NEW FIRE FIGHTER MAY BE AVAILABLE FOR COMMUNITY

Up-to-Date Apparatus Would Be At Disposal of Farmers Who Arrange For Use in Case of Fire.

That Chelsea and vicinity may have a new fire fighting apparatus in the near future, was included in plans of a representative of the Chevrolet Motor Company, who met with the Chelsea village council on Tuesday evening to outline plans for placing a pump and hose which would be available for farmers living within a radius of seven miles of Chelsea as well as the village itself.

Under the plan advanced by the motor representative, Chelsea would retain the fire fighting apparatus already owned, and for the use of the new fire fighting apparatus, storage and maintenance of the outfit. In order that the community outside Chelsea might benefit from the purchase of such machine, membership will be sold at 25c each among farmers who would be entitled to the protection the machine afforded in case of a fire on farm property. No expense other than the 25c membership fee would be necessary on the part of farmers, expense of maintenance and manpower for fighting fires being furnished by the village in return for use of the machine. Should other farmers who do not have a membership in the organization or interest in the machine, wish to call on the machine for help it would be necessary to post sufficient funds to cover certain expenses before such assistance would be rendered, according to the present plan as outlined by the motor representative Tuesday evening.

The outfit proposed and manner of operation is similar to that in operation in other communities where the need of fire protection has been felt. Grass Lake township in Jackson county is believed to have a similar plan working there to good advantage, brought about through some disastrous fires in the country thereabouts when fire protection was greatly desired but unavailable. With the proposed equipment, water can be pumped from any lake or stream, open well or cistern, or could be connected with village hydrants to increase the effectiveness of fire fighting.

MRS. MINNIE SPIEGELBERG

Mrs. Minnie Spiegelberg, aged 65 years, widow of the late Adam Spiegelberg, died Monday night at her home at 437 South Main Ave., Ann Arbor, after a short illness. She had been a resident of Ann Arbor for the past seven years, going there from Dexter, where she had made her home most of her life. She is survived by a son, Ervin, of Lima; a daughter, Edith, at home; two sisters, Mrs. Anna Schmidt and Mrs. Elizabeth Neef of Dexter; a brother, John Kraushaar, of California; also four grandchildren. Funeral services were held at 3:00 o'clock Thursday afternoon at Michigan's funeral chapel. Rev. E. Kurth officiated. Interment in Forest Lawn cemetery, Dexter.

SURVEY WILL DEPICT CORN BORER STATUS

The field survey begun August 15 to determine the corn borer infestation of the 1927 corn crop in the infested area of the states covered by the clean-up campaign will be completed about September 30, according to word received from the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The results of the survey will show to what extent this campaign was successful. Early indications are that the spread in Michigan is considerably less than it was last year. Approximately 250 townships are being surveyed, involving five corn fields per township. Within each field a census is taken by corn borer experts experienced in locating the destructive corn borer.

When the campaign was authorized by Congress, the Department considered eradication of the corn borer possible. The spring clean-up campaign conducted in cooperation with the State Department of Agriculture and Michigan State College was therefore an intensive effort to slow down the natural spread of the borer into the corn belt and to reduce commercial damage in territory already infested.

The survey was not started until the borers had begun to reach maturity and the maximum damage to the crop could be determined accurately. Until this survey is completed, it will not be possible to make any conclusive statements relative to the comparative corn borer infestation in 1926 and 1927.

ODD FELLOWS WIN THIRD SERIES IN TWILIGHT LEAGUE

With the completion of the third series of the baseball schedule played here this summer, the Odd Fellows team came out victors again, making them winners of each series. As proposed, that the next to high team play the high team in a final windup of the season, it is expected now that the Masons and Odd Fellows will play the former in an effort to oust the Odd Fellows from their leadership in the league. In the third series the Odd Fellows won all five games played while the Masons won 4 out of 5 played.

Suggestion of a "sports day" with in the next few days in which various kinds of athletic activities take place, together with ball games in the afternoon, has been made to the Standard, an idea which should meet with approval and bring a large crowd to town. Anyway it's worth thinking about.

LIMA FARMERS WILL HAVE DETROIT EDISON CO. POWER

Farmers of Lima, as well as the Lima-Center church, and school, will be provided with electric power by the Detroit Edison Company in the near future. Nineteen persons or organizations have signed contracts to buy Detroit Edison power as soon as the line can be built by the company, the extension coming west from the Parker road to the M. L. Burkhardt farm in Lima. Approximately $3400 has been paid by the nineteen signers. More than half of the persons contracting for the 110-volt current are owners of private electric lighting plants, according to M. L. Burkhardt, who has been working in the interest of the extension.

