liebeck.
Gate Keeper—Geo. W. Gage.
Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Hoppe of North Sylvan Grange who were delegates to the State Grange, installed the officers and gave a very fine report.
The lecturer had an interesting program of readings, recitations and questions for members to answer. All present enjoyed the meeting.

OLD RECORDS SHOW SALE OF NEWSPAPER

Western Emigrant, Started in 1829, First and Only Newspaper in Michigan, Outside Detroit at That Time.

Chas. Stannard, of Dexter and Lansing, on Tuesday brought to the Standard office a rare curio in the shape of the bill of sale of the machinery and type which printed the first newspaper in Michigan outside Detroit. The transfer was made from Henry Chipman, member of an old and prominent Detroit family, to Samuel W. Dexter, who started the "Western Emigrant" at Ann Arbor in 1829.

To those acquainted with the present day equipment of newspaper plants the bill of sale is a real curiosity. Material which today would be included in a sale as "type material and machinery" is listed separately piece by piece, case by case, even numbering such things as "one pair shears, one pair, one saw, one office stove and pipe," etc. Consideration in the deal is named as $530.

In another paper is a letter from the Department of State, dated December 20, 1890, addressed to Messrs. Dexter and Allen, of Ann Arbor, then publishers of the paper which later was changed to the Michigan Emigrant, acknowledging receipt of an account against the department and enclosing remittance of $114.50. In payment for publication of orders, resolutions, laws and treaties passed or ratified during the first session of the twenty-first congress, in the Emigrant. The letter is signed by Wm. Coventry H. Waddell, agent.

Unlike legal papers and correspondence of today the papers are all written in "long hand" and bear all the earmarks of being old timers. They are the property of Mr. Stannard and are valued very highly by him.

AMERICAN LEGION TAKES EASY GAME

Napoleon, Ind., Quinlet No. Match for Fast Ex-Servicemen in Sunday's Game.

Napoleon, Ind., proved no match for the fast American Legion team in a game of basket ball at St. Marys hall on last Sunday afternoon. The game, in which all of the Chelsea men were given a chance to play, ended with a one-sided score of 29 to 8.

Madden of the Legion, piled up the highest individual score of the afternoon, ringing 6 baskets from the field for a total of 12 points.

The line-up and summary:

Kiercher	1	Dodes
Madden	1	McKee
Phil Hoffman	6	C. Gormly
E. Eder	1	Herr
Schoenhals	1	T. Gormly
Substitutes: Reidel for Kiercher, Heseiswerdt for Reidel, Reidel for Eder, W. Page for Phil Hoffman, Hoffman for Madden, Nichols for Dodes, Dodes for C. Gormly.
Field goals: Kiercher 2, Reidel 1, Madden 6, Phil Hoffman 2, E. Eder 2, Schoenhals 1, Dodes 1, T. Gormly 2.
Free throws: E. Eder 1, Nichols 2.

On Wednesday, January 23, the Legion five will go to Ann Arbor where they will meet the Moe Sport Shop team of that place. This will be a Southern Michigan League game and it is expected will be a fast one.

LESTER W. BENJAMIN

Lester W. Benjamin, father of Mrs. Ford Axtell of Jackson, who was until recently a resident of Chelsea, passed away Saturday afternoon at his home in Perry, following several weeks' illness, from heart failure. He was 69 years of age.

Mr. Benjamin frequently visited at the Axtell home here and was well acquainted with a number of residents in Chelsea and vicinity. He leaves a widow, sister, Mrs. Addie Brown of Perry; daughter, Mrs. Ford Axtell of Jackson; son, Glenn Benjamin, of near Webberville; and five grandchildren, Ralph and Paul Axtell of Jackson, Doris, Gaylord and Alta Benjamin of near Webberville.

The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at one o'clock from the home in Perry. Rev. Schwartzkopf of Mifflord conducting the service.

FRANK B. NOLL

Frank B. Noll, 63, died Tuesday evening at his home in Chelsea. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Lillian Noll; two sons, Earl of Wyandotte and Lewis of Chelsea; two daughters, Mrs. William Birch and Mrs. Walter Lindeman, both of Chelsea.
Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the residence, Rev. E. L. Sutherland officiating. Burial will be in the Bethlehem cemetery of Ann Arbor.

BETTING IN WIVES AND HUSBANDS

A bill has been introduced by Senator Copeland, of New York, calling for the admission of any wife or husband of an American citizen; at first blush this appears to be both reasonable and humane, but incidents in our past history indicate that any such measure, passed without suitable qualification, will have effects entirely at variance from the Senator's intent. It will promote undesirable kinds of "matrimony." When Chinese women were excluded, except as wives of "American citizens, American citizens were procured, for a very reasonable consideration, to marry them and to remain married until the admission of the woman had been effected. The divorce customs among certain races are very rapid and quite informal, also American divorce laws in many states are easy. All charitable agencies will likewise attest that we have already a large and well known class of disappearing husbands. If we allow such admissions out of suitable qualification, will have effects entirely at variance from the Senator's intent. It will promote undesirable kinds of "matrimony." When Chinese women were excluded, except as wives of "American

EditorialA SIGN OF PROGRESS

Only twenty-eight persons were lynched last year in civilized America, against fifty-seven in 1922. We're improving. In 1944, perhaps we'll check up and have to hunt through piles of newspapers to find even one case.

We took a leap further away from the jungle when we stopped slavery. We tried to leap again by stopping liquor, although we're being dragged back again by chains we haven't sufficient zeal to break. We're gradually attaining that ideal of civilization where man regards man as his brother, and each conforms his action so as not to hurt another.

Lynching has long been our most glaring disgrace, and the strongest symptom of our civilization has a rotten spot. America doesn't have a monopoly of ambition to be civilized. But we've felt rather proud of ourselves, and want to be what we sometimes think we are but aren't.

Only one-fourth of the twenty-eight were lynched for the big crime which many men think justifies a lynching. The rest were for minor offenses. None were excusable, justified, or logical. No participant should feel anything but ashamed. No principle of justice sustains such a course. No tenet of humanity, no token of civilization, no imprint of virtue is evidenced by lynching. It is barbaric. It is a sign that some men—rapidly decreasing in number we believe, are still animals.

But it is yet another sign of progress that we're relegating lynching to history, along with the gullotine, thumbscrews, fire tests of innocence and idolatry. We could not hope to soar high in giant airplanes, nor race with light from horizon to horizon, nor prolong man's days with magic fluid, nor find new life on microbes or planets, while dragging such a weight. It is high time we were free.

IS IT A PROBLEM?

George E. Farrell, field agent of the Department of Agriculture, declares the trend of young men and women away from the farm to the city is natural, normal, and necessary. Their going, he insists, prevents a serious problem of feeding and clothing a number of children from products of the land; encourages self-reliance; makes for better educated young people; and is usually beneficial to both parent and child.

Not a novel viewpoint, but well worth considering and digesting. On the surface, it seems supported by reason. A farm which barely supports a man and his wife and one or two small children may not support grown children, even if they work. And, of course, children kept on the farm, voluntarily or not, are bound to miss the education which even a short migration would bring, and to lack a certain broadness gained only by mixing with total strangers.

The possibility of a farm being overcrowded, and a community overpopulated with young people, is seldom given a chance for demonstration. Most communities are bereft of young people. If they can find better advantages on the outside, can we blame them much, even if they fail to return and bring back a bit of the polish they get to the old home town?

When sentimentalism conflicts with good reasoning, the former should yield. Adages about the rolling stone to the contrary notwithstanding, the boy or girl who, when sufficiently mature, goes out to fight and work for himself is invariably the most worth while. If he or she had the right training at home, parents may see the departure with calm eyes. Otherwise, it may be a fatal test, which, however, would not be more so than remaining at home. Only the one will be quick; the good or bad will be soon evident; the other process will be slow, but, we insist, no less revealing.

Most "Waxed" Paper is Gossamer. Only a very small amount of the so-called waxed paper is really waxed, but is the "gossamer" paper which is made by macerating the pulp while it is being prepared.

Sawdust and Ashes

The latest substitute for cardboard and wood in the making of boxes is a chemical composition of sawdust and ashes. The finished boxes are light, washable, sanitary and nonpoisonous. They are waterproof and are fireproof as well. They can be made in any degree of flexibility or texture, either as hard as oak, tough as metal or as pliable as cardboard.

WHAT IS FAITH?

Walter Moyses, fourteen years old, of Massachusetts, broke his leg. For nineteen weeks he was treated only by a Christian Science teacher. The leg didn't heal, the law stepped in and the father was arrested and convicted. Both boy and father were Christian Scientists, but the judge looked at the boy's leg and decided. The Christian Science Church is appealing, and the Supreme Court will have to decide for a nation whether faith alone can be trusted in a thing of this kind.

The science of this Church is based on universally recognized principles; that the mind can control the body, and will power and faith can bring about certain conditions. It is not universally agreed as to how far will power can or should go. Physicians insist the mind can effect a cure or cause illness. Ministers claim faith in the Supernal and in one's own loyalty and righteousness will bring about spiritual perfection. Faith in both cases must be consistent and strong.

We are interested to learn what the cold, logical, legal mind will say of the efficacy of faith to cure a broken leg. The Bible tells of faith doing greater miracles than this, and we are there assured we can duplicate these events. Will the Supreme Court of Massachusetts say modern man is not capable of sufficient faith for that, and is legally culpable for even attempting it? Will it deride Christian Science or limit its scope to organic ailments? Will it offer the father more time to cure his boy? Faith will enter into the trial. It will be clarified, defined, limited. It is a serious and legitimate thing, and no intelligent scolder will ridicule its power. But not even the Court can destroy the faith of many that faith can remove mountains, even today.

BE RECONCILED!

Warren Carle, Ohio grocer, has rewed his first wife whom he divorced years ago. A New Year meeting, rediscovered affection, beautiful memories turned the trick. James Walsh, of Pittsburgh, four years after his father had disowned him for robbery, also found the day one of joy when his parent forgot and forgave and remembered against him no more what he had done. They don't need your "Happy New Years." They're reconciled!

There could hardly be a better way to start off during this first month of 1924 than to settle old grudges, get the canker out of your soul and feel sweet again. A man or woman peevish at another has the idea that the enemy is injured by the animosity. That is a survival of the heathen religion of "hating" misfortune upon enemies. We know it doesn't work; that the biter is the one harmed; that getting peevish is a form of insanity; and that, to concede a point for friendship's sake brings a warmth to one's heart which January winds can't chill.

