EARLY MORNING BLAZE DAMAGES HOUSE HOME

Defective Chimney Causes Fire, Resulting in Considerable Damage to Railroad Street Property This Morning.

Fire, which broke out in the upper part of the house shortly after eight o'clock this morning, threatened for a time to destroy the residence occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Adam G. Houck, Railroad street. The fire was started by a defective chimney.

Efficient work on the part of firemen and others prevented serious loss to household goods, many of which were carried to safety from the upstairs before the water was turned on so that damage from that source is not expected to be high. Chemicals were used as the principal means of extinguishing the flames which had gained good headway before firemen arrived on the scene. Most all of the roof was destroyed either by fire or was torn off in an effort to get to the fire.

The house is owned by Mrs. R. H. Young of Detroit, and is known here as the John Palmer estate. It was not learned whether insurance was carried on the property but rumors this morning were to the effect that none was in force at the present time.

CHELSEA BAND PLANNING GOOD MUSIC PROGRAM

Expressions of Appreciation and Encouragement for Coming Year May Result in Bigger and Better Entertainment For Summer.

With the approach of spring and warmer weather thoughts of Chelsea residents as well as those of the rural districts naturally turn toward the matter of outdoor entertainment for the coming summer and the question of band concerts on the streets of Chelsea as heard last summer.

That everyone enjoys the concert is not questioned in the least. That the efforts put forth by Band "Boys" to give the public music which is a credit to the community are appreciated, is not doubted for a moment. That the public is willing to pay a reasonable sum for this entertainment is only to be expected. This, in a word, sums up the chances of having concerts during the next few months and it is hoped nothing will stand in the way of them. Preliminary plans are being made for the rehearsals in preparation for the opening day which usually falls on Decoration Day, and it is expected at least twenty men will qualify for the work before that time.

W. G. Smith, director of the band's activities, is optimistic with regard to the season's work and promises a rare treat in musical entertainments during the open air concerts.

CHELSEA WINS 14 TO 11 FROM WOLVERINES

The Chelsea American Legion took the deciding game of a three game series between the Wolverines of Jackson and the Chelsea team last Thursday evening with a score of 14 to 11. The game was a hotly fought one, both teams fighting every minute for a win.

Glenn Brooks, star of previous games, was put out of the game in the early play. At the end of the first quarter the score stood 4 to 4. Chelsea made two while the Wolves scored but one free throw.

At the end of the third quarter the score stood 8 and 9 in favor of Chelsea. Two baskets and a free throw proved too much for the Wolves to overcome during the last period.

Neither team was playing in high class form and basket shooting was erratic. H. Brooks was the chief scorer for Chelsea, caging three field goals. Kildea did the most of the scoring for the Wolves with two baskets and a free throw to his credit.

Summary:
Chelsea 14
Wolverines 11
Russo
G. Brooks
H. Brooks
Schoenhals

Field goals: H. Brooks 3, G. Brooks 2, Monroe 1, O'Holloran 1, McClure 1, Kildea 2.

KIWANIS CLUB ENJOYS INITIAL PROGRAM HERE

W. S. McLaren and Others of Jackson Assist in Putting Over Evening of Snappy Entertainment and Fun.

With W. S. McLaren and several others from Jackson, in attendance, along with thirty-seven Chelsea men, the newly organized Chelsea Kiwanis club got away to an excellent start in their initial meeting at Schneider's hall on Monday evening. Enthusiasm, pep, entertainment and snappy program every part of which fully met the expectations of club members.

Presiding as toastmaster of the evening, Mr. McLaren started the meeting through an hour and a half of lively happening which left not a moment in which Kiwanis was not emphasized. Introduction of Jackson men with short speeches by each one was greatly enjoyed, as well as self-introduction of Chelsea men.

Rev. Steensma, pastor of the Jackson First Congregational church, and a member of the Jackson-Kiwanis club, was the main speaker of the evening and brought a message in which the true ideals of Kiwanis were presented from start to finish. His address was an inspiration to all in attendance.

Musical numbers were furnished by a member of the Capitol Theatre orchestra of Jackson who rendered several band solos to the great pleasure of the club. His appearance here was possible through the generosity of Mr. McLaren, manager of the theatre.

Four attendance prizes were awarded, O. D. Schneider receiving a smoking set for use in automobile, donated by L. G. Palmer, Herbert Schenk a spot light donated by a Jackson member, and L. P. Vogel and O. T. Hoover receiving two sets of theatre tickets donated by Mr. McLaren and to be used at the Capitol theatre.

Program for the meeting on next Monday evening has not been announced but it is understood that a snappy entertainment is in store and it is expected one hundred per cent will be in attendance.

WILLEMIN QUILTS AS DISTRICT ROAD ENGINEER

E. G. Willemin, who has served the state highway department as district engineer in the Ann Arbor district for several years and who was appointed to the office of resident road engineer in the reorganized district system, has tendered his resignation to take effect April 20, according to an announcement made Monday.

