GOOD DRAINAGE OUTLET POSSIBLE FOR CHELSEA

Continuation of Mill Creek Dredging Would Give Village Excellent Fall and Sewer Outlet.

Clayton E. Deane, County Drain Commissioner, was in Chelsea Tuesday on business in connection with his office and in company with a representative of the Standard, made a tour of inspection over the ditch being dug north and east of the village. The dredge of L. C. Fosket & Son, Howell, with three men in attendance, is working on the excavation of Mill Creek which leaves its "young canal" or ditch—approximately seven feet deep and sixteen feet wide at the bottom.

The ditch, one of the best jobs ever done in the county, is more than half finished, less than a mile remaining to be dug. Upon its finish, farmers owning land adjacent to the ditch will have available for cultivation a large number of acres which heretofore have grown only mow hay and sometimes too wet to cut even that. Field after field of excellent, fertile soil will thus be turned into productive land to yield its owner reasonable return on the investment.

A new phase of the ditch-digging problem has been advanced by the drain commissioner. Inasmuch as the enlarged drain will reach from the railroad east of town two miles to the village limits on the northeast, the commissioner believes Chelsea is passing up a real opportunity if steps are not taken to have the drain extended west past the village. This latter extension would open for Chelsea excellent means for sewer outlet which at the present time is quite unsatisfactory and which has been a problem to village authorities for years past. An enlarged drain would give the village ample outlet for both surface and sewer drains, create a more sanitary disposal of village waste because of greater "fall" and swifter currents and would permit quicker drainage in times of heavy rainfall.

In view of the fact that such work must surely be done within a few years if it is not done now, there comes the question whether it would be better and cheaper to have the work extended past the village outlet WHILE THE MACHINE IS ON THE JOB. According to Mr. Deane there is no question but that a considerable saving could be made by having Mr. Fosket leave his machine on the ground until legal technicalities could be disposed of and the work started.

That the cost would be negligible, compared with the benefits to be derived, is seen when the price of the present digging is considered. Approximately two miles were awarded Mr. Fosket at a price of $7,460. Another mile would carry it past the village and deducting from half that amount what a contractor would charge for moving his machine there is left a very small expense for an outlet sufficient to last Chelsea for many a year to come. While these figures are only rough estimates there is reason to believe the proposition should be investigated further with a view to quick action on the part of the village.

"AWAKENING" AT MICHIGAN STATE FAIR GROUNDS

Detroit, June 17.—Shadukiam Grotz, producer of the annual Awakening spectacle at Detroit, has announced the selection of the Michigan State Fair grounds as the location for the 1925 spectacle, which will be produced under the title of Cleopatra. The big fire spectacle will be given 15 nights, June 27 to July 11.

The attraction this year will have a huge Egyptian scenic setting over 500 feet long, covering the home stretch on the infield of the Michigan State Fair mile track.

George Hoskyn, who directed the first Awakening in 1922, has charge of the stage production and the Gordon Fireworks Company will produce the pyrotechnic phases.

FRUIT CROPS WILL BE SMALLER THAN LAST YEAR

Only fair crops of apples, peaches and pears are now expected in the United States this year, Department of Agriculture crop officials declared today. Frosts in late May reduced prospects in many scattered sections, particularly in some of the central states, Virginia, Michigan, and portions of New York.

The condition of apples on June 1 was nearly 10 per cent below the usual average on that date. The northwestern states expect more apples than were picked last year, but for the country as a whole the crop seems likely to be lighter, although much depends on the rainfall during the next few months.

Peach production shows a large increase in California where most of the crop is canned and dried, but in practically all other important states the crop is expected to be substantially smaller than last year. Even in Georgia, where many young trees are coming into bearing, the crop is expected to be less than 7,000,000 bushels compared with 8,898,000 bushels last year.

The pear crop also is reported only fair this year. California alone among the important producing states, excepting materially larger crop than in the preceding season.

4 HOMES, 2 CHURCHES BURN AT GRASS LAKE

Chelsea Fire Department Responds to Hurray Up Call From Neighboring Village Tuesday Noon.

Fire on Tuesday visited Grass Lake with the result that the village to the west suffered one of the greatest if not the greatest losses in the history of the town, when four dwelling houses and two churches were burned to the ground between the hours of 11 a. m. and 3 p. m. Loss is variously estimated to total approximately $100,000, with very little insurance to cover.

