INVEST IN CHELSEA

Get rich quick schemes are not confined to bogus oil stocks and kindred affairs. There is legitimate stock just as there is legitimate stock of other character. A man who is supposed to have more than ordinary ability, one who has been successful in life, will often laugh at those who invest a few hundred dollars in some wild cat oil stock game, and just because a slick tongued salesman comes along with a proposition offering something just as wild but with a strictly good name, the man who dodges the oil stock falls for the other. It just goes to prove that Barnum was right. The American people like to be fooled, and one lesson is rarely sufficient.

There are laws to protect the public from illegitimate securities, but there is no law to prevent an enterprising selling stock in a company which is unlikely to succeed. A good salesman, one who can picture that legitimate enterprise as possessed of qualities which preclude every possibility of failure, proves too much for the investor, and away goes the money. There is no law against the ability to paint investments by well worded speeches in glowing colors.

There are few cities where there are not opportunities ever at hand for the investor, opportunities where there is far less uncertainty than those offered in other places. When those opportunities loom so large that they may compare with the description of the investment offered by the salesman from another city, there is in nine hundred and ninety instances out of a thousand, that there are local investors who are ready and willing to finance it. Opportunities that are strictly gilt edge rarely have to be peddled. Where there is a chance element, of course, the wary beware, and then it is that capital must be found among those who are not looking for a gamble when an investment is to be made.

With so many investments in Chelsea, or at least with the opportunity for such great investments, it is passing strange that there are not more of them taken advantage of. Surely it is not necessary to go to look for investors and say to them that Chelsea needs capital and ability to take care of its real needs. Why not a little more recognition by the people of the city of the opportunities, and instead of sending money away to develop other cities, keep it at home.

IN DEBT FOR A CAR

A business writer says that retail merchants have been deterred from stocking up as usual "by the knowledge of the obligations that many of their best customers have assumed in order to buy the automobiles that they use."

Buying cars on time has been encouraged so much that it is said to have become a general practice. And once in possession of a car, the average owner will deprive himself of almost anything else rather than give up his car.

It is a curious situation, which may have an important bearing on the business situation. Here is one great reason why the automobile industry has made so fine a record in recent years—its lavish extension of credit. And it may prove to have made this record and given this credit at the expense of the other industries.

An obvious recourse of the makers and sellers of other forms of merchandise is to give more credit themselves. But that is a very dubious solution.

DRESSING TO PLEASE

A few days ago much space was given in the news to the claim that styles and cuts in feminine vaiment are largely controlled by men. Now it appears that, to a large extent, women select and buy men's attire for store trade. That makes it about fifty-fifty and why not an admirable arrangement?

As a rule, the object of fastidious feminine dressers is at least to pass muster with the male element, at restaurant stions, and with the masculine peacocks it is the feminine observer whose praise is sought. The matter standing thus, it is a logical arrangement for women to wear clothes that men have designed and for men to deck themselves in raiment that women have selected.

Hard work beats finding a four-leaf clover as a sign of good luck.

This is the season of the year when magazine artists paint their January covers.

Another thing strengthening some folks' belief in a merciful providence is a woman driving a car.

It is suspected that some women distrust their intuition when they consider the husbands they picked.

Still, a lot of contentment in the world is merely the frame of mind of the man who says: "What's the use?"

In spring, according to an advertisement, woman's fancy turns to clothes. Not to mention summer, autumn and winter.

Who can remember when the peroxide blonde was about the most gorgeous menace to husbands?

PROBLEM OF THE RURAL CHURCH

That the rural church is doomed, unless drastic measures are taken for its rehabilitation, was the theme of an address by Rev. C. E. Hoag, superintendent of the Lansing district, in an address before the Methodist Episcopal church, which has just closed its annual session at Battle Creek. The speaker declared there had been a loss of 5,000 rural members in the Methodist denomination alone in the state during the past five years, and that this continued loss would mean the wiping out of the rural church so far as that denomination was concerned within the next twenty-five years.

Contrary to the accepted theory, instead of affiliating with churches in the larger communities this membership has been lost to religious communities. It is an alarming situation. As a social contact the rural church was the greatest leveling influence during pioneer days, not even exceeded by the power of the little red schoolhouse. The decline of the rural church is a problem not given to the average layman to solve. Even the efforts of the extension department of Michigan State College has not met with success. Such mechanical efforts never can. The only hope for the rural church lies in the rural communities themselves. If they can find in the rural church the right kind of a social center, the influence for community development that met the needs of the pioneers of old, then the rural church of tomorrow must fulfill those needs. All America is interested in this question—for with a decline of the splendid benefits received from the rural church will come a decline in the glorious standards of American citizenship.

