FIELD ARTILLERY BAND PLAYED SPLENDID CONCERT

Lansing Organization, Under Direction of Milo Shaver, Pleasure Immense Crown on Wednesday Evening.

Playing to a crowd which numbered up in the thousands, the 119th Field Artillery Band, a National Guard unit from Lansing, entertained with a splendid concert of marches, waltzes and overtures on the Main street of Chelsea on Wednesday evening. The band is playing under the direction of Milo M. Shaver, a former Chelsea boy, who accompanied the organization here last evening.

Playing with the artillerymen were two local men, E. J. Notten of Chelsea, and Ben Barber of Waterloo, having been members of the band for several weeks past when they played at Camp Grayling during the regular summer period.

Lack of space for maneuvering necessitated elimination of the exhibition drill which the boys promised. Cars which were parked along the street on both sides occupied space needed for the exhibition and this part of the program was called off.

Following the concert, the boys were escorted to the upstairs dining room at Kolb's restaurant where they were served a supper of Virginia baked ham and the trimmings. The supper was made possible through generosity of Chelsea business and professional men who contributed during the past week toward a fund which would partly compensate the band for coming to Mr. Shaver's home town for a complimentary concert. Only a small portion of the amount contributed was used in providing the feed and a substantial amount remained in the treasury to be used by the members of the band as they saw fit.

After more than eleven years in the business of keeping folks "cool" in summer and warm in winter, E. L. Benton has disposed of his ice, wood and general hauling business to L. H. Cox, the deal taking effect today.

September 1, Mr. Cox, who has been in the employ of Mr. Benton for some time, will operate the business along the same general lines as has his predecessor, with practically all the equipment formerly used by Mr. Benton.

Mr. Benton is undecided as to what he will do in the future but it is hoped future activities will not take him and his family from Chelsea where they have gained a loyal circle of friends who wish them well.

Samuel Haselschwerdt of Sharon, while moving his threshing machine outfit on U.S. 12 between the farms of the M. Schenk-estate and Mrs. R. C. Whitaker, in Saline, last Saturday afternoon, was struck by a passing auto and badly injured.

As Mr. Haselschwerdt stepped off the tractor to look after the separator and tank wagon which was attached to the tractor, he was struck by the passing automobile and thrown to the pavement. His right leg was broken, a gash cut on one side of his head that required ten stitches to close.

He was taken to Mercy hospital in Jackson, where at last reports he is recovering as well as could be expected. Conrad Haselschwerdt of Chelsea, is a brother of the injured man.

SALVATION ARMY TRYING TO ELIMINATE IMPOSTORS

Numerous reports come into the Divisional Headquarters at Detroit from Chamber of Commerce Secretaries and business and professional men who are interested in The Salvation Army, requesting that efforts be made to stop people coming in to towns collecting money from the public, making the people think they are contributing to The Salvation Army.

These people are impostors living on the good name of the Army, which has been gained by much hard work and sacrifice.

The Salvation Army makes but one annual appeal each year, and that through its Advisory Board in each County, comprised of from ten to twelve of the leading business and professional men and women in the county. No representative goes out from the State Headquarters to solicit money before letters are mailed to Advisory Board Members informing them that the representative is coming. These Advisory Board Members approve the budgets and work out ways and means whereby the appeal for funds may be made. A local treasurer handles the money and mails the checks in to our headquarters.

The Salvation Army is not trying to injure legitimate organizations from soliciting funds—its object is only to stop impostors from soliciting in the name of The Salvation Army, and Chambers of Commerce, Civic Clubs and Civic Clubs are asked to assist The Salvation Army in getting rid of impostors.

A short business meeting was held and Bert Gieske of Manchester elected president, Clarence Sodd of Ypsilanti, secretary and Fred Sodd of Ann Arbor, treasurer, also various committees to serve for next year.

BUSINESS PLACES WILL CLOSE FRIDAY AFTERNOON

Chelsea Day at Washtenaw Fair Promises to Have Full Attendance of Chelsea and Vicinity.

In response to an invitation from the county fair officials that Friday be Chelsea Day at the Washtenaw county fair, Chelsea has wholeheartedly accepted the invitation and on Friday afternoon business places will be closed and a general holiday prevail in order that employees and proprietors of business places may enjoy the day among their friends at the fair. Business establishments will close at 12 o'clock noon, according to a petition circulated during the fore part of this week.

With the weather man handing out all that could be desired in the way of sunshine and clear skies, the fair thus far this year has enjoyed good attendance and patrons are well pleased with the display of products of farm and factory among the various buildings. Addition of new buildings has facilitated the showing of these products. In addition to these displays there is a liberal portion of free entertainment, opposite the grandstand and on the grounds. Fireworks have also proven a big attraction during the evening and considerable money has been spent in perfecting this display.

