BALLOON SENT UP HERE LANDS IN CALIFORNIA

Setting what is believed to be a record for long distance flying of free balloons, a toy balloon sent up at the Elks' picnic at Pleasant Lake, Freedom, on August 29, by Nelson Schneider, on which was written his name and address, brought an answer from A. C. Scribner, Glendale, California, who stated the balloon "was" found there. The letter was received Saturday, September 11. Approximately 2500 miles were covered by the balloon, an almost unbelievable distance when mountains and other obstructions are taken into consideration.

FRED W. GREEN CARRIES CHELSEA IN PRIMARY FIGHT

Dick Elliott Wins Over Geo. Cook in County Race for Sheriff's Nomination.

While out-state counties and precincts were reporting a heavy vote in Tuesday's primary fight, Chelsea and vicinity polled an unusually light vote, barely more than a fourth of the eligible voters in Sylvan exercising their right at the polls. 463 ballots were cast in Sylvan of which 312 were cast for Fred W. Green, republican candidate from Ionia, 117 for Governor Alex J. Groesbeck, and 24 for William A. Comstock, democratic candidate from Detroit.

Interest among those who did vote was quite marked, especially in the governorship contest, although interest in the lieutenant governorship and sheriff nominations were not far behind. For the lieutenant governorship Luren D. Dickinson led Geo. W. Welsh locally, the former having a total of 153 votes and the latter 124.

George V. Cook, Saline, led Dick Elliott, Ypsilanti, the former polling 195 to the latter's 181 votes here.

With approximately the entire state heard from and excitement of the late campaign on the wane, Fred W. Green, Ionia, mayor, comes through with an approximate majority of 150,000 votes over Geo. Alex J. Groesbeck, in the republican primaries held Tuesday. With the possible exception of less than half a dozen counties all turned in a majority for the up-state candidate.

In the race for lieutenant governor Luren D. Dickinson of Charlotte led George W. Welsh by a few thousand votes, although several precincts in Detroit not yet heard from were expected to cut down this lead if not actually overcome it.

Joseph L. Warner, Ypsilanti, won in the three-cornered race for state representative, leading Don L. Clement, Milan, his nearest opponent by about 900 votes.

Dick Elliott, Ypsilanti, carried away the nomination for the sheriff's office, closing with a margin of approximately 900 votes over George V. Cook, Saline, his nearest opponent.

Cook out-ran Elliott in the rural precincts and gave him a close run in Ann Arbor, but in Ypsilanti Elliott's supporters and home townsmen gave him a large majority which overcame the rural lead.

In the race for county clerk Clara L. Pray easily out-distanced Harry Nichols with a margin of about two to one.

Lee N. Brown, Ypsilanti, and Joseph Hooper, Ann Arbor, were the county's choice for circuit court commissioners.

For the nomination for drain commissioner Clayton E. Deake, present incumbent easily defeated Frank Ealy, with a plurality of 1000 votes.

Frank Ticknor won the nomination for treasurer over Jennie L. Hatch, by a majority of about 500.

These running for republican nomination without opposition were: Charles A. Sink, state senator; Earl C. Michener, congressman; Carl Stuhberg, prosecuting attorney; J. S. Cummings, register of deeds.

No opposition was offered to democratic candidates.

Delegates to the county conventions

Democrats, first precinct: Oscar D. Schneider, Fred W. Notten, Charles Meservy. Second precinct: Joseph L. Sibley, L. Benjamin Lawrence, Adam G. Faust, Manfred Hoppe.

Republicans, first precinct: Howard Boyd, O. D. Luick, Howard Canfield, John Kalmbach, B. B. Turnbull, Geo. W. Gage, Wm. C. Pritchard. Second precinct: J. S. Cummings, M. J. Dunkel, Jacob Hummel, Theo. Riemen-schneider, O. C. Burkhardt, John W. Haselschwerdt, Harold Frimodig, Geo. W. Walworth.

SALVATION ARMY HOME SERVICE APPEAL

The annual Salvation Army campaign is on during the last of this week, ending with the big tag day on Saturday, September 18. For the past two years there has been an annual Salvation Army campaign in Chelsea and this being the third year, the results should be greatest. During the campaign is the only time throughout the year that the people are asked to give money to aid in the work of the Salvation Army. The support which the people of Chelsea and vicinity have already given is greatly appreciated and it is hoped that they will stand by them well this year as they have done in the last two years.

Local girls will be at work on Saturday selling tags, with Miss Florence Schmidt in charge.

METHODIST HOLD FORMAL RE-OPENING OF CHURCH

Re-Decorating of Auditorium Celebrated with Special Services, Dinner and Homecoming.

With special services both morning and afternoon, and a dinner served at noon by members of the Ladies' Aid Society, Chelsea Methodists and friends celebrated re-opening of the church auditorium following a re-decorating program which has taken a month to accomplish and which leaves the church beautifully finished throughout the interior.

At the morning service Dean Robert Williams, of Albion college, delivered a forceful address, while in the afternoon Rev. Dunning Idle, a former pastor, and Dr. J. H. Martin, district superintendent, spoke. Special musical selections were given by the choir, Mrs. A. A. Palmer and Smith's orchestra. Mrs. P. M. Broesamle presided at the organ.

Large audiences attended both services of the day, while at noon approximately three hundred persons were fed in the church basement. A free-will offering during the dinner hour has reached a total of nearly five hundred dollars and furnishes funds enough to complete payment on the redecorating expense.

Re-decorating, which has involved an expense of approximately $1800, was made possible through efforts of the Ladies' Aid Society of the church. Faithful work on their part throughout the year piled up a sum sufficient to guarantee the work and with the revenue furnished by Sunday's offering are able to complete payment.

That the church membership appreciated their efforts is shown by the many expressions coming from members and friends of the church in praise of their work. Thoroughly organized and efficiently operated, the society has proven to be invaluable in carrying out projects of this character.

SUNNYCREST SCHOOL WILL HOLD TAG DAY SATURDAY

In order that the work of Sunnycrest School for Girls, at Holland, Mich., may continue with its work in providing a home and school where young girls will be given the proper home life and educational training, Mrs. Elizabeth A. McKaig, representative of the school, will hold a "Blue Bird" Tag Day here Saturday during which folks will be asked to contribute any amount they may see fit.

School children are being asked to assist in the tag day sales. Prizes for both boys and girls will be offered to the ones turning in the largest amounts, and while they are being asked to work for the prizes, yet school representatives would have them remember that the real objective is to raise funds for the benefit of boys and girls who lack those advantages being enjoyed by nearly every boy and girl in this vicinity.

Sunnycrest School is well known here, being founded by Miss Helen Clarke, formerly of Chelsea. More than twenty girls are under their care and supervision at the present time and considerable financial assistance is necessary to carry on the work, which is supported entirely through the generosity of the public throughout Michigan and nearby states.

Headquarters will be at the Hindelang Hardware Co. store and boys and girls desiring to assist are asked to come to the store at 8 o'clock Saturday morning. The campaign will last until 8 o'clock Saturday evening.

MORGAN J. EMMETT DIED AT HIGHLAND PARK HOME

Morgan J. Emmett, for many years a well known resident of this community, died at his home, 91 East Grand Avenue, Highland Park, Thursday evening, September 9, 1926, following an illness of several months.

Mr. Emmett was born in Augusta township, this county, October 4, 1866. During his residence in Chelsea he was employed in the baggage department of the M. C. railway in this place and later was transferred to Ypsilanti where he was badly wounded by bandits who robbed the passenger station in that city. After recovering from his wounds he accepted the Chelsea agency of the U. S. R., retiring twelve years ago when he moved to the present family home. He was employed in the Ford motor plant.

He was a member of Olive Lodge, F. & A. M., and of the Macabees. He was united in marriage with Miss Mildred P. Boardman, April 13, 1892. The ceremony was performed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Bacon where the bride had made her home for several years.

He is survived by the widow, one daughter, Mrs. Fannie Widmayer, three sons, Russell J., Samuel D. and Harold B.; seven grandchildren and one half sister, Miss Emma Wines, all of whom reside in Highland Park.