The fire is thought to have started in an apartment of the Mrs. Chas. Rogers house, on the north side of Main street directly across the street from the Congregational church. From here it spread to the homes of Mrs. E. Craft, Mrs. Geo. Preston and Mrs. Ella Bunker, then to the old Baptist church and finally to the Congregational church on the south side of the street. For four hours the fire raged unchecked save by the heroic efforts of the Grass Lake, Chelsea and Jackson fire departments who responded to hurry-up calls from the stricken village.

William Dolson, Jackson fireman, narrowly escaped death when the roof of the church annex caved in under the impact of a falling chimney pinning him under fallen timbers. With the assistance of other firemen he was extricated and carried to safety, having sustained a severely wrenched back and possibly internal injuries.

A limited supply of chemicals used by the Grass Lake and Chelsea fire departments and the fact that the Jackson pumper was forcing water nearly a quarter mile up hill, necessarily limiting the pressure at the nozzle, contributed largely to the failure to check the rapidly advancing flames. However, concentration of effort on checking the fire at the Congregational parsonage, a large business block adjacent on the west and the Methodist church next on the west. These caught fire at different times but the blaze was extinguished by quick work on the part of sentinels on the roofs of each building. Thirty-five lengths of hose were laid from the M. C. supply tank to the burning buildings, a total of 1700 feet.

One of the most spectacular scenes of the entire blaze occurred between 2:30 and 3:00 o'clock in the afternoon when the tall spire of the Congregational church caught fire and the blaze mounted to the very top, forming a veritable flaming sword pointing heavenward. With many exclamations of wonder and awe the hundreds of people gathered in the vicinity of the fire waited expectantly for the steeple to take its final plunge into the roaring furnace within the church walls. For ten or fifteen minutes this sentinel of more than fifty years duty, defied the ravages of the fire and then with a mighty plunge buried itself in the ruins beneath.

Several carloads of people from Chelsea and vicinity drove to Grass Lake during the fire when word was passed around that "Grass Lake is burning up". Valuable assistance rendered by the Chelsea fire department was highly commended by residents of the village who put up a valiant fight to prevent spread of the flames to other buildings.

AUTO RACES AT DETROIT FAIR GROUNDS JULY 4-5

Detroit, June 17.—The Michigan State Fair grounds will become the hub of dirt-track auto racing in America this year with the announcement by Secretary George W. Dickinson of the Michigan State Fair that auto races will be held at the fair grounds July 4-5 under sanction of the International Motor Contest Association.

The races will be featured by a world's championship 150 mile race open to the world to all cars irrespective of piston displacement or motor classification. Offices for the races have been opened by Bill Breitenstein, manager, at the Fort Shelby Hotel here.

NEW FIRE WORKS LAW

The new fire works law as passed by the last legislature and which took immediate effect, permits the sale of fireworks at retail from June 21 to July 5 only, and permits them to be exploded on three days of the year only, July 3, 4, 5. Blank cartridges and exploding canes are banned, firecrackers are limited as to size, cannons, tissue balloons, etc. are taboo under the law. The penalty for violation of this new fireworks law is a fine up to $100, or imprisonment not exceeding 90 days in county jail, or both fine and imprisonment as court says. This new act is designed to still further eliminate the danger from future Independence Day celebrations. The small boys can still have their fun for the three days mentioned and they should be permitted to have a good time as we have all done in the past, but the new law is to prevent accidents, lockjaw and the hundreds of deaths which have been caused by July 4 powder and dynamite explosions.

WORLD TRADE REVIVAL

Predictions of a revival of world trade are being made by men who are familiar, not only with our own domestic situation, but with conditions throughout the world. Speaking before the United States Chamber of Commerce recently, Henry M. Robinson, Los Angeles banker and member of the Committee of Experts of the Reparation Commission, declared that conditions were being re-established to permit once more the international flow of credit checked following the war, and predicted this would be one of the most important factors in reconstituting industrial and commercial trade. "The world's population expanded during the war," said the California banker. "There are large areas with great natural resources still to be developed. Political and economic conditions are becoming more stable in most parts of the world. And so we may expect a resumption of foreign capital investments of the kind which contributed so largely in the decades before the war to the international movement of goods and services. It is possible that the generation of new capital through this medium will contribute largely to the solution of governmental debt and reparations problems. In the reparations payments may possibly be found the greatest stimulus for the development of new areas, because if Germany cannot pay in gold, and goods must be taken or the balance left in the German bank, we will find that the pressure to realize will develop ingenious plans for taking out of Germany the products of that country which can be used in the development of new areas, where such products would then not come into direct competition with the products of the country having such credit. And it would furnish a margin for the obtaining of a loan on any given project for the financing of the balance of the construction."