Mr. Willemin has become financially interested in a gravel pit near Jonesville, in Hillsdale county, to which he will give his personal attention, although he will maintain his residence in Ann Arbor as before.

The state highway department has announced the appointment of George C. Brown, former assistant district engineer in this district, to succeed Mr. Willemin. This appointment is accompanied by a change in the residency office from Ann Arbor to Jackson where Mr. Brown will be located, starting April 1. This change was made, it was explained, because of the more central location of the latter city—Ann Arbor Times News.

MICHIGAN CENTER LAD CRUSHED BY FAST TRAIN

Kindergarten Pupil Starts Across Tracks in Path of Approaching Locomotive.

Malcolm Graham, 5, was killed instantly by a Michigan Central train at 2:50 Monday afternoon near Michigan Center, according to the Jackson News of Tuesday. The little lad was returning to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Graham, from the Michigan Center kindergarten school.

The accident happened at the road crossing just east of Michigan Center. A fast train from the west had just passed and train No. 107, going west, struck the small boy, who ran across the crossing, evidently not noticing the west bound train. His small playmates called to him, but to no avail.

The child had left the school house with three other children. They approached the crossing and waited for the eastbound train to pass. The others heard the warning bell ringing and waited, trying to keep Malcolm from crossing. The engineer blew several warning whistles, but the lad jumped in front of the train and his skull was crushed, killing him instantly.

Justice of the Peace J. D. Ballard was on the scene shortly after the accident and acted as coroner. John Graham, father of the boy, an employee at Jackson Junction, was notified at once and soon arrived. The body was taken to the undertaking rooms of G. J. Foster in Grass Lake. Mr. and Mrs. Graham live on Lafayette road, in Meadowmere, just east of Michigan Center.

C. Whitney was engineer of the train and A. Ward was conductor. The train ran at least a half mile past the crossing before it was brought to a stop.

Besides his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Graham, Malcolm is survived by two sisters, Marjory, 7, and Joyce, 1, and one brother, Bruce, aged 9.

The billet is maintained by the American Legion and furnishes a home for children of war veterans. In addition to the orphanage it is planned to take care of some veterans' widows as soon as more funds are available for the work.

DANGEROUS BUSINESS

Another woman has slaughtered her husband for the benefit of satirists from metropolitan journals, and their equally perverted readers. Both have already tried the case and acquitted her; there remains but the minor detail of passing on their work by a jury.

Apparently this business of being a husband is getting more dangerous. The proverbial rolling pin, symbolic of discipline, has given way to the automatic pistol, symbolic of extermination. Weapons are as varied and convenient as reasons, and it is now almost as safe for a woman to make of her erstwhile companion just a bit more fertilizer for the cemetery roses provided she can show that he flirted with other women or had a mole behind his left ear or didn't like her cooking—as for her to rebuke a strange man for staring at her. The former seems to come a bit more natural, also.

The list of men who thus pay the supreme price for trying to save money by marrying a cook instead of hiring one, is growing daily. The deterrent to matrimony is colossal. Many youths and maidens are waiting until they are eighteen instead of marrying at seventeen. If they continue to act according to their altruistic idea of keeping bedroom walls from suffering ugly bullet scars or preventing axes from slicing up floors, we may face an alarming famine of candidates for such marital sacrifices.

LOST BALANCE

Children know what it is to run down hill too fast and lose their equilibrium. Adults do it more often in other ways. Some do it in business, others in social life, others in various lines. People who do too much of one thing, remain obsessed with one idea, cannot see but one side, live with a single purpose; these tend to become unbalanced. Fanatics in any line have gone to the extreme. We see them every day. Religion is where many lose their balance. A woman in Florida just the other day was that way. She killed her best beloved son because something demanded it as a sacrifice. We may be wrong, but we consider that she went too far; lost her balance.

A story from the Arctic Circle, of Neakutuk, an Eskimo, is of the same order. He became a "prophet" and terrorized a whole hamlet, causing several deaths. Finally, the other day, someone killed him and his disciples recovered from his spell.

Folks who go to extremes in any line are dangerous, if only to themselves. The man who believes something hard is worth a thousand who believe but vaguely. Yet he who goes beyond all reason in his belief, forgets the other side, sacrifices common sense and ignores everything but his one idea, is bound to run wild and cause havoc in his own life—perhaps in the lives of others. Each individual can choose of course, what and how far he will believe. We assume a great deal in dictating to others. Yet if we cannot convert or check them, we can refrain from following men and women who after a safe speed open the throttle, shut their eyes and race blindly. Balanced and temperate thinking and doing is the most logical and satisfactory.