The body was brought to Chelsea and the funeral services were conducted at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Bacon Sunday afternoon, Rev. A. E. Potts officiating. The services at the grave in Oak Grove cemetery were conducted by the Masonic Order.

SOME SAFETY SUGGESTIONS

Gas is one of the safest of fuels when used properly. Careless use of any fuel is dangerous. The rules for safe use of gas are so few and so simple that a child can learn them.

Avoid the possibility of asphyxiation by reporting all leaks at once to our office—Telephone 135. At the same time open all doors and windows and ventilate thoroughly. Never look for a leak of gas with an open flame—a match, for instance.

Leaks and consequent dangers may be prevented if we make sure that appliances are connected properly with gas-tight joints. Temporary connections should be avoided, or when necessary only flexible metallic hose with threaded metal connections, should be used.

Inspect the valves on your range, and water heater, to make sure they cannot be turned on accidentally.

See that the gas burns with a clear blue flame. Remember that a pot or kettle may boil over and extinguish the flame, allowing gas to escape.

And always remember: In case of doubt, call us up. You are under no obligation; we are glad to be of service to you.

Editorial

NEWSPAPER FAIRNESS

It is my firm conviction that the press of the country is strong enough, independent enough, and influential enough, so that it should seek not to cater to a supposed low and degraded public opinion, but rather to create a noble and inspired public opinion. It ought to work in harmony with a great purpose, revealing to the people the progress of the development of a Divine power. It should be the record of those mighty events which mark contemporary history. While it is necessary at times to be critical, yet it is to be remembered that criticism is a barren occupation, leaving no lasting results. True journalism must go far beyond this into the field of constructive effort. It is only in that direction that there will be found anything that is of lasting public benefit.—President Coolidge.

RAILROADS EFFICIENT

The condition of prosperity, the greatest since the war period, revealed by the financial reports of twenty leading railways of the United States for the first half of 1926 should not inspire agitation for general rate reductions. Analysis of the figures will make the reason apparent.

The gross earnings reported for the period show very little increase over last year's figures. The net operating revenues, however, show a much greater percentage of increase. This apparently proves great progress in efficiency service and economy of operation. The railroads of America have been working toward this end ever since the period of governmental control. Millions of new capital have been invested in rolling stock, motive power, additional trackage and modern terminal facilities. Because of these investments the American public probably is getting the best service it ever received.

There is still a long way to travel before the railroads may be said to be on a solid credit foundation. Their earnings, based on their investment, must be brought up to a figure considered more satisfactory. Only a few years ago the railroads were averaging less than a per cent. Even in 1925 the rate was only 4.83 per cent for the whole country. This is much below the 5.75 per cent which the Interstate Commerce Commission has held to be a fair return. Some few roads are earning more than that percentage, and half of their profits above that figure are subject to recapture by the Government. However, the large majority of roads are earning less than the "fair return."

Growth of the country's commerce means a constant demand for transportation improvements, and the railroads must be in a position to finance these improvements economically. This they cannot do if their credit be impaired and credit naturally is based upon earning capacity.

WAGES AND PRICES

It seems unfortunate that the relation of wages to production can not be discussed without arousing antagonism from organized labor on the one hand or creating suspicion or opposition from employers. The tendency of prices to find a lower level involves changes in wages in order that activities may be given new life.

"It is economic fallacy to hold the belief that prices of essential commodities may be lowered to meet the demands of consumers, and wages be maintained at the height reached as the result of conditions created by the war, based on unusual demands for production in many lines."

Wage earners demand that the cost of living be materially lowered before any suggestion is made regarding the lowering of wages, the manufacturers and other producers reply by stating that, as wages enter very largely into the cost of production, they cannot sell cheaper until they can produce cheaper. The two views create a situation that can only be met by compromise.

The merchant who is forced to sell his goods at a sacrifice in order to get ready money to meet his bills is the victim of a condition that is just as artificial, and therefore unhealthy, as forcing prices to a level that is not warranted by the law of supply and demand. Severe losses are suffered and some failures result, but general conditions are slightly, if at all, improved.

In a few cases of the steel industry the scale of wages is based upon the selling price of the product during a certain period, and it is a plan that has been found to work well. It is a form of cooperation that would appear to be practical in many industries confronted with readjustments that will be difficult unless they are faced in the spirit of concession by both employers and employees.

THE IMPORTANCE OF THE PRIMARIES

This is a very interesting period in the political life of the country. Primaries are being held in various states and counties, and congressmen, governors and other state officials are being selected by the respective parties as candidates for office in November. It is safe to say that the political issues for the November campaign are all framed up. There is the tariff, prohibition, the trusts, the farmers' problem, the railroads, foreign relations and the myriad other national or local proposals of one or the other of the parties. It may be well to point out so far as the average man is concerned the great issues are our national political stability, the maintenance of our international honor and position and the prosperity of the country. Every citizen should be a fundamentalist on the preservation of the Constitution and the permanence of our prosperity. That is a good political creed.

Don't Tell It

Two little sisters were talkative to excess. Often they divulged family secrets. Their grandmother, becoming provoked by their seemingly endless chatter, chided them by telling them they should keep everything "under their hats."

In mimicry, natural with children, Katherine, the elder, on an occasion assumed the advisory role of her grandparent by repeating the same words to her sister Anne.

Anne raised her hand to her head and said: "I have no hat on."

OIL LASTS LONGER IN BUICK FOR 1927

Device stops crankcase dilution in new models

It is necessary to completely change the oil in the 1927 Buicks only four times a year, Buick engineers claim. This result is accomplished through the elimination of crankcase dilution. A crankcase ventilator in combination with thermostatic water control removes the water and acid fumes as well as the greater portion of kerosene dilution from the crankcase. This keeps the oil in good condition even in extremely cold weather.

The elimination of oil dilution is one of the greatest problems that has been solved in recent years. It eliminates all the objectionable features of winter driving, such as freezing of the oil pump, frequent oil change, and the formation of acid in the crankcase which is so injurious to all working parts of the engine.

One of the chief products of the explosive mixture in a gasoline engine is water. For every gallon of gasoline burned, a gallon of water is produced in the form of steam, and when starting up a cold engine water and the heavy ends of fuel which are not combustible in a cold engine find their way down past the pistons in the form of vapor. Unless they are removed before condensing, they will mingle with the oil in the form of water, kerosene and acid. That is crankcase dilution.

In the Buick crankcase ventilator the fan blows air through a funnel past an opening in the crankcase, causing a suction which pulls these vapors from the crankcase. It adds no complications to the engine, however, as there are no moving parts to get out of order or require adjustment.

The thermostatic water control is built into the radiator and blocks the water circulation so that under severe weather conditions the engine will warm up from zero to 120 degrees in less than three minutes. When this temperature is reached the thermostat automatically opens and allows the water to circulate. But it never allows the water to drop below 120 degrees under even the most severe driving conditions, which is above the temperature at which crankcase dilution occurs. It prevents excessive use of the choke and gives a summer operating temperature in a very short period of time.

New York's Gay Citizens

The other day an old friend of mine was talking with an ex-doughboy at a Broadway soda fountain. Two fair maidens were doing their stuff over a couple of sodas at the time. The two bucks took little notice of them at the time. During the course of their conversation my friend asked the doughboy's telephone number, for he wanted to call him later in the day about a dinner engagement. That evening a mysterious female telephoned to the doughboy. He was curious, for she had a pleasant voice. She was evasive, but when he suggested a rendezvous she agreed. They met an hour later. She was one of the soda damsels.—New York Evening World.

His Orders

Alfred Austin, the poet, was in the office of an editor one day when a very young reviewer brought in a book which he had been given to criticize. Now, neither the reviewer nor the editor had read a page of that work and the former conscientiously wanted to know what lines the latter wished him to go upon.

"What am I to do with this?" he asked.
The editor just glanced at the cover and observed brightly:
"Give it h—!"