BE CAREFUL WITH FIRE

Michigan highways are being placarded with signs asking automobilists to be careful about starting fires. "Throw the stub on the road" and "Help prevent fires" are some of the slogans being used in an effort to check the great and increasing toll of the fire demon in this state. It is now the season of the vacationists. Many of them are careless to a criminal degree. They ride along in their automobiles and throw lighted cigar and cigarette stubs in the dry grass and bushes along the highway and leave live coals in their campfires. Fires swept over thousands of acres in Michigan last summer and fall, and due to dry weather have been raging in some parts of the state this spring. The loss is appalling and every citizen bound for a vacation this year should have it thoroughly impressed upon his mind the great care that should be exercised in preventing this unnecessary destruction of the remaining timber zones in Michigan, which at one time boasted of the greatest forests in all the world.

NEED OF FLYING FIELDS

When railroads were first operated in this country, before the Civil war, little was thought of them for several years. Then the public awakened to their importance, and at once there was a mad scramble to get railroads to build up trade and industrial centers. Such towns and cities as had the foresight to go after transportation facilities first were the places that made the greatest growth.

We are at the threshold of another era of transportation development. There is every sign that commercial flying is going to come into general use at a very early date. Already much progress has been made, and freight carrying routes have actually been established.

The cities that first are supplied with flying fields and landing places will become important places on the air lines.

SHAVEN IS SHAVEN

Clem Shaver, chairman of the national democratic committee, had a deficit of $200,000 on account of the campaign of 1924. Raising a campaign deficit for a defeated candidate or party is not one of the best outdoor sports. But Mr. Shaver proves he inherited his name honestly—he has shaved the deficit down to nothing, and thus earned the undying gratitude of his party. All the talk of shelving or removing Mr. Shaver from the chairmanship of his party, after this demonstration of financial ability, will have little or no effect, unless Mr. Shaver figures he has done enough for his party already.

Maybe it would be a good plan to organize a lot of Sunday school picnics and help get rid of all this dry weather.

In the good old days more than six rigs in a row generally meant a funeral procession. Now we think nothing of a traffic jam a couple miles long.

An Eastern steamship company is offering a trip around the world for $890. A lot of the boys seem to prefer taking a couple drinks of hooch and watching the world go around.

REPORT OF THE COW TRIBES NEW YORK

as of Dayton, Tenn., in the case of the State of Tennessee vs. John T. Scopes, in which the professor is charged with "teaching evolution, in violation of the laws of the State of Tennessee."

Not in a score of years has such foolish legislation been enacted by any state as the act to prevent the teaching of the theory of evolution in the schools of Tennessee.

Since the beginning of recorded time, men have been seeking the truth and the light. The human race has made greater progress since free America has afforded them a home wherein they could follow all the paths that men have thought led thence. We believe something worth while has been accomplished. It is quite probable that the world would never have progressed to the point we have reached today had it not been that America had furnished such asylum.

We believe religion is better. We believe education is better. We believe commerce, industry and transportation are better than they have ever been. This is because men have been free to go out into distant worlds and learn something of the material universe; to delve deep into the motives of men and learn some great spiritual truths; to follow the bent of invention and find new machinery, new means of communication—new modes of transportation.

Gallileo was in prison because he invented the telescope and held to the theory that the earth is a sphere and revolves around the sun. Had the same spirit prevailed when Marconi discovered means of communicating by wireless, giving us our present-day radio and all its wonders—not to say miracles—Marconi would have been hanged. Had the same spirit prevailed when the first radio set was put up, and the first broadcasting was heard over it, that prevailed at Salem when they burned witches, the man with the radio set would have been drawn quartered, burned and his ashes tickled off into the four winds of the heavens with a feather.

