MAY COMPLETE ELECTRIC SYSTEM CHANGE IN 1924

Village Council Grants E. L. & W. W. Commission Permission to Finish Change to Alternating Current This Year.

That the year 1924 may see the completion of the new electrical system started in Chelsea last year, was indicated at the first regular meeting of council Monday evening when a request made in person by members L. P. Vogel and Geo. Beckwith, of the Electric Light and Water Works Commission, for funds with which to speed to a finish the work already started, was granted and authority given for completion of the system this year if possible.

Since the change-over has been started, and the village is obliged to finish the work, it won't cost a cent more to do it this year than to wait longer and spread it out over a period of several years, was the contention of Commissioners Vogel and Beckwith, a matter in which council concurred without dissenting opinion. While it may mean an outlay of money at the present time, it was believed that the plant would pay it back into the treasury in the course of one or two years out of the profits to be derived from operation of the system. The fact that the local plant showed a profit of $8,400 for the last year, was given by Commissioner Beckwith as a reason upon which to base this belief.

Complete change of the plant and system means the addition of a gas engine to the equipment at the local plant for the purpose of pumping water in case of fire, or other emergency when power fails, and also to purchase extra equipment in the operation of the pumps at the wells. Sale of the old engine and boilers will probably net a neat sum toward defraying the expense of installing the new equipment.

Professor Merrick, of the University of Michigan, was present and gave his opinion of the work necessary to the building and installing of the sewer on South Main street.

Before paving of the street is begun by the state this coming summer, action was taken by council looking toward hiring of Mr. Merrick to make a survey of the section to be paved, compile data with regard to water levels and fall necessary and submit this to the village from which plans may be completed and work started. His part of the work will probably be done within the next two weeks.

Appointment of committees was made by President Daniels. They are:

President Pro Tem—Dr. G. W. Palmer.
Finance—O. D. Schneider, Henry Heselochwerdt, Edwin Koskbe, which plans may be completed and Schneider, G. W. Palmer.
Sidewalk—Edwin Koskbe, Roy Harris, Henry Heselochwerdt.
Village Attorney—John Kalmbach.
Health Officer—Dr. A. A. Palmer.
Fire Chief—Howard Brooks.

LAST LEAGUE GAME GIVES CHELSEA VICTORY

Win Six and Lose Five Games In Season's Participation In Southern Michigan Basketball League.

Due to the clever basket shooting of the Brooks brothers, the Chelsea basketball five brought its season to a close at Chelsea Tuesday night by defeating the fast Saline five, 32 to 22.

The Brooks brothers each tallied 11 points, sufficient to tie the Saline outfit, had none of the other Chelsea players came through with a basket. Outside of a short time in the second quarter Chelsea maintained a lead throughout, the first half ending with the home team leading by a score of 14 to 12.

In the third and fourth periods Saline's defense crumbled and allowed the Chelsea outfit to sweep through to a victory. The elimination of Schleh, star Saline guard, because of four personal fouls, weakened the visiting team considerably and allowed Chelsea to roll up a comfortable margin in the final few minutes of play.

Cook, Saline forward, played a great floor game and was the individual star of the contest, tallying 12 points by six baskets from the field.

H. Brooks at center for Chelsea scored five times from scrimmage and once from the foul line while his brother scored three field baskets and five free throws.

CHELSEA HIGH BOYS DEFEAT ST. MARYS

High School Girls Also Win From Alumni In a Game of Fast Passing and Close Guarding.

The Chelsea high school boys basketball team defeated St. Marys high 12-9 in a game Friday night at the Welfare Bldg. Both teams played a good brand of basket ball and the score was close from start to finish. St. Marys led at the end of the half, 6-5. The line-up for the Green and White was somewhat changed due to the absence of Brooks. Vogel played at center with Beach at guard. Hoffman was scoring star with four field goals. Mayer followed with three field goals. Thirteen personal fouls were called, eight on Chelsea and five on St. Marys. Vogel was on the receiving end for all of St. Marys fouls.

