Merry Christmas

WITH 1926 drawing rapidly to a close we can look back over its twelve months as they have passed in this community, and we find in them much that we will wish to remember, and but very little we will want to forget.

The Christmas season of 1926 brings to us a record of twelve months of community peace, of community good will, of community prosperity, and an increased community hope for the dawning year of 1927.

During 1926 we have enjoyed our neighbors, our friends; we have laughed with them in their hours of merriment, and we have grieved with them in their bereavements and consoled them as best we might. This is as it should be. It is such things that the spirit of Christmas teaches us. It is the lesson brought to us by the Man of Gallilee nineteen hundred and twenty-six years ago.

During 1926 we have grown better individually and collectively; we have evinced a greater degree of tolerance, of human kindness, of love and faith, than in any previous year, and this is but an evidence of the increasing betterment of the race.

With a backward glance over the records of 1926 we find every good reason for believing this Christmas season is to be the best we have ever enjoyed. We know that those blessings, faith, hope, love, peace, that were brought to the race with the dawn of the Christian era are with us today in greater degree than ever before. We know we will receive a greater number of hearty Christmas greetings, a greater number of friendly smiles, and what comes to us will come to each and every individual in our community, including our Merry Christmas to each and every one.

DR. FRANK KINGDON SPEAKS TO M. E. FELLOWSHIP CLUB

Approximately 150 Fellowship club members and ladies of the Methodist church enjoyed a splendid address by Dr. Frank Kingdon of the Central Methodist church, Lansing, at a meeting of the club on Tuesday evening. Preceded by a scrub lunch supper serviced by men of the church, Dr. Kingdon's address held the rapt attention of his audience during one of the most profitable evenings ever staged by the club. Taking for his subject "The Aristocratic Tradition," Dr. Kingdon drew word pictures of American history and its characters to show the result of both heredity and environment in the shaping of lives of some of America's greatest men.

Dr. Kingdon is a forceful speaker, possesses a pleasing personality and, combining these with a knowledge of the subject upon which he spoke and his popularity as a radio broadcaster of religious services from his Lansing church, he proved to be instructive as well as entertaining in his appearance here Tuesday.

STAGE ALL SET FOR BIG FEED AND PROGRAM TONIGHT

With the chicken in the process of cooking, and potatoes peeled, tables arranged, silverware and dishes placed, and auditorium decorated, only the arrival of an immense crowd is being awaited at the high school to start off one of the biggest events of its kind ever to be staged locally. At 6:30 this evening more than four hundred guests will sit down to a sumptuous banquet prepared and served by students of the public school. Strains of music emanating from Smith's orchestra will be heard by diners as they proceed to devour some of the choicest poultry available for such an occasion—and, if reports are true, there will be poultry a-plenty for all.

Following the banquet and when all have been satisfied physically, the stage curtain will be drawn aside while folks gaze for the first time on a stage splendidly equipped with new scenery, lighting effects, etc. With this setting for a background more than two hundred school children will participate in an elaborate pageant which has been in the making for several weeks. A general open house is included in the evening's program and interesting displays of the individual work of pupils will be enjoyed.

All of which has been offered to the general public for $1—any one feature of the evening being well worth the price charged for them all.

COUNTY IS BUILDING ON' ERT ROAD

PLUMBING and HEATING
WILKINSONIA BUILDING

AFTER a continuous fall of snow for over forty hours, the small town of Bethel was covered with a pure white mantle on the day before Christmas.

Over the hills the tinkling sound of sleigh bells was music upon the frosty air of the early winter morning as Judge John Wainwright looked out of the chamber window of his farmhouse. As he peered out of the little panes of glass with their tiny draperies of snow he saw Jasper Jones with his two-hitch plow breaking a way through the narrow Main street of the town, while an occasional salute of "Good mornin', Jasper!" came from neighbors as they shoveled paths from their gateposts.

"Reckon we'll have a real Christmas—snow nearly two feet deep—came down pretty heavy!" remarked Jasper.

The words "a real Christmas," with the sound of sleigh bells, rang all day long in the ears of Judge Wainwright, even after he had finished his supper in company with his wife and son Roland. "Rolley" and his wife, Marion, lived with Judge and Mrs. Wainwright. Marion, being somewhat ill in her room, was unable to join in the evening meal.

After supper Judge Wainwright climbed the handsomely carved old colonial staircase, and when he had reached the seat on the landing he sat for a moment on the red velvet cushion to glance down at the hall with the tall clock ticking merrily and the log fire snapping happily, its rosy glow painting the white walls and their decorations of greenery—such a picture! And the Christmas joy of the olden days came to him. He had romped on these same stairs with a happy heart, with his sister Lucy at his heels. Yes, Lucy—there was the one shadow on the joys of Christmas Eve. Lucy had married against the wishes of her family, and as a result none of the family were on speaking terms with her. Lucy, a widow, feeble, but graceful in her age of seventy-five years, lived in the little cottage on the Wainwright estate, cut off with a very slight income by the will of her father, John Wainwright.

Judge Wainwright went up to his study and looked out of the dormer window upon the night. The sky was clear and a large star shone brightly above the distant hill of pine trees and all the other stars seemed to twinkle happily about it. The loveliness of the landscape charmed him, and, relaxing from any other thoughts, he turned the light very low and lay upon a couch near the window.

When a loud knock upon the door startled him he realized he had fallen asleep and the excited voice of Sarah, the colored maid, called to him that "Missus Marion done took very sick."

It was the midnight hour when Judge Wainwright again stood by his study window and glanced out again into the night. The big star was high and luminous and long beams seemed to stream from it as it hung aloft, over the little town of Bethel. A new joy had come into the Judge's heart, for a new-born babe had come into the home. And as he turned from the window he glanced at a pictured motto on the wall, placed there by his own mother. It read: "Blessed Are the Peacemakers, for They Shall Be Called the Children of God." Speedily the bitterness toward poor Lucy which had been in his heart for so many years had departed and the tears came to his eyes. He determined then to make the grandest peace upon the Christmas day. He would call upon Lucy himself, ask for her forgiveness and announce the glad tidings of a son—a most glorious gift bestowed by God in the old Wainwright homestead. It was a day of real Christmas rejoicing, upon which the spirit of the man who said "Peace upon earth" rested and the little town of Bethel had its share in the advent of a new citizen—John Wainwright, III.

American Santa Claus

The American Santa Claus is a corruption of the Dutch San Nicholas. G. H. McHughes says: "Santa Claus, the name derived from Saint Nicholas through the familiar use of children in Teutonic countries, crossed to America. The direct route followed by him is somewhat open to question. On the way he traded his gray horse for a reindeer and made changes in his appearance."

The POSTMAN and CHRISTMAS

by MARY GRAHAM BONNER

Ever since she had been a child she had thought that the postman was about the most interesting person in the world. He it was who brought all the letters and packages and papers and magazines, who always might be bringing any number of surprises.

To be sure, he often passed the house without leaving anything, but then there was always the chance that he might bring anything.

At Christmas time he was the most wonderful sort of a person, with his bag filled with presents and cards and calendars and letters from friends she was sure would not forget her, and from friends she was so pleased had not forgotten her.

Sometimes he brought just the nicest delicious mail of all—sometimes he brought a fruit cake, or a box of candy that a friend of hers had made.

No it was that she, Minnie, had always loved postmen in general, and now it seemed as though she were being particularly fond of one postman in particular. He was on their route and he often came in and chatted after the day's work was over.

She had gone to school with him and she had always liked him. The old postman was a dear—no matter how many bundles he was carrying at Christmas time he always seemed to be happy that his load was heavy, because it meant just that much more joy along the route.

But he had retired and now every Christmas they took his present to him and sat and chatted with him and with his wife, who always brought out her Christmas cake to be shared by all.

She had not been displeased when the schoolday friend had been given this route.

Not displeased at all.