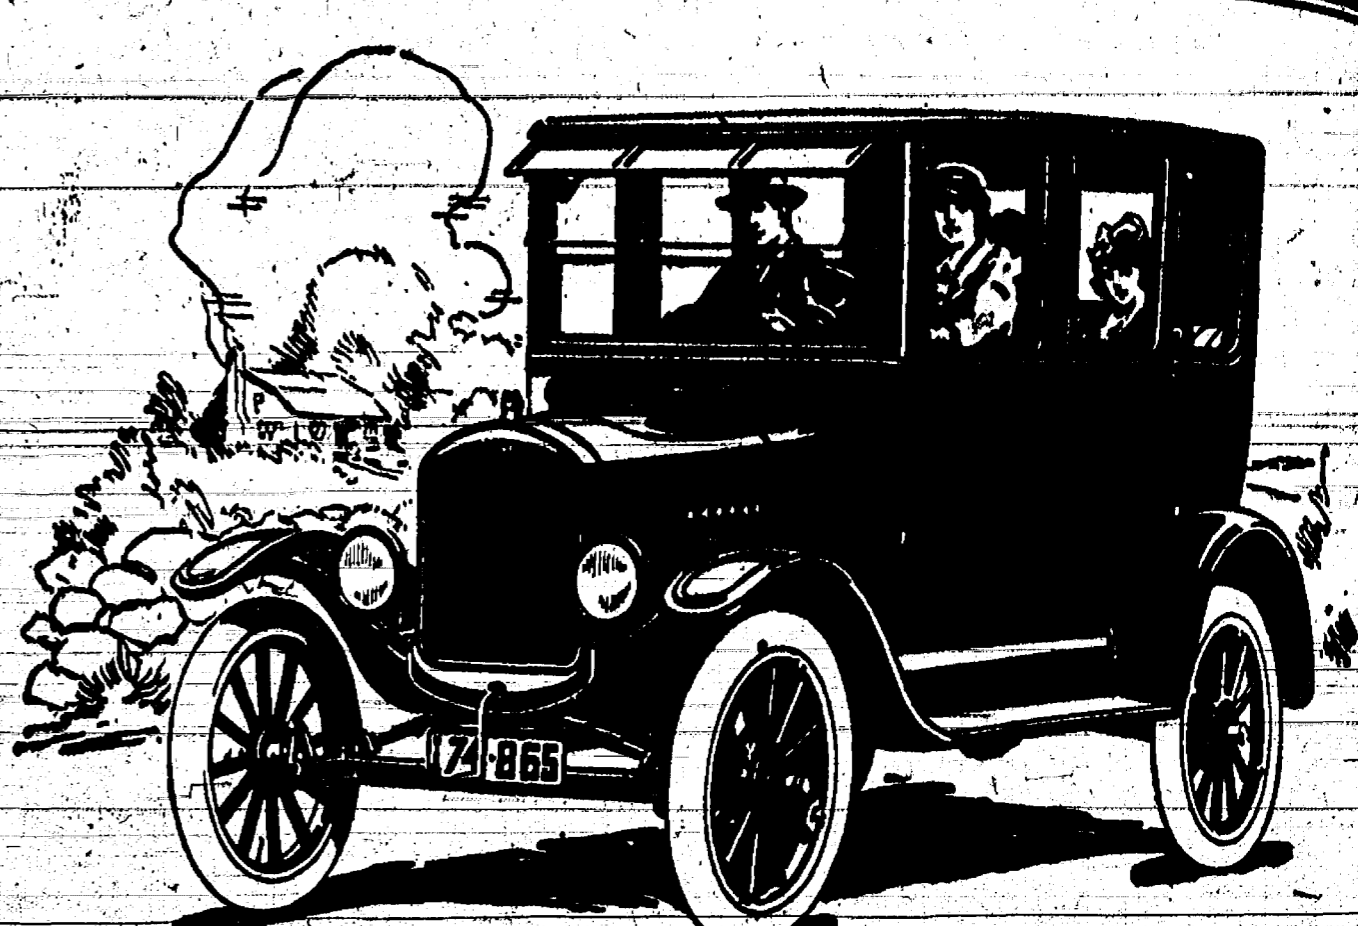

Men must be free to think. They must be free to work, to invent, to discover, to educate the world.