On Friday afternoon, in the administration building near the main entrance, the various community choirs will participate in a contest which is expected to prove quite an attraction. Chelsea will have a representative choir of about twenty-five voices take part in this contest.

EDUCATION VIA THE ETHER

The importance of radio in the general uplift and education of large masses of the country's population is just beginning to be realized. The educational possibilities of radio are pushing themselves forward rapidly into the public consciousness.

Prominent educators both here and abroad look to the radio to bring about real universal education. Not the four R's kind of education, but that which enables one to appreciate the best in art, music and life. Radio is credited with having improved the American taste for music.

The public schools in Atlanta, Ga., have already added the radio to their faculty. From a central station lectures and music are broadcast to the class rooms and assembly halls, each of which is equipped with a receiving set.

There is, now, under consideration a plan under which the foremost thinkers and educators from this and other countries will appear in a series of educational and cultural radio lectures. An audience of millions is assured. It appears probable the future will see a chair of radio established to fulfill such a purpose.

Even now, when most radio programs are designed to entertain, no one can follow the radio without being improved mentally and culturally. And very often it teaches while it entertains.

The day may come when the university extension courses will be given by radio to students miles away, and it is not beyond the realm of possibility that some day education will be carried by the ether to homes in the mountains and plains, remote from school-house and college.

SCHOOL DAYS

Again the school bell sounds. It sounded, or some other signal was given, for Roman school children centuries ago. The children of the present are following the law of civilization. In tender years they must be prepared for the business of life, that they may be able to pick up the burden where their elders leave off, and carry it on.

The vacation is over for the children. They had a good time while it lasted. There was fishing and bathing and romping through the woods and camping and trips through the country and mountain climbing and baseball and tennis and field games and other play. But life is not made up of such things. Some of it is grim. That last is what makes schooling the order of the day.

Life never stands still. The children of the present will be the controlling, achieving citizens of later years. Hence the schools, that the seeds of the future may be met, that the men and women of tomorrow may be efficient, capable men and women.

THE CHURCH SUPPER

The season for the church supper and the festival is here. These delightful feasts crowd the late summer and early autumn evenings. They come in such numbers that a problem of selection is oft times presented. The pity is that there is no clearing house to regulate the dates so that cooperation might eliminate competition as it were.

In this day and generation of so-called high speed existence when we seem to depend so largely on manufactured enjoyment it is indeed a refreshing treat to attend the average church supper or a garage festival. At these events there is to be found a wholesomeness and a plenty of food and association for a greater value than the price paid for the ticket.

These affairs are conducted for profit of course, but is a broader profit than monetary gain alone. The good folk who sponsor and provide them, add to the menu a measure of good will that makes one always want to go again.

If the movies lose their appeal, and enjoyment runs at a low ebb, if the appetite fails and life goes a little stale, crank up the car and seek out one of these suppers. In this prescription you will find a tonic that will restore lost appetites, soothe jaded nerves and reinvigorate a low spirit all in one evening. Such good food you have never tasted, unless perchance you are a "supper fan", and such quantities of it. The good folk, who willingly serve you are never content until you cry quits after having eaten your fill. And such delicacies as you will find—plenty of food of course, but then added to it will be pickles and a sauce that awakens the appetite, tasty jellies, the mounds of some neighboring housewife's dainty cottage cheese and dozens of little touches that the average man and woman find so appealing.

And if this one finds opportunity for widening the circle of acquaintance, of knowing one's neighbors a little better. We folks who dwell together in happiness and contented prosperity, know there are no better people to be found anywhere nor any better place to spend our appointed hours than here in this community. To get the most out of living is not such a hard job after all. There are plenty of opportunities and these countryside events are part and parcel of them. If you aren't already a "supper fan" join up—you're passing up a valuable opportunity to add to life's enjoyment.

Damon and Pythias Fall Out

By H. IRVING KING

(Copyright.)

HARRY DRAYTON and Job Gath-erwood were off for their annual two weeks' vacation. Classmates at college, both took hunting and fishing seriously. So they were "roughing it" in a little house they had hired on the shore of a lake swarming with fish.

Job was cleaning fish one day while Harry, shotgun in one hand, was holding in the other a partridge which he had shot.

Down the woodland road and out into the open came a young lady, rosy of cheek and bright of eye. She was dressed as young ladies are dressed in these days for walking expeditions, and she carried in her hand one of those long walking sticks which suggest an attenuated Alpengastock.

The young man turned and stared at her. "Hello," said she, fixing her eyes severely upon the partridge in Harry's hand. "I thought I heard a gun a little while ago. I suppose you know this property is posted? Besides the law on partridge is not off yet."

"Sorry to have offended," replied Harry in his best society manner, "but you see Miss—"

"Winship," she supplied, "Jessica Winship. Father owns the place. We've got a little house at the farther corner of it. Well?"