Installation of the new current will make it possible for those using it to install standard appliances and conveniences such as are used in the cities and will bring many comforts heretofore limited by the privately owned plants or lack of plants.

FAVORABLE ACTION TAKEN ON DRAINS

Two drain boards, appointed by the Judge of probate to determine the necessity of constructing two sewers in Ann Arbor, took favorable action Thursday and authorized Clayton E. Deake, drain commissioner to proceed with the assessment.

The board consisting of Supervisors John Dawson, August Austin Robinson, Saline, and Edward Foster, Ypsilanti, passed favorably on the Packard street drain which will serve a wide area in the southeastern part of the city and will empty into the new Pittsfield Ann Arbor project.

The Packard street drain has 12 branches which will carry storm water from the following places: South Packard, Maplewood place, Brockman Blvd., the M-17 cut-off, Ferdon road, Shadford road, Fair Oaks parkway, Baldwin Ave., Scottwood Ave., Wallingford road, Austin Ave., and Burns park.

The board on which were Supervisors Hanson, David Evans, George Alber, Sharon and William Eisenman, Freeland, determined that the proposed Miller-avenue drain was a necessity and authorized the commissioner to continue proceedings looking toward its construction. The drain begins at Doty avenue in the western part of the city, runs down Arbor View Blvd. and traverses West park before emptying into Allen's Creek drain. It has one branch which serves an area north of the park.

A petition to clean out the Horseshoe Lake drain in Northfield township and construct a dam at the point where it enters the lake was partially allowed by a drain board on which were Michael Grosshans, Lodi; Jas. Howlett, Lyndon; and William Dupont, Second ward, Ann Arbor. This board decided that the drain should be cleaned out but voted against construction of a dam.

Right subordinate granges sent delegates to the meeting, the following granges being represented: Ann Arbor, Cavanaugh Lake, Lafayette, Manchester, Webster, North Sylvan, Pittsfield and Scio.

Not Peculiar to Bible

The Bible uses the term of "words" and "names" than any other literature of the period at the time the King James or authorized version of the Bible was made. At this time such expressions as "The wind bloweth whither it listeth," instead of "The wind blows as it lists," were in common use both in sacred and secular literature.

CHELSEA CHOIR WON FIRST PLACE IN COUNTY CONTEST

West End of County Took Its Share of Prizes in the Annual Washtenaw County Fair

Chelsea and vicinity again won its share of prizes in the county contests during the Washtenaw county fair last week when a goodly number of premium ribbons were carried home by exhibitors and contestants.

In the contest between choirs of the county, held Friday afternoon, Chelsea, under the direction of Miss Doris Schmidt, emerged with first honors to its credit. Eighteen persons composed the choir which sang the "Recessional," and "Hark, Hark, My Soul," with solo parts by Mrs. A. A. Palmer, Miss Helen Lambert, and J. Vincent Berg. Soline, with a large number of voices, took second place, while Milan took third.

Organization of the local choir and details of the contest as concerned the Chelsea organization, were under the direction of Mrs. M. J. Baxter, who also sang. Judges for the event were: Reuben Kempf, director of St. Andrew's church choir, Ann Arbor, Mrs. Reuben Kempf, music instructor, Ann Arbor, and Joseph E. Maddy, head of the public school music department of the University school of music.

Much interest was manifested in the choir contest and the auditorium in the administration building was packed to the limit, despite the oppressive heat. Many were unable to gain an entrance and some who did were forced to stand throughout the contest.

Out of four entries from Chelsea in the junior music contest held Friday forenoon, four prizes were won. All three prizes were won in Class C by local pianists, Miss Mabel Huston taking first, Miss Frances Kanhemer second, and Miss Enid Freeman, third. Chelsea had no entries in Class B, and in Class A, Jean Irwin took second prize. Seventeen entries were listed in the three classes, the majority of them being piano numbers. A few violin numbers were played and one number was a vocal solo.