The theory of evolution has never had such publicity—it has never been so much talked about, so generally known as it has since the law was passed in the state of Tennessee barring the teaching of evolution. The theory of evolution does not teach that man was descended from the monkeys. It teaches that he was evolved out of an undifferentiated protoplasm, and through very long periods of years developed into the living being he is. That is in no wise in conflict with the scriptural story of creation. The scriptures are written in symbols and parables.

Let us have the truth. If it comes through the teaching of the theory of evolution it will benefit us just as if it came through any other source.

AN IMPORTANT CHANGE IN POLICY

STUDEBAKER herewith announces the discontinuance of the custom of presenting a new line of automobiles each year. Instead of bringing Studebaker Cars dramatically up-to-date once in twelve months, "we shall keep them up-to-date all of the time"—with every improvement and refinement made available by our great engineering and manufacturing resources. This policy not only directly benefits present Studebaker owners, but it also enables purchasers of new cars to obtain models that are always modern—without the necessity of waiting for annual changes, and without the danger of their new cars becoming obsolete.

THIS COSTS LEAST.

Because the electric fan is so universally used, we are apt to forget two very remarkable things about it. Before its invention, there was no way to create a steady artificial breeze in your home. Although having once known this luxury, people would pay any price for it.

Cutting Circle of Glass
The following has been suggested as a good method of cutting a circle of glass from a square piece. First mark the glass with a circular glass cutter and then mark four diagonal lines with a straight glass cutter from the circumference to the center. Turn the glass over on a flat surface and tap lightly with a pointed tool such as a cold chisel over the markings.

"Special Delivery"
The Post Office department says that "special delivery" service is the prompt delivery of mail by messenger during prescribed hours to persons who reside within the carrier limits 31 city or delivery offices, or within one mile of any post office, or to patrons of the rural service, who reside more than one mile from the post office but within half a mile of a rural route.

Destroying Ants
The use of carbon disulphide is recommended to destroy ants. Pour a little of the disulphide into the openings of the hills, and then close them up. The vapors from the disulphide penetrate all the chambers and kill larvae as well as adults, if enough has been used. One treatment often does the work.

The term "four-cycle," used in connection with an internal combustion engine, means that there are four piston strokes for the accomplishment of the processes in the engine. These strokes are termed the intake stroke, the compression stroke, the power stroke and the exhaust stroke.

The Total Stranger

By MARGUERITE E. ALLEN

(© 1912, Western Newspaper Union.)

THE dense underbrush forming a wall along one side of the pine wood shanty stirred slightly—was further agitated—and the figure of a man emerged from it. He half rose to his feet and with a loping run made for the front door. His eyes glittered feverishly as he cast a fearful glance over his shoulder and knocked at the door.

"Come in," said a woman's voice.

The speaker, Myra Evans, an attractive woman, was sitting in a corner of the room engaged in nipping up a large feather bed spread on the floor in front of her. She asked her clear tranquil eyes: "What do you want?" she asked gently.

"For God's sake hide me, they're after me," he groaned.

"What did you do?"

He lifted his head and his eyes seemed to devour her, hungrily, beseechingly. "I've—I please, please help me." He rose and stood staring at her. "I killed a man—listen."

It was over the cards. He was going to shoot—I got him first—that's all."

The woman went over to the window and drew aside the curtain. "They're coming," she said. "Don't be afraid. I'll see that they don't get you." She sat down again and lifted the thick mattress. "Here—get under this."

The clattering of horse's hoofs was heard the next instant, and the voice of the sheriff, calling—"Oh, Mrs. Evans!"

"Come right in, sheriff," she called. "Sorry to disturb you, Mrs. Evans," said the sheriff, "but we're on the trail of a fellow who killed a man up to Blake's saloon. Seen anyone about?"

"Search the place, sheriff, at your leisure," returned Mrs. Evans still smiling.

After a hurried examination of the house and barn, the sheriff returned to apologize once more for disturbing her.

I heard up to Stony Creek that you were going to marry the postmaster next week, Mrs. Evans. Is that true?" She blushed, nodding her head.

"Glad to hear it," he answered heartily. "You should have married long ago."