The pastor looked over his glasses and shook his uncut locks.
"Carry out my original declaration," he said, "I am about to call the names of those persons who are now asleep in the congregation. John Haycock." There was no response.
"John Haycock!"
The stout man stirred again.
"Be down in a minute," he growled murmured. "Keep things hot for me." The pastor's voice rang out:
"You're going down, all right, John Haycock, and things will be kept very hot for you, I'm sure. Let us now sing the ninety-ninth hymn."

Cook Like This Well
Worth Weight in Gold
"Self-reliance," said Charles M. Schwab, "is one of the greatest assets for a successful business career. I have often admired the cook who used it once to save her hostess in a most embarrassing situation."

"The time for dinner had arrived and passed and the minutes dragged almost into an hour while they waited for a belated guest. Finally, a full hour late, he arrived and they all sat down to dinner."

"The young hostess, knowing that all the other guests were aware that dinner had been scheduled for service an hour earlier, decided that she would make no apologies for anything that was not quite up to the mark, but with the first taste of the soup, she changed her mind."

"Just then the maid stopped beside her and slipped her a note from the cook, which read:

"Don't apologize for the soup, ma'am. All but yours is all right, but it boiled away while I was trying to keep it hot so I was one plate short and had to slip you a little dishwater."

CLINTON—The Archery club of this village held a meeting in Bartlett's grove Saturday last week. Several high scores were made by the members of the club.

SOUTH LYON—James Howlett, Sr. of Kensington and Fred Howlett, Jr. of Detroit were arrested Sunday by Deputy State Game Warden Wilkinson and paid $152 in Justice Calkins' court for fishing with seven poles from a boat and taking 6-inch bass and perch.—Herald.

NORTHVILLE—Northville has some bad boys, whose parents will be well to take them in hand. Recently they threw rotten tomatoes over the front of the Scott building on South Center street and the house next door. In the Scott building several windows were broken and other damage done.—Record.

FOWLerville—The free moving pictures given by the Chamber of Commerce closed Thursday evening with a large attendance, in fact they have certainly drawn a record crowd each Thursday evening and the people seem to have fully appreciated the efforts of the business men to provide for their entertainment.—Review.

JACKSON—Otto Guest, 29, and Alonzo Perez, 32, left Jackson yesterday with officers from Detroit. Thence they will be deported to Germany and Spain, respectively, for violation of the immigration law. The two just concluded a sentence in the Michigan state prison, where they were sent from Detroit in 1922 for larceny.—Tribune.

ANN ARBOR—A $1500 damage suit against two members of the state police, was filed in circuit court here by Louis Miller, Northfield township farmer, charging illegal imprisonment, wrongful destruction of property and injury to reputation. The suit was in connection with a raid on Miller's home. Donald S. Leonard and Otis Gillette of Detroit were named defendants.

EATON RAPIDS—At the Nick Burley sale on Lansing road last week Tuesday great interest was shown in the bunch of horses, one Percheron yearling and a two-year old of the same breed causing spirited bidding. The animals were bid up to $176 and were sold as a pair at that figure. This makes it apparent that the horse is coming back and that it is once more profitable to give attention to the horse breeding industry.—Review.

BROOKLYN—The largest increase ever recorded by the Brooklyn school was shown by Monday's enrollment. Last year the first day 199 pupils were enrolled, this year 240 are in attendance. The Cambridge, Palmer, Rice and Crego districts are sending all pupils to Brooklyn, the Crego district being added since last year. Additional seating will be required in the big study hall for the upper six grades—now totaling 180 and new part time teachers may be called.—Exponent.

DEXTER—Henry Ford was in the village Thursday looking over his property. One of the objects of his visit was to obtain permission from the cemetery association to get the required number of feet of water to carry out several projects he is planning. One of his ideas is to make a small lake in place of the mill pond. The cemetery association which met Monday evening agreed to assist Mr. Ford in any way possible to get the required number of feet of water.—Leader.

MILAN—The people in Milan will no longer hear the old familiar sounds of the school bell in the morning and at noon. For years, during the school year, the school bell has regulated almost everything in the village. The bell was removed from the tower on top of the building during the processes of rebuilding during the summer and will be replaced. The tower has become somewhat weakened by the weather and it was not deemed advisable by the contractors to replace the bell in its former position. The school opened on Monday, September 13.—Leader.

MANCHESTER—A Studebaker coupe belonging to Harold Lloyd, who works for Herbert Lamming, south of town, burned beside the road at the H. Steinweg farm, about four miles west of town Sunday night. Harold had been to Wampler lake and on his way home noticed smoke coming from the hood. In a moment it burst into a flame and he ran the car in the ditch where everything inflammable was consumed. Other dancers returning home between 12 and 1:00 o'clock report that the car was then burning fiercely, but they saw no one around. It is supposed a short circuit was responsible.—Enterprise.

MASON—Thomas Roper, who is spending the summer with his daughter, Mrs. John Ickes of Ingham, is planning to soon return to Redford, where on October 17 he will celebrate his ninety-ninth birthday and where Henry Ford each year sends his personal photographer to make a picture of the aged pioneer. Mr. Roper is one of the few remaining who drove stage in the old days of the plank road now displaced by a twenty foot slab of concrete pavement. He remembers when the old tavern at Clarencville, now restored by Henry Ford, was fourteen miles from Detroit. Now it is in the center of a metropolitan district.—News.

HOWELL—The inspector which recently went over the mail routes at Brighton and cut out one dividing it between the other carriers, has been at work on the routes out of Howell for several days past, with the result that two routes are to be dropped here. GILDA GRAY'S NEW DANCE SCHEDULED FOR DETROIT SOON
Announcement was made today by the management of the new $5,000,000 "Michigan Theatre" operated by John H. Kinsky and Balaban & Katz that arrangements have been completed for a week's engagement of Gilda Gray and her entire company, presenting her sensational new dance. The engagement will be simultaneous with the appearance there of the picture "Aloma of the South Seas," which is Miss Gray's first starring movie vehicle.

This announcement is hailed in Detroit as most astonishing, because in New York and Chicago, patrons pay from $4.40 up to whatever the ticket scalpers demand, for seats to witness her performance. The Michigan Theatre which charges the smallest admission in Detroit, will present the show at their usual prices, just as they did last week when George Deban and his company of 27 players appeared in person on the stage in conjunction with his movie, "The Loves of Ricardo." At this performance, nearly 200 police and firemen had to assist in handling the crowds, which were lined up from early in the morning until late at night. Tho the theatre defeated efforts of "ticket scalpers" many persons succeeded in hiring men and boys to stand in line for them and trade places as the ticket doorman was reached.

The theatre, which opened August 23, has been filled to capacity ever since at each of its five daily performances, which accommodate 5,000 patrons at each show.

OAKLAND MOTOR COMPANY TO INCREASE PRODUCTION
A bulletin from the Oakland Motor Car Company states that work on the new $7,600,000 Pontiac Six factory is slightly ahead of schedule and that according to all indications—production capacity of 1,000 cars daily will be available at the beginning of next year.

More than one-half of the entire foundation for the 30 acres of floor space that will comprise this mammoth new plant has already been laid and by the end of the month the entire foundation will be in. Excavation has been practically completed. The scene of the construction resembles the building of one of the mammoth, far-flung enterprises that came to be such a common sight during the late war. The foundation for the assembly plant alone extends a quarter of a mile into the distance—built upon a nine-acre-of-floor-space basement.

While 1,000 men are now engaged in the construction of this new factory—the maximum that can be profitably employed—this force will be recruited up to 2,000 men before the end of October. Every type of dirt removing machine known in construction is being employed. A 78-inch storm drain large enough for the needs of a small city, is being installed to take care of the rain that will fall upon more than 1,000,000 square feet of roof, and for other needs of the factory. Already two car tracks have been built into the factory to help in construction, but when the factory has been completed there will be nine miles of trackage under roof to bring in raw material and carry out the finished product.

That there is need for this new factory may be gleaned from the fact that more than 18,000 Pontiac and Oakland Sixes were built during August and that during this month the 100,000th car was turned out for 1926.

To build this number of cars has required the largest working force in Oakland's history. In fact, the present force is more than twice as large as has been previously employed.