"I was about to say, Miss Winship," resumed Harry, "that we hired this little shack here with the privilege of hunting and fishing."

"That," retorted Jessica, "does not excuse your shooting game out of season, and you can settle that with the game warden."

Then, turning abruptly to Job she asked, "How's the fishing?"

"Excellent," replied Job, jumping at the chance to get the attention of the young lady away from Harry and centered on himself.

"I suppose," continued Jessica, "that you two boys are the ones father mentioned as having taken this place for a couple of weeks?"

"Boys—indeed! She must have been at least two years younger than either of them. 'Doing your own housework' she went on. 'Oh, do let me see how you make out with it.' And she started for the little house, the 'boys' following meekly after her. She gave a keen glance around the interior. A continuous 'Hum?' was her only comment. The 'boys' started to introduce themselves.

"All I know," she interrupted, "for they told me, Job Gathewood and Harry Drayton. Which is Job?"

Job bowed. "And the other, by a natural deduction, is Harry," she went on, giving Harry, at the same time, a look and smile which made Job second and third in her estimation. "Well, I'll be back," said she. "I must—"

Horn Heralded Coming of Early Locomotive

The earliest locomotives had nothing more in the nature of a warning of the engine's approach than a tin horn blown by the engineer at more or less frequent intervals, but under some circumstances this proved inadequate. The resulting volume of sound depended largely upon the lung power of the engineer and the direction and force of wind.

On a spring morning of the year 1825 a farmer was driving to market with a load of butter and eggs and, being unfamiliar with locomotives, he loitered on the track too long and failed to hear the warning signal from the tin horn, whereupon the whole outfit was scattered over the landscape.

The bill which the company had to pay was regarded as staggering and Ashland Baxter, who was director of the company concerned, paid a visit to George Stephenson at Alton Grange to confer with the great inventor to ascertain if something in the nature of an adequate warning could not be invented to keep people off the track. The result was that Stephenson made the steam whistle which was immediately adopted for all locomotives then in use and has continued as a permanent feature of all locomotives built in the meantime.

Comments on Britons' Lack of Individuality

Among the visitors to this country just arrived from the West is a man who left England 35 years ago. He has prospered abroad and now comes to take his one in his "native country." What are the differences he notices chiefly in our national make-up from the people he left a generation and more ago? He tells you frankly: "You're all alike, as like as two peas. There is a similarity of faces and expression, of occupation and idling. I find less individuality among people here at home now, less character, less sharply defined natures. I think the fact that so many of you play some sort of game is responsible for a general lack of character. Games don't develop anything but your muscles. They cramp the character, I'm sure."

"In times gone by I can recall nine out of ten of my father's friends who were real characters, individuals. They had a zest in life and blazed their own trail, whether it was footpath or high road. 'It was their own way of living.' They had a definite reading of life. Then every person you met was a new experience. Today everybody's cut and dried, an economical factor, eh? And his cheery laugh mitigated the sting.—London Chronicle.

Albatross Lives Long

Little information has been compiled concerning the longevity of wild birds. It is known, however, that the albatross is a long-lived bird, living from 25 to 50 years.

Job for the Censor

"The weight of the earth," reads a magazine article, "is 5,907 followed by 19 naughts." A very mighty story.—Farm and Fireside.

Bird Has Wide Range

The sora is a bird of the mallards, entirely in marshes, usually found in brackish waters, and ranges over the entire North American continent, from far north as southern Canada, to the United States south to northern Mexico. These birds are all poor flyers. They run through weeds and rushes and have the appearance of being weak-winged. However, they make rather long migratory flights. The sora lays 6 to 18 eggs. In some regions the bird is hunted as game, and an open season is provided by federal law.

"Double-Crossing"

Doctor Vizgelly says in regard to the expression "double-cross" that a New York boss in the early '30s confessed before an investigating committee that when a constituent asked a favor he made a record of the name and fact, and if he intended to grant the petition marked a cross after the name. Sometimes he would change his mind, in which case he added a second cross. In his testimony he would say: "I crossed Smith; I double-crossed Jones, etc." Possibly this is the origin of the expression "double-cross" as used today.

Edelweiss From Asia

The edelweiss, the one Swiss flower with which travelers are sure to become acquainted, is not of Swiss ancestry at all, not even of European. According to Dr. Heinrich Hugel Mazzetti, of the Vienna museum of natural history, it is an immigrant from Asia, where the human race first came from. The Austrian biologist's researches on the distribution of the living and fossil relatives of the edelweiss have reached across the Near East, through the Himalayas, down into Indo-China and north across China and Japan.

His Mean Revenge

A flash peddler in Australia has discovered a new method of revenge against the woman who lited him for a local prohibition leader. Twice a week he stops his cart in front of the woman's home and goes around to the rear with a bag in his hand. Returning to the cart he removes numerous empty beer bottles from the bag and lines them up in a row beside the cart. The neighbors do not suspect that he carries them in with him.