"I would have," but it will be seven years next Monday since my first husband disappeared, and the law don't give me the right to marry again until that time is up."

She waited until the sound of the retreating hoofs died away. "It's all right now," she said.

The stranger scrambled to his feet. "I don't know how to thank you," he mumbled.

"Don't thank me. I'm going to get you a cup of coffee."

When she set the steaming cup before him he turned to her. "What made you want to help a total stranger?"

"I don't know, really. I guess it's because I'm so happy myself I want to help anyone who is in trouble."

"You're going to be married?"

"You heard." Her eyes shone. "He's the best man that ever lived."

"I reckon you must have had a ray deal in life."

"It's over now. I've waited seven years for happiness and I've found it at last."

"Seven years is a long time," remarked the stranger slowly. "People change a lot in seven years."

"Perhaps so."

"Don't remind me of him. Why should you. I think he must be dead. He is to me anyhow."

The man sat staring in front of him. "Queer now. I met a fellow some months ago who told me he had run away from his wife years ago. Told me he came to know too late that he loved her and wanted her back. He went looking for her all over the country. . . didn't tell me his name."

"Oh—he wasn't dark and thin was he?—with a peculiar scar on the palm of his left hand?"

He looked at her steadily for a moment. Then he shook his head.

"No—you don't need to worry. He didn't have a scar on his hand."

and—he was quite a stout man."

"For a minute I thought."

"I feared. . . Why don't you drink your coffee?"

"Had all I want, thanks. I won't disturb you any longer," he said thickly. "I'll be on my way."

"You mustn't leave until it gets dark—it wouldn't be safe to go now," she cried.

"I'll risk it," he returned. His hand rested an instant on her shoulder.

"Thank you, Mrs. Evans—and I wish you happiness."

It was not until he had gone almost half a mile that he paused, and drawing his left hand from his trouser pocket gazed at the curious red scar that marked the palm. Then he clenched it, and with lips grimly set strode on.

Unbearable

The applicant for cook was untidy and insolent in appearance.

"Don't hire her," whispered Jones to his wife. "I don't like her looks."

"But," remonstrated his wife, "I consider the reputation for cooking she bears."

"That doesn't matter," said Jones testily. "We don't want any she-bears cooked. We don't like them."—Vancouver Province.

Bright Wings of Romance

By RALPH D. PAINE

(© 1912, Western Newspaper Union.)

TIME had been very cruel to Harriet Brent. To some women the years come like an Indian summer. Harriet Brent lived alone in an old house, which also had come to have an aspect untidy and forlorn. Four squares to the road it stood, its fields bounded by stone walls heaped together by the tenacious toll of New England pioneers.

A house that still braved the weather staunchly, it had sheltered many children and known many joys and sorrows. This its broad roof conveyed to the passerby. For one elderly woman to dwell alone in it was like sitting by the dead ashes of a hearthstone.

Harriet Brent was not unhappy. In her heart, which seemed untroubled by warm emotions, there lived unquenched one divine spark of the true romance. Her faded eyes could soften in wistful reverie.

The Harriet Brent of those many years ago had been a sensitive, slender girl of a certain flower-like, fleeting beauty. Delicate, they had called her. A shy girl, moving in misty day-dreams which she had been reluctant to reveal.

Eighteen she was when the lad had come from a larger town for a brief visit with cousins on a nearby farm. So brief—only a week. He had made love to her with an ardor boyish and turbulent. Unashamed, she had returned his kisses.

Careless, splendid, debonair, swearing he loved her forever and ever, he had passed on and forgotten her.

Harriet Brent did not forget him. Life is sometimes that way. The spirit of romance had once, only once, brushed her with its bright wings. Time healed the poignant sorrow. It came to be that she was glad to bear the scar. Even in these somber latter years she could sit and thank God that she had known love and kisses and aching rapture.

One day this harsh-featured, unsmiling spinster went out to feed the hens. She had clapped on a battered, haymaker's straw hat. A shawl was thrown over her faded shirt-waist. The old skirt had been chopped off to make it easier to do the chores. The rubber boots were handy because there was mud in the hen yard.

The empty pan in her hand, Harriet Brent stood staring at a very large and glittering automobile which had halted in front of the house. The chauffeur was studying a weather-beaten guide-board on a post. A handsome woman, ruddy, dignified, spoke to the gentleman beside her.

