SCHEDULE ANNOUNCED FOR BASKET BALL SEASON

Belser's Sports Face Fast Games in Southern Michigan League.

Monday evening in Ann Arbor, representatives of the basketball teams holding memberships in the Southern Michigan League outlined a schedule of games for the ensuing basketball season which will prove interesting to fans here as well as elsewhere. Six teams are represented in the league, including the Moe Sport Shop of Ann Arbor, Ypsilanti, Milan, Saline, Dexter and Belser's Sports of Chelsea.

The local team, while numbering among its players several who were listed in its line-up last season, has added new material with the expectation that victories will be more numerous even than last year when Chelsea tied with Milan for second place in the league championship. The team this year includes Glenn Brooks, Harold Brooks, T. Heselschwerdt, C. Vogel, J. Munroe, S. Miller, M. Schoethals, "Red" Eder and M. Stewart. Miller and Stewart are the new men who will help defend the quilters' title aspirations.

Managing the team this year are Maynard Knickerbocker and Fred Belser, both experienced men and capable.

On Monday evening, January 5, the local Sports will play at Milan where it is expected they will have no difficulty in vanquishing their opponents. On Thursday evening, January 15, the Chelsea players will appear on their home floor in competition with the Moe Sport Shop, team in the visiting team's second appearance on a Chelsea floor. The Moe captured championship honors of the league last year, but the local team was a close second, so it is expected a lively scrap will ensue when the two teams meet.

So far as is known at the present time all games of the local team played at home will be staged on the Town Hall floor.

The schedule arranged for the season is as follows:

January 5—Chelsea at Milan.
January 12—Dexter at Saline.
January 19—Moe at Ypsilanti.
January 26—Moe at Saline.
January 26—Moe at Chelsea.
January 26—Ypsilanti at Dexter.
January 26—Saline at Ypsilanti.
January 26—Milan at Moe.
January 26—Chelsea at Dexter.
January 27—Dexter at Moe.
January 28—Ypsilanti at Milan.
January 28—Saline at Chelsea.
February 2—Moe at Saline.
February 5—Chelsea at Ypsilanti.
February 5—Milan at Dexter.
February 10—Ypsilanti at Moe.
February 10—Milan at Chelsea.
February 10—Saline at Dexter.
February 17—Chelsea at Moe.
February 17—Dexter at Ypsilanti.
February 23—Moe at Milan.
February 24—Ypsilanti at Saline.
February 24—Dexter at Chelsea.
March 2—Chelsea at Saline.
March 4—Moe at Dexter.
March 4—Milan at Ypsilanti.
March 9—Dexter at Milan.
March 10—Saline at Moe.
March 12—Ypsilanti at Chelsea.

In addition to the above Belser's Sports expect two games with Howell, two with Eaton Rapids, two with Reo, of Lansing, two with Napoleon, one or more with the Hamtramck police department, Detroit, Federal Reserve Bank, Detroit, and inquiries are being received daily from teams anxious to date up with the Sports. Financial support will play a large part in ability of the Sports to meet outside teams on the local floor inasmuch as most, if not all, ask a guarantee of some amount before consenting to come.

LAFAYETTE GRANGE
Lafayette Grange will meet Thursday, January 8, with Mrs. and Mr. Geo. T. English at their home on South Main street. The officers will be installed by Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Williams of Pittsfield Grange. A program of music and recitations and reports from the delegates to the State Grange will be given. Dinner will be served at 12 o'clock noon. Every member is requested to try and attend.

CARD OF THANKS
We wish to thank the many lovely neighbors and friends for their kindness and sympathy during our bereavement in the loss of our beloved husband, father, and brother, and for the kind words of Rev. Grabowski, and Paul Niehaus for his lovely songs; also the pall bearers and others for their beautiful floral tributes. Mrs. Michael Kappler and family, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Steffe, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sager and family.

Superintendent E. L. Clark, of the public schools, was engaged to take charge of the local schools next year at a regular meeting of the board of education on Tuesday evening. Re-hiring of Mr. Clark indicates the esteem in which he is held by the local board and puts a stamp of approval on his several years' service in this position.

TWO CHELSEA MEN SEEK PROBATE JUDGESHIP

One Woman, Seven Men, Aspire to Vacancy Caused by Death of Probate Judge Emory E. Leland.

Two Chelsea men are aspirants to the office of Probate Judge, which vacancy was caused by the death last week of Judge Emory E. Leland. Beside these one woman and five other men would like the job, according to dispatches from Lansing appearing in Tuesday's Ann Arbor Times News.

The Chelsea men who desire the appointment are Attorney John Kalmbach and Herman Dancer. The others are: Representative Edward B. Manwaring, former Prosecutor Jacob F. Fahrner, Register of Probate Dorcas Donegan, County Clerk Jay G. Pray, and Justice John D. Thomas, all of Ann Arbor.

Indications from the office of Governor Groesbeck, who has the power of appointment, were that Representative Manwaring appears to have the inside track on the appointment. He is a veteran member of the legislature and staunch supporter of Gov. Groesbeck. In case the appointment goes to him it will not be made until after January first because of the fact that Mr. Manwaring could not accept appointment while he is a member of the legislature.

Judge Leland's successor will serve until the spring election.

MICHAEL KAPPLER PASSED AWAY LAST WEDNESDAY

Michael Kappler, aged 51 years, died at his home in Sylvan, Wis., day, December 24, 1924.

He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Kappler, and was born January 16, 1873. For many years he had been a resident of this vicinity. He was united in marriage with Miss Rose Reule, April 12, 1904.

Beside the widow he is survived by five daughters and two sons, and also one sister.

The funeral was held from the home at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, Rev. P. H. Grabowski conducting the services. Burial in Vermont cemetery, Sylvan.

ESTELLA ARNOLD GRANT
Estella Arnold, second daughter of Barnum and Betsy Arnold, was born at Lima Center, Michigan, March 31, 1847, and died December 25, 1924, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. D. Huff, Montreal, Quebec.

When she was about five years old her parents moved to Chelsea, where the remainder of their lives was spent. In May, 1867, she was married to Mr. Chas. Grant of Ridgeway, Ontario, living in that town and Rodney, Ontario, for several years, later coming to Detroit. In 1869 they came back to her old home town, Chelsea, residing here until the death of Mr. Grant in August, 1918. Since that time Mrs. Grant has lived with her daughter in Montreal, spending every other summer with friends in this vicinity.

Three children came into their lives—one little girl dying in infancy, Mrs. A. D. Huff now of Montreal, Wm. Grant of Detroit. Besides her immediate family, there are a brother, Wm. Arnold of Chelsea, three nieces, Mrs. Wm. Barr of Saline, Miss Nellie Congdon of Hillsdale, Miss Edith Congdon of Ottawa, Ontario, and four grandchildren, Marion and Arthur Huff of Montreal, Arnold and Howard Grant of Detroit.

Every comfort and care was given her in her late home by her daughter and family. She had the love and respect of all she met in the new locality, yet she loved her home and old time friends and was eagerly looking forward to another visit with them in the coming spring.

It was best for her to go, however, to the other home and be with those who had gone before. While those left behind will miss her, they know she has all to gain.

Those from out of town attending the funeral were Mrs. A. D. Huff of Montreal, Quebec, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Grant of Detroit, Miss Edith Congdon of Ottawa, Ontario, Mrs. Wm. Barr, Saline, Miss Nellie Congdon, Hillsdale, Miss Nellie Congdon, Hillsdale.

CARD OF THANKS
We desire to express our heartfelt appreciation for the kindnesses of neighbors and friends shown us during the illness and after the death of our father.
The Family of Robert Foster.

EMORY E. LELAND PASSES AWAY FOLLOWING STROKE

Had Served Sixteen Years as Head of Probate Office. Spent Entire Life in Washtenaw County.

Judge Emory E. Leland, of the Probate Court, Ann Arbor, widely known throughout the county, passed away at St. Joseph's Mercy hospital, Ann Arbor, on Tuesday, December 23 at 7 o'clock in the evening, following a two weeks' illness brought on by a stroke of paralysis.