While all premiums awarded in the livestock, poultry and fruit departments are not available at this time, those won by Chelsea folks, or those living in this vicinity, and which are available, are as follows:

Eggs: 1 dozen hen's eggs, brown, first, N. W. Laird, Chelsea. Bared Plymouth Rock, cock, first and second, Mrs. Manfred Hoppe, Grass Lake. Mrs. Hoppe also won first and third Bared Rock hen, first on Bared Plymouth Rock old pen. Fruit: Most artistic display of fruit, second, N. W. Laird, third, D. A. Riker, both Chelsea. Mr. Laird also won third on best five plates of one standard, second on best peck of apples, second on plate of Fameuse Snow. Mr. Riker won first on single plate of Duchess.

The value at the Grass Lake market, was $22,024.00. The buyers of that date were James Allen, John Close and J. M. Sanford.—News.

The petitions call for a 36 foot pavement from the residence of W. E. Murphy, except in the business section where a fifty foot one is asked. It is not considered likely that work will be started on it this year according to the highway commissioner as the job will take about two months. Sewers will have to be laid to drain the surface water from the street, curbs built and the whole street cut down about six inches and graded. Indications are favorable that work will be started on it this next spring.—Dispatch.

CERTIFIED SEED PROVES SUPERIOR

Certified seed has again demonstrated its superiority. Members of the Michigan Crop Improvement Association, according to the farm crops department at M. S. C., have produced this year from certified seed, 10,140 bushels of American Banner wheat on 309 and three quarters acres—an average yield of 32.7 bushels per acre as compared to the state average of 17.4. It is expected, however, that the state average this year will be somewhat higher than usual.

According to the farm crops department, certified seed wheat affords the grower valuable protection. It assures genuine variety, quality, germination and freedom from weeds and disease. The first inspection is made in the field just before maturity to determine freedom from disease and weeds. The threshed grain is again inspected to determine quality. The inspector is employed by the crop improvement association and works under the supervision of the farm crops department of the college.

Of the three varieties certified by the crop improvement association, American Banner and Red Rock have produced the highest yields this year. Berkeley Rock produced slightly lower yields but is said to be almost immune to smut. The highest yield turned in this year among the members of the crop improvement association was 50.8 bushels per acre of American Banner on five and one quarter acres grown by E. L. Stockwell, of St. Johns. The second highest was 50 bushels per acre of Red Rock on 11 acres grown by C. D. Finkbeiner, of Clinton.

EARLY FREEZE WILL KILL MANY MILLIONS OF BUSHELS—SAVE SEED IN TIME

By P. G. Holden

Good seed corn will be scarcer next spring than at any time during the last 50 years. That is the outlook now with the corn crop in the corn belt from two to six weeks late and frost likely to come any night. There never was a time when early gathering, drying and storing of seed corn will pay greater than it will this fall. Unless we gather our own seed this fall thousands of us next spring will plant seed that is weak or dead. Or we will buy seed from way off somewhere that is not suitable for our locality, and as a result our next year's crop will again be weak and late.

Here's an important thing to bear in mind right now:

Any farmer can have his own seed corn for next year, if his corn, this year, gets past the roasting ear stage of maturity. Corn gathered in hard roasting ear stage and thoroughly dried will grow. It is surprising how vigorously it will grow. This early gathered seed will shrink and shrivel considerably, but the important thing this year, is the fact that it will grow. In any emergency delay is serious. The man who does something about his next year's seed before it is too late, is the man who will have seed corn to plant in the spring of 1928. The man who uses his head and figures out a method of gathering and storing seed corn on his farm. He can swing a sack over his shoulder and pick the best ears from the best stalks. That's the right method whether the corn is early or late. About 15 ears will plant an acre. Harvest gather two or three times as much as will be needed to plant the acreage. How long will it take to gather next year's seed supply? How can we make more money in the same length of time?

Don't throw the immature ears down in a bag or leave them in a box or barrel. Don't put them in a pile. Hang them up the very day and hour they are gathered. Hang them so the ears won't touch each other—they'll mold where they touch. Don't hang them outdoors—it may rain and freeze. Hang them where warm air will circulate all around them. There's some place on the farm to thoroughly dry next year's seed corn. It may be over the kitchen.

Get the seed dry and keep it thru the winter where it won't freeze. Freezing never does seed corn any good no matter how dry the seed is. No one denies the statement that seed corn is better when it ripens and hardens on the stalk, but it won't do it this year. It's a lot better to have immature seed that will grow and be suitable for the locality than to have no seed next spring or to send away off for seed corn that may not mature, no matter how good a corn year 1928 may be. If frost stays away until November and the corn gets ripe, we can then gather ripe seed. Don't wait for that, but take advantage of it if it comes. Don't take a gambler's chance of waiting for ripe seed this year. Let's insure ourselves now at little cost with roasting ear seed. Do something. Do it now. Gathering, roasting ear seed is good business this abnormal corn year of 1927.

