SAYS SERBIA KNEW

Arthur Ponsonby, under secretary of foreign affairs under the regime of Ramsey MacDonald in England, has made what he is pleased to call "sensational disclosures" in connection with the murder of Archduke Francis Ferdinand at Sarajevo, Serbia, in 1914, which has been credited with starting the world war. Ponsonby says that Serbia knew of the plot of the murder, and the Serbian government was a party to the plot.

Should the statement of Ponsonby be all that is claimed to be, and should every statement be a solemn fact, there is no reason why it should have started the world war and led to such an international holocaust. The title of an archduke should be no more important than the life of plain John Smith. One's status, position, God-fearing plain citizen, is a matter of fact, is worth a hundred grand dukes. A grand duke is not end has never been an official of any country. He is merely a waiter waiting for dead men's shoes. If one explain them to him, and give him understanding of them, and just what he might expect in case of loss. There probably is not a holder of an insurance policy in America that has in his policy just what he thinks he has. That being true, he ought to find out exactly what he has, and know what to expect in case of loss.

GERMANY AFTER EBERT

It is plain from dispatches coming out of Berlin that the late President Ebert of Germany died, that country not only lost a good ruler, a statesman and a constructive head of its government, but that the German people lost their most sincere friend, and world stability lost one of its foundation stones.

President Ebert has been sincerely mourned in his own country, and will be sincerely missed in other parts of the world for all of us are affected more or less by the peaceful and constructive conditions in any great country.

What will come after Ebert? That is the question now agitating not alone Germany, but the entire world. It would be a distinct step backward in the eyes of the world's great democracies, to see Germany revert to monarchy, or to that worse condition of soviet rule, which is always possible in any country that seethes with such unrest as has marked Germany since the end of the world war.

CONGRESSIONAL SALARIES President Coolidge in the face of his fight for economy and much criticism of the raise of congressional salaries, signed the metropolitan press, signed the bill making the pay of congressmen $10,000 a year, instead of $7,500. It took courage to do that but the president had the courage.

A very great deal of the criticism of our congressmen is wrong. It started out like the ancient mother-in-law joke started, and has become a sort of a fixture and stock in trade with our newspaper humorists, and national political writers. It is unfair and unjust criticism. In a body of nearly 500 men, it is not astonishing that we find a few who are unfit and unworthy representatives of the people. It is not remarkable that we find a few who are incompetent, inept and wholly out of place.

But as a whole the American congress is made up of men who are the best brains and character of their districts. These labor ceaselessly and ardently for their constituents and their country. They are men of the type who could earn very much more attending to their own business, than they could earn in congressional salaries at $10,000 a year.

The American people want able and better men in the national congress. They ought to be, and we believe they are willing to pay salaries adequate to the service rendered. The congressional salary increase is quite justified, and Mr. Coolidge was quite right in signing the measure.

PRESIDENT'S PARDONING POWER President Coolidge, about a year ago, pardoned Philip Grossman of Chicago, who had been sentenced to pay a fine of $10,000 and spend a year in prison. He was a Chicago night-logger, who was charged with contempt of court.

Grossman was fined and sentenced to prison for contempt of Justice Landis' Court, before Landis became grand mogul of organized baseball. He was never arrested, and when his name appeared a little more than a year ago, as one of those pardoned by President Coolidge the case was opened, and the circuit court ruled that the president had exceeded his authority in pardoning him. The case was appealed to the supreme court, with the result that that tribunal ruled that the president has unlimited power to pardon anyone convicted of any charge. It denies the contention of the circuit court of Illinois, that in case of contempt the power of a court transcends the power of the president.

PROGENITORS OF BIRDS It is said that birds originated from the sun.

Tommy, aged four, was very anxious to whistle. "He had tried," but all in vain. While he was out walking one day with his mother, a colored boy passed them whistling, and Tommy cried excitedly: "Mamma, buy me that mouth!"—Charleston News and Courier.

From an English book: "He is called of his little whether there were fish in the river. The man, however, took out of it y'd be getting the taste of salmon in your tea."—Boston Transcript.

A poem is not alone any work or composition of the poets in many or few verses, but even one verse alone is sometimes a perfect poem.

MR. DAWES IS ROUGH

Charles G. Dawes, when he took the oath of vice presidential office on March Fourth in the Senate Chamber, in the presence of that august body, took occasion to challenge the traditions of the senate; to criticize senate rules and precedents; to shake a belligerent finger in senatorial faces, and, as one correspondent put it, to have the attitude: "Now you boys have been naughty. You have had fun out of other teachers, but here is a new master, and it will be necessary for you to be on perfect behavior all the time."