Judge Leland was born in Northfield township, March 26, 1845, had resided in Northfield and Ann Arbor his entire life and at the time of his death was nearly 80 years of age. For 16 years he had been probate judge of this county, serving his first term from January 1, 1905. He served two terms until 1912, lapsed one term and was re-elected in 1916, 1920 and 1924. He would have started his fifth term on the first day of 1925.

Funeral services were held in the Methodist Episcopal church in Ann Arbor, on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. A. W. Stalker officiating. The body was deposited in the vault at Forest Hill to await burial in the Leland cemetery, Northfield township.

E. P. Steiner, Organizer.

COURT REPORTER TO QUIT AFTER 45 YEARS OF SERVICE

E. P. Goodrich, who has rounded out exactly 45 years of service as circuit court stenographer of the twenty-second circuit of Michigan, will retire about the first of the year, he has announced. Mr. Goodrich Saturday celebrated his eighty-second birthday anniversary.

Miss Doris Fuller of East Jordan, stenographer in the Charlevoix circuit, has been engaged to take over the reporting in the local court. Miss Fuller has had considerable experience in court stenographic work, it is understood, and comes here highly recommended.

A history of Mr. Goodrich's services in the local court is a history of the court itself. When a court was first established in this section of Michigan, Washtenaw and Monroe counties were placed in one circuit and Mr. Goodrich was appointed stenographer. About 30 or 35 years ago, the two counties were separated, Washtenaw retaining the title of the twenty-second circuit with Monroe county given another circuit. Mr. Goodrich remained with the twenty-second district.

Judge Chauncey Joslyn was the first man to sit on the circuit bench in Washtenaw county after it was separated from Monroe county. Mr. Goodrich served under Judge Joslyn then Judge Edward D. Kinney, and more recently under Judge George W. Sample. He has taken testimony in practically every case tried in the local court and has long held the reputation of being one of the ablest and most conscientious court stenographers in the state.

Judge George W. Sample, discussing Mr. Goodrich's retirement, said: "All the time I have been sitting on the local bench I have considered Mr. Goodrich the dean of court stenographers of Michigan, not only in age but in qualifications for the position. He has been a most satisfactory stenographer and it was with deep regret that I accepted his resignation."

Mr. Goodrich probably will be called upon to do stenographic work in courts around the county. He feels that he would like to devote his time to writing hereafter and gives this as the principal reason for his retirement. He is planning to write a history of the Presbyterian church and this will take up considerable of his time. Ann Arbor Times News.

THE NEW YEAR

A New Year is with us, and with it will come new resolutions—new opportunities, new hopes, new sorrows, new successes, new failures.

Perhaps a resolution for the New Year, made but not kept is a good resolution, and possessed of benefits to him who makes it. It shows that he has had a good intention, and his heart is right, even if the flesh is weak.

But good resolutions should not be confined to New Year. Every day is a new day. It brings with it as much of a new day, new opportunities and new necessities as the day of the New Year. We ought to, if we realize our mistakes, determine each new day to rectify them—to make such changes as would be better for ourselves, and better for those with whom we are daily thrown in contact.

WATER POWER DEVELOPMENT
There is a growing belief in America that the government should own and control all the water power development. This has been accentuated by the Muscle Shoals situation. First, Henry Ford made a proposition to the government to lease it. Then there were other offers, and then came the charges of an attempt to control this great water power development by what was designated as the greedy power trusts of the country.

Whatever else this controversy may have done, it has set the people thinking. They are thinking along the line that their government has expended the money to complete this great power plant at Muscle Shoals. That it is money belonging to the public that has thus been spent, and that the people should receive the benefits.

This applies not only to Muscle Shoals but to all potential power development. There are many power projects much larger than Muscle Shoals which could be developed and operated at a profit by the government. The whole country, by proper development of such power projects could be benefited and relieved very materially from the necessity of using so much coal and other fuel.

The development of water power by the government would be the first and longest step in the direction of conservation of our fuel supply.

REMITTING SUPREME COURT
James M. Beck, prominent lawyer, has drawn the fire of very many citizens, and a few lawyers by his proposal that before bills are finally passed and become acts of congress, that the congress should submit them to the supreme court of the United States for a decision as to whether or not they were passed by the congress.

It is being charged by prominent citizens that this suggestion of Mr. Beck is made looking to further turning over to the legal fraternity all the lawmaking, law-abiding and law-enforcing powers of this country. It has been argued that such a course would sweep aside the fundamental law of the land, make a scrap of paper of the constitution and make the supreme court a nine-headed czar.

Regardless of that phase of the matter it would be a movement that the American people would never tolerate. The constitution set up three co-equal branches of the government—the legislative, the executive and the judicial. Our fathers deemed it necessary and wise to have these three to properly safeguard the rights of the citizens—and more than once that wisdom has been proved.

If it were possible to follow the suggestions of Mr. Beck and not make of the supreme court a judicial body, it would, on the other hand, belittle the great judicial body making it council in an advisory capacity to the congress—a thing quite absurd, and as far from the intention of the framers of the constitution as we could possibly get.

If the supreme court functions in the future as it has in the past, it will be filling the place created for it by the constitution. There are good lawyers in the congress as there are on the supreme bench. They have, in the past, taken good care of the legislation, and they ought to be able to continue to do so in the future.

The other day, one of the editorial writers for Hearst newspapers was called before a senate committee and asked to retract certain things he had written, which were published in Hearst's New York American, which were considered a reflection on Senator Underwood of Alabama. The editorial writer promptly retracted and gave the Alabama senator a clean bill of health. The next day Mr. Hearst had an editorial over his signature in the New York American, in which he said that all that had been said about Senator Underwood was the truth, and that the editorial opinion of his editorial writer who had back-pedaled wasn't worth a whoop. Mr. Hearst buys his editorials—he is the best judge of their worth, no doubt.

Water in Cucumbers

About 90 per cent of water is contained in the makeup of a cucumber.

LIVING COSTS INCREASE

The United States Department of Labor has issued a statement showing that food costs for November increased one per cent over October. The year ending November 15, showed a decrease of food cost for the year of one per cent. The eleven year period ending November 15, showed food costs increased 43 per cent in eleven years.

The unfortunate thing about this increase in cost of foods is that the producer of foodstuffs do not show a corresponding increase in income from production. The costs that the consumer have paid have gone to middle men, to pay for transportation and to largely increased forces organized to handle food products between the producer and the consumer. Every producer should be in some kind of an organization which would control the production and marketing of his product. Until that is brought about, the consumer will pay more, and the producer will receive less for his dollar's worth.

IMPORTED DISEASES

Just before Christmas tens of thousands of dollars worth of poultry that had been shipped to the New York City market, was seized by the authorities and destroyed on account of a new disease known as infectious bronchitis, which was found among poultry shipped from many inland states. Also diseases were found among fowls imported from Europe. This caused quick congressional action. An appropriation of $100,000 was quickly passed to fight the disease, and steps were immediately taken to keep poultry from Europe from entering at our ports.

Very much has been accomplished by the Agricultural Department of the government at Washington in keeping down and eradicating diseases which have made poultry raising unprofitable. Much more could be accomplished, and one of the first steps would be to provide the Department with ample funds to carry on inspection and establish quarantine on all fowls coming from foreign ports. This should be done with all live stock and seeds, as well as poultry. Some of the most destructive pests and diseases we have had in the past, came from foreign countries that were not too careful in seeing that live stock and poultry free from disease, were shipped to this country.

BRITISH-IRISH DISAGREEMENT

The Irish Free State has made application for filing its treaty with England with the League of Nations. England has protested the movement, and is opposing the filing of the treaty on the ground that it is an internal affair concerning only the British Empire, and not an international matter. In other words, England seems to be in the attitude that the treaty is a mere plaything for Ireland to play with but nothing serious to be used and enjoyed as a document giving Ireland any medium of freedom.