Ray was tall and very good-looking. She thought he looked so well in his postman's uniform. And certainly he seemed a little interested in her.

She was not displeased in this.

Not displeased at all.

Christmas Day, he had said, there would be no mail delivery. So she was a little surprised to see him coming down the street and up the steps of their house.

"I wonder if we're going to have mail after all," she said to herself. It hadn't occurred to her that he was not in his postman's uniform, and that he was coming just to see her. To be sure, he stopped in when he was off duty, but she had never quite felt he was so much interested in her as that he enjoyed the whole family. She did belong to such a nice family, so jolly and cordial and friendly as they all were, and such fun.

And then it was all so clear, as they sat before the fire that Christmas afternoon, that he was interested in her—very, very much interested in her. More so than she had even thought or hoped or dreamed.

In fact, he told her all about it.

And she was not displeased.

Not displeased at all.

Nor was he displeased.

Not displeased at all.

For she agreed that to be a postman's wife was not such a bad idea, and that, apart from everything else, it would be so particularly nice to know that the postman was going to come to one's house every single day in the whole year—to their own house.

And, as she said, it was such fun being engaged to a postman in the Christmas season.

He had not been too busy to think of her!

Exterminating Garlic

The Purdue plan for getting rid of wild garlic consists of fall plowing in such a manner as to bury all the garlic tops, followed by spring plowing and either a cultivated crop, such as corn or potatoes, or soy beans or cowpeas. ### Merits of the Fuchsia

The fuchsia is one of the gardener's most valuable plants, not only for the beauty of its flowers but the useful form of the plant but also because it is adaptable to flower beds and borders and grows with such freedom and such little care. Pure Food Store

IT WAS cold along the Seine that Christmas Eve. There was a thin rain, half snow, and a nasty, penetrating wind coming up from the river that sent chills trembling down one's back.

Little Juliette Caret blew her breath against her hands to warm them and pulled her ragged little coat more tightly about her. She was the sole support of a family of four—this little, shivering tot, who stood always before the door of Notre Dame selling holy cards and medals to people as they passed in or out of the church.

Her mother was very ill and the three other children of the family—younger than Juliette—were too little to do any kind of work. How she would have loved to bring home something very special for them this Christmas!

On her way to the church this evening she had stopped to look in at the window of a patisserie shop and her heart was taken with a great cake in the center—all white with dots of large red cherries around the sides. The price was ten francs. She took out her little worn purse and counted—two francs, five sous. Slowly she closed the purse and put it back in her pocket. The cake was out of the question. It would have to be a loaf of bread only.

All evening she had stood in front of the church, but had made almost nothing. Great numbers of people were coming to the midnight mass, but they all passed by little Juliette with only an annoyed "Non, non, non!" A little later there was almost nobody coming. She could hear the organ playing. Mass had begun.

She would have hurried home but her feet were numb with the cold. Besides, she thought, she really ought to go in and say a little prayer for her mother.

Slipped Quietly Into a Seat of the Large Church.

She opened the huge door of the cathedral, slipped quietly into a seat of the large church and prayed fervently for her mother and little sisters; prayed, too, that she might, somehow, be able to buy them a cake for Christmas!

The heat of the church after the intense cold outside made her drowsy. She went fast to sleep and her head fell heavily against the shoulder of a man sitting next to her.

The man was an American. He was at first annoyed when he saw the little towseled head with its dirty cap against his coat-sleeve, but on second glance at the pathetic little figure he was overcome with genuine emotion. "Poor little devil," he thought, "wonder what's been your short history and what will it be in the future." He saw in her dirty little hands the strings of medals and the box of holy cards she had been trying to sell. He reached into his pocket, pulled out two crisp 1,000-franc notes, folded them carefully and placed them on top of the cards.

Almost everyone had left the church when Juliette wakened. Mass was over; all the candles on the altar had been extinguished, the lights of the church were being put out. Juliette rubbed her eyes drowsily and with a start counted her medals to see that no one had taken any while she slept. They were all quite safe. She next turned to her box of cards and her eyes became two large moons. "Two thousand francs, two thousand francs!" She couldn't believe it. It was a miracle! Hadn't she prayed for money to buy her people a Christmas gift? She knelt down again and said a fervent prayer in thanksgiving; then gathered all her things together and ran quickly from the church—past the confisserie shop. It was closed, of course, but the white cake was still in the window. Tomorrow morning she would go there early and buy it—buy every good thing in the shop. And still there would be enough left to buy them all clothes in the after-Christmas sales. She leaped joyously in the air. She did not feel the cold now.

"Merry Christmas," she called to an old lady who passed her. "Merry Christmas to the whole world!"

Chelsea Electric Light and Water Department

People who call on the inmates of furnished rooms either wait in the hall while the footsteps that brought the means of ingress go upstairs and become responsible for knocks somewhere in the darkness, or go downstairs into oblivion, leaving the caller to a personally conducted tour of exploration for the discovery of "two flights up; —th door."

The top floor at Mrs. Cawthorn's was an exception to furnished room rules, for two of the doors stood wide open all day. The one in front, facing north, disclosed a tiny, desolate room containing a narrow iron bed, a chair, a bureau furnished with meager toilet fittings, a trunk, and a corner curtained off for a wardrobe.

The door opposite disclosed an entirely different interior. In one window a bird in a brass cage sang above blooming plants and in the other an old lady sat in a rocking chair, when she was not peering out into the hall, or leaning over the banisters, or trotting about on visits.

Every morning precisely at 7:45 the door of the north room opened and a little, weazened shabby old man pulled the corner of the trunk forward to keep it so. Then he hung a very small empty aluminum milk can on his wrist, put its cover in his pocket, took up a neatly tied package of refuse and went away.

Mis' Bascomb got his story from the servant the morning she arrived and found him a case after her own heart. He was Amos Binks; he had lived in that room for ten years.

Christmas drew near and she was very busy making presents and planning surprises and treats among her multitudinous friends, but every time she passed Binks' door her heart ached for him, and so the days passed and it was Christmas Eve.

She had been out shopping all morning; her arms were full of bundles and her heart of plans; but she glanced, as she always did, at Binks' door, and what she saw there brought her to an abrupt stop with tears running down her cheeks. Poor old man, poor old man! On the miserable bureau, among the meager toilet things there stood a Christmas tree, a very small one, and as desolate and bare as the room. The poor, proud old creature had Christmas in his heart. She would give him a surprise.

She selected the choicest of her purchases and laid them, gayly tied with red ribbons and bits of holly, on the foot of his bed. She hung the stark little tree with bags of candy and all sorts of jolly trifles, chuckling over his surprise and delight as she departed to replenish her stock for tomorrow's festivities. He would never know. Bless him.

That morning as he was going out the little woman with three children had popped her head out of the front parlor door and asked if she might leave her Christmas tree in his room so the children would not see it.

"It's the last place in the world anyone would look to find a Christmas tree," she said.

Binks had borrowed three lumps of sugar from her when he had a cold and he had worried about having to buy a whole half pound to return it. This would cancel the obligation.

"If you don't make any mess," he said sourly and went out.

He had forgotten all about the tree when he returned that evening and he was even more than usually sour and bitter, for he could not avoid giving presents to the children of his partner and the janitor of the office building. It was one of the penalties of wealth. Thank goodness, no one at the rooming house had the ghost of an idea that he wasn't poor Amos Binks, although he was Amos Binks, the millionaire.

He stopped in the doorway of his room in a paralysis of amazement when he saw the tree and the presents, and then a smile infinitely sly and sneering broke over his face. He glanced at Mis' Bascomb's door; it was closed, but he understood and chuckled. He heard steps coming stealthily upstairs, the little woman coming for the tree! He stripped it of its decorations with hasty fingers and carried it out to her.

"It's in my way," he said testily.