MUTUAL GRATITUDE

Two American Archbishops have been made Cardinals of the Catholic Church. In bestowing the rank, the Pope declared it was largely as a token of the gratitude of the Church and Europe which he represents for the aid America has rendered war-torn people across the sea. The Cardinals, so cables tell us, were equally grateful that America had the chance to show what a fine Christian nation she is.

We have other things to be thankful for—that we have no monarchical groups here trying to tear down our democracy, for instance; that the war was fought on that side of the ocean that people of every nation in the world live here peacefully and prosper; that, compared to Europe, our men, women and children are neither hungry nor cold.

If we wanted to we could find plenty of such things to be glad over. The Pope flattered some of us when he suggested that we were deeply interested in the fate of Europe, part of it starting. Some of us aren't much interested in our own fate, our children or anything but what happens in the little circle of our daily activities. But as a whole nation, America has plenty of reason for feeling happy though not cheery.

Thus far, we have merely survived on almost universal slump; financially, morally, and spiritually, to say nothing of governmentally. If we think soberly of what it all means, as we should often do, we can justify the opinion of His Holiness the Pope.

SPRING—PERHAPS

It was ushered in officially by the calendar people several days ago, and occasionally we've seen moments of it. Just enough to make us glad about the coal problem and coming vacations and the putting away of overcoats. Just enough to remind us of the coming spring house cleaning, sulphur and molasses coats of paint, auto trips, buying new millinery and dresses and straw hats, and about nineteen thousand other things.

Farmers are thinking of this spring a bit dubiously. Big crops won't have the big appeal they once had. Fall prices may be fair or foolishly low. Youths and maidens already feel spring. Fancy has long been turning to thoughts of love. Both sexes feel it tremendously and equally frankly now. Spring in 1924 is a bit different from that of 1923.

The trees feel it. Animals know it is here. The earth and air are different. It's the annual miracle happening, and some of that miracle will be transmitted into the hearts of most people. Some hearts couldn't be shaken with a ship-load of dynamite, but those folks don't count. They need to be planted themselves.

So it's spring. A few months and we'll be longing for winter, but that doesn't trouble us now. We've another opportunity to stretch, another excuse for laziness and vacations and staying up late. We find everything and everything a bit happier. Every school teacher and every romantic maiden in the land will write at least one poem about it.

THE CURTAIN FOR DAUGHTERY

Most newspapers which weren't afraid of something, other were beginning to urge even insist, that our Attorney General step out. Denby did that and became a hero. Michigan wants him to be president. But, though Daugherty has resigned he will be branded, not for what he has done, but for things he permitted to be done, and for the company he kept.

It has been proven that intimate associates of his likewise had intimate associates who were crooks of the deepest dye; that big money was paid to somebody so that the Department of Justice would gaze earnestly in the other direction. Bootleggers, criminal conspirators of various kinds, and all sorts of corruption left a muddy trail to the door where Mr. Daugherty lived. Personally, he may be as pure as the driven snow, but people don't believe it.

The curtain will doubtless the permanent exile of the Attorney General. Politically, like half a dozen other men who have departed from Washington under a cloud within the last five years, he will be no more. It would seem that a reputation of such weakness, if not pure horse sense, would keep officials zealous of their purity and reputations. Surely the point will be driven home eventually, that somewhere, some time, bad deeds will out and somebody must pay.

WHY NOT?

Literature has come to this newspaper, announcing that April 7-12 is "Be Kind to Animals" week. Since the year is already nicely split up with "weeks" of all kinds, ranging from "Eat More Bread" week, with "Love Your Neighbor" week, with "Forests week, Boys' week, Less Sugar week, Be Truthful week, and some ninety-eight other weeks to fill up the fifty-two week year, we see no reason for discriminating against animals.

Perhaps we need such annual reminders to think more kindly of our horses, dogs and cats. Not many, but some, people regard animals as a nuisance. Many more go to the other extreme and rave like fools over a be-ribboned pup or a long-haired feline. No animal would hesitate long over a choice between utter neglect and being slopped over. It is for the over-affectionate as well as the careless that we have this week of humanness.

So if we don't forget, we're going to make a new resolution during "Be Kind to Animals" week. Since making resolutions is the custom and expectation of these "weeks" that will be quite proper. We also hope, in addition, to remember that resolution a bit longer than the rest. For why shouldn't animals be given a square deal?

IMAGINATION FOOD

Prince Masayoshi Matsukata, ninety-year-old Japanese Prince, "died" the other day. The nation went into mourning. After a while the corpse sat up and asked for something to eat. Now he is walking about.

What horror in the thought that he might have been buried alive, or his living veins filled with embalming fluid. Edgar Allen Poe wrote of such things, and while doubtless rare occurrences, probably they are not unlikely. One's imagination can go any lengths on such a subject.