This comes as something of a surprise to the nations of the earth, wherein it was believed that England had given the Irish people a treaty, establishing them as a free state. It appears as if the battle of the centuries between England and Ireland has only had a respite, and is about to begin all over again.

One of the biggest banks in New York City, as a Christmas present, offered to its employees a part of its stock. It proposed to sell the stock worth $410 a share, to its employees at $275 a share in order to get the employees of the bank financially interested in its welfare. A good idea. More and more the idea is getting abroad that those who are employed in industry, commerce and finance, work for their firms better when they are stockholders. It is better for the firm and better for the employees for as business prospers the employees prosper, regardless of wages. Time is coming in America when this will be a generally accepted custom.

William McClellan Ritter, of the Ritter Lumber Company of Columbus, Ohio, gave one fourth of the stock of the company to 124 employees for a Christmas present. The stock was said to be worth $2,000,000. This tendency of big corporations to allow employees to share stock and dividends is one of the best industrial signs of the times.

The United States treasury has had coined several millions of silver dollars which it is endeavoring to have distributed over the country. The treasury department has found that it costs less to maintain hard money than it does to maintain a paper currency in the smaller denominations.

Time was when the paper dollar was looked on with suspicion, while the silver dollar was in great demand. Now it seems to be the other way about. On account of its weight the silver dollar is not popular and people prefer the paper money.

Ambassador Jusserand who represents France at Washington, suggested upon the eve of his return to France that his country must have a moratorium on its debts. In other words, the American people have been taxed to pay the interest on money owed our government by France, for a period of some six or seven years, and that they should carry it along for another ten or a dozen years the same way. In seventeen years at compound interest, money doubles in value. If France could have our money for seventeen years at that rate, the money if properly invested, would pay itself out, France isn't at all bashful.

The day before Christmas the price of "strictly fresh eggs" reached a dollar a dozen in New York City. The hens nest is getting to be the top of the world—and the old mother hen is sitting on it.

Gentle Maiden Sees and

Oh, that football got his face kicked in. Oh, how sweetly pretty! I just know he's happy. Now he can lie still in the hospital and read and hear the birdies sing and be glad, oh, so glad.

Oh, goody. Those two big Swedes are jumping up and down on the quarterback. Just like boys at play. How glad the Swedes look. And how happy the little quarterback must be that he can make them so glad. Oh, football is so lovely, so bloody lovely, reports Outing Magazine.

Oh, joy! No wonder the birdies sing and the flowers are gay. They have knocked the center cold. See, his left leg is broken, quite broken. And oh, rapture! I think his neck is hurt, too. How pleased all the others are. They are singing and cheering. They're so happy.

Oh, what a delightful picture! What his blond giant just kicked at the ball and missed it and his great foot landed in that other player's stomach, quite lost from sight. The band plays. No wonder. There! He has got his foot out again. Now they can both be glad.

Likes and Dislikes for

Various Kinds of Food

Many races; many foods, many fads. The luxury of one people is the bane of another. An attempt is being made to introduce snails as an article of food in certain London restaurants. The French, of course, regard snails as a delicacy, while Britishers almost shudder at the thought of eating them! Yet English folks eat mussels, whelks and winkles, which in some countries are regarded as being unfit for human consumption. In England the eel is relished by many people, but in Scotland it is detested by nearly everybody. Rabbits are looked upon as vermin in some parts of America and Australia and are seldom served at table. In Britain rabbit pie is a favorite dish. Swede turnips are often eaten in Scotland and Canada with other vegetables; whereas in some parts of England they are cordially disliked and given only to cattle. Turnip-tops in Scotland, again, are not considered worth cooking. But in Covent Garden they sell by the ton.—London Mail.

Liberty

The liberty of a people consists in being governed by laws which they have made themselves, under whatever form it be of government; the liberty of a private man is being master of his own time and actions, as far as may consist with the laws of God, and of his country.—Covvay.

"The Man in the Moon"

The appearance of a face on the moon is due to the elevations and depressions on its surface, the so-called mountains of the moon, or craters. There, being no atmosphere on the moon, the contrast between light and shadow is very great, and the arrangement of these shadows cast by the vast number of craters which cover the moon's surface gives the appearance of a face on the moon's surface.

Why Amber Mouthpieces

It was an early belief that amber had the power of preventing the spread of infection if held in the mouth, and from that belief it became the custom to fit amber mouthpieces to pipes.

Growth of Jellyfish

The manner in which a jellyfish produces its "children" is really wonderful. In most cases the beginning is an egg, which, lying on the bottom, produces a beautiful tree-like growth. The "tree" fastens itself to the bottom and brings forth buds which, when ripe, drop off and develop into jellyfish. The latter, in turn, lay eggs and the process is repeated, as told in London Tit-Bits. Most of the very large species have a different way of reproducing themselves. The egg is set free in the water and develops into a pear-shaped larva, which for a while swims about rapidly, being provided with hair-like appendages that serve the purpose of ears. Then the larvae settles down, anchors itself to the bottom, increases in size rapidly and finally splits up into thin, flat discs which swim off and grow up into large jellyfishes.

Friends and acquaintances of Milton Henry Hall, native of Dexter, will be interested to learn that he died and was buried in Denver, Colorado, during Christmas week. Hall, who twenty years ago was a music composer and black-face comedian of unusual ability, had stepped down and out of his stage career and for the last twelve years had been a dishwasher in a Denver hotel. An idea of the popularity of Hall in his prime can be had from the fact that he was an intimate friend of Lew Dockstader and Al G. Fields, kings of the comedian world.
Those from out of town who attended the funeral of Michael Kappler Saturday are: Mr. and Mrs. Albert Greiner, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sager and daughters Irene and Marie and son Paul, W. H. The S. P. I. Club were entertained at the home of Mrs. Louis Eppler Monday evening, December 29, at a New Year's party. The program consisted of New Year's greetings, stories and poems. Games were also played. A buffet lunch was served by the hostess, and a very good time was reported. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Schneider next Monday, January 5. The subject for discussion will be "January, 1925."

The Standard makes grateful acknowledgment of receipt from employees of the local telephone company of a tailless leaping amphibian of the genus "Rana" or commonly known as a frog—as a New Year's gift. Where they have been keeping this habitation of the aquatic realm for the past several weeks of freezing weather is more than the force here has been able to decipher, but it must be said that the matured tadpole appeared well fed and hasn't been able to eat anything since received. Like the colored man's male it is feared that about the time this frog gets used to going without eating "he" or "she" will die. Anyway, we thank the telephone girls and admire their courage in getting so close to anything that's full of "hops."

Horses Repay Kindness

It is said the Arabs were the first to appreciate a horse's intelligence, and to treat him accordingly. They kept the history of their horses written on tablets of ivory and traced their parentage back to the time of the pharaohs. They were extremely thoughtful of the comfort of the horse and it was even said they took better care of their horses than they did of their families. Constant companionship made the Arabian horse quick to understand the meaning of words, and kindness made them fearless, brave and obedient. The intelligence of the horse varies just as it does in other animals, or even people, and is developed or retarded according to man's treatment of him. Says a bulletin of the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals:

Almond's Quasi Habits

The almond tree has peculiar habits. It seems to prefer California as its habitat, as 98 per cent of the almonds grown in America are produced in that state, and in a rather restricted territory at that. The bulk of the crop is grown around Banning, says Nature Magazine. It seems to require the spots where extremes of cold and heat are present in their respective seasons, and photographs have been taken of an orchard with snow on the ground on the first of February, and again with the trees in full bloom by the 20th of the month. The same variety will not fertilize one another. Growers must plant alternating rows of hardshells and paper-shells in order to insure a harvest.