BACK IN SCHOOL

Our young people have gone back to school, following the annual summer vacation. They have gone back to take advantage of the great educational system at their disposal, the most pleasurable work of a lifetime to normal young people.

It has been years since we have heard any young person say that he did not wish to continue his education. A generation or so ago, it was a task to keep folks in school. The sentiment was abroad that an eighth grade education was enough. School was not as attractive as today. It was all business.

But gradually education has grown out of its sternness and away from the rule of the rod. School is an attractive place, attractive with its play, with its reading, with its associations and its well organized work. Education is no longer drudgery and even those who do not get along well with studies still stay on in school. School is the place for young people. The world does not demand or need the work of boys and girls.

School is a wonderful privilege for the parents. Of course people kick on school taxes and school administration and doubtless will always do. But for one child out of twenty would secure an education were it not for public schools. The school takes the child for half of the day, five days a week. Mothers are relieved of care. The public takes over a function which the home could not discharge. The cost is really nothing compared to the benefits returned. The public school is America's greatest institution. The opening day of school ranks next to the Fourth of July as a day of national importance.

The money that talks the loudest is liable to be hush money.

You can't have your cake and eat it—neither can you have a full dinner pail and loaf.

Why run for a street car? Another one will be along in a minute—labeled "Car Bums Only."

Think of the advantage married men have over Adam. Eve couldn't threaten to go home to mother.

It is easy to acquire a reputation, but it takes a lot of hard work to make a good one.

A paragrapher wants to know what one can do with used safety razor blades. Well, he can cut jokes out of a newspaper if he's that kind of a paragrapher.

Answering the inquiry as to what has become of the wearer of the celluloid collar, word comes that he is a member of the Pennsylvania legislature.

If the average husband gave his wife as much attention as he does a worn-out flivver, she would suspect him of trying to cover up something.

Just to demonstrate how busy we have been with stier reality, it can be cited that a year has passed and failed to bring out a single new breakfast food.

Three Kicks in a Dollar

According to a leading resident of Emporia, Kan., who presented a park to that town, recently, there are three kicks in every dollar. The first of these is when one makes the dollar, for naturally, he says, "it has to be earned before you have it." The second kick is when one saves the dollar, since he must save it to keep it. And the third and biggest kick of all is when it is given away. The cornerstone of philanthropy is, in part, constructed of this last principle.

Mascots of Long Ago

Though mascots are popular, it is a mistake to suppose that they are a modern idea. Their origin dates back to the dawn of history. Helen of Troy, according to the legend, had a golden make which she took with her for luck wherever she went. The recent discoveries in the tombs of the kings of Egypt point to the possibility of mascots being favored by the queens of the pharaohs.

The Name in the Mirror

By RUBY DOUGLAS

DORIS GRAHAM had returned to spend the summer at the quiet, cliff-built summer resort where she had been so carefree and happy five years before.

"But isn't it a stupid place to live in for three months?" asked her chum in the office.

"It wouldn't suit you," admitted Doris.

"And that dreadful trip every day," lamented the other girl.

Doris was not to be discouraged. She wanted to get away from the city, wanted to sleep in the country, wake up in the country, have her Sundays and Saturday afternoons in the open.

And so she had established herself in the plain, old country boarding house that she had lived in when her mother was with her and life looked rosy and merry. Now, she was tired, a trifle discouraged at the lack of variety in her life. There was a vacancy she could not quite analyze, but she ascribed it to the fact that she could not get accustomed to living without her dear mother.

On her first free Saturday afternoon, she wandered about the old village streets.

"I'll just go down to the post office to wait for the distribution of the late mail," she said to herself, as she neared the little group of shops of which one was the post office.

This had been one of the merriest of meeting places for all the young folks of the summer resort. There, in its homely prosaic enough atmosphere, many a budding romance had first colored into life.

It was as she was entering the post office five years ago that she had first seen Archie Oumstead. "The thought now quickened her breath, sent that frozen hurt straight to her heart."

What had become of him? Why had she never heard from him?

How many times she had asked herself that question only to find herself unanswered.

She found a letter for her from the girl in the office who, secretly, would have enjoyed being with Doris, but who hesitated to invite herself.

Doris, thrilled at receiving a letter from the hands of the same postmaster who had stood behind the window thumbing the letters five years before, stood beside the scratched and disfigured wall to read it.