Yields Valuable Timber

Yew is one of the most characteristic evergreen trees in Great Britain. It attains a great age and yields an exceedingly hard timber. Yew was the favorite wood for the old English long-bow, and its extreme hardness renders it suitable for cabinet work, axletrees and the like where strength and durability are required.

Set Good Example

It is related of Sir Walter Scott that he planted many acres of trees at Abbotsford, his country seat, and his neighbors were so much impressed with the result that they planted their country places with reference to the effect their plantations would have on the view from Abbotsford.

Inside or Out?

"I would be glad," said the clergyman, after he had given out the text for his sermon, "if the young man who is standing outside the door would come in and make absolutely certain whether she is here tonight or not. That would be a great deal better than opening the door half an inch or so and thereby exposing the necks of the people in the back row to a current of cold air."

We suggest that you use the lower cost Station-to-Station call whenever it will serve your purpose. A Station-to-Station call is the kind of call to make when you are reasonably certain that the person with whom you wish to talk will answer the telephone or can be called to it quickly.

In placing such a call, give the Long Distance Operator the number you are calling. If you do not know the number, however, say to her, for instance, "I want Mr. John Smith's residence at 350 Sayre Street, Lansing, Michigan." Be sure that you do not specify to the operator that she call any particular person. ### Within New Buick Foundry—Most Modern in World

Lower Left: Aisle in main building showing central conveyor which brings cores from core room in distance. On the side are mold conveyors on which core and flask are assembled. These lines move toward foreground of picture, where pouring occurs.

Upper Right: Pouring engine castings. Note that workmen merely guide operations, ladles being suspended from electric hoists running on monorails above. Two big ladles, on electric overhead trucks, which brought them from cupolas, may be seen in background. The pouring workmen are on a moving platform which keeps pace with the conveyor carrying the make. Note the conveyor entering steel hood which shields the room from the castings' blazing heat and gas after pouring.

Upper Left: The maze of cooling conveyor which "kills time" between foundry and cleaning plant, giving hot castings time to cool before they are handled. It doubles back and forth, huge castings hanging from it every few feet. With the portion inside the buildings, it is 4 1/2 miles long.

Lower Right: Core making with modern pneumatic equipment. Core sand is delivered to the benches automatically by conveyor, and finished cores are carried to core ovens and thence to core assembly by conveyor racks at left.

Center Inset: The six big cupolas are charged mechanically, as shown here. The hoist at right hauls loaded bucket up from loading platform below, pushes it into the cupola, and dumps it.

There is a shrew in the world which is so small that it is impossible to measure its dimensions. It is estimated that the smallest are less than 10 miles in diameter.

Culture in America in Pleistocene Age

Primitive man lived in America at a vastly earlier time than is generally believed, says Scientific Monthly, if the evidence gathered by the Colorado Museum of Natural History in the Southwest is valid. Instead of dating back only some 8,000 to 25,000 years, the time when the Indian is supposed to have come to America from Asia, these human relics are assigned to the geological period known as the Pleistocene. It was in this age, from 25,000 to 1,000,000 years ago, that northeastern America was periodically covered with a glacier, and when prehistoric mastodons roamed the land.

The discoveries are mostly arrowheads, metates (primitive grinding instruments) and other worked stones, found in close association with extinct animals. Near Frederick, Okla., remains of a mammoth were found at a level of eight feet above that of a deposit which contained some of the relics. This is considered strong evidence of their antiquity. The arrowheads were totally unlike those in any known collections. They were primitive, but the man who made them must have progressed considerably in culture, as they were far in advance of the human relics of that period unearthed elsewhere.

Sizes of Planets

The naval observatory says that the smallest of the major planets is Mercury, diameter about 3,000 miles. Of the minor planets or asteroids, some are so small that it is impossible to measure their diameters. It is estimated that the smallest are less than 10 miles in diameter.

First Horseshoes in Form of Sandals

It seems that the first protections used for the feet of horses and other beasts of burden were sandals-like in form. Notations to this effect were made by such ancient writers as Xenophon, who recommends leather soles and shoes for baggage horses, and Aristotle, who mentions a kind of sock bound on the feet of camels used in war.