Wealth's Disadvantages

When a man is prosperous distant relatives come very close if they can. When he goes broke even near relatives become very distant. Wealth has its disadvantages just as poverty has, and it takes an philosopher to choose wisely between them.—Galt.

Ranacea

If apple sauce kept the doctor away, the medical profession would go untroubled and irretrievably broke in less than six weeks.—Nashville Banner.

A Heat Message From Mars
True, Mars will never heat your home or your person as well as the better known known heat-producing planet, the Sun. But, the temperature of the War God's planet does have a direct influence on the temperature of the War God's planet.
A special instrument, called a thermophile by the technically minded, is used by Professor Coblenz, of the United States Bureau of Standards, to measure the temperature of Mars. An adaptation of this thermophile is used by the American Gas Association Testing Laboratory in testing the efficiency of gas-fired radiant heaters.
No emphasis need be given the delicacy of this particular instrument. Called upon to measure accurately the heat of Mars it enables the trained engineer at the Laboratory to check carefully the efficiency of the radiant heater before they admit it to the Blue Star-Honor Roll.
When buying your radiant heater make sure it bears the Laboratory Seal—the Blue Star of Approval.

KEEPS US GOING

Only perseverance can carry on. Only the courage to go ahead when everything seems to have failed can win where defeat seemed the logical end. Many times when things seem the darkest the victory could be easily won if we could look around the corner and see for ourselves what little opposition there is really before us. It is perseverance which gives us the courage to go on.
It is perseverance which counsels us to do a little more today when we are tempted to quit early and make things easy. It is perseverance which helps us clean the slate today and prepare us for the opportunities which the morrow will bring.
The sluggard says, "I have done fairly well today and I will let it go at that." The wise man says, "I have done well, but I will try harder that I may do even better."

Rose Leaf's Messenger
In medieval France, where much was made of the significance of colors and every emotion was thus illustrated, the color of love and the red rose became the messenger. It was something more fitting for the Venus blood that stained the white rose, her foot being pricked when she hastened to the aid of Adonis—New York Times.

Bird Has Multiplied
The English sparrow was brought to the United States from England in 1850 by Nicholas Pike and other alectors of the Brooklyn Institute, who eight years later were liberated in Brooklyn, N. Y. The motive was to save the birds from the devastation of the caterpillars, which at that time were spreading throughout the eastern states.

What is a Diuretic?
One Can't Feel Well When Kidneys Act Sluggishly.
The part played by the kidneys to bodily health should be clearly understood. Sluggish kidneys do not thoroughly cleanse the blood of poisonous wastes. Such impurities are apt to make one dull, tired and aching with often a nagging headache, drowsy headaches and dizziness. A common warning of imperfect kidney action is scanty or burning excretions. Doan's Pills aid the kidneys in their eliminative work. 50,000 users have publicly recommended Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

Brain Works Rapidly

Assuming you began to think consciously at the age of five, then at thirty, if you have done an average amount of thinking, your "impressions" would number about 1,920,000,000. Those whose work is entirely mental would double those figures.

A woman's brain is about five ounces lighter than a man's, but it is of superior quality—of a higher specific gravity. It lasts longer, too. On an average a woman of sixty has a 20 per cent better brain than a man of the same age.

Hats Not Always Common

In Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales," the Merchant had upon his head a "Flaunders blyver hat." It seems that from this period hats became more frequently worn, for there is mention in some of the early writings by distinguished people of "felt hats," and "blever hats." Throughout medieval times the wearing of hats was a mark of distinction and of noble birth.

Properties of Horse's Eye

The biologist survey says that the crystalline lens varies somewhat in the eyes of different mammals. Magnification of the object may sometimes result, but it is impossible to tell the comparative impression on the retina and the optic nerve. Should man appear three times his natural size to a horse, all other objects would also be magnified three times.

Heart of Gold Hunk of Ice

By CLARISSA MACKIE
(Copyright.)

WHEN Royal Blake had finished college and entered the business world, he was that anomaly among boys, one who had never "had a girl." And then he met Eve Langdon!

Eve was a splendid girl, the cousin of one of his friends. She was visiting in Roseville that summer, and she was as fair and golden as the morning with yellow hair clipped close to her pretty head, and eyes as large and blue as cornflowers, as for her cousin, Laurie, who was a perfect foil for Eve, she was brilliantly dark, with dark blue eyes lashed with long black lashes, and soft dusky hair.

"Funny," mused Roy, that first night after he had met Eve at Laurie's house, "at last I really believe that I have discovered the right girl! Just to hear her talk is enough to inspire any man—fancy her being interested in my work—my business—everything about me! I almost told her about my raise in salary, and how dad's being president of the bank had nothing to do with my promotion. I almost know that at last I have met the golden girl—the girl with the golden heart!"

