WARNINGS ISSUED TO TRUCK DRIVERS BY STATE OFFICIALS

Loads Must Be Limited During The Spring Break-up; Ruling Is Now In Effect.

Regulations limiting the loading of trucks which traverse the state trunk line highways became effective March 1 and are now being enforced by the State Highway Department throughout the southern counties, according to B. C. Tiney, Maintenance Engineer. Under the provisions of the law the regulations become effective for the entire state on the first of March but the State Highway Department regulations their enforcement according to road and weather conditions and is lenient where strict enforcement is not necessary to preserve the highway from danger.

Tables prepared by the highway department and distributed to the enforcing agencies in the various counties show the limits permitted under the regulations during the restricted period which extends from March 1 to June 1. The regulations are exactly the same as were in force last year. The loads are graduated according to axle spacing and tire widths and are as follows:

EYESIGHT

Accommodation

In our last advertisement we pointed out that the eye is a natural lens which automatically focuses for near and distant vision. This is known as Accommodation and is accomplished by the muscles controlling the lens of the eye. Accommodation is greatest in children and decreases as one gets older until at the age of seventy it is often lost altogether.

Commencing at about forty years of age, the ability to accommodate has lessened to such an extent that it requires a definite effort in order to read. A few years later it is physically impossible to make the eyes respond sufficiently to read at all without glasses. This is not a serious matter—it is but the natural change that comes with years.

At first, glasses of comparatively low power will give the necessary relief but these must be replaced with stronger ones about every two years. The logical thing to do is to know when to give your eyes this assistance without waiting for the warning given by blurred vision and fatigue when reading or doing close work.

We will gladly arrange an appointment for an examination at your convenience.

BETTER THAN HEAVEN

We believe it was the parrot who said, "The trouble with me is that I talk too much."

That is the trouble with many men and women who live in smaller communities. They talk too much. They talk about their friends and make them enemies. They talk of their enemies and make the breach still wider. Some talk maliciously—some do not think.

An election comes along. The great privilege of democracy is used as the excuse to defame, without justification. Why men who are honest most of the time should lie during the political season is beyond comprehension. Yet a person cannot submit himself to the possibilities of election to office without exposure to merciless and pitiless misrepresentation.

Sometimes politics have a sequel. A thing like an election contest case will make criminals out of one-half of the population and perjurers out of the other half.

The situation would be unbearable were it not that the whole thing is usually forgotten and some who talked about you today may say something good about you tomorrow. If you should die, business might stop for an hour, and a wreath might be laid on your grave and a tear shed.

If smaller communities could lay aside all the habits of adverse comment, if all human weakness could be overlooked and not discussed, no one would wish to die and go to heaven. The home town would be good enough.

MICHIGAN PROSPERS

Latest releases on employment figures for Michigan indicate this state is among the most prosperous in the nation.

More men are now employed in gainful occupation than in any other period in several months. Experts are predicting new high levels in the labor market before the end of the year.

Which means, that compared with the rest of the country, we are in a prosperous condition. Products of Michigan factories are finding markets in every part of the known world and this export trade is expected to increase under the new industrial policies of the Hoover administration.

Last year the automotive industry export business ran into the hundreds of millions. Foreign demand for Michigan made cars is increasing and all of this gives employment to Michigan labor. The future looks far more bright than it has in a long time.

PROHIBITION

President Hoover's first reference regarding prohibition and its enforcement by the national government seems to have satisfied even the most ardent supporters of the cause. He has assured the people that a thorough investigation will first be made, then intelligent action will follow.

It is probable that in due time some satisfactory solution will be arrived at, but first President Hoover calls attention to the hypocrisy of the individual who, while pretending to deplore wholesale violations of the liquor laws and slack enforcement methods, is himself a patron of the bootlegger.

Such a situation is irreconcilable. It is the old story of the house divided. As long as a man remains in the market for liquor somebody will be found to supply his wants. Both equally are law breakers. One will not long exist without the other. If we are to have real prohibition our national tastes must be revamped. But that will take a long time, for tastes and habits change slowly.

At Lansing legislators wrangle over the length of prison sentence that should be dealt out to habitual offenders. All agreed that offenders should be punished, but are split on the question of severity. Nothing, however, is said about the legislator who insists on exacting the extreme penalty, but who is guilty of buying liquor.