As she pushed against her, she moved. She bumped her head, ever so slightly, against the corner of the glass-fronted wall cabinet that held unclaimed letters.

For a moment she stared at the envelopes posted inside. Suddenly, she started. There was her own name—Doris Graham.

Instinctively, she sought the postmaster.

and told him that there was a letter in the case that was addressed to her. Together, they got it and Doris, staring, somehow, to read it in the midst of so many eyes as were upon her, put it in her bag.

When she was alone she opened the envelope. It was a letter from Archie. In it, he told her this was the third one he had written and if he received no answer this time he would decide that she had amused herself for a summer by making him fall in love with her.

If she wrote one letter over that week-end, to Archie, she wrote a dozen. None suited her. She could not seem to find words in which to tell him all that had been in her thoughts of him, since they had met. She wondered where he was. Could this address be the right one?

On Monday, at the office, she tried again, this time on her typewriter. It was a stupid letter. She destroyed it.

It was still light when she arrived in the country these June nights and she decided that she would be able to pen a short note to Archie if she used the post office pen and ink on the old sheet where they had written each other so many tender notes in other days. With a piece of paper in her bag, she went to the village and wrote to Archie. As she stood looking at the much-used blotter on the shabby handbag open with its mirror back, a familiar scrawl was reflected in it.

She held the mirror over the blotting name. Yes—it was his name in his handwriting. Her heart thumped madly. He must be here—in this very town—now. The name had been written that day.

Posting the letter she had written, she hurried back to the boarding house.

When the motherly old landlady came forward, she saw that they had met on the walk leading through the arch of maples. She had remembered their early romance. She was gratified at its renewal.

It took the whole evening to explain the strange tricks Fate had played them during the years of their separation. But the faith of each of them was unshaken and Doris found herself later comparing the great happiness of her present summer with the shallow, frivolous gaiety of that holiday five years ago.

"And I knew all the time," Doris heard from her chum at the office, "that there must be some good reason for your craving for that stupid summer resort—some other reason than the country air."

ATTENTION! GOOD HOUSEKEEPERS!

Do you take a pardonable pride in keeping your home clean and cheery, but throw up your hands at the impossibility of keeping the basement clean, too?

If occasionally you do wish you had that extra space for a play room for the children, a den for father or a sewing room for yourself, you realize that it never will be fit to associate with the family as long as dust, cinders, ashes or oily grease and dirt reign supreme below the stairs.

But GAS! Ah, even the most disillusioned basement can take its rightful place in the home when gas goes into the furnace. Gas is clean, requires no storage space, leaves no mess. It comes in through a pipe and every particle of it burns up. There's nothing to shovel away, nothing to clean up afterward. GAS HEAT in your basement will give you an extra room in the house. Ask us more about it!

A New American Car For All-America

No need of wasting a lot of words. No need taking a lot of time. Your eyes alone will tell you it's the new American car for all-America.

Length, grace and loveliness in the new body creations by Fisher. A fashionable air of sleekness—an environment of luxury and richness. Distinction on the boulevard. Mastery on the road.

More than smoothness, more than snap, more than ample power for the steepest American hills and the roughest American roads. "Here he comes—there he goes. And 'there he goes' in comfort."

No magic, of course—and no untried engineering innovations. Just a big brute of an engine that laughs at hard work. A longer, stronger chassis. And months of testing at the General Motors Proving Ground.

Come in and talk to us. Then you'll know why all America is saying, "That's the car!"

BREVITIES

PLYMOUTH—The football season of 1927 opens next Friday, the 16th, with Ferndale here. The game will start at 3:30 p. m.—Mail.

NORTHVILLE—The annual Northville fair will open on Tuesday, September 27, and continue through the week until Saturday night, October 1.

BROOKLYN—Dick Grider's barbecue place at Napoleon was raided by the police department Sunday morning for the second or third official visit. A crap game was interrupted and the dice and two slot machines were confiscated.—Exponent.

DEXTER—The work of cutting down the grade on the Portlake lake road under the railroad arch has been completed and is considered a great improvement. The steam shovel, which was employed several days, left Saturday.—Leader.

ANN ARBOR—Leo Smith, 48, Ypsilanti, was returned to County Jail Thursday by his bondsman and is being held there pending a trial on a charge of violating the prohibition law. He was arrested some time ago by sheriff's officers.

