"Dolling Up" the Gas Holders

In the with our little talk the other day about the girl clerk in the Eastern Gas Company who is now president of the whole works—the first woman to hold this office—comes word that the Middle West is beginning to erect ornamental gas holders set out in a profusion of landscape gardening.

Instead of the skeleton-like structure with the big tank inside, this new holder appears to be a vast medieval tower, surmounted by flying colors. It's a permanent structure costing thousands of dollars.

At the foot of the glorified tank, a little park will be laid out, entered by masonry gates, with an English cottage-style lodge in which the caretaker will live. No manufacturing of gas will be done at this point, but all small structures surrounding the holder will be in the same style of architecture, painted a French grey.

As gas is in greater and greater demand in cities, storage holders of this type will have to be erected in outlying residential districts. With the gas industry growing as it is, there's no telling what we may live to see!

Editorial

INDISPENSABLE

The greatest conveniences in life often prove of exceeding inconvenience—many things considered indispensable being the cause of numberless trials and tribulations. Of other things than woman it is said: "you can't get along without them and you can't get along with them."

Every thoughtful man wants to own his own home and to acquire other real estate for reasons known to all, but for other very good reasons some, who may, do not. Possession of unencumbered real estate invites damage suits, attracts friends in trouble hunting bail and friends in need of money hunting an endorsement for a note; and places the possessor on the sucker-lists of stock salesmen and contribution collectors. And there are the taxes to meet.

The ways are manifold in which the automobile gives its owner advantages over the non-owner. So many are the uses of the automobile that the average owner is quickly convinced of their indispensability. But the open road is not a path of roses. The way of the motorist is hard-bounding in motor cops, beset with detours and speed traps, obstructed by accidents and damage suits, infested with punctures and empty gas tanks, and approached by twelve-monthly payments and usury.

And yet, though there be evil seconds in every minute, optimists predominate in this life and pessimism is forbidden by popular edict. Life will be "fair to middlin'" or "tol-able" as long as its advantages counteract the disadvantages and there remains some semblance of equality between the agreeable and disagreeable phases of human existence.

DIG DEEP

Dig deep if you would have the richest treasures. One may wash gold dust from the shallow stream, but the coveted nugget of gold is found buried deep in the bowels of the earth. Those who would find diamonds must move mountains of earth and "full many a gem of purest ray serene the dark unfathomed caves of ocean bear."

The profoundest beauty in a great painting, or the work of sculpture, and the rarest jewel of wisdom on the printed page will not be found on the surface. Art does not surrender its true self to those who will not "dine deep."

One may wear gold and jewels without descending to "unfathomed caves" or burrowing underground, but for the richest treasures in literature, painting, music and sculpture one must do his own prospecting. Others may create it, but the individual must discover it for himself. Art is the one absolute commonwealth. Though the common property of all, it is enjoyed by the few. Numbered among the natural resources of the earth are coal, gas, and the various minerals. Art is an artificial resource but of them all it alone is inexhaustible.

What applies in the field of art and treasure-hunting is equally applicable to more workaday affairs. Deep digging pays in business, industry, labor, housekeeping, farming or study. In modern phraseology this "universal truth" is expressed in the counsel of the experienced to youth to "get out and dig" if it would accomplish something in life.

FITCHING RIDES

Every mode of travel has its parasites. At sea it is the stowaway, and his tactics have remained the same from the era of sailing vessels down to the modern liner and the days of restricted immigration. On land there has been more variety. Thirty years ago the railroads were the main highways for the hobo, who was content to view the country from a freight car door. Once these wanderers were numerous enough to be a pest to train crews, now they are heard of occasionally, sometimes being listed as "unknowns" among the victims of a freight wreck, but they have mostly disappeared.

Have they taken to the automobile? With their instinct for wandering, they may have seen that the great state and national systems of highways offer them the best opportunities. They depend on the good will of the autist to "get a life," and on the long stretches, away from the populous districts, they are generally successful.

The spread of this habit of accepting or soliciting rides is an imposition on the good nature of auto owners. Their real object, of course, is to save carfare home. The whole thing amounts to a petty hold-up and should be stopped. The hobo's way of stealing a ride does not differ so much after all from the more up-to-date method of begging a ride.

He isn't a born politician unless he thinks the first person singular is unanimous.

Originality: Doing what some other man did so long ago that people have forgotten.

Obsolete saying: "Howdy stranger, want a ride?"