He left the car and walked to the gate of Harriet Brent's dooryard. She came clumping from the barn path to meet him.

"Is this the road to Warechester, if you please?"

"Yes, take the first road to the right after you climb the hill beyond the Watling-trough."

"Thank you, and may my man have a pail of water to fill his radiator? If you will be good enough to show him where the well is—"

"I'll fetch you a pail," grimly spoke Harriet Brent. She lingered a moment to survey this vigorous, genial stranger with the close-cropped, grizzled moustache, the keen eyes, the air of substantial importance. Time had not been cruel to him. Life had been gracious nor had it obliterated that dominating quality which had made him victorious in boyhood.

Yes, Harriet Brent knew him as soon as they stood face to face, but the expression of her worn features was unchanged. She went into the shed and returned with a pail. The man who had come out of the past seemed in no haste to rejoin his wife in the car nor did he hear her when she called to him. He was gazing at the shabby old house and at the apple orchard beyond. His demeanor was curiously abstracted. His eyes were grave but his smile had a boyish sweetness as he said:

"This fine old place has run down."

"Too bad. I remember it years ago. A family named Brent lived here then. Do you know what became of them?"

"Dead and gone," replied Harriet. "You can see the stones in the little burying ground at the edge of the orchard."

"Yes, it was a long time ago. There was a daughter, a very lovely girl. I met her one summer, when I was a boy. Married, I suppose, and a grandmother by now."

"She has gone, too, so I've heard say," steadily answered Harriet in a low voice. Her hand pulled the edges of the shawl together and remained there to rest on her heart. "Yes, the girl you used to know has gone from here."

His wife spoke impatiently. He turned with a start. Presently the car rolled away from the house by the road. He glanced back, more than once. From behind the ancient lilac bush, Harriet Brent watched the car vanish. Then she clasped her hands and murmured, in prayer:

"Oh, thank God he didn't know me. But he remembered—and he loved to remember. He was loving the girl that has gone. I didn't expect any thing could ever make me so happy."

She went into the house and kindled a blaze in the huge fireplace of the sitting-room. By its glow she sat with folded hands, while the red coals covered the dead ashes. Her face was so long—harsh and untidy. The bright wings of romance had brushed it.

Ariadne

Ariadne, the daughter of Leo I, was married to Zeno, who succeeded as emperor of the east in A. D. 474. She was so disgusted with the impudence of her husband and so much in love with another man, a man of obscure origin, that she shut Zeno, when intoxicated, into a sepulcher, where he was left to die, and her favorite, Ariadne, was placed on the throne. Her death took place in the year 515.

Sunday, June 21—
Hours of worship, 10 a. m. Church school at 11:15. No evening service. Theme "Who Is Our God?"

We believe in the light that lighteth every man, in the chance for every man, in the glorious possibilities in every man. We believe the noblest word man has learned to speak, embodying his deepest duty, his loftiest desire and his profoundest faith, is the word Christlike. We believe in being honest and kind, willing to learn and to live in the growing light, taught by our mistakes and patient with those who blunder, rising every time we fall and helping the man who is down, looking for good in everybody and finding it. We believe that the real values of life are in thoughts, not things; in the love that gives insight, the faith that ventures, the patience that endures, the joy that triumphs, the peace of God; and that these values can be found by anyone through work well done, through comradeship, great with good will, through the spirit of worship, reverent and obedient. We believe in friendship as a communion of souls, in business as a fellowship of brethren, in the school as the pursuit of the truth that can set us free, in the church as the union of all who seek to embody and express the spirit and ideas of Jesus, in the home as the foundation of love and law. We believe that the universe is the temple of the infinite spirit, radiant with beauty, that history is the gulfstream of the eternal purpose, majestic in its onward sweep; that the Kingdom of Heaven is the goal of all efforts, imperial in its challenge, that humanity may become the dwelling place of God, transformed by His wisdom and love. We also believe that when this faith becomes the outline of our daily walk we may look for a world wherein dwelleth righteousness and peace—and this is our hope—for all in the world. If you believe this I know you will all be welcome to any of our churches. Only one preaching service at 10 o'clock. You will be welcomed by all.