In the meantime it might not be a bad idea if the average citizen set his own house in order by refusing to purchase booze thereby encouraging violations. Prohibitionists would gain strength for their cause by pleading for voluntary abstinence on the part of the individual, instead of wasting their time demanding excessive punishment for violators.

We first have need to save the state and nation by preaching respect and observance for all laws. In time, if personal liberties have been unduly abrogated, they will be restored through the peaceful machinery of the law. But the nation is our greatest concern—it must come first.

SECRETARY MELLON

Some members of the United States senate, including Senator Couzens, of Michigan, are opposing the appointment of Secretary Mellon as the head of the treasury department in the cabinet of President Hoover.

Mr. Mellon has been just the kind of a man the nation has needed in these times of financial readjustment. His experience has been placed at the service of the United States.

Some have said that Andrew Mellon has been the greatest secretary of the treasury since Alexander Hamilton. Maybe if we would read some more about Alexander Hamilton we could easily raise Mr. Mellon to the honor of the greatest secretary of the treasury in the nation's history.

THE NEW PRESIDENT

The country has a new president. The United States of America has no royalty. The inauguration of a president is more than a mere event. It is evidence of democracy. It tells of the kind of a government that the nation has.

Herbert Clark Hoover will be a great president. He is not a politician. He lacks many of what have usually been the political qualifications for high office. But he possesses some qualities that will prove outstanding.

Mr. Hoover goes into office with the respect and confidence of the American people. Back of him are wonderful traditions. Ahead lie opportunities. The United States is a great nation. To be its head is both an honor and a responsibility.

NOTICE: If your question does not appear here, it is because it is awaiting its turn and will be published eventually.

Ques.—Will you kindly state in your question department if Australia is the largest island in the world?

Ans.—Australia would be the largest island in the world if it were classed as an island. It is, however, classed as a continent, and the distinction goes to Greenland.

Ques.—In 1893 the Columbian Exposition was held in Chicago, being popularly known as the World's Fair. Have we had a world's fair anywhere since that one? Also what was the largest one day's attendance?

Ans.—Since the Chicago "World's Fair" several similar expositions have been held in various parts of the world. They are as follows: Buffalo in 1901; St. Louis in 1904; San Francisco in 1906; Philadelphia in 1926; Paris in 1937; Rio de Janeiro in 1922; and London in 1924.

Ques.—In whom should I apply for a position with the State Police, and what qualifications are necessary?

Ans.—Michigan Highway Department, Lansing, Mich. From there you will receive proper information as to qualifications, etc.

Ques.—How many children did John Wesley, founder of the Methodist church, have? And what was their names? Also what other relatives did he have?

Ans.—John Wesley, the founder of the Methodist church, was married, but had no children. He had one brother, Charles, who had eight children. Five of them died in infancy. The only surviving daughter, Sarah, died without marrying. Charles Wesley, Jr., like his father, remained single. Their brother, Samuel, married and had two sons.

Ques.—I am a married woman, and up to the present time we have been a happy couple, but a cloud seems to be on the horizon. It threatens to mar our happiness. It is not the case of another woman or "apothecary man" but it is nothing more nor less than a car. In the near future we intend to buy an automobile, but my husband says he will carry the keys and that I shall not drive it at all.

Ques.—I have just as much right to drive the car as he has. Maybe some of the readers of this column have not noticed the problem and could now help me. I have been a regular reader of your column and have enjoyed it very much. This is the third time I have written you and each time you have helped me with an answer. Keep up the good work, and I am sure your efforts will be appreciated.

Ans.—Any husband ought to be ashamed of himself in war. I keep his family automobile all to hisself. This is the height of selfishness. We admire the man who gives a key also to his wife, teaches her to drive, and lets her have it; often as he can spare it from business. If he doesn't use the car through the day, he ought to be glad that he can, along with other husbands, provide his wife with a car to drive.

Ques.—I wish to ask in your interesting question department what was the price Frederick Hohenzollern paid for Brandenburg and what influence the transaction had on the history of the world?

Ans.—In the year 1415 Sigismund, Emperor of Germany, sold the electorate of Brandenburg to Frederick of Hohenzollern for $80,000 (American money). The influence of this transaction had on the history of the world was that Brandenburg gradually developed into the Kingdom of Prussia, with the Hohenzollern as the reigning family. The Hohenzollerns of Prussia were the same family as the Hohenzollerns of the Roman Empire, and many who took refuge from the land following the fall of the empire, and where he still lives.