TECUMSEH—At a special ceremony at the 33rd annual convention of the W. C. T. U. in Minneapolis, Mrs. Harriet G. Wheeler, 100, of Tecumseh, was honored as the oldest active temperance worker in the world. She joined the W. C. T. U. fifty years ago.

MILAN—Announcements have been made from the United States Civil Service Commission of examinations to be held for postmaster in a fourth class post office. The vacancy, the announcement says, will occur within a short time at Whitaker. The examination will be held at Milan.—Leader.

SALINE—When the change in the road and its extension south of town was proposed early in the summer, there was much comment both for and against, but now that it is completed all must admit that it is a great improvement, and a fine piece of work its entire length.—Observer.

TECUMSEH—In a fit of despondency, D. A. Young, aged 45 years, of Cicero, Ill., threw himself from the east tower in the Irish Hills about 9 o'clock Sunday morning. Although the distance he fell is 65 feet and he was picked up unconscious his injuries are not believed to be fatal. He was taken to Bixby hospital, Adrian.—Herald.

ANN ARBOR—This year's freshman class at the University will be smaller than that of a year ago, according to present indications. Thus far 1,440 new students have been granted admission to the institution, compared with 1,504 registered September 11 last year. With school starting a week earlier and Freshman week beginning Monday, September 12, it does not appear that last year's record of 1,800 new students will be equaled.

GRASS LAKE—In the window of the Jones & Ray hardware store is a part of the butt of a poplar tree nearly cut in two by beaver. The specimen was brought from Delta county where it was found by T. B. Jones. The tree was about 13 inches in diameter and had been nearly cut in two by the industrious little animals. While beaver are well known for their industry in cutting down trees it is seldom that they assault a tree of this size.—News.

MANCHESTER—Some excitement was stirred up for those who were awake or were awakened at 4:45 Tuesday morning when the burglar alarm at Yocum & Marx store started ringing. Chas. Youngmans, who has a room over his barber shop, was awakened and went to the window but saw no one. In about two minutes he says a large car drove east at a terrific rate—just as though the driver was frightened away by the alarm. Members of the firm were soon on the scene, but nothing was found disturbed.—Enterprise.

STOCKBRIDGE—Premium lists for the first Ingham county fair to be held October 6, 7, 8, are being distributed by the secretary. More than $500 in premium is offered to exhibitors. Due to the limited quarters for livestock those exhibits will be made up largely from the Boys' and Girls' clubs and Smith-Hughes agricultural projects. The farm crops, horticulture and garden exhibits, however, have premiums as large as most of the county fairs in this district. These exhibits will be housed in the Mason High school building.—Brief-Sun.

PINCKNEY—Col. George of Detroit, who purchased a 1100 acre tract of land about three miles west of Pinckney some time ago is making extensive improvements on the same. The Murphy farm-house has been remodeled and put in first class shape and work is now under way on the Sider house where a new roof has been put on, the house enlarged and the interior finished off. The Haines house we understand, will not be fixed over until spring as here the most extensive improvements will be made. Work on fencing the entire tract will start as soon as the ten foot cedar posts arrive. The deer will not be placed there until next spring however. Frank Haines has been engaged as caretaker of the tract.—Dispatch.

A Clashing of the Ages

By H. IRVING KING

HOLLINGTON DAVIS never told his age unless by legal requirement. When he thought of it he did so with a sense of irritation. Why shouldn't he? He was not seventy yet and looked ten years younger.

The fact remained that, young as Mr. Hollington-Davis was, Alice Thordylke was still younger—a mere child of twenty-four. And with the unexpressed impulses of childhood she looked upon Hollington as "old." He had been her father's friend and legal adviser and was her guardian until she became of the age of twenty-five, or married. If she married before she was twenty-five without her guardian's consent the bulk of the paternal fortune went to found a chair of Alaskan archeology in some college or institution.

But all the provisions of an old will that were ever drawn will not prevent young folks from falling in love. Alice and Howard Edgerton fell in love—and it seemed like waltzing all day long for them to wait a whole year before they were married. And now that Howard had formally proposed, and been accepted, it was up to Alice to get her guardian's consent.

When Alice, all youth and bloom and loveliness, blew in on her guardian and told him all that had happened, and all that was going to happen, that mature gentleman received a shock. It was only a day or two before that he had held a long and serious consultation with himself. He was a bachelor and was tired of hearing well-meaning idiots remark: "It's a wonder you never got married." During the day some one had made that trite remark and whereas it had only irritated him before it now set him to thinking. "Perhaps it was because Alice had been to see him the previous week to get her quarter's allowance."