Score and summary:

Chelsea High 12	St. Marys 9
Kinner	2
Mayer	1
Vogel	2
White	1
Beach	1
Field goals: Kinner 2, Mayer 3, Hoffman 4.
Free throws: Vogel 2 in 5, Hoffman 0 in 1, McKernan 1 in 1, Elsiele 0 in 1, Tuttle 0 in 2.
Personal fouls: Kinner 3, Mayer 2, Vogel 3, Hoffman 2, McKernan 1, Tuttle 1, Howe 1.

In a fast preliminary the high school girls upset the "dope" and defeated the Alumni 14-4. The Hi girls found the loop seven times and played a much better game than they played two weeks ago, proving their ability to shoot field goals. Ellisworth "rang up" eight points and Weiman six. The defeat of the alumni came as a surprise and the cause may be given as lack of practice. The high school girls played the best game of the season and consequently completely overwhelmed the alumni girls. They played a strenuous game and the work of every player was excellent. The alumni forwards could not break through the high defense and consequently few points were made. Excellent basket shooting, fine guarding and fast passing by the centers badly defeated the alumni in the surprise game.

Score and summary:

High School 14	Alumni 4
Ellisworth	2

TOO MANY LAWS

Judge Panken, of New York, is authority for the statement that United States laws, set in fine type, would cover 175,000 pages. What a smack at Socialism! It also has a question for the rest of us. Why have so many laws, and why make any more? It is hard to answer.

The off-hand answer is that we don't need so many laws, but better enforcement of those we have. But to draw the line in quantity or specific kinds of legislation is difficult. Many things today need further restrictions; others already have, too many. And since laws, once on the books, remain there, it behooves us to see that only necessary ones, and those we will enforce to the letter, get on.

We are rapidly reaching the point where our lawmakers should change their name. There are many important projects, reforms, governmental regulations, and such matters as education to attend to. These demand intelligent interest and earnest purpose. Anyone can frame a law. It takes courage and strength to enforce it, and brains to benefit people without it.

Many states are over-lawed, Maryland and New York and Pennsylvania, for example. Are the people there any better for it? Not obviously. We are tempted to refer to pioneer days when one or two simple laws of justice, strictly enforced, hence rigidly respected, sufficed to build a fine people. We cordially invite our legislators to consult the legal records, gaze at the formidable array of laws, and do something else.

TO CHEER UP FUNERALS

New York undertakers, we learn, are to abolish the sombre hearse and substitute one resembling an ordinary limousine. They wish to relieve the gloom of the funeral procession, on the ground that there is too much gloom in the world already.

"Surround death with reverence beauty, and try not to remind the world of what it seeks to forget," they urge.

Theirs is a laudable purpose, and based on fairly good reasoning, yet when they undertake to take from us our symbols of sorrow and respect for the departed, they must keep within certain bounds.

Certainly a cheerful funeral would keep a lot of people from playing the hypocrite. Also, it would encourage more respect for the living when a means of showing respect for the corpse is removed. It would lighten grief at a time when it most needed lightening; take away a bit of the terror we usually associate with death; make it less gloomy to remember afterwards, and be more in keeping with our professed belief that death is just a liberation into another and better existence.

There is no danger of anyone who is truly great or truly beloved being neglected when he dies. But there is a bad example set when a crook or a nobody is buried in grand style, while his worthy, if poorer, neighbor is interred without show. Yet we need no competition of funerals or expressions of sorrow. It matters little to the one most concerned. Still, many seem to think that an intensely gloomy service, a long string of black carriages, much weeping and a public demonstration may be recognized by the one in the casket and be a means of grace for themselves.

Perhaps if we all had the firm faith in Divine justice, our own works, and the existence of a happier world which we so strenuously profess, we would celebrate, not mourn, when the death angel comes.

ARE YOU FOR THE BONUS?