The total at the present time is more than 6,500. Early in February the force was slightly more than 2,500 but practically 500 men were put on each month since until at the present time peak facilities of the present factories have been reached. The biggest jump in employment was from May to August, though since that time approximately 100 persons have been added each week.

STATE FARMERS GET NEW FAIR BUILDING
That Michigan agricultural organizations and interests have been given a wonderful opportunity to tell the vital story of quality production in all farm products, through the medium of the new agricultural building at the state fair, is the opinion of experts from the Michigan State College.

The new building was formally dedicated at Detroit last week, taking rank as one of the finest farm exhibit buildings in the world. L. Whitney Watkins, chairman of the board of managers of the state fair, presided at the presentation ceremonies, President Kenyon L. Butterfield of M. S. C. accepting on behalf of the farmers of the state.

Good indication of the value of the building in making possible the graphic display of Michigan farm stories was given last week. Practically all of the state's leading organizations were included in the list of those who had attractive exhibits.

Flower, fruit, and grains filled the floor space in the center of the building, all being arranged around a central fountain, beside which an orchestra played during the afternoon and evening hours.

The state farm bureau, the grange, the gleaners, the crop improvement association, the Michigan State College, the State Department of Agriculture, the Detroit market gardeners association, the canners association and the Upper Peninsula were all represented by educational displays which told stories of great interest to Michigan farm folk.

been one of the routes selected for the change and split-up. The other carrier to go will be Elmer Ellsworth who was the last carrier of the present force to be employed. No. 5 will be the other route to be divided.—Republican.

Power is one reason for Pontiac Six popularity

Powered by the largest six-cylinder engine used in any car costing less than $1000, the Pontiac Six exhibits a performance range entirely new in its field. Power to soar up hills. Power to lug smoothly and steadily through mud and sand. More power than any other six at its price—and a permanent source of power too. Beauty, comfort, economy and roadability—in all these qualities the Pontiac Six represents a decisive departure among low-priced sixes. Yet, on the basis of power in relation to wheelbase, weight and price, it ranks as the one outstanding engineering triumph of the day.

Bed Made a Hit

A dignified and solemn boy of almost five arrived to visit his grandparents. Kind efforts to make him feel at home were futile. He refused to talk or warm up to his anxious hosts. Even an early supper left him unresponsive.

So he was escorted to his bedroom by despairing relatives. Here an old-fashioned, elaborately carved child's walnut bed had been set up for him. At sight of it he became vividly excited, broke into a run, clambered in, lay flat on his back, stretched, rolled over, then sat up with a beaming smile of supreme satisfaction and relief, and announced to the breathless relatives: "Yes, it fits!"

Early Fire Fighters

The first record of what might be called a fire department is found in Rome. A disastrous fire occurring in the reign of Augustus called his attention to the need of a regular fire brigade, so he organized one consisting of seven companies of a thousand men each. The first real fire engines were used in 1083 at a great fire in London bridge. The first steam fire engine was invented by John Heathcote of London, in 1820. The first city fire department in this country was organized in Boston in 1630, the fire engine being a hand pump brought in England.

Land in Extreme North?

The theory that land exists between Alaska and the pole has persisted for hundreds of years, and Dr. H. A. Harris, an American geographer, won considerable notice a few years ago by offering Arctic tide tables as proof of the existence of a large land-mass north of Alaska, says Burt M. McConnell, in the Independent. There is also the fact that geese and ducks have been observed flying directly northward from Point Barrow during the early summer, and returning with their young a few months later from the same point of the compass. These are a row of the interesting theories in favor of the existence of land.

He Wanted to Help

A young farmer wanted to sell his farm and was showing it to a prospective buyer. As they went over the house the farmer's little son trailed along at their heels from room to room. He, too, wanted to show the place off to the prospect, and in the bathroom he interrupted his father's eulogy on the plumbing to pipe: "Look, mister! See them nice big holes? That's rats."

CROP REPORT

The prospective commercial apple crop of the United States made a considerable gain during the month of August, the September 1 estimate being 42,051,000 barrels as compared with 39,559,000 on August 1. The estimates show an increase in all important states east of the Rockies but a decrease in the Pacific states. Maine, Michigan and Idaho are the only states reporting a smaller production than in 1925, and the total for the country is a little more than one-fourth larger. In general, the winter fruit is sizing up well. Recent rains have increased the amount of seed in many localities. Unfavorable market conditions for early varieties have caused large quantities of inferior grades to be left in the orchards.

In Michigan, a larger production than usual consists of summer and fall varieties. Only 51 per cent, or 829,000 barrels, is winter fruit, while 28 per cent of the crop is fall, and 21 per cent summer fruit, according to L. Whitney Watkins, Commissioner of Agriculture and Verne H. Church, U. S. Agricultural Statistician for Michigan. The total commercial crop in Michigan is placed at 1,626,000 barrels.

The peach crop of the United States is estimated at 65,636,000 bushels as compared with 46,565,000 bushels in 1925. It is the largest crop on record and nearly all states report a much larger production than last year, the Michigan estimate of 1,513,000 bushels being more than two and one-half times as many. The quality is generally good throughout the country although the size is not as large as usual in some sections where sufficient moisture was lacking.

Pears are also an exceptionally large crop for the country as a whole, the estimate being 25,113,000 bushels. It is larger than last year in all important states except New York and is especially heavy on the Pacific coast, where three states have more than one-half of the total of the United States. The Michigan crop is estimated at 937,000 bushels which is 73 per cent of normal as compared with 35 per cent of a yield last year. Michigan promises a grape production of 66,821 tons which is 79 per cent of a crop as compared with a 30 per cent yield last year. The state ranks third in the production of this fruit. The September estimates for other states are not yet available so that no comparisons can be made for the whole. The quality is good but the fruit is about two weeks later than usual in ripening.

The condition of the Michigan bean crop on September 1 was 71 per cent of normal, a decline of three points during the past month, and 11 per cent lower than on the corresponding date last year. The estimated production, based on this condition figure, is 6,321,000 bushels. While this is a somewhat smaller quantity than was grown in 1925, it is about equal to the harvested crop of 1925, according to a statement by Verne H. Church, U. S. Agricultural Statistician for Michigan and L. Whitney Watkins, Commissioner of Agriculture. Extensive damage to the crop was caused by heavy rains in the east central counties during August. The condition in that district was 58 per cent on September 1 as compared with 70 per cent on the first of the previous month. Harvesting is about two weeks later than usual.

The crop of the country as a whole is estimated at 17,253,000 bushels as compared with 19,100,000 produced in 1925. This is 1,843,000 bushels less than the August 1 estimate. There has been a decline in all of the other bean growing states, the most marked change being in Colorado and New Mexico, where the average condition is now only 50 per cent of normal. As these two states grow the Pinto bean principally, a heavy loss in the production of that variety is indicated. The estimates for the other principal states are as follows: New York, 1,629,000; Montana, 483,000; Idaho, 1,234,000; Colorado, 1,632,000; New Mexico, 774,000; California, 4,595,000 bushels.

The total potato crop of the United States was estimated on September 1 at 351,158,000 bushels, a gain of about six millions over the August 1 report. This is from 30 to 35 millions less than normal requirements and gives an optimistic outlook for fairly good prices to the grower, although the shortage is only about one-half that of last year, according to a statement by Verne H. Church, U. S. Agricultural Statistician for Michigan and L. Whitney Watkins, Commissioner of Agriculture. There was no marked change in the forecasted production in any of the important producing states. In general, there was a decline in the eastern and Pacific states, and a slight gain in the central states. In New York, Pennsylvania and New England, blight has developed in sections and a light setting of tubers than usual is reported. The Apogostok County district in Maine promises a full or normal crop. There is but little disease damage or insect troubles in the central states and vines are in a thrifty condition. Owing to the backward season, from three to four weeks more without frost are needed to mature the crop.

Maine ranks first in production with an estimate of 33,869,000 bushels; New York is second with 29,873,000; and Michigan is third with 28,585,000. The forecasts for other important states are as follows: Wisconsin, 28,332,000 bushels; Minnesota, 27,135,000; and Pennsylvania, 23,801,000.