Any way the wheels were set going and this is the way they buzzed. "But she is so much younger than you are." "Oh, I don't know—there are precedents." And, being a legal gentleman, he went over in his mind all the precedents for the union of May and December that he could remember. "Then he resumed the argument. 'Nobody takes her for more than sixty—and Alice is—ishaw; I am old enough to be her grandfather. What a fool I am! Here I am, priding myself on keeping young, and this same time breaking out all over with the symptoms of age. Forget it, Hollington! Forget it!'

What you need now is to stop the movement of arteries and facial massage to eliminate the wrinkles." Then, putting all that "emmyrot" aside, Mr. Hollington-Davis attended a board meeting, where he put through a big business deal; got into his uniform as a Spanish-war veteran and marched six miles over city-paved streets to a "banquet" where he ate rich food and listened to speeches until midnight; went home; went to bed; slept like a child and woke up the next morning feeling fine. Then Alice the young, the bewitching, blew in on him.

It was a short, composite shock she gave him. One of its components was the sudden remembrance of the colloguy he had held with himself two days before. But he sternly put all that sort of thing away. He became all judicial lawyer and judicious guardian at once. "I must know more of this young man before I can give my consent," said he when Alice had finished her story. "She was astonished. 'Why, Howard is right out in the anteroom waiting,' she cried, 'I'll bring him in.' Although appalled at her guardian's reception of her news she was confident that when he once saw Howard it would be all right."

Howard came in, a trifle truculent; he knew that something had gone wrong. At the demand of Mr. Davis he stated his desires and qualifications. Hollington placed him on the witness stand and put him through the third degree. Only, mind you, because he was anxious to do his full duty and make no mistake in giving his consent to the proposed marriage. "I think," said he, at last, "that I would not be justified in giving my consent just now to your marriage with my ward."

"Very well, sir," replied Howard. "We have taken out a marriage license and we propose to be married forthwith."

"You know what you will forfeit if you do?" said Hollington.

"Perfectly sir," returned Howard, "and we count it as nothing. Good day!" And he marched out with Alice clinging to his arm.

Hollington took the next elevator down. A taxi cab was just starting off. "Follow that taxi," he cried to the chauffeur of his own car which happened to be waiting. Before the quiet little wedding which had been arranged had fairly begun, Hollington was in his midst. "But, no," said he smilingly to Alice, "you give you away in loco parentis. You have my full consent. Edgerton, take good care of her—for she is only a child."

That night, before going to bed Hollington opened an old photograph album and looked at a picture of a young taken in the early '70s. "No," said he, "I think she would have preferred Howard, even then."

Nibble Too Much

Women about the house are always nibbling at something and, therefore, eat too much, says Dr. James Fenton, medical officer of health for Kensington, London, England, addressing an assemblage composed largely of women at the Incorporated Institute of Hygiene.

Camel's Endurance Due to Structure of Stomach

There are several reasons, according to scientists, why camels can go longer without water than most other animals. As a rule a camel will not begin to suffer from thirst until about the fifth day. This power to endure thirst is partly due to the peculiar structure of the camel's stomach. Water is stored up in small pouches attached to the walls. Camel drivers strain the up the heads of their animals and force water down their throats before starting on a long journey over the desert. The camel's capacity for traveling long distances without food or water is also partly due to the flesh and fat which is stored up in the humps. This stored-up fat is reabsorbed when the camel is overtaken by famine. The humps materially increase or diminish in size according to the physical condition of the animals. They become small and flaccid after hard work and poor diet.—Pathfinder.

Secretary Bird Noted as Killer of Snakes

The secretary bird of South Africa is rated one of the most famous snake-killing creatures extant. The fighting and killing ability of the bird is all in the long, muscular legs. When it finds a snake it cautiously approaches it with outstretched wings, ready for it to pounce upon. The bird circles around the reptile like a prizefighter about his opponent. Suddenly it darts one of its powerful feet, armed with great talons, at the snake and strikes the serpent a fearful blow on the head, stunning it. Other crushing blows follow and the snake soon dies. This remarkable bird is four feet high and most of its body is made up of neck and legs. Its name is derived from a crest of long, dark plumes rising from the back of its head. This strongly resembles a clerk with a bunch of quill feathers pinned behind his ear. The bird is considered of great economic value as it kills many poisonous reptiles.