Just as soon as the glass-housed Congressman get through with the oil mess and the revised income tax scheme, they will tackle the bonus question. Mr. Harding didn't settle it; he merely squelched it for a term. Mr. Coolidge didn't dishearten its advocates by saying he opposed it; they expected his disfavor. It is tangled up somewhat in the new tax system, for it is generally insisted that we can have our choice between a substantial tax cut or a bonus, not both. But after a few days, when we find out our new income rates, like murder, the question will out.

Do you want the bonus? Every Senator and Representative in Washington would give a thousand dollars to be sure. For they are there to represent the people; that is, to carry out the wishes of their constituents, NOT to use their own judgment. That was the attitude before 1900. But they must know the majority opinion. This democracy of ours is based on the theory of majority rule. Many don't like the theory, saying the majority is more apt to be wrong than the minority. But so long as we work on that principle, we must abide by it. And the strange part is that much of our legislation is effected because a minority write Congressmen what to do—and they do it.

This bonus question isn't to be decided offhand, any more than it is to be ignored. It concerns every person in the country. It is one of those few burning questions we have in a lifetime of lawmaking. It has to do with principles as well as money. Everybody ought to be interested. They won't be, of course; that is, sufficiently interested to read all sides of the matter, to seek converts, and to draft resolutions to send to Congressmen. And just as many folks are only mildly enthusiastic one way or the other, so many don't know all the facts and don't care to know.

Veterans who want the bonus—not all of them do—say they don't want half-hearted support based on half-baked sentiment or one-sided reasoning. They say if you think they deserve more pay and, realizing that the bonus will cost money, feel that the country can, and should, give them more, then get enthusiastic for the bonus. Those opposed have the same idea. Obviously, both are urging more intelligent interest in the question. And if there is anything which will make this country healthy, wealthy, and wise, it is intelligent interest in public matters.

So the bonus question will come along for final settlement, right away. If it is stamped and killed, or "railroaded" through, the men and women who didn't take the trouble to think or act about it won't have one single reason to protest. If Congressmen listen anxiously for word from home, hear nothing but a faint voice from some small lodge or club, and act according to that or their own views, disappointed ones can go out and eat worms. They deserve nothing better.

Information on both sides of the bonus question is available in the daily press, from publicity bureaus of both factions, from Congressmen and a hundred other sources. Much of the information is vague; most of it unfounded statements and denials; part of it untrue. One has to read both sides to vote intelligently, and make considerable salt to think intelligently. But when our forefathers fought for and obtained the right of individual voice in government, they assumed that their posterity would sacredly cherish and rightly use the ballot they bequeathed. If we neglect such problems as this, we do more than lay ourselves open to all kinds of legislative malfeasance; we violate the heritage bought by blood of earnest pioneer forefathers, and discredit the theory that we are entitled to govern ourselves.

THROUGH THE SMOKE

It isn't difficult to keep track of the major events at Washington in the oil mess; there aren't any. All they're doing is having probes and then a few more probes, scattering interest, gaining a little information, and keeping crooks out of jail that much longer.

It isn't a smoke-screen by either political party, but considerable smoke issues—enough to hide the main factors and blind outside eyes. Yet we can see through fairly well, enough to make us ashamed of everyone on whom the slightest guilt has been fixed. Josephus Daniels calls it a "national humiliation."

Perhaps. But it is largely the humiliation of an outraged people over having leaders who should be more humiliated.

It was last September when charges of oil crookedness began to be whispered. The intensive trial has been going on several weeks. Yet nobody is in jail. Nobody seems to be in any danger of going. We wonder why. Ordinary trials don't drag out that long. Even a millionaire murderer couldn't stave off justice like this. Yet while acquittal looms nearer for the really guilty ones, the shadow of their guilt is falling on and blighting many innocent men. For smoke always defies.

A large clock face is the central element, with numbers 1 through 12. Four arrows originate from the clock's perimeter, pointing to two inset images. The top inset shows a person in a white shirt and dark pants standing next to a traditional wood-burning stove, with smoke rising from it. The bottom inset shows a person in a white shirt and dark pants standing next to a modern, boxy stove, holding a small object. The clock face has a thick black border and a central hub with two hands. The arrows are thick black lines with arrowheads pointing towards the inset images.