And Roy drifted away into delightful dreams of Eve Langdon who could play tennis, golf, row a boat, swim with the best of them, drive a car and ride a horse.

Of course Laurie Langdon could do all of these things as well as, if not better than her cousin, but Roy had never thought of Laurie, whom he had known all his life, except as a "good kid," and never once had his heart beat a bit faster because of her nearness or her beauty. With Eve Roy went everywhere, quite overlooking Laurie, who often had to remind him of home.

"Never mind, Roy," Eve would say impatiently, "Laurie just loves to stay at home and poke around sewing, or entertaining the Ladies Aid society, or things like that."

And then Berry Fancher came to town with all of his money, his many motor cars, his careless good looks, and his fashionable mother and sister. The Fanchers bought the old Gardner mansion and spent thousands of dollars on repairs, and the first girl that Berry Fancher ever paid any attention to was Laurie Langdon! He met Eve and survived the encounter.

Laurie grew prettier every day, and the warm admiration of Berry Fancher was followed by the attention of other swains, so that for the moment she had almost forgotten about Roy Blake and her hidden love for him.

By September the guests lessened. Eve, who had at last captured Berry's attention, went everywhere with him, and finally, when she began to talk of going home after her summer's visit with her cousin, it was Berry who offered to take her in one of his cars.

"Good-by," thrilled Eve triumphantly, as she waved her little gloved hand. "I have had a glorious summer—very good-by to Roy Blake, for good-by to all the other boys and girls I have met!"

The evening after Eve went Roy Blake came around to Laurie's looking rather downcast. Laurie gave him Eve's message of farewell and broke the news of her going with Berry Fancher. Roy nodded gloomily.

"Roy kept on coming to see her every day or two, and Laurie found herself trying to comfort him with snatches of news about Eve. Sometimes she played her violin for him, and this he loved. One night he said to her, 'Laurie, please don't talk to me about Eve! We had a fearful fuss before she went away and now I have known for a long time that what I thought was a hunk of gold was a cold lump of ice!—I thought it was love—but I was mistaken.'"

"Roy," whispered the girl, "she was sorry for him. Still Laurie she was secret hidden deep in her heart, and went around as cheerful and happy as ever, and then she had a letter from Eve asking about Roy! Eve was wondering! It seemed that Berry Fancher was engaged to marry another girl in Virginia, and had merely amused himself last summer."

The next evening that Roy came to call upon her, Laurie, looking wonderfully pretty, told Roy about Berry's engagement and gave him Eve's letter to read. Roy grinned cheerfully as he returned it to her. "Eve's a pretty girl, Laurie, and I had a crush there last summer, but she cured me. I know what I want now—and if I can't have a certain girl that I love more than anything else in the world—why, I'm just going to throw up my hands and go to—some of 'em where!"

And Roy, don't go away," cried Laurie. "I am sure the girl must love you—is she some one that I know?"

WHY DO THE MOVIES LOVE?

By Thomas Meighan

"Blind Alleys," Mr. Meighan's latest Paramount melodrama, comes to the Princess Theatre, Wednesday and Thursday, September 7 and 8. Evelyn Brent and Greta Nissen are featured. We are often asked why we travel thousands of miles for locations. When we arrive in a small town accompanied by forty or fifty people, a mass of camera equipment and a carload of reflectors, platforms, poles, etc., people stare and wonder what it's all about.

Often there are more technical assistants than actors. The mechanics of picture making are a revelation to those who have never seen a company at work.

Magazines and newspapers have described many processes of the business. Many illusions have been destroyed. There are thousands of pictures goes who think that any kind of background can be constructed in a studio. When they meet us on location they're surprised.

Once when I told a man we'd come to his city for atmosphere he thought I was talking about the weather. The mistake was natural. Weather is one of the most important considerations in outdoor picture-making, but when I mentioned atmosphere I meant all the elements that go to add realism to a story and its setting.

During the past few years I have made pictures in California, Panama, Florida, Alabama, South Carolina, Georgia, North Carolina, Idaho, when fields of Alberta and New York City. In each instance our traveling added something besides scenic background to the picture.

Successful writers understand the characters they are writing about. Often they have lived and studied in the locales described. We do the same thing in a different way.

It would be impossible for directors and players to stay in Hollywood or New York and produce pictures indefinitely. One would soon lose touch with the varying forms of life they portray. Artificiality would creep in and honest reproductions of types and situations be totally lost.

I don't say there is no artificiality now. There is. Normal emotions, gestures and situations have to be slightly exaggerated at times to get across the impression desired in picture form. What I do say is this: It's impossible to get across just the right amount of exaggeration or understatement the emotions of characters unless directors and players meet all kinds of people under all kinds of conditions. In other words—they must know life.