Offer Good Excuses

for That First Lie

"It was this way," said the Doctor. "My star patient was getting better. Rather than lose him I decided on an operation was necessary. You may call that lying if you like, but the operation was necessary—for me."

"My client confessed his guilt to me," said the lawyer, "but for professional reasons it seemed unwise to let the case go by default. So I took it into court and won. For all we know, my client may have lied to me."

"My first lie," said the Psychiatrist, "came as the result of an accumulation of inhibitions and repressions dating back to infancy. Need I go farther? I love the truth, but, oh, you libid!"

"My first lie," said the Diplomat, "was merely preliminary to my second, which as you may recall, enabled me to put a nation out of a most embarrassing predicament. Was I justified? History shall be my judge."

"I never tell a lie," said the Chronicle Editor, "unless it is absolutely necessary. And, as you will thoughtfully, 'it almost always is.'—Kansas City Star.

RURAL TEACHERS' WORK OUTLINED AT LUNCHEON

Eighty rural teachers and county workers were present at the zone luncheon and meeting at the Chamber of Commerce Inn, Ann Arbor, where W. C. Hopper and Mildred Robinson, the two helping teachers, explained the general plan of work for the year. Eva Griffith of the leadership group from the college conducted a song fest of original songs. The teachers were seated at six tables by zones so that they could become acquainted and organize their groups. Several teachers issued invitations offering their school to the teachers of their group for their first regular zone meeting.

The Zone Plan of Supervision, authorized by the County Board of Supervisors at their June session, provides two helping teachers, one employed by the Normal college at no expense to the county and the other employed by the county by general county tax. There seems to be some misunderstanding about how the expense of supervision is to be paid. A general county tax is the only legal way expenditures for the county school commissioner's office can be authorized and the money collected by the Board of Supervisors. In case of misunderstanding, it would be best to consult the County School Commissioner, the only person in a position to furnish reliable and accurate information relating to supervision and the only person legally authorized to confer with school officers, teachers and patrons about school problems.

Beneficent Rabbit Plague

Tularemia, a recurrent disease which kills off rabbits in great numbers, has been the subject of extended investigation by government biologists. The disease is carried by jack rabbits, snowshoe rabbits, cottontails and certain species of ground squirrels.

The disease occurs more or less periodically and serves as a natural means of reducing the numbers of these rodents and affords a measure of relief from the damage they do to orchards, vineyards, farm crops and pasturage.

South American Art

Quito, the capital of Ecuador, the second highest townsite in the world (9,000 feet above sea level) is regarded as the cradle of South American art. Francisco Monje took workmen thinner, and one of the most beautiful of buildings is the San Francisco church at Quito. It took 100 years to erect, after its construction had begun in 1535. Much of its internal work is designed in the Moorish style, while parts of the building favor Indo-Chinese, mingled with Roman and Gothic examples of decorative taste.

Oils Used in Flavoring

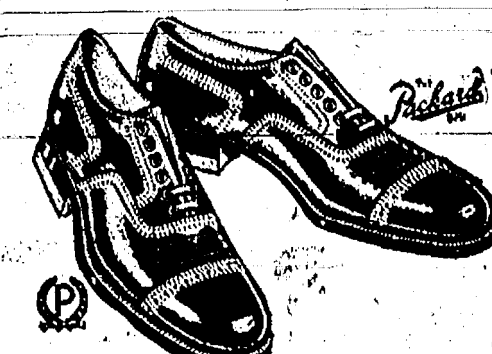

For many years the United States has been the greatest producer of pepper mint and spearmint oils, and from present indications bids fair to maintain the lead. Japan, Russia, Germany and England are also considerable producers, the last two countries turning out oils of the highest commercial quality. No accurate statistics of the world's output of these commodities appear to be available, but it is the impression among those best informed that the annual production of oil exceeds 400,000 pounds, of which the United States contributes about 250,000 pounds.

Pyrrhus

PYRRHUS, ruler of the Greek Kingdom of Epirus, won on a plan, more daring than original. Born in 318 B.C., only five years after the death of his cousin, Alexander the Great.

while the latter's fame was fresh in the memory of living men, Pyrrhus resolved to follow Alexander's example and conquer the world. Unluckily for his success, he decided to work westward instead of east.

Now, from earliest days, power and progress have always rolled westward and it has seldom gone well with the Easterner who has tried to stop it.

Greece—had for centuries been the foremost barrier of civilization against barbarism; of democracy against despotism. But of late a power had sprung up in the western world. This power was first the city and afterwards the state of Rome. Rome originally was a small town covering but one or two of the seven hills upon which it afterwards spread. It was at first ruled by kings who were elected by the people. Then, when these kings waxed tyrannical, the people deposed them and formed a re-phone that endured for 200 years. The little city grew, conquering all its neighbors and becoming at last the virtual mistress of Italy. In after years it was to rule the whole world. Already, brute strength, subtlety and mental superiority were making its name famous in Greece, on the other hand, had passed the acme of the "Golden Age," and, thanks to luxury and civic dissensions, was on the wane.

It was in 280 B. C. that these two mighty powers of the civilized world first clashed, and that clash did much to mold the future trend of the earth's destiny. For Pyrrhus began his real attempt at universal conquest by crossing the Adriatic and declaring war on Rome. He did this on the pretense of helping the Greek cities of southern Italy that resented Roman rule. With 28,000 men and a herd of trained war elephants Pyrrhus began his march against Rome. The sight of an elephant, was unknown in Italy, and the great beasts' presence struck mortal terror everywhere. The people

Rome summoned all her soldiers and vassals and met Pyrrhus at Heraclea, near the Gulf of Tarentum. It was a furious battle, and the Italians fought gallantly in defense of their land. But the elephants unnerved them and stampeded their horses. Their closest ranks could not withstand the irresistible charges of the maddened Asiatic brutes. Rome's army was at length forced to retreat. But Pyrrhus' forces were so shattered and crippled by the battle that they could not pursue their advantage. They had won a victory that was costlier than a defeat. The term, "Pyrrhic victory," used in denigrating some worse than barren triumph, had its rise from this incident.

The following year Pyrrhus again met and defeated the Roman legions at Asculum, but was once more so weakened by the conflict that he suffered no gain from it. He felt that there was no hope of his ever driving them so offended by his ideas of despotism the people's love for liberty that he lost all chance of aid from them. In 276 B. C. he again invaded Italy, but by this time Rome was prepared against his coming. At a battle near Beneventum he was utterly routed and retreated to Epirus. He never again attempted to conquer Rome.

His dream of world empire had been a fizzle, simply because it was civilization and not barbarism that he had attacked. A beaten barbarian is a panic-stricken creature, ready to save the Persians. The hands and feet of the Pyrrhus, backed by the warlike elephants (creatures as terrible and as unusual of aspect to the Italians of old as the dinosaurs would be to modern eyes), had only temporarily baffled the Roman republic. Where there is a true republic there must be thought. Where there is thought there can be no rest or permanent defeat.

Alexander, by the very fame of his deeds, struck terror to the hearts of the nations he conquered.

So, for centuries thereafter, the title of Pyrrhus was pointed out as a warning to would-be world conquerors.

Alexander, living at an earlier day and having all conditions in his favor, had for the time made himself master of the known world. But he had not attacked a foe more civilized than himself. He had momentarily bound the destiny of the earth to his will. But at his death the bonds had snapped asunder. From time to time in history some one man has risen above his fellows, dominated them and bent them to his will. But only momentarily.

There can be no One Man or Nation rule. The only permanent ruler, as all history shows in countless instances, is the free Will of the

SELFLEDGE FIELD WILL GIVE BENEFIT PERFORMANCE

Major T. G. Lanhier, Commanding Officer of Selfledge Field, today announced that one of the most spectacular aerial exhibitions ever staged in the United States will be witnessed at Selfledge Field on Saturday, September 18, for the benefit of the Army Relief Fund. The exhibition will be presented by the First Pursuit Group, Air Corps, United States Army, for the benefit of the widows and orphans of fallen comrades of the army.