It's in the air. It started at Christmas and will last twelve months. Probably the things the Christ child taught, and lived for had something to do with it. They should. If you're not acquainted with them, use common sense; argue it out with yourself. See how much actual pleasure you get out of your hate, and contrast the misery, ill-temper, and energy used in feeding the flames. It's a simple affair of subtraction, and the result is never minus.

THE CIGAR'S BIRTHDAY

The one hundred and twenty-fifth birthday of the cigar will be celebrated February 2nd with ceremonies in which a legion of men doubtless wish they could join. It was in 1799 that a Connecticut woman offered this solace to her men friends, much as Eve offered the apple to the first man. Mrs. Pinot is better regarded by her posterity than her predecessor, however.

We now smoke 10,000,000,000 cigars a year; have been cultivating tobacco for three hundred years; and the meershaum pipe, prime favorite with devotees of the crumbled weed, is just two hundred years old.

Neither cigars nor pipes have thrived without opposition. Could we say they increased because of it? Man is a queer being. Tobacco, often condemned as a product of Satan and even today regarded askance by some people, is still with us and bids fair to stay here. It is one of our biggest industries and is getting bigger.

The cigar is aristocrat of the smoke family. It connotes opulence, dignity and maturity. The pipe is more democratic, but the cigar is more convenient and has entre in society circles where the pipe dares not venture. Perhaps it is a good thing the cigar was invented. What would candidates pass out?

Style Hints

Now that the Holiday season is over, women turn their attention to their individual wardrobe needs and become interested in all that is stylish.

The Lady of the White Gardenia

Dora Stroevo, of Petrograd, Paris and now New York, set the fashion of wearing a white Gardenia on the shoulder. This brilliant singer and violinist with her impassive Russian face, was one of the first to wear a mannish tailored suit, slick her shorn hair back from her ears, and brow, and tie her knitted silk scarf at the back.

Straight from New York

Next time you go dining or dancing, pin your flossiest handkerchief to your right shoulder. The other girls won't be able to restrain their curiosity very long, then you may say innocently: "Oh, didn't you know? It's quite the thing in New York."

A Voice from The Minaret

The voice is Jeanne Hallee's of Paris, bidding us pay heed to the mode for glace kid gloves with embroidered cuffs. If the gloves are black the embroidery is white; if tan, the design appears in brown. One cannot err if one chooses such gloves.

Checked Flannel Dresses Are Now the Vogue

For mid-winter and early Spring wear the frocks of checked flannel and novelty velour are especially vogue. These smart little frocks are fashioned in long, straight styles that are especially youthful.

Such combinations as grey trimmed with blue, dark brown and red and black are among the most popular of the Flannel Frocks.

They will be worn for all sports affairs and for general wear. They are irresistible and becoming. Priced very moderately, $25.00.

MRS. YOUNG ENTHUSIASTIC

Cannot Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Enough. Sick Women Read This Letter

Charleston, S. C.—"I was completely run-down and not able to do my housework. I just dragged myself around and did not have energy enough to get up when I sat down. I read advertisements of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in your books and learned about it. I got a bottle. I continued to take it for some time, and now I am doing all my own work, even washing and ironing, and never felt better in my life. I tell all my friends that the change in my health is due to but one thing and that is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I cannot praise it enough."—Mrs. ANNIE YOUNG, 18 Amberst St., Charleston, S. C.

The reason for such a letter from Mrs. Young is apparent. She got well and is grateful. Recently a nation-wide campaign of women pure and simple. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was made, and 98 out of 100 reported that they received benefit from taking it. Just because the Vegetable Compound has been helping other women is a good reason why it should help you. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Can't Tell Martha From Clarice

Here are Martha and Clarice Sargent, nineteen-year-old twins, who are employed in the freight office of the Rock Island railroad at Blue Island, Ill. Clarice is a telephone operator and Martha is a timekeeper. There are about 90 people in the office where they have been working for some years, yet not one of them can tell which is which when away from their desks.

MISS CUPID OF KANSAS

Miss Margaret Markley of Emporia college, in Kansas, has started a date bureau that already does a thriving business. Miss Markley advertises herself as "Miss Cupid" and by means of her bureau she brings timid coeds and bashful suitors together. A nominal charge of 25 cents is made for male students, while the girls are charged 50 cents. Miss Markley says she charges the girls more because the investment is a good one with them. Any fellow who will pay a quarter to make a date, will spend at least two dollars to make it a good one.

CAPTAINS OF ADVENTURE

By ROGER POCOCK

LORD STRATHCONA A. D. 1871

Born in a Highland cottage in 1820, Lord Strathcona lived nearly a century. His father, Alexander Smith, kept a little shop at Forres, in Elgin county, Scotland; his mother, Barbara Stewart Smith, knew while she reared the lad that the world would hear of him. His school, founded by a returned adventurer, was one which sent out settlers for the colonies, soldiers for the army, miners for the goldfields, bankers for England, men to every corner of the world. As the lad grew, he saw the soldiers, the sailors, the adventurers, who from time to time came tired home to Forres, and among these was his uncle, John Stewart, famous in the annals of the Canadian frontier, rich, distinguished, cosmopolitan, all youngsters made as he had done. When Donald Smith was in his eighteenth year, his uncle procured him a clerkship in the Hudson's Bay company.

Canada was in revolt when in 1837 the youngster reached Montreal, for Robert Nelson had proclaimed a Canadian republic and the British troops were busy driving the republicans into the United States. So there was bloodshed, the burning of houses, the filling of the jails with rebels to be convicted presently and hanged. Out of all this noise and confusion, Donald Smith was sent into the silence of Labrador, the unknown wilderness of the Northwest Territory, where the first explorer, McLean, was searching for tribes of Eskimos that might be induced to trade with the Hudson's Bay company. "In September (1838)," wrote McLean, "I was gratified by the arrival of despatches from Canada by a young clerk appointed to the district. By him we received the first intelligence of the stirring events which had taken place in the colonies during the preceding year." So Smith had taken a year to carry the news of the Canadian revolt to that remote camp of the explorers.

Henceforward, for many years there exists no public record of Donald Smith's career, and he has flatly refused to tell the story lest he should appear to be advertising. His work consisted of trading with the savages for skins, of commanding small outposts, healing the sick, administering justice, bookkeeping, and of immense journeys by canoe in summer, or on horseback by a team of dogs in winter. The winter is arctic in that Northeast Territory, and a very pleasant season between blizzards, but the summer is cursed with a plague of insects, black flies by day, mosquitoes by night almost beyond endurance. Like other men in the service of the company, Mr. Smith had the usual adventures by flood and field, the peril of the snow storms, the wrecking of canoes. There is but one story extant. His eyesight seemed to be failing, and after much pain he ventured on a journey of many months to seek the help of a doctor in Montreal. Sir George Simpson, governor of the company, met him in the outskirts of the city.

"Well, young man," he said, "why are you not at your post?" "My eyes, sir; they got so bad, I've come to see a doctor."

"And who gave you permission to leave your post?" "No one, sir." It would have taken a year to get permission, and his need was urgent.

"Then, sir," answered the governor, "if it's a question between your eyes, and your service in the Hudson's Bay company, you'll take my advice, and return this instant to your post."

Without another word, without a glance toward the city that man turned on his tracks, and set off to tramp a thousand miles back to his duty. The man who has learned to obey has learned to command, and wherever Smith was stationed, the books were accurate, the trade was profitable. He was not heard of save in the return of profit, while step by step he rose to higher and higher command, until at the age of forty-eight he was appointed governor of the Hudson's Bay company, sovereign from the Atlantic to the Pacific, reigning over a country nearly as large as Europe. To his predecessors this had been the crowning of an ambitious life; to him, it was only the beginning of his great career.

The Canadian colonies were then being welded into a nation and the first act of the new Dominion government was to buy from the Hudson's Bay company the whole of its enormous empire, two thousand miles wide and nearly five thousand miles long. Never was there such a sale of land, at such a price, for the cash payment worked out at about two shillings per square mile. Two-thirds of the money went to the sleeping partners of the company in England; one-third, thanks to Mr. Smith's persuasion, was granted to the working officers in Rupert's Land. Mr. Smith's own share seems to have been the little nest egg from which his fortune was hatched. When the news of the great land sale reached the Red river of the north, the people there broke out in revolt.

set up a republic, and installed Louis Riel as president at Fort Garry. Naturally this did not meet the views of the Canadian government, which had bought the country, or of the Hudson's Bay company, which owned the stolen fort. Mr. Smith, governor of the company, was sent at once as commissioner for the Canadian government to restore the settlement to order. On his arrival the rebel president promptly put him in jail, and openly threatened his life. In this awkward situation, Mr. Smith contrived not only to stay alive, but to conduct a public meeting, with President Riel acting as his interpreter to the French half-breed rebels. The temperature at this outdoor meeting was twenty degrees below zero, with a keen wind, but in course of five hours' debating, Mr. Smith so undermined the rebel authority that from that time it began to collapse. Afterward, although the rebels murdered one prisoner, and times were more than exciting, Mr. Smith's policy gradually sapped the rebellion, until, when the officer who later was Lord Wolseley arrived with British troops, Riel and his deluded half-breeds bolted. So, thanks to Mr. Smith, Fort Garry is now Winnipeg, the central city of Canada, capital of her central province, Manitoba.

But when Sir Donald Smith had resigned from the Hudson's Bay company's service, and became a politician, he schemed, with unheard-of daring, for even greater ends. At his suggestion, the Northwest Mounted Police was formed and sent out to take possession of the Great Plains. That added a wheat field to Canada which will soon be able to feed the British empire. Next he speculated with every dollar he could raise, on a rusty railway track, which some American builders had abandoned because they were bankrupt. He got the rail head into Winnipeg, and a large trade opened with the United States. So began the boom that turned Manitoba into a populous country, where the buffalo had ranged before his coming.

Now he was able to startle the Canadian government with the warning that unless they hurried up with a railway, hindering the whole Dominion from ocean to ocean, all this rich western country would drift into the United States. When the government had failed in an attempt to build the impossible railway, Sir Donald got Montreal financiers together, cousins and friends of his own, staked every dollar he had, made them gamble as heavily, and set to work on the biggest road ever constructed. The country to be traversed was almost unexplored, almost uninhabited except by savages, fourteen hundred miles of rock and forest, a thousand miles of plains, six hundred miles of high alps.