My latest production, "Blind Alleys," is an illustration. Owen Davis used New York City as a background for practically all the action. Naturally, being so near the center of metropolitan life, we shot exteriors on the spots described. For instance, as Captain Dan Kirkby of the merchant marine, visiting New York on my honeymoon, an auto hits me in Times Square. We took the whole company there early one morning and got the real thing.

Another sequence takes place when I rush down to a steamship pier, hoping to find my movie wife, Greta Nissen, before she sails to Cuba. Director Frank Tuttle had the entire unit journey to the proper locale. I could go on giving examples of this sort indefinitely. On seeing "Blind Alleys" you'll understand just what I mean when saying: "Imitations are all right but not quite as good as the genuine." I honestly believe everything in "Blind Alleys" to be authentic and real. I hope you like it.

Luxemburg Has Much to Attract the Tourist
About all the average person knows about Luxemburg is that it is a small country somewhere between Belgium and Germany, but the little country possesses some rare scenery. The country is as old as most of its neighbors, and home thought it important enough to fortify it, centuries ago. From its dual family have come queens of France and emperors of Germany. The city of Luxemburg is a rocky gem in a forest setting, and according to Edwin Robert, travel writer, from here one can look to Treves and Thionville, and not only into Germany but to Longwy and the north of France, Arlon, Brussels and the coasts of Belgium. The old fortress of Vanhan has been modernized so that its gloom no longer shadows the city. When the visitor has seen its sights, such as the duke's palace, its Spanish Renaissance style the Seventeenth century cathedral, its bridge and viaducts, the palace of the "Archid," the Musée Poncelet and its wonderful parks, he has before him some of the best motor roads in Europe for a spin through the duchy to see its other cities and towns.—Detroit News.

First Movie
The name of the first movie was "The Great Train Robbery." The first film showed water dashing over rocks and was advertised as "It Moves, It Moves!"

Sugar in History
Sugar was first made in India in the first century A. D., according to an unproved question in Liberty. It was introduced into Europe in the twelfth century.

Culture's High Place
Culture is the highest human justness. It is the attainment of mind and soul which can consider with equanimity two sides of any issue; which can weigh without prejudice all phases of any interest; and which can differ without scorn with any extreme of another's vision.—Katharine Locke.

Statistics
If all the serial stories were placed end to end in this world, they would have to be contained in the next Kansas City Times.

Perfect Comfort for the woman driver

An Adjustable Steering Column to Suit Your Convenience

Buick for 1928 is extremely thoughtful of feminine comfort. One indication of this consideration is Buick's new steering column, which may be adjusted to the most comfortable position for women, as well as men.

And in addition, Buick for 1928 has a new steering wheel—slender to fit feminine fingers—yet deep and solid to provide the firm grip men demand.

Buick for 1928 pleases women because it is easier to drive—because it is more comfortable to ride in—and because it is the acknowledged style-leader among motor cars. That's why you see so many Buicks at fashionable gatherings and on the smartest boulevards.

Fall of the Mighty

By HELEN R. HARTON

USED to come into the four-and-nine-cent store quite often, and nobody had ever sold him a single thing, except Hazel Snumpson.

Hazel was a most beautiful (and most dumb) blonde, whose peculiar temperament was tolerated in the flourishing emporium chiefly because the meager salary paid the clerks was not exactly luring to the working girls of Sleepport.

The mild-looking old gentleman always purchased a half dozen of the most conservative-looking handkerchiefs, and after a desultory cruise about the other gaudily displayed counters of trifles, would meander out and not reappear for another three weeks or so.

Then one day, as the old gentleman was selecting his usual purchase of linen, a remarkably arrayed youth of the most ultra-modern type, came in hastily after him, and after a hurried whispered colloquy they left the store without a purchase. Hazel replaced the disarranged handkerchief tray without the customary remarks of ancient customers who failed to restore her counter to its pristine orderliness.

Now, Hazel had scorned all the patrons of her lowly emporium. In fact, she held beneath her notice all of the regular residents of Sleepport. But she had been known to be both civil and polite to a few summer residents—that is, those whose social position was positively established.

And now she was guilty of being both civilized and courteous in her treatment of a customer. Oh, yes! The old gentleman, returned, and though he was alone again, Hazel had not forgotten the marvelous perfection of his companion of an earlier date. And she wasted cloying sweetness on the mild old gentleman, eliciting a gleam of twinkling amusement from his keen gray eyes.

A few weeks passed, and the old gentleman failed to appear. Late one afternoon, however, the perfect young man put in an appearance and purchased, with lofty disdain, a half dozen white cambric handkerchiefs. Hazel unbent enough to remark upon the weather. The young man responded and finally made rapid enough conversational progress to warrant suggesting "bringing around the car at bedtime." Hazel was both awed and impressed. Surely this model of perfection was somebody!