Trained army aviators will twist and whirl their huge mazes of wire, canvas, and steel; every trick and war tactic known will be demonstrated; parachute jumpers will leap from dizzy heights into space, trick flying stunts, performed by graduate aviators, a dummy fort will be bombarded by the group, twenty-five planes will nose-dive, loop, bank, stall and spin their machines to demonstrate the almost human intelligence of the modern machine of peace and war.

"The Aerial Exposition" according to Major Lanhier, "is an annual event, held each year at some Army post in the United States. This year the event is allotted to Selfledge Field, and the First Pursuit Group with the aid of its friends in Michigan intend to make the event a noteworthy success. All the proceeds of the exhibition will go to the Army Relief society, the object of which is to collect funds and provide relief in cases of emergency for dependent widows and orphans of the officers and enlisted men of the regular army of the United States."

"The Army Relief Society," continued Major Lanhier, "is to the military organization what the Red Cross is to the civilian community. It aids in securing employment, solicits and creates scholarships, and supervises educational opportunities for orphan children. Last year almost $60,000 was presented to the Army Relief Society as a result of the army benefit show."

The exhibition will be held at Selfledge Field. Pilots from all parts of the United States, and ships of every type will be used in the program of the exposition.

Explaining "Sea Serpent"

It can be said that many of the stories of the sea serpent can be explained as being due to mistaken interpretations of large fishes, dolphins, and whales; but there are two or three well-authenticated statements, such as that reported by the warship Daedalus of China, and another reported from Lord Crawford's yacht, which seem to resemble prehistoric types.

There is nothing impossible in the suggestion that there should be animals living of which we have no knowledge, but there is a great difference between the possible and the probable. There are, for instance, giant squids, which have enormous tentacles, and which, if raised above the water, would present somewhat of the appearance attributed to the sea serpent.—London Mail.

From Personal Observation

One of the questions put to a class of rural adults was: "In the sentence, 'The bird flew over the house,' is 'flew' a regular or an irregular verb?" This proved a sticker for the class, but finally one man ventured an answer. Said he, "If the bird that flew over the house was a wild goose, it went in a straight, regular line, so the verb is regular; but if it was a woodpecker, then it went in a crooked, zigzag line, and so the verb is irregular."

All but the grammar-bound examiner was satisfied with this rational explanation.

Expert With Knife

Despite the sneers of the superperfect, the great art of cutting with a knife is not lost in America. One 100 per center, observed on a Pennsylvania dinner out of St. Louis, whose pockets bulged with oil contracts, did it with infinite dexterity, conveying semi-liquid morsels to his mouth without losing a drop. He also spurned napkin and finger bowl. There was really no call for either. He had not missed himself up a bit.—Outlook.

When Two Are Enough

A woman, looking for an apartment, said to a janitor one day: "I hope there are no barking dogs in any of the adjoining flats?" "Oh, no, ma'am," said the janitor. "Not on your life, ma'am." "I guess I'll take the place," then, said the woman, with a sigh of relief. "You see, I've got two dogs of my own that bark like fury, and I really couldn't stand any more."

Cool Colors Helpful

Cool colors should be used in rooms having brilliant sunlight. Small rooms seem larger when decorated in pool shades. Cool colors are most suitable for informal rooms, cottage living rooms, bedrooms, nurseries, etc. They are, of course, best for rooms that are used chiefly in summer.

Life's Unlucky Ones

Nerves of Invalids

Soothed by Pictures

Art is being used successfully in the treatment of nervous diseases in a Philadelphia hospital. Pictures of proper colors, when exhibited to patients, have a soothing effect, it has been found. Reds and other "hot colors" are not used, since they disturb the nervous system. In some of the more turbulent cases it has been necessary to hang the paintings out of reach of the patients.

The basic rule is that of the emotion being affected by color, so great care is exercised in selecting the right pictures.

"The colors we find most advantageous," said a hospital attaché, "are the cool ones. These bring a calming influence. For this reason landscapes, seascapes and mountain scenes are preferable. The wave wash on a New England coast, a sunny pastoral scene, puffy white clouds pastride mountain peaks, all reveal peace, stillness, rest."

Engineering Problem

The possibility of a sea-level canal at Panama was discussed, but deemed unwise. The sea-level canal project would have been a narrow channel winding in and out the hills, too narrow for half its length for the largest ships to pass. Currents caused by the Chagres river and by the flow of other streams into the canal would have made navigation somewhat dangerous.

Blood in Cold Climates

The public health service says that there is no truth in the statement that persons living in cold climates have thicker blood than those living in warm climates.

Good Lumber Wasted

Between the time that a tree crashes down and the finished product of manufactured wood is delivered, two-thirds of the tree is lost through waste.

Better than Ever-

Following their traditional policy of constant improvement with no yearly models, Dodge Brothers, during the past eight months, have vastly bettered their motor cars in many vital respects.

Indeed, there has never been an equal period in Dodge Brothers history when so many refinements of a popular and fundamental nature have been made.