True Poetry

The only true or inspired poetry is always from within, not from without. The experience contained in it has been spiritually transmuted from lead into gold. It is severely logical, the most trivial of its adornments being subservient to, and suggested by, some dominant idea; any departure from whose dictates would be the falsification of a revelation. It is unadorned with worldly wisdom, deference to prevailing opinions, mere talent or cleverness. Its music is the expression of the law of its growth; so that it could not more be set to a different melody than could a rose-tree be consummated with lilies or violets. —James Thomson.

Chinese Dancing Rules

In China, the ballroom doors are divided into squares, each of which bears a sign of a bird, fish, or some other form of nature. Dancers must keep to their own squares and if they fall to do so are punished with a colored disk. Three failures to keep within the square assigned results in the penalty of leaving the place.

World's Wettest Spot

At Cherrapunji, champion rainy spot of the earth, in the Himalayas, the average yearly rainfall is 466 inches. In 1881 it is recorded that 918 inches, or 7½ feet, actually descended at Cherrapunji. More than a third of this, or 72 inches, fell in July alone, and 32½ inches—or more than most Americans experience in a year—came down in a single day.

Water Denizen That Has Few Vital Organs

The little creature called the lancelet is slender and pointed at both ends and not very easy to see, since it is almost transparent and is only from an inch and a half to two and a half inches in length.

It lives in shallow water and likes to stick its head end into the sand, into which it burrows with great rapidity. It remains thus for a long time with its tail sticking out. When on the surface of the water it lies on its side.

While it can neither see nor hear, there is reason for believing that it possesses the senses of smell and taste. Its eggs are laid about sunset and the larvae hatch out early the next morning.

The lancelet has no head. Moreover, it has neither legs nor pairs of arms. It has a mouth, however, placed at one end, which, therefore, may be called the head end of the body.

It has a stomach, a very simple form of liver and another simple organ which takes the place of a heart, since it is capable of contracting and thus forcing the blood, which is quite colorless, forward to the area of the gills, where it is purified.—Review of Reviews.

Business Now Made of Producing Spider Silk

Spider farming is one of the little known industries of modern times. The end in view is not the intensive fighting of the fly pest, but the production of spider silk, than which there is nothing better for the cross lines of surveying and other instruments.

Supplies in vast quantities are needed for the manufacture of spider-silk stockings, and it is to meet this demand that special spider farms have been started from time to time, says The Bits.

It is no easy matter to keep and feed the spiders, to prevent them from engaging in mortal combat, and to collect their silk in suitable form. The process of "milking" the spider amounts to playing catchball, with the spider as ball. In its passage through the air the spider instinctively pays out silk, and it can be induced to part with a hundred yards or more during a succession of such nights.

Secret Safe

"Oh, Alice!" Virginia exclaimed, "have you heard about Gladys?"

"No; what about her?" Alice demanded.

"Well, she and Dick Rodney are going to be married in June!"

"You don't say! Well, I always knew Dick thought a lot of Gladys, but I never did think she would agree to marry him."

"And Alice," Virginia continued, "the engagement is a secret just now. I promised Gladys I wouldn't tell a living soul, so don't you breathe a word of it to anyone."

"Why, Virginia," Alice replied, "you know I wouldn't say more than I'm told. I'll tell you that!"

Salesmen may be gracious and cheerful and yet lack knowledge of the goods they are expected to sell. This is a fault and a handicap to good salesmanship. A story is told of a general storekeeper in central Ohio whose education in selling was the kindergarten variety. A customer came in and asked for a little cheese cloth.

"The storekeeper disappeared, but came back luging a large specimen of a New York cheese. 'Here's the cheese,' he said, 'but I'll be ding-busted if I know how I'm goin' to get the cloth off it!'"

Bog Ornaments Irish Asset

One of the industries of Ireland has long been the manufacture of bog ornaments. Before the period of upheaval in Ireland the export of these goods from the Emerald Isle through the port of Dublin equaled a value of $100,000 a year. The trade originated in the reign of George IV, soon after his visit to Ireland in 1821. London Bits says. At first all the ornaments were hand-carved and polished, but machinery was used with the increased demand. Yew, fir and birch, as well as oak, are woods used by the makers of the ornaments. The one necessity is that the logs shall have been long buried in the bogs.

Wedding Season in India

Customs in India bring annually a wedding season, marriages being practically unknown at other seasons. The wedding bells there ring from summer to late autumn, and the bride must wear gold and silver trinkets and decorations, no man being so poverty stricken as to contemplate marriage without making the silver and gold presents. The metal must be imported from other countries, and this year there has been sent from New York to London for India more than $2,000,000 worth of gold and silver. —State Journal.

Plant Relations

If we throw a simple glance on plants, we shall perceive that they have relations to the elements which promote their growth; that they have relations to each other, from the groups which they contribute to form; that they have relations to the animals which derive nourishment from them; and, finally, from the cooperation of all the works of evolution. To these relations I give the name of harmonies.—Bernardin de Saint-Pierre.

Income Tax Has Never Had Great Popularity

Imaginative persons seem never to tire of conjecturing as to which of modern man's accomplishments would most astound our ancestors.

The motorcar or the airplane is usually the favorite, but if one could select a chosen few, comprising many of the kings of England along with their councilors, probably the achievement which would bulk largest in their eyes would be the collection of the income tax.

Starting with Edward III, who distinguished himself by collecting $180,000 by a graduated capital levy in 1321 without causing a revolution, the history of the efforts of the rulers of our race to yoke us with this burden is interesting. Edward III's levy was very modest, says A. G. D. in the Winnipeg Free Press. It ranged from $80 to 8 cents, according to the position of the taxpayer.

Richard II—his ill-starred grandfather—almost lost his throne before he had got firmly seated on it, because he levied a still more modest tax, ranging from $5 to 8 cents. Wat Tyler, before he was murdered, so convinced the rulers of Britain that an income tax was not a practical form of taxation that it was more than 200 years before such a levy was again attempted.

Safe Makers Only One Jump Ahead of Thieves

Recent defensive experiments and inventions might lead us to forecast an end to bank burglary. But to bring this about in fact is not so easy, asserts the Scientific American. What concerns safe makers immediately is the possibility of devising some metal or other substance capable of resisting the devastating onslaught of the various types of the acetylene torch, a high temperature device which will eat its fiery way through metal defenses once thought absolutely impregnable.

The contest between the safe cracker and the safe maker is fast resolving itself into the old problem of the irresistible force and the immovable body—with the odds in favor of the safe cracker.

Since the beginning of safe making the inventors have had two sets of men to deal with—the burglars who use the drill and those who use explosives. Each new improvement of safe has been met on the part of the burglar, with method for successfully attacking it.

Marvelous Natural Bridge

The Rainbow natural bridge is located within the Navajo Indian reservation near the southern boundary of Utah, and spans a canyon and a small stream which drains the northwest slope of the Navajo mountains. This bridge is unique in that it is not only a symmetrical arch below but presents also a curved surface above, thus roughly suggesting a rainbow. Its height above the surface of the water is 300 feet, and its span is 278 feet. The bridge and its neighboring canyon walls are gorgeously clothed in mottled red and yellow. The Indian story concerning its origin is that a rainbow was turned to stone, thus permitting certain hero gods to escape flood waters in the canyon. Deceitful Indians will not pass under this bridge without saying their prayers. The Indian name was Nage-Id Non-ne-zohi—"The rainbow turned to stone."

Black Maria

Everybody knows that prison vans are called "Black Marias." The reason for that appellation is given in the following terms in the Star of November 28, 1874, in the form of a letter from a correspondent:

"About 1835 or 1840 there resided in New York city a lady of African descent and bacchanalian habits, bearing the classical name of Maria. Her sprees were frequent and glorious. It came to pass that whenever she was outed she was always nabbed by the police. They invariably had to put her in a wagon to take her to the station house. This thing occurring so often, the vehicle was called Black Maria's cartage. Therefrom the van used to convey prisoners came to be called the Black Maria."—Washington Star.