Music Grows Hair

Investigating scientists have reached the conclusion that soft and delicate music is a hair invigorator for the musician, while loud and obtrusive music is a promoter of baldness. Their investigations show the violinist grows abundant hair, the cellist grows balding, the same as the pianist. About the same use of the performer on a tuba, saxophone, trombone begins losing hair quickly after close and continued association with that instrument, their work amounting to blowing the hair off their heads as it were. The bass viol has the same effect as the trombone, and the piano the same as the violin. These men who have delved in the sciences insist it is not mere chance that violinists have shining heads, while trombonists have shining heads. There's a reason, they point out.

MICHIGAN BELL TELEPHONE CO.

Save Money on Long Distance Calls

There are Two General Classes of Long Distance Calls:

1—Person-to-Person. This is a call placed for a specified person and is the kind of call to make when you want to talk to someone in particular and you are not reasonably sure that person will answer the telephone or can be called to it quickly. A Person-to-Person call costs the same at all hours.

2—Station-to-Station. This is a call placed for a certain telephone number and is the kind of call to make when you are reasonably certain that the person with whom you wish to talk will answer the telephone or can be called to it quickly. Station-to-Station calls cost appreciably less than Person-to-Person calls, and offer reduced Evening rates, from 7:00 p. m. to 8:30 p. m., and further reduced Night rates, from 8:30 p. m. to 4:30 a. m. There is no change of rates at midnight.

It helps speed the connection if you give the Long Distance operator the number of the distant telephone, when making a Station-to-Station call, but it is not necessary to give it. If you do not know the number, tell the operator, for instance, that you are calling the office or home of "Mr. John Smith, 350 Sayre Street, Lansing, Michigan," she will then connect you with the called telephone and give you the number for future use.

The Eternal Feminine

There are many things that only a woman can do just as they should be done. Too, a woman will think of many things to do that would never occur to a man, no matter how experienced he might be.

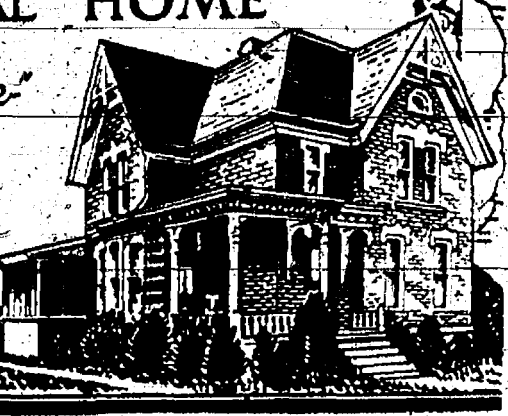

It is for these reasons that a trained lady assistant is of so much value to a funeral director. We have two lady assistants who lend a feminine touch that is much to be desired.

Fiery!

"You have made your hero too inflammable; I'm afraid," said the critic to the young author. "To begin with, he has a lantern jaw. In chapter two his whole face lit up; in chapter three his cheeks flamed. He gave a burning glance in chapter ten; and after blazing with wrath and boiling with rage he administered a scorching rebuke in the last five pages."

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 1

"Treasure Island" Inn Named for Real Person

Every reader of "Treasure Island" knows of Admiral Benbow. Many few probably are aware of the admiral whose character inspired Stevenson to give it the name Benbow, a fiery young dandy who saved the British.

very early in life, and finding that seas were infested with pirates, he decided to make out for himself a swagging outfit with a ship equal to their own methods. He said to have picked the hardest crew of buccaniers he had captured, and then to have taken them to Oahu.

Walking up to the tables, the great magistrates who had offered rewards for the capture of any who bore the skull and crossbones, he hoisted up a sack and dumped on the table his grewsome trophies which he blithely referred to as "salt provisions." On his return to England, James II was convinced that there was of a stamp they needed in the navy, and gave him the command of the ship, William III. He was

...this time in checking down private and in bombarding the French privileges which he carried out with double-hearted enthusiasm and

Diet of Fish and Meat Keeps Eskimos Healthy

The MacMillan Arctic expedition
1924, visiting the Eskimos of northern Labrador and of Greenland, was accompanied by a physician who was his time in making studies of the Eskimos' diets to determine their important facts. These Eskimos live on the most part on diets consisting largely of meat and fish. The most concerned are those of the whale, walrus, seal, caribou.

The physician, Dr. William A. Thomas, reports that, contrary to the general opinion, the Eskimos eat relatively little fat or blubber, using the portions for oil in lighting their houses in melting ice and snow, for warming and, to a very little extent, for cooking food.