It was natural for senators to resent the Dawes attitude. It was unbecomingly, and it was unfortunate, for Mr. Dawes can make friends for the administration, or he can make enemies. The administration needs friends. The country needs harmonious administration, at Washington. Good government can not come out of a condition where the law-making powers are at constant warfare with the executive department. We need all the brains we can get in Washington. We need all the work, all the diplomacy, all the fair dealing, all the relief legislation that is possible. The American people want harmony, and in the end, they will have it.

HAVE YOU READ YOUR POLICY? How many holders of insurance policies have ever read them? The policy may be on your life, and be the only thing between your family and starvation in case of your death, but have you read it? It may as you think, protect all your earthly possessions—but have you read it?

Every holder of an insurance policy should read it and understand it. He should see its many intricacies and provisions. He should understand its provisions, or failing to understand them, should have someone explain them to him, and give him understanding of them, and just what he might expect in case of loss. There probably is not a holder of an insurance policy in America that has in his policy just what he thinks he has. That being true, he ought to find out exactly what he has, and know what to expect in case of loss.

NEED MORE JUDGES Emory C. Buckner, New York City attorney took over the office of United States District cases last week, and found 12,000 cases pending. 8,000 of these were criminal cases, and 4,000 were crimes charged under the Volstead Act.

Mr. Buckner says that it is essential that eight or ten additional judges be appointed in the southern district of New York; if the docket is ever to be cleaned up. This call for help from the new district attorney should be heeded. Crime may be expected to increase and criminals may be expected to flourish unless there are judges enough to clean up this great mass of untried cases.

The United States supreme court last week decided that busses carrying interstate commerce can not be denied the right to the roads in other states than those wherein they have paid a license fee. This ruling states that those wherein they have paid a license fee. This ruling is a tremendous influence on the increase and operation of motor bus lines in America. These have already become a very important part of our transportation system.

Prof. Charles Arragon, a chemist of Lausanne, Switzerland, declares that the invention of Jean Mith, a baker in the village of Pully, will keep bread fresh for ten months. The process will also keep meats fresh for two years, he says. Perhaps this may explain why the bread we get now doesn't taste like that mother made?

The republic of Chili has just succeeded in suppressing an uprising. Caused, no doubt, by that state radio chestnut: "Yes I stuck my head out the window last night and got Chilli."

The labor members of the British House of Commons went on a strike last week. An uncommon thing for the commons.

SAVAGE RUSSIAN CUSTOM Wild geese and their feathers in summer, losing almost all the feathers from their wings simultaneously. During this season they are helpless and the natives of northern Russia take advantage of their condition and not them by the thousands. These are left to rot in the mud of the swamps and fed to the hungry dogs and are even eaten by the indiscriminating native.

RICH AFRICAN TERRITORY Oil Rivers was the name once applied to the territory on the west coast of Africa now known as the Niger coast. It contains six main rivers, which descend their old general name from palm oil, the chief product of the adjacent districts. The country was visited first by missionaries early in the nineteenth century, and later by traders who established plantations and factories in the interior.

THE SOLUTION Tommy, aged four, was very anxious to whistle. "He had tried," but all in vain. While he was out walking one day with his mother, a colored boy passed them whistling, and Tommy cried excitedly: "Mamma, buy me that mouth!"—Charleston News and Courier.

Weapons of Warfare of American Indians

Though some Indians were more proficient at it than others, and the methods of some tribes were more advanced than those of others, there was very little secret about the making of warlike implements, and all the Indians knew how. Flints and similar stones were used not so much because of their hardness as for the reason they could be flaked off and fashioned into desired shapes as arrow, lance, spear or harpoon heads, knives, saws or scrapers. The flint was to be found in open fields, shallow beds and elsewhere, and the tribes camped occasionally near the larger supplies to break off with rocks or hammers the quantities and sizes of flint chips needed. These were carried home, to be flaked off and worked into shape with the aid of sharp-pointed implements of bone. The waste and refuse of the process, as well as the tools employed in it, have often been found on the sites of early Indian dwellings. The products of this primitive industry range in size from tiny arrow tips to ceremonial spear heads more than a foot long.—Chevrolet Photo-Dealer.

Moslem's Holy Period

The Ramadan is the ninth month of the Moslem year, observed as a fast in commemoration of the first revelation received by Mohammed. It commences with the new moon of the ninth month of the year and ends on the day preceding the great festival of Bairam. From dawn to sunset of each day during this period the strictest abstinence is enjoined. All eating, drinking, bathing, smoking and other bodily pleasures—even swallowing one's saliva—are forbidden. At night, however, the satisfaction of the most necessary desires is permitted. As the Mohammedan year is lunar, consisting of 354 days, 21 hours, it follows that in the course of 33 years the Ramadan passes through all the seasons. It is said that the fast of the Ramadan is much less strictly observed now than in former times.—Kansas City Star.