Exceptions to Theory

The recapitulation theory is the theory that a parallel exists between the embryonic development of an individual and the historical evolution of its race. This parallel is explained by the theory of evolution, according to which, in the words of Seligman, "the development history of the individual appears to be a short and simplified repetition, or, in a certain sense, a recapitulation of the course of development of the species." The theory is correct to a limited extent in the case of many animals, but there are many deviations due to the adaptation to environment, abbreviation of the course of development and other influences.

"Hard" and "Soft" Water

Hard water is water which contains dissolved in it certain substances which interfere with the action of soap by forming with it an insoluble compound or curd. The hardness of natural waters is principally due to the salts of calcium and magnesium, especially calcium carbonate, which produces temporary hardness removable by boiling, and calcium sulphate, which causes permanent hardness. Soft water is characterized by the practical absence of substances which prevent the formation of lather with soaps.

Big growers and shippers use electricity to kill insects that may lurk in their fruit. The insects are killed through an electric ironing machine which destroys, through heat and pressure, any insect eggs or larvae.

Once Populous Cities Reclaimed by Jungle

The old question whether a thing can be lost when you know where it is applies in part to lost cities, because the sites of many of them are known and in some cases even the buildings and statuary are almost intact.

Now, however, their only inhabitants are the beasts of the jungle, lions prowling through their echoing halls, monkeys race across their fretted arches and snakes lurk in their dark dungeons or glide across their crumbling pavements.

For instance, the holy city of the Buddhists—Barabodder, in Java—had been forgotten for 600 years when Sir Stamford Raffles rediscovered it and its wonderful temple, the eighth wonder of the world, says a writer in London Answers.

The jungle of Siam has hidden its ancient capital, Ayuthia, for four centuries. Its inhabitants fled before the conquering Burmese, and never returned. It is now said to be the lurking place of thousands of enormous snakes.

Mystery surrounds the dead city of Tibet, which Captain Rawling discovered. It is a vast collection of palaces, monasteries and dwelling houses, but the Tibetans professed ignorance of its existence and also of the reason of its abandonment.

Five centuries ago Angkor had a population of three-quarters of a million. Today it is the dead city of Cambodia. The carved stone elephants, the immense causeways, the majestic temples, still remain, but the jungle has invaded the streets and squares.

Young Ducklings Early at Home in the Water

The woodcock, unlike most other ducks, usually builds his nest far from his natural element, water, writes Ellis Gilmore Macleod in St. Nicholas. But no sooner are the eggs hatched and the ducklings about the size of bumblebees, than each parent bird takes a little one in its bill, wiggles through the opening in the chestnut tree, or whatever which harbors the nest, and with a quick glance lest some enemy may lurk near, flies swiftly overland to creek or water hole. Here the two young ducklings are dropped gently into the water.

Without previous swimming lessons, these newly-hatched mites dart over the surface of the water for the cover of marsh grass or lily pad where they hide until the return of their parents with more of their brothers and sisters.

The flight of the old ducks continues back and forth from the home nest to the water until the family of from 12 to 18 are assembled, when, at a soft call-note from the parents, every little padder darts from cover and starts chasing water spiders, as if that were an old game.

His Way Out of Dilemma

The commanding officer looked down the charge sheet to see what type of case he had to deal with that morning.

Suddenly he started. "Private King charged with mutiny!" Then aloud: "Where is the corporal who made this arrest?"

"Here, sir," answered a corporal, stepping forward.

"Do you charge Private King with mutiny?" was the stern inquiry.

"I do, sir," was the reply.

"On what grounds?"

"The corporal insisted for a moment that I was really insubordination, but I didn't know how to spell that, so I put 'mutiny!'"

Heat Kills Germs

Radiant (or visible) heat was emphasized by Prof. Leonard Hill at a recent meeting of the London Zoological society—as "most useful in helping organisms to fight against infection" from tuberculosis. Hot-water pipes, he pointed out, though an economical way of raising temperature in the animal houses, do not provide all the benefits of radiant heat such as we know best in the form of sunlight and, in another form, in the domestic coal fire. In fact, central heating excellent in its place—is not healthy heating, as the prevalence of tuberculosis in steam-heating countries such as Sweden, Russia and the United States goes far to prove.

Passed Over Bonanza

Although any 40er, who made good in the gold rush to California in 1849 had no bone to pick with his fate, it is a comment that many of them and their brothers who were not so successful walked right over a rich bonanza in the southern part of Mexico, along the isthmus of Panama, over which many of them trocked. Along the river of the Winding Snake many 40ers walked on their way to the Pacific coast, little knowing that inter-prospectors would find a rich field of oil beneath their feet.

Honor in Installments

The officials of a certain church were anxious to obtain a "D. D." for their pastor, and a letter was sent to a certain "Diplomatic mill" asking for terms.

As the price mentioned for the honor was twice as great as the church was prepared to pay, another letter was forwarded to the authorities stating that they would purchase one "D. D." and the other which they had sufficient funds for the purpose.

Marriages That Led to Odd Relationships

Mysterious marriages sometimes arise out of second marriages. A Cornish girl married a man whose first wife was the sister of the girl's grand mother. This makes her her own mother's grand-aunt and her grand mother's sister-in-law. To her brother and sisters she is great-aunt. Finally, she is her own grand-aunt. Her husband is the brother-in-law of his grand nephew and grand-niece.

An elderly American became the grandfather of his six children, and his first wife's stepfather. He divorced his wife and married his mother-in-law. The widow who married in various previous marriages, says the Montreal Family Herald, "This man started by marrying the eldest of the daughters, and subsequently went right down the line. Finally he led the seventh and last sister to the altar."

A German village is puzzled over the relationship resulting from the double marriage of a father and a son. The father, a widower, married the village belle, she thus became a stepmother to her husband's forty-year-old son. The son, in his turn, met the girl's mother and married her. Consequently his father is now his son-in-law and he himself is now his grand-father. In the meantime the village belle presented her husband with a baby daughter. Clearly this child is sister-in-law to her grandmother!

Swing Plays Part in Hindu Religious Rites

One often finds in the near vicinity of a Hindu temple, says a writer in an Indian paper, two high stone pillars, sometimes 30 feet high, with a stone crosspiece, from which hang iron chains. These swings play an important part in the various festivals of the year, especially for the young people.

The very act of swinging on this sacred structure is pleasing to the deity of the temple, and when it is possible to combine both pleasure and worship, then it is not unnatural this form of exercise should be greatly appreciated. In certain seasons, especially the harvest season, the swing is in great demand, and religious ceremonies are performed by the priests of the temple.

On the top bar of the swing it is not unusual to find a number of earthenware chitties, which are the home of the sacred pigeons connected with the temple.

These swings are often built in the middle of the street, and they not infrequently constitute a real obstacle to traffic. But the authorities would hardly have great difficulty in persuading the temple people to agree to the removal of them.

Death in Triumph

Edvard Remenyi was a famous Hungarian violinist who made several world tours and settled in New York for some years. He died of apoplexy on the stage of the Orpheum theatre, San Francisco, on May 26, 1908. This was his first appearance on the vaudeville stage and he was enthusiastically received on playing two or three classical pieces. He responded with "Ode to Joy," which created tremendous applause. Then he commenced to play "Belshazzar," but after a few measures he leaned over and then fell forward on his face, dead. It is interesting to know that at one time the composer, Brahms, traveled with Remenyi and acted as his accompanist.

Hard to Fit

A city man, driving his automobile along a little-used country road, heard something rattle beneath his car. He stopped, looked back and saw a bright metal object lying in the road a short distance behind. It was a pinpoint, evidently lost by some farmer. It was fully half an hour before the text car came along, and its occupant, seeing the first man flat on his back under his vehicle by the roadside, stopped and asked what the trouble was.

The city man emerged and held up the pinpoint.

"This blooming thing dropped off my car," he said, "and I've been hunting for half an hour to find out where it belongs."—Exchange.