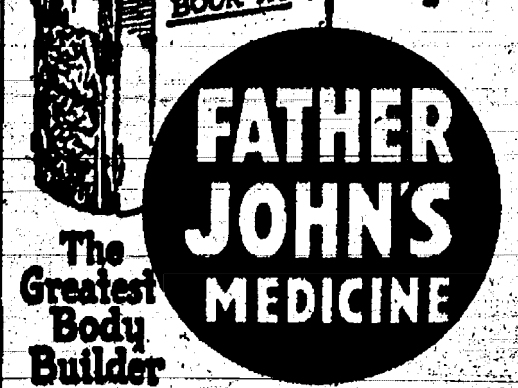

The syndicate building the road consisted of merchants in what was then a provincial town, and when they met for business it was to wonder vaguely where the month's pay was to come from for their men. They would part for the night to think, and by morning, Donald Smith would say, "Well, here's another million—that ought to do for a bit." On November 7, 1885, he drove the last spike, the golden spike, that completed the Canadian Pacific railway, and welded Canada into a living nation.

Afterward as Lord Strathcona, he endowed a university and gave a big hospital to Montreal. At a cost of three hundred thousand pounds he presented the famous regiment known as Strathcona's Horse, to the service of his country, and in his ninety-third year was working hard as Canadian high commissioner in London.

Indian Infant Death Rate.—The infant death rate among prehistoric American Indians was high. M. W. Sterling, ethnologist of the United States National museum, concludes from his recent exploration of ancient town sites discovered by him near Moberg, S. D., about three baby skeletons were found to every adult skeleton discovered. An almost complete mummy of an eight-months-old child was among the finds. The body had been accidentally mummified through the action of copper salts. Copper ornaments buried with the baby to accompany it into the next world, Mr. Sterling explained, had served to preserve its body in this world. An adult body, similarly preserved, was also found.

Daniel Webster.—Not many days ago I saw at breakfast the notebill of all your Notabilities, Daniel Webster. He is a magnificent specimen; you might say to all the world, "This is your Yankee Englishman, such limbs we make in Yankee land!" As a logic-fencer, Advocate, or Parliamentary Hercules, one would incline to back him at first sight against all the extant world. The thinned complexion, that amorphous crag-like face; the dull black eyes under their precipice of brows, like dull anthracite furnaces, needing only to be blown; the mastiff-mouth, accurately closed—I have not traced as much of silent Berserker-rage, that I remember of in any other man—Carlisle.

Newark, Mich.—"Some years ago I was troubled with dizziness, palpitation, loss of appetite and sore and painful stomach. I tried the best physicians I could find, and also several put-up medicines, but nothing did me any good. Some physicians said it was my heart; some said it was my stomach; while others said it was my nerves. I got so bad I could not work very steadily, when a friend came to see me and insisted upon my trying Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I was discouraged, but tried it anyway, and after taking the second bottle I felt much better. I then bought six bottles and I believe the 'Discovery' saved my life. It was rightfully named 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I would recommend it to all who need such a medicine.—Chas. E. Backus.

Prize Peace Plan, Submitted to Referendum, Is Target of League Opponents.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

EDWARD W. HOK'S prize of $100,000 for "the best practical plan by which the United States might cooperate with other nations to prevent war," has been awarded to a competitor whose name is not yet announced, and the plan is now being submitted to the people in a "nation-wide referendum." The reactions of Americans of various schools of thought are interesting and sometimes amusing. Briefly summarized, the plan is:

1. That the United States shall enter the permanent court of international justice, under the conditions stated by Secretary Hughes and President Harding in February, 1923.
2. That, without becoming a member of the League of Nations at present constituted, the United States shall offer to extend its present cooperation with the league and participate in the work of the league as a body of mutual counsel under conditions which:
- (a) Substitute moral force and public opinion for the military and economic force originally implied in articles 10 and 18.
- (b) Safeguard the Monroe doctrine.
- (c) Accept the fact that the United States will assume no obligations under the treaty of Versailles except by act of Congress.
- (d) Propose that membership in the league shall be opened to all nations.
- (e) Provide for the continuing development of "international law."

Advocates of American membership in the League of Nations and "mild reservationists," though admitting there was nothing novel in the scheme, gave it their hearty approval. The "irreconcilables" and all those who believe the United States should stand aloof from the tangled affairs of Europe naturally denounced the plan as merely an argument for entering the league. They asserted that the jury of award was packed and that the whole affair was a conspiracy. The concern exhibited by some of the members of the senate was almost ridiculous. They professed to believe that the contest was improper propaganda designed to influence their votes on the pending question of American membership in the world court, and called loudly for a congressional inquiry. This referendum, which is being conducted mainly through those newspapers that are willing to help, is bound to be somewhat limited.

SENATOR LODGE opened the week's proceedings in the upper house by delivering a carefully prepared speech in defense of the administration's policy of refusing recognition to the soviet government of Russia. He presented a great volume of evidence and documents to uphold the assertion that the Moscow government, directly or indirectly, is making efforts to cause disorder and dissension among the American people, and gave what seemed to be real proof of the statement that the Communist internationalism and the soviet government are inextricably interwoven and controlled by the same men.

Senator Borah, who has introduced a resolution for Russian recognition, said the proof submitted by Mr. Lodge would not stand a test in any court, and that even if it were true it would be easier to deal with the alleged conditions if diplomatic relations were restored.

Senator Brookhart of Iowa, with the business sometimes exhibited by those not yet experienced in large affairs of state, declared the reasons for non-recognition given by the administration spokesmen were "the most ridiculous I ever heard from grown-up men."

commerce committee. LaFollette advised his followers to throw their support to Senator Elihu D. Smith of South Carolina, the Democratic candidate, and so Mr. Smith was elected. On the decisive ballot the vote stood: Smith, 397; Cummins, 297; Citizens, 6. The only Democrat out of line was Bruce of Maryland who, as once before, voted for Cummins. Senator Smith was chairman of this committee for a time in 1919. He was opposed by the Esch-Cummins transportation law, but is not classed as a radical.

RIGHT here it is as well to record the fact that the Supreme court has just upheld one of the important provisions of the transportation act—that one requiring railroads to divide with the government their excess earnings above the 5.75 per cent fixed by the interstate commerce commission as a reasonable return on their valuation.

The decision said that by the recapture clauses congress is "enabled to maintain uniform rates for all shippers and yet keep the net returns of railroads, whether strong or weak to the varying percentages which are fair to them." These clauses, it was held, do not appropriate property in violation of constitutional rights, nor do they invade the rights of states in rate making.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE has given approval to the regulation of the shipping board placing the operation of the government's merchant fleet in the hands of the Emergency Fleet corporation, provided the board co-operates with Leigh C. Palmer, who was selected to be the new president of the corporation. This co-operation was pledged by the board.

WILLIAMSON county, Illinois, wherein is Herrin, scene of the mine strike massacre, is offering another lovely spectacle to the nation. Members of the Ku Klux Klan, lead by federal prohibition officers, have been making numerous raids on places where liquor was sold and have made scores of arrests, all without notifying the sheriff or asking his aid. The citizens who are opposed to both the Klan and prohibition resented these acts, and the sheriff professed to fear the outbreak of serious hostilities. So he called on the governor for state troops, which were sent to Marion, the county seat. Very likely the soldiers were needed, for both the Klan and a rival organization known as the Knights of the Flaming Circle were in fighting mood, and nearly every man in the county seems to have acquired a gun.

PHILADELPHIA, which has not been noted of late for law enforcement, is in process of being "cleaned up" by a new administration. Brig. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, who won fame in the marines, has been employed as director of public safety and every saloon, disorderly house and gambling place will be closed and kept closed. Already, it is said, the keepers of the "joints" are fleeing to other cities. General Butler says he has been offered $100,000 to let the handbook operate without interference.

BRITAIN'S new parliament assembled last week, but will not be formally opened by the king until January 15. At a great victory demonstration of the labor party Ramsey MacDonald announced that he was ready to accept office as soon as invited and that his government's first task would be to mobilize all men and women of good will and safe judgment to settle the difficulties of the world and establish real peace. It is rumored in London that if France proves recalcitrant to labor's peace plans, the MacDonald government will make an immediate demand for payment of the French debt to Great Britain, and if this is not honored, French paper may be placed on the market and the French exchange thus annihilated.

M. VENIZELLOS, though ill, has consented to serve as foreign minister in the Greek cabinet formed by George Roussois, former ambassador to the United States, and he also has agreed that the plebiscite on the form of government shall be held in March instead of April. This latter was asked by Henry Morgenthau of New York chairman of the League of Nations Greek refugee settlement commission, who said the league could not obtain a loan for the refugees until Greece had a stable government.

Greek leaders are beginning to plan for a new and more advantageous agreement with Turkey, for dispatches last week told of critical developments in that land. There seems to be a growing revolt against President Mustafa Kemal and his government, and a bomb was thrown at Kemal in Smyrna which wounded both him and his wife. The Greek army, it is asserted, is being trained to take full advantage of Kemal's troubles by seizing all of Thrace.

A BAND of armed men invaded the hotel in Speyer occupied by the officials of the Rheinland-Palatinate autonomous government and assassinated Herr Heints, the president and three of his associates.

General Davies and Owen Young are in Paris to help untangle the German troubles, but they wisely decline to give statements to the press except to say that time is the essence of the situation and that there should be daily and continuous sessions of the committee on which they are serving. Meanwhile Germany's finances are showing signs of decided improvement.

PONTIAC—The pulpit of Rev. Father T. J. Ryan, who died here recently, after 30 years in charge of St. Vincent de Paul Catholic parish, will be filled by Rev. Father James B. Thornton, of St. John's church, Monroe.

LANSING—Announcement has been made here that arrangements have been completed for the annual Lansing Automobile Show, Feb. 5 to 9 in the Hudson Essex garage near the business center. The exhibition promises to be one of the largest in Michigan.

Kalamazoo—Dr. Benjamin Southworth, 45 years old, of Schoolcraft, one of the most widely known physicians of southwestern Michigan, died here recently. He owed his wide popularity in several counties to the fact he would drive many miles day or night, whenever called.

Grand Rapids—While the Rev. H. E. Walker, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist church, was delivering the funeral oration at the services for Gilbert Coffey, in the church last week, Joseph C. Coffey, 63, grocer and life-long friend of Coffey, died of apoplexy. Coffey was stricken as the minister began the sermon.

LANSING—Letters have been addressed by the State Department of Conservation to all of the Representatives and to the two Senators from Michigan, asking them to introduce and support legislation which would cause the Federal government to deed the unused portion of Round Island, adjacent to Mackinac Island, to the State.

DETROIT—Despite the fact that in December, 1922, Detroit postal receipts made so large a gain over the same month in the preceding year that the city ranked second in the country, the continued heavy business down at the local postoffice once more brought it well up in the gains for December, 1923, over those of December, 1922.

LANSING—A request has been received from the Traverse City state hospital by the administrative board for an increase in its $50,000 appropriation for the construction of a dining hall for women patients. It was explained that by authorizing the expenditure of a greater sum a combination building which would afford a recreation room for the patients, can be erected.