Alphabetical Lore

The Romans took their alphabet of 23 letters into Britain, and they had already taken it into Gaul and other conquered countries, and it was adopted later by the Anglo-Saxons. To the Anglo-Saxon alphabet, however, three new letters were added. Two of these were runic letters and represent as nearly as possible the sounds of "th" and "ph." Later the influence of the Normans caused these to be discarded, and the three additional letters of our alphabet are quite different. They are "j," "u" and "w."

Their Choice

In a recent intelligence test given in a high school there was this sentence: "A mother is _____ than her daughter." Underneath were the words, "wiser, taller, older," and the pupil was supposed to fill in the blank in the sentence with the most appropriate of the words. Did they do it? Fully half the class ignored the given words, altogether and filled in the sentence to read: "A mother is more wrinkled than her daughter."—Springfield Union.

Nautical Mile Longer

The nautical mile, or "knot," is 600 feet longer than the statute mile. Points out an answered question in Liberty. The statute mile is 5,280 feet and the nautical mile is 6,080 feet.

Humble Wage Earners Too Often Forgotten

Our rich men are becoming more generous. The total donated to "foundations," etc.—mostly of business men—is computed at $3,500,000,000. Modern generosity takes many forms. It is particularly gratifying to note a growing tendency to do kindly things for workers. Many wills of employers now make liberal bequests to employees, especially those of long service. Living employers, also, are devoting more of their means than formerly for the benefit of those who have helped them to make their fortunes. Forbes Magazine tells us.

One cannot but note, however, that very rarely is anything done for those who toil in factories, foundries, mines and suchlike places. Far more is done for collar-and-cuff workers than for those who expend body and brawn. Perhaps one reason for this is that those paid by the hour or by the piece, or by the day, usually insist upon extra pay for extra work, whereas office workers and the like make no such demands. Even so, it is extremely desirable that generosity be extended to all classes of wage earners.

Keep Fit!

Good Health Requires Good Elimination

To be well, you must keep the blood stream free from impurities. If the kidneys lag, allowing body poisons to accumulate, a toxic condition is created. One is apt to feel dull, languid, tired and achy. A nagging backache is sometimes a symptom, with drowsy headaches and dizzy spells. That the kidneys are not functioning properly is often shown by burning or scanty passage of secretions. If you have reason to suspect improper kidney functioning, try Doan's Pills—a tested stimulant diuretic. Users praise them throughout the United States. Ask your neighbor!

POWELLVILLE—Twenty-five students will be graduated from the high school here when the annual commencement exercises are held.

SOUTH LYON—Messrs. Joseph and Wm. Emery have donated a six foot school in books to South Lyon high school. The books are being distributed by the students.

MANCHESTER—Rev. P. Cunningham has gone to England to visit his old home. Rev. Fr. John E. Tenbrook of Bath will take his place here during his absence. He arrived last week and Rev. Fr. P. Cunningham has been introducing him to parishioners and friends.

GRASS LAKE—Following a meeting Monday evening plans are being rushed to complete the organization of the vigilantes in each community of the county as a protection against bank robbers. All banks are also making arrangements for the installation of burglar alarm equipment.

SALINE—A log cabin has been erected just at the rear of the residence of Henry Depe of the Saline. Mr. Depe wishes to use it as a place to preserve his antiques which he has recently discovered. Among the things are a machine, a table, a spinning wheel, a table and several other interesting articles.

MASON—Thirty-nine seniors will receive their coveted diplomas on June 2 according to the lists made public following mid-term examinations recently held. The commencement address will be delivered by Dr. William Gear Spencer, president of Hillsdale college and one of the most eloquent public speakers of Michigan.

DEXTER—Clinton Benson of Ypsilanti, an employee of the Detroit Edison Company, was severely injured Tuesday afternoon while working on a light pole in the alley near the residence of P. Pulling. He came in contact with a live wire and was severely burned and was also injured by falling about 30 feet to the ground. First aid was rendered and when revived he was taken to St. Joseph's hospital, Ann Arbor.

PINCKNEY—The following teachers have been hired for the Pinckney school for next year: Sup't., J. P. Doyle; Principal, Mrs. J. P. Doyle; Assistant, Miss Josephine Harris; Intermediate, Miss Francis O'Brien; Stockbridge, Primary, Miss Jessie Green. There is still one vacancy in the high school but the board are negotiating with a man at Kalamazoo for that position. Miss O'Brien will replace Miss Fern Tupper, who resigned.