Chinese Societies

Chinese tongas are organizations, with a element of secrecy, of groups of Chinese for mutual protection and assistance. Basically, they are of a commercial character, the members being engaged in business, and they are thus trade associations. This rivalry occasionally breaks out into open warfare when aggressions by one tonga against another, consisting of unfair business practices, boycotts, etc., gives the rival tongas cause for offense. The tongas in the United States are branches of older organizations in Shanghai and Peking, China, and branches exist in other nations besides the United States.

They All Talk

A young man talks with pleasure, and an old man talks with ease; an old man talks like some men walk—sixty years, go on you please. The preacher talks of sins and of hell's eternal fury; the lawyer talks his jawbones at a mad but in jest. Each one talks and talks and each of his own speech proud, forgetful of the patent fact that money that talks loudest.—A. P. Ston Transcript.

Old Scottish Buildings Something of Mystery

All over Scotland are hundreds of forts built on hilltops. The White Cartburn, in Forfarshire, is a good example of these. It consists of four circles of stone, the diameter of the inner circle being 80 paces. The stones are 25 feet thick at the top and over 100 feet thick at the base.

Beyond the outer circle is a ditch with an earthen breastwork round it, while beyond this, again, runs a double entrenchment. The entrances to these various circles are zigzag, so that each remains covered by fortifications. The fort at Bamukin, in Aberdeen-shire, has five great stone circles, all flawlessly built, although there are no tools known to show how they were shaped.

These buildings are interesting, but not puzzling, but there are others, commonly known as "Pillar Burials," to which no use can be assigned. A burial is a single tower, round in shape, wide at the bottom and narrowing towards the top from the outside. The outer walls of these towers, shaped into circles, have no openings of any sort except the entrance. Obviously, then, the buildings were never intended for forts.

Inside the walls slope the reverse way, and between the two are countless rooms, often too small for people ever to have lived in them. The largest of these mystery towers is that of Rousay, in the Orkneys.

Giants Credited With Building of Causeway

The Giants' causeway is a group of basaltic rocks on the north coast of Antrim, Ireland. This promontory, which is a portion of the basaltic formations found in the country of Antrim and near Londonderry, projects into the North channel. It is called Giants' causeway from the legend that it was the beginning of a road which the giants began to build across the channel to Scotland. In past geological periods the basaltic rock seems to have been forced upward. After long periods of erosion a long line of perpendicular cliffs 500 feet high is left. For a distance of about 600 or 800 feet are many thousands of vertical columns. Most of them are six-sided; although some of them have five, seven, eight and even nine regularly formed sides. In diameter they range from 20 to 30 inches. The tops of these pillars form an uneven pavement, hence the name "causeway." Strictly speaking, the Giants' causeway is formed of three causeways, the Little, Honeycomb and Grand causeways.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Mistaken Atmosphere

The pastor had been holding revival services for some time. Much interest had been taken in them, but on this particular evening the meeting had been more than usually interesting. As the service drew to a close the pastor said in his concluding remarks, "What a heavenly atmosphere there is here this evening." Happening to glance at his wife, he saw a broad smile overspread their faces.

When the congregation had gone, he said to them, "What made you girls smile so when I was speaking?"

"Oh," said his wife, "we couldn't help it. Jack Smith (a noted village character) had been out hunting skunks and he came into the meeting without changing his clothes and sat down right behind us, and when you spoke of the heavenly atmosphere it was too much."—Harding Herald.

Our Debt to Children

Better teachers, better school equipment, it matters not what they cost. We owe them to our children. And we owe them more. We owe them our own example. What we do, they will live with us, will affect them most. Give them a chance to be useful in their childhood, to practice economy, to do for themselves. If the greatest men have usually been born in the country and later gone to the city, there is a reason. Huxley warns us not to let a child's schooling interfere with its education. It ought to have the best schooling our brains and our purses can procure. But its deepest education is in the hands of its parents.—Norman Hapgood, in Herald's International.

Sexton Kept Track

"I cannot get over it," remarked a farmer to his wife. "I put a twain-shill piece in the plate at the Kirk this mornin'—instead of my usual penny." The handle had noticed the mistake, and in silence he allowed the farmer to miss the plate for 23 consecutive Sundays. On the twenty-fourth Sunday the farmer again ignored the plate, but the handle stretched the lid in front of him and, in a tragic whisper, hoarsely said: "Your time up now, Sandy."—Edinburgh Scotsman.

"From Pillar to Post"

"From pillar to post" means from one thing to another without any definite purpose, hither and thither, and from one court of appeal to another without any decision. The origin of the expression is somewhat obscure. Some authorities say it refers to the tennis court. Others believe it to be an allusion to the schools of law in France before the center of the riding ground and the posts were the columns around the circumference of the ring.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Grumbler Never Leads

Pessimists are always in the rear, and never in the van in the march of progress. Your successful men and women are never chronic grumblers.—Bishop Samuel Fallows.

A Question

It is equally hard to decide whether there is an inhabited or outlived—Philadelphia Ledger.

Evolution of Trade Mark and Advertising

The trade mark was invented during a time of grand colonization. A business house in Cathago Nova (Carthage), which manufactured a delicious fish sauce and sent it to all parts of the world in hermetically sealed pitchers, burnt nine stars into the containers. The nine stars were the emblem of the sacred fish, the dolphins. A big lamp factory in the Roman Thimelund adorned all its lamps with the utensils of eye specialists—which those people who used the lamps should ever come to know!

Advertising, of course, grew more and more luxurious. It was a favorite child of commerce in Imperial Rome. Dozens of the best painters and sculptors worked for the wool-gins, silk houses, and the big weapon factories, which grew up like mushrooms where the Roman armies advanced.

People vied with one another in erecting altars to the protectors of trade and navigation; but on these altars they inscribed the names and trade of the donors, as a means of advertising. The Roman business men were as though seized by a fever of competition. Buryances, the pastry king of Rome, used his own tomb as an advertisement; his tombstone had the form of an enormous cake.—Exchange.

Legend Traces Hyacinth to Sorrow of Apollo

The wild hyacinth was originally found in Greece and Asia Minor. The ancient Greeks had a story about its origin to the effect that one day the god Apollo was playing a game of quoits with a young mortal. Hyacinth, of whom he was very fond, when Zephyrus, the god of the west wind, passed by, Zephyrus was jealous of Apollo and led the latter's quoit to strike and inflict a mortal wound. In his memory Apollo caused these beautiful and fragrant clustered blossoms to spring from the fallen drops of the young blood.

The hyacinth was brought to western Europe in the sixteenth century, and extensively cultivated by Dutch horticulturists. The original blue and purple blossoms were varied to numerous shades of pink, rose, yellow, scarlet and pure white.—Kansas City Star.

Lighthouse Story

Bishop's light rises near the Scilly Islands and gives a grim warning of the dangers of the coast. It is one of the most exposed lighthouses in the world and the three tenders have a long time during a recent storm the beams from Bishop's rock came near to falling. The light weighs several tons and revolves on supports resting in a circular trough of mercury. It is balanced so delicately a child may turn it by a touch of the finger.

On this night the tower was so shaken by the heavy seas that much of the mercury was spilled out over the concrete floor of the light chamber. The three guards fell on their knees, scooped up the mercury in their hands and poured it back into the trough.

Sunrise

When the sun approaches towards the gates of the morning, he first opens a little eye of heaven and sends away the spirit of darkness, and gives light to a cock, and calls up the birds to sing, and then he sends the fingers of a cloud and peeps over the eastern hills, thrusting out his golden horns, like those which decked the brows of Moses when he was forced to wear a veil because himself had seen the face of God; and still, while a man tells the story, the sun gets up higher, till he shows a fair face and a full light, and then he shines one whole day.—Jeremy Taylor.

Making Fine Distinctions

"A woman does not mind being called a kitten, but hates to be named a cat. A man, on the contrary, is flattered at being thought a dog, but resents being referred to as a puppy." "When a man describes a woman as a 'sympathetic soul,' you know that she has placed herself like a silent and unobtrusive sponge full in the flow of eloquence for a considerable number of hours, while he declaimed to her his conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils, in an uninterrupted monologue of complacency."—Mere Man, by Honor Bright.