The day after Christmas he deposited to his own credit at the bank $6.50 which he had intended to spend on Christmas presents until Mis' Bascomb gave him enough to go round, and keep a nice warm pair of socks for himself.

Cheap Seismograph

An instrument for detecting earthquakes, so simple of construction and so cheap that it could be installed in every home, has been perfected by a government scientist. The instruments now used are cumbersome and expensive, and consequently there are relatively few in operation throughout the world.

Change to Fit the Times

Why not change the name of the cowcatcher to autocatcher? Trains hit fewer cows than automobiles. Does that mean automobiles have less sense than cows have?—Atchison Globe.

Versatile Steeplejack

All the qualifications of the wireman and more are part of the stock in trade of the steeplejack. He cannot take laborers to the top of a lofty church spire or chimney which needs repairing, so he must be prepared to work as mason, slater, bricklayer and carpenter.

Monopolizing Papa

"Mother, I thought Santa was going to bring me a train and choo-choo for Christmas."

"Well, he did bring them to you, didn't he?"

"Well, there's papa's, but where's mine?"

The City of Been

In Holland the story of the city of Been is told every Christmas. This wonderful place was famous for its magnificence and beauty, and also for its wickedness and shamelessness. One day the whole city was swallowed up by the sea. It is said that every Christmas Eve the bells of the churches of the submerged city are heard to ring again.

Christmas Eve

Christmas Eve refers to the evening of December 24. The word "eve" in general means the evening before, from the Jewish mode of reckoning the day as beginning at sunset.

All He Wanted

Department Store Santa—And what do you want for Christmas, little boy?

Youngster—Nothin' but a three-step polyphase heterodyne regenerative unit and a reflex inductive oscillatory tube for my radio.—Juggler.

Real Home Joy

Slimlie—As self-satisfied as a fellow who has just succeeded in threading a needle for his wife.—Baltimore Sun.

Keep Eliminative System Active

Good Health Requires Good Elimination

ONE can't feel well when there is a retention of poisonous waste in the blood. This is called a toxic condition, and is apt to make one tired, dull and languid. Other symptoms are sometimes toxic backaches and headaches. That the kidneys are not functioning properly is often shown by scanty or burning passage of secretions. Many people have learned the value of Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, when the kidneys seem functionally inactive. Everywhere one finds enthusiastic Doan's users. Ask your neighbor!

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving memory of our dear son, Harold G. Hinderer, who died suddenly one year ago December 20, 1925.

Peaceful be thy rest dear Harold,
'Tis sweet to breathe thy name;
In life we love you ever dear,
In death we do the same.
The flowers we lay upon your
Grave may wither and decay,
But the love within our hearts
Dear Harodl, will always stay.
Gone is the face we love so dear,
Silent the voice we loved to hear;
'Tis sad, but still we wonder,
Why the best are always first to die.

Sadly missed by the Parents.

ADVERTISING—ITS WORTH

Every little three-line item you read has turned the wheels of some great factory. Every time you see a cut price the number of gray hairs in the world has been increased.

Many an advertisement is planned a year before it ever finds its way into print. One advertisement in Philadelphia a few years ago opened up the copper mines in Colorado six months before it ever appeared. A thousand miners began digging copper on a contract of brass beds that were going to be made that were going to be advertised.

You see perhaps some piece of muslin wear advertised whose trimming is pretty, or some gown whose design is elegant. The chances are that a hundred styles were discarded or changed to get this one for you. And all the while the buyer of your favorite store was picking and choosing he had you in mind. He was building the advertisement that would catch your eye and please your fancy and your pocketbook.

If you had been there you would have heard him telling the manufacturer: "My customers are particular. They must have the best that there is at the lowest price that can be made. You've got to give me something better than you give to anyone else."

Every one of these buyers is fighting for you, and it is up to you to show your loyalty to them.

The store that advertises to trick its customers is almost a relic in this present day.

Many a time you find a bargain that turns out better than the advertisement claimed it to be, and you think somebody, somewhere has made a mistake. But there was no mistake. It was put there purposely to win your confidence.

Every ounce of human integrity is brought to bear upon the advertising of the present day. To write the real story of a single item would be to write a chapter in the history of commerce.

These merchants who have figured on costs till their eyes gave out; these buyers who have studied every angle of their work, are trying to tell you through their advertising just what they have done for you. And the least you can do is to read what they have to say.

The report of all their efforts is in this paper today. The advertising news to you should be interesting news after this.

THE YULETIDE TREE

The Christmas tree is said to be a compartively recent feature of the celebration of the festival, dating back not more than two centuries. The evidence presented in the display of supplies of this attribute of the home observance, and often of the public also, offers proof of the firm hold the custom has gained. If the practice of cutting trees menaces our future supply, apparently the threat has no effect in diminishing the offerings which are in evidence on every hand.

The Puritan settlers of New England have left an impress in many directions on this nation but their non-observance of Christmas is not one of them. In making much of the event we appear to combine many of the customs of the diverse elements which now enter into our composite population of more than one hundred millions. The introduction of a pine tree as a part of the Christmas celebration may have come to us as a feature of pagan feasts but it is not amiss to adapt to modern uses a good thing, no matter what its origin.

DO NOT BE MESSY

"Be careful" is the essence of the annual detailed warning given by postal authorities about wrapping Christmas packages. Lack of care means that the article may be broken or otherwise spoiled, or delayed until after Christmas. And any of those accidents would mean real heart sorrow for the intended recipient and disappointment to the donor.

A broken doll is a tragedy to a child at Christmas time. Crushed cigars do not make the child's father feel happy, while spilled perfume or torn and crushed flowers make no appeal to the feminine members of the household.

That same ordinary prudence with which a housewife would insure safe transmission of home made preserves from one dwelling to another should lead those who use the mails to send presents to wrap the gifts so securely that there will be no danger of breakage.

And if the articles are valuable, it is only good sense to insure them.

Fable: Once there was a fond mother who started her child in school without giving the teacher any advice.

Thousands in America are hungry! But they grimly struggle on until they get down to normal weight.

Philosophy is what persuades a husband that, after all, it is the chivalrous thing to give in to her.

It must amuse the gods to hear the argument that the Filipino will be fit for self-government when he becomes like us.

THE RECORD OF THE SEALS

Two hundred persons dying of tuberculosis each year out of every one hundred thousand population. That was the record in 1907, the year of the first Christmas seal sale. In 1925, for every one hundred thousand population but ninety persons died. A saving each year of more than half the number of lives that were previously lost each year; a saving each year in America of as many lives as America lost in the World War. That means an average saving each year of 55 out of each 100 of the boy babies that otherwise might have died; of 55 out of every hundred of the girl babies; it means that 55 out of every 100 fathers are alive who would otherwise have left their children fatherless; that 55 out of every 100 mothers now can mother the children who would otherwise be motherless; it means hundreds of sanatoriums constructed; hundreds of public health nurses employed; hundreds of clinics held in every nook and corner of the United States; hundreds of children sent to summer camp and preventorium, that too is the record of achievement of the Tuberculosis Christmas Seal, the seal of the blood-red double-barred cross on a shield of white. Those whose shields bear this brave device are enlisted in the war on needless death. But the battle is not won. The lines have wavered somewhat. Last year more deaths were reported than had been reported previously. Tuberculosis is still the chief killer of those who are in the productive years of life.

A good soldier does not desert when the battle is half won. He fights harder. He who buys seals joins the battle. The purchase of seals makes you a soldier. Recruition stations are open everywhere.

CHURCH CIRCLES

Friends, will you kindly permit the Church to offer a bit of Christmas advice? We feel that the American public should offset the slang, profanity and jazz with which they are daily assaulted, by subjecting their minds to thoughts and speeches on high themes, noble hymns and dignified music. Think this over! We wish you all a Merry Christmas.

11:30. The pastor, Rev. Johnson, will preach a Christmas sermon. There will be Christmas music.