Meanwhile, one doctor, more or less noted, tells us that electrocuted persons recover after burial. We read of other cases where folks, presumably passed away, come back for a last word: "What does it prove of this strange thing, death? Nothing. Yet we grope, trying to find what such a condition is; how to postpone it, recover from it, avoid it to the last moment. Many of us, not all, try to keep ready so we won't have to come back and prepare. It's a slim chance. Common sense suggests that three scores and ten years, or a fraction of that, offers a much more reliable opportunity.

CHINA TO GET WEI-HAI-W

Britain to Return "Pongee-Lai" Which It Held Under Lease for 25 Years

Washington.—"What makes pongee?" a riddle that probably not out of a score of the wearers of cool summer silk can answer, is up in a way with Wei-hui-wei, one of the half-dozen or so patches of China that have been under foreign control. Says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Now it is announced that this plot of pooge-land is to be turned back to its original owner as a result of the British-Chinese agreement just reached in Peking. Great Britain has been under lease for the past quarter of a century.

"Great Britain's step in taking control of Wei-hai-wei in 1898 was due to any economic importance of the place," says the bulletin, "but now the value to the fact that it has strategic value as a naval base. The years 1898 and 1898 saw the high water mark of territorial acquisition in China by the great powers, and Great Britain was compelled to take a part in the process, she has explained, by way of protection.

Moved to Checkmate Russia.
Germany started the scramble for the Far East in November, 1897, by seizing the strategic Kiaochow bay, from which it was to be driven by Japan during the World war, and by forcing China to give her a 99-year lease on the surrounding territory. Almost immediately a lease forced from China at the southern tip of Port Arthur, at the mouth of the Yalu River. Following this Great Britain negotiated for control of Wladivostok, exactly midway between the German and Russian ports. She made her reasons for the move plain by setting out in the agreement that the lease was to run for 25 years, or "so long as Russia occupies Port Arthur." The lease was then given for 25 years.

"When Japan defeated Russia in 1905, she took a 99-year lease on Port Arthur. Great Britain did not extend her Weihaiwei lease correspondingly, and her lease ran out in the original term. The British-ruled town of Port Edward will be made into a sort of treaty port for British residents and traders."

Chief Value Naval.
"Wel-hai-wel" is near the tip of Siam's principal peninsula, which with the Gulf of Thailand is called the Malay Peninsula. It is the only port for American ships to call. The peninsula is so long that it almost closes the entrance to the Gulf of Chilli from the Yellow Sea.
With Port Arthur, this British colony dominates the water route to the Philippines and the East Indies.
Just as the Bay of Wel-hai-wel is valuable in strategic position, so it is valuable physically. It is a shelter and a shelterer. But in the physical geography that lies outside naval considerations the place is of small account. Germany's and Japan's Taiwan had a rich hinterland behind it became rather a prosperous port. The low, sandy coast lands and the hills about Wel-hai-wel are known to contain minerals, and they are short of constituting a great of barren agriculturally. The two big birds to fame economically are ground nuts, of which considerable quantities are produced in the valley and poncee silk.

Oak-Ped Silkworms. To most persons, no doubt, silkworms are a fiber-spin by domesticated worms fed on mulberry leaves. But in silk industry is different in the Shanghai neighborhood and other parts of Shanghai. The people here name their silk is known as "Oak-Ped" and in its natural color, is a product not of domestic but of wild silkworms. And they do not feed on mulberry leaves, but browse, so to speak, on the leaves of the oak tree of the Shanghai hills. Their cocoons are gathered in large quantities, and so the otherwise waste hill lands are made to yield a relatively rich product.

returning the Wei-hai-wel lease to China. Great Britain will turn a better region than she received. Plants and animals have been introduced, considerable denuded areas have been reforested, and good roads have been built. Wei-hai-wel was a healthy climate and during the 25 years of British occupancy has been to a certain extent as a summer resort by Europeans from Hongkong and the southern treaty ports."

Ann Arbor—Commencement exercises for the 1924 graduating class of the University of Michigan will be held on Ferry field, the same as last June, weather permitting, the regents of the institution decided today. In case of rain the ceremonies will be held in Hill auditorium.

BREVITIES.

Ann Arbor—Hon. E. B. Manwaring, representative in the state legislature from the first district of this county, has announced his intention to be a candidate for judge of probate at the primary election to be held next September.

Ann Arbor—Gardner Williams, Ann Arbor, consulting engineer and the designer of the Edison dam, has finished the drilling preparatory to building the dam on the Barlow farm for the Ford Motor company's proposed factory here.

Brighton—Transfers are being made in the big White Lake tract in Oakland county. This piece of land aggregates 1800 acres, which is considerably more than the General Motors tract comprises. Its purpose has not yet been made public. Arhus.

Saline—The sound of the fire bell again put the people of Saline on the alert Monday morning when the chimney at the home of Henry Morris burned out. Slight damage was done, burning a small portion of inner walls both below and on the second floor. Prompt action by the volunteer fire department saved the property considerable damage. Observer.