The car proved to be of expensive make and was handled expertly by a smartly garbed chauffeur, who showed proper respect for the charming young man.

Hazel learned during the ensuing hour that the "young old gentleman" was the young man's distant cousin and that he was rather "odd." He really should be more careful, considering the position of the family. And he confessed that he did write Hazel scented away in transports. Fancy a real writer taking notice of a Sleepport shopgirl! Her favorite "movie" had not lied, then, after all!

And, like all petty souls, she boasted of her conquest and lorded it over her fellow workers in the four-and-nine-cent store. Hazel's dream of a prince and married him, sans all the pomp and glory she had planned (because she was assured by her Lochinvar that "all the smart people do it").

It was simple repayment for all the discourtesies of the past which the nice old gentleman had suffered at the hands of the ill-bred young lady, to watch the expressions change upon her face, when her newly-made husband was forced to explain the misleading position in which he had posed.

Hazel was a poor actress and she showed in sulky surliness and rage she felt over the denouement. How could she guess that it had been the exact opposite, that the mild old gentleman of the kindly, gentle ways was the really great man and famed author; that the flashy, speedy young man was his poor cousin, and only a paid secretary and that only for the kindness of the famed author's heart?

And she blinked away tears of sympathy when she learned that it was the nice old gentleman's penchant for looking handkerchiefs—not his infatuation for her—which had caused him to make his regular purchases at her counter! And last, but certainly not least, the play which was now being rehearsed, the latest from his faculty pen, had as its featured heroine a poor, unassuming girl, because she was a type!

Needless to say, the secretary to the famous writer resigned promptly after the startling revelations made by his usually gentle cousin. And forevermore was the young man and his minute suite dimmed by the remarkable flow of scathing denunciations heaped upon their heads, as the thoroughly aroused Newell Dodge released his long pent-up emotions and allowed his tongue to keep pace with his racing mental equipment. Hazel is now a smart, though extremely sulky, maid in a wealthy family, and John N. Dodge—a chauffeur! Sans pretense and pose!

And as the young people left the house that memorable day Newell Dodge tore into his first draft of a new story—a story in which he had recklessly tried to portray the goodness and not the reality in Hazel Snumpson's character.

"It is much better," he muttered, sadly, "I was a fool to ever dream of such a thing."

Marmalade Makes Big

Demand for Oranges

Not only does John Bull consume enormous quantities of marmalade and jam at home, but he sends a lot of it abroad.

The marmalade of Britain is produced from sour oranges and sugar. The best known firms use almost exclusively the Seville bitter orange, which has comparatively little pulp and consists for the most part of rind, the substance most desirable for the manufacture of good marmalade.

Inasmuch as oranges are perishable, the brokers accept the highest bids made on the day of sale and never reserve the fruit for future offerings. These sales are held regularly on what are known as "market days." The character, quantities, qualities and nativity of the fruit are catalogued several days in advance, so the auctions are always well attended and the bidding is lively.

The London Fruit exchange, where these auctions are held, stands in the heart of the city in a large structure known as the Monument building. It is said that a sum in excess of $20,000,000 is annually required, to pay for the oranges sold in this exchange, the great bulk of the sale being at public auction.

Educational Essentials

Ruskin says: "An educated man ought to know three things: First, where he is; that is to say, what kind of a world he has not into; how large it is; what kind of creatures live in it; and how what it is made of, and what may be made of it. Secondly, where he is going—that is to say, what chances or reports there are of any other world besides this; and what seems to be the nature of the other world. Thirdly, what he had best do under the circumstances, what are the readiest means in his power of attaining happiness and diffusing it. The man who knows these things, and has his will so subdued that he is ready to do what he knows he ought, is an educated man; and the man who knows them not, is uneducated, although he could talk all the tongues of Babel."

Dissolving Country

It has been estimated that if the work of erosion performed by water on the total surface of our country were concentrated on the Isthmus of Panama, it would suffice to cut a canal from ocean to ocean 85 feet deep in about 75 days.

The average annual erosion corresponds by water in the United States to the removal of a layer about 3 1/2 feet thick in 3,400 years. It is figured that our rivers transport every year 270,000,000 tons of solid matter and 513,000,000 tons of matter in a state of suspension.

World's Most Tragic Man

Chance plays a smaller part in life than some people think. The least beginning may lead to the greatest end. Every day, hour and minute men are building or neglecting to build. Events that they attribute to luck are nearly always due to some act, thought or purpose long since forgotten. Frequently worthy beginnings of the best promising kind have been lost because beyond the wildest hopes or dreams. There is only one really tragic figure in life, and that is the man who never makes a start. —American Magazine

Punishment by Ostracism

Ostracism was a method employed by the ancient Athenians of banishing citizens whose influence was considered prejudicial to the state. A day for voting was fixed, when the people wrote on small earthen tablets or shells the names of those whom they wished banished. Six thousand votes were necessary to drive a man into exile. To ostracize today means to ignore, to exclude from a certain social circle.

