CHELSEA HI WINS EASY GAME AT DEXTER FRIDAY

Independents Take Game From Ann Arbor. Orients in Scrappy Game at Public Auditorium Tuesday Evening.

Chelsea's high school basketball squad scored rather an easy victory of 88 to 10 over Dexter high school on the latter's floor last Friday evening. The outstanding feature of the game was Chelsea's defensive play, with Paist never letting Dexter have a rebound shot but always taking the ball off the back board and starting it down the floor. Chelsea got away to rather a slow start, scoring only twice from the field the first quarter but the end of the half found Dexter trailing on the small end of a count of 18 to 2. In the third quarter Chelsea repeatedly found the loop due principally to Dexter's poor defensive work. Playing a rousing defense game, Captain Steiner often broke up the Dexter offense before it started down the floor and rang up several easy shots. The general offensive play of the Chelsea squad showed some improvement since the Manchester game a week ago but it is still far from being finished or as smooth running as it might be.

Cushing was easily the outstanding player of the Dexter squad, scoring 8 of their 10 points and being the only Dexter man to score from the field. Two of Dexter's first string men were out of the game because of illness. Grass Lake brings one of the strongest teams they have had in years here for a game this Friday night and this should prove to be one of the best attractions on the local schedule this season.

The Alumni Faculty Girls will play the Chelsea Hi girls in a preliminary game which starts at 7:30.

The line-up:
Player FG FS Pts
Steger, Arnold, c (Capt.) 7 0 14
Dancer, Raymond, f 2 2 7
Beach, David, f 3 1 19
Weber, Jack, g 1 2 4
Paist, Austin, g 0 0 0
Totals 16 6 38

Substitutions: Rogers for Dancer; Steiner for Weber; McLaughlin for Rogers; Myer for McLaughlin, H. Dancer for Steiner.

The Chelsea high school girls' team experienced victory for the third time on Friday, January 14, when they defeated the Dexter high school girls' team by a score of 30 to 18.

The entire team showed up extremely well. The centers, Steiner and Turnbull never failing to secure the ball in the pass work from the guards, Jones and Dancer. From center it was quickly snapped to the ever ready forwards, Ferguson and Haselschwerdt, who rarely failed in their attempt at the basket. Haselschwerdt neatly caging nine field baskets while Ferguson added six.

The line-up was as follows:
Ferguson, f; Haselschwerdt, f; Steiner, f; Turnbull, c; Jones, g; Dancer, g.

Substitution: West for Dancer, third quarter. Be sure and see the fastest games of the season next Friday night.

With a rough and tumble, catch-as-catch-can atmosphere prevailing among players, and spectators expecting any minute to see the players line up and call signals, Chelsea's Independent basketball team battled the Ann Arbor Orients to a 25-20 victory at the public school gymnasium on Tuesday night. Failure of the referee to curb roughness at the very beginning of the game resulted in some of the wildest "tackling" ever witnessed on a local floor.

Starting with some fast work and pretty good shooting, Chelsea ended the first quarter with the long end of a 12 to 4 score. However, in the second quarter the Orients forged ahead and lead with the score 12 to 6 at the end of the half. An orgy of basket shooting on the part of Chelsea during the third quarter gave them the lead necessary to bring in victory and this playing period ended 19 to 16 in favor of the locals. This lead was maintained for the remainder of the game, with the resultant score of 25 to 20.

The last half of the game showed some good team work on the part of Chelsea, systematic playing of the ball toward the basket and a man ready to shoot when the ball got there. Adoption of this method proved effective and finally won the game.

Several good players are included on the Independent team, stars of former high school and parochial teams playing fast and good basket ball. The Orients are not the slowest aggregation ever to come down the pike, and with a sharper eye on the part of the referee would have been a fine exhibition of the cage game. A good crowd was in attendance and with interest in the sport on the up-grade it is safe to predict larger crowds as the season advances.

The lineup:
Ann Arbor Chelsea
Musil f Monroe
Blancett f Madison
Howard c Brooks
Gakle g E. Eder
Wober g Haselschwerdt

The next game scheduled by the Independent team will be played here next Tuesday evening at the public school gym when either Michigan Center or Brooklyn will be the attraction. Negotiations are under way with the neighboring town of

PARMA BANK ROBBED OF $4,000 IN DAYLIGHT HOLD-UP

Luckily for Chelsea, it was the law-abiding folks of Jackson—who got mixed up in their reports of a bank robbery, instead of the bandits who perpetrated the hold-up Tuesday afternoon, when the Parma State Bank, west of Jackson was held up and robbed of $4,000. Telephone inquiries from Jackson stated that it was reported there Chelsea banks had been the victims.

Three men, two of them masked, were responsible for the Parma hold-up, the two masked men entering the banking office while the third waited in a machine outside the bank. Forcing the president of the bank, George Eggleston, two other bank officials and two customers into the vault, the bandits ordered Mrs. Lillian Sanford, assistant cashier, to hand over cash amounting to $4,000 with which they drove away.

The bandits were last seen headed toward Concord, and Jackson police were ordered on their trail, but were unsuccessful in locating them.

ANN ARBOR MAN APPOINTED BANKING COMMISSIONER

Rudolph E. Reichert, Ann Arbor banker, was appointed state banking commissioner by Governor Fred W. Green Tuesday. Appointment of Reichert brings the number of Ann Arbor men appointed to state office under Gov. Green up to three. Prof. Leigh J. Young being appointed state conservation director, and Philip E. Schumacher as a member of the conservation commission.

GABRIEL BOCKRES PASSED AWAY MONDAY EVENING

Gabriel Bockres died Monday evening, January 17, 1927. He was stricken with paralysis two weeks ago and following the stroke, pneumonia set in, which caused his death, in the U. of M. hospital at Ann Arbor. Mr. Bockres was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, August 29, 1842. He was married in Germany and after the death of his wife he came to this country in 1868, and settled in Pennsylvania. About 50 years ago he was united in marriage with Miss Mary Hoffman, who died October 7, 1916. When they moved from Pennsylvania they located in Dexter village, where they resided for several years. For the past thirty years the family home has been in Chelsea.