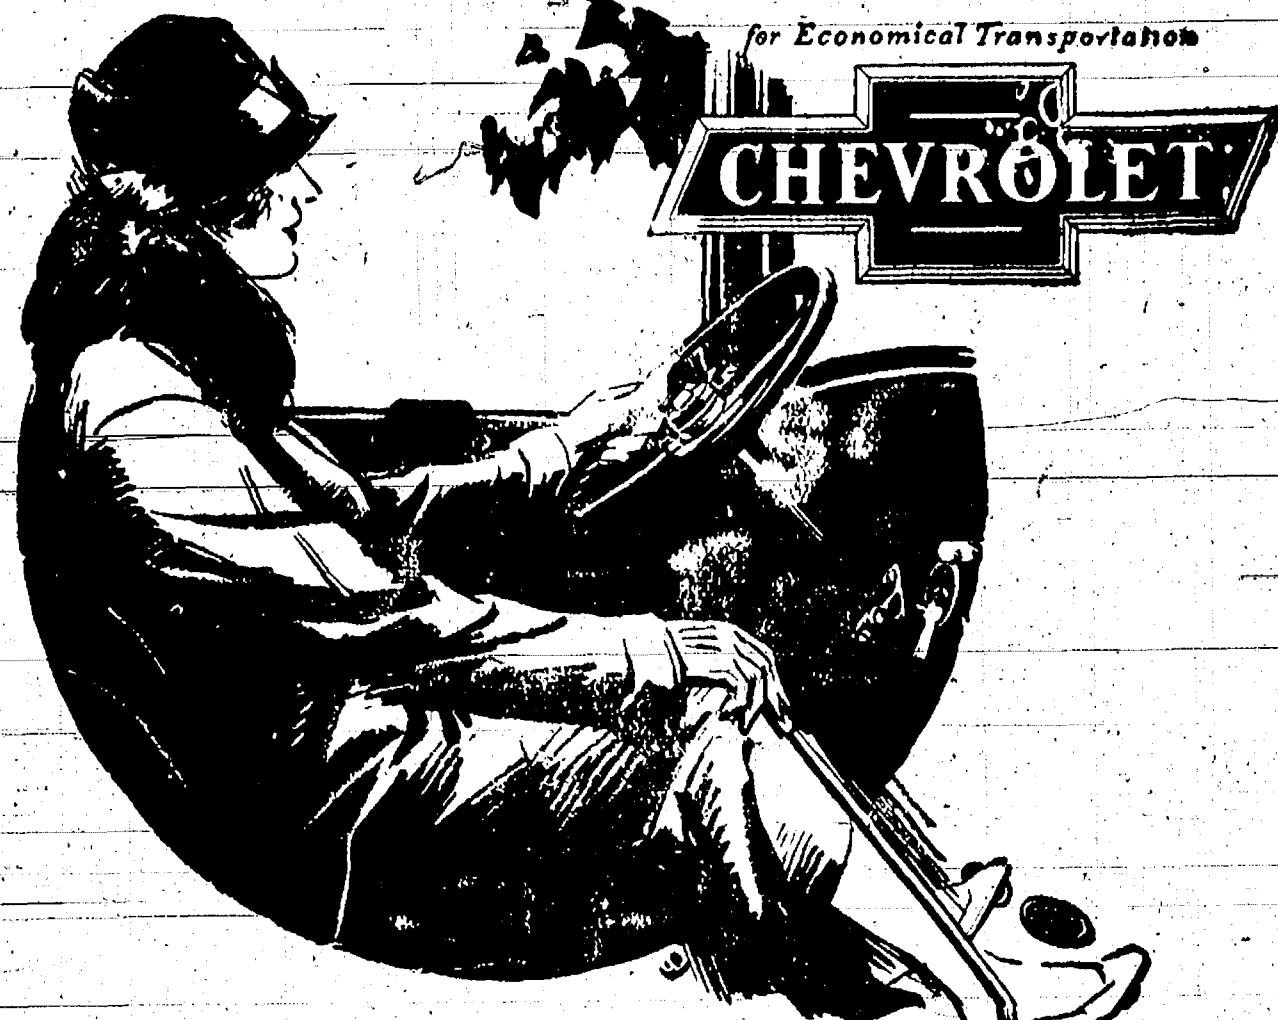

The public is registering its appreciation of this progressive industrial service by purchasing every motor car Dodge Brothers can build—in spite of the fact that Dodge Brothers production, during these months, has broken all previous records by an impressive margin.

Joy No Longer Found in Popping of Corn
It is to sight. Things have come to such a pass that corn popping must be made easy. Was a time (Oh, happy days) when the making of this delicacy was considered a pleasure, not a task. And, too, it was before the days of corn already shelled; the kernels had to be pried off the cob, an undertaking that made for sore fingers if one did not know (but who didn't) all the tricks of the trade.

It was all fun, though. Everybody pitched in, and soon that delightful sound—the banging of imprisoned kernels—made sweet music. In a minute or two, although it seemed longer, one of mother's bowls was filled with the wondrous stuff.

And then, as a special treat, mother occasionally allowed popped cornballs. Oh, what sticky delights!

But now one can only sigh and grieve for what has gone. Popping corn, we are led to believe, is so hard a task that a special apparatus for the making of it is necessary. We don't believe it. Not for a minute!—Manchester Union.

Used Marionettes as Measure of Economy
From Venice came the word "marionette." Each year, in the glorious days of the Venetian republic, there was celebrated a Feast of the Virgins, upon the anniversary of the rescue of the 12 brides from the pirates of Trieste. Twelve girls were chosen, at a kind of beauty contest, loaded with rich gowns and jewels, and made to play the chief parts in the pageant.

At the conclusion of the holiday they were given their costumes, jewelry, and a certain sum of money from the public treasury for their marriage dot.

One year an economic administration reduced the number of Marys, as the brides were called, to three and saved the cost of nine costumes and nine marriage portions. The next year, running for re-election, he carried the lower taxes platform a step further, and substituted the three girls, and substituted 12 dolls. These wooden beauty contest winners came to be called Little Marys or marionettes. Century Magazine.

LYCEUM DATES FIXED FOR SERIES OF WINTER PROGRAM

Five Numbers Listed With Local Committee With First Date of Appearance November 4th.

Announcement of the local Lyceum program dates and a list of the talent to be supplied is being welcomed by Chesapeake folks who desire and care for this high class entertainment during the winter months. In an advance notice from the Interstate Lyceum Bureau the opening date is November 4th when Grove Herbert will be the attraction. On January 13th "The Climax" will be the second number; January 31, The Boyds and Katherine Guthrie; March 16, The Rivera Artists; April 19, Randall Ensemble Players.

The program as outlined for the coming winter season is said to be the strongest program yet furnished locally and with the new auditorium in which to stage the performances, it is considered quite likely that patronage will be unusually large. Success of the lyceum has been somewhat hampered in the past because of inadequate presentation facilities and the new auditorium is expected to remove any doubts on this particular point.

Season tickets are to be priced at a very low figure in the hope that more people will be able to see and hear the programs. With seating capacity at approximately seven hundred in the auditorium it is hoped at least half that many season tickets may be sold.

WILL ASK QUARANTINE
Washtenaw county board of supervisors at its next meeting in October will be requested to take immediate steps towards the establishment of a closed quarantine line along the border of Washtenaw county to prevent the importation of all cattle not tested for tuberculosis. Two cattle clubs in the county have drafted resolutions to this effect and will present them to the board at the first meeting.

This quarantine would require examining of all cattle before being permitted to cross the borders of the county. A modified quarantine has been in effect about the county since January 1 of this year. Under this, steers may be permitted to come into the county, providing the purchaser agrees to keep them separate from the rest of the cattle. This agreement, however, has been disregarded in numerous cases.

VILLAGE TAXES DUE
I will receive the Chesapeake village taxes, which are now due, at my store every business day until further notice.

Make Use of Animal Bone in Various Ways
The Chinese have added to their industries by the use they make of bones, allowing very few, if any, animal bones to go to waste. The large section of the back leg of the cow is used for making mah-jongg tiles, and Chinese workers, despite their extensive use of imported material, maintain that the tile from the native bone is superior, lasting longer than that from the imported product.

Of the rib bones, only the upper part and ox is used in making handles for knives, fans and similar articles. These three parts are white and clean when properly treated, while the remainder are usually cartilaginous, or defective in grain. The third section of the rear bone in the sheep leg is used to make cigarette holders and pipe stems, and this bone, it is said, is the only one from the sheep which can be used in the manufacture of other things besides fertilizer. Chinese pipes of this sheep bone are extensively used in certain parts of the country.

Vast Supply of Food in Waters of Ocean
Besides the fishes familiar to all, the herring, mackerel, cod, etc., there are others unknown to our menus, which are nevertheless suitable human food, says John T. Nichols, curator of fishes of the American Museum of Natural History, writing for the Forum.

Even the precious shark can be utilized. At present sharks probably take a toll of food from the sea equal or even greater by several times than man. If the sharks were gone, man would have what the sharks now take from him. The uselessness of sharks has been demonstrated by recent investigations. Many of them are perfectly good to eat. Their oil has various desirable properties, and excellent leather can be made from their hides. The residue may be ground up and used for fertilizer. This much is certain: when once the necessity arises, the sea can stay man's hunger for a long time.

Too Elaborate
The head of the house had telephoned that he would bring home a guest to luncheon—a guest whom his wife realized he would delight to honor. Preparations were made accordingly.

Unfortunately, six-year-old Gladys came in a trifle late. She swept the table with an all-embracing glance. "Hum!" she muttered audibly, as she climbed into her chair, "is this lunch?"

"Why, of course, it's luncheon," Gladys said her mother, with a reproving gesture.

But Gladys was not to be stayed. "Well," she replied, "maybe it is; but it looks exactly like Sunday dinner."

Law on English Dads
Under the new English law a wife can now get a separation order on the grounds of her husband's cruelty to her children instead of only to herself.

Julius Caesar

NOW that you have me in your power you would be wiser to kill me than to hold me for ransom.

"Why?" asked the puzzled pirate captain.

"Because," laughed the prisoner, "when I am free I shall return and kill you."

The young man, who thus jested with death, was small, bald and of harsh, aquiline features. He was Caius Julius Caesar, a Roman of high rank, exiled from his home city. He had fallen into the hands of Cilician pirates and his attendants had gone to seek his ransom. When they came back with it he promptly armed a fleet, returned to the place of his captivity, overcame and crucified the pirates, according to his promise.

Rome, being a republic, was for centuries swayed by two contending factions—the Patricians and the Plebeians. In the early part of the last century B. C. the city had passed under the dictation of one Sulla, whose political rival was Marius, Caesar's uncle by marriage. Sulla drove Caesar from Rome and kept him out of the city for years, during which period of exile the young man proceeded to perfect himself as a soldier, a writer, a statesman and an orator. He was destined to make marvelous use, later, of all these accomplishments.