Brooklyn—Three carloads of poles from British Columbia were unloaded in Brooklyn this week. The big sticks are for power line construction work by the Consumers Power Co. to start making a new distribution system for Brooklyn and to bring the power from Jackson. Accommodations have been secured at the Brooklyn hotel for a gang of men who will come to Brooklyn and start construction work next week. Exponent.

Eaton Rapids—Martin Hansen, of the A. M. Smith Company, reports that the company shipped to England last week better than 50,000 pounds of poultry which is some export shipment to go from Eaton Rapids on one order. Products from this concern are liable to be found most any place you go these days as one of our acquaintances in the navy, aboard the U. S. S. Pennsylvania, wrote, "We are using A. M. Smith Co. butter at mess every day, and are reminded of little old Eaton Rapids at every meal time." Review.

Pinckney—Trifon Pian, who lived on his farm on the Howell road one mile from Pinckney, pleaded guilty to the charge of violating the prohibition laws before Judge Collins in the county circuit court Monday, and was immediately sentenced to Iowa state prison for from six months to one year. His housekeeper, who was arrested on the same charge at the same time was fined $50, with $50 costs and was instructed to leave Livingston county. While Pian has been arrested before, charged with the same offense, this is the first time he has been convicted. Dispatch.

Manchester—Surveyors on the Manchester-Chelsea road began their work here at the corner of Jefferson and Water streets. They think a slice should be cut off J. H. King's lot and a like amount off John Decker's corner lot in order to straighten the road, which connects with the Manchester-Saline road. That would eliminate somewhat the possibility of accidents at the corner of the above named streets. No action has been taken to acquire the necessary land, but may possibly be done before this end of the Manchester-Chelsea road is completed. Work will be done this year on the Chelsea end. Enterprise.

Ypsilanti—Wednesday morning word was received by President Charles McKenny from Superintendent of Public Instruction T. E. Johnson that the state will superintend the construction of the new Normal high school which is to be erected in connection with the M. S. N. C. Under state supervision, Mr. Johnson's communication explained, construction has been found less expensive. The new school will cost $450,000. It will be erected at Brower and Forest streets. Work will be started soon, the building to be ready for occupancy in the fall of 1925. An architect's plan of the new building is on exhibition in the hall of the Administration building. Record.

Grass Lake—Under the auspices of the Grass Lake Improvement Club, a movement is under way to have Grass Lake, Tims Lake and Goose Lake set apart under State supervision for a bird sanctuary. Mr. G. W. Foster, president of the club, called a meeting recently at the Village Farm. G. W. Allyn, A. B. Johnson and Nelson Wing were appointed a committee to confer with the state officials and James I. Tawse of the conservation department came to Grass Lake to look over the situation. He was very favorably impressed and a public meeting will be called and Mr. Tawse plans to be present and address this meeting. The intention is to encourage the wintering of migratory birds in this locality. News.

Lyndon Pupil Writes Winning Essay

Lucille Boepcke, pupil in District No. 11, Lyndon, was winner of first prize in her district, in the recent essay contest. We believe her essay on "The Hour of Trial" to be one of the best and publish it below:

"IN THE HOUR OF TRIAL"

Before George Washington's terrible winter at Valley Forge, known as "The Hour of Trial," let us look into his early life. He was born February the twenty second, 1732, on a plantation in Virginia. From an early age Washington had to rely upon himself and it was through this that he learned more lessons from life than from books. His early experiences as a surveyor, a backwoodsman and a soldier enabled him to understand the principal on which a strong and lasting government could be founded in America. We can add to this that Washington was straightforward and manly, his mind was clear and if not quick, it was not slow, he weighed his ideas before deciding.

Our first president wished to enter the English service as a midshipman, but he gave up the idea because his mother did not wish him to enter into this kind of work. And it was fortunate for our country that he did not.

At the age of sixteen Washington met Lord Fairfax, an English nobleman from London. He owned a large piece of land in Virginia. Lord Fairfax became much attached to Washington and two years later Fairfax hired him to survey his land.

When Washington was twenty-one the governor of Virginia gave him the military title of major and after a successful mission to a French fort near Lake Erie he was made a colonel.

At the time of the Battle of Bunker Hill Washington was made commander and chief of all the forces and Congress sent him to Cambridge to take command of the American Army.

As commander and chief of the American Army Washington was successful in winning the battles of Trenton and Princeton.

The next important event in the life of Washington was the winter spent at Valley Forge, a village on the Schuylkill River about twenty-four miles from Philadelphia. The American Army suffered more than we could ever imagine, from hunger, cold and sickness. Log cabins were built and Washington did everything possible to help the troops, but it was a long hard winter. Many of the men were without enough clothing to keep them warm and it is said that the snow was marked with the bloody footprints of the men who were without shoes. These months were called "The Hour of Trial" and it was well named. Had it not been for the strong-willed, determined soldiers' belief in their leader and in the Almighty our history would have a different story to tell. But good news was on the way. The Americans won the great victory at Saratoga, New York, and when the king of France heard this he hastened to send ships, money, and soldiers to help the Americans. That battle practically ended the Revolutionary war and forced England to give up the contest.