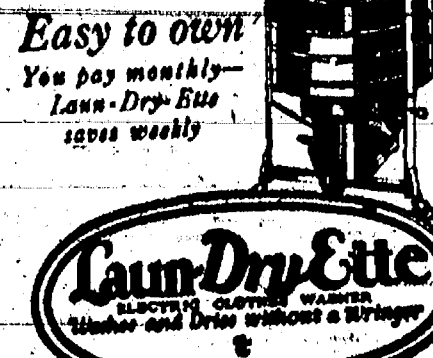

HOWELL—The dream of years has come true and Howell through the generosity of the McPherson family is to have a substantial modern hospital. Saturday, we understand the papers were signed by which the E. G. McPherson residential property, estimated at $30,000 is to be transformed into the McPherson Memorial hospital. Dreams do come true. For years Howell has dreamed hospital, talked hospital, planned hospital only to see their plans go glimmering.

ANN ARBOR—For the first time in many years, the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of the state of Michigan will sit in Ann Arbor on Friday, June 3rd, the occasion being the formal consecration and installation of the new Ann Arbor lodge. An especially urgent invitation has been extended to every Master Mason and his family to attend. Ann Arbor Lodge was recently formed in Ann Arbor and its 22 charter members were members of Masonic lodges in 13 other states and two foreign countries.

4-H SUMMER CLUBS TO HOLD SPECIAL CONFERENCE

All of the 4-H summer club leaders, club presidents, and club newspaper reporters will hold a special conference at Ann Arbor Saturday, June 11. The purpose of the conference is to formulate a uniform county plan of work for all of the clubs, and to train the leaders in their duties in carrying out their 4-H club work.

The meeting will begin with a luncheon at 11:30. (The place of the luncheon will be announced next week). Ed Jackson, a student of the University of Michigan, will lead the singing. Hackley Butler, of Ann Arbor, will welcome the guests to the city of Ann Arbor, and Miss Leona Gale, who is one of the four club members chosen to represent Michigan at the national 4-H club camp at Washington, D. C. in June, will speak on the 4-H values in club work.

The afternoon program will be held at the court house, beginning at 1:30. One hour will be spent in general conference where problems pertaining to club work in general will be discussed. At 2:30 the home economics club leaders will meet with Miss Sylvia Wikson, assistant state club leader, East Lansing, to discuss problems pertaining to home economics clubs only. P. G. Lundin, assistant state club leader, East Lansing, will meet with the poultry and crops leaders to help out with their particular problems. All of the live stock club leaders will meet with Nevels Pearson, assistant state club leader, East Lansing, to go over the live stock project. The newspaper reporters from the various clubs will meet with the newspaper men of the county to receive instruction in news writing. George McCallum, of the Ann Arbor Times News, will be in charge of this group. The club presidents will meet with Arthur E. Haggen, county club agent, to receive training in parliamentary procedure.

Plans are being made to have one of the 4-H clubs of Washtenaw county give a demonstration meeting for the whole group. They will demonstrate the use of the 4-H club ritual, the 4-H club pledge, the 4-H club initiation ceremony, and other phases of club work.

The office of newspaper reporter for each club is one that has been assigned this year. Every club in the county will elect a reporter whose duties will be to send in news from their club to the papers covering the area in which their club is located.

The public is invited to attend the afternoon session of the conference.

ANNOUNCE NATIONAL COUNTRY LIFE WEEK

Michigan will play host this summer for the largest conference on rural life problems in history.

The occasion will be the Country Life Week at Michigan State College, July 31 to August 6, when nearly 20 of the leading organizations and groups interested in rural life will gather.

Representative farm men and women of the United States and Canada, together with nationally and internationally known leaders in the agricultural and country life fields, will lead discussion at the various meetings. Particular interest will be added by a group of distinguished European authorities.

The Country Life Week is expected to attract large numbers of tourists from all over the Middle West, as well as from Michigan. Caravans of farmers will be organized for the trip, taking advantage of the opportunity of combining the state's summer vacation facilities with the conference program.

The American Country Life Association, of which President Butterfield of M. S. C. is the president, will hold a joint meeting with the American Farm Economics Association August 1-4, as the leading special meeting of the Country Life Week.