LANSING—A tentative highway program for 1924, suggesting total expenditures of approximately $22,000,000, has been submitted to the highway finance committee of the state administrative board by Highway Commissioner Frank Rogers. The program probably will be revised to meet the state's financial condition, Rogers said. It allots the cost about $5,000,000 to the counties, $15,000,000 to the state, and $2,000,000 to the federal government.

PORT HURON—Police Court jury recently convicted William Ellertorpe, Clyde Township farmer, of not paying the dog tax, and so far the constitutionality of State Dog Tax law has been upheld. Mr. Ellertorpe, however, says that he will appeal his conviction to the Circuit Court and in his effort to have the law declared unconstitutional.

Mr. Ellertorpe, following his conviction by a jury of six men, was fined $10. The fine has not been paid pending his appeal.

Pekin—Professor Bernhard Hoff, an American missionary, died last Sunday in a hospital at Siangyangfu, Hupeh Province, from wounds inflicted a few weeks ago by brigands who also shot down his wife and kidnapped Mrs. Juliana Kilen, a co-worker from Northern Minnesota, when they raided the mission at Taoyang. Mrs. Hoff is expected to recover. Mrs. Kilen still is missing.

General Wu Peifu, leader of the Chinese military party and commander of the northern provinces, has offered a reward of $10,000 for the rescue of Mrs. Kilen. Mrs. Kilen is reported to have been seen a few days ago, apparently well, in Yuchow, Honan Province.

Professor Hoff and his wife were missionaries of the Swedish branch of the Lutheran church in the United States. After the mission was invaded the three missionaries were warned against trying to escape. The Hoffes, however, not knowing the Chinese dialect, which the brigands spoke at tempted to run away and both were shot down.

Mrs. Kilen, a veteran missionary, who understands the brigand's tongue, overheard them plan to take Mrs. Hoff with them and promptly sacrificed herself, persuading the brigands to take her instead of the wounded woman.

The brigands were traced to the Honan Province but there the trail apparently was lost.

Officers of the American legation at Peking have been in Honan Province urging Chinese officials to take more drastic steps against the brigands.

STATE TAX LEVY IS BOOSTED

Census Shows Big Increase in Debts and Valuations in 42 Years

Washington—Summary of the taxes and public indebtedness in Michigan and its political subdivisions, published today by the census bureau, show that the state's per-capita levy of general property taxes has increased more than that of any other of the 35 states thus far reported for the period from 1880 to 1922.

The per-capita levy of general taxes in Michigan was $41.87 in 1922. In 1880 it had been $5.27. Nine other states had a higher per capita general property tax in 1922, but all of these had also a higher tax than Michigan in 1880, so that the increase was not as great.

In one other division of the statistics Michigan also leads, all the states thus far reported. Its increase of debt in the state and all sub divisions was the greatest in the entire list of 35.

The percentage of increase in Michigan's case between 1912 and 1922, the years compared by the census bureau, was 503, and the closest approach was in North Carolina where the percent age was 432.

In specified revenue, Michigan stood fourth among the 35 states, specified revenues being defined to include general property, special and poll taxes which licenses and special assessments.

TIPS FOR TAXPAYERS

If you are single and support in your home one or more relatives over whom you exercise family control, you are the head of a family and entitled in your income tax return for the year 1923, to the same exemptions granted a married person. These are $2,500 if the net income was $5,000 or less and $2,000 if the net income was more than $5,000. In addition the head of a family may claim a $400 credit for each person dependent upon him for chief support if such person is under 18 years of age or incapable of self-support because mentally or physically defective.

For example, a son supports in his home an aged mother and two sisters 14 and 16 years of age. His net income for 1923 was $3,000. He is entitled to an exemption of $2,500 plus a $400 credit for each dependent, a total of $3,700. While he pays no tax, he must file a return, because his net income was in excess of $1,000.

An exemption as the head of a family can be claimed by only one member of a household.

SHARON

Mrs. Mittie O'Neil is spending some time in Jackson, at the home of her son Bernie, who recently underwent an operation on his throat in Battle Creek.

Mrs. C. L. Hall, who has been spending some time with her niece, Mrs. Frank Ellis, has returned to her home in Grass Lake.

Albert Bahnmiller has purchased the H. B. Ordway farm and will take possession in the spring.

El Dickey and family have recently moved from the Enright farm to the Godfrey Butler farm.

Lewis Lemm, who has been spending several weeks at the home of his mother, has returned to Detroit.

Robert Lawrence and wife of Detroit visited during the week-end at the home of his sister, Mrs. Max Irwin.

Mrs. Gertrude Ellis is visiting a few days at the home of her sister, Miss Jennie Rhodes in Ann Arbor.

Daniel Butler received word this week of the death of his sister, Mrs. Mary Gutekunst in Jackson. Mr. Butler is poorly at this writing.

PRIZE APPLES TO BE SHOWN AT FARM WEEK

Prize Michigan apples will be gathered together at the Michigan Agricultural College the first week in February to compete in the various classes of the annual fruit and flower show which is promoted by the M. A. C. student horticultural club as a feature of Farmers Week.

Transforming the college armory into a veritable bower of fruit and flower, the horticultural show is always one of the most attractive of the many Farmers Week exhibits.

All Michigan fruit growers are eligible to compete in the competitive events. There are eight classes, with a number of subdivisions under each, in which prizes are offered.

Entries close at noon on Monday, February 4, the first day of Farmers Week, according to P. A. Krenmin, chairman of the student horticultural club committee in charge of fruit at the show. Premium lists may be had from him, and early shipment of fruit for the show will be kept in the M. A. C. cold storage plant.

Early entries indicate that the number of exhibits will be large this year, but committees in charge are still seeking more trays of apples in an effort to establish a record for the show.

UNADILLA

George May and family of Stockbridge, and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Whitehead of Plainfield, spent Sunday at the home of Vas Bullis.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Marshall entertained Ralph Teachout and family for supper Saturday evening in honor of Mrs. Marshall's birthday and Mr. and Mrs. Teachout's wedding anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Watts and daughter of Dexter and Mr. and Mrs. Chandler Lane and son of Chelsea spent Sunday at the home of Francis May.

Herbert Carnes has sold his farm to parties from Detroit and will give possession the first of March.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Meabour and son Leonard visited friends in Howell the last of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Hadley and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Marshall were Jackson visitors last Wednesday.

Mrs. Austin Gorton and her mother, Mrs. Scotten, and Thelma Bullis attended a funeral of an aunt in Manchester last Friday.

Clude Rose is sick at this writing, with acute indigestion.

The Unadilla Sunday school elected their officers for the coming year as follows: Superintendent, Mrs. L. K. Hadley; assistant supt., W. T. Barnum; secretary, Agnes Watson; treasurer, Esther Barnum.

All She Had.

Mr. Fish—"I met Miss Penobbe at the party last night and she gave me the cold shoulder." Mr. Fox—"What else could you expect? The night was chilly and both shoulders were bare."

BREVITIES

Parma.—The health board has ordered that all public meetings in that village be stopped for the present on account of an outbreak of smallpox and also ordered a general vaccination of the residents.

Grass Lake.—Henry Hasselshwerdt has accepted the contract for bringing and returning the children from the Close district, who are now attending the Grass Lake school. The school house was burned during the holiday vacation.—News.

Manchester.—Manchester is to be congratulated on the appointment of one of her best citizens, Frank Leeson, as postmaster following his examination before the civil service commission when he was placed first on the list of eligibles for the office. He will take his place January 28.

Brooklyn.—Station agent Ranney reports that 66 carload shipments of produce and materials were handled at the Brooklyn station last month. During the past two months Hart & Howell Co. has received 20 carloads of produce from nearby and western stations.—Exponent.

Brighton.—South Lyon has launched a campaign to secure water works for the village. They had a special election to vote on the question ten years ago and it lost 81 to 44. They have their pavement now and many of them believe the time is ready to secure water works.—Argus.

Dexter.—George Kratzmiller of Detroit, a former Dexter boy, was married to Miss Ruth O'Hara of Ann Arbor, at St. Thomas church, in that city, Saturday morning at 7 o'clock. Rev. Fr. J. P. Command officiating. The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. John O'Hara of Detroit. Leader, Mr. Kratzmiller was a former telegraph operator of the M. C. at the Chelsea passenger station.

Perry.—The next political gathering for Perry village will be the annual caucus for the nomination of officers for the ensuing year. As but one ticket is generally named it is virtually the same as election, so the caucus is a very important affair and every qualified voter, both men and women, should take an interest and be present and choose the men who wish to run the affairs of the village for 1924-25. Journal.

Milan.—After several months of correspondence with Edgar A. Guest, Michigan's own poet, definite information has been received that Mr. Guest will appear in Milan some time in the spring. Although no definite date has been set, it is expected that he will talk to a Milan audience some time during the last of April or early in May. He will come under the direction of the local post of The American Legion.—Leader.

Ypsilanti.—Norman A. Ballard, prominent life resident of Augusta township, hung himself in the shop above the granary on his farm home Tuesday morning at 10:30. The tragedy occurred because of continued ill health and dependency. A note left on a work bench near by read: "Because of ill health I am taking my life. No one is to blame." Coroner Burchfield and Dr. Paton were called and no investigation was deemed necessary.—Record.

Stockbridge.—The fire alarm Tuesday afternoon called the boys out to the home of Herman Reithmiller, north of the village. Mr. and Mrs. Reithmiller first discovered the fire in a couch, back of the kitchen stove, which they put out, but upon investigation found the upper part of the house to be on fire. They phoned for help and when the chemical engine got to work the fire was soon put out. Considerable damage was done in the upper part of the house, which is covered by insurance.—Brief-Sun.

Jackson.—John Hastings, whose wife, Gladys Hastings, was killed a few months ago on the Springfield road when the car in which she was riding struck a wagon, was arraigned in police court Thursday, charged with non-support of his 2 year old child. Hastings pleaded guilty, but told the judge he had acted on advice of his lawyer, who told him to wait until the divorce case then in progress should be cleared up. When the judge asked Hastings who he thought would look out for the baby during that time, he replied that he didn't know. The child is at present with its grandmother.—News.

Manchester.—Reading an account of some old relic in the Enterprise, Mrs. Allie Hough concluded to show us one that has been in the Hough family for upwards of 180 years. It is a butter ladle that an Indian gave to Mr. Hough's great grandmother in exchange for some bread and butter. That was in the neighborhood of where the city of Cleveland, Ohio, now stands, but there was no Cleveland at the time the swap was made, she informed us. The ladle is well shaped and is in good condition though in use all those years. We don't think the Indians ever made any butter with that ladle, but there are many uses they might have had for it.—Enterprise.