He is survived by one son, George Bockres, and one granddaughter, Katherine, several nephews and nieces.

The funeral services were held at 9 o'clock this (Thursday) forenoon, Rev. T. J. Fallon celebrating the mass. Burial in Mt. Olivet cemetery.

HEAVY SNOW FALL MAKES TRAFFIC DIFFICULT HERE

A heavy snow fall totaling about ten to twelve inches over last Thursday and Friday, has made traffic movement considerable slower during the past week, especially over country and side roads throughout this territory. State employees, operating snow plows have kept main thoroughfares open and pavements are practically clean. However, travel on country highways continues difficult and hazardous.

Men and trucks were kept busy Saturday and Monday hauling snow from the main business streets of Chelsea, where piles of snow, shoveled from walks, made parking practically impossible.

More extremely cold weather and snow has been predicted by the weather man, who is being rather respectfully considered these days for his accurate predictions.

NORTH SYLVAN GRANGE North Sylvan Grange will meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Weiss Friday, January 28.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to our friends and neighbors for their many acts of kindness during our recent bereavement.

be here. Either of them will put up a scrappy game. Rumor has it that if Michigan Center comes they will bring a crowd big enough to help carry their team to victory. On the other hand if Brooklyn comes their fans are expected to number considerable, so it's up to Chelsea to take a tip from Dame Rumor and do likewise.

St. Mary's boys met defeat in Michigan Center Friday, the score being 25 to 10. St. Mary's had hard luck and through close refereeing two of St. Mary's star forwards were forced out of the fray. 22 personal fouls were called during the game. Michigan Center plays St. Mary's a return game February 18, and St. Mary's hopes for a victory at this time to even matters up.

St. Thomas high school, Ann Arbor, won its fifth straight basketball victory of the season Friday, defeating the girls of St. Mary's in a hard fought game.

CHELSEA MAN IS HONORED AT BANQUET OF CEMENT MEN

Consolidated Cement Corporation of Cement City Banquet Oldest Employees of the Company.

A banquet to which considerable importance was attached was given at the Jackson City club Saturday evening with upward of 80 men in attendance. The affair was given by the Consolidated Cement Corporation of Cement City, manufacturers of Portland cement, and was held in honor of the two oldest, in point of service, employees of the company.

One of these men is J. A. Geddes of Chelsea, state agent of the cement corporation, who has been connected with the company for the past twenty years, during which time he has given unstintingly of his services to his employers and won for them wide patronage and for himself many friends throughout the state. Maurice Heuman of Jackson, was the other man honored, having spent 25 years in the service of the company.

It was to honor these two men the banquet was held, and at its close a pleasing surprise was perpetrated when Neil R. Cowman, formerly of Jackson, now with the Chicago office of the company, presented Mr. Geddes and Mr. Heuman each a beautiful white gold watch and chain. Each responded briefly, but their few words were sufficient to show their delight in the gifts and pleasure in the interest of their friends there gathered, but most of all there was evident emotion because of this recognition of the confidence shown by the company which they have served so faithfully, so zealously and so successfully.

The banquet was a happy affair, and the table was artistic in its floral decorations.

WILL HOLD CARD PARTY AT NEW AUDITORIUM

A card party will be given Wednesday, January 26th, at 8 p. m., in the high school gymnasium to raise money for equipment for the gymnasium.

Bridge, five hundred, euchre, pedro and dominoes will be in play and refreshments will be served. All those who are interested are invited to attend and are asked to reserve tables by telephoning, as soon as possible, one of the following committee: Mrs. A. L. Steger, Mrs. D. E. Beach, Mrs. John Cummings, Mrs. Kent Walworth, Mrs. W. R. Daniels and Mrs. H. S. Holmes.

DAIRY CO. BUYS GROUP INSURANCE FOR EMPLOYEES

The Ann Arbor Dairy Company, of Ann Arbor, has furnished its employees with group insurance protection under an arrangement with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, whereby the dairy company pays the entire cost of protection.

Establishing life insurance in excess of $45,000, the schedule provides each employee on the dairy payroll less than a year with $500 life insurance, while those with longer service are insured for $1,000 each.

In addition to creating death benefits for an employee's family or other dependents, the life insurance provides the employee himself, with a temporary fixed income if he becomes totally and permanently disabled before age 60. Should such a condition develop, the full amount of his life insurance will be paid to him in monthly installments.

In addition to paying the entire cost of the insurance program, the dairy company through an arrangement with the Metropolitan, offers the services of a trained visiting nurse to sick or disabled employees.

KEEPER IS JAILED, SHERIFF SENDS FOOD FOR ANIMALS

The sheriff's office has been appealed to in an effort to obtain feed for 17 hogs, some geese and a team of horses on a farm on M-17 in Lima, which, officers were told, had not been fed in several days.

The reason for their not being fed was that their keeper, Francis Seymour, is in the county jail awaiting action in a case in which he is charged with embezzlement. The hogs, it is said, are not actually owned by Seymour but are held in trust.

A load of feed was ordered sent to the farm by the sheriff after an unsuccessful effort had been made to obtain it elsewhere.

Supervisor A. J. Easton of Lima, after investigating conditions at the farm, made an application for the food for the animals. He also found the wife and children of Seymour without food and had the family supplied with eatables.

ANNOUNCES CANDIDACY FOR SCHOOL COMMISSIONERSHIP

Miss Florence V. Essery of Ann Arbor has announced her candidacy for office of school commissioner of Jackson county, an office which she now holds, having succeeded her father, Evan Essery, following his death two and a half years ago. Mr. Essery was school commissioner for 17 years.

Public primaries will be held on Jan. 27, when nomination for the office will be made. The school commission expires June 30.

THE HOME TOWN PAPER
The merchant's relations to his home town paper are supposed to be those of an advertiser. That is a narrow view. The home town paper is an institution. The merchant can no more escape its influence than any body else in the community, whether he advertises in it or not.