Among the many other outstanding groups included in the schedule are: The International Country Life Association, National Catholic Rural Life Conference, World Agriculture Society, Michigan Farm Women's Institute, National School of Leadership in Rural Life, Conference of Master Farmers, Citizenship Conference for Women, Michigan Country Life Association, Summer School for Town-Country Minsters, Extension of Town and Rural Schools, to the Community School for Managers and Directors of Local Cooperative Associations, Regional Conference of Community Church Workers, Conference of the Michigan Country Church, Country Y. M. C. A. Secretaries, and Michigan Rural Education Society.

Uses for Vulcanite

Vulcanite, or ebonite, is a dark brown or black form of India rubber. Its hardness is due to the presence of more sulphur than soft rubber contains, and to the fact that it is "vulcanized" at a high temperature. It is used for the mouthpieces of pipes, for combs, for screw-stoppers in bottles, and largely as an insulator in electrical instruments.

The Bride of Peter Dick

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(Copyright)

PETER DICK JONES was dressing for his wedding. His keen, dark face was strained as he struggled with his tie, and it did not clear even when he shrugged into his coat and stood forth as handsome a bridegroom as any girl could dream about. Perhaps he was thinking of the first time he had dressed for a wedding—his own—and had stood there in the church waiting for a bride who never came. He would never forget that awful period when he stood there cold, impatient, waiting for the arrival of Edith Mayne and her bridal attendants. He stood alone there, young Peter Dick, uncertain, conscious of the curious eyes focussed upon him. Even his best man had been late.

Then he was summoned to the vestry and the guests were dismissed. He could barely remember the feeling that he must be a marble statue to stand there in the vestry and listen to someone telling him that he had been "littered" that Edith had eloped with the best man.

Well, Peter Dick Jones had fought that down, down in the dust, under his feet, until people began to say he never cared for Edith any more. He had even eloped with Edith Deyo and her husband. Only once, though, not that he cared any longer, for their action had killed his love and respect forever—that the hurt to his pride still clung.

Well, there was no danger now, for lovely Sally Gray was as desperately in love with him as he was with her, and as neither of them had much money the wedding would be very simple—not even a best man.

"I can carry my own wedding ring," he thought, "I decided Peter Dick. He felt for it now—there it was safe in his waistcoat pocket. He had ordered the wedding bouquet days ago—lilies of the valley, which were to fall in a lovely shower down Sally's white satin dress.

He glanced at his watch. The wedding was at noon, and the hands pointed to eleven-thirty now.

"Might as well start now," he thought, and adjusting his boutonniere he telephoned for a car he had ordered from a garage, and soon he was set down before the vestry door of the church. There was no one in the vestry but he did not wait, this wedding was to be a very simple affair. Sally's mother had told him to go to the church and at a quarter to twelve to go to the church and wait there.

Peter Dick walked in, his head high, conscious that people were moving into the pews. He mounted the church steps and stood there, handsome, pale, composed outwardly. Within he was combating an old fear that assailed him now.

Suppose Sally should fail him now? Reason told him that Sally's love was as solid as Gibraltar itself, yet, for a little while he stood there, staring at a familiar stained glass window—it was familiar indeed—years ago he had stared at it for a full hour—now an organ played softly, and he heard the rustling of people coming and going. He could hear whispers and at last he looked through his eyelashes at the people.

The people! The people—coming and going and there were several cleaning women moving about their work of dusting the pews. Except for them the church was empty. There was not even a flower—yet—here was a familiar chancel and a familiar stained window—Suddenly light broke upon Peter Dick Jones.

This church was St. Paul's, North, where he had waited so long for Edith—and he was to be married at noon to Sally Gray in St. Paul's, South, on the other side of the city. It was two minutes to twelve now!

The cleaners looked amazed at the bridegroom as he shot across to the vestry. They had decided that the solitary figure was that of a bridegroom rehearsing his part. Peter Dick jammed on his hat and ran for a car. In a moment they were tearing across town to St. Paul's South. They were three minutes late, when Peter Dick rushed in to the church, and went swiftly up to the aisle between rows of people who watched him amusedly.

"Peter Dick's hurrying as if he feared that he might lose Sally," whispered some one to Mrs. Edith Deyo, whose heart was in her eyes as she looked at her lost lover. Somehow women always kept a tender spot for Peter Dick Jones.

Then the organ tones rose and rose, and there was Sally and her father, coming up the aisle, valley lilies swaying down, the white satin of her dress, and her tender eyes, shining for him through the mist of her wedding veil.