Every Sunday school class is taking up the matter of their White Gifts for the Children's Home at Farmington. This gives all an opportunity to make some child happier at Christmas time.

Church night this week was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Hadley, Wednesday evening.

I. B. S. A.

Wednesday evening, 8 to 10, prayer service and Bible study. Topic, Samuel the just judge. Golden text—Direct your hearts unto Jehovah, and serve him only.—1 Sam. 7:3. When and why did Samuel gather the people to Mizpeh, and what happened there? In what capacities was Samuel typical of Christ?

Friday, 3 to 5 Bible study. Topic, A stone of stumbling. Golden text, Isa. 8:14. Why is the stone of Isa. 8:14 called a sanctuary and also a stone of stumbling? Cite New Testament proof of the double fulfillment of prophecy. Does the prophecy of Isa. 8:14 have a double fulfillment? How is Israel after the spirit divided into two houses, and what has been the ambition of each? Both services at John Schenk residence, 235 South St. All interested in Bible study are welcome.

LACK IMAGINATION AT CHRISTMAS TIME

"SAY," inquired Roxy of her intimate friend behind the ribbon counter, "say, Annie, what does she think we are? Fence-posts with a talking machine inside us?"

Annie tossed her bobbed head and looked as arrogant as this season's debutante. "Sure, she does, Roxy. We're nothing but a convenience. A kind of kitchenette that helps feed her fancies. These swell dames make me sick! I wish they had to stand on their feet and smile at a thousand women coming to buy ribbon!"

"Say it with roses, Annie. Say it with roses. I took a hate to Christmas the first year I come here to this store. People never look at you. They look through you and around you and beyond you. Bet you a nickle that woman coming now couldn't tell the color of my hair to save her soul. And I've sold her three hundred yards of ribbon, or I'm a liar. Ain't it fierce!"

Roxy waited for her customer. Like a merchantman under full sail Mrs. A. Saunders-Smythe came alongside the counter. She lifted her lorgnette with languid interest. "Are you the girl who customarily waits on me?" she asked of Roxy.

Swift lightning played over Roxy's head. In a sudden abandonment of anger she looked Mrs. A. Saunders-Smythe straight in the eye.

"Quite likely," quoth Roxy in exact imitation of her customer's indolent tone. "Quite likely, madam. I serve so many. It is difficult to remember."

Mrs. A. Saunders-Smythe looked up in a kind of startled horror at this impudence. Roxy's eyes were bright with tears. She was sick with a terror at her outburst—yet a little proud. She'd lose her job now. Well—it was almost worth it—

For a moment there was silence at the ribbon counter. Mrs. A. Saunders-Smythe took her fill of looking at Roxy. Then quite suddenly she reached out a gloved hand and touched the young girl on the arm.

"I'm sorry—I've been stupid—and unkind! Sometimes we lose our imagination at Christmas. We don't think. I'll always remember you now, child."

The merchantman sailed off.

"Gee!" exploded Annie.

Roxy lifted her voice. "Merry Christmas! Mrs. Smythe!" she called. —Patience Eden.

Christmas Comes But Once a Year

However, we are mighty glad that it comes that often, for we believe that Christmas time when observed in the true Christmas spirit is a most useful season of the year, and we know that we always enjoy seeing our friends have a good time at this period.

It seems right that one week of the year should be given over especially to the cultivation of friendship, good will and innocent festive pleasures. May your Christmas be as merry and as lasting as you could desire, and the New Year filled with peace, health, happiness and plenty.

INDIVIDUAL GIFTS AT CHRISTMAS TIME

MR. AND MRS. BALLEW had been married long enough to forget wedding anniversaries, but were still trying to observe Christmas giving.

"Now, I must give Ray something splendid. Reverses must not stop the Christmas giving. He always gives me more than I do him. My thirty-five dollars will buy him the golf outfit, but then he would be away all the time and I so wanted a tea-cart with my money, so little I can give Ray. He has his ties, socks, and shirts—and they've never been worn—that I gave him last year. I have an idea! I'll fix up a box of them and re-present them. He will never know the difference and what we don't know doesn't hurt us," philosophized Mrs. Ballew.

In rushed Ray to dinner. "Hello, Vi! Christmas is almost here and I've worried no little over what I'll give you, dear, but you deserve the best."

As Christmas drew near Viola hurriedly shopped, but always wound up at the furniture store—looking at tea-carts. "I know what I shall do; I'll get the cart for Ray. It will come in fine when he has his stag parties."

It was Christmas Eve, and if there is anything that delights a woman, at that time, it is the belief that her husband has a diamond in hiding for her.

"Say, Ray, let's give our gifts this evening for we leave so early in the morning, and I want to see the sparkle of mine." Viola noticed Ray's eyes droop but continued: "Honey, I have you a useful gift, something different and one that you can enjoy with the men."

"By Jinks! thought Ray, "she's got my golf outfit. Just what I wanted; strange we always get what we want! I'm a little sorry about Vi's present, but she will be pleased. I paid a good price for it."

Viola rolled in the tea-cart and kept assuring Ray how much he would enjoy it, but was surprised at the happy look on his face.

"Now, Ray, dear, show me mine."

"Well, Vi, I—er see. Well, honey, I'll have to set yours up—but it's a peach."

"A baby-grand piano!" exclaimed Viola; "just what I wanted, and here I've been selfish enough to give you a tea-cart."

"Honey, that's all right. I believe in practical gifts. I wanted to give you something—something you could entertain your club with. I could hardly afford it, dear, but a wife like you deserves the best—I got you—er—well, I got you a radio."—Emily Burks Adams.

CHRISTMAS TIME

YESTERDAY we put away the balls and tinsel; we robbed our tree of its adornment and left a mute witness of many a happy occasion.

Today another tree is decorated. We inhale a balm from its bruised branches and feast on a beauty of line and color. But tomorrow—

Tomorrow never comes. It never comes to those who live and love Christmas. It is always today!

Yesterday is but a memory.

Today is only the great dream of action.

But tomorrow—

Tomorrow is anticipation and dream. We get our inspiration from the love and achievements of yesterday; we gather our courage from the successes and sacrifices of today; and we build our hopes upon our rarest and chosen dreams for tomorrow.

Yesterday. Today. Tomorrow.

Every day is Christmas if the heart is warm with good-will to our fellows. Tens of thousands of happy voices may repeat the songs of the angels, but the notes will fall upon deaf ears unless the heart is properly attuned.—W. D. Pennypacker.

There are all mixtures of crimson and scarlet combined in various forms with a tinge of yellow or orange. No blue has been found.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS

THE world these days is thrilling with the singing of Christmas carols. When the angels sang out their glad news above the plains of Bethlehem, they started all the best music and singing that our world has ever known.—Herald and Presbyter.

Christmas Spirit

By Martha Banning Thomas

Not the green wreath hung on the knocker of the door. Not the gleam of silver tinsel dripping from the Christmas tree. Not the pile of packages heaped about—fat packages, slim packages, packages fairly bursting with their own secrets. Not the plump turkey and cranberry sauce and pies steaming with fragrant, holiday odors. Not the blizzard of greeting cards coming by every mail. Not the exciting ring of the postman who has a special smile as he hands out the letters.

Not the happy voice of the carol-singers who tramp through the snow under the stars to bring a bit of Christmas cheer to those shut away from the usual festivities.

Not bulky stockings knobby with gifts. Not the crunch and squeak of footsteps on snow on a frosty night.

Not these things, alone make Christmas. They all help. They add the happy trimming, as it were. But only as they take on the true spirit of this holy time do they merge into the power and the glory of the precious season.

Christmas! The interlude between the old year and the new. The promise of great things to come. The consummation of things that have gone. The priceless moment when men may reach up and be God-like in their pity and understanding.

The Star of Bethlehem is a symbol—a gift—an opportunity for the justification of the faith that is in us.