Yet, as a consistent advertiser his relations with the local newspaper become definitely constructive. He becomes a part of this institution without which no community can express itself. Whatever its merit or demerits, the home town paper is an expression of the community. Literally, it is the "Voice of the People" in a sense that cannot hold true for any other medium.

This institution keeps friends in touch with friends. To the best of its ability it answers Who, What, When, Where, How and Why? It brings the individual out of himself. It speaks the local language. It interprets community life. Week by week, or day by day, it tells the story of the town and county.

Most of us are so accustomed to the home town paper that we take it as a matter of course. If we think anything about it at all, we think of its deficiencies. These are present largely because it is run by fallible human beings. The wonder about the home town paper is that it contains so few mistakes, not so many.

To the merchant, especially, the home town paper is an opportunity. His business, too, is a local institution. Unless it finds some kind of expression in the home town paper, both the paper and the business have to an important extent failed to function. Each is affected somewhat by every successive failure in this respect.

It does not cost a great deal of money to advertise in the local paper. Most advertisers are over-judicious rather than extravagant. It is the continual message that counts most. Sporadic advertisements now and then are of doubtful value. Perhaps they are better than no advertising at all. Every advertisement placed by a business house should blend into every other advertisement it places. The merchant should think in terms of a campaign rather than in terms of the single insertion.

Vast progress has been made in advertising within recent years. Outstanding examples of it are to be found in the national field. Locally, however, advertising has much room for development. Aside from one or two of the big stores, the average merchant in the average small town gives too little study to the power of advertising.

But conditions are changing. More and more merchants are coming to realize that they are losing money and prestige when they are not to be found in the advertising columns of the home town paper. This is one of the healthiest signs in the field of retail merchandising.

DON'T "THROW THE GAME"
The nation was shocked a few days ago by revelations of alleged corruption in several of its most highly respected baseball teams. That some of the most famous players on the diamond had accepted or been offered money to "throw the game" was a startling revelation not alone of the inherent weakness, but of the tremendous temptations that he is called upon to withstand.

They are all about us, these temptations—petty and powerful, subtle and open, stinking and arrogant. Not only baseball players are called upon to face them. Every day, everywhere, they are whispering into men's minds the poisoned lure to "throw the game."

Discontent, Misunderstanding, Disappointment, Jealousy, Selfishness, Greed—these are the temptations that pierce their cancer growth into the souls of men in high places and low. These are the temptations that urge a man, in a moment of anger, of chagrin, or despair, or covetousness, to "throw the game."

A sales clerk who, piqued by a rep- rimand, rebuffs and turns a friend of the store into an enemy, "throws the game." The mill hand who, resentful of a grievance, real or fancied, stands by while the output of hours of toil is destroyed, "throws the game."

The man anywhere, anytime, who knocks the efforts of his colleagues, the purpose of his employer, the integrity of their establishment, like Eddie Cicotte, "throws the game."

The man who speaks of his family with criticism and disparagement, instead of with respect and pride, "throws the game."

The man who fails always to do his best to keep faith with all that is true and noble, to play his part with heart and soul, that man "throws the game."

The man who throws the game cheats not only his employer, cheats his associates, he cheats the public, and above all he cheats himself. He sells his immortal soul for a mundane, fleeting price.

It's time to make a resolution to keep your resolutions.

Every time we get on our car some body steps in our face.

It is strange, but why his wild onta he just

Many a man keeps his nose to the grindstone so he can turn it up at the bill collectors.

NEWSPAPER SHOW TO FEATURE PRESS MEET

Michigan "home town" papers, the publications which weekly carry intimate local news to the home folk of the state's many different communities, are going to stage a show.

More than 800 of these papers will be on display in a special exhibit which is to feature the annual meeting of the Michigan Press Association, at East Lansing on February 8, 4 and 5—the last days of the Farmers Week gathering at Michigan State College. It will be the first time that Michigan weekly papers have all stood up side by side to complete an exhibit of the kind.

In addition to the newspaper show, more than 100 samples of the job printing done in newspaper shops will form a separate exhibit.

While the displays are being planned primarily for the editors themselves who will be in session at the time, hundreds of visitors at the college Farmers Week will have the chance to compare their own "home paper" with those in other communities throughout the state.

Speakers of national reputation are scheduled to address the various meetings of the Michigan Press Association during its three day conference, while discussion on various trade topics will be led by prominent members of the association. The building of constantly improved and strengthened home papers, in order to serve the local community, will be the general theme of the conference.

FAMOUS SPEAKERS TO TALK AT FARM WEEK

Speakers of national prominence are headliners on the program of general sessions for the annual Farmers Week at Michigan State College, to be held from January 31 to February 4 this year.

Preliminary announcement of the lineup for the big farm conference was made in East Lansing this week, and reveals the fact that men who are famous leaders in different fields of work will be heard from during the week.

President C. C. Little of the University of Michigan will talk on Tuesday evening, February 1, making his first appearance before a general farm audience in the state.

Senator Royal Copeland, of New York State, farm leader and rated one of the great speakers of the day, is scheduled to address the general conference on Thursday evening, along with President Butterfield of M. S. C.

L. J. Young, Michigan's new commissioner of conservation; W. A. Cochel, editor of the Kansas City Star and formerly of the Kansas Agricultural College; H. L. Lackie, markets department, University of Wisconsin; Judge C. B. Collingwood, of Lansing; Dr. Caroline Hedger, of the Elizabeth McCormick Memorial Fund; and a long list of men prominent in state and national activities are among those listed for the Farmers' Week meetings.

A feature of the week's program will be a big banquet on Wednesday evening, February 2, to which all visitors will be invited.

The usual lineup of exhibits and association meetings has been scheduled.

"gas chats"

What's become of the "hired girl?"

This tired, patient, household toiler seems to be losing her familiar place in the household. Three dollars a week and a back bedroom made up her drab existence, until some friendly "hired man" carried her off into matrimony—and more housework.

The Chamber of Commerce of an average American city recently announced that its employment bureau had more applicants for domestic work than there were housewives seeking assistance! A great manufacturing company which sells its goods from door to door reports that in practically every call, the mistress of the house answers the door-bell. Maids are a rarity!