Disregarding all conventions, Peter Dick turned and held out eager hands for her. A little smile ran around among the guests, tenderly reminiscent of other wedding days, perhaps, and eager young lovers.

Mr. Gray gave his daughter away, and stepped aside, Peter Dick fumbled for the ring, dropped it, and it was Sally who picked it up and gave it to him with the most adorable smile.

"The loveliest wedding I ever attended," everyone said, when the happy bride and groom had started on the honeymoon.

"The next time I get married," Peter Dick jokes sometimes, but Sally always touches his hand softly and he never finishes that sentence.

Discovered by Dutch
The Spitzbergen Islands in the Arctic ocean, north of Norway and north-west of Greenland, were discovered in 1660 by Dutch sailors who, thinking them to be part of Greenland, named them "New Land."

Famous Old London Club
The oldest and one of the most famous clubs still in existence is White's club, founded in London in 1667, and whose register of past and present members includes some of the great names in English history.

Looks 'Easy
If you have a friend who prides himself on his mathematical acumen, try this on him: By what fractional part does four-fourths exceed three-fourths? If he doesn't think it over for a moment he will answer incorrectly.—Copper's Weekly.

Narcissus Bulbs
Narcissus bulbs grown in pebbles should be kept in a dark cool place for a week before they are set in the sunlight. Otherwise they will go to foliage and refuse to bloom.

Earliest Taximeters

A deliver into the writings of Virgil, a Roman architect of the first-century B. C. has found references to the taximeter. The horse chariots were fitted with a device which released a small bell into a box every thousand steps taken by the horse, the cost of transportation being calculated on the number of bells thus dropped.

There were no doubt many travelers in those days who would wait until a horse with a long stride came along.

The Last Straw

Jones, sunk deep in a huge leather armchair, dolefully gazed from his club window. Life was a curious proposition, he had decided. Curious beyond words.

First of all, he reflected, he had been disappointed in love. Later, he had been disappointed in marriage. And now, to cap the climax, he had been disappointed in divorce. "You see, that very afternoon he had married his ex-wife."

Danger From Icebergs

Icebergs may be sighted at various distances, depending upon the state of visibility, height of berg and of observer. On very clear days a crowd's nearest lookout may see one at 12 to 15 miles, and they have been picked up at a maximum distance of 18 to 20 miles by a midnight lookout. In a light fog a berg cannot be seen more than a hundred yards ahead of a ship.

Mythological Name

The Neptune association, an organization of licensed masters and mates of ocean and coastwise steam vessels, is named after Neptune, Roman god of the sea.

Roquefort Cheese

The bread used in Roquefort cheese is made of the finest wheat or of winter barley, leavened with a large quantity of brewer's yeast, kneaded and thoroughly baked. The crust is removed after standing a day and the crumb is pounded in a mortar and put away in a damp place until it is covered with mold. When it is ripe enough the new cheeses are thoroughly rubbed with the moldy bread, and layers of it are put between the layers of curd. After several days pressing the cheeses are wrapped in linen and dried and sent to dairy vaults where they are stored, rubbed with salt, scraped, etc., so as to enable the mold to run through them.

No Parents Nor Alumni

The story goes that several college presidents were discussing what they would do after they retired. "What would they be fit for, was the question."

"Well," said one of them, "I don't know that I'd be fit for anything, but I know what I'd like to do. I'd like to be superintendent of an orphan asylum, so that I would never get any letters from parents."

"I've a much better ambition," exclaimed another. "I want to be warden of a penitentiary. The alumni never come back to visit."—Harper's Magazine.

Hint for Mothers

Do not treat a burn indifferently. Even a slight burn is very painful. Apply a solution of baking soda, or whatever remedy you have on hand, then apply a cloth covering or bandage. If the air is excluded the pain will cease almost immediately after application of remedy.

Famous Causeway

The Giant's Causeway is a famous promontory of closely packed basalt columns on the coast of Antrim, north Ireland, west of Benger's head, eight miles from Portrush. Its true origin was a great outpouring of basalt in the Tertiary period, but legend ascribed it to Finn McCool or Fingal, who built it as a bridge between Ireland and Scotland for the giants to cross from Antrim to Staffa.

All Cooped Up

Jean became ill with chicken pox. Her mother made her stay in the house, and a wondering friend called to find out why she was not out. Jean's mother told him that she had the chicken pox and could not come out. The lad rushed away and breathlessly broke the news to his mother. "Oh, mother, Jean can't come out because she's got the chicken pox!"