Rare beauties and distinctions in lines, finish and upholstery—and the great mechanical luxury of an engine that actually improves with use! The wonderful Willys-Knight sleeve-valve engine is the same type of engine used in the finest cars of Europe. See the Willys-Knight—go for a good ride!

Another Reason Why—

The Buick valve-in-head engine has been recognized for more than twenty years as the most economical and efficient power plant. With its reduced water-jacketing space, more heat is retained in the cylinders and more power is therefore generated.

ADDS FEATURES FOR NEXT FAIR

Jackson county's fair of 1924 will be bigger and better than ever before, announced Manager Burris Thursday. It will be held September 8 to 13, and will have many new features never before seen in a Jackson county fair, among them being a big pageant on the last day that is sure to interest the local factories and schools, and a society horse show at which practically all the riding academies in the state will be well represented.

Heretofore it has been the plan of the fair-board to put on shows at night that were no better than those during the day, amateur acts and the like. This year the program is going to be changed, and the best in the vaudeville line will be secured for evening entertainment. Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights a big fireworks spectacle will be put on in addition to the acts, and the other nights other novelties will be presented.—News.

INTERURBAN FARES INCREASED JANUARY 15

Under authorization of the Michigan Public Utilities Commission, interurban fares on the Detroit, Jackson & Chicago Railway on January 15 advance to two and three-eighths cents per mile where such transportation is paid for singly.

However, for the benefit of regular riders the Detroit, Jackson & Chicago Railway at the same time inaugurates a sixty day trial period with a series of commuters' tickets that will permit such riders to travel between two given points at practically the same average rate as has existed.

These commuters' tickets are issued in three forms as follows:

Twenty rides to be used in 20 days on local and express cars by the purchaser only.

Thirty rides to be used in 30 days on local and express cars by the purchaser or members of his family when traveling together.

Fifty rides to be used in six months on any passenger car, including limiteds, good for the holder thereof and party.

These commuters' tickets will generally be sold at waiting rooms but they will not be sold by conductors on the cars.

The commuters' ticket sale is purely experimental and their continuance depends wholly upon an increased amount of riding. Under the order of the commission the company has not only a right to issue commuters' tickets but it has a right to make special arrangements with municipalities providing rates offered one community must be offered another. If officially asked for providing the cases are substantially the same "but" says the order "the existence of the competition of other means of transportation and the relative extent of severity thereof shall be deemed to affect the similarity of conditions."

Seek to Ease Rules on

Night Life in London

London.—England needs a new law regulating public houses and places of entertainment, say the owners of London's hotels and dance halls, who have banded together to obtain less stringent laws in the matter of closing their places.

The present law, which is adhered to vigorously by the authorities, was passed in the reign of George II in 1751, and requires that the dance places of all classes close at the stroke of midnight.

The hotel and cafe proprietors will ask the London county council to draw up a new law to be presented to parliament, and they have obtained the backing of the "Brighter London" movement committee which is seeking to make London a rival of gay Paris.

Ford

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

Looking Ahead

LAST Spring a total of 350,000 people were disappointed in not being able to obtain deliveries of Ford Cars and Trucks, as orders were placed faster than cars could be produced.

The demand for Ford Cars and Trucks this Spring will, according to all indications, be 1st greater than last Spring.

Winter buying has been increasing at a greater rate than ever before.

Actual retail deliveries the past 60 days totaled 308,170 Ford Cars and Trucks, an increase of 1961 a day over a year ago.

Over 200,000 people have already ordered Ford products on our purchase plan, the majority of whom will take delivery in the Spring.

The above facts are given with the suggestion that you list your order promptly with a Ford dealer if you contemplate the purchase of a Ford Car or Truck for use this Spring or Summer and wish to avoid delay in delivery.

Ford Motor Company
Detroit, Michigan

You need not pay cash for your car. You can arrange to make a small deposit down, taking care of the balance in easy payments. Or, you can buy on the Ford "Weekly Purchase Plan." This puts you on the preferred order list and insures delivery of your car at a time to be determined by yourself.

The geese that have their yearly homes in the flat country in the vicinity of Stockbridge, Gregory, and in that section are still there, it is reported, and this is taken to be an indication of an open winter this year. It is said that the geese usually leave this section about mid-November, but this year they have been held back by the county road authorities.

According to the report of Secretary of State for 1923, receipts for auto licenses exceeded the preceding year by more than $1,000,000. Washtenaw county residents paid for 1923 licenses amounting to $187,587. About $89,000 of this money is turned back to the county for use on the public highways by the county road authorities.

Sunday school at 11:15. Wm. S. Bird, the new superintendent. You are wanted, come.

Evening worship at 7 o'clock. This will be a special for the O. E. S. but everyone is invited. I say, come, all the preachers say, come, fill the pew and God is not only honored but every worshiper is blessed by it. No preacher can do his best facing empty pews. Fill them and he can put his heart into his sermon. A more inspiring sermon, greater volume in singing and responsive reading and a larger number petitioning the Father insures a more delightful service for every worshiper. Just a little thoughtful effort on your part, a kindly invitation, a little breaking away from your habits of reserve, a little extra energy in behalf of your Master and your church will not only honor God but all will be filled and blessed. Come.

THE RED LOCK

A Tale Of The Hatwoods

By David Anderson

Author of The Blue Moon

CHAPTER II.—Simon Colin welcomed the minister as he introduced the "villager." The preacher is a young man with a beard, enormous spectacles, stiff neck stock and patent leather boots.

CHAPTER III.—At supper at the Colin home the preacher, who had been kept at a distance at college, tells how the boy killed a gambler and disappeared. His father, Red Colin, an inheritance from his father, the Parson, has a sort of stroke, brought on by reading a letter from Xon, somewhere in New York, who outrages his father on his death-bed. A postscript by another hand says he is dead.

CHAPTER IV.—At the village store and postoffice Luke Belden, a new comer, says he saw the new person with his arm around Felix. Jack says him, "He shoots a pistol from his hand and makes him say he was mistaken."

CHAPTER V.—The person Rosa sailing on the river with Jack and others Jack discovers the person carries a revolver. The person runs across a hidden houseboat. Jack discovers that the person took his a footprint on the dusty deck.

CHAPTER VI.—All the villagers gather at a festival in the schoolhouse. A drunken stranger disturbs the festivities. He attacks Jack with a knife. Jack knocks him flat, but receives an important wound in the shoulder. The preacher faces the desperado and points to the door. The man cowers and goes out and disappears.

CHAPTER VII.—Jack, working in a field, meets the desperado of the festival. He attacks him with a knife and trails the man to the cabin where Belden and his sister live.

CHAPTER VIII.—Jack tells Pat Belden, who has been sent to jail, that he's going to California to find gold to buy back the old homestead. He tells Belden of his love for her in all but words.

CHAPTER IX.—At courtmarten and Uncle Nick Whiffles, friends of Jack, agree that the festival desperado was Black Bogus, a gambler and a bad man wanted by the sheriff. That he is harboring with Logo Belden and that they plan to plant him.

CHAPTER X.—Jack trails a night prowler who goes to Whispering Spring, calls out the preacher with an oar hook and hands him a small pack.

CHAPTER XI.—In the forest Jennie Belden warns Jack that his life is in danger from three men and the third "blows his time" when he strikes "he kills".

CHAPTER XII.—Pat Simon looks over the papers in his safe and addresses an envelope to Jack Warhope. He has traced till his own first birthday. Felix, Jack and the preacher go riding.

CHAPTER XIII.—Felix and Jack show their skill with a glass. Jack proves he can't hit a flock of barn doors. Jack sees a face at the window of a haunted cabin.

The cloud-bank had dissolved in the west when he again reached the illuminated bovel and the sky was hanging out its stars—the big ones already out, and the little ones coming.

He again crept down the wooded face of the bluff and under cover of the fallen oak, festooned with the wild cucumber vines, stole up to the chink in the wall and peered between the logs. The cabin was apparently empty.

After listening intently for some time he again stole around the wall to the door, pushed it slowly open and entered. As soon as his eyes grew accustomed to the gloom, he saw that the room was just as he had left it a few hours earlier.

Not daring to venture out on the floor, the light being too dim again to risk hiding his trail by stepping in the tracks, he reached up, caught one of the joists and, swinging from hand to hand, crossed to the far corner of the room, concealed himself behind the old boards and boxes of the rubbish heap and sat gripping his sore shoulder, the exertion had opened the gash, and he could feel the blood crawling down his side.

There is something depressing, for some, about entering an old deserted house—especially after nightfall. And this was the cabin of dead Henry Spencer. Few hatwoodsmen would care to go near it—much less into it—at such an hour.

Jack watched the last faint light from the west die out in the smudged window—so foul with clay that he had not been able to make out more than the bare outline of the face that had peered through it a few hours before. He knew the bats were darting about in the cabin, for the dark was alive with the click of their teeth. A screech owl shivered his long, tapering tail from an upstanding branch of the ruin oak.

The woodman half started, listened closely, smiled. The sound was genuine—it was a screech owl.

The low wailing of the wind, lapping the rocks in its shallow bed, came up across the lonely road; the melancholy note of a whippoorwill carried down out of the woods.

A sound fell upon the night—the low wailing of the wind in the yard—and the woodman grew tense and strained. There followed a guarded footfall; a hand tumbled over the door; it opened; a heavy step creaked the sagging floor; a form bulked huge and black in the gloom; a hand and arm passed across the window and hung the blanket in place.

A match scraped—one of the old fashioned kind that spatter a white before making much light—the chimney of the lamp was raised; the match laid to the wick. Out of the dark flared the powerful form and truculent face of—Black Bogus.

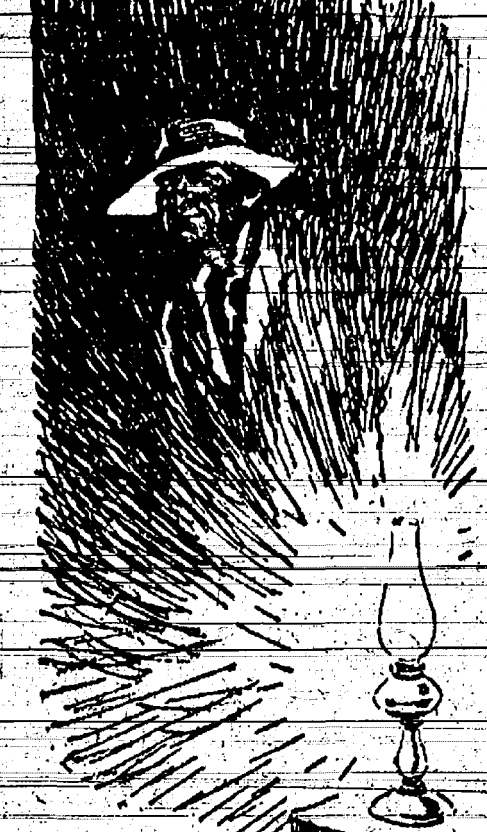

After a somewhat close study of the cracked floor, he went around on the other side of the lamp to the ruined hearth, lifted up a loosened slab of stone and felt under it.

slab—black, rose and slouched across the floor toward the rubbish heap. The man hiding behind it crouched still as one of the cabin logs and fingered the pistol butt at his hip. But the rusted steel only remained out an old box carried it back to the light and snatched it.