Up Against It

"You've heard of a person being in a quandary, haven't you?" Peterson asked. "Sure," replied Brown. "Why?" "Well, I just had a letter from an old friend, and he's in one. He's been in rather bad health for some time, so the other day he went to see a doctor, and the doctor advised him to take two or three months' complete rest. That's where the quandary comes in. He's been working for the government for 15 years and doesn't know where to look for a more complete rest."

Settled Manhattan Island

In the first ship sent to the present territory of the United States by the Dutch-West Indies company, the New Netherlands, which landed in the Hudson river in 1624, Wallonia, led by Jesse de Forest, were passengers. The eight families left on Manhattan, which was named "New Avenna," constituted the first settlement of that now famous and valuable island and the first homesteaders, in fact, in the Middle Atlantic states.

"Silver" Foxes

The name silver fox, as commonly used by furriers, includes the dark phases of the ordinary red fox, variously called silver fox, silver black, or silver fox. The color of the fox of the Northeastern states and of foxes of the colder part of North America varies from red to black, and these extremes with the gradations between them form four more or less distinct phases, known respectively as red, cross or patch, silver and black.

Lazy President

An historical note says the wife of President John Adams, once at six o'clock every morning and made her own fire. This seems to establish the fact that Jack was a lazy old scoundrel.—New Orleans States.

Jealousy Common Fault

When two start into the world together, he is the stronger behind, and less his mind proves generous, will be disappointed with the other.

Old Ram Discovered Youth Will Be Served

Not long ago the Companion printed a story by Mr. C. A. Stephens entitled, "Cephus Tyrannus." The story reminded a reader of an experience that a cousin of his had with a ram that must certainly have been run on the spring of old Cephus. The ram was past middle age, was large and heavy and had a wicked set of horns that he used at every opportunity. He became so dangerous that he finally had to be confined by himself in a small enclosure.

My cousin, writes our correspondent, had obtained a younger and smaller ram for breeding purposes, and the sight of the newcomer filled the old ram with deepest hatred. He was never able to get at him, though he often put the enclosure to a severe test when the young ram would come in sight.

The end of the jealousy came suddenly one day when the gate of his pen was inadvertently left open. The old ram gave off an angry bawl and tore through the opening, making for his enemy, who was feeding with the ewes about 200 yards away. At the moment of defiance, the entire herd looked up, and the young ram came beelie. Not so the new lord, however. He stood his ground, braced all four feet and lowered his head to meet the oncoming rush. As the two collided there was a crash that was heard in the next field. The impact threw the old ram clear over the youngster's back, and like Cephus, when he landed some five feet to the rear, he lay quite still. Examination showed that his neck was broken. The young ram appeared dazed for a moment or two, then he leisurely trotted off to join the ewes at their new feeding place.—Youth's Companion.

Musk Ox Well Equipped to Cope With Enemies

The musk ox which makes its home in the northern part of Canada is a connecting link between wild cattle and sheep. Its horns are similar to the caprino and its flesh tastes like beef. It has next to its body a dense coat of soft, clean woolly hair, and through this grows a thin coat of very long, straight brown hair like that of the Tibetan yak, says the Winnipeg Free Press.

It has a tall, so short and small that the animal seems tailless. Their horns meet in a broad base over the top of the skull, drop far down, then sharply curve upward for several inches, terminating in sharp points. They are specially designed for puncturing the vitals of wolves and polar bears. The musk ox lives and thrives even up to the farthest north for hoofed animals.

Pretty Legend of Crosses

Near the place where the Blue Ridge and the Allegheny mountains meet, there is a hill called "Valley Mountain." On the side of this mountain, and nowhere else in the world, there are found the famous "fairies' stones." The mountaineers explain it by legends worthy of the myth-making Greeks. One story says "that ages ago, when the red men were masters here, these stones were showered down by the Great Spirit as a sign of salvation coming to the savage race." But the generally accepted legend—that one from which the name comes—is this: "When Christ was crucified on Calvary, the messengers carried the news to all parts of the world. When the tidings of his death reached the fairies in the rugged mountains they ceased their merry-making and at once began to make these crosses as mementos of the sad event."

Peacock and Turkey

"Look at me," said the peacock, spreading his tail and strutting grandly about. "Am I not handsome?" "Yes," replied the turkey, "in your own eyes, but I put up a perpetual Thanksgiving that I was not hatched so early as you."

"I should think Thanksgiving was rather a tender subject with you," rejoined the peacock, pluming himself. "Not at all," said the farmer, who had been listening to this interchange of civilities. "He is a tender subject for Thanksgiving!" And so saying, he caught up the turkey and carried him off to market.

"Well, well," said the peacock, "I'm glad I'm too handsome to eat, and that the feathers don't always make fine birds, according to the cook."—St. Nicholas Magazine.

Meant All She Said

They were evidently married and must have disagreed before they came to the lecture the other evening. For every once in a while she would deliver some cutting remark to him. But the best came when he shifted his chair so that it was directly in front of her. But he still tried to be polite. "Is it hard for you to look over my shoulder in public?" he asked.

"No," was the cutting answer, "not a bit harder than it is overlooking your faults in private."—Indianapolis News.

"Silver" Foxes

The name silver fox, as commonly used by furriers, includes the dark phases of the ordinary red fox, variously called silver fox, silver black, or silver fox. The color of the fox of the Northeastern states and of foxes of the colder part of North America varies from red to black, and these extremes with the gradations between them form four more or less distinct phases, known respectively as red, cross or patch, silver and black.

Couldn't Be Fooled

Alex had donned his first pair of trousers, and his grandmother was pretending he did not know him. "It's Alex, grandmother," he insisted earnestly. "Oh, no! It can't be Alex because Alex wears rompers." "But it is Alex, grandmother, because I was there and saw mother put them on me."

Nature's Great Law

Everything bears within itself an impulse to strive after a higher degree of divinity, and that is the great law of progress throughout all nature.

Early Advertising as Practiced in Old Rome

The restored ruins of Pompeii still show wall inscriptions and regular election campaign posters which often are signed by women. The same ruins tell us also about business advertising in ancient Rome. The show windows of Rome during the oldest time cannot be compared with their parallel in our modern trade world. For a long time it was impossible to buy the necessary glass, which was tremendously expensive. Besides, the window glass was milky and dim and often iridescent, at any rate not sufficiently clear and transparent, writes H. Doelling in Frankfurter Zeitung as translated for the Milwaukee Journal.

The Roman retailers therefore were content to exhibit their goods in an open stall in front of their homes. The shop itself was built into the home and served merely as a storeroom. The only means of advertising was the voice; he who barked loudest got the most customers.

Only after trade received a new stimulus by the conquests in the Orient and Occident did the Romans begin to adopt the business tricks of their tributaries, the Persians and Asiatic Greeks. They installed regular show windows in their shops. Their goods were safe from theft behind bronze grates and were provided with price tags and annotations. The merchants indicated on their shop doors the goods they furnished and their own names.

Sees Resin as Basis of Diamond Formation

Similarity between the X-ray pictures of the lattice structure of diamond crystals and of deuteroprene, a resinous substance, is the basis for the claim advanced by Hans Decker, a Jesu chemist, that diamonds originated from this material under enormous pressure and possibly heat, during long periods of time, according to the Berlin correspondent of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry.

Diamonds have long been known to be pure carbon in crystalline form, but what the original carbonaceous material was out of which they developed has been a subject of dispute. Resins contain hydrogen as well as carbon, and the theory of the German scientist assumes that, under the conditions of diamond formation, the hydrogen was slowly squeezed out of the raw material until at last nothing but pure crystalline carbon was left.