These were probably followed by the so-called hippopotamus sandals, which varied in form, but usually consisted of an oval metal plate prolonged backward on either side and sometimes carrying a curved hook. In front and laterally are wings provided with eyes and rings. Straps passed through these clips, hooks, eyes and rings, fastening the shoe to the foot. The nailed-on horse shoe as now found is thought to have been used some time before the Roman subjugation of Gaul.

Several forms of shoes were made and it is probable that the art was practiced at more than one center, the Gauls generally being credited as the first to practice the art of horseshoeing.

At that time a very light, slender shoe was fastened without the use of clips and the foot was not padded. It is believed that the Druids made and fastened on the shoes for Gallic warriors.

IN LOVING MEMORY OF J. LUCIE BROESAMLE

who died one year ago September 8th
Gone, but Not Forgotten

Oh, weep no more fond parents
For your son is gone on high,
Weep no more for him,
For you shall meet him by and by.

He is not dead but only sleeping
In a slumber, oh, so sweet,
And when the time of awakening
Angels him surely meet.

It is sad to think we never
Never more shall see him here,
But we hope to meet him
In Heaven over there.

Angels they were singing Praises
When they heard our Father call
"There is rest for you and all."

Days of sadness still come over us,
Tears in silence often flow;
For memory keeps you ever near us,
Though you died one year ago.

Friends may think we have forgotten,
When at times they see us smile,
But little do they know the heart-
aches

That our smiles hide all the while.
We think of him in silence,
So that many need not say,
But many silent tears are shed,
While others are asleep.

Sadly missed by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Broesamle and sisters, Florence and Bernice.

CAST IN SAME PLAY

In "The Heart of Maryland," screen revival of Delasco's famous Civil war play, Warner Bros. for the first time have included both the beautiful Costello sisters in one cast, Dolores in the part of Maryland Calvert, Helene as Nancy, discarded love of the villainous Captain Thorpe, who plays such a disastrous role in the life of the heroine.

Lloyd Bacon directed "The Heart of Maryland," which comes to the Princess Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday, September 14 and 15. Included in the cast are Walter P. Goddard, who plays the part of General U. S. Grant, James Welch as General Robert E. Lee and Charles Edwards as Abraham Lincoln.

"The Heart of Maryland" is a play which brought such tremendous success to the Costello sisters, almost thirty years ago, and deserved fame to Mrs. Leslie Costello, one of those authentic melodramatic heroines who never lose vitality, as costumed as did 1898.

Legal Profession Has

Its Patron Saint, Too

The journalists give their patron saint. He is St. Paul. But the lawyers have one, too. He is St. Yves, who earned the fitting title of "The Advocate of the Poor." At his festival the refrain is said to be, "Advocates sed non latro, roay miranda populo" ("An advocate, but not a thief, a thing well nigh beyond belief").

In pictorial art the saint is commonly represented accompanied by a kind symbol, according to an unkind suggestion of the characteristics of the profession. There is a legend that when he presented himself at the gates of Paradise, St. Yves was asked by St. Peter, "Who are you?" St. Yves replied, "An advocate." "Come in," said St. Peter, "for we have not yet a lawyer."

His right to be in paradise having been subsequently disputed and his removal urged, "I can not resist," said St. Yves, "but it must be done regularly; my expulsion must be notified to me by a sheriff's officer." No such functionary could be found in paradise and so St. Yves remained among the blessed.

Sealing Wax Is Used Extensively in the Arts

Sealing wax is perhaps less important than it was before machine envelopes came into use, but never was so useful artistically. Many a delicate decorative object that appears to be enamel ware or carved and painted wood or colored glass turns out to be merely molded sealing wax. Pendants, beads and artificial flowers, plaques and vases and candlesticks are among the objects beholden for their beauty to this material. Molding it, many an untrained woman has done something in home craftsmanship.

A lump of sealing wax on the end of a steel knitting needle melted over a flame and cooled in a glass of water, shaped with a molder and decorated by melting in other colors becomes a handsome bead. A metal-rimmed matchbox lid covered with warmed sealing wax, shaped when soft into bunches of grapes or flowers, becomes a "drop" to finish the necklace. Parings and pins and hat ornaments are made in the same way.

Tactfully Put

Y. W. Cross, who married "George Elliot" (Mary Ann Evans), the novelist, spent several years of his life as a banker in Wall street and then returned to his native country. Soon after he was invited by a friend for some grouse shooting, and Cross, whose shooting had got rather rusty during his stay in New York, deemed it advisable to get some coaching from his friend's head gamekeeper. After a few days the host remarked to the keeper:

"How's Mr. Cross getting on, Joe?"