This astonishing situation, of course, is attributed to the increasing use of labor-savers in the home, and not the least helpful of these are gas appliances. The gas range, the automatic water heater, the gas heated washer, space heater, ironer and dryer—all these gas servants who work more faithfully and tirelessly than the most capable girl—are making our homes efficiently and economically managed without hired help.

BREVITIES.

GRASS LAKE—Lieut. Governor L. Dickinson delivered an address in the M. E. church here last Sunday. His subject was prohibition.

SALINE—The new barn on the farm owned by Mrs. Elmer Conde, 2 miles west of Milan on the Ridge road was destroyed by fire Sunday night. Damage has been estimated at $8,000 and was only partially covered by insurance. Aside from the barn, a considerable amount of hay and farm implements and the silo were burned—Observer.

MASON—More than two million dollars was expended by the county during the past year, according to the county auditor, who recently completed an audit of the books in the various county offices and who reported to the supervisors at their regular monthly session here Monday. All books were found in excellent condition and showed $2,375,057.72 expended during the year.—News.

DEXTER—Material for the stand pipe for the water plant has arrived and it is stated that the work of construction will begin at once.—Leader.

PINKNEY—The wrecked sedan or what is left of it is still at the corners at the Teeple farm. The man to whom the license plates were issued has been notified but claims to have sold it but the records do not show any transfer of title.—Dispatch.

CHARLOTTE—Clifford Foster, who just completed thirty days with Mr. Boorn said he would have starved to death if he had depended upon the food furnished him by the county. He had his meals sent in and this is getting to be quite a common practice. Frank McCutcheon, of Brookfield, asked for his experience, said, "I don't like it so bad but I didn't get anything to eat."—Republican.

HOWELL—In the case of Frank E. McPhee and the Citizens' Mutual Auto Insurance Co. vs. The Grand Trunk Western R. R. Co. in Circuit Court here last week, the jury rendered a verdict of $642.12 against the railroad. This case grew out of an accident when an auto insured by the company was wrecked in a collision near Hastings. In the case of Otis L. Davis of Fowlerville, vs. the Pere Marquette R. R. Co. grew out of the collision between Mr. Davis' auto and a freight train at Fowlerville just a year before the trial, the jury rendered a verdict for $5,000 against the railroad after being out nearly six hours.—Republican.

PLYMOUTH—At a meeting of the directors of the new Mayflower Hotel, Plymouth's new community hotel, held Monday evening, the firm of Verger, Wilhelm & Molby of Detroit, were employed as architects for the building. This is the same firm who are the architects for Redford's.

RHEUMATISM

While in France with the American Army I obtained a noted French prescription for the treatment of Rheumatism and Neuritis. I have given this to thousands with wonderful results. The prescription cost me nothing. I ask nothing for it. I will mail it if you will send me your address. A postal will bring it. Write today.

new $500,000 theatre. Eugene Wilhelm, one of the members of the firm, is well known in Plymouth, and has many friends here who will be pleased to learn that his firm was successful in getting the architectural contract.

MANCHESTER—Wm. Buss, who bought the John Spaford farm, three miles west of the village, has been using spare time in taking down the old home on the place and is saving what lumber he can for future use. The house was one of the oldest in this locality. In an early day its doors were opened to greet the weary traveler, and later, after taverns were built in every settlement for the accommodation of the pioneers, it continued to harbor guests.—Enterprise.

BROOKLYN—With two new dog wardens appointed in the county there promises to be a doggone hard time for unlicensed dogs this year. This will be reflected to the owner in the form of $2 additional penalty for waiting until after January 10 to buy a license. The dog law also has additional teeth that may be felt if the dog owner gets too petulant with the wardens. Any dog four months old or older must be licensed and the burden of applying for and going to pay for the license is all on the owner. And it is equally against the law to "harbor" an unlicensed dog.—Exponent.

Many motorists change oil every 1000 miles in summer and every 500 miles in winter.
Even greater mileage can be secured if you use the correct grade of Mobiloil and observe the following points:

Use choke sparingly—avoid "rich" mixture—don't idle engine or operate skidding engine—keep ignition systems in order—and!

Replenish Oil Frequently and Regularly. Let us do that job for you. We'll do it quickly and thoroughly—all you pay for is the oil used. You'll find it saves repairs, gives greater riding comfort and longer life to your car.

WILL ORGANIZE POULTRY AND EGG EXCHANGE

Poultry producers in southeastern Michigan have filed incorporation papers for the organization of the Wolverine Poultry and Egg Exchange. This organization will take immediate steps to develop marketing facilities and handling eggs and poultry for producers who desire to affiliate with this association. Articles of association marketing agreements were drawn up by the directors at a meeting at Hillsdale last week.

Organization work will start in at once in southern Hillsdale and Lenawee Counties. This will be in charge of the manager of the Ohio Poultry Improvement Association of Waukegan, Ohio, and will be in direct charge of M. L. Howell, of that organization.

The officers of the Michigan association have also entered into an agreement with the association to take care of the marketing of all eggs and poultry to be sold by Michigan members as soon as the organization is started. The Ohio Association operates in two counties of northwestern Ohio. There are forty-eight stations where the producers leave their eggs and poultry to be assembled by the association trucks sent out by the central grading plants in Waukegan. For the present these truck routes will be extended into southern Michigan to take care of Michigan business until it has sufficient members to establish a separate grading station in southeastern Michigan. Counties interested in the work of this poultry exchange are Hillsdale, Lenawee, Branch, Washington, Jackson and Calhoun.

A chain wrapped around one of the rear wheels forced Bockres to come to a stop and the bus, evidently traveling at a high rate of speed, was unable to stop and in passing the car side-swiped the automobile. The bus was attached but little damage resulted. Homer Stoffer, John Kankle and Mrs. J. Haefner of Chelsea, were passengers on the bus. The accident occurred just west of the Parker road.