Washington showed so much prudence and skill during the war which made America a free and independent country that he was chosen first president of the United States. He served the country two terms. During that time he with his cabinet, got the new government into operation.

Washington died December the fourteenth, 1799. He was mourned over by his enemies and he deserved this record. First in peace, first in war and first in the hearts of his countrymen.

Rev. C. S. Risley, pastor.

We do not make our "religion interesting" by dancing young ladies in flowing robes, as in one church in New York, but we do try to interest folks in Christianity. "The Elect Foundation" will be the subject Sunday morning. Upon what are you building? Is your character building upon stone or mud? Are you building your spiritual house upon pleasure, success, wealth, oil or what? Sunday evening, "Feeding Among Swine." What was Mickey's kind? The sin of Unconcern is quite large. You cannot afford to miss the services Sunday. Our Sunday school—a good place to be. Leaguers, all present at 6 p. m. A scriptural text, "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is." Let all clear the track for definite work and worship until Easter. Make your pastor smile on seeing you at church. Come on.

CONGREGATIONAL

Evening service 7 o'clock. Fourth of the service on the Prodigal Son. Subject "Resolution."

Stopping and starting experiments prove that the effort expended in attending church varies in reverse relation to the frequency thereof. There is always less strain in a steady pull than in frequent stopping and starting. Let's pull together. "I was sad when they said unto me, Let us go into the House of the Lord." (Psalm 122:1—)

First American Shoemaker

The first recorded American shoemaker was Thomas Baird, who arrived on the second voyage of the Mayflower in 1620. He was under contract with the Plymouth company to make shoes for the colonists. One Philip Kirtland, a Welshman, came to Lynn, Mass., in 1630, and John Adams Dwyer, a celebrated shoemaker, settled there in 1760; so Lynn got an early start in the industry for which it is now famous.

Two Useful Purposes

Successful business men judge you and use you for one of two purposes: Either to boost business or for company.

Get Along Somehow

Folks have to get along with human kind, somehow, and they do—some how.

How Fast Does Hair Grow?

The rate of hair growth varies from three-eighths to three-fourths of an inch a month until it has reached a length of from twelve to fourteen inches, when the rate of growth is reduced one-half. Past this point it gradually ceases. Hair grows faster in warm weather than in cold, and faster by day than at night.

Origin of Name Catskill

The name Catskill originated from "Katschberg," the name given by the Dutch to the mountain now known as the Catskills, because of the number of wild cats found in them. "Katschberg," the river that flows down from the mountain's means "Tomcat's Creek."

First Turkey in England

Tradition has it that the first turkey was taken to England from America by one of Sebastian Cabot's chief lieutenants. This is supported by the fact that William Strickland, who accompanied Cabot on several of his voyages, adopted a turkey rampant as his crest on being granted arms in 1493.

Can You Beat It?

By CLARA DELAFIELD

(Copyright, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

"It's all very well to say you do your best, John Marfield," said his wife vivaciously, "but you don't understand the amount of nervous energy it takes to run a house properly, not to speak of money, about which you've been mean since birth. Here I've toiled and slaved for you for 20 years, and what thanks do I get? None! Absolutely none! If you had to hire a house-keeper you'd soon find out how much a decent woman would put up with."

John Marfield sighed. Jane had always been a trying woman to live with, but she had been worse than ever since he had moved to Fenville.

He had made a decent little competence, and they had been enabled to give up the city apartment and purchase a modest house in the suburbs, and since then Jane had complained about everything.

As her life centered about the kitchen, it was of this that she complained the most. The stove, well, she wanted a new stove, of course. And the linoleum was worn out. And the utensils wanted replacing. And the faucet leaked. And the sun—yes, the sun—that was the latest grievance of all.

How do you expect a woman to work in this perpetual gloom? she demanded fretfully. "The kitchen ought to be on the south side of the house, so that one could get a bit of sun occasionally. I declare, I might as well be a prisoner in a silent cell—I mean a dark cell."

John Marfield wished that he were a prisoner in a silent cell. He sighed and went away, followed by winged shafts of complaint. He went to see his friend Atterbury, a widower. Atterbury had the reputation of knowing how to handle women.

"I can't please her," complained John. "I've done every mortal thing in reason, but whatever I do she always wants something more. Help me, Atterbury. You've had experience."

Atterbury drew out his tale of woe. "Why, the trouble is, you've gone about things the wrong way, John," he said. "Your wife's simply been trying to see how far she can go with you. You ought to have put your foot down and in the first place."