"Well, sir," replied Joe, "he's missing them better than he did!"

Some years later, Cross told this story to King Edward, whose services Joe had rendered, and the king remarked laughingly:

"I shall never get rid of Joe; that's one of the most tactful things that has ever been said."

Visiting

It's always a gamble to take children calling, as many a mother has found out to her sorrow. Sometimes they behave according to Hoyle, and then sometimes they do or say very strange things. The other afternoon mother and 5-year-old Dorothy went calling and were served tea. This didn't bother mother, because she had frequently had her little daughter with her when serving tea at home; although, of course, the child's request was limited to the kitchen. On this occasion the hostess had sandwiches instead of cake. When she asked Dorothy if she would have some, imagine her surprise—and mother's chagrin—at the youngster's reply: "I like cakes better, but they'll do."—Philadelphia Record.

Wyatt and His Cat

It is said that Sir Henry Wyatt, who was a privy councillor under King Henry VII of England, always had his picture painted with a cat beside him; because when he was confined by Richard III in a cold and dark tower, where he had neither food nor fire to keep him warm, a cat brought him regularly every day a piece of food, and kept the warmth in his body by permitting Sir Henry to cross her. He was an ancestor of Sir Francis Wyatt, one of the early governors of the colony of Jamestown.

Fell in Love With "The Bear"

By EDGAR T. MONFORT

(Copyright)

SHE was listed in the directory as "Miss. Margaret. Miss. James Walker Hospital?" but to her associates she was "Sunshine" and Sunshine she was from the top of her head. She had a gold head down to her little feet that seemed to fairly twinkle as she hurried from one patient's room to another carrying coffee and cheer to all. To Sunshine they were fascinatingly interesting, the old lady in 23 who was so gentle and patient and never let a too much pain to say "Thanks, Miss"; the cracked old man in 34 who blustered and swore at the sight of a hypodermic needle, then subsided as sweet as a lamb.

But the patient in 101 they called him The Bear.

His chart read "Wilson, John. Age 26. Architect. 400 General Building. Admitted March 10. Appendicitis. Peritonitis. Operated 11 p. m. The chart left out all the interesting human things as most records will do. It did not say that Wilson, John, was tall and dark and nervous and had a fiery temper; nor was this tendency diminished by his having spent six whole weeks lying on one side while the poison drained out of his system. Of course, the doctors had told him months before that he might find himself with a ruptured appendix some day, but he had so dreaded the operation and the pain that he had postponed it until too late, thereby increasing his suffering a thousandfold. Just as the doctors had croakingly predicted. When his bell rang the unfortunate nurse answering it would find him in his room lying on his back, a snow-white cap beaming around the edge of the door, ready for instant flight.

"Come in," he would call irritably. "You look as if you were scared to death. I won't bite, I'm not a rattle snake. Come in, do. For Heaven's sake, come in!"

Sunshine always got the difficult cases because she could manage people, so it was soon understood that whenever possible she should answer 101's bell. She was not afraid of him, so she would breeze into his room, stand at the foot of his bed, smile at him and say, "Orders, Sir?"

Once in a while she would actually make him laugh. "He was such a nice thing if people only knew how to take him, she thought, but they were always antagonizing him.

Then one morning when she went in she found him with his head turned to the wall, and his shoulders heaving in quick sympathy she went over and put a gentle hand on his arm.

"Oh, Mr. Wilson, what's the matter?" she asked. "Tell Sunshine."

For a long time he was silent, then after a little more coaxing she finally succeeded in getting him to talk.

"I know I've got a terrible temper, but I do try to hold it in. I don't like to be shunned by the nurses as if I were a leper or something. I know no one will ever care for me because I do fly off all the time, but I don't feel mean inside. Every friendship I've ever had I've lost by it because people don't understand. The second I see them beginning to frown from me it makes me furious and I say things that I'd give my life to recall a moment later."

"I don't feel that way," said Sunshine. "Why you're nice. It's nerves makes you so terrible. If you'd relax when you begin to feel keyed up, when you begin to feel keyed up."

And that said apparently has been worrying you. You're going to be fine now, I know it; just start all over again."

"You're a little angel," he said gratefully. "I can't tell you how much you mean to me. If I were a reformer you'd want me to change. I have no right to ask if you could marry me, but I would like to reform you. I would like to improve you. I would like to love you. I would like to love me the right way, so much easier."

"I do love you," said Sunshine smiling. "And what's a little reform between friends?"