"CAMPUS FLIRT" IS COMEDY CLASSIC

Leave it to Bebe Daniels to burst forth with something new! "Parasol's apt comedienne, as dainty and charming as ever, is with us again—this time with a comedy that should win an honorary degree.

That's the reaction one gets from her latest production, "The Campus Flirt," which will be shown at the Princess Theatre, Wednesday and Thursday, January 26 and 27.

Bebe's story concerns itself and the activities of a college girl who "high heels" everyone falling to come up to her own ridiculous standard. The girl's subsequent treatment at the hands of her fellow students provides one with a laugh each second.

How does she manage to do this? "The Campus Flirt," directed by Clarence Badger, sparkles with genuine campus atmosphere. Photographed at the University of California, its track meet scenes made members of the audience stand right up in their seats.

The titles, works of art in themselves, were written by Rube Goldberg.

Bridgewater Inn is RAIDED BY SHERIFF

Armed with a search warrant based on an affidavit alleging the purchase of liquor, Sheriff Ernst M. Wurster, Under Sheriff Jacob B. Andres, Deputy Clifford West and Coy R. Rankin and George V. Cook, special deputy of Saline, raided the Bridgewater Inn about midnight Friday, arrested three men and confiscated a motley assortment of beverages.

The men, who are charged with operating the inn, gave their names as: Joseph Carsello, 33; Charles Hall, 44 and Walter Roddy, 30, all of Detroit. The confiscated liquor included one quart of Grenadine, one quart of Port wine, a bottle of creme de menthe, two quarts of Kuemmel, two quarts of Gordon gin, three quarts of whiskey and two kegs of beer. A slot machine and two beer pumps also were taken by the officers.

The inn, according to officers, was a popular rendezvous for patrons of a dance hall in Bridgewater, following the "Tepichorean" art finding it a handy place to quench their thirst during intermissions. Ann Arbor Times News.

EYES OF THE STATE BEING DIRECTED TOWARD CHELSEA

That more people of the state of Michigan are focusing their opticals on Chelsea now than at any time in the history of the village is evident in the press stories and interviews being published with regard to the state-owned cement plant at Four Mile Lake, east of town. The plant has been a bone of contention since its lease by the state three years ago and later purchase from the Potter estate. Charges and counter charges have been flung back and forth and through it all Chelsea has remained comparatively quiet, gazing with wide-open eyes when one of the state's high officials rode through town in an automobile impressive in size and horse-power, on his way to the cement plant to inspect the state's purchase and wards.

On Monday a corps of auditors employed by the new state administration took up quarters at the plant and started the long-promised inventory being taken in an effort to properly value the property. Outcome of the inventory will determine to a large extent whether the plant will be listed as an asset or a liability as well as the future disposition of the property. The state paid the Potter estate $500,000 for the plant, and many charges have been that the price was exorbitant. On the other hand state officials have claimed it was a profitable investment inasmuch as cement prices have been kept at a minimum while keeping a steady supply of cement in the hands of state roadbuilding contractors as the need arose.

While these various charges have been given and taken the public has watched with interest, said little, learned nothing and lives in hopes that the atmosphere will be cleared up to the extent that it will know whether it is owner of a bonanza or lemon tree.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—The story opens in New York about the middle of the eighteenth century. Robert Ormerod, a young man of noble birth and fine physique, chief of fur traders, and man of enormous strength, when Darby O'Connell, a pirate captain, comes aboard a private ship to "hog the hook," and the two men become fast friends, as they are joined by a third man, chased by the notorious pirate Captain Jack Haddock, who has been chased by the pirates. Robert the pirate's grand-uncle, Captain Murray, is an ardent Jacobite.

CHAPTER II.—Next day Robert and his father, Sir Robert, go to the harbor where a silver mine, whom Darby conducts to the island of the pirates, where he meets a woman from a Spanish galleon who is taking her father, Colonel O'Donnell, to the island of the pirates.

CHAPTER III.—Murray with a force of sailors visits the Ormerod house, announces his intention of carrying off Robert by force, threatening to make him a great sailor.—The father sends him away.

CHAPTER IV.—Robert goes to the cabin and tells the crew of the ship that he will talk to your master."

"Siam went the door, and a mutiny of curses erupted from the company, all preceding a tall, blue-eyed man in a flaming red coat all cobwebbed over with gold lace. He halted in the cabin entrance, hands on his hips, feet planted wide, close-set green eyes flickering beautifully from side to side, a long nose seemed to poke out from a tangle of black, black hair.

"Back,—he, Murray!" he snarled.

"Two men the richer for your effort, Gint me, 'twas a fool's errand!"

"Pardon me," objected Murray, "I am considerably more than 'two men the richer for my assquage' of my patrons—although I would not appeal by these words to deprecate the importance to be attached to the acquisition of my grandnephew and Master Corrier." Permit me, Captain Phipps, accompanying Robert.

CHAPTER IV.—Robert and Peter came on shore a day. Murray with him, and the opposite side of the table from my grand-uncle.

"A youth and a fat man!" he ejaculated. "And unwilling at that!"

"Bones tells me."

"Robert Bones was correct in that statement," my great-uncle assented. "I think that fancy he needed to add that the 'fat man' took his knife away from him and must have hanged him had I not intervened."

"An appreciable degree of respect," I said, "in Florida eyes."

"He is no better than if he were a Bill," said my great-uncle, "and I think 'Curse me, though I see why you should add a cub to your crew.'"

"Tut, tut, captain," remonstrated Murray. "'A cub'! Think again, T. Bones is my hero."

"All hell fall heir to will be the day," returned Bill, "but I'll never let you wrong me."

galley to fetch up your chocolate." The man who followed the voice trotted in bearing a silver-platter of glistening chocolate. Murray's favorite drink; yes, and food. He was a fastidious eater, and his chocolate was deep and in plain black as became an up-to-savvy. He stopped dead at sight of it.

"Set your tray on the table, Gunn," he instructed my great-uncle. This is Grandpaw, Master Ormerod, and this is my friend Captain Gunn. They're to sail with us a while."

Gunn pulled his forelock and ducked.