Doctor Thomas did not find any scurvy or rickets among these Eskimos—conditions that are usually due to absence of certain vitamins from the diet. Dr. Morris Fishbein, the Scientific American,

Librarians have some queer preferences. At one library a selfless woman said she wanted a book titled "Kip."

"I know of no such book," returned the attendant. "Perhaps you mean Kim, by Rudyard Kipling."

"I mean 'Kip,' by the author of 'The Three Musketeers,'" said the woman firmly.

"Kipling didn't write 'The Three Musketeers,'" explained the attendant patiently, "but he wrote 'Soldiers Three,' and—"

"I guess that's near enough," the woman interrupted. "Kip," by Erling Sunde likely. I suppose it's topographic and he took half his own name as a kind of hint to

Blooms as Edibles:

A number of flowers are used for food and drink. The most familiar to use is the crystallized violet. It is very important that only the plucked petals should be used, for the seed pods, like the underground stem, are poisonous. Roses are eaten in many forms; the candied petals have a delicate flavor, and ever since Elizabethan times old country homes have been the secret of making a delicious petal jelly and rose sugar candy. The rose too, yields a much-esteemed sirup in the buds can be crystallized. Flowers make excellent pickles. In Stuart Park the petals of nasturtiums, roses and hollyhocks are used. In the garden at the hotel, primroses, rosemary and violets were often pickled in vinegar, but their own weight in sugar. In the Balkans, where more roses are grown than anywhere else in the world, the buds are frequently pickled.

For The Waiting DUCK HUNTER

WAITING in the blind. Your nerves tense — afraid to breathe for fear your slightest motion will scare them away. Look at 'em come. What beauties. They've spotted the decoys. They're coming down. On the water now. Bang!! Your gun speaks. One — two — three that time. Oh, boy!

Every duck hunter knows that sensation. And he's restless for the coming season. So, while waiting for it, he should come here for his needs.

HUNTING LICENSES RECEIVED BY COUNTY CLERK

Five thousand and five hundred hunting licenses, together with digests of the important general game laws of Michigan, have been received by County Clerk Claramon L. Pray and are being distributed to several different places in Washtenaw county for the convenience of local hunters, according to the Ann Arbor Times News.

If the pre-hunting season interest may be taken as a criterion there will be considerable shooting in this part of the state within a few days. Several applications have been made at the clerk's office for licenses but the blanks were not received from the department of conservation until Thursday.

The licenses may be obtained locally at either of the three hardware stores in Chelsea, and will of course, be on sale at the county clerk's office.

According to the regulations accompanying the licenses, resident licenses may be sold to any person over 17 years of age who is a citizen of the United States and a citizen of this state for six months previous to making application. A resident alien having his first papers may not secure a resident license, but citizenship papers, being necessary.

A non-resident license may be sold to persons not residents of this state but citizens of the United States and to alien residents who have permits to possess firearms.

Resident licenses also may be issued to minor children more than 12 and less than 17 years of age, whose parents are citizens of the United States and residents of Michigan, provided one of the parents makes oath that the applicant will be accompanied by a parent, guardian, or some person appointed by them when he is hunting or trapping.

The small game license fee is $1.25 and the resident license for deer costs $2.50. A non-resident must pay $10 for a small game license and $50 for a permit to hunt deer.

The season opens Sept. 16 and closes Dec. 31 on ducks, Wilson and jack snipes, geese, brant, yellow legs, rails, coots and gallinules.

Hunters may take 15 ducks in one day, 50 in a calendar week and may have 30 in possession at one time. The same number of Wilson and jack snipes may be taken but the limit for the season is 25. Five geese or brant may be shot in a day, a total of 15 may be taken in the season and it is lawful to have more than eight in possession at one time.

Regulations on other fowl are: yellow legs, 15 in one day, 15 in possession at one time and 20 in one season; rails, 25 in one day, coots and gallinules, 25 in one day, and 25 in a season.

Rabbits or hares and snowshoe rabbits or jackrabbits may be hunted after Oct. 24. The season remains open on the former until Feb. 31, 1929, and on the latter until Feb. 15, 1929. The bag limits for rabbits are five in one day.

The season on Chinese ringnecked pheasants opens Oct. 25 and ends October 31. During this time four male birds may be taken, two in one day. Prairie chickens also may be shot after October 24 and until October 31. Five may be taken in a day and 25 in a season. The same regulations apply to woodcock, except that the season limit is 20.

The deer season is from November 15 to November 30, inclusive.