"I'm not mean?" he asked quickly. "You're too wonderful!"

"Wonderful, indeed," laughed Sunshine. "All the same I'm terribly glad you feel that way about it."

When Doctor Martin, the hospital dean, walked in a few minutes later he was amazed, dumfounded to see a housewife gold head almost hidden in The Bear's shoulder.

"Good Lord, now Sunshine's gone," he muttered. "That makes three in a month. I'm going to have to turn her out of this hospital."

Of course, the news went all over the building like wildfire and by 10:30 everybody knew that Sunshine had at last fallen in love and of all the unexpected things, with The Bear.

"What'll you do when he gets cross?" they asked in awe.

"I just won't get cross when he does. That's the only secret in running an irritable person and, oh, this, he's so wonderful. You don't know how dear he is to me. I don't know how I ever loved him. I met him," she said, her eyes wide with wonder.

"Ah, yes," laughed Doctor Martin. "Nothing but head angels. I thought she always seemed awfully willing to answer his bell. I believe this thing's been going on a long time. Love certainly is like lightning; you never know when and where it's going to strike."

Design of Colonial Clock Tells Its Age

By Walter Russell Storey in Arts and Decoration Magazine

No one bit of furniture gives quite as cheerful and quiet a note to a room as does an old Colonial clock. There is a distinct decorative quality to a bauble or type clock on the wall, a grandfather clock in the corner, or an early shelf clock on the fireplace mantel. These interesting relics of Colonial times, still ticking away, reveal what they have seen years ago. Yet their round, friendly faces and dignified forms hint of farmhouses with low-beamed ceilings, or Georgian mansions with lofty rooms.

The earliest wall clocks had plain tops. Around 1700 the tops were decorated with three balls or some other form of ornament, the middle ball being placed higher than those at the sides. Later the domed top and the top with the broken arch, so popular in Colonial cabinet work, as well as the scroll top, came into the fashion of the day.

If your clock has a square metal dial it is likely to be of the Seventeenth century, for it was not until after the beginning of the Eighteenth century that the arch above the dial appeared with its moving moon or heavenly ship. Clocks in those days had more to do than tell time, for they were also equipped to tell the month and the day of the month and to inform the family whether it was April or May.

Frenchman's Right to Chastise Wife Upheld

According to the code of gallantry, a man must not strike a woman, not even with a towel. John Tobin.

"The Honeydew" said that "The man that lays his hand upon a woman, save in the way of kindness, is a wretch, whose love grows hateful to name a woman."

In France it is judicially decreed that a man is not culpable who chastises his wife for deceiving him. This judgment was rendered in a case in which a woman sought a divorce from her husband on the ground that he had beaten her. She demanded an investigation of her charges. The husband did not deny the accusation, but pleaded justification and presented proof of his wife's treacherous conduct. Thereupon the court held that the physical violence of the husband, even when fully proved and admitted, did not constitute ground for a divorce, because the wife had herself provoked it.

That Magic Bottle

The bottle or medicine habit is nothing but a persistence of a depraved superstition for a form of medical fetish worship.

This statement, made by Professor Wynn, has probably surprised a good many people, for there is still wide spread faith in the magic of "the doctor's bottle."

Indeed, it is rather difficult to remain skeptical about it when you are ill. Many a husband, who has advised his wife to "throw all that silly stuff down the sink" while she was taking medicine, has swallowed nauseous draughts very meekly when his own turn came.

Still, we probably do take too much medicine. Most of us are our own "doctors" even before we are forty, and doctor with favorite prescriptions.

Genius of Shakespeare

Shakespeare used the skeleton of former life that had drifted down to him upon the stream of time, and were cast at his feet a heap of dead past. Thus he clothed them with flesh, and blood, and breathed into their nostrils, and they lived and moved with a life that was individual and self-existent. After he had once thrown it off from his own exuberant and fertile brain, vitality. His teaching brain, from master teachers and master kings that all Europe could have furnished as subjects for his portraiture. He found in his own consciousness means rather than any other man had ever looked upon. Richard Grant White.

The Prodigal Scotch

The old superstition that "every time a scotchman bangs a scotchman's heart breaks" has been exploded at Liverpool. At the bottom of the wishing well, of whose waters natives, breathing a wish, and have ever drinking in some measure, some of the natives have found this year, he solves the end of half crowns and still lives.