Slanguage and Language

Slang is perpetually changing; language much more slowly. The common spoken language of any one period, as it were, the melting pot from which the pure gold of its literary language is distilled. The slang, having contributed its quota, dies; but the literary language lives on. It has emerged from the crucible pure coin for ever. Any great language, such as Greek or Latin, is eternal, for in the hands of a master it becomes a thing of power, a faith for the living truth. And once that faith has poured through it, it is immortal, a radiant garment of thought, no longer the tongue merely of merchants and artisans, but the speech of gods and heroes.—Nineteenth Century.

Happiness

Happiness of all elusive things is so elusive that often one doesn't know that he has it. Ten years afterward he realizes when it was his.

Gasoline Is Produced from Plants to Be Grown on "Oil Farm"
Following his announcement that he has successfully produced gasoline for automobiles from various kinds of plants, a French scientist has proposed that a tract of 500,000 acres of land in western Africa be devoted to the cultivation of this vegetation for the production of 90,000,000 gallons of petroleum annually. His process is based on the fact that artificial petroleum can be manufactured from certain so-called "ether salts," and these are found in a broom plant and in other fibrous and textile vegetation. Gasoline is next obtained in the ordinary manner, which, the professor asserts, is "exactly like that produced in Pennsylvania and equally good for use in motors." Utilization of the fibrous by-products of the vegetation on the proposed "oil farm" in the silk industry and in paper mills is feasible, he claims, and will afford an additional source of revenue.

Effective Post Puller
Farmers and others who have frequent occasions to pull posts, will find the device shown in the drawing effective for doing this work. It is portable and can easily be operated by one man. The upper details clearly show its construction. It consists of two parts made of heavy bar iron. The lower part and

The handle or lever are integral, being bent to the shape shown and the shaft flattened and drilled to receive a pivot pin. A plate is welded on to serve as a foot. The upper part is forked at one end to straddle the flattened elbow and is pointed at the other end to grip the post. In use, the device is set in the position indicated and the lever is pulled upward, which causes the post to rise.

Wireless Locomotive Run by Steam
Charged with water and live steam at a boiler plant before it is started on its task, a wireless locomotive has been tested successfully. It is said to run two or three hours without recharging, a process that requires about twenty minutes. Economy is claimed in operating as no fireman is needed and the expense of cleaning smoke from the walls of adjacent buildings is saved.

The transmission range of the high-power radio stations that terminate in the United States totals over 40,000 miles.

Pistol Slot in Night Stick Helps Policemen Shoot Straight
Police night sticks with a steel slot in one end to hold the revolver butt have been tested by the New York department as an aid to accuracy in firing. Holding the club against one shoulder and putting the handle of his revolver in the slot, the policeman can take a steadier aim.

Keeping Tools Out of the Transmission
Anyone who has dropped a wrench, pair of pliers, or other tool into a Ford transmission while adjusting the bands, knows how difficult it is to recover it. Usually it slides down to the bottom, where it is practically impossible to reach it, unless one takes of the transmission cover, which is a long job. Many mechanics try to prevent such mishaps by tying a length of cord or wire to the tools, but this makes it rather unhandy to use them. A better method is to stuff a rag between the gears and the case so that all open parts are closed and the tools cannot fall through if dropped.

Small glue tubes are hard to keep at hand on the desk or in the drawer without having some of the contents ooze out over the papers or on the surface of the desk. A simple holder, which eliminates this trouble, can be made by cutting three sides of the carton in which the tube is packed so that the upper end of the tube projects. The upper portion is then doubled over and tacked to the wall.

Support for Plant Stalk
A charming support to hold steady the stalks of a plant in a pot consists of a slender stick with a painted wooden bird nailed or glued at its top. Such a bird may be cut in silhouette from thin soft wood and painted in bright colors with oil or house paints, and afterward varnished. Even though the work is somewhat roughly done the effect will still be good.

FIVE REASONS Why Classified Advertising Will Sell What You Do Not Need

Chelsea Standard reaches the largest number of people who are in the market for your unused machinery, household goods, or live stock.

Standard has secured unusual results for those who have used its Classified Columns.

Standard Readers have learned to look over the Classified Columns even before reading the local news.

Experience has convinced hundreds of the effectiveness of such advertising—why not you?

But, not least,—the expense of Classified advertising is negligible compared with results obtained. Hundreds of dollars of merchandise and farm equipment sold every year with little outlay of money.

For that material you have long since ceased to need, but is still in good condition—some one wants it. Be glad to pay cash to get it. Don't wait until house work time when rush of work compels you to destroy rather than "cash in" on such material.