He went to Florida last October in his usual health—not robust—to spend the winter but had been ill for three weeks preceding his demise. The council voted to accept the bid of the Brighton State Bank, at a premium of $12.00, they to take care of the expense connected with the printing of the bonds. The rate is five per cent, payable semi-annually. A provision of the motion to accept the bid, however, was that the contract for the paving could be let within the appropriation. Argus

IN this age when science has made light, power and water everywhere available, when machinery has lessened labor and anaesthetics have dulled the edge of pain, the funeral director has utilized science to lighten the burden of the sorrowing.

With the aid of science he is able to protect the family and the community from the danger of contagion, to make transportation safe, and to remove the traces of illness and unnaturalness which used to accentuate the grief caused by death.

With the help of professionally trained assistants, modern equipment, motorized conveyances, and often a fine funeral home or chapel, he is able to relieve the family of all details, and perform a service that brings comfort in the darkest hour and affords the consoling consciousness that the last tribute has been fitting and beautiful.

One of Our First Prize Essays

The following essay on the subject, "In the Hour of Trial," was awarded first prize in the recent contest sponsored by The Kempf Commercial & Savings Bank. It was written by Frederick Steiner, pupil in the 7th grade of the public schools of Chelsea.

"IN THE HOUR OF TRIAL"

In one of Moran's celebrated paintings, "In the Hour of Trial," (a reproduction of which hangs in each of our class rooms—a present from the Kempf Commercial Bank) we have a solemn and impressive picture of George Washington, Commander in Chief of the American army just after his arrival at Valley Forge, (December 1777), where he went into winter quarters with his 11,000 soldiers.

The chaplain of the army is seen standing before the fire giving thanks to God for their safe arrival, when to all appearances they have little to be thankful for except starvation, want and famine.

Lafayette, Brigadier General Knox and others together with the tattered, half-fed, weary-worn soldiers, all standing in reverent attitude, impress us with the great confidence which they must have placed in a Power greater than their own.

A cloud as dark as the darkest night seemed to hang over them when they began making their meager preparations for the long winter before them.

Never before was there such an exhibition of patriotism over neglect and want; of principle over physical suffering and of virtue over the pangs of starvation.

In spite of it all, these men went about their work without a murmur of complaint. Little clearing were made; the foundation of huts laid and in a few weeks a vast settlement of between one and two thousand log huts sprang up in the valley.

On the ground floor of these huts straw was scattered and into these our brave "Sons of Liberty" crept to starve and die for no sooner had the problem of shelter been disposed of than a new and more vital one stared them hopelessly in the face—that of securing food.

Here Congress failed them. There was no lack of provisions in the country. While our soldiers were starving, the enemies' forces could buy from the farmers all the food they wanted. The truth was, our men were sacrificed to the mismanagement of Congress.

Mutiny broke out among the soldiers, but Washington quieted them until provisions arrived. Their condition was relieved for the time being, but to these famished soldiers these provisions lasted but a short time and the army faced the same deplorable situation again.

Washington's great heart was moved in pity as he tried to relieve their suffering and begged Congress to send supplies. To this they seemed to turn deaf ears.

The cold of the dreary winter, (1777-'78), continued likewise the suffering of the soldiers. They endured it all with almost unbelievable patience and fortitude until spring when its balmy breezes brought them new courage.

Later (May 1778) when the news of the alliance with the British arrived their joy knew no bounds.

Washington therefore with greater assurance began making plans for the campaigns which followed.

The main forces of the armies were now (May 1778) in the following positions: Washington with 11,800 men in and about Valley Forge. Howe (British) with 19,000 men at Philadelphia. Clinton (British) with 10,400 men at New York.