"Savvy, gentlemen," he acknowledged. "Allus glad to please, is Ben Ormerod. Bound to oblige ye, gentlemen. And I'll be a good fellow, and I'll furnish 'em up from the wine-bins."

"Food as well, Gunn," said Murray, and Captain Finn is coming aboard."

Ben Gunn cocked his head one side.

"That means rum," he commented.

"Rum, Gunn, savvy. You best leave it to Ben rum," Gunn said with a grin.

"I accuser you of being but two in mind the better by your shore expenditure."

"It was forgetting the red-headed man."

For John Silver fetched aboard. "I'll promise a luck ye will have a good time."

"My uncle took snuff with much decency and ran a silver bell in front of him."

"Gunn is late with the liquor."

"Must ask your indulgence, captain, as compelling you to talk dry."

"I'll be a good fellow, and I'll furnish 'em up from the wine-bins."

depicted a fearful decanter, bottles and flasks before us. Captain Finn, without awaiting an invitation, seized upon an earthen receptacle beled "Captain's Jamaica Rum," pinched it, and with the point of a knife slit it to the throat of a bottle. A mighty dram. Then he set it down beside him, wiped his mouth on his coat-tail and cleared his throat.

"I can't cut a glasserate of water toward him, supposing he would wish some dilution, and he laughed so merrily."

He ducked and scraped again and slipped off into the companionway with a kind of wiggle like a self-conscious child.

"My stevard," remarked my relation.

"The man is a half-wit, is he not?" I asked.

"A natural yes," assented Murray, still the chocolate.

"I should think it would be dangerous to have one so simple in such close proximity to you."

"My great-uncle smiled."

"You are quite quite wrong," my boy is for the very reason that the man is incapable of spying that I use him. It is more valuable for my purposes to have the most intelligent member of my crew."

"He broke off."

"This chocolate is by no means as ill brewed as Silver's. An extraordinary fellow, that, monstrously clever and exactly the sort of man, Robert, I never recall for the first time."

"You ha' much to learn, my lad," he seered. "We don't spill good water aboard the Walrus. These a-wet broached this minute on the spar-deck, and all hands fillin' the pumpkins as fast as they can empty 'em, 'til red-headed Harby a-stride the butt for luck."

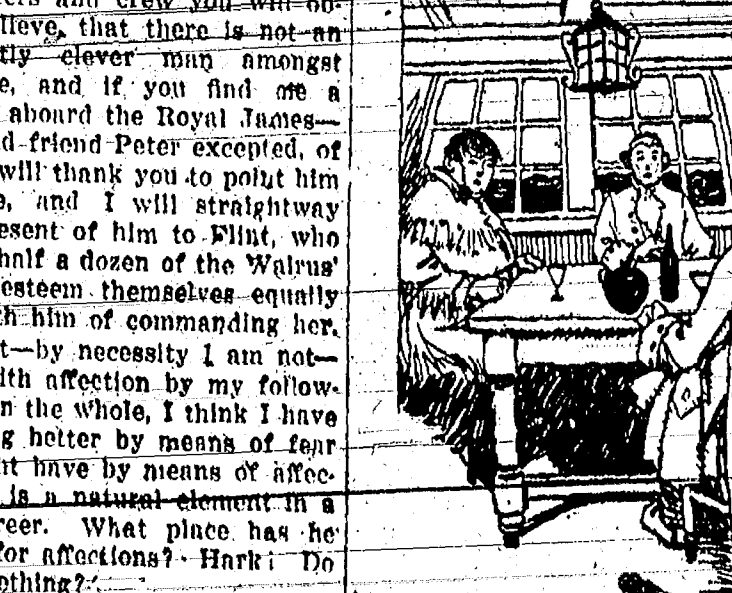

"Which means you will be in no condition to make sail a few hours hence," deplored my great-uncle, waving his head. "You foolmen, Flint. This run-swaggering will prove the undoing of you and every man of your crew."

"Look to your ship, and I'll look mine," snapped Flint, quaffing a wine glass of the rum-contents.

"My uncle stared his neck in the eye with a hard, direct thrust

And if you possess the patience and the interest to analyze the composition my officers and crew you will observe, I believe, that there is not another copy—never, much amongst the crew. Kye, and if you find me a man never man aboard the Royal James—myself and friend Peter excepted, of course—I will thank you to point him out to me, and I will straightway present a present to him to Phil, who has at least a dozen of the "Merry Men" who esteem themselves equally comfortable with him of commanding her. I am not—by necessity I am not—endowed with affection by my fellow. And on the whole, I think I have been often better by means of fear than I might have by means of affection. Fear is a natural element in a sailor's career. What place has he in his life for affections? Hark! Do you hear something?

It did depend question—an uproar of curses and shouts upon the deck beside.

"It is only that Captain Flint has been absent. Pray take your vents, promise you an interesting episode." The door to the deck banged open, and he harshly, dominating voice belatedly in the companionway. "— me, Martin, what the — d'ye think ye cov? "You lie a head on your shoulder conceded Flint.

"And you have not," uttered Murray. "No, do not say any more. You are an excellent man to handle my ship, Flint, and as fearless as any other captain; but you are no more capable of looking ahead a week—or than Ben Gunn."

"Well, what would you?" Flint asked him with an air of defiance, when Murray ignored.

"I would make the greatest coup have attempted," answered Flint, disagreeably.

"Go you and where you arranged to go back to New York, but you have risked back no treasure with you."

My uncle regarded him with wonder under other circumstances, I should describe as honest indignation.

"You fool!" he said with a rasp in his voice—and I did not wonder that Flint pulled aside in his chair in order to avoid a stab. "Did you not know that hundreds of tons of treasure were hidden on this island with you at a treasure?"

"What then?" demanded Flint, maintaining his lips.

"My uncle leaned forward across the table, lips drawn tight over his teeth. His eyes shot sparks.

"Knowledge, fool! Intelligence! That which wise men labor a lifetime to secure and the ignorant pass by the gutter."