Drawing a short pipe from his pocket, he filled it from a grimy tobacco sack, lighted it with another of the spluttering matches, and with the aid of a lamp quite at his elbow, began to smoke.

As he smoked, the bitter lines of his face relaxed a trifle, and his half haunting resemblance to a face that dwelt—and would ever dwell—in his memory again stole across the mind of the watcher.

But Black Bogus had not smoked long until it became apparent that he was anything but a man at his ease. Every sound outside received his strained attention, and when not listening, he smoked viciously.

At last he shuffled himself erect, felt of his elbow where it had rested heavily upon the larger box, knocked the ashes from his pipe, dropped it on the floor, and, bent forward and, seemed lost in thought.

Shifting his pose after a time, he straightened, put away his pipe, reached into the inside pocket of his faded coat and drew out a thick bunch of greenbacks—a handful of bills that appeared to be an assortment of tens and twenties.

The woodman guardedly shifted his position so as to get a better look. As he did so, his knee accidentally touched the rubbish heap.

With an oath Black Bogus chucked the money back into his pocket and leaped at one bound into a corner out of range with the window, a heavy revolver balanced in his hand, his eyes sweeping every nook and cranny of the room, which the alarming sound might have come.

At that tense instant a bat, darting about under the rafters, blinded by the light, dashed itself against the cabin wall and fell almost at the desperado's feet.

"Damn the thing!" he growled, flung his foot upon the half-stricken creature and grinding it to death, at the same time thrusting the heavy revolver into his pocket and turning back to the light.

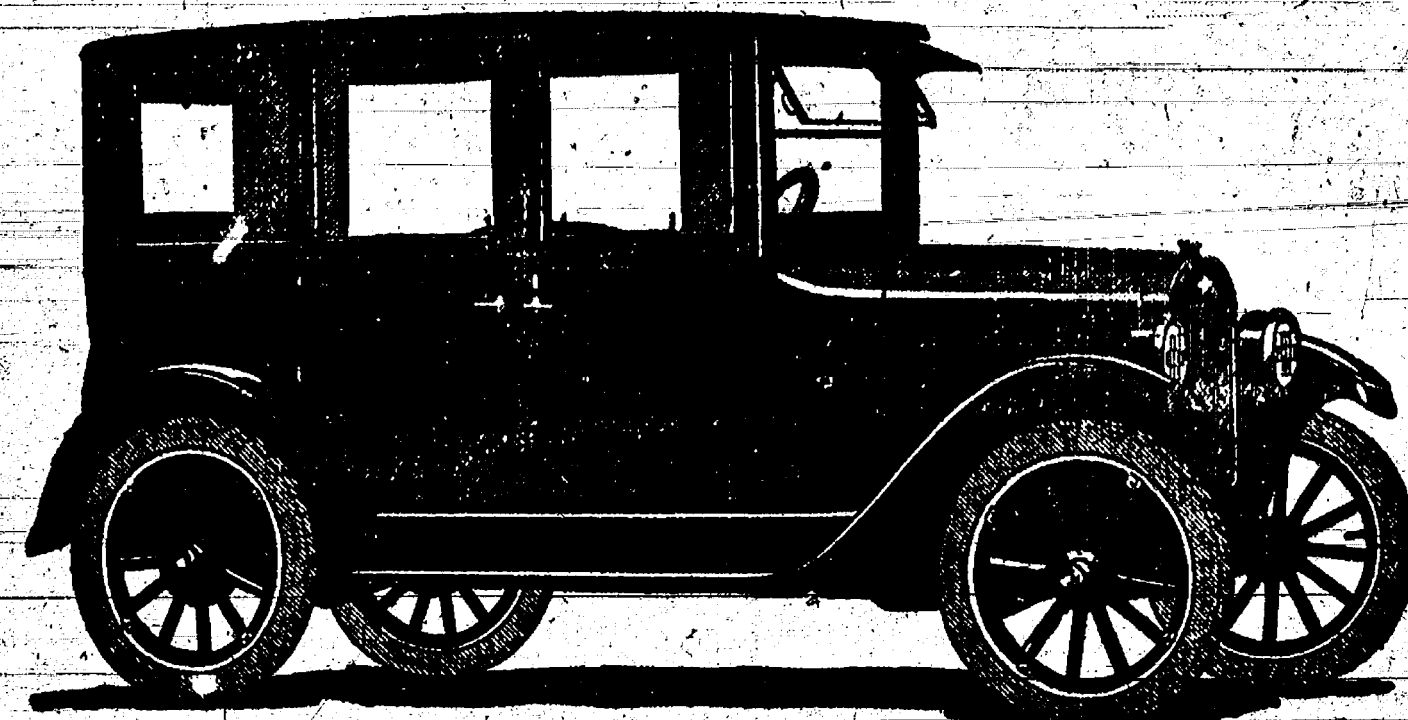

He stooped down on the shabby box; took the money out of his pocket again and began a close inspection of each bill, one by one. Ten of the bills—the ones that appeared to the man watching him to be the newest—he laid out upon the box. The others he put back in his pocket.

Then an astonishing thing happened to the ten new bills. He took from his green, wrinkled trousers a plug of tobacco and snipped off a chew with his powerful teeth; drew from the side pocket of his coat half a handful of what looked to be ordinary black soil or rotted leaf mold; moistened it very slightly with tobacco juice; rubbed a little of it on each bill and snatched them between his hands, rumpling and crumpling them in every conceivable way. He rolled the corners between his fingers and thumbs; bent the corners down; twisted and scored the bills as if he would wear them out.

Buy TRANSPORTATION, Not Merely a Car

When low-priced cars came on the market, PRICE was of course the magnet that drew buyers, because low price made automobiles possible for millions hitherto debarred from the advantages of motor transportation. Time and experience have developed the fact that purchase price although an important factor—must always be considered in connection with operating and maintenance costs.

Chevrolet prices are not the lowest in the market, yet Chevrolet Economical

"Miss America" Declares Tanlac Wonderful Health Giving Tonic

Miss Campbell in "Miss America" crown which she has won on two occasions.

Miss Mary Katherine Campbell, twice proclaimed "Miss America," has taken TANLAC and endorses it in a statement recently given to the women of America. In this statement, Miss America declares that Good Health is the basis of all Beauty, and advises women who would be beautiful to "first find good health."

Her complete statement as given is as follows: "I consider it a great privilege to be able to tell the thousands of women everywhere what a great tonic TANLAC is. Health is the basis of all beauty. Without good health, one is apt to be run-down, nervous, underweight, high-strung, anemic. Indigestion drives the roses from a woman's cheeks and robs her of that radiant quality of womanhood that is real beauty."

"I have taken TANLAC and I do not hesitate to say that it is a wonderful health-giving tonic. It has brought relief and good health to many women, and with good health one may have a measure of beauty that will overcome shortcomings in face and figure."

"Rosy cheeks, sparkling eyes, a well-rounded figure, a lovable disposition, go hand in hand with good health. To those searching for beauty, I would say—'First of all, Find Good Health.' The TANLAC treatment has proven itself a boon to womanhood, and I recommend it."

Miss Campbell has written a booklet on Health and Beauty which may be secured by filling out the coupon below.

DAIRY

Fit Methods to Follow in Production of Cream

Since at the present time, our farmers who are milking a few good dairy cows, are generally better fixed, financially, than those following almost any other line, it seems that we should pay particular attention to the handling of the product, that it may be put on the market in the best condition possible and thereby bring the biggest returns.

Methods which will aid in producing a good product:

Keep the barn and cows clean. Remove manure from stable twice daily. Wipe udder and flanks with a damp cloth, before milking.

Milk with dry hands, into a small top milk pail.

Separate white warm, to insure less waste in the skimmilk.

Wash separator thoroughly after each separation. Use a brush rather than a rag. First use warm water and washing powder, then scald all parts thoroughly.

Do not separate into vessel containing the cooled cream. Cool freshly separated cream before adding to previous skimming.

Strain cream thoroughly every time a fresh supply is added, using a strainer manufactured for the purpose.

A cooling tank should be on every farm. Run the water pumped for live stock through the cream tank and then into the stock tank.

Keep cooled cream in a sanitary place, which is cool, sanitary, free from odors and well aired.

Cream should be delivered to market at least three times a week in summer and twice in winter.

Cream should not be allowed to freeze.—L. K. Crowe, assistant professor, animal husbandry, Colorado Agricultural college.

Brass Letters on Cans Will Prevent Much Loss

When the owner's initials or number is painted on his cream cans, they have to be remarked frequently, as the marks become dim, due to washing and shipping. In order to avoid this I solder brass letters to the sloping part of the can, just below the neck, writes W. R. Taylor of Missouri in the Rural New Yorker. Copper or brass letters can usually be purchased at the variety stores, but if not to be obtained they can be cut from a piece of sheet brass or copper with a pair of thin shears and a narrow chisel. Letters or figures made of aluminum will not do, as they are very difficult to solder. Cans so marked can always be easily identified and thus loss will be prevented. The lids should be stenciled or marked to correspond.

Dairy Cow Is Necessity, Claims Florida Expert

"As feed prices continue to soar, and the price of land increases, so will the dairy cow replace to a very large extent the beef steer, the sheep, and the pig as a producer of human food," says John M. Scott of the University of Florida experiment station. "And about the only rival the dairy cow has is the busy hen."

"The dairy cow and the hen are the only two farm animals that produce good, nourishing food day after day, when properly cared for. They provide foods that are indispensable in the home."

"What is home without milk and eggs?" asks Mr. Scott. These items enter so largely into the preparation of food for the family, the cow meaning life itself to thousands of children.

"We owe the cow and the hen a debt that can be paid only by giving them the very best of care that they may produce the maximum amount of food," says Mr. Scott. And neither of them are now receiving the attention that will be theirs when their full value is realized.