HYGIENE BEING TAUGHT IN SCHOOLS OF COUNTY

The teaching of hygiene is to make children think about health for while it may be "never too late to mend" and health habits, it is never too early to form good ones.

A monthly bulletin is issued outlining health work for the teacher. A number of text books will be recommended for reference and supplementary work.

Teachers are advised to organize health clubs where there are ten or more children. If less than ten health inspection for personal attractiveness is made by boy and girl appointed each week as doctor and nurse by the teacher. Health habits are encouraged by stressing one health habit each month.

To keep children free from communicable diseases teachers inspect children daily.

Health work is correlated with writing, language, arithmetic and geography.

Health talks are given by the nurse.

Health booklets and posters are made by the children.

Hot lunch clubs are encouraged in every school. We have found boys and girls do better work, lunch is more appetizing and fosters social spirit.

Children are weighed every month and measured twice a year.

Rural schools are visited by nurse at least once a year and as often as it is necessary. Every child is inspected. If nurse is suspicious of physical defects, notice is sent home advising parents to consult family physician. Home calls are made for cases that need immediate medical attention and follow-up work.

One day a month is spent in each town school.

Vice of Gambling

Be assured that, although men of eminent genius have been guilty of all other vices, none worthy of more than a secondary name has ever been a gambler. Either an excess of avidity or a deficiency of what in physics is called excitability, is the cause of it. It is a vice which can exist in the noblest of men, with perfect brains or with vulgar—Walter Savage Landor.

MUST TREAT WHEAT TO CONTROL SMUT

East Lansing.—Hunt, or stinking smut was more prevalent in the 1927 wheat crop than it has been for several years past according to the farm crops department at Michigan State College, and the necessary precautions must be taken to prevent a still greater increase in next year's crop.

According to F. B. Drees, secretary of the Michigan Millers Association, it has been necessary for the millers to make large discounts in some instances because of the presence of smut. Smaller discounts have been quite common.

It is the belief of members of the farm crops department that the prevalence of smut has increased due to the laxity of farmers in treating their seed wheat. The copper carbonate dust treatment is recommended, and if properly applied, is effective in the control of smut.

Not only does the presence of smut make the wheat undesirable on the market but it also reduces the yield. The M. S. C. farm crops department is prepared to furnish information on the copper carbonate dust treatment to farmers who wish this material.

The copper carbonate method is a try treatment and therefore easily applied. It is cheap and does not injure the seed. The treated seed can be planted in the same way as the untreated seed, although it does not run through the drill as fast and the drill should be regulated accordingly.

Vine Planted Before Revolution Bears Fruit

The granddaddy of all American grapevines, still growing although it was planted several years before the Revolutionary war, is described by George Shaffer in an article in Liberty.

"When Father Junipero Serra planted a sprig of grapevine at San Gabriel mission in 1771," the article points out, "the planted not only the first grapevine in California, but also the roots of a vast industry."

The high Francisco valley could hardly be expected to grow that from the little shoot of grapevine would grow an industry worth $30,000,000 to employ more than 100,000 persons.

"Father Serra's original vine still grows," the writer continues, "in the yard of an old inn at San Gabriel the patriarch of grapevines stands just where the old man now 143 years dead—planted it. It is said to be the largest grapevine in the world."

Blunt feet in circumference, its gnarled and twisted trunk flings long, winding arms over a trellis that covers a acre. A ton of grapes is its annual yield. The benches and tables of more convivial times still recall the custom of country folk to gather and slip their wine under its shade."

Cotton Mather Gave Name to Yale College

Cotton Mather would willingly have become president of his alma mater, Harvard, succeeding his father, but though there were opportunities, he never was elected, writes William B. Barton in the Dearborn Independent.

He became dissatisfied with Harvard and on January 2, 1717, he wrote his diary:

"What shall I do for the welfare of the college at New-Haven? I am inclined to write unto a wealthy East India merchantman at London, who may be disposed on several accounts to do for that society and colony."

Accordingly he wrote to William B. Barton a rich and childless man, saying:

"If what is forming at New-Haven might bear the name of Yale college, it would be better than a name of sons and daughters. And your influence might easily obtain for you such a commemoration."

The money came, and the name was given to the college by Mather and his rethinks.

Costly Circus Animals

A lion performing in a circus at a worth about $2,000, according to an article in Liberty. Tigers, bears and leopards are valued approximately at $1,000 each. It is not unusual for a large circus to have from $100,000 to $200,000 invested in animal property.