Murray rose from the table and commenced to stroll the length of the cabin, hands clasped under his arms. Flint, who was as stolid as a block, allowed his every movement, with occasional drafts from Peter. And I watched the motions of him, fascinated by this vision of wit, which was to exert a vital influence upon our lives—yes, upon those of hundreds of others.

"I must speak in simple terms," perceived, Flint," began my great-uncle.

The passion was out of his voice, and the sentence trickled from his lips with an air of detachment.

"Flint is right, I fully see, seeing that an answer was required."

"We have frequently discussed the possibility of taking one of the English treasure ships," continued Murray. "But we have never attempted the project because we could not cover the date of sailing or the place wherein the treasure was embarked. It had been the custom of the Spanish ships in recent years—in fact, all the ships of the Spanish and Portuguese—brothers to shift arbitrarily the date of embarkation from year to year, in order to change the date of sailing. Likewise the port would be Cartagena the next Chagres, the next Porto-Bello, the next even Vera Cruz. They have been known to ship the year's produce of the mines around Cape Horn. Accordingly the treasure ships, which necessarily sail as far as possible from the fall of the year, now depart when ever it pleases the fancy of the captain of the Indies to fix a date."

He paused, and Flint rasped.

"So much is known to all of us."

"I conceded as much," answered Murray smoothly. "What follows you do not know. When we returned from Madagascar—"

"Twice against my advice," growled Flint, "you play too much w politics."

"With the exception of Menard and my great-uncle," "Well, perhaps agree."

"Tis true that so far I have obtained trifling advantage from the sport, including one substantial fortune, the vessel we are in and the information which makes it possible for me to take this year's treasure ship."

Flint sat erect. I caught a gleam of attention. He showed a gleam of contempt. He lit the cigar and twinkled his teeth in the remembrance of flesh that masked his solemnity.

"Now, Murray," swore Flint.

"Do you say that in sober earnest? How—how much?" he quavered.

"One million five hundred thousand pounds."

There was a moment of silence through the gleam sunlight flooded the stern windows and dappled the polished surface of the table with darting motes and beams. Flint, eyes dropped on his chest. His great-uncle remained calm, pacing lightly up and down the carpeted deck, eyes fixed upon some distant vision of the future.

"I—that I," stammered Flint.

"Silence! 'Twould be the greatest haul in our time, Murray."

"It is ours," affirmed Murray. "Upon terms."

"Terms?" echoed Flint. "Upon terms? Who can compel us to terms?"

My great-uncle came to a stop in front of him.

"My terms, let us say," he answered.

"That if ye know of yourself where it can be taken, may we both venture, Murray?" clamored Flint.

"What?"

"That we may be paid in advance down to short cuts if it must be shared out right and left. If we take it, why not take all?"

"Because," retorted Murray with burst of terrible energy, "I have passed my word as to the terms upon which the treasure is to be taken."

"What's your word?" rapped Flint.

For a moment I thought my great-uncle would strike him. He made a draw back in alarm, and perspiration stood out in white beads upon his forehead. Flint feared it, too, but did not, raised a hand to protect himself, chained to immobility by the virulence of the bull-dog's stare which Murray directed at him.

"It is my word," said Murray finally in a very soft voice. "I have more, Flint. A poor thing, as the poet hath said, yet my own! Also—that I may chime in harmony with your mental processes—it happens that my personal interests are bound up with the observance of these terms."

"It is a matter we will not discuss further, since it is beyond the range of your comprehension. I shall merely say that the terms are fixed, and that you will either accept or reject them."

"What are they?"

"As to division of the spoils? One hundred thousand pounds to myself, as author and architect of the plan; seven hundred thousand to our two ships; and seven hundred thousand to my friends who co-operated with me to make it possible."

True to Form
"Do you act toward your wife as you did before you married her?" asked one married man of another.
"I'll say I do. Exactly. I remember how I used to act when I first met her and fell in love. I used to hump over the fence in front of her house and gaze at her shadow on the eaves of the barn." "And I met her the same way when I met her late after a poker game."

Not Exactly Laughter
Now, laughter—"The show's go by virtue of a really good sense of humor and a really good sense of humor." Produced by the south front door of the house at 1000 W. 1st St. in the city of Lima, Peru. The show is a comedy in the style of the famous "The Great Dictator" by Charlie Chaplin.

Provided Method of Escape From Indians

Built in 1683, the oldest brick house in Virginia stands on the south bank of James river, about midway between Surrey Court House and Scotland Wharf. It is called Smith's Fort, but as a matter of historical accuracy the building, erected by Capt. John Smith in 1608 and named by him New Fort, stood about a quarter of a mile to the west of this house and now few traces of the old Indian defense are to be seen. The Colonial records show that the house was built by Thomas Warren in 1683 on land bought by him from Thomas Rolfe, son of John Rolfe and Pocahontas, daughter of the famous Indian King Powhatan. There is a tradition connected with one of the closets in this aged house. From one in an upper room a trap door and a stationary ladder led down to a brick walled closet in the basement from which it is said an underground passage led to the original Smith's fort on the banks of a creek nearly a quarter of a mile away. It is supposed that the underground passage, long since built in, enabled many an occupant of the house to escape when the Indians had launched an attack—Baltimore Sun.

Little Really Known of Botanical World

Some neglected weed, in the hands of a skilled botanist, may overturn a large part of our system of agriculture, according to statements made at the recent International Congress of Plant Sciences. We are faced with this possibility because of the fact that, despite the almost innumerable books and papers relating to species of plants we know, there is still a far greater part of the plant kingdom that man has never yet touched. What may come out of this unexplored mine in the future no one can predict. Very few of the species that we know something about are cultivated. There are about 500,000 species of known and named higher plants. Of these only 10 per cent are cultivated, and most of these are cultivated in only an incidental way. Fewer than 100 species supply us with food, fiber and timber, the three great staples of our daily life. There is evidently plenty of room for surprise when scientists begin cultivating some of the 500,000 more intensively, and, in addition, perhaps discovering new species with novel properties highly beneficial to man.