Cow Is Highly Nervous and Is Easily Excited

The cow is a highly-strung nervous organism and easily excited, shocked or affected in one way or another to the resultant lessening of her milk flow. Turning her out on a cold, windy or wet day to drink ice-cold water causes a serious shrink in milk production. Weigh the milk night and morning, without fail, every day of the year and watch the record. That tells the story of such shrinkage.

Ration Devised for Dairy Calf

Substitute Suggested Where Whole Milk Is Profitably Disposed Of.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In dairy herds whose entire output is sold as whole milk at high prices, there is need for a means of raising the calves on other feeds. A number of substitute rations have been worked out at various experiment stations which have proved fairly satisfactory. On the experimental farm of the United States Department of Agriculture, at Beltsville, Md., a mixture has been devised as the result of experience, which is suggested for use in raising calves where the whole milk is more profitably disposed of through other sources.

Department's Ration.

The department's recommended ration is as follows: Take 50 parts finely ground corn, 15 parts linseed oil meal, 15 parts finely ground rolled oats, 10 parts dried blood flour, 10 parts skim milk powder, one-half part salt. Stir up with warm water at the rate of 1 pound of the meal mixture to about 6 pounds of water. Increase gradually as the whole milk is decreased, until at the time the calf is fifty days old it should be getting only the grain. At this time 1 1/2 to 2 pounds of the meal mixed with water will constitute a day's feed. The total quantity of milk used is about 300 pounds; if less is fed the calves are likely to be unhealthy.

The time at which calves can be put on milk substitutes alone, say department dairymen, depends upon the same factors as in the use of separated milk, namely, the breed, development, and vigor of the calves, etc. It is hardly safe, as a rule, even with the most vigorous ones, to attempt to put them on milk substitutes alone within one month after birth; and with calves below normal in vigor some milk for two months or more may be necessary to raise them.

Feeding Schedule.

The department suggests, as a guide for feeding the above substitute to large, vigorous calves, the following schedule: First 10 days, 10 pounds of whole milk daily; second 10 days, 8 pounds of milk and 0.4 pound of meal (mixed up in 6 times its weight of warm water); third 10 days, 6 pounds milk and 0.8 pound meal; fourth 10 days, 4 pounds milk and 1.2 pounds meal; fifth 10 days, 2 pounds milk and 1.6 pounds meal; after 30 days, 2 pounds meal and no milk. Smaller and less vigorous calves should be fed somewhat less, and the milk feeding should be continued a little longer. In any event, a total of 800 pounds of milk should be sufficient. Grain and roughage should be fed with milk substitutes the same as with separated milk.

Whole milk is the best food for a calf; skim milk ranks second. Calves fed the substitute as stated above have been subject to no more digestive troubles than the skim-milk-fed calves and the gains in weight have not been materially less.

Glover or Alfalfa for Boars Is Satisfactory

Herd boars are more often overfed than underfed, say Iowa swine experts. When an animal enters the breeding season overfat, the results are seldom satisfactory.

For the young boar, provide a ration high in protein and mineral matter, so he may develop a large frame. Clover or alfalfa in a rack makes a satisfactory winter feed and will keep the animal in good condition.

A ration consisting of 40 pounds of ground oats, 40 pounds of corn, 15 pounds of wheat middlings and 5 pounds of tankage is good. Make a slop of the ground feed by mixing it with warm water. A boar should drink ten pounds of water for each 100 pounds of body weight, but will not do so unless he has part of it furnished in his feed.

Plenty of exercise and sunshine pay. Boars dislike cold, stormy weather and it is usually necessary to place the feed trough at the opposite side of the pen in order to make them stir themselves.

Henhouse Ventilation Is Quite Serious Problem

Much of the sickness and loss which occurs in poultry flocks during the winter from roup and colds is due to flocks being confined in houses that are close and damp, or that permit the other extreme of being cold and drafty because they are too high and the openings are improperly placed. The ventilation of the poultry house has to be solved differently for every type of house and locality. Also poultry-house ventilation has been subject to much change in the last decade, going from extreme closed warm houses to extreme open-front houses. The tendency now is to modify the notion and the tendency is to strike a course that is rather mediate.

Feed Chicken Flock Warm Mash on Cold Mornings

A warm mash on cold mornings will help the chicken flock. Mix your regular mash with equal parts of chopped beets or sprouted oats. Do not feed over two ounces per bird. When this is done feed a quart and a half of grain per 100 hens at ten o'clock and all they will clean up in an hour before dark. Keep dry mash before them all the time.

Continued Spread of Alfalfa Pest in West

Damage by Weevil Cause of Apprehension.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Continued spread of the alfalfa weevil throughout the Great Basin states and the increasing damage which it is causing in some of these states, notably Idaho, have caused great apprehension, especially throughout the more newly infested regions. The insect, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, now occupies practically all the alfalfa-growing regions of Utah and Idaho, and is found in parts of Colorado, Wyoming and Nevada. It has also been discovered in eastern Oregon and more recently has been reported from Sierra county, Calif.

An efficient means of control has been evolved by the bureau of entomology of the department in the use of an arsenate of lead spray which usually gives satisfactory control when applied once during the season. In southwestern Idaho, however, it was discovered that two sprayings are necessary in order to obtain satisfactory control, because of the fact that the weevil continues laying eggs throughout a longer period than elsewhere. The one thing apparently needed in the aid of artificial control of the pest, says the department, is some more efficient means of placing the available information on control before the alfalfa growers who are most vitally concerned.

As an additional means of control, insect parasites of the alfalfa weevil will be introduced from Europe. An expert who was sent to France to complete arrangements for the introduction of these parasites has recently returned after accomplishing his mission, and shipments of parasitic material will begin to arrive in this country next spring. It is hoped by these means to supplement the good work of a parasite already introduced from France, and thus eventually to restore the balance of nature and secure natural control.

Favor Cultural Method for Eradicating Garlic

The cultural method for the eradication of wild garlic that is advocated by the Purdue University Agricultural Extension department has been used with marked success by Walter Landers, Indiana.

At a recent field-meeting called by County Agent Horace Copeland, Mr. Landers explained the method to the farmers present. The meeting was held in a field heavily infested with garlic a year ago. According to Landers, he plowed the field in November, being careful to turn the tips of the garlic plants completely under in order to kill the tops. During early April he plowed again and planted the field to corn. By this means he has reduced the amount of garlic about 75 per cent.

Three years of plowing and cultivation are necessary to eradicate the garlic but the results secured by Landers are very striking.

Details of the cultivation method of eradicating wild garlic can be secured by addressing the Purdue University, Lafayette, Indiana. The work should be started about the middle of November—Indiana Extension Dept.

Worthless Filler Adds to Cost of Plant Food

The farmer who wishes to buy plant food for his crops most economically will consider three things—filler, freight and fertilizer.

This is a statement from the New York College of Agriculture at Ithaca. The soils men of the college point out that farmers who buy low-analysis fertilizers not only pay a good round price for the filler, which of course contains no plant food, but they also have to pay freight on this worthless material, thereby making it a double liability.

The use of high-grade, acid phosphate, where phosphate alone is needed, the purchase of high-composition chemicals for home mixing, and the use of high-analysis mixtures when factory mixed goods are used, will go far to eliminate freight and filler and at the same time furnish the best of fertilizers.

Steam-Sterilizing Milk Cans Destroys Bacteria

That it pays to steam-sterilize milk cans has been shown conclusively by tests made by the United States Department of Agriculture. Unsteamed cans having a bacterial count of 104,000,000 contained 18,000,000,000 at the end of 24 hours, while steamed cans having a count of 14,000 immediately after steaming and 1,000,000,000 after 24 hours in the same time—14,000 bacteria count on steamed cans left damp for 48 hours increased from 4,400 to nearly 8,000,000.

Economical Practice in Feeding Mature Horses

It is an economical practice to feed mature idle horses largely on fodder, straw and hay during the winter, but the same practice is poor economy when applied to growing colts. Colts need a large supply of available protein and mineral matter to develop their muscles and bones. If these nutrients are not supplied at this time when the incentive for growth is great, the result will be small and weak animals.

Get rid of constipation by internal cleanliness

THERE is no reason why you should suffer from constipation. Headaches, biliousness, sleepless nights, heaviness, are nature's warning that intestinal poisons are flooding your system. If allowed to continue, you may become a victim of serious organic disease.

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation
Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favor Lubrication
Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness. Nujol issued in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Get rid of constipation by internal cleanliness

THERE is no reason why you should suffer from constipation. Headaches, biliousness, sleepless nights, heaviness, are nature's warning that intestinal poisons are flooding your system. If allowed to continue, you may become a victim of serious organic disease.

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation
Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favor Lubrication
Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness. Nujol issued in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Joseph Greer and His Daughter

By HENRY KITCHELL WEBSTER

Copyright by The Bobbs-Merrill Co.

IT'S TOO GHASTLY!

SYNOPSIS—Joseph Greer, a black-bearded pirate of fifty, having discovered a process of extracting fibers from duck straw, is made director of a big corporation. For years, distrustful men of affairs, Greer has played a lone hand. Now holding what he considers the most enviable position in the world, he is willing to submit his wife to wealth. To protect his own interests, Joe has fostered his own secretary, Jennie. MacArthur, upon the company, Henry Craven, a bank clerk related to John Williamson, the millionaire backer of Greer's new company, is offered by Williamson the position of treasurer of the new company, with the generally understood purpose of watching Greer. Craven accepts. Joe tells Jennie about his wife, and his fifteen-year-old daughter, Beatrice, whom he has never seen. He is planning to force the daughter into Chicago society. Joe goes to a weekend party at Williamson's house, where he meets Violet, John's wife, and is strongly drawn to her. He fascinates her. Beatrice arrives and father and daughter get acquainted. Beatrice proved to be handsome, self-willed and looking social polish. The affair between Joe and Violet progresses. Violet interests herself in the social career of Joe and Violet recoils from the girl that yawns for them. Joe saves the situation. They quarrel.

CHAPTER VI—Continued.

There were two rather striking similarities about this message, and she paused to make sure she understood the implication in it before carrying out its explicit instructions. It was queer that Joe, with so little time at his disposal, should propose waiting any of it—driving clear out to her farm when the office, which would be right in his way, would be the natural place for a talk with her especially on Sunday afternoon, when it was always quiet. It was not sure to be completely deserted, of course; there was always the chance of an odd drifter, an evening cleaner, or some Joe or other, and if, for some reason, Joe didn't want any one in the organization, outside himself, to know he'd even been in town—she supposed that must be it. It was also worth noting that he'd insisted on her to telephone direct to his chauffeur instead of transmitting the message through his apartment, the natural way to a business man.

Joe took Beatrice by the shoulders and pulled him round between himself and the girl. The two faces, the bearded one, contorted by passion, the young, clean-shaven one expressionless, were not six inches apart.