This is held to be significant and a confirmation of the idea that the Scotch is inclined to be light-headed. For "wishing waters" are generally supposed to answer the prayers of their devotees quite effectively. —New York Times.

Brilliant Retreat

Xenophon, the Greek military leader and historian, lived from about the year 430 to 355 B. C. In 401 B. C. he joined a body of 10,000 Greek mercenaries serving under Cyrus II. Persia. Cyrus was slain, and it devolved upon Xenophon to lead home the Greeks over a hostile and rugged country to the great sea. He performed the feat and wrote an account of the retreat of the 10,000 which is read in college today as a Greek reader.

Old Maynard's Daughter

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(Copyright)

FRANK BURLESON looked up from his desk as a clerk entered the office.

"Well, Simpson?" he queried.

"I wanted to see you just a moment, sir. We have had a letter from old Mr. Maynard at Crow's Nest—you know, near the end of Long Island, and he is very anxious to make a new will—wants one of the firm to come out and see him as soon as possible."

"I seem to be the only firm member in town, Simpson, so I believe I will give myself an afternoon off and run out there—I will telephone to my man to pack my bag for me and bring it down. Tell Carr to put in my brief case the necessary papers and forms and so forth."

Having dismissed these matters, Mr. Burleson returned to his work of planning what to do with an accumulated income, and about one o'clock he left the office building and headed toward Long Island.

As for Frank Burleson himself, he was a very trim and good-looking young man.

The only son of a rich man, he had been carefully educated, most of his time being spent at educational institutions of note. After graduation he had been spent in foreign travel, this his father had died long ago, and his father was leaving a vacation at White Sulphur Springs.

Grief did not interest Frank much. Once his father had asked him when he was going to get married, and Frank had murmured, "When I can even with a woman."

Since then Frank had heard more about "old Maynard's daughter." One of the older clerks had hinted that she was rather a strong-minded, not so young lady and Frank had forgotten his father's wish.

Late that afternoon Frank Burleson drove his car up the long avenue of pine trees that led to Crow's Nest the home of the Maynard family.

"Mr. Maynard is expecting you, sir," said the butler who opened the door that he was living down. He suggested that perhaps you would go into the garden and talk to Miss Peggy.

"Out of luck," growled Burleson, and just then he turned the corner of the house and stood stock-still with amazement. Before him spread a glorious expanse of old-fashioned gardens, colorful and perfumed, with the broad expanse of the sea beyond, blue, appealing, he stepped into the first path and walked toward the sea, forgetting all about Miss Peggy Maynard.

With his eyes on the sea, yet smelling the delicious, pink, bell-shaped roses and a dozen other enchanting fragrances, Frank Burleson went straight into the trap of Fate.

"What is it, Mr. Burleson?" inquired a sweet voice.

"Yes," said Frank, and turned around, looking at the speaker, and hearing a faint girlish laughter he looked down and there she was sitting on a little wooden bench with her hands clasped in prayer and her eyes looking at him.

"The answer to his, he had expected, but the most charming bit of femininity that he had ever met.

She separated to her feet. Red hair! Yes, indeed, not short, but waving deliciously close to a snow-white neck, a pair of eyes and a complexion that gleamed like ivory and a fascinating lip.

"How do you do, Mr. Burleson?" she said politely. "Grandfather and Aunt Maynard have been waiting for you. They asked me to entertain you and I thought, of course, you would spend the night?"

"I left my bag at the hotel," explained Burleson regretfully.

"You may leave your bag and get it down your man," asked Miss Peggy Maynard as they sat down on a marble bench.

"I have been engaged," said Burleson, and then she said, "And I'm married."

After that, somehow, things went better. Frank Burleson told her of his surprise at seeing her there.

"You are very surprised to see me," she exclaimed. "Not as surprised as I was to see you, though. Mr. Burleson, I have seen your father, you know, and so I expected to see a very fine-looking elderly man who looked as if he was missing his golf."

"That's Dad!" laughed Frank. "Sorry to disappoint you," he added, and when she turned away her ruddy head, he could see a bit of the bright color that flushed her cheek.

The next morning he went back to New York, fully aware that he was deeply in love with Peggy Maynard, granddaughter of the old man, and that of the strong-minded Miss Maynard, who developed to be a handsome white-haired lady of much dignity and charm.

A live fish was produced by placing a fish egg under a powerful ultraviolet ray for five to ten minutes. This life was made without the sperm. The eggs of the sea urchin were placed under the rays of the machine and the eggs became swimming fish larvae. The male was eliminated entirely.