Prophetic Repartee

Michael Faraday, the English scientist, in 1831, rotated a copper core between the ends of a magnet and proved this simple operation induced an electric current through a wire attached to the core. Later, he invented the dynamo. One day an English peer visited the laboratory and Faraday explained his experiment. Thereupon the noble lord inquired: "Very interesting, but what's the use of it?" To which Faraday replied: "Perhaps some day you can tax it." This ironical repartee proved to be a bit of profound wisdom, for the electrical industry, all based on Faraday's invention, is the third largest taxpayer of corporations in the United States—World's Work.

Raft of Goat Skins

Among the exploits of an explorer in the Himalayas, according to the Christian Times, London, was a hazardous adventure on a raft of 16 goat skins, inflated and fastened to a wooden framework, six feet square, with a crew of four natives, who steered with long poles. "There were dangerous rapids ahead," he said, "and we were protected into what appeared to be a wall of water, half submerging the raft, and causing it to crash in the middle of the narrow gorge. Afterward we had to refloat the goat skins, this being done by blowing through the legs."

Queen Wasn't Particular

"I don't remember the guide, who was showing a party over an historic mansion, 'We have the room which Queen Elizabeth slept in.' 'I don't mind,' said a stout, fat lady, 'I slept in a room like that—just a bed in a room, and a reproduction of that.' 'But,' protested the guide, 'you'll allow me to contradict you, sir, I have been here for some time now, and I know what you're talking about. Besides the queen didn't care what guinea of bed it was, either.'—Weekly Scotsman.

Tiger Snake Most Deadly

The tiger snake of Australia is the most deadly poisonous of all snakes, says the Sydney Bulletin. Scientific tests have shown that, compared with the Indian cobra, the deadly properties of the tiger snake's poison are having regard for weight and size, five to six times as strong as the American rattlesnake's, and four to five times as strong as the European viper's. The tiger snake's venom is slower in action than that of either of the other two. The death of a person is twice that of a person.

Needn't Have Asked

A motorist, approaching a village, was surprised to see an elderly native running down the road at full speed. "What are you running for?" the motorist inquired.
"There's a wild beast show down there, and a lion's broke loose," was the surprising reply.
"Which way did he go?"
"Well, you don't suppose I'm chasing him, do you?" said the villager.

Metal That Resists Heat

Tungsten, used for the filaments of electric light bulbs, is a rare metal of the chromium group. When pure it is white and pliable. It can stand great heat and melts only at 6,150 degrees Fahrenheit.

Good and Evil Omens

Surround Honey Bees
Many women are interested themselves in the art and business of beekeeping, and with skillful management it can be made a profitable industry. Much ancient lore is associated with the keeping of honey bees. They must be told when there is a death or wedding in the household, and their habits of swarming are omens of good or evil. If they swarm on a going or on a dead tree someone is going to die, or there will be a famine, or something dreadful will happen. It is astonishing that country people ever keep bees if they believed in superstitions so liable as these to make them uncomfortable. They do not worry the modern keeper, for, like everything else, the business has been modernized and the old village swarm-beehive-smoker has gone, together with many of the superstitions, associated with beekeeping.

SUPERVISORS MEET WITH STATE REPRESENTATIVE

A conference with Washtenaw's representatives in the state legislature, Senator Charles A. Sink and Representative Joseph E. Warner, was held Saturday by members of the legislative committee of the board of supervisors following a meeting Friday at which the committee approved the proposed amendment to the local act of 1917 creating the board of county auditors.

The meeting was for the purpose of explaining the supervisor's plan to the legislators and ask them to obtain an enabling act to permit submitting the proposition to the voters of the county at the spring election in April.

The supervisors desire to change the method of choosing auditors so they may select one to act as chairman and purchasing agent of the county who will serve full time and be paid a salary. The present board meets once a month to investigate claims against the county.

The proposed amendment provides that the supervisors, at their annual meeting in October of this year, shall elect two members of the board of auditors, one to be chairman and also to act as purchasing agent. His term is fixed in the bill at one year. Compensation of the members also is to be fixed by the supervisors, according to the amendment.

The bill provides that the terms of the present auditors shall expire the first of next year and that the act shall not be enforced until it is favorably voted upon by the electorate at the spring election.

The supervisors at their last session early this month adjourned to meet again February 28 when further steps will be taken to submit the proposition to the voters. It is believed in the meantime, an enabling act will have been obtained and the course made smooth for action by the people.

Meaning of "Chicago"

"Chicago" is an Anglicized form of the Indian word "shegung," ordinarily meaning stunk, but whose uses were intended so as to make it a synonym for "stinking," "uncleanly," "dirty."

It was applied to the wild onion, to a line of Indian chiefs, to a thief, and, among other rivers, to that which runs through the present city of Chicago. In this case the name was not meant as a tribute to the magnitude of the stream, but merely because the shagbark chiefs had at some remote period been drowned in its waters.

Beautiful Work Done by Spanish Potters

Ceramic arts flourish throughout Spain, partly because the clays are common and also because the Spaniards is an expert potter.

The beautiful reproduced in the shapes of Murcia, of Valencia and of Seville, are of the most extensive use of ceramics is seen in the sunlit provinces, where the floors, walls, and much of the garden may be adorned with brightly colored pottery tiles. The vases, cups, plates and other domestic articles made in such regions as Seville, Granada, Talavera and Valencia, are widely known, while the coarse but beautiful shaped and brilliantly colored work of Murcia, the production of local industry, is a delight to the eye and hand.

Little of Wild Life Is British in Origin

Very few of the animals best known in our country are British in origin. Indeed, with the possible exception of the fox, the badger, the otter, the hare, and the red deer, there are none native to this country.

The rabbit, for example, was not known here in early times. It is believed to have originated in Spain; very old coins have been found in that country imprinted with the figure of a rabbit. Rabbits are quite foreign to these shores, though they are now too firmly established here. The English black rat came from the Continent eight centuries ago.

Both the yellow and red deer came to us from abroad, the first from Norway, the second from Asia. The pheasant found its way here in Roman times. The partridge, on the other hand, is perhaps the most highly of all our game birds.—London Times.