After Sulla's death Caesar returned to Rome, receiving high office in the state. He spent the next twelve years in building up the welfare of the plain people, whose fortunes were at low ebb, and in trying to heal civil disputes and secure equality for all Roman citizens. This course made him tremendously popular with the people, even while his extravagance plunged him deep into debt. At the age of forty he formed a triumvirate (triple alliance) with two famous men, Pompey and Crassus, by which the three were virtually to share among them the sovereign power of Rome. Caesar, in the division of Italy, Gaul (France and Switzerland) and the Alps.

This office was no sinecure, for the provinces were swarming with insurgent tribes. For the next eight years he was constantly on the battlefield, often fighting in the front rank like a common soldier; little by little subduing all Rome's Gallic foes. He conquered Gaul, hurled the Germans back over the Rhine and made that river a Roman boundary; crossed into Britain, and, after one repulse, conquered the country that is now England; then, as Gaul again rose in a mighty confederacy of revolution, he crushed the uprising and stemmed the tide of barbarism which would otherwise have swept over the Alps and engulfed Rome.

He kept a chronicle of his campaigns which, as "Caesar's Commentaries," has endured for nearly 2,000 years as the foremost Latin textbook for schools and a model of literary style.

Caesar died and Pompey and Crassus quarreled, thus breaking up the triumvirate. Pompey's party was in power in Rome. To weaken the great general who was becoming the people's idol, the senate, at Pompey's order, deprived Caesar of office, ordering him to give up his command at once and to return home, under penalty of a treason charge. Caesar had two courses open to him: either to obey meekly and to lose all he had gained, or to defy the order and thus render himself liable to death as an enemy to Rome. The river Rubicon divided the Gallic province from Italy, should he cross that river under arms it would be an act of open war against Pompey.

Caesar did not hesitate. With his legion of veterans he crossed the Rubicon, thus irrevocably committing himself as Pompey's foe. Pompey, having no army sufficient to cope with him, fled, leaving the field clear to his victorious rival. Caesar, after making himself master of the Italian peninsula, returned to triumph in Rome, where he was hailed as dictator. Pompey raised an army in the East, but was beaten by Caesar (who met him with a far smaller force), and soon afterwards was murdered. Pharnaces, Asian king of Pontus, next defied Rome, and Caesar, subduing him in one brief campaign, sending home this brief report of the victory: "I came, I saw, I conquered."

A later conquest of Spain made Caesar master of nearly all the world. He ruled Rome justly.

But ambition wrecked him as it had wrecked Alexander. He was too great a conqueror of the world he longed to conquer. Rome hated the idea of a king. Mark Antony, Caesar's friend, publicly pressed royal honors on him. The people stood mute. Caesar, quick to feel the public pulse, refused the crown.

A faction rose against him, working secretly for fear of the populace. Its ringleaders, Cassius, Cato, Cicero and other demagogues and political schemers, lured Marcus Brutus, Caesar's best friend, into the conspiracy under pretext that national welfare demanded Caesar's death. In the senate, March 15, 44 B. C., the conspirators fell upon Caesar and assassinated him.

Rome's old-world greatness was due to Caesar more than to any other man.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

Marc Antony

MARC ANTONY—hero and but-fool; true lover and faithless husband; great general and greater mountebank; orator, statesman, voluptuary and trifler—threw away the world for love. He was the hero of the most stirring real-life romance in history. He might have been a second Julius Caesar or even Alexander. He preferred to be the helpless addressee of the Egyptian queen, Cleopatra.

As a mere lad, Antony served with distinction in Rome's Syrian and Egyptian wars, and later in Gaul under Caesar, whose lifelong friend he became. When Pompey made the senate order Caesar to disarm, Antony, as tribune of the people, vetoed the bill and then fled to Caesar's camp disguised as a slave, pretending his life was in danger for his loyalty. He fought valiantly in the Gallic wars and deserves much credit for Rome's victories. As reward, when Caesar became dictator, Antony was made second in command and appointed governor of all Italy.

In his latter capacity he launched on a course of wild dissipation that Rome agonized. The dictator, Cleopatra, being a republic, was for centuries swayed by two contending factions—the Patricians and the Plebeians. In the early part of the last century B. C. the city had passed under the dictation of one Sulla, whose political rival was Marius, Caesar's uncle by marriage. THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

The Age of Chivalry

A GROUP of armed men rode into the French city of Tours. Three of them had patches over their left eyes; two had not spoken in a year; another's right arm was bound to his side. Each wore in his helmet a glove, a veil or a jeweled sleeve.

Now, none of these men were injured in the eye or arm and none were dumb. They were simply "underaged" knights. All they were products of the Age of Chivalry—an age that began in common sense and decency, culminated to a form of eccentric insanity, and left world-wide influences for good.

Chivalry had its earliest rise before the days of Charlemagne and was at its height a century or so after his death. It took its name from "cheval" (a horse), and meant originally "cavalry"—the idea being that horsemen belonged to the higher and noble classes—in other words, to the knight-hood class.

The times were lawless, governments were unsettled, might overruled right and the weak were driven to the wall. To correct these abuses, knight-hood, or chivalry, was instituted. Its basic principles were protection of the helpless, courtesy, reverence of women, the redressing of wrongs and personal uprightness.

As the men who took such pledges belonged to the wealthier and "armed" classes, they were in a position to make good their vows. In times and countries where laws were often unenforced and where abuses flourished uncorrected on every side, the assistance rendered to women and to the poor by powerful noblemen was the chief thing that kept the world from relapsing into utter barbarism.

But as time went on chivalry was carried to idiotic extremes, especially regarding women. Knights would marry for financial or other motives of expediency. Their wives were usually regarded as mere housekeepers and nurses. Those knights, by the customs of chivalry, was supposed to have some feminine object of adoration, in whose name and for whose honor he was expected to perform prodigies of valor. This woman to whom he dedicated his deeds was seldom, if ever, his wife. In fact, she was nearly always some one with whom he had never spoken and who, perhaps, did not know of his very existence. It might be a damsel whose face he had seen at a joust; whose picture he had chanced to behold; or perhaps some woman of whom he had merely heard or read.

But henceforth she became his guiding star, the object of his reverential homage; the loved one whose glove, veil or sleeve he aspired to wear in his helmet; for whose glory he slew other knights, redressed wrongs, succored the needy. If he won glory he was supposed to lay it all at her feet.

And usually that was as far as his acquaintance with her went. Meantime his neglected wife at home took care of his castle, reared his children and submitted tamely to second place in his affections.

The folly of the custom went still further. Men took to wearing patches over their eyes, to maintaining endless silences and to other petty discomforts in the name of the adored lady of their dreams. These patches, fits of dumbness, etc., were to endure until the victim had performed some deed he considered worthy his lady's praise.

At the age of twelve a boy of good family would be sent to the castle of some famous knight, or other noble. There he became a page. Besides learning horsemanship and the use of arms he was supposed to fetch and carry for the women of his master's family, learn hair-dressing, lute-playing, reading, singing and other supposedly gentlemanly arts, including heraldry, the rules of etiquette and the flowery, high-flown speech of the day. When a little older he was promoted to the rank of squire and was permitted to carry his lord's shield and spare weapons and to accompany him everywhere as a sort of upper servant. Later, through some deed of prowess or by courage in the field, he qualified for the golden spurs of knight-hood, taking the solemn vows and preparing for the accolade (or ceremony of investiture) by fasting and prayer.

In time, of course, knight-hood, like other good things, became corrupt. Many knights forgot their vows, wrung money from the poor and mistreated the helpless. But the true spirit of chivalry never wholly died. To it we owe the best of medieval culture and progress, the upholding of order, religion and the small, sweet courtesies of life. Without it progress would have been set back for centuries and women relegated to the rank of mere slaves.

Romance, fair play, etiquette, modern regard for women and the public impulse of charity—all these had their rise in chivalry.

While chivalry was perhaps an era rather than an "event," yet a knowledge of its history and customs is necessary to a full understanding of the motives prompting the Crusades and other great adventures which history records.

From the Tenth to the Fifteenth century chivalry was in its prime. Its follies, and absurd regulations then began to decline, but its inestimable benefits will always endure.