"Where have you been with her? What have you been doing with her?" "Bringing her home, sir. She'd gone out not knowing you were coming. When I got word of it, I followed where she'd gone and told her. And she came back with me."

"If there was any liquor on your breath, I'd kill you where you stand. That's the truth, is it?"

Joe said, "I haven't had a drink in eight weeks. That's true, too." Jennie interposed with a suggestion that she help Joe get the girl up to her room.

"She needs no help. Wait a minute," he said, turning to where Beatrice sat, slumped in her seat. "Look at me now and listen. Wherever you have been, this afternoon you've been sober. I want you to get up and walk up to your room and wait for me there."

arousing of Joe's jungle sense of something amiss would be almost certainly disastrous.

The exact minute of their arrival did make a difference, as things turned out, but whether for the better or the worse Jennie was unable to decide. As she slipped her car into the south-bound stream of traffic in the Sheridan road, a block north of Joe's apartment-building, he remarked, "There she is! We're right on time! That's the roadster, three cars ahead of us. Funny she's letting Burns drive, getting bored with it already, I suppose."

The big roadster was standing before Joe's doorway, in the curve of the semi-circular drive, when Jennie turned in, but neither Beatrice nor the chauffeur had made any move to alight. The top was down, and they could see that he had spoken to her and was tensely awaiting an answer.

She was stumped low in her seat, nothing visible of her but the top of her small hat.

That Joe had instantly perceived something wrong was evident. He did not call, and it was with the swiftness of a big cat that he left Jennie's car and made his way to the curb side of the other. Burns' head went back at the apparition of him as from the impact of a blow. Then, as if he had to overcome a certain rigidity, he got down from under the wheel and faced his employer. So far no one had said a word, but now Beatrice roused herself.

"Is that you, Dad, for a fact?" she asked, sitting half erect. "I didn't know you'd come home. Honest, I didn't. Thoughtful George here was—"

"Stringing me," seemed to be what she was trying to say, but its linguistic difficulties were too much for her. I was blazingly clear that she was drunk.

Joe took Burns by the shoulders and pulled him round between himself and the girl. The two faces, the bearded one, contorted by passion, the young, clean-shaven one expressionless, were not six inches apart.

"Where have you been with her? What have you been doing with her?" "Bringing her home, sir. She'd gone out not knowing you were coming. When I got word of it, I followed where she'd gone and told her. And she came back with me."

"If there was any liquor on your breath, I'd kill you where you stand. That's the truth, is it?"

Joe said, "I haven't had a drink in eight weeks. That's true, too." Jennie interposed with a suggestion that she help Joe get the girl up to her room.

"She needs no help. Wait a minute," he said, turning to where Beatrice sat, slumped in her seat. "Look at me now and listen. Wherever you have been, this afternoon you've been sober. I want you to get up and walk up to your room and wait for me there."

The girl arose and made her way, unsteadily, but fairly enough, and was swallowed by the elevator. Then Joe turned to Jennie and told her to go home and get her things and come back prepared to stay with Beatrice for some weeks, until he could come back and look after her himself. Joe turned and followed Beatrice to the apartment and Jennie got into the big car, and with George driving, went back to her place.

wasn't to furnish many details. "She was pretty excited one way and another," he summarized presently. "But when she quieted down she was sort of doozy, just like you saw her."

Then he went on and told her that Trix had found out the crowd quicker than he had himself. He had had a long talk with her and they had decided to start with a clean slate. It was more his fault than hers, anyway. Then he drew from her George's account of what had happened. His face darkened, as though it did not match up with what Trix had told him, so Jennie shortened her story quite a little.

Uneasy as she'd been all the while she talked, she was utterly unprepared for the line Joe took when she finished. "The first thing to do tomorrow morning," he said, "is to let him go. See to that, will you?"

"Let him go?" she cried incredulously. "George Burns? After what he's done for you today? You don't want me to do that, Joe! I wouldn't do it."

Her defiance didn't arouse him at all. "I'll let him know tonight then that he's discharged. Guess that'd be better any way." He said it without conviction, but equally without any sign of wavering.

"That'll be the first really unfair thing I've ever known you to do, Joe. If you really do it, I don't believe you'll. You can't reward a really fine service that way. Why, if she'd been drowning, and he'd—"

"I know all that," he interrupted. "And I'll reward him, too. You can't write him any sort of recommendation you like tonight, and I'll sign it. Write him a check, too, for a thousand dollars, and I'll sign that. Look here! You've always kicked on my keeping him as a chauffeur, haven't you? Said he was too good for it. Well, now I'm doing what you've always wanted me to do. That thousand will get him two years' schooling, if he wants it. Or set him up in a little business for himself. But him a chauffeur? Anything he likes. As a reward for what he did today. Nothing unfair about it, is there? The only string on it is that he's got to keep away from me and my daughter. I don't want him around."

"Because he's mixed up in that mess, more or less. Else how did he know how to find her as easy as that? Why wouldn't he believe when he said he had a message from me? You can see that yourself! For that matter, why did Trix keep all that fact of it dark? She said, 'You've given it away, you know.'"

"I told her we were going to let bygones be bygones. Start with a clean slate. Well, we are! I'm never going to ask her another question. Even about this. But if she or you has got any idea I'll keep a man working for me as a chauffeur whom she's let get to know her as well as he seems to, you're making a big mistake."

"I really believe," Jennie said, deliberately, "that George Burns—chauffeur—is the best friend Beatrice has today. I believe he's got the best influence over her. How genuinely more than either Henry Craven or I, though we're worried and worried and done what we could. But he's really—"

"He's really—"

"Well, now you've said it yourself," he declared. "I won't have her making friends with a man like that. Friends—hah! Three months of a friendship like that and father gets a telegram from George saying, 'We're married.' There's one in the newspaper every morning. But it's a thing that isn't going to happen in my family, and that's a tip you can bet on. And when you hire a new chauffeur tomorrow, see that you get one that there won't be any temptation to hold hands with."

He was sure she wouldn't have a trouble with Beatrice. "She understands that I'm backing you up, what ever you do, and that it won't do her any good to appeal to me over your head. I don't believe she'll try it, but if she does I promise it won't get her anything. Your veto goes with me."

That's one sort of doctoring I know all about, anyhow. Merciful heaven, I never thought I'd need it for my own daughter, though!"

Then he went on and told her that Trix had found out the crowd quicker than he had himself. He had had a long talk with her and they had decided to start with a clean slate. It was more his fault than hers, anyway. Then he drew from her George's account of what had happened. the only obvious alternative, a gossamer, middle-aged pose, authority made easy by bits of encouragement, orders sugar-coated into the form of advice and suggestion, would drive her to open rebellion—if not, Jennie reflected, to homicide!

Meanwhile, lying low, going early to the office and coming back just in time for dinner, bringing home work to do in the evening, sticking to a casual preoccupied and not overfriendly tone in the strictly unimportant conversation she addressed to the girl, she found a modus vivendi establishing itself. On the first morning at breakfast, in reply to a domestic question raised by the butler upon the tentative presumption that she was now the head of the household, she had told him to go on taking his orders from Miss Greer as usual.

After dinner that same night Beatrice brought the question up explicitly. "Anson says you told him I was to go on giving the orders. Is that what you meant?"

"Heavens!" said Jennie, looking round her paper, "I don't know anything about running an establishment like this. You'll have to do that."

"Does that take in the cars, too, and the new chauffeur?"

Jennie ignored the overt resentment of the last phrase. "Why not?" she said. "I've no say for him. I drive my own."

It struck her as she plunged back into her reading (too suddenly, she was aware, for good histrionism) that her young ward looked a bit let down. If she'd been luxuriating in the close confinement, bread-and-water theory, this treatment was sound—as far as it went.

But it went nowhere near far enough. It supplied insufficient material even for small talk, let alone real companionship. Jennie found her rule, to do nothing and to say nothing except—

"I'm Terribly Fond of Him," Jennie answered instantly.

It was when there was something perfectly obvious for her to do or say, wearing pretty thin. Finally, after their third dinner together, a meal eaten dismally through in almost total silence, Beatrice exploded:

"I think, after this," she said, "I'll have my meals in my room. I can't stand this. It's too ghastly!"

"It is ghastly," Jennie agreed, "and it's ridiculous. I've had all I can stand of it myself. Of all the posterous, idiotic things your father ever did, chucking you and me to gether like this is the worst! I don't know what to do about it, any better than you do. I've been afraid to open my mouth for three days for fear of getting worse with you than I was, and I was in a bad enough already. I'm ready to try saying everything that comes into my head and see what happens. It can't be worse than this. Perhaps if you do the same thing we may get somewhere."

Trix had been staring at her, from the first words, in blank, sleepless incredulity at first, later through a tangle of contradictory surmises and doubts. She went on staring for a while, after Jennie had done. "All right," she said, at last. "This is what I think. If you hate it like this, and I'm thinking it's idiotic of father to have asked you to come here, why did you do it?"

"I'm terribly fond of him," Jennie answered instantly. "Not the way I guess you thought it was when you first came out here. I've never been in love with him, and he's never tried to make love to me. But there's hardly anybody I've cared for as much as I do for him—and there's nobody on God's green earth that I'd go as far for, in the way of doing what he wanted me to. He looked so perfectly sick and helpless last Saturday night over what had happened that it never occurred to me, till he'd gone off and left me here, that I'd have any choice in the matter."

"You're on his side, too," the girl remarked. "You don't care anything about me. You've made that plain enough from the first."

"Don't hint," Jennie commanded sharply. "We've made a good start talking out. Let's keep it up. How did I make it plain I didn't like you?"

Collaborators Give Opinions on Own Play

Disciple of Bossuet and Mothers, dramatic author and theologian—a rare enough combination—David Augustin Bruyere, who died 200 years ago, November 26, 1723, collaborated long and consistently with his friend, Palaprat, says a translation from Le Petit Parolien of Paris, France.

Together they wrote many plays, some of them failures, others successes, among which was a little masterpiece called "Grondeur," which is still played.

Speaking of this play, Bruyere once remarked: "The first act is entirely mine. It is excellent. The second has been marred by a few scenes by Palaprat. It is mediocre. The third is wholly Palaprat's. It is very bad."

Palaprat considered the play otherwise. "It is excellent," he said. "The first act is mine. The second is mine. The third is mine. The fourth is mine. The fifth is mine. The sixth is mine. are caused by eyestrain. If you suffer from headaches you ought to question the condition of your eyes.

Often with vision apparently normal, eyes greatly need the help of lenses.

Only an examination can make you sure. Have your eyes examined without delay.