Let us be merry. Let us be gay. Let us feel the last full measure of happiness at this happy time. But let us also dedicate ourselves anew to the highest possible expression of Christmastide, tolerance, unselfishness, liberality, peace and good will toward men.

Christmas Giving Is the Year's Opportunity

ROSE stamped a sturdy oxford: "Don't you dare say again you have to give at Christmas!"

Ellis Marsh grinned at his sister. "All right. Where's the fun?"

Rose sat down and explained: "If you'd seen Joey and Betty Boggs last Christmas in their play suits, that I couldn't have given any other time of year, without Mrs. Boggs thinking it was charity! And what luck it was I could give Cousin Eleanor a vase for her car, when she's always taking me out in it."

"Hm m. I might give old Bobby Green something for his car. He's saved me a lot of dull hours on the train. I never could think of a way to do him such a favor."

Rose smiled a little triumphantly and went on: "Then there are the girls at school that I would lose touch with if there were no Christmas. They appreciate my little gifts and appreciate Christmas cards, I can tell you."

"Well, if you're so clever, tell me how to make it up to my stenographer for keeping her late so many evenings."

"Bessie? Why, she'd be delighted if you'd get her a new typewriter. That would eliminate overtime and she could keep up her night school work."

"Tip-top! And I'm going to give the kid that cuddled for me last summer the club he needs to round out his golf set. Then—Well, first, let's see that 'opportunity list' you were showing me."—Frances. Grinstead.

Little Ruth Thankful

Little Ruth, age four years, was given a box of old ribbons and flowers and an old hat with which to amuse herself while her mother went downtown. She trimmed the hat and put it on her head and surveyed herself from all sides in the large mirror, then remarked softly to herself, "I look pitty now, thank goodness."

IT WAS his first Christmas in the city. He could not afford to go home, nor could he have gone if he had had the money. He was clerk in a store, and had to work Christmas Eve till ten o'clock. The last train for his home town left at three in the afternoon. And there was no use going up on Christmas day for just an hour; five hours each way on the train, total fare over ten dollars, for one hour at home; one-third of a week's pay! No, that would be extravagance. So he had sent his mother two pink silk nightgowns as a solace for his first absence from home on Christmas day. He thought the nightgowns would delight her; she had never had a silk one, and from the way that silk ones were displayed in the city shops, he was sure they were the thing to wear. The night gowns he had sent her, the hankies he had sent his sisters, and the ties for his brothers, had completely emptied his pockets. He always had been generous, but he enjoyed depriving himself for the happiness of others. His generosity this time, however, had gone too far, for he had nothing left with which to buy a gift for Mrs. Addison.

Mrs. Addison was a young widow whom he had met recently in the city. She was a very beautiful woman, and had been most kind to him. He had already been to her small apartment several times to have supper with her and her jolly, foreign-acting father, and sometimes they had all gone to a "movie" together afterwards. But she had never let him pay for their tickets, and he had never done anything to recompense her for her kindness to him. "Your companionship is all we want, dad and I," is what she always said, and he believed her. But he really wanted to take her something nice for Christmas. If only he had kept one of the nightgowns he had sent his mother. But no, that would have been too pretentious and too personal. He must give her something very beautiful, to be sure, but nothing extravagant, even if he could. She wouldn't like that. What was he to do?

For lunch the day before Christmas he had a sandwich and a soda at a drug store. That left him 20 minutes to gaze longingly in the shop windows on the avenue. Such pretty things, he thought he had never seen before—jewelry, clothing, novelties for the delight of women. They seemed just made for Mrs. Addison. But a dollar was all the money he could spare, and what could you get for that? The boudoir lamp he wanted cost five dollars, the desk set eight; and even a decent box of candy would be two dollars and a half.

The jeweler's clock warned him he must get back to work, so wearily he turned the corner and hurried to his own store to so grudgingly dole out to others the things he could not buy himself—for her.

That night he returned to his room empty-handed and mournful. But his fatigue was so great, sleep soon quieted his sorrow.

It was late Christmas morning when he awoke, but there was still time to slick himself up and get to Mrs. Addison's for breakfast at eleven. How original of her to invite him for Christmas breakfast, and at eleven, too! He appreciated those extra hours of sleep. She certainly was a dear.

Breakfast at eleven! Why, that meant he would not have to eat again till night, and then just a simple supper. And THAT meant he saved the price of a Christmas dinner—another dollar! But two dollars—what could he do with that, and all the stores closed? His enthusiasm waned as quickly as it came. And then, suddenly, his eyes saw the beautiful flowers he was watering. They were paper white narcissus he had bought a few weeks before at the "five and ten." The four bulbs and the bowl had cost only a quarter, and here they were with two beautiful sprays of fragrant bloom and one fat bud just ready to break its covering. Their fragrance filled the room. Their beauty would grace any home; yes, even hers. His Christmas shopping problem was solved. He would buy some candy at the corner drug store, and give it with the flowers he had grown himself. Oh, what a jolly breakfast party they would have!

"THIS man says we are here for the night, and no way out of it. We're twenty-five miles from John's, too. Repairs will have to be brought four miles from Coaltown. Those huts down the hill belong to the Loneridge coal mines. The miners will have guests tonight," Mr. Long announced as he drew some tools from his automobile. The mine mechanic who had been procured when Mr. Long had walked to one of the shanties down the long winding hill when his car had refused to go, smiled and informed Mr. and Mrs. Long that he would find a place for them to stay for the night.

It was the afternoon before Christmas, when they were on their way to Mrs. Long's brother John's country home, where the Long children had gone the day before with Mrs. Long's sister's family, to be present at the family Christmas Eve festivities, with a large tree by the fireplace for the families of five brothers and sisters with parents of both Mr. and Mrs. Long. In the car were gifts not only for the Long children but for most of the other relatives. After telephoning from the mine-foreman's office to John's family that they must spend the night at Loneridge, the packages were carried to one of the better looking huts of the foreign-speaking folks who received them hospitably. During the evening, while the hostess was preparing the meal, the woman by means of signs and unintelligible English made Mrs. Long understand that there was little Christmas festivity in the mining town.

"This woman has shown me courtesy and kindness; here is an opportunity to prove some Christmas courage and character," Mrs. Long whispered to her husband as plans began percolating through her mind. Soon the children were helping decorate the small tree which Mrs. Long had brought from her husband's store for younger members of the relatives' families, as well as her own children. Mrs. Schalska popped corn, Christmas-tree trimmings, oranges, nuts, candy and candles were produced from among the packages in the car, and a hurried trip to a small store enlarged the stock of goodies. The children, taking turns in carrying the tree, with Mr. and Mrs. Schalska, Mr. and Mrs. Long started out. Every house with boys and girls, aged or sick ones, was visited. The tree was placed on a table or chair, candles lighted for a moment while some goodies were distributed.

After a visit to each place, the family was invited to accompany this Christmas Cheer company while carols were sung outside and inside until everyone was so happy, that some shouted while others cried for joy. One dear woman after listening to the story of the significance of the Yuletide season which some had made Mrs. Long understand they wished to learn, drying her eyes on the corner of a faded apron, called Mrs. Long an "H-angel." The glad notes of the Christmas caroling soon reached the farther ends of Loneridge, whose inhabitants joined in a community Christmas as they made their way to the large engine house where the tree was placed in the center while they sang patriotic songs. Then, while sacred quietness reigned, Mrs. Long repeated the Christmas story, after which Mr. Long led softly in singing, "All is calm, all is bright," when some one touched Mrs. Long on the sleeve. It was her brother, John, who was waiting in his big car to take them to his home. After their own festivities he had slipped away to bring the stranded travelers as a surprise next morning to all but his wife. As Mrs. Long arranged the packages around the small tree on the table, possibly there were visions of happy faces of Loneridge boys and girls with their note discordant in tone but full of love-harmony while they sang, "All is bright." Perhaps she wondered at the "peace that passed understanding" which she had that Christmas. She may have understood that the Loneridge Christmas Eve would be one of the happiest memories of her life because wherever and whenever the message "Inasmuch" is lived out, there will be "Peace and Good Will Among Men."