"I might try," began John doubtfully. "Nothing doing," said Atterbury. "It's too late now. She's taken your measure. No, my friend, the only thing to do now is to surprise her."

"Huh! I'd take an earthquake to surprise Jane," guessed Marfield. "You've got to surprise her," pursued Atterbury, ignoring the interruption. "By doing exactly the opposite of what she expects. She knows that you've been sort of balking while she's been goading you. Shame her, my friend, by giving her exactly what she wants, and more."

Marfield took his friend's advice into consideration. It seemed to him that the more he did for Jane the more her demands would grow. However, at length the opportunity arrived of putting the advice into effect. Jane was called away to a distant town by a serious illness of her mother.

"I hope when I come back I'll find a new linoleum, at least," she grumbled as she took her departure.

John Marfield smiled. He was wondering what Jane would say when she returned.

As soon as she was gone he went into town and bought a new linoleum and a new stove, new utensils. He arranged with a plumber to have the faucets thoroughly overhauled. Then he held counsel with a man who specialized in a particular, unusual business. Also he purchased a vacant lot on the other side of the road.

When at last Jane came back everything was completed. He met her at the station, and they walked up the street together. Suddenly Jane stopped and gasped.

"Where's our house gone?" she cried. "Look!" answered John, pointing. There, on the opposite side of the street stood the house, fresh as paint. Jane Marfield uttered a terrible cry and rushed into it.

Into the kitchen she stormed, while John, like a wise man, waited for the storm to cease. An hour later he entered.

John Marfield, have you taken leave of your senses? All this expense! That old stove and linoleum were good for years, and all these pots and pans are so new and shiny!" Jane burst into tears.

"Oh, and moving the house, so that my kitchen's in this full glare of light all day long. I can't stand it, John Marfield. You'll drive me into the grave. Where are you going with that meat chopper?"

"Oh, just going to pay a call on Atterbury," answered John.

The Cannibal King.

Perhaps the queerest job in the world is held by the district officer of Malaita, one of the Solomon Islands in the Pacific. He is the only white man in a population of 50,000. His rules his little kingdom with 20 police boys. He administers British law with a due regard for the islanders' outlook; he knows that a crime in the eyes of the law may be none in the eyes of a native—that a heavy hand would raise rebellion, and a slack one permit it; and so the flag that floats above his canoe stands to the Solomon Islands for sternest justice and most perfect understanding. Malaita is 120 miles long by 40 miles wide.

Wonder Dog Will Appear in "The Love Master" at Arcade

Strongheart will be at the Arcade Theatre, Ann Arbor, next week. "The Love Master," the latest First National production starring this dog will open there Sunday night. The reception accorded the picture everywhere coincided with the opinion of this reviewer that it is the finest production in which Strongheart has ever appeared, and that is saying that it ranks among the best.

It is splendid comedy, and yet there is a heart appeal in it that cannot be escaped. Incidentally Lady Julie, a splendid fawn colored police dog, who plays the part of the "blonde," is the first dog we have seen on the screen who can compete with Strongheart in sheer ability to portray emotions. In fact, Strongheart seems to encourage competition, for in the closing reels there.

Lillian Rich, Strongheart and Harold Austin in "The Love Master" entertainments ever offered by the screen.

Laurence Trimble, responsible for the training of Strongheart, not only directed the production, but also wrote the story, and his keen perception of the remarkable dramatic ability of his star adds to the fascination of the picture. An outsider, one who did not know Strongheart as intimately as Mr. Trimble would not have dared to require a dog to do the things which Strongheart does in a manner that makes it look awfully easy.

It was through a remarkable sequence in "The Love Master" that we realized what a discerning mind the person had who dubbed the first grand passion, "puppy love." Strongheart becomes afflicted with the yearning for feminine companionship, and then the film is given over entirely to him and his quest for his heart mate. It carries him through all the exultations and heart pangs of thwarted love to the happy culmination of finding his ideal "blonde."

are five of the finest puppies that were ever born, and each one of them seems to take naturally to ad in telling a love story.

The story concerns itself with a young man who has chosen refuge in the north at a trading post, which is reigned over by the young niece of the two men who own the general store. Nothing much is known about him except that he is in dire need of money for some purpose, and the first prize in the annual dog race seems to be the one best way of getting it. The dog race is one of the most thrilling spectacles which has found its way to the screen, but in "The Love Master" it is but an incident in the development of a splendid dramatic story.

Lillian Rich and Harold Austin, who head the human cast, stamp themselves as genuine "comers" in their chosen profession. The rest of the cast is especially well chosen also, but Strongheart proves himself entitled to star through the force of his personality and genuine ability.

Pink Sunrise and Sunset

The reason that sunrise and sunset are pink is because the light, instead of coming straight down through a belt of air, strikes the air on a slant, traveling through more air, particularly close to the earth. As a result it meets many more specks of dust, smoke and other impurities in the air. These absorb, deflect and reflect the light rays and cause the multi-colored effect.