Tone in Spadeful

If the stars being studied by the astro-physicists could be weighed actually, instead of by mathematical computation, it would be found that a spadeful would weigh a ton. The stars are accordingly much denser than the earth. The earth is said to be only about five and a half times as heavy as water.

Uses for Glucose

In the United States glucose is almost entirely manufactured from corn; in Europe much glucose is made from potato starch. Glucose does not crystallize, and when mixed with cane sugar prevents the cane from grain-lag. For this reason it is much used in candy, preserves, jellies, etc.

 C. J. Koch has come forward with a suggestion which may prove profitable to farmers owning sheep and who wish to protect them from the ravages of dogs. Mr. Koch states that one bell to every eight or ten sheep will keep the dogs away, and would like to hear from any farmer who has sheep killed if they have bells on. Bells cost only about 25c each and would be cheap insurance against sheep-killing dogs.

Boone Gravestones Saved
Daniel Boone's parents died before their son had come into prominence. His father, Squire Boone, died in 1765 and his mother in 1777. They were buried in the Joppa graveyard, near Mocksville, N. C., and two small stones were erected to mark the graves.
Almost a century passed before the accomplishments of Daniel Boone brought about a historic interest in the graves. Then visitors began to chip off little pieces of the gravestones as souvenirs. Fearing the stones would be destroyed, residents had them taken to a Mocksville bank and placed in safekeeping. There they remained until the Boone Trail Highway association had them returned to the graveyard and set in concrete beyond the reach of the casual vandal.—Kansas City Times.

Shetland Shawls
A Shetland woman tells how the lovely Shetland shawls are made. She says: "We do not knit the shawls from the middle outward; we knit a lace the required length, each quarter by itself, and pick up the stitches along the straight edge; the number differs according to the size of the shawl required; these we take in at each end of the middle, to form the corner of the shawl, as we proceed. First of all, we make a square for the middle; put a quarter to each side with needle and yarn (wool), much in the same way as you graft the toe of a stocking. Then we sew up the corners, and the shawl is finished."

Star Not Supernatural
According to Kauler the "Star of Bethlehem" was probably a conjunction of Jupiter and Saturn in the constellation Pisces, the two planets being so close as to seem like a single star. This conjunction is recorded as having occurred about 7 B. C., and might possibly coincide with the birth of Christ. Another theory is that the Star of Bethlehem was a recurrent star, the last appearance of which was in 1572, when it appeared in Cassiopeia. This star is reported to appear about every 330 years. A third theory is that the star was Venus, which varies in brightness, but is the brightest of all known stars.

A Sportsman's Bargain

By EUDORA R. RICHARDSON

PAGE BERKELEY, dressed in her golf best, which was very becoming to her slim figure and her clear, sun-burned skin, was playing in a four-somes with a man whom financial necessity decreed she should marry. On the nine-hole practice course she could see young Jennings, the club professional, as he taught some beginner. Page drove off the second tee carelessly, slicing the ball and sending it down the fairway near the main road. Ordinarily she would have cared terribly about playing such execrable golf—but today there were too many other things distressing her for golf to matter much after all. One continued marry Jennings, a man whose only assets were good looks and a genius for golf—especially when all one had was a family that expected one to save it from the deepest poverty—a family with an old name and nothing else marketable. The name was, however, very marketable. Page had reason to know, for she felt sure that it was precisely this name that her fiance, James Johnston, was bargaining for.

"That isn't exactly like your golf," James Johnston said, his eyes and his lips collaborating upon a very nice smile.

"If you can't endure my golf, let's stop," Page snapped.

Of course she knew that it was outrageous to be peevish with a man who was always kind. She hated, too, to think that he might be in love with her. It gave her a queer confidence to feel that he was seeking a Berkeley alliance for social purposes.

Page walked across the links toward the green where her ball was waiting for her. She heard a heavy laugh, and a quick little twinge of pain made breathing hard for a moment. Alan Jennings was laughing at his pupils' latest attempt to conquer the drive. Page putted with the awkwardness of a beginner.

By the time the foursome reached the ninth green the three were swimming before Page's eyes. Johnston walked with her to the summer house at the edge of the fairway, while the other couple continued their twosome.

"Why don't you make a clean breast of the way you feel, Page?" the man asked. "I know you love Jennings and not me. You have just been bargaining with me, haven't you?"