A Christmas Carol

A bright and blessed Christmas day,
With echoes of the angels' song,
And peace that cannot pass away,
And holy gladness calm and strong,
And sweet heart-carols flowing free:
This is my Christmas wish to thee!

M. S. C. HORSES RANK WITH NATION'S BEST

That the horses in the herds of Michigan State College rank with the best animals of these breeds in America is shown by a final summary of prizes won by the college livestock at the recent International Livestock Show in Chicago. The fat cattle, sheep, and hogs shown by the institution were also well up in the list of winners at the show.

Percherons exhibited won first on the yearling stallion, Corvisal; first on five year old mare, Maple Grove Leila; first on three year old mare, Utelem; second on two year old mare, Marion; first on yearling mare, Delila; first on stallion and three mares; first on American bred stallion and three mares; first on three mares; reserve junior champion stallion, Corvisal; reserve junior champion mare, Delila; and senior and grand champion mare, Maple Grove Leila.

The M. S. C. winners in the Belgian classes were: first on two year old mare, Manitta de Rubis; fifth on two year old mare, Naome de Rubis; second on yearling mare in the futurity class, Belle Phoenix; third on stallion and three mares; third on three mares; and junior champion mare, Manitta de Rubis.

In the fat stock classes the College won firsts on Oxford wether lambs, on pen of three Oxford wether lambs, on pen of three Tamworth hogs, and also had the champion pen of Tamworths. In carcass classes firsts were won on senior yearling steer carcass, on hog carcass weight 200 to 300 pounds, and on hog carcass weight 300 to 400 pounds.

POTATO FERTILIZER SHOWS BIG RETURN

Use of fertilizer on the Michigan potato crop has paid a fine profit this year. Results obtained on field fertilizer test plots conducted by Michigan State College, in cooperation with farmers who specialize in growing potatoes, show that an average increase of 50.9 bushels an acre was obtained through the use of fertilizers.

This increase in yield was worth over 50 dollars per acre this year. The cost of the fertilizer used was 12 dollars an acre. The average price of potatoes over a ten year period is sixty cents a bushel, and so the average profit which would be obtained from the use of fertilizer would be 18 dollars an acre, based on this year's results.

It is believed that the quality of the potatoes is much improved on the fertilized fields. The better quality is due to the tendency of the phosphoric acid in the fertilizer to force early maturity. The ripe potatoes have a better color and the skin of the tuber is not bruised as easily as that of an unripe potato.

Experiments on the influence of closeness of planting on the yield of potatoes obtained show that close planting increases the yield to a marked degree. The average yield on fields planted 36 by 36 inches was 82.9 bushels an acre. When a portion of the same field was planted 36 by 18 inches the yield was 140.5 bushels. Close planting also reduces the number of hollow potatoes in the crop. There are not so many over sized potatoes in the closely planted field, but the tubers run a nice average size which is desired on the market.

GOVERNMENT IS SUPERVISOR FOR ANNAPOLIS FILM

Secretary of Navy Wilbur Appoints Adviser for "The Midshipman"

The first authentic, authorized photoplay depicting the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis is "The Midshipman," produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer under the supervision of the Navy Department, which is coming to the Princess Theatre on Wednesday and Thursday, December 22 and 23.

In order that "The Midshipman," based on Carey Wilson's story, might be a faithful representation of the American nautical college, Secretary of the Navy Wilbur appointed Admiral Shoemaker, Rear Admiral Nulton, and members of their official retinue, to aid Director Christy Cabanne.

The choice of a suitable player for the leading role of Midshipman James Randall was left to the judgment of the Navy officials and they finally picked Ramon Novarro from a large list of popular motion picture stars submitted to them.

Upon completion of the final details of the filming, a special producing unit numbering 250 technicians, electricians and cameramen was despatched from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios at Culver City, Calif., to Annapolis to begin the preliminary work. The cast, headed by Novarro, soon followed.

During the entire five weeks that the company was engaged in the filming of "The Midshipman" the members lived at Carvel Hall, which hostelry is famous as the stopping place of George Washington and is now the center of Washington and Baltimore social activity during June Week. To reach the Academy the players just had to cross the street.

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company surrounded Mr. Novarro with a cast that boasts of such lustrous names as Harriet Hammond, Wesley Barry, Margaret Seddon, Crawford Kent, Kathleen Key, Pauline Neff, Harold Goodwin, Maurice Ryan and William Boyd.

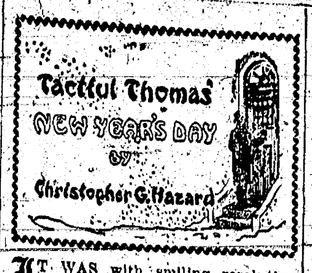
When you want to sell try a "For Sale"



IT WAS with smiling resolution, but also with invincible vanity, that Mr. Thomas Spriggs greeted the sunshine of a New Year's morning. He had determined to be socially active and pleasant, but he had failed to reckon with himself. In assuming that everybody would be glad to see him he had forgotten that his previous faithfulness to calling lists had not always seemed to hit the mark. If some kind friend could have advised and convinced him about his faculty of getting into situations wrong and his ability for saying the things he did not mean to say, he might have profited by counsel, but, as the case was, his powers in these directions were unimpaired. He was still unaware of the fact that he was ironically known as Tactful Thomas.

Thus it was that the day opened characteristically as he shook hands with old man Young and, after the usual New Year wish, stepped on his favorite corn by an unfortunate comparison. Mr. Young was on the other side of seventy, but fond of imagining himself as young as ever, and a mutual acquaintance of the two was this side of that meridian, but with the looks of Methuselah. "How old do you think our friend Smithers is?" asked Young. "Well, I should say about sixty," replied Mr. Spriggs, "but he looks as old as you do!" The conversation was then abruptly ended.

Nothing daunted by Mr. Young's failure to appreciate his wit, Mr. Spriggs proceeded to find his next victim, gayly wishing himself a happy New Year. On his way to Miss Bump's reception he fell in with Mr. Ignatius Friendly, his pastor for many years, and still holding the office. But he presently fell out with Mr. Friendly as follows: "I see," says Spriggs, "I see that the other church is about to lose its pastor. He's been in our town only about three years and now has a call to Bigville. They don't keep a good man long in Bliss-town!"

Arriving at the Bump homestead just in time to be rather late, Mr. Spriggs again distinguished himself in his anxiety to promote social fellowship by introducing a young lady friend of some forty winters to one of the literary lions present. Unfortunately he forgot the name of the lady, so he escaped from his dilemma and fell into a new difficulty by saying: "Professor Fox, let me make you acquainted with—with—with Miss—with one of our old standbys!"

"It Won't Be Long Now."

After this, Spriggs, all unabated, presented himself at the Gladbys in time to say to Judge Upright, who was approaching the axe limit set upon his office, "It won't be long now, Judge, before you will have to go 'way back and sit down."

Perhaps the most interesting adventure of this colorful day occurred at the Robinson party. There he grew increasingly careless, until he finally took his leave with a crowning bon mot. As Mrs. Robinson kept her upstairs room during the festivities, on account of a rather severe indisposition, her daughter, Miss Allura, had done the honors, and to her he made his adieus: "Give my best regards to your mother, Miss Robinson," he said, "and tell her that I hope that she will soon be down and out!"

Talking with his landlady that evening, Mr. Spriggs heard from her that there are many queer people in the world. When he replied that this would undoubtedly continue to be the case after they both had left it, the good lady overlooked the implication and wished him good night.