Humane Menageries

Karl Hagenbeck was the first showman to train large carnivorous animals of different species to perform together. He also introduced a new way of confining animals in outdoor menageries. In his zoological garden at Stellingen, a suburb of Hamburg, there were no gratings or wires about the space occupied by groups of large mammals, broad mounts of water being employed to confine them.

Walter Birch, Pastor
Services at the usual hour next Sunday: Morning, 10 a. m., evening, 7:30.

CONGREGATIONAL

Rev. A. E. Potts, Pastor

On account of a delay in varnishing the church floor and Labor Day holiday, we will not resume our regular services until September eleventh.

We are preparing beautiful services for that day. We hope every one interested in our church will be able to attend both morning and evening worship.

We are beginning our new year under most favorable and promising circumstances. Many improvements have been made on the rectory, and church. God has indeed blessed and prospered our work.

Does it not seem fitting and natural that at the first opportunity granted, we all assemble in the house we have erected and dedicated to the worship of Almighty God, and express to Him, and testify to the world our deep sense of gratitude and appreciation for the many blessings we enjoy through His goodness and mercy?

Everything promises an even better year than we enjoyed last year. Shall we not try hard to be at church the first Sunday after our vacation and continue faithful and helpful to the end of the present church year? If we will do that it should insure us against any failure to do our appointed task as a church, and insure us against any failure in the exercise of a Christian life.

Very sincerely, your Pastor,
Albert E. Potts

Bond of Brotherhood

Between Poetic Souls

A certain young woman, a stenographer for a New York firm, is best known in an admiring suburban circle as a "poetess." She jot's her inspirations down in shorthand notes, transcribes them on her typewriter, and submits the effusions to the local newspaper, which sometimes finds place for them.

One morning as she was commuting from New Jersey there was a heavy fog on the North river and the ferryboat was proceeding on its way gropingly, with frequent stops and much whistling. "At one time, out of the gloom, a great hoarse whistle, suggesting an ocean liner, sounded near. There was a stir of uneasiness among the crowded passengers, and the poet's male companion looked up from his newspaper with a nervous frown.

"Are you afraid?" he asked of the poetess. "Afraid!"—the word came with withering scorn. "Afraid! Why, you know Shelley died by drowning."—Harper's Magazine.

Appeal to Converts

In the center of a Christian settlement in the jungle at Medak, Hyderabad, India, stands a Christian church of the proportions of a cathedral. This is the central place of worship for the great community of Indian Christians, numbering over 50,000 who have gathered around Rev. C. W. Ponnett, a Wesleyan missionary, as a result of his 30 years' work in this native state. The church was opened a year ago, but there seemed something lacking in its beautiful interior, despite the marbles and many tinted tiles. There was no stained glass in the windows. Six thousand Indian Christians have given the money for a window, designed by Frank O. Salisbury, a well-known British artist. The subject is the Ascension, and Mr. Salisbury says of the window: "The basis of the design was that the church should be as beautiful as any Mohammedan mosque or Hindu temple, and I trust that my work will help them to realize their ideal of beauty as an aid to worship."

Queen Victoria Story

Some amusing stories concerning Queen Victoria are told by Sir Felix Semon in his autobiography. "The queen had a great sense of dignity, but she also possessed a keen sense of humor. For instance, when Sir James Reid, her majesty's physician-in-ordinary, became engaged to one of her maids of honor, the Hon. Miss Baring, the queen was exceedingly angry, and, sending for him, lectured him severely. He ought to have known, she told him, that nobody was permitted to propose to a maid of honor without obtaining the queen's permission. Sir James listened then humbly answered that her majesty was quite right; he certainly would not do it again. This so strongly appealed to the queen's sense of humor that she laughed heartily, and without further ado extended her pardon."

Strictly Private

He was a newcomer to the bank and consequently found his duties rather hard to remember, but all this was forgotten when he received his first pay envelope.

In a businesslike manner he quickly checked the contents before signing the receipt. Then his eye caught the words underlined in black:

"Your salary is your personal business and a confidential matter. It should not be disclosed to anyone." The clerk grinned as he picked up a pen and signed his name. Below he added briefly:

"I won't mention it to anyone, I am as much ashamed of it as you are."

Were Not Handicapped

When they were building the pyramids in Egypt it took 2,000 able-bodied men three years to move one of the huge stones from the quarry to the scene of construction, but fortunately there were no efficiency experts around then to make a preliminary survey, so they finally got it done. —Ohio State Journal

Little to Remember

The thought that where there is a railroad track a train may be up, is so simple that it ought to be in the mind of every one who drives an automobile. —Albany Journal