Page nodded dumbly and did not try to blink back the two tears that traced slowly down her cheeks.

"Other words, you are marrying me for money, and you think you're something to give me in return, aren't you?"

"Yes," Page replied as steadily as she could. "I don't believe you love me any more than I love you. If each of us plays fair, it's all right, isn't it?"

"Yes, dear—of course," the man replied shrilly and almost in a whisper.

"I'm not anything better than fair, however. You don't want to be released?"

"No," Page said quickly. "That would be quite impossible. I owe something to the name of Berkeley. Can't we be married soon—very soon—and end the uncertainty?"

Johnston nodded. Then, lifting Page's hands to his lips, he kissed her finger tips with a tenderness that made the girl suddenly ashamed of herself.

After dinner that night Page came alone to the club, came by means of the street car, for the Berkeleys owned no conveyance. She wanted to see Alan once alone and explain that there could be no other marriage.

Tonight inside the club Alan was not to be found. Page went to the veranda and looked out across the moon-kissed terrace. By one of the Georgian pillars she saw two men talking together. They were unmistakably Alan Jennings and James Johnston. In a moment the older man moved toward the square where a few cars were parked, and Alan sauntered toward the "main" door of the club. Page stopped to meet him.

"Alan, Alan, I want to talk to you," she said.

"The boy linked his arm in Page's, and together they descended the terraces.

"What do you suppose that old bloke Johnston has just done?" Alan asked.

"Offered to take me in business with him at a salary of $10,000."

"Page faced the boy, her eyes wide with unbelief. James Johnston could have been motivated only by his wish to see her happy. Then he must really love her for himself."

"What do you think about it?" she asked.

"Oh, I don't know. I could marry you—but it would mean hard work, and this lazy life suits me."

"You couldn't marry me if you had a million. I want a man who's earned his money," Page announced, and, turning, sped across the lawn. James Johnston's car was still at the edge of the pond, and she could see a man standing against it. Coming up behind her suddenly, the girl placed her hands across his eyes.

"I'd be able to guess who," the man said, standing quite still. "For I might wake and find I had been dreaming."

"Will you mind waiting to find that I love you and not a young simpleton whose brains are all in his arms and whose heart is not anywhere?" Page said very softly, but there was a glad ring in her voice.

"There was no answer just then, for two strong arms held her in an embrace."

Pygmy Sense of Humor!

A race of pygmies has been discovered in New Guinea in the Dutch East Indies by an American scientific expedition. These people use stone implements and weapons. They are strict vegetarians. When a pygmy wants to get married, he is subjected first to an ordeal, which consists in the following: He is placed at a certain distance to serve as a target for the best bow and arrow sharpshooters. He must try to dodge the flying arrows. When the ordeal has lasted long enough and he has survived, the chief says: "Here is your wife. You are courageous and have fought enough to endure marriage." The pygmies have a sense of humor, apparently. Pierre Van Puyen, in the Atlanta Constitution.

Left Name in History

King-Maker was the name given to Richard Neville, earl of Warwick, one of the most powerful nobles of the Middle ages. He took a prominent part in the Wars of the Roses. He raised an army of 30,000 and placed the duke of York on the throne. Then he turned to the house of Lancaster, deposed Edward of York and restored Henry VI. The restoration lasted only a few months, for the Yorkists won the bloody battle of Barnet in April, 1471, in which Warwick was slain. The duke of York was restored as King Edward IV. Warwick's historical romance, "The Last of the Barons," is based on the career of Warwick, the King-Maker.—Montreal Family Herald.

Anglers' Patron Saint

Isaac Walton was born at Stafford, England in 1593. He became a linen draper of London; and—amassed a modest fortune, retiring from business early in life in order to enjoy the society of several of the most cultured men of the time. One of his recreations was fishing, and he is remembered by his book, the "Compleat Angler." He also wrote admirable biographies.

According to Kauler the "Star of Bethlehem" was probably a conjunction of Jupiter and Saturn in the constellation Pisces, the two planets being so close as to seem like a single star. This conjunction is recorded as having occurred about 7 B. C., and might possibly coincide with the birth of Christ. A third theory is that the star was Venus, which varies in brightness, but is the brightest of all known stars.

Element of Luck

Luck is generally described as something that happens seemingly by chance. It may be an event either good or evil which affects the interests or happenings of an individual, but this happening is entirely casual. "Lucky," however, carries the idea of good luck only.