Nothing interfered with the slumbers of Mr. Spriggs. No ghostly consciousness of an imperfect New Year's day seemed to stand accusingly about his bed. He awoke the next morning to put on the magnifying glasses of conceit with fresh assurance. He will fare forth on January 1, 1927, to commit new depredations upon the conventionalities of society. But people will wish him a happy New Year just the same. They know that he means well with it all and they take his mistakes as contributions to the merriment with which we all desire to enter upon new and promising eras. Some day he will laugh at himself, and, although that would deprive us of amusement, it will do him good. If we could see ourselves as others see us, who would dare to be funny? And if we are queer it avoids monotony and gives us of that variety which has been called the spice of life.

CHRISTMAS AT THE BOARDING SCHOOL

IT WAS a boarding school, but the girls called it "The Bastille." They felt imprisoned as the holiday season approached, and they realized the stringency of their financial condition as they thought of the contributions that they wanted to make to the general and particular Christmas joy. They could bend over the schoolbooks for the few days that separated them from home, but what would the wise girls from the East have to offer upon the Christmas trees on their arrival? Their impecunious state, usually chronic, now alarmed them. There had not been so much consternation since Phil Overbaugh fell overboard at the boat race. A star of hope arose, however, as the conference ended in a resolve to undertake such personal commercial enterprises as might solve the puzzle.

Thus, Betty Gilder, surnamed "Pudge," cut off candy, and appeared with an advertisement of her course in the label that she wore, "Don't feed me, I'm reducing." This promised to be lucrative, as it involved a large reduction in her income tax.

Sue Perkins ("Perky") confessed that she had put a safety pin upon the collection plate in lieu of her usual contribution and pleaded "safety first" as her excuse, but was duly reproved by the class.

Polly Spencer ("Pretty Poll"), and Emmie Gay ("Whoa, Emmie") started an odd job shop in their room, polishing shoes and taking in washing and mending, with lectures at the doors of the girls' rooms on the good effects of bright shoes on dull minds and cautions that no holes larger than a fifty cent piece would be accepted.

Sarah Dodd ("Spiffy"), the class cheer leader, saved three dollars by countering on a book agent. After the agent had enlarged upon the beautiful binding, the thick paper and the lovely pictures of the History of Great Women, and when he had run down and lapsed into silence, Spiffy sweetly refused the opportunity offered to give him a copy of Josephus. That settled it.

Mary Wingate ("Marybud") undertook to learn her catechism, accepting five dollars in advance from her father for the feat. But she balked after the fiftieth question, being only half through, and had to return two-fifty to her parent and report only the same amount to the class. Groans greeted her recital, possibly for her failure.

After all, they had a merry Christmas. Gathering again when the vacation was over, each had much to show for it and everyone had been able to do something for the happiness of the rest.—Christopher G. Hazard.

The Pine Tree and a Christmas Inspiration

The crackling, crunching snow underfoot, as well as the crisp, frosty air bespoke a temperature some degrees below zero. However, native mid-westerners looked for, anticipated and expected a quantity of snow and cold weather for the Christmas holidays. Their expectations were usually right with an added cold stretch long before the holidays, and long after them.

The hard lines of the massive, bulky, stone Central Administration building of the college was delightfully contrasted against the deep white, fluffy, fairy-like snow all about it. This building, as did four others, faced a huge stretch of campus, with groupings of trees scattered pleasingly about to break the wide expanse. Trees, heavily hung with the almost artificial-looking cottony webbing formed an artistic group across the road and in front of the building. In the center of the group stood a well formed, tall, perfect specimen of a long-needled pine. It was singled out to be the proud possessor of many colored lights distributed about generously among its branches. Deserving of praise was this awesome tree, and its surroundings.

Silhouetted against the sky, forming a background for the proud pine tree stood the campanile, the pride of every student on the campus. In the dull afterglow of the winter twilight the chimes were extolling the Christmas carols.

At the foot of the narrow winding staircase of iron which leads to the belfry of the campanile, upon close inspection could be seen a maid and young man—not the first time, nor would it be the last time the campanile should witness such a sight. The meeting had been planned in view of their separation on the morrow when both would go to their homes. Moved by the sight of the proud pine, its symbolism, and the chimes, they bade each other farewell in fond embrace, carrying away with them the spirit of the proud pine tree in their hearts.—Eleanor E. King.

CHRISTMAS OFFER HE DID NOT ACCEPT

Gerald Henry, who was passing the winter in one of the small countries of southeastern Europe, had only to express the desire to meet some of the young ladies of the capital city when he was immediately invited to a Christmas party given ostensibly for the children, but in reality to make an impression on him. The entire C—— family was there with all their relatives, and thirty children with their parents. A gorgeous Christmas tree had been prepared with decorations from America, and imported presents for all the guests.

When Gerald arrived he was ushered into the grand salon, and seated on a divan with Marietta, the daughter of the house. A score of doting mothers raised jeweled lorgnettes to their noses and followed every move he made. Soon it was suggested that he and Marietta step into the garden alone. The air was heavy with the fragrance of tropical flowers; a fountain splashed in its marble basin; and below, the town was like a fairy city in the fading light.

"How beautiful," exclaimed Gerald.

To which Marietta replied in her broken English: "Did-you-say-that-I-am-beautiful?"

He turned and looked at her. No, under no circumstances could she be termed beautiful, unless a two-hundred-pound debutante is beautiful. He led her carefully back to the house.

After a sumptuous dinner, during which the lorgnettes never ceased to concentrate on Gerald, he was assailed as he, but this time by Marietta's brother, who said: "You know, you are a lucky chap. My family will be willing to give you Marietta for a wife with eighty thousand dollars, as a dowry. Or perhaps," he added, "we could give a little more."

Poor Gerald never knew what he replied, nor how he left the house, but all his friends were sure he did the proper thing. That night as he strolled alone along the brilliant promenade, and listened to the orchestra between the trees, his thoughts turned wistfully homeward to an old-fashioned New England Christmas with driving snow, jingling bells, ruddy cheeks, cheery voices, holly and mistletoe, and girls who married for love and not position.—H. Lucius Cook.

"ONE-GIFT" XMAS

"Love to Love, Life, and Law," is the Christmas parcel Jack Reed mailed to himself. It is the only gift he expects to receive, but it will serve him every day in the year, clever Jack Reed startled the members of his club by saying one afternoon just before Christmas.

"It is frequently necessary and wise to present ourselves with gifts in order to enlarge our endowment of learning in the College of Life's Lessons. So this six-word package in a strong box of Courage, wrapped in firm Will-Power paper, bound with Perseverance and Patience cord, was sent to the post office in my Brain building, where it will be delivered to me by a thinking postmaster. Loyalty to God who is Love, to myself who is Life, to my country as well as all other nations—Law—will require all the Power Postage that one mortal may collect."

But Jack Reed feels that he would be unfair to himself and selfish to others if he mailed this gift to anyone else, when he really is "in need" of it.

It is with joyful anticipation that Jack will open the Christmas package so appropriate to his needs for every day, and thank "The Giver of All Gifts at this Yuletide—the Giver of Love, Life and Law," Jack said, as several club members scratched their heads as though trying to discover what the contents of the package were that Jack sent to himself.—Gertrude Walton.

The beaver's dam is one of the natural wonders to almost every young mind, but even older minds haven't been able to discover what a beaver does to a log to keep it from floating when they get ready to build the dam. ### Wrote Immortal Music

Franz Schubert has been called "The Man of a Thousand Melodies," although the Etude, in writing of this, says that it is "a libel upon his enormous fecundity, because he might better be termed the man of 22,000 melodies." It is probable that no other composer of history produced so many themes, many of which are immortal.