Ques.—I would like to know if it is true that women in the automobile don't get at home when they are.

Ans.—They are no presumers.

Large Crowd Visits Better Seed Train

Three hundred people visited the Better Seed Train while it was stationed at the New York Central depot at Chelsea, Tuesday evening. This train, which is being operated over the New York Central Lines in Eastern and Southern Michigan in cooperation with the Farm Crops Department of the Michigan State College, is carrying a message on the use of better seeds for farm operations.

The Train consists of four cars, two of which contain exhibits placed by the Michigan State College, one car is used for lectures and moving pictures, while the fourth car is used as living quarters for the crew.
At each stop four bushels of barley were left for demonstration purposes where the County Agent or some other person selected the man who would carry out the work under the supervision of the Michigan Crop Improvement Association. By this method it is hoped to get the Spartan barley established in each community throughout the thirteen counties through which the Train is operating. The barley at this place was secured by Fred Kennedy and William Pritchard.
Farmers are requested to watch this crop and secure their seed from them
next year.

A moving picture entitled "Better Seed—Better Crops" was shown at each night meeting of the train. This picture, which is put out by the U.
S. D. A. was taken in Michigan in cooperation with the Michigan Crop Improvement Association.

The speakers on the Train were P.
R. Miller, who emphasized the importance of planting good seed and proper method of harvesting, C. M. Mc-Crory, potato specialists, discussed the entire question of potato production, emphasizing very strongly the use of certified seed potatoes and giving figures to substantiate his statement. By means of a chart, he showed that in Jackson County, where certified seed and uncultivated seed were used along side by side, the number twos and cutts from the certified seed amounted to only 10 per cent of the crop, while the uncultivated seed amounted to 26 per cent of the crop. It is planned to follow up this Seed Train with a tour some time next summer, visiting the Spartan barley demonstrations which have been established and at that time to discuss the use of better seeds in general.

Old American Flag

In 1775 a committee, under Benjamin Franklin as chairman, designed the first flag of the United Colonies. This is said to have been the first official flag, and was hoisted by Washington over his camp in Cambridge and by Capt. John Paul Jones over his first ship in 1776. It had 13 red and white stripes, representing the 13 United Colonies, with the King's crown, the crosses of St. George and St. Andrew, in the blue canton. The presence of these crosses in the blue field meant that the Colonists were fighting for their rights as Englishmen. It has been called a "flag of separation but of protest." In those days it was often designated as the congress colors, or the Cambridge flag, and was officially known as the Grand Union flag, and is said to have been designed by Washington.

Daily Thought

Our business in life is not to get ahead of other people, but to get ahead of ourselves. To break our own record, to outstrip yesterday's by today, to beat our trials more beautifully than we ever dreamed we could, to whip the tempter inside and out, to give as we never have given, to do our work with more force and a finer dash than ever—this is the true idea to get ahead of ourselves.—Maltbie D. Babcock.

All Life a Struggle

Every man who makes headway in his chosen field of effort must struggle against the current. The fact that a man is a success doesn't mean that he has never experienced adverse conditions, but that he has met and overcome them.—Grit.

Food of Red Indians

Among all the American Indians there were no pure hunter tribes. In the north portion of the continent the diet was three-fourths animal food, in the southern part it was three-fourths vegetable, and with the tribes of the coast, mountains, lakes and plains it varied according to the food supply. As a rule the Indian women were cooks of considerable ingenuity and contrary to popular belief the Indians preferred cooked food. They were good at husbandry and after drying their vegetables they sometimes built granaries wherein to store them. Animal food was often dried or frozen, but sometimes was smoked. Fruits were pulped or dried. Nuts were often ground before being stored, as were also maize, grass seeds and the legumes. Potatoes and squashes frequently were stored in holes dug beneath the frost line. The Indians liked salt to flavor their dishes and obtained it sometimes by evaporating the water from salt springs and sometimes by taking the crystals from salt lakes and caves. Many of them were fond of chewing gum, which they got from spruce trees. Squash, and condiments were valued highly. Detroit News.

CHARACTER

IN THRIFT

The most satisfied and contented people are those who are each year adding to their reserve fund. These people are also adding to their character, because nobody can put away part of his earnings for use at some future time, nobody can make up his mind to cut out useless things and stick to his resolution, without strengthening his character.

When the future comes around these people are fully fixed, so they do not have to depend on the future.