The years 1779 and 1780 were filled with defeats and victories alternately. One American general said, "We fought, we got beaten, and we fought again," until finally (September 1781) Washington with the help of the French troops began the memorable siege of Yorktown which ended in its fall (October 1781) and the complete surrender of Cornwallis and his entire garrison.

Thus ended that great struggle for independence and thus a great nation had its birth.

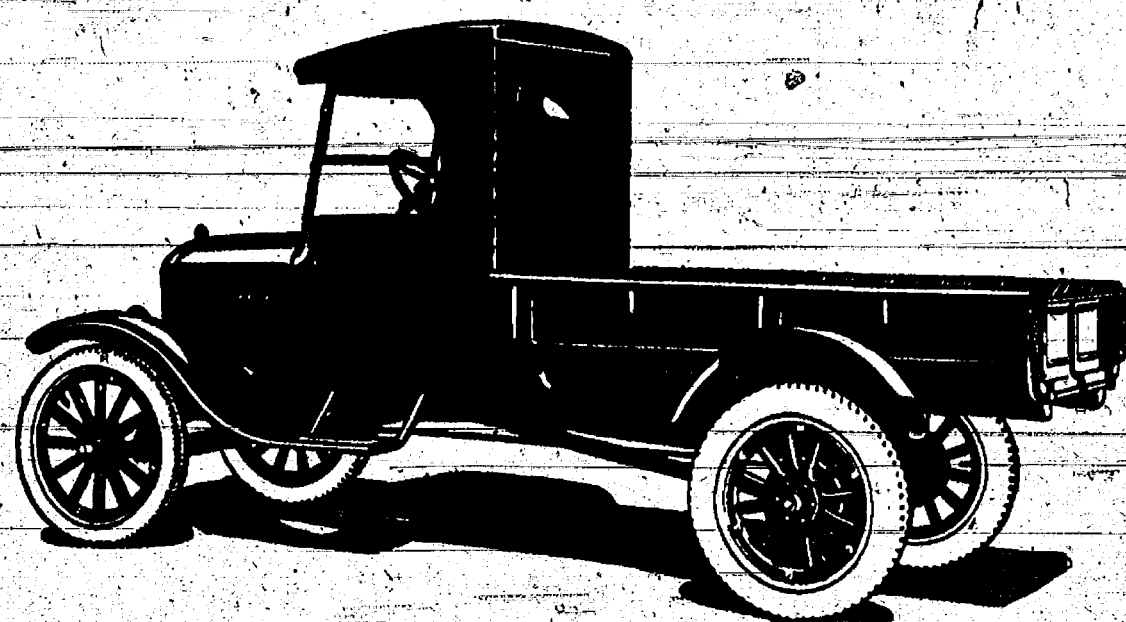

All hail to Washington and his noble followers who stood firm, "In the Hour of Trial," and who were willing to go down into the dark valley of the shadow of Death that our nation might live!

THRIFT AND HOME OWNERSHIP

We are in receipt of a copy of the 68th Semi-Annual Statement of the Capitol Savings and Loan Company of Lansing, Michigan, for the period ending December 31st, 1923. This company was organized thirty-four years ago by a group of public spirited men for the purpose of encouraging the habit of thrift—of saving, and to loan those savings to deserving people on an easy monthly payment plan in order that they might become home owners, and thereby better American citizens.
The Record of Growth on page 4 of the Statement shows a gain in their assets during the past year of over One Million Five Hundred Thousand Dollars. Mr. Woodbury, President of the Company, says: "Not only did we receive more money during the past year than in any year before but we also made 1,464 home ownership loans amounting to over Three Million Dollars." During the year the company made and distributed to its thousands of customers $447,000. And, according to Mr. Woodbury, they hold in their vaults, for the security of every investor, first mortgages on Real Estate (People's homes) worth over Twenty Million Dollars. Furthermore, they are under the same state supervision as are all banks.

BETTER performance. The year 'round. So it's only natural that an increasing number of motorists should use Staebler gasoline. Especially since it costs no more than ordinary kinds!