THE CHRISTMAS SEASON

HAPPY fatigue. Rushing, hurrying, sitting up late. Doing up bundles. Posting packages. Delivering presents. Getting so tired-out you don't know how you can ever finish and then a new vigor and energy and Christmas spirit coming over you so that you feel you can continue more than ever. Wondering whether it will snow and then snow arriving just in time for Christmas, the stars twinkling down on the white, white earth. Bright red apples with the real flavor of the country. Memories of other Christmases and New Year's, blurred at other times somewhat, but poignantly vivid in the happiness of Christmas-tide. This is the Christmas season.—Mary Graham Bonner.

Making Others Happy Will Bring Happiness

AUNT ELIZA had lived alone for many years; her finances had dwindled, and her health as well.

It was Christmas Eve and as Aunt Eliza returned from town with a few little things that her scant purse could buy, her heart was a little heavy, for the winter was before her and her strength was failing fast.

"I'm glad I got that knife for crippled Jimmy; he so enjoys cutting out those animals. Life is worth while so long as we can give others pleasure, and there is always some one that we can help. I'll read to blind June tomorrow and that will help her and me pass away the day. Tonight I must try to think of some way that I can earn money. Sister would help me if she knew, so would the church ladies, but I simply can't tell anyone. Well, the only way to be happy is to make some one else happy, so I'll take Jimmy's knife to him. God has never forsaken me." All this was going through Aunt Eliza's mind.

As she opened the door she stood face to face with her only sister. She was overcome with joy.

"Oh, Eliza, all the children want for Christmas is you, and they sent me for you. We have a nice home next to ours for you. We will start tonight so we can get there for dinner tomorrow. You shall never feel lonely again."

Eliza continues to believe that making others happy brings happiness.—Emily Burke Adams.

The property of absorbing water seems to be a property of the wood substance itself, and any modification, although it might change the amount of absorption, does not remove the absorptive property entirely.

BREVITIES

GRASS LAKE—Dr. H. A. Orvis and family are arranging to move to Wynetka, Illinois, the last of the month where the Dr. has accepted a position as city health officer. He expects to report for duty January 1.—News.

NORTHVILLE—The first of the week there was a stranger in Northville soliciting contributions for crippled children. It is believed the fellow was an impostor, and at any rate Northville people are asked not to give money to strangers for any of these special causes, unless they present proper credentials.—Record.

FOWLERVILLE—Hugh Stage, aged 17 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Stage, had his hand caught in the snapping rolls of a corn husker while working on the machine for Rolland Boardway on the farm of Eddie Gould on Tuesday, of last week, mangling the left hand so that it had to be amputated at the wrist.—Review.

MANCHESTER—Mr. and Mrs. John Klose who drove to Florida some weeks ago, sent word to their son Clarence that they are on their way back home. Nothing was said as to why they were making the brief stay in the south.—Enterprise. Mr. and Mrs. Klose were former residents of Sharon.

ANN ARBOR—Harold S. Hall, 22, Detroit, was returned to Ann Arbor Friday by Deputies William W. Hamilton and James Dunstone to face a charge of disposing of mortgaged property. Hall, who is being held in county jail awaiting arraignment, is charged specifically with selling an automobile which he was buying on contract.

ANN ARBOR—A $100,000 press building to house student publications was approved by the board of regents of the University at their monthly meeting Thursday night. The full amount has been accumulated from the earnings of the publications and invested in bonds which are in the custody of the treasurer of the University. Definite building arrangements await selection of the site.

ANN ARBOR—Dr. L. H. McKim, 27, of Stockbridge, son of Mrs. Emily McKim of 304 East Madison street, of this city, was killed early Saturday morning at Stockbridge when struck by an automobile driven by Loren Mills of Lansing. It is said that Dr. McKim was repairing a chain on one of the wheels on his car when struck. He has a sister, Miss Dorothy McKim, who resides in Ann Arbor. Dr. McKim was graduated from the University in 1921.

YPSILANTI—Mayor H. Van de Walker refusing to sign the pay check of Manager N. C. Sherwood of Beyer hospital, considering his appointment illegal, the council will undoubtedly go through the regular formality of electing Mr. Sherwood superintendent of Beyer hospital under the ordinance in force at the present time, at the next regular meeting December 20. Three weeks pay was due Mr. Sherwood at the time the check was made out.

PINCKNEY—Last Thursday night some hoodlums broke into the school in the Stackable district, east of town where Leo McClusky is teacher and smashed doors and windows, pulled up seats and committed other depredations. Mr. McClusky on opening school Friday morning saw the damage done and notified the school officers who in turn notified the sheriff. This is the second such outrage which has been perpetrated here and the culprits if caught will be given the full extent of the law. The officers have several persons under suspicion and believe the motive to be grudge work on the part of certain disgruntled parties.—Dispatch.

MASON—Officers of the Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance Company are of the opinion that employees of L. T. Hands, state commissioner of insurance, are in the habit of receiving the best the land affords. They base their claim upon the receipt of a bill for the annual inspection of the accounts made by Neil Gray of the insurance commissioner's office. The items making up the bill are "per diem at $2,000 per year, $5.43; expense, $8.79; total, $14.22." But one day was spent by Mr. Gray in making the audit which is proved by the per diem charge in the bill. What is puzzling the local officers however is how it can be possible for an expense account of $8.79 to be run up in one day. The fare from Lansing is forty cents, good dinners may be had at the hotel or restaurants for seventy-five cents at most and even if Mr. Gray was so ambitious as to appear early enough for breakfast and to stay late enough for supper, he must have contributed generously to charity to run the expense account up to $8.79.—News.

At the recent county summer club achievement night, Miss Eloise Hadley was given first place in the Lyndon Kold Pack Kanning Klub, Miss Corrine Palmer, second place, and Miss Helen Hadley, third place. Miss Irene Stofer was made junior champion. The county champion was chosen from this club and Miss Eloise Hadley as county champion, with expenses paid, is entitled to one week at Lansing during state club week. And we are venturing the hope that you have found your dealings with us pleasant and satisfactory and that our agreeable relations may be continued on through next year.

So The Commercial Proverb Has It, But Business Also Becomes A Pleasure When Legitimately Conducted By Those Who Like Their Work And Who Have Pleasant People With Whom To Deal

It is in this fortunate set of circumstances that we find ourselves this glad Christmas time. Our first aim is to make our business a very useful part of the life of our city; we strive always to merit the approval of the highest moral judgment; and we know that we have one of the best possible patronages of any business firms in the country.

All these reasons combine to make us take a more than usual delight in wishing to you one and all the choicest joys of the Holidays and a generous portion of prosperity through the coming year.

H. B. MURPHY

CHRISTMAS.... Childhood's fondest dream! What memories it brings to us whom the years have passed by....whose hair, perhaps, is sprinkled with a bit o' gray...but whose hearts are ever youthful through this glorious Yuletide season.

Let's all be "little tots" for just a happy moment. 'Member that Christmas "way back when" we just couldn't wait for the day to dawn. How we counted the hours 'til the night before when we eagerly sought a place for our stockings by the fireside...only to be rushed off to bed a few minutes later. How Mother, when tucking us under the covers, would admonish us to "keep quiet or Santy won't leave anything. Go to sleep now, maybe by morning...."

But our youthful curiosity got the best of us. We'd close one eye but keep the other open for a possible glimpse of cheery old Santa en route to the chimney. And we'd lie there and wait for sounds of his sleigh bells...and wait...and wait...until the Sand Man closed our drooping eyelids in dreamless sleep.

Later, perhaps, we'd be aroused to greet his jovial majesty...Santa. Nervously, we'd toddle into his presence...only to be caught up in his arms there to answer what we thought were a million questions before he'd open that bag of Gifts we were so eager to look into. How it all thrilled us...what never-to-be-forgotten Happiness it brought us!

Time, alas, has passed those joyous moments on to other generations. Christmas to us now has a more significant meaning. It's that spreading of good cheer where'er we can... extending the Yuletide Spirit to all mankind in fulfillment of the Christmas message of "Peace on Earth...Good will toward men!" So we find our greatest Happiness in wishing you and yours....