YOUNG PEOPLE PRESENT

The entertainment and play given March 28th by the young people and school children of district No. 4, Lima, for the benefit of the P. T. A., was attended by a large and appreciative audience. The association cleared $45.65. The young people and pupils are to be congratulated on the able manner in which they took their parts, also the orchestra for their fine selections.

After the play the young people stepped forward and sang the following appropriate song:

In the old town hall

That's the place where everyone went

When we were kids—many good times were spent,

In the old town hall

Those happy days I recall,

That's where they held all the dances and fights,

The old maid's club would meet there Tuesday nights,

Next day you'd see burlesque with girls dressed in tights,

In the old town hall

Every year the church had a fair,

They'd sell you chances on every thing there,

In the old town hall

Gee, how the rubes used to fall,

Once I went home with my pocket-book flat

For I bought tickets for this and for that,

And all that I won was a brown derby hat

In the old town hall

In the old town hall

In the old town hall

Cows and pigs walked in thru the door,

Even the chickens layed eggs on the floor

In the old town hall

They had a welcome for all

The town went dry and the folks were in tears,

Except the Sheriff, and he gave three cheers

For he had enough to last forty-five years

In the old town hall

In the old town hall

In the old town hall

Tho' this song was written in fun

Let's not forget many great things were done

In the old town hall

When farmer boys heard the call

They left their plows and the soil that they tilled,

They went across with their deads

we were thrilled,

So let's not forget they were trained and were drilled

In the old town hall.

In this age when science has made light, power and water everywhere available, when machinery has lessened labor and anaesthetics have dulled the edge of pain, the funeral director has utilized science to lighten the burden of the sorrowing.

With the aid of science he is able to protect the family and the community from the danger of contagion, to make transportation safe, and to remove the traces of illness and unnaturalness which used to accentuate the grief caused by death.

With the help of professionally trained assistants, modern equipment, motorized conveyances, and often a fine funeral home or chapel, he is able to relieve the family of all details, and perform a service that brings comfort in the darkest hour and affords the consoling consciousness that the last tribute has been fitting and beautiful.

Keep that Confidence!

Ever since the beginning of the world, CONFIDENCE has played a tremendous part in the preservation of peace and honor.

Individuals, communities and nations filled with confidence in each other find true contentment and good feeling. Through this confidence, they are of mutual benefit to each other. Just as soon as that confidence is destroyed, that which was productive is gone and all concerned suffer.

Confidence is the basis of business today. Confidence is responsible for the great credit system in the commercial world.

When you buy merchandise from a business man of Chelsea, you get credit because of his confidence in you. He Believes in you. He knows that you have built up a character and reputation that Deserves his confidence.

Keep That Confidence! Keep it for your own sake, as well as for the sake of others. Pay your bills promptly! If circumstances arise that you cannot take care of your obligations at the promised time, be frank with your creditor. Let him know that you are remembering his faith in you.

It is only through all of us keeping faith with each other that the granting of credit is possible. Let's create and maintain a "good pay" reputation for Chelsea. Let us build in this community with CONFIDENCE.

We, whose names are signed below have confidence in the people of Chelsea and ask them to justify this confidence by keeping their credit in good standing

GREAT SHIPYARD IN NEILAN FILM

It remains for the motion picture to perpetuate and in a measure present to the American public an idea of the ramifications involved in the important part played by the shipbuilders of this country during the World War.

The transformation of seventy acres of mud-flats, which at high tide were entirely covered by the Pacific Ocean, to the completed shipbuilding plant equipped for modern production with dry docks, repair plants and a hundred affiliated industries is in itself a romance that if space would permit, would make interesting reading.

The completion of this plant and the subsequent building of thirty vessels of approximately 264,000 tons each, involving an investment of $22,000,000, all in the short space of fifty-two months offers material for a thrilling page of war history.

Amidst the surroundings of the site which played such an important part in the achievements of the United States during the war Marshall Neilan, motion picture producer, found an ideal "location" for his new production, made in association with Goldwyn, "The Strangers Banquet," which comes to the Princess theatre on Wednesday and Thursday, April 9 and 10.

A thrilling drama of the shipyards dealing with present-day conditions, this picture of Don Byrnes' well known book might have been written amidst the towering dry docks and thundering riveters of this plant owned by the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Drydock Company. This shipbuilding plant appears on the screen in "The Strangers Banquet" in a manner never before pictured, as do a number of the men who figured prominently in government work during the war.

Among the famous players who appear amidst this atmosphere in the screen drama are Hobart Bosworth, Claire Windsor, Rockliffe Fellowes, Thomas Holding, Nigel Barrie, Claude Gillingwater and a dozen other noted artists of the silver sheet. Thousands of regular shipyard workers helped to emphasize the spectacular effects created by Mr. Neilan for this picture.