Father of Mail Service

Mail coaches were introduced into England in the year 1764 by one John Palmer of Bath. This worthy gentleman suffered much inconvenience from the mail leaving London on Monday and not reaching Bath until Wednesday. He traveled the country advocating reform, and was at one time a member of the House of Commons. He was the father of the system of flying mails, and he was able to inaugurate the service on the days of railways. Still, it was not much better than the system of the Roman mails, as established in the third century, by which it seems possible that letters might have reached Rome from England in three or four days if relays of galloping chariots could cover a thousand miles at 14 miles an hour.

Way to Judge Age

A moving picture man delights to tell of a proposal that happened while he was directing one of his latest pictures. It seems that a young writer had laid his heart at the feet of the leading woman and had been coldly turned down. "Perhaps it's best, after all," he remarked, acidly. "After all, a man of twenty-five would soon tire of a woman who never around thirty-two."

"But I'm not that old," gasped the woman. "Whatever led you to believe that I'm thirty-two?" "Well, perhaps you're not," admitted the young man, "but it certainly struck me that you must be somewhere near the freezing point."—Los Angeles Times.

Drilling Holes in Glass

Drilling holes in glass is not so very difficult. The old method utilized a discarded triangular file, ground to a sharp point and used in a brace with a slight pressure. The point of contact was moistened with turpentine. The more recent way and one that is quicker is to use a brass or copper tube with thin walls instead of a file, says Popular Science Monthly. The tube is placed in a brace and drilling is accomplished with powdered carborundum as a cutting agent. A guide of wood keeps the tube properly centered.

Odd Headpiece

The superb bird of paradise is one of the most remarkable of all that famous group, says Nature Magazine of Washington. It is only nine inches long, velvety black with purple and green metallic ornaments, including a large bright metallic green pectoral shield and another large forked velvety black erectile shield on the back of the neck. It lives in New Guinea.

Canadian Game Refugees

In the northern territory of Canada six game refugees with a total area of 261,800 square miles have been set aside for the exclusive use of Indians and Eskimos.

Effective Trap for Mice

When setting a mouse trap, try tying the bait in a piece of muslin. There is a certain amount of curiosity in a rodent that compels him to gnaw through the muslin to get the bait, and the trap to the muslin is sure to cause the spring to close the trap.

Weariness in Success

Leisure and solitude are the best effect of riches, because the mother of thought. Both are avoided by most rich men, who seek company and bustle, which are signs of better success of themselves.—Sir William Temple.

Parsi Put Their Dead on Towers of Silence

It was a terrifying sight and I was the first European to see it. I had to camouflage myself and to dress and act like a native of India in order to visit the sacred burial places of the Parsis, says a writer in "Deutsche Medizinische Wochenschrift." The burial places, or rather the storing places, of the dead are the Towers of Silence. Foreigners can never get there, dead or alive. All photographs are prohibited. Only by special influence was it possible for me to get near these strange towers. A Parsi to whom I had been recommended by a friend agreed to guide me.

On Malabar hill there is a grove, surrounded by a high wall. A road takes one up to the house of the guards. We happened to see the burial place of a rich Parsi. The body was dressed in white linen and lay on a network of strong linen straps held up by 12 carriers. The entire mourning crowd, dressed in white instead of black, followed the corpse two and two. Each couple was tied together by a white linen ribbon. Eagles and hawks circled about in the air.

I was unable to get to the Towers of Silence proper, but my companion described the burial procedure. The corpse is laid on the platform of one of the towers by men who are employed for their whole lifetime in this work. As the body begins to decay the eagles come down. The skeleton remains for about three months and then is buried in a valley.

Possibility Venus of Milo Never Had Arms

It may be some consolation to art lovers throughout the world, who have wondered in what position were the missing arms of the famous Venus de Milo statue in the Louvre, to learn that even the ancients themselves were perplexed on this point, according to a letter to the Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

Doctor Edde, a French physician, has just made known that during a recent visit to Egypt he came into possession of a small bronze statuette of the same period as the Venus de Milo. This statuette is an exact copy of the famous Venus, and like the original, it has no arms. Doctor Edde therefore concludes that the Venus de Milo never at any time had arms, and he believes that the sculptor, when he had carved out of stone such a divine form, gave up all idea of adding arms.

When the Venus de Milo was discovered on the island of Milo a large reward was offered to anyone who could find the arms, but, in spite of extensive search, nothing was discovered.

For Umbrella Protection

A well-known business man had a bad habit of losing umbrellas, and as they were usually expensive ones, he hit upon the happy idea of having his telephone number engraved on the handle. Since then he lost his umbrella half a dozen times, but owing to the telephone number he has always recovered it. The finder does not have to send it back; he rings up the number and the owner gladly calls for it. If the finder is dishonest he will not feel comfortable with that telephone number, and if he himself loses it, as often to one he will, a more honest person will eventually inform the original owner. The latter, of course, will know nothing of the umbrella's adventures, if only the umbrella could talk.

You Told Him!

Johnson had obtained work in a railway yard and was told to mark some trucks. "Here's a piece of chalk," said the foreman, "Mark each of 'em eleven." "A little later the foreman came around again to see how the new hand had been getting on. He found him sitting on a bucket regarding a truck thoughtfully. Marked upon it was a large 'I'.

"What does this mean?" asked the foreman. "Only one truck done, and the lumber wrong at that. I said eleven, not one." "I know," said Johnson, "but I couldn't think on which side of the 'I' the other 'I' goes!"

How to Win a Man

"A man longs for your love until you have given it to him—after that not only does he cease to desire you, but frequently ceases to love you also." Moral—Never show him that you love him—he'll be much happier if you don't.

"A man can be clumsy, stupid, ugly and mean, and yet have the eyes of a beautiful woman follow him adoringly about a room full of attractive people. Heaven knows what the explanation is!"

Orthodoxy

The orthodox Jew is bigoted and austere. He is a glutton for pain and sorrow. He likes to brood and pity himself. He has no instinct for the joy of living and disapproves of such a trait in others. But he does not take life indifferently; neither is he bumptious about it. He has strength of character and is able to thrive in the face of adversity. He believes in work. He is seldom a drunkard and eats with prudence and clean food. He is a man of spiritual ideals and a moral man. He loves law and order and seldom gets into the criminal class.—Sonya Levien, in Hearst's International.

Leaf That Will Hide a Man

The ape-man plant is a giant growth which once grew all over the world, but now it is found only on the volcanic slopes of Hawaii, where it grows in great profusion. It covered the earth millions of years ago, when gigantic animals roamed over the surface. The best specimens now present are found on the sides of Haleakala, in a gulch, where the conditions resemble those of a hothouse. A fully developed leaf of this plant is sufficient to hide a full-grown human standing behind it.

Real Test

Positive Proof That Woman Had Been Poor

She looked rich and acted rich, because she had married a rich man, yet at least one man in the New York Times discovered that she had once been poor. "Take it from me," she said, "there was a time, not so very long ago, when she was as poor as the rest of us."

"How did you discover that?" inquired her neighbor. "Because she knew where I keep all my housekeeping things. She knew that the tea-caddy was in the writing desk, that the cheese biscuits and other 'hies beloved of mice were in that box under the sofa, that the alcohol for my stove was in the corner behind the washstand, that the butter and milk were on the window ledge and that the eggs and other foods were in a box on the bottom shelf of the wardrobe. When we were cooking she went straight to the spot and got every one of those things without asking once where they were, which is something that a person who had not kept house in one room could never have done."

When Barrett Wendell Was Roused to Anger

For all his scholarly dignity, Barrett Wendell, Harvard professor, now and then lost his temper and especially at football games. In his biography, M. A. DeWolfe Howe recalls an occasion when Doctor Wendell and his daughter were greatly annoyed by an excited fan directly in front of them, who kept leaping up and cutting off their view.

When protests proved of no avail, Wendell upraised his professional cane and brought it crashing down on the man's head, breaking his hat.

A roar of laughter went up from the delighted students who witnessed the incident, increasing when the man turned around shouting furiously: "Who did that?" "I did," replied Wendell calmly, "Come out and I'll buy you a new hat."

They exchanged cards and were gone from the game long enough to make the necessary purchase.
